● COMPILATIONS: Kid Punch Miller: Jazz Rarities (1929-30)★★★, The Wild Horns (1941)★★★, Punch Miller And His All Star Band, New York 1947 (1947)★★★★, with Jimmy Archey, Mutt Carey Jazz New Orleans (1947)★★★★, Delegates Of Pleasure (Jazzology 1990)★★★.

Miller, Frankie (UK)

b. 1950, Glasgow, Scotland. Miller commenced his singing career in the late 60s group, the Stoics. Along with Robin Trower, Jim Dewar and Clive Bunker, he formed the short-lived Jude, whose potential was never captured on vinyl. With Brinsley Schwarz as his backing group, Miller recorded his first solo album, Once In A Blue Moon, in 1972. The following year he moved to New Orleans to work with Allen Toussaint on the highly regarded High Life, which displayed Miller's throaty, blues-styled vocals to considerable effect. Although the album did not sell well, it provided hit singles for both Three Dog Night and Bette Wright. By 1975, Miller had formed a full-time band featuring Henry McCullough, Mick Weaver, Chrissie Stewart and Stu Perry. Their album, The Rock, was a solid effort, but met with middling sales. With a completely new band comprising Ray Minhinnit (guitar), Charlie Harrison (bass), James Hall (keyboards) and Graham Deacon (drums), Miller next recorded Full House. The band of the same name lasted a year before Miller reverted to a solo excursion for Perfect Fit. The latter provided a surprise Top 10 UK hit with 'Darlin'', but Miller could not build on that success. His frequent change of musicians and producers has resulted in an erratic career that has always remained tantalizingly short of a major leap into the top league of white blues performers. Nevertheless, his live performances are as popular as ever, while his back catalogue has grown substantially over the years.

● ALBUMS: Once In A Blue Moon (Chrysalis 1972)★★★, High Life (Chrysalis 1973)★★★, The Rock (Chrysalis 1975)★★★, Full House (Chrysalis 1977)★★★, Double Trouble (Chrysalis 1978)★★★, Falling In Love (Chrysalis 1979)★★★, Perfect Fit (1979)★★★, Easy Money (1980)★★★, Standing On The Edge (Capitol 1982)★★★, Rockin' Rollin' Frankie Miller (Bear Family 1983)★★★, Hey, Where Ya Goin' (1984)★★★, Dancing In The Rain (Vertigo 1986)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of (1992)★★★, BBC Radio One Live In Concert rec. 1977/78/79 (Windsong 1994)★★★.

Miller, Frankie (USA)

b. 17 December 1931, Victoria, Texas, USA. Miller was a moderately successful honky-tonk singer during the late 50s and early 60s, reaching the height of his fame with the Top 5 hit 'Black Land Farmer'. He originally formed the Drifting Texans at college, before signing to the Houston-based Guilt Edge in 1951 and recording several sides. After a spell of service in Korea, Miller signed to Columbia Records in 1954 and recorded a dozen sides that failed to place on the charts. After several one-off singles for independent labels, he was signed to Starday Records by Don Pierce in 1959. 'Black Land Farmer' was an immediate hit, followed by 'Family Man' (number 7) in October. Miller was never as successful again, with only 'Baby Rocked Her Dolly' (1960) and 'A Little South Of Memphis' (1964) breaking the Top 40. He moved to United Artists Records in 1965, but by the late 60s had retired from music to work as a car salesman in Arlington, Texas.

● ALBUMS: Country Music's New Star (Starday 1961)★★★, True Country Style Of Frankie Miller (Starday 1962)★★★, Fine Country Singing Of Frankie Miller (Audio Lab 1963)★★★, Blackland Farmer (Starday 1965)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Rockin' Rollin' (Bear Family 1983)★★★★, Hey! Where You Going? (Bear Family 1984)★★★, The Very Best Of Frankie Miller (Capitol 1993)★★★★, Sugar Coated Baby (Bear Family 1996)★★★.

Miller, Gary

b. Neville Williams, 1924, Blackpool, Lancashire, England, d. 15 June 1968, London, England. Miller was a popular singer in the UK during the 50s and early 60s, with a smooth and polished style. As a young man, Miller was a talented soccer player and played for Blackpool Football Club as an amateur. During World War II, he served as a lieutenant in the Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve and, on release, enrolled as a student at London University with the intention of becoming a teacher of languages. After performing in college concerts, and with the experience of singing at a Welsh Eisteddfod festival as a schoolboy, Miller embarked on the learning process of small-time cabaret and concert tours, and made his first radio broadcast on Beginners, Please. As well as singing, he also included dancing in his act, and was involved in negotiations for a small part in the Ray Bolger movie Where's Charley?, when it was being made in England, but nothing materialized. His first real break came when he was discovered by record executive and songwriter Norman Newell during a Variety appearance at Northampton, which led to him making a few tracks for Columbia. He also made regular appearances, singing and dancing, on television in Shop Window, and appeared on the fortnightly Kaleidoscope series. By 1954, he was headlining in variety on the Moss Empires circuit. After a spell with Newell at the newly formed Philips Records in 1953, during which he released mostly romantic ballads, Miller switched to another new label, Pye Nixa, and started recording more up-tempo material. His first hit, 'Yellow Rose Of Texas', in 1955, was overtaken by the US Mitch Miller version, but 'Robin Hood' made the Top 10 despite opposition from Dick James, who benefited by having his version played over the titles during the weekly television show. During that era it was commonplace for several versions of the same song to jostle each other in the singles chart. This was the case with Miller's 'Garden Of Eden', which lost out to Frankie Vaughan. There was also strong competition on 'Wonderful, Wonderful' from Ronnie Hilton, and on 'The Story Of My Life' from Michael Holliday. Miller's record of the latter song is said to have suffered in popularity because he was touring North Africa at the time of its release. Perhaps in an effort to avoid the competition, Miller reached back to 1945 for his final chart entry, 'I've Heard That Song Before' (1961); it proved to be one of his best vocal performances. His first album, Meet Mister Miller, contained standards such as 'Manhattan', 'April Showers' and 'Stella By Starlight'. This was followed by Gary On The Ball, with the Kenny Ball Jazz Band. In 1964, Miller appeared in the West End production of She Loves Me, Jerry Bock and Sheldon Harnick's musical based on the Hungarian play Perfumerie. He returned to the London stage in 1966 to play the role of the crooning Agent VO3 in Bryan Blackburn's comedy musical, Come Spy With Me, starring female impersonator Danny La Rue, at London's 'home of farce', the Whitehall Theatre. Two years later he died of a heart attack at his south London home.

● ALBUMS: Meet Mister Miller (Nixa 1957)★★★, with Kenny Ball Gary On The Ball (Pye 1961)★★★★.

Miller, Glenn

b. 1 March 1904, Clarinda, Iowa, USA, d. 15 December 1944. Miller was the first artist to be credited with a million-selling disc (for 'Chattanooga Choo Choo'), and was the toast of North American popular music during World War II for his uniformed orchestra's fusion of sober virtuosity, infectious dance rhythms and varied intonation of brass and woodwind. In Miller's hands, close harmony vocals - often wordless - were almost incidental in a slick repertoire that embraced Tin Pan Alley standards ('April In Paris', Hoagy Carmichael's 'The Nearness Of You'), jump blues ('St. Louis Blues', Jelly Roll Morton's 'King Porter Stomp'), western swing ('Blueberry Hill', once sung by Gene Autry) and mainstream jazz ('Jersey Bounce', 'Tuxedo Junction'), also exemplified by the 'hotter' big bands of Artie Shaw and Jimmy Dorsey. After his family moved to North Platts, Nebraska, Miller's trombone skills earned him places in bands operational within his Fort Morgan high school, and afterwards at the University of Colorado. On becoming a professional musician, he found work on the west coast and in New York as both a player and arranger - notably for Victor Young, whose Los Angeles studio orchestra accompanied Judy Garland and Bing Crosby. Other prestigious feathers in Miller's cap were his supervision of Britain's Ray Noble And The New Mayfair Orchestra's first USA tour and a scoring commission for Columbia Records. His earnings were ploughed back into the organization and rehearsal of his own band which, despite setbacks such as his wife's long illness in 1938, built up a huge following in New York, through dogged rounds of one-night-stands and record-breaking residencies in venues such as Pompton Turnpike roadhouse and the celebrated Glen Island Casino.

Signed to RCA Records in 1939, Miller proved a sound investment with immediate consecutive best-sellers in evocative classics such as 'Little Brown Jug' (written in 1869), 'In The Mood' and 'Sunrise Serenade'. The latter was coupled with 'Moonlight Serenade' - a strikingly effective extrapolation of a trombone exercise that became Miller's signature tune. As synonymous with him, too, was 1940's 'Chattanooga Choo Choo' with a chorus (by Tex Beneke, Marion Hutton and the Modernaires) atypically to the fore. This novelty was also among highlights of Sun Valley Serenade (1941), the orchestra's first movie (co-starring Norwegian ice-skating champion, Sonja Henie). Other Miller classics included the irresistible 'Pennsylvania 6-5000' and the haunting 'Tuxedo Junction'. At Miller's commercial peak the next year, Orchestra Wives (1942, with Ann Rutherford and Cesar Romero), enveloped a similarly vacuous plot with musical interludes that included another smash in '(I've Got A Gal In) Kalamazoo'. The enduring lyric brilliantly used the alphabet; 'a b c d e f g h 1 got a gal in Kalamazoo'. That same year also brought both Miller's lively hit arrangement of 'American Patrol' and his enlistment into the US Army. Even though he was too old for combat he still volunteered out of patriotism, was elevated to the rank of Captain and sent out to entertain the Allied forces. He was promoted to major in August 1944. Following a visit to Britain, his aircraft disappeared over the English Channel on 15 December 1944, although a recent report alleges that Miller actually died of a heart attack in a French brothel.

His death was an assumption that some devotees found too grievous to bear, and rumours of his survival persisted. In any case, his orchestra lived on - even if the economics of staying on the road, combined with the rise of rock 'n' roll, finished off lesser rivals. Universal Pictures produced the immensely successful 1954 bio-pic, The Glenn Miller Story (with James Stewart in the title role). An Oscar-nominated soundtrack album (directed by Henry Mancini) was released, and a re-issued 'Moonlight Serenade' reached number 12 in the UK singles charts. Miller's habit of preserving many of his radio broadcasts on private discs enabled the issue of another album, Marvellous Miller Moods. Also reaching the US chart in the late 50s was a 1939 Carnegie Hall concert recording and The New Glenn Miller Orchestra In Hi-Fi.

Miller's original arrangements were regarded as definitive by those multitudes who continued to put repackagings such as The Real Glenn Miller And His Orchestra high into the international charts as late as 1977. The sound was recreated so precisely by the Syd Lawrence Orchestra that it was employed in a 1969 television documentary of the late bandleader whose UK fan club booked Lawrence regularly for its annual tribute shows. Among best tributes paid were those by Manhattan Transfer in a 1976 version of 'Tuxedo Junction', and Jive Bunny And The Mastermixers whose 1989 medley, 'Swing The Mood' - a UK number 1 - was sandwiched between excerpts of 'In The Mood', sampled from Miller's 1938 recording. The arranging style perfected by Miller's staff arrangers, notably Jerry Gray, continued to influence several middle of the road writers and bandleaders during the next two or three decades. Curiously enough, for a musician whose work is now preserved eternally in its 40s style, Miller was always eager to move on. Shortly before his death he remarked to McKinley that the style that had made him famous was no longer of interest to him, 'I've gone as far as I can go with the saxophone sound. I've got to have something new'. The enduring quality of Miller's work is most forcibly underlined by the realization that his tunes have become part of the instant musical vocabulary of listeners young and old. In 1995, just over 50 years after Miller's death, a set of recordings made by the American Band of the AEF at the Abbey Road studios in London late in 1944, was released as a 2-CD set.

● ALBUMS: Glenn Miller Concert Vol 1 (RCA Victor 1951)★★★★, Glenn Miller Concert Vol 2 (RCA Victor 1951)★★★★, Glenn Miller (RCA Victor 1951)★★★, Glenn Miller Concert Vol 3 (RCA Victor 1951)★★★★, This Is Glenn Miller (RCA Victor 1951)★★★, This Is Glenn Miller Vol 2 (RCA Victor 1951)★★★, Sunrise Serenade (RCA Victor 1951)★★★, The Glenn Miller Story (1954)★★★★, Marvelous Miller Moods (RCA Victor 1957)★★★, The New Glenn Miller Orchestra In Hi Fi (RCA Victor 1957)★★★, The Glenn Miller Carnegie Hall Concert (RCA Victor 1957)★★★, Something Old, New, Borrowed And Blue (RCA Victor 1958)★★★, The Miller Sound (RCA Victor 1959)★★★, Marvelous Miller Medleys (RCA Victor 1959)★★★, The Great Dance Bands Of The 30s And 40s (RCA Victor 1959)★★★, On Tour With The New Glenn Miller Orchestra (RCA Victor 1959)★★★, Dance Anyone? (RCA Victor 1960)★★★, The Authentic Sound Of The New Glenn Miller Orchestra Today (RCA Victor 1961)★★★, Glenn Miller Time (RCA Victor 1961)★★★, Echoes Of Glenn Miller (RCA Victor 1962)★★★, On The Air 3-LP box set (RCA Victor 1963)★★★, The Best Of Glenn Miller Vols 1-3 (RCA Victor 1963)★★★★, Blue Moonlight (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, In The Mood (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, The Chesterfield Broadcasts Vol 1 (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Under The Direction Of Buddy DeFranco Returns To The Glen Island Casino (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, The Chesterfield Broadcasts Vol 2 (RCA Victor1968)★★★, The Nearness Of You (1969)★★★, A Memorial 1944-1969 (1970)★★★, The Real Glenn Miller And His Orchestra Play The Original Music From The Film 'The Glenn Miller Story' And Other Hits (1971)★★★, A Legendary Performer (1975)★★★, A Legendary Performer Vol.2 (1976)★★★, The Unforgettable Glenn Miller (1977)★★★, Glenn Miller Army Air Force Band (1943-44) (1981)★★★, Chesterfield Shows 1941-42 (1984)★★★, Chesterfield Shows - Chicago 1940 (1984)★★★, Chesterfield Shows - New York City 1940 (1984)★★★, Glenn Miller Airforce Orchestra, June 10, 1944 (1984)★★★, April 3, 1940 Chesterfield Show (1989)★★★, The Glenn Miller Gold Collection (1993)★★★★, The Ultimate Glenn Miller (RCA Bluebird 1993)★★★★★, Live At The Café Rouge (1994)★★★, The Lost Recordings 2-CD set (RCA Victor 1995)★★★, The Secret Broadcasts 3-CD set (Happy Days 1996)★★, Candlelight Miller (BMG 1998)★★★, The Very Best Of Glenn Miller (Camden 1997)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Next To A Letter From Home - Major Glenn Miller's Wartime Band, Geoffrey Butcher. Glen Miller & His Orchestra, George Thomas Simon.

Miller, Harry

b. 21 April 1941, Johannesburg, South Africa, d. 16 December 1983. A highly impressive and emotional bass player, Miller played R&B (with Manfred Mann) in South Africa. He moved to the UK in 1961, and then worked in bands on transatlantic liners, so that he heard New York jazz at first hand. Settling back in London, he made a reputation playing with John Surman, Keith Tippett (Ovary Lodge and Centipede), Dudu Pukwana (Spear), Elton Dean (Ninesense and Just Us), Stan Tracey (Tentacles and the Octet), Alan Skidmore (part of the quintet that won the 1969 Press prize at Montreux), Louis Moholo, Kenneth Terroade, Chris McGregor, Mike Westbrook and Mike Osborne, forming, with Louis Moholo, the superb Mike Osborne Trio for several years. He also worked in a trio with Moholo and Peter Brötzmann. He also led bands of his own, notably the ferocious and all-star Isipingo, and the Quartette A Tête, which he co-founded with Tippet, Radu Malfatti and Paul Lytton. He co-founded the Lambeth New Music Society and Ogun records, both of which showcased many of the best UK-based musicians. He also ran regular gigs through his Grass Roots agency. He died as a result of a road-accident in 1983. His widow, Hazel, continues to make an important contribution to the scene through Ogun, and by the intermittent, tenacious organisation of benefits and other gigs.

● ALBUMS: Children At Play (1974)★★, with Isipingo Family Affair (1977)★★★, In Conference (1978)★★★★, with Radu Malfatti Bracknell Breakdown (1978)★★, with Peter Brötzmann, Louis Moholo The Nearer The Bone The Sweeter The Meat (1980)★★★★, with Brötzmann, Moholo Opened, But Hardly Touched (1981)★★★, with Malfatti Zwecknagel (1981)★★★.

Miller, Herb

b. North Platte, Nebraska, USA. The younger brother of Glenn Miller, Herb too studied music at high school. While at college he played trumpet, before taking his first job as business manager for Glenn's band. However, his musical instincts soon got the better of him, and he joined Charlie Spivak as trumpeter in the late 30s. He formed his own dance band, the Herb Miller Orchestra, in California in the early 40s, with its publicity centring firmly on his familial connection to the now fabulously successful Glenn Miller. The sidemen employed included Frankie Schenk (piano), Joe Reisman, Garth Andrews, Dick Baker, Joe Lenza (saxophone), Les Webel (clarinet), Bob Lewis, Danny Baxter and Miller himself (trumpets) and Bill Peri (drums). Despite coast to coast touring, with engagements at venues such as the Aragon Ballroom in California and Jerry Jones' Rendezvous in Salt Lake City, they never achieved any major success. After World War II Herb moved to Monterey, California, where he maintained his involvement in various small scale musical ventures.

Miller, J.D. 'Jay'

b. 1923, El Campo, Texas, USA, d. 23 March 1996, Lafayette, Louisiana, USA. One of the best-known and most successful record producers from Louisiana, Miller started out as a musician, playing with country and Cajun bands around Lake Charles from the late 30s. After a spell in the services, he started to make records aimed at a small localized market for Cajun music in south-west Louisiana; these, by obscure artists such as Lee Sonnier and Amidie Breaux, were among the first records in the idiom to appear after the war, and established his position as a pioneer in the field. He continued to record Cajun music and C&W on his Feature and Fais Do-Do labels, including the earliest records by Jimmie C. Newman and Doug Kershaw, and later on Kajun and Cajun Classics, which featured important figures such as Nathan Abshire and Aldus Roger. However, it was when he turned his attention in the mid-50s to black music that Miller began to develop his best-known and most enduring legacy. Between 1954, when he first recorded Lightnin' Slim, and the early 60s, he established an extraordinary list of blues and country artists, including Slim, Lonesome Sundown, Slim Harpo, Lazy Lester, Lefty Frizzell, Kitty Wells, Silas Hogan and many others, whose work he leased to the Nashville label Excello. He also continued to release records on labels of his own, Zynn and Rocko, including rockabilly and local pop by artists such as Johnny Jano and Warren Storm, and in the 70s, on Blues Unlimited. His list of artists was enormous, but just as important was the characteristic sound he achieved in his studio in Crowley, which became inextricably linked with the indigenous sounds of Louisiana. He died following complications from quadruple bypass surgery in 1996.

Miller, Jacob

b. *c.*1955, Jamaica, West Indies, d. 23 March 1980. Miller recorded his first record for Coxsone Dodd, entitled 'Love Is A Message' (aka 'Let Me Love You') in 1968, aged just 13. The song was not a hit, however, and Miller had to wait a few years before he returned to the studio. In 1974 he recorded a number of singles for Augustus Pablo, including 'Each One Teach One', 'Keep On Knocking', 'False Rasta', 'Who Say Jah No Dread' and 'Baby I Love You So', most of which were popular on the pre-release circuit in the UK. Unfortunately, when Island released 'Baby I Love You So', they failed to credit Miller, and even relegated his vocal to the b-side in favour of its thrashing King Tubby's/Pablo dub, 'King Tubby's Meets Rockers Uptown'. Miller's biggest hits came as a member of Inner Circle. In 1976 they enjoyed a couple of roots hits with 'Tenement Yard' and 'Tired Fe Lick Weed In A Bush' (both credited to Miller). These hits, combined with Miller's explosive stage act made them the top act in Jamaica in the latter part of the 70s. Miller, an exuberant, amply proportioned man, possessed of a fine tenor that often featured a trademark stutter, went on to make a number of excellent records with Inner Circle, including 'All Night Till Daylight' and 'Forward Jah Jah Children'. He took part in the famous 1978 One Love Peace Concert in Kingston, where Bob Marley joined hands with Edward Seaga and Michael Manley, and had an amusing cameo role in the 1979 film Rockers. He died in a road crash on 23 March 1980.

● ALBUMS: Killer Miller (Top Ranking 1978/RAS 1988)★★★★, Natty Christmas (Top Ranking 1978, RAS 1988)★★, Unfinished Symphony (Circle 1984)★★★, Who Say Jah No Dread (Greensleeves 1992)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Reggae Greats (Island 1985)★★★★, Greatest Hits (RAS 1988)★★★★.

Miller, Jimmy

b. 1942, New York, USA, d. 22 October 1994, Denver, Colorado, USA. Record producer Miller arrived in Britain during the mid-60s. His 1965 composition, 'Incense', was recorded by the Anglos, a studio group which featured Steve Winwood (as Steve Anglo) on vocals. Miller later co-wrote and produced 'I'm A Man', Winwood's final single with the Spencer Davis Group. Their association continued on Winwood's next venture, Traffic. Miller's unfussy style allowed the group to blossom, a feature prevalent in his work with another contemporary unit, Spooky Tooth. However, he gained his outstanding reputation for work with the Rolling Stones. Beggar's Banquet marked the group's return to basics in the wake of psychedelic ephemera, and Miller's natural but dynamic technique resulted in several classic performances, including 'Street Fighting Man', 'Sympathy For The Devil' and 'Stray Cat Blues'. His contribution to what is arguably the Stones' finest period, which encompassed Let It Bleed, Sticky Fingers and Exile On Main Street, cannot be over-emphasized, but their mutually beneficial collaboration ended with the release of It's Only Rock 'N' Roll. Miller's own profile diminished with this severance, but he remained one of the most important producers to emerge during the late 60s.

Miller, Jody

b. 29 November 1941, Phoenix, Arizona, USA, but raised in Blanchard, Oklahoma. Miller's father loved country music and played fiddle, and all her four sisters were singers. She led a folk trio while still at school and, after graduation, moved to California to pursue a singing career, but a severe car accident forced her to return home. She established herself locally after appearing on Tom Paxton's television show, and gained a reputation as a folk-singer. Actor Dale Robertson introduced her to Capitol Records, and her first album, Wednesday's Child, was a blend of folk and pop music. Her first US chart success was with 'He Walks Like A Man' and then she went to number 12 with the answer to Roger Miller's 'King Of The Road', 'Queen Of The House'. As a result, she won a Grammy for the best female country performance. She recorded a dramatic teen anthem about being misunderstood, 'Home Of The Brave', which was more significant than its chart placings imply (US 25/UK 49). This, however, was a one-off as she then recorded more conventional country hits, having some success with 'Long Black Limousine'. In 1968, she left the business to raise a daughter, but returned to work with producer Billy Sherrill in Nashville in 1970. Her first success was with a Tony Hatch song, 'Look At Mine'. She then scored with country versions of pop hits, 'He's So Fine', 'Baby I'm Yours' and 'Be My Baby'. A duet with Johnny Paycheck, 'Let's All Go Down The River', also fared well. She made little attempt to change with the times and in the early 80s, she retired to breed quarter horses on a 1,000-acre ranch in Blanchard, Oklahoma. She returned with 1987's My Country, an album of patriotic songs that led to Miller being asked to perform at George Bush's inaugural ball in 1988. She then formed an unsuccessful duo with her daughter Robin.

● ALBUMS: Wednesday's Child Is Full Of Woe (Capitol 1963)★★★, Home Of The Brave (Capitol 1965)★★★, Queen Of The House (Capitol 1965)★★★, Jody Miller Sings The Great Hits Of Buck Owens (Capitol 1966)★★, The Nashville Sound Of Jody Miller (Epic 1969)★★, Look At Mine (Epic 1970)★★★, There's A Party Goin' On (Epic 1972)★★★, He's So Fine (Epic 1972)★★★, Good News (Epic 1973)★★★, House Of The Rising Sun (Epic 1974)★★, Country Girl (Epic 1975)★★★, Will You Love Me Tomorrow? (Epic 1976)★★★, Here's Jody Miller (Epic 1977)★★, My Country (1987)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Jody Miller (Capitol)★★★.

Miller, Marcus

b. 14 June 1959, New York City, New York, USA. Taking up the electric bass in his teens, Miller's early musical experience came from the New York soul scene. Flautist Bobbi Humphrey gave him his first serious work in the jazz idiom in 1977, which was quickly followed by a tour with Lenny White's group. Becoming competent on an impressive number of instruments, Miller's reputation grew in the New York studio world. By 1980, he had recorded for Bob James, Grover Washington Jnr., Roberta Flack, and Aretha Franklin. In 1980, he joined Miles Davis, but left after two years for the financial lure of session work, producing and playing on several albums for David Sanborn. The second and more important period of Miller's relationship with Miles Davis began in 1986, when he played almost every instrument, and wrote most of the music for Tutu, Davis' first album for Warner Brothers. Davis had never before given away so much artistic control, but must have been pleased with the result, for Miller worked just as closely with him on his Siesta and Amandlia albums. He continues to work as one of New York's top studio musicians.

● ALBUMS: with Miles Davis The Man With The Horn (1981)★★★, with Davis We Want Miles (1981)★★★, with Davis Tutu (1986)★★★★, with Davis Siesta (1988)★★★, with Davis Amandlia (1989)★★★, The Sun Don't Lie (Dreyfus Jazz Line 1993)★★★, Tales (PRA 1995)★★, Live & More (PRA 1998)★★★.

Miller, Mitch

b. Mitchell William Miller, 4 July 1911, Rochester, New York, USA. An oboist, record producer, arranger and one of the most commercially successful recording artists of the 50s and early 60s. He learned to play the piano at the age of six, and began studying the oboe when he was 12, and later attended Rochester's Eastman School of Music. After graduating in 1932, Miller played oboe with symphony orchestras in the area, before joining CBS Radio in 1932. For the next 11 years he was a soloist with the CBS Symphony, and played with André Kostelanetz, Percy Faith, the Saidenburg Little Symphony and the Budapest String Quartet. In the late 40s he became director of Mercury Records' 'pop' division, and then in 1950, was appointed head of A&R at Columbia Records. While at Mercury, Miller was responsible for producing several big hits, including Frankie Laine's 'That Lucky Old Sun', 'Mule Train' and 'The Cry Of The Wild Goose'. Miller also conducted the orchestra on Laine's 'Jezebel' and 'Rose, Rose, I Love You'. Shortly after he left the label, Patti Page released 'The Tennessee Waltz', which became one of the biggest-selling singles ever. The original was by R&B singer Erskine Hawkins, and the Page disc is sometimes credited as being the first really successful example of 'crossover' from country to pop, although Miller had already fashioned Hank Williams' 'Hey, Good Lookin'' into a minor hit for Frankie Laine and Jo Stafford. Miller developed this policy when he moved to Columbia, and recorded Guy Mitchell ('Singing The Blues' and 'Knee Deep In The Blues'), Tony Bennett ('Cold, Cold Heart'), Rosemary Clooney ('Half As Much'), Jo Stafford ('Jambalaya') and the little-known Joan Weber ('Let Me Go Lover'). Miller's roster at Columbia also included Johnnie Ray ('Cry', 'The Little White Cloud That Cried', 'Just Crying In The Rain') and Frank Sinatra. There was little empathy between Miller and Sinatra, and the singer rejected several songs that eventually became successful for Guy Mitchell. After he left Columbia, Sinatra sent telegrams to judiciary and senate committees, accusing Miller of presenting him with inferior songs, and of accepting money from writers whose songs he (Miller) had used. Certainly, Sinatra recorded some unsuitable material under Miller's auspices during his final years with the label, although 'American Beauty Rose' and 'Goodnight, Irene', both with Miller's accompaniment, and 'Bim Bam Baby', paled in comparison with perhaps the most bizarre item of all, 'Mama Will Bark', on which Sinatra made barking and growling noises, and duetted with Miller's latest signing, a female named Dagmar.

Miller's own hit recordings, mostly credited to 'Mitch Miller And His Gang', began in 1950 with his adaptation of the Israeli folk song 'Tzena, Tzena, Tzena', complete with a happy vocal chorus that would typify his later work. After 'Meet Mr. Callaghan', 'Without My Lover', 'Under Paris Skies' and 'Napoleon' in the early 50s, he spent six weeks at number 1 with the million-selling 'The Yellow Rose Of Texas', one of the great marching songs from the American Civil War. This was followed by three instrumentals: 'Lisbon Antigua', 'Song For A Summer Night (Parts 1 & 2)' and 'March From The River Kwai And Colonel Bogey'. There was also the novelty 'The Children's Marching Song' from the 1959 film The Inn Of The Sixth Happiness. The previous year, Miller had started his series of Sing Along With Mitch albums, which featured an all-male chorus singing old favourites, many from before the turn of the century. Nineteen variations on the theme made the US Top 40 between 1958 and 1962, of which seven titles achieved million-selling status. The phenomenally successful Sing Along formula was developed as a popular television series which ran from 1961-66, and featured several solo singers such as Victor Griffin, Leslie Uggams and Louise O'Brien. Despite the obvious financial gain to Columbia from his record sales, Miller was constantly criticized for his negative attitude towards rock 'n' roll. He turned down Buddy Holly, among others, and was blamed for his company's relatively small market share in the rapidly changing music scene during his tenure as an influential executive, yet his promotion of the artists already mentioned, plus Doris Day ('Que Sera, Sera'), Johnny Mathis, Percy Faith, and many more, substantially aided Columbia. Out of place in the 'swinging 60s', he emerged occasionally to conduct the orchestra on various light and classical music recordings.

● ALBUMS: Sing Along With Mitch (Columbia 1958)★★★★, More Sing Along ... (Columbia 1958)★★★, Christmas Sing Along ... (Columbia 1958)★★★★, Still More! Sing Along ... (Columbia 1959)★★★, Folk Songs Sing Along ... (Columbia 1959)★★★, Party Sing Along ... (Columbia 1959)★★★, Fireside Sing Along... (Columbia 1959)★★★, Saturday Night Sing Along ... (Columbia 1960)★★★, Sentimental Sing Along ... (Columbia 1960)★★★, March Along ... (Columbia 1960)★★★, Memories Sing Along ... (Columbia 1960)★★★, Happy Times! Sing Along ... (Columbia 1961)★★★, TV Sing Along ... (Columbia 1961)★★★, Your Request Sing Along ... (Columbia 1961)★★★, Holiday Sing Along ... (Columbia 1961)★★★★, Rhythm Sing Along ... (Columbia 1962)★★★, Family Sing Along ... (Columbia 1962)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Mitch's Greatest Hits (Columbia 1961)★★★★.

Miller, Mrs

Mrs Miller (b. Elva Miller, California, USA) derives her chief notoriety from her popularity among collectors of musical exotica. Her modus operandi involves a seasoned although tuneless melodramatic delivery, accompanying whistles and wholly indulgent, untutored phrasing. Her versions of 'Catch A Falling Star' and 'A Hard Day's Night' reveal her as a natural precursor to the worst elements of karaoke, although she did manage chart entries for the atonal splendour of 'Downtown' and 'Lover's Concerto'.

● ALBUMS: Greatest Hits (Capitol 1966)★★★★.

Miller, Mulgrew

b. 13 April 1955, Greenwood, Massachusetts, USA. Miller learnt the piano while a child and studied music at university, all the while playing in local gospel and R&B groups. After playing with Mercer Ellington's Orchestra in the late 70s, he joined vocalist Betty Carter before moving on to the quintet of Woody Shaw and Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers (1983-86). He has added all the innovations of recent piano playing to this solid background, and fused them with a brilliant technique. In the late 80s he continued with his prolific studio career and played with the quintet of Tony Williams.

● ALBUMS: with Art Blakey Blue Night (1985)★★★, Keys To The City (1985)★★★, Live At Sweet Basil's (1985)★★★★, Work! (1986)★★★, with James Spalding Gotshabe A Better Way (1988)★★, with Benny Golson Benny Golson Quartet (1990)★★★, with Kenny Garrett African Exchange Student (1990)★★★, Time And Again (1992)★★★, Hand In Hand (1993)★★★, Getting To Know You (Novus 1995)★★★★.

Miller, Ned

b. Henry Ned Miller, 12 April 1925, Raines, Utah, USA. When Miller was a small child, the family moved to Salt Lake City, Utah where, after completing his education, he worked as a pipe fitter. He became interested in songwriting and country music and learned to play the guitar, but had no real inclination to be a performer. In the mid-50s, he married and moved to California, where he hoped to sell some of his songs, and joined the Fabor label as a writer and/or performer. Early in 1957, a deal between Fabor and Dot Records, which gave the latter label first choice of all Fabor masters, saw two of his songs, 'Dark Moon' and 'A Fallen Star', both become US country and pop hits for Bonnie Guitar and Jimmy C. Newman, respectively. Miller himself played guitar on the former recording, which also was a number 4 US pop hit for Gale Storm. The song became a UK Top 20 pop hit for Tony Brent and was also recorded by the Kaye Sisters and Joe Loss And His Orchestra. In July 1957, Miller's most famous song appeared when, as a result of a game of patience, he wrote 'From A Jack To A King'. Both his own version and a pop one by Jim Lowe were released by Dot, but created no major impression.

From the start, Miller had little interest in a career as a singer and detested touring; he suffered constantly with stage fright and shyness, and was always a most reluctant performer. Stories are told of him on occasions actually sending a friend to perform as Ned Miller in his place. Although he made some further recordings, including 'Lights In The Street' and 'Turn Back', he achieved no chart success and concentrated on his writing. Between 1959 and 1961, he recorded briefly for Jackpot and Capitol. In 1962, he persuaded Fabor Robison to reissue his recording of 'From A Jack To A King' and this time, despite Miller's reluctance to tour and publicize the song, it became a number 2 country and number 6 pop hit. Released in the UK on the London label, it also soon reached number 2 in the UK pop charts. 'From A Jack To A King', an old-fashioned, traditional-sounding country song, was hardly a record that was ahead of its time, but it became an extraordinary success in Britain, where, in April 1963, it held the number 2 position for four weeks - in spite of the fact that there was no promotion from either the artist or label, and it went against the grain of songs that were hits at the time. It obviously says much for the quality of the song. Further Fabor recordings followed and Miller had Top 20 US country and pop hits with 'Invisible Tears' (1964) and 'Do What You Do Do Well' (1965). He returned to Capitol in 1965, and had five minor hits before being dropped by the label, again due to his unwillingness to tour. He moved to Republic where, in 1970, he achieved his last chart entry with 'The Lover's Song'. He then gave up recording and after moving to Prescott, Arizona, finally wrote his last song in the mid-70s. After eight years at Prescott, he settled in Las Vegas where he completely withdrew from all public appearances and gave up songwriting. In 1991, the German Bear Family label released a 31-track CD of his work, which included some previously unissued material.

● ALBUMS: From A Jack To A King i (Fabor 1963)★★★★, Ned Miller (Sings The Songs Of Ned Miller) (Capitol 1965)★★★, Teardrop Lane (Capitol 1967)★★★, In The Name Of Love (Capitol 1968)★★, Ned Miller's Back (Republic 1970)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Ned Miller (Capitol 1966)★★★, From A Jack To A King ii (Bear Family 1991)★★★★.

Miller, Ray

b. USA. Miller's musical apprenticeship came as part of the six member Black And White Melody Boys in New York City, New York, USA. They featured in several New York musical productions, before Miller established a full-scale dance band orchestra in the early 20s. This featured sidemen Ward Archer (drums), Charlie Rocco (trumpet), Miff Mole (trombone), Danny Yates (violin), Roy Johnston (trumpet), Rube Bloom and Tommy Satterfield (piano), Louie Chasone (tuba), Frankie Trumbauer, Andy Sinella, Billy Richards and Andy Sandolar (saxophone) and Frank O. Prima (banjo). At various times the vocalists were Irving Kaufman, Frank Wright, Harry Maxfield and the Downe Sisters. They became a highly rated musical attraction in the New York area, where Miller concentrated his activities. This included residencies at the New York Hippodrome, Arcadia Ballroom and Atlantic City. Recordings were released on labels such as Gennett, OKeh, Columbia and Brunswick Records, though by the early 30s the band had gone their separate ways.

Miller, Roger

b. 2 January 1936, Fort Worth, Texas, USA, d. 25 October 1992, Los Angeles, California, USA. Miller was brought up in Erick, Oklahoma, and during the late 50s, moved to Nashville, where he worked as a songwriter. His 'Invitation To The Blues' was a minor success for Ray Price, as was '(In The Summertime) You Don't Want Love' for Andy Williams. Miller himself enjoyed a hit on the country charts with the portentously titled 'When Two Worlds Collide'. In 1962, he joined Faron Young's band as a drummer and also wrote 'Swiss Maid', a major hit for Del Shannon. By 1964, Miller was signed to Mercury's Smash label, and secured a US Top 10 hit with 'Dang Me'. The colloquial title was reinforced by some humorous, macabre lyrics ('They ought to take a rope and hang me'). The song brought Miller several Grammy awards, and the following year, he enjoyed an international Top 10 hit with 'King Of The Road'. This stoical celebration of the hobo life, with its jazz-influenced undertones, became his best-known song. The relaxed 'Engine Engine No. 9' was another US Top 10 hit during 1965, and at the end of the year, Miller once more turned his attention to the UK market with 'England Swings'. This affectionate, slightly bemused tribute to swinging London at its zenith neatly summed up the tourist brochure view of the city ('bobbies on bicycles two by two . . . the rosy red cheeks of the little children'). Another international hit, the song was forever associated with Miller. The singer's chart fortunes declined the following year, and a questionable cover version of Elvis Presley's 'Heartbreak Hotel' barely reached the US Top 100. In 1968, Miller secured his last major hit with a poignant reading of Bobby Russell's 'Little Green Apples', which perfectly suited his understated vocal style.

Thereafter, Miller moved increasingly towards the country market and continued performing regularly throughout America. In 1982, he appeared on the album Old Friends with Ray Price and Willie Nelson. Miller's vocals were featured in the Walt Disney cartoon Robin Hood, and in the mid-80s he wrote a Broadway musical, Big River, based on Mark Twain's The Adventures Of Huckleberry Finn. Roger Miller finally lost his battle with cancer when, with his wife Mary and son Roger Jnr. at his bedside, he died on 25 October 1992.

A most popular man with his fellow artists, he was also a great humorist and his general outlook was once neatly summed up when he told the backing band on the Grand Ole Opry, 'I do this in the key of B natural, which is my philosophy in life.'

● ALBUMS: Roger Miller (Camden 1964)★★★, Roger And Out (Smash 1964)★★★, Wild Child aka The Country Side Of Roger Miller (Starday 1965)★★★, The Return Of Roger Miller (Smash 1965)★★★, The 3rd Time (Smash 1965)★★★, Words And Music (Smash 1966)★★★, Walkin' In The Sunshine (Smash 1967)★★★, A Tender Look At Love (Smash 1968)★★★, Roger Miller (Smash 1969)★★★, Roger Miller (Smash 1970)★★, Waterhole Three film soundtrack (Columbia 1973)★★, Off The Wall (Windsong 1978)★★★, Making A Name For Myself (20th Century 1980)★★, Motive Series (Mercury 1981)★★★, with Willie Nelson Old Friends

(Columbia 1982)★★★, The Big Industry (Fundamental 1988)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Golden Hits (Smash 1965)★★★★, Little Green Apples (Pickwick 1976)★★★★, Best Of Roger Miller (Phillips 1978)★★★★, Greatest Hits (RCA 1985)★★★★, Best Of Roger Miller, Volume 1: Country Tunesmith (PolyGram 1991)★★★★, The Best Of Roger Miller, Volume 2: King Of The Road (Mercury 1992)★★★★, King Of The Road 3-CD box set (Mercury Nashville 1995)★★★★, Super Hits (Epic 1996)★★, The Best Of (Spectrum 1998)★★★.

Miller, Steve

b. 5 October 1943, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, USA. The young Miller was set on his musical path by having Les Paul as a family friend, and a father who openly encouraged music in the home. His first band, the Marksmen, was with schoolfriend Boz Scaggs; also with Scaggs, he formed the college band, the Ardells, and at university they became the Fabulous Night Trains. He moved to Chicago in 1964, and became involved in the local blues scene with Barry Goldberg, resulting in the Goldberg Miller Blues Band. Miller eventually moved to San Francisco in 1966, after hearing about the growing hippie music scene, and formed the Miller Blues Band. Within a year he had built a considerable reputation and as the Steve Miller Band, he signed with Capitol Records for a then unprecedented $50,000, following his appearance at the 1967 Monterey Pop Festival. The band at that time included Boz Scaggs, Lonnie Turner, Jim Peterman and Tim Davis, and it was this line-up that was flown to London to record the Glyn Johns-produced Children Of The Future. The album was a critical success although sales were moderate, but it was Sailor later that same year that became his pièce de résistance. The clear production and memorable songs have lasted well and it remains a critics' favourite. Miller's silky-smooth voice and masterful guitar gave the album a touch of class that many of the other San Francisco rock albums lacked. The atmospheric instrumental 'Song For Our Ancestors' and well-crafted love songs like 'Dear Mary' and 'Quicksilver Girl' were just three of the many outstanding tracks. Scaggs and Peterman departed after this album, and Miller added the talented Nicky Hopkins on keyboards for Brave New World, which completed a trio of albums recorded in London with Johns. The blistering 'My Dark Hour' featured Paul McCartney (as Paul Ramon) on bass, while the epic 'Cow Cow' showed off Hopkins' sensitive piano.

The excellent Your Saving Grace maintained the quality of previous albums and repeated the success. Lonnie Turner and Hopkins left at the end of 1969, and Miller replaced Turner with Bobby Winkleman from local band Frumious Bandersnatch. Number 5 completed a cycle of excellent albums that hovered around similar chart positions, indicating that while Miller was highly popular, he was not expanding his audience. He decided to change the format for Rock Love, by having half of the album live. Unfortunately, he chose to record a live set with arguably his weakest band; both Ros Valory and Jack King left within a year and the album sold poorly. Following a European tour, and in an attempt to reverse the trend of his last album, he released Recall The Beginning ... A Journey From Eden, a perplexing album which showed Miller in a melancholic and lethargic mood; once again, Miller's fortunes declined further with poor sales.

After a gap of 18 months, Miller returned with the US chart-topping single 'The Joker', an easily contrived song over a simple riff in which Miller mentioned all references to his various self-titled aliases used in songs over the past years: 'Some people call me the Space Cowboy (Brave New World), some call me the Gangster Of Love (Sailor), some call me Maurice (Recall The Beginning) . . .' The accompanying album was a similar success, stalling at number 2. His future had never looked brighter, but Miller chose to buy a farm and build a recording studio and he effectively vanished.

When he reappeared on record three years later, only his loyal fans rated his commercial chances; however, Fly Like An Eagle became his best-selling album of all time and was a major breakthrough in the UK. This record, with its then state-of-the-art recording, won him many new fans, and finally put him in the major league as one of America's biggest acts. Almost as successful was the sister album Book Of Dreams (1977); they both gave him a number of major singles including the simplistic 'Rock 'N' Me' and the uplifting 'Jet Airliner'. Miller had now mastered and targeted his audience, with exactly the kind of songs he knew they wanted. Once again, he disappeared from the scene and a new album was not released for almost four years. The return this time was less spectacular. Although Circle Of Love contained one side of typical Miller - short, sharp, punchy melodic rock songs - side two was an over-long and self-indulgent epic, 'Macho City'. He once again corrected the fault by responding only six months later, with another US number 1, the catchy 'Abracadabra'. This gave him his second major hit in the UK, almost reaching the coveted top spot in 1982. In the USA, the album climbed near to the top and Miller was left with another million-plus sale. The momentum was lost over the following years, as a live album and Italian X-Rays were comparative failures. Living In The 20th Century contained a segment consisting of a tribute to Jimmy Reed, with whom Steve had played as a teenager. He opted out of the commercial market with the excellent Born 2B Blue in 1989. Together with his old colleague Ben Sidran, Miller paid homage to jazz and blues standards with some exquisite arrangements from Sidran. Songs like Billie Holiday's 'God Bless The Child' and 'Zip-A-Dee-Doo-Dah', were given lazy treatments with Miller's effortless voice. The record was only a moderate success. In the autumn of 1990, while Miller bided his time with the luxury of deciding what to do next, over in Britain Levi's jeans had used 'The Joker' for one of their television advertisements. Capitol quickly released it, and astonishingly, Maurice, the space cowboy, the gangster of love, found himself with his first UK number 1. Wide River in 1993 was a return to his basic rock formula but it was not one of his better efforts. In 1996 Seal had a major US hit with a version of 'Fly Like An Eagle' and k.d. lang recorded 'The Joker' in 1997. Miller's collaboration with Paul McCartney on Flaming Pie (1997) was highly publicized. He co-wrote 'Used To Be Bad' and played guitar on what many regard as McCartney's finest post-Beatles' work.

● ALBUMS: Children Of the Future (Capitol 1968)★★★★, Sailor (Capitol 1968)★★★★★, Brave New World (Capitol 1969)★★★★, Your Saving Grace (Capitol 1969)★★★, Revolution film soundtrack 3 tracks only (United Artists 1969)★★, Number 5 (Capitol 1970)★★★★, Rock Love (Capitol 1971)★★, Recall The Beginning ... A Journey From Eden (Capitol 1972)★★★, The Joker (Capitol 1973)★★★, Fly Like An Eagle (Capitol 1976)★★★★, Book Of Dreams (Capitol 1977)★★★★, Circle Of Love (Capitol 1981)★★★, Abracadabra (Capitol 1982)★★★, Steve Miller Band - Live! (Capitol 1983)★★, Italian X Rays (Capitol 1984)★★, Living In The 20th Century (Capitol 1986)★★, Born 2B Blue (Capitol 1988)★★★, Wide River (1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Anthology (Capitol 1972)★★★★, Greatest Hits (1974-1978) (Capitol 1978)★★★★, A Decade Of American Music: Greatest Hits 1976-1986 (1987)★★★★, The Best Of 1968-1973 (Capitol 1990)★★★★, Box Set (Capitol 1994)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Steve Miller Band Live (Video Collection 1988).

Milli Vanilli

This pop duo consisted of Rob Pilatus (b. 8 June 1965, New York, USA, d. 2 April 1998, Frankfurt, Germany) who was brought up in an orphanage, and Fabrice Morvan, who was training to be a trampoline athlete until a fall damaged his neck. Based in Germany, they worked as backing singers for various German groups, before forming their own duo combining rap and soul, taking their name from a New York club. They enjoyed big hits with 'Girl, You Know It's True' and the similar 'Girl, I'm Gonna Miss You', before they suffered a major backlash when they were exposed as frontmen for a 'group' fabricated by producer Frank Farian. The duo had apparently been chosen for their looks and were effectively locked out of the studio when recording took place. After handing back music industry awards, they promised to return with a new contract and their own voices. However, Farian re-launched the group in 1991 as the Real Milli Vanilli, using Brad Howell, Johnny Davis and Charles Shaw, the singers from the original studio sessions. Pilatus died of an overdose in Frankfurt, Germany in April 1998.

● ALBUMS: All Or Nothing (Cooltempo 1988)★★, Two X Two remixes (Cooltempo 1989)★.

Millian, Baker

b. 1908, Crowley, Louisiana, USA. As a youth and young man he played various instruments, including piano and several members of the saxophone family before settling on the tenor. He first worked in several Louisiana bands, including Chris Kelly's in New Orleans, before moving to Texas where he played in territory bands such as Chester Boone's and Boots Douglas's. At the end of the 30s he relocated to California and thereafter worked mostly outside music, although he regularly took up his instrument to play with visiting musicians such as Bunk Johnson. A competent player, his work with Douglas's band Boots And His Buddies, displays an interesting, if sometimes derivative, style, suggesting his fondness for the playing of Coleman Hawkins, although in later years he accommodated the new sound of Lester Young. In some respects, Millian can be seen as an early manifestation of the tough-Texas-tenor school of playing.

● COMPILATIONS: Boots and His Buddies: San Antonio Jazz (Tax 30s)★★★.

Millican And Nesbitt

Alan Millican and Tom Nesbitt worked as coal miners for 20 years in Northumberland, the northern-most county in England and, in their spare time, sang as a duo in the local workingmen's clubs. In 1973, they appeared on the UK's top television talent show, Opportunity Knocks, and captured the hearts of millions with their sentimental rendition of 'Vaya Con Dios', which was light years away from Les Paul And Mary Ford's 1953 UK Top 10 version. They won their heat, and returned to the programme nine times in all. With 'Vaya Con Dios', they rubbed shoulders with Gary Glitter and Diana Ross in the UK chart for a few weeks, and had a minor hit with the follow-up, 'For Old Times Sake'. Voted 1973's top new talent by the Variety Club of Great Britain, they had hit albums with Millican And Nesbitt (which featured golden oldies such as 'Paper Roses', 'Keep A Light At The Window' and 'The Old Lamplighter') and Everybody Knows Millican And Nesbitt. During the late 70s, they also released Golden Hour Of Millican And Nesbitt, Canadian Sunset and Country Roads, before returning to the clubs.

Millie

b. Millicent Small, 6 October 1942, Clarendon, Jamaica, West Indies. After leaving home at the age of 13 to further her singing career in Kingston, Millie recorded several tracks with producer Coxsone Dodd, who teamed her with Roy Panton. As Roy And Millie, they achieved local success with 'We'll Meet' and 'Oh, Shirley' and caught the attention of entrepreneur Chris Blackwell. On 22 June 1964, Millie accompanied Blackwell to the UK and recorded Harry Edwards' 'Don't You Know', before being presented with the catchy 'My Boy Lollipop', formerly a US R&B hit for Barbie Gaye, which became a transatlantic Top 5 hit, the first crossover ska record. However, chart fame proved ephemeral. A carbon-copy follow-up, 'Sweet William', was only a minor hit, and 'Bloodshot Eyes' failed to reach the Top 40. Thereafter, she languished in relative obscurity. Even a brief collaboration with Jackie Edwards in Jackie And Millie, and a nude photo-spread in a men's magazine failed to revitalize her career. Ultimately handicapped by her novelty hit, Millie's more serious work, such as the self-chosen Millie Sings Fats Domino, was sadly ignored.

● ALBUMS: with Jackie Edwards Pledging My Love (1967)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Jackie Edwards The Best Of Jackie & Millie (1968)★★★, The Best Of (Trojan 1970)★★★.

Millinder, Lucky

b. Lucius Millinder, 8 August 1900, Anniston, Alabama, USA, d. 28 September 1966, New York, USA. Growing up in Chicago, Millinder worked in clubs and theatres in the late 20s as a dancer and master of ceremonies. His engaging personality resulted in his being appointed leader of several bands in Chicago, New York, and on tour. In 1933, he brought a band to Europe, playing as part of an all-black revue. The following year he was appointed leader of the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, fronting it at the Cotton Club in Harlem. Beginning in 1938, he had a few bad years, part of the time leading the Bill Doggett band but mostly suffering acute financial embarrassment. In 1940, he formed a new band of his own, hiring some quality musicians - including, at one time or another in the first few years, trumpeters Dizzy Gillespie, Joe Guy and Freddie Webster, saxophonists Tab Smith, Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis and Sam 'The Man' Taylor, and in the rhythm section Doggett, Trevor Bacon and David 'Panama' Francis. Millinder also had Sister Rosetta Tharpe in the band for a while. He enjoyed considerable success, playing dance dates, often at the Savoy Ballroom in Harlem, broadcasting and touring, with occasional recording dates for good measure. Despite the changing times, Millinder kept the band afloat throughout the 40s, eventually calling it a day in 1952. Thereafter, he earned his living outside music, but formed occasional bands for special concerts. Although he was not a musician and could not read music, Millinder was an exceptional front man, conducting his bands with flair and showmanship. Given the fact that many of the arrangements used by his bands over the years were complex, he clearly had a good ear and was able to create the effect of leading when in reality he was following the musicians under his baton. Although it might be said with some justification that the Mills Blue Rhythm Band and his own band of the early 40s owed little to him musically, there can be little doubt that they owed him much for the success they enjoyed.

● COMPILATIONS: Big Bands Uptown! (1931-43),★★★ Lucky Millinder And His Orchestra 1941-1943 (1941-43)★★★★, Apollo Jump (Affinity 1983)★★★★, Let It Roll Again (Jukebox Lil 1985)★★★, Shorty's Got To Go (Jukebox Lil 1985)★★★★, Lucky Millinder And His Orchestra (Hindsight 1987)★★★, Ram-Bunk-Shush (Sing 1988)★★★, Stompin' At The Savoy 1943-44 (Bandstand 1988)★★★★, Lucky Millinder 1941-42 (Original Jazz Classics 1993)★★★★.

Millington, June

After leaving all-female rock group Fanny in 1974, Millington (b. 1949, Manila, California, USA; guitar, vocals) guested as a backing vocalist on Little Feat's Dixie Chicken before forming Millington with her sister Jean, releasing one album through United Artists. She released three solo records for the Fabulous label in the 80s, but has since concentrated on production work for other female artists, and is on the board of directors at California's Institute For The Musical Arts. She also plays in the Slamming Babes.

● ALBUMS: as Millington Ladies On The Stage (United Artists 1978)★★, Heartsong (Fabulous 1981)★★, Running (Fabulous 1983)★★, One World, One Heart (Fabulous 1988)★★.

● VIDEOS: The Changer And The Changed (Olivia Records).

Millns, Paul

b. Norfolk, England. Millns's first forays into music were undertaken playing piano in blues and soul bands, two musical styles which have maintained a strong influence on his output. After moving to London he found himself working in groups with Alexis Korner, Eric Burdon, Bert Jansch, Jo Ann Kelly and Chicago bluesman Louisiana Red. In the mid-70s his solo debut was released on Philips. The following years saw him alternate between his own songwriting and session/touring duties with other artists. In 1979 he was invited to Germany to record a soundtrack for the film, Gibbi West Germany. He has retained a strong reputation in that country via television appearances on music shows like Rock Palast, as well as appearing at major continental events and their domestic equivalents (including the Edinburgh Arts and Cambridge Folk Festivals). Further commissions for soundtrack work have been undertaken for the BBC, Thames and Channel Four, while artists like Elkie Brooks ('Too Much Between Us' on Pearls 2) have covered his songs. His circle of musical friends is also impressive, Bert Jansch, Ralph McTell, Christine Collister and members of Pentangle and Fairport Convention all guesting on his 1994 set, Against The Tide.

● ALBUMS: Paul Millns (Philips 1975)★★★, Gibbi West Germany film soundtrack (Telefunken 1980)★★, Heartbreaking Highway (Telefunken 1981)★★, Till The Morning Comes (Mays 1982)★★★, Finally Falls The Rain (Jeton 1985)★★★, Reaching Out (Plane 1987)★★★, Secret Operations (Ariola/Sad Mountain 1991)★★★, Against The Tide (Hypertension 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Simply Blue (Hypertension 1993)★★★.

Mills Blue Rhythm Band

Late in 1929, a group of New York musicians, under the nominal leadership of drummer Willie Lynch, formed a big band which they named the Blue Rhythm Band. A succession of front men, who included pianist Edgar Hayes and singer Cab Calloway, led the band, but despite high musical standards, it failed to gather a large following. In 1931, Irving Mills took over management of the band and appended his name. The Mills Blue Rhythm Band became third string in Mills's stable, behind the bands of Duke Ellington and Calloway. Later conducted by Jimmy Ferguson ('Baron Lee') and then Lucky Millinder, the band made many fine records. Subsequently billed as the Instrumental Gentlemen From Harlem, the band eventually folded in 1938. During its existence, several top-flight musicians played in its ranks, among them trumpeters Henry 'Red' Allen, Shelton Hemphill, Charlie Shavers, Harry Edison and Edward Anderson, trombonist J.C. Higginbotham, saxophonists Charlie Holmes, Caster and Ted McCord, and clarinettist Buster Bailey. Especially in its middle and later years, the band was musically outstanding, playing fine arrangements by Tab Smith, Joe Garland and others. Regrettably, the band's lack of a charismatic frontman seemed to carry more weight with the public than its musical excellence, and the Mills Blue Rhythm Band sank into undeserved latterday obscurity. In the late 40s, the band was briefly reformed for record dates.

● COMPILATIONS: Henry 'Red' Allen And The Mills Blue Rhythm Band (1934-35)★★★, Big Bands (1947)★★★, Blue Rhythm (Hep Jazz 1986 1930-31 recordings)★★★, 1937 (CJM 1987)★★★, Rhythms Splash (Hep Jazz 1987)★★★, Savage Rhythm (Hep Jazz 1987, 1931-32 recordings)★★★★,Rhythm Spasm (Hep Jazz 1993, 1932-33 recordings)★★★★.

Mills Brothers

The three permanent members of the group comprised Herbert Mills (b. 2 April 1912, d. April 1989, Las Vegas, Nevada, USA), Harry Mills (b. 9 August 1913, d. 28 June 1982) and Donald Mills (b. 29 April 1915). John Mills Jnr. (b. 11 February 1911, d. 1935), added vocal notes in string bass form and played guitar. All the brothers were born in Piqua, Ohio, USA, sons of a barber who had been a successful concert singer. By the mid-20s, they were singing in sweet, close harmony in local vaudeville, providing their own backing by accurately imitating saxophones, trumpets, trombones and bass. With the main trio still teenagers, they had their own show on Cincinnati radio before moving to New York in 1930. The brothers signed to Brunswick Records and had a hit in 1931 with their first disc, 'Tiger Rag', which they also sang in the movie The Big Broadcast, featuring Bing Crosby and many other stars of US radio. They appeared in several other musical montage movies such as Twenty Million Sweethearts (1934), Broadway Gondolier (1935) and Reveille With Beverly (1943), Rhythm Parade (1943), Cowboy Canteen (1944) and When You're Smiling (1950). In the early 30s, Crosby featured on several of the brothers' record hits, including 'Dinah'/'Can't We Talk It Over', 'Shine' and 'Gems From George White's Scandals', which also included the Boswell Sisters. On later tracks, the Mills Brothers were also joined by Louis Armstrong, Ella Fitzgerald and Cab Calloway. Their early records were labelled: 'No musical instruments or mechanical devices used on this recording other than one guitar'. Other 30s hits included 'You Rascal, You', 'I Heard', 'Good-Bye, Blues', 'Rockin' Chair', 'St. Louis Blues', 'Sweet Sue', 'Bugle Call Rag', 'It Don't Mean A Thing (If It Ain't Got That Swing)', 'Swing It Sister', 'Sleepy Head' and 'Sixty Seconds Together'.

In 1935, John Mills died suddenly and the brothers' father, John Snr., took over as bass singer, and ex-bandleader Bernard Addison joined the group on guitar. During the late 30s, the Mills Brothers toured the USA and abroad, appearing in two UK Royal Command Performances. Their popularity peaked in 1943 with the record 'Paper Doll', which sold over six million copies. They had consistent chart success throughout the 40s with titles on the Decca label such as 'You Always Hurt The One You Love', 'Til Then', 'I Wish', 'I Don't Know Enough About You', 'Across The Alley From The Alamo', 'I Love You So Much It Hurts', 'I've Got My Love To Keep Me Warm', 'Someday (You'll Want Me To Want You)' and 'Put Another Chair At The Table'.

By 1950, the instrumental impressions having generally been discarded, the brothers were accompanied by ex-Tommy Dorsey arranger Sy Oliver's orchestra on their hit 'Nevertheless (I'm In Love With You)' and again in 1952 on 'Be My Life's Companion'. That same year, 'The Glow Worm', gave them another blockbuster. This was a 1908 song from the German operetta Lysistrata, with a new lyric by Johnny Mercer. Other 50s favourites from the brothers included Sy Oliver's own composition 'Opus Number One', 'Say 'Si-Si'', 'Lazy River' and 'Smack Dab In The Middle'. In 1956, John Snr. retired, and the brothers continued as a trio. Their last hit on Decca was 'Queen Of The Senior Prom' in 1957. The switch to the Dot label gave them two US Top 30 entries, 'Get A Job' and their final chart success, 'Cab Driver', in 1968. After Harry Mills death in 1982, Herbert and Donald continued to perform their brand of highly polished, humorous entertainment with a substitute singer. However, when Herbert died seven years later, Donald, now walking with a cane, gained excellent reviews and favourable audience reaction when he played nightclubs with his son John, using mainly the old Mills Brothers catalogue, but with additional new material.

● ALBUMS: Barber Shop Ballads (Decca 1950)★★★★, Souvenir Album (Decca 1950)★★★, Wonderful Words (Decca 1951)★★★, Meet The Mills Brothers (Decca 1954)★★★★, Louis Armstrong And The Mills Brothers (Decca 1954)★★★★, Four Boys And A Guitar (Decca 1954)★★★, Singin' And Swingin' (Decca 1956)★★★, Memory Lane (Decca 1956)★★★★, One Dozen Roses (Decca 1957)★★★, The Mills Brothers In Hi-Fi (Decca 1958)★★★★, Glow With The Mills Brothers (Decca 1959)★★★, Barbershop Harmony (Decca 1959)★★★, Harmonizing With The Mills Brothers (Decca 1959)★★★, Mmmm, The Mills Brothers (Dot 1958)★★★, Great Barbershop Hits (Dot 1959)★★★, Merry Christmas (Dot 1959)★★★, The Mills Brothers Sing (Dot 1960)★★★, Yellow Bird (1961)★★★, San Antonio Rose (London 1961)★★★, Great Hawaiian Hits (1961)★★, The Beer Barrel Polka And Other Hits (London 1962)★★, The End Of The World (London 1963)★★, Gems By The Mills Brothers (1964)★★, Hymns We Love (1964)★★, Say Si Si, And Other Great Latin Hits (1964)★★, The Mills Brothers Sing For You (1964)★★★, These Are The Mills Brothers (1966)★★★, That Country Feelin' (1966)★★, The Mills Brothers Live (1967)★★, Fortuosity (Dot 1968)★★★, with Count Basie The Board Of Directors (Dot 1968)★★★, My Shy Violet (Dot 1968)★★★, Dream (Dot 1969)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Mills Brothers Greatest Hits (Dot 1958)★★★, Ten Years Of Hits 1954-1964 (1965)★★★, Greatest Hits (MCA 1987)★★, The Very Best Of The Mills Brothers (Half Moon 1998)★★★, in addition, there are a great many compilations available.

● FILMS: The Big Beat (1957).

Mills Sisters

From Thursday Island in the Torres Straits (between Australia and Papua New Guinea), the Mills Sisters comprise Rita, Ina and Cessa, all born on the island in the 20s. Using ukulele and guitar, with singing in pidgin English, Creole and the Irian Jaya tongue, they have been singing there all their lives. They began to harmonise while attending convent school, and church harmonies, alongside indigenous music, still provide the central platform for their songs. They have been the full-time musical attraction at Thursday Island's Grand Hotel since the early 60s, only beginning to tour internationally in the late 80s. Rather than writing original material, they are more interested in keeping alive island traditions, which are combined with other forms of imported popular song, notably gospel and blues (they also include a version of 'Under The Boardwalk' in their repertoire).

Producing their own records with the assistance of Brett Tyrell, their producer and manager, in the 90s they have visited Australia, China, France and England (appearing at the Indigenous Peoples Festival at London's Albert Hall). Their records are released via the New Market label operating from Melbourne, Australia.

Mills, Frank

b. 1943, Toronto, Ontario, Canada. Mills is best remembered for his 1979 best seller 'Music Box Dancer', a Top 5 hit in the USA. He studied music in Montreal, joining a group called the Bells who recorded some of his compositions. In 1972, he left for a solo career and his first single, 'Love Me, Love Me, Love', on Sunflower Records, made the US charts, reaching number 46. He also had hits in Canada, but by 1974, he was without a record contract. His easy-listening sound had lost favour with the majority of the record-buying public. He recorded an a self-financed album during the mid-70s, which included his composition 'Music Box Dancer'. It was noticed in 1979 by a Polydor Records executive, released as a single, and ascended to number 3; the album was also reissued and reached number 21. One further single and album charted for Mills in 1979 but, by the turn of the decade, he was back to performing locally in Canada. He released another album, Transitions, in 1987, on Capitol Records.

● ALBUMS: Music Box Dancer (Polydor 1979)★★★★, Transitions (Capitol 1987)★★★.

Mills, Garry

b. 13 October 1941, West Wickham, Kent, England. Mills was the nephew of jazz band leader Nat Gonella. Like many other UK pop singers of the late 50s, he started at London's 2 Is coffee bar and this led to his signing with Dick Rowe at Top Rank. He covered major US hits such as 'Running Bear', 'Teen Angel', 'Hey, Baby', 'Seven Little Girls' and 'Footsteps' before charting with the b-side of the last single. The song 'Look For A Star' had been written for the Norman Wisdom film Follow A Star but was actually used in the Hammer movie Circus Of Horrors. In America, Gary's (he dropped one 'r' for the USA) original soundtrack version was joined on the charts by three local cover versions, and, although he made the Top 40 in 1960, the biggest hit was by his near namesake Garry Miles (aka Buzz Cason). The record was not only Mills' biggest success, it was also the first hit for composer Mark Anthony, better known as Tony Hatch. Mills, who was backed on the road by the Flee-Rekkers, had two smaller UK hits with the follow-up 'Top Teen Baby' and 'I'll Step Down' on Decca in 1961, and also appeared in the long-forgotten films London Nights and Treasure Island W.C.2.

Mills, Gordon

b. 1935, Madras, India, d. 29 July 1986. The son of a Welsh army sergeant, Mills was brought up in Ton-y-Pandy, Wales. After leaving school, he entered national service, then worked as a bus conductor. His proficiency on the harmonica took him to London's Central Hall for the grandly-titled British Harmonica Championships. From there, he went on to Luxembourg to represent the UK at international level. Upon his return home, he joined the Morton Fraser Harmonica Gang and toured the world. In 1959, he broke away from the Gang with two junior members to form the Viscounts, one of the perennial support vocal groups of the early 60s. Mills was ambitious to succeed in different areas of the music business, and in 1963, made the brave decision to quit the group and pursue a career as a songwriter. He enjoyed several UK hits, including Johnny Kidd And The Pirates' 'I'll Never Get Over You' and 'Hungry For Love', plus Cliff Richard's 'The Lonely One'. Mills' life changed again during a homecoming visit to Wales in 1964. One evening he was invited to see the group Tommy Scott And The Senators in concert, and was mightily impressed by the singer. As a result, Mills elected to become a manager and duly signed the vocalist whom he rechristened Tom Jones. Mills co-wrote his chart debut, 'It's Not Unusual', which reached number 1 in the UK in early 1965. Jones allowed his mentor to mastermind every aspect of his career. After several hits, both in the UK and USA, Mills decided to push Jones towards international stardom. Out went the sexy clothes and rabbit's foot that had launched his career, in favour of a more mature, tuxedoed image. Wisely, Mills retained the essential eroticism. During Christmas 1966, Jones topped the charts with 'Green, Green Grass Of Home', which sold in excess of one million copies in the UK alone, the first release on Decca ever to achieve this distinction. It would not be long before that feat was surpassed by another artist, also represented by Mills. Gerry Dorsey had been Mills' best man when he married fashion model Jo Waring, and he was chosen as the next star of the Welshman's hit stable. In one of his familiar rechristenings, Mills launched the singer as Engelbert Humperdinck. During 1967, the balladeer notched up two of the biggest- selling UK singles of the 60s, 'Release Me' and 'The Last Waltz'. By this time, millionaire status beckoned for Mills, and the operation was shifted to America. Both Jones and Humperdinck subsequently enjoyed massive success on the Las Vegas casino circuit, and indulged in a much-publicized hedonistic lifestyle. Back in the UK, Mills formed a record company/management empire MAM. Another major star, Gilbert O'Sullivan, emerged from this venture. He enjoyed many international hits, including one written in honour of Mills' daughter, Clair. During the 70s, Mills' operation ran smoothly, but slowly, complacency set in. Humperdinck left his manager, followed by O'Sullivan, who subsequently won substantial high court damages against his former employer. Following the case, Mills took stock of his empire and sold MAM to Chrysalis. His marriage was also over. Even the formidable zoo of animals he had accumulated over the years, including the largest collection of orangutans in the world, were donated to San Diego Zoo. The first gorilla born there in 20 years was named 'Gordon'. After all the recent changes, all that remained was the great partnership of Jones and Mills which had survived since the mid-60s. The pair entered a recording studio in the early summer of 1986, intent on re-establishing Jones as a chart act. During the session Gordon complained of a stomach upset. This was subsequently diagnosed as cancer. The manager was visited by his protege at the Cedars Sinai Hospital and demanded to know his chances of survival. '50-50', Jones said. Ever the gambler, Mills retorted: 'That's not bad odds'. The manager subsequently lapsed into unconsciousness and Jones broke down, crying : 'What am I going to do now?' On 29 July 1986, Mills the multi-faceted producer, writer, singer, musician, manager and entrepreneur, passed away. His body was later flown to England and he was buried at St. Peter's Church, Hersham.

● ALBUMS: Do It Yourself (1965)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Starmakers & Svengalis: The History Of British Pop Management, Johnny Rogan.

Mills, Irving

b. 16 January 1884, New York City, New York, USA, d. 21 April 1985. After singing with dancebands in the early years of this century, Mills became very successful in the music publishing business in the 20s. Later in the decade, he entered the field of personal management, gathering under his wing some of the finest black musicians of the day, notably Duke Ellington, Cab Calloway and Jimmie Lunceford, all of whom were featured at the Cotton Club, an establishment with which Mills had strong links. Most of the artists Mills represented were tied to him by contracts with clauses so binding as to suggest a degree of unscrupulousness. His eye for business matters led to Mills forming record companies and organizing numerous record dates, many of which brought together some of the best jazz players of the day. This business sense also led Mills into the dubious practice of appending his name to various ventures, certain instances of which appear to be rather less than deserved. In some cases, his motive might have been little more than a desire to see his name in lights - for example, when he attached his name to another band he managed, the Mills Blue Rhythm Band, or to a pick-up group, Irving Mills And His Hotsy Totsy Gang (which was actually led by Benny Goodman). Much more questionable is the fact that his name appears as co-composer on most of Duke Ellington's compositions of the late 20s and 30s, accreditations which can hardly be taken seriously. When Ellington finally split with Mills, the cause was a disagreement over financial matters. Although Mills continued his business activities into the 60s, his connections with the leading names of jazz were much reduced. For all the criticism which must be levelled at the manner in which Mills exploited the artists under contract to him, it should perhaps be acknowledged that he worked hard to ensure they achieved success - even if his motives in these endeavours were somewhat less than selfless.

Mills, Jeff

Hugely respected US techno DJ who relocated from his native Detroit (where he set up the Underground Resistance empire with 'Mad' Mike Banks) to the New York region. After the split he formed Axis, licensing the Tranquilizer EP to Network. Other releases on Axis include his 1994 single 'Cycle 30'. Robert Hood, who worked on several of Mills' productions, recorded his second EP, Minimal Nation, for Axis that year too. Live At The Liquid Room - Tokyo sounded more like a heavy metal excursion than techno and the (dubious) live audience adds little to an otherwise excellent record.

● ALBUMS: Live At The Liquid Room - Tokyo (React 1996)★★★.

Mills, Mrs.

Gladys Mills was a popular 50s performer when pianists of the calibre of Winifred Atwell were in vogue. The British wartime spirit of gathering around the 'ol' joanna' to sing songs was a bonding and uplifting tradition. The partygoers of the wartime generation continued the tradition into the 50s and 60s, and judging by the continuing release of albums such as this, into the 70s and 80s. Great for background music at parties, but as concentrated listening, there can be few worse trials of torture. Mills took all the popular tunes of old and ran them together in tinkly piano medleys. Never a massive success chart-wise, her albums sold reasonably well in the UK, and she made countless television appearances, including several on the Wheeltappers And Shunters Social Club and the Billy Cotton Band Show. She died on 25 February 1978.

● ALBUMS: Come To My Party (1966)★★★, Mrs Mills' Party Pieces (1968)★★★, Let's Have Another Party (1969)★★★, I'm Mighty Glad (1971)★★★, All-Time Party Dances (1978)★★★, Piano Party Time (1984)★★★, An Hour Of Mrs Mills (1987)★★★.

Mills, Stephanie

b. 1959, Brooklyn, New York, USA. Mills found fame when aged just nine, winning an influential talent show at Harlem's famous Apollo Theatre for six weeks running. Soon afterwards, she appeared on Broadway in the play Maggie Flynn. She toured with the Isley Brothers, and in 1973, recorded her debut, Movin' In The Right Direction, for the Paramount label. Her debut single - 'I Knew It Was Love' - was issued in 1974. Already an established performer, Mills was still in her teens when, in 1975, she was offered the part of Dorothy in the stage show The Wiz - the all-black reworking of The Wizard Of Oz. It was a role she retained for several years, and she had hoped to continue it in the film version, until Diana Ross usurped her position. During her run in the show, Mills was recommended to Motown's Berry Gordy by Jermaine Jackson and recorded an album for the label. For The First Time was written and produced by Burt Bacharach and Hal David. Motown chose not to continue its association with Mills, and she signed to 20th Century for three albums, the second of which spawned the huge worldwide hit 'Never Knew Love Like This' in 1980. That same year, Mills married Jeffrey Daniels of Shalamar, though the marriage was short-lived. After working with Teddy Pendergrass in 1981, and charting with the duet 'Two Hearts', Mills signed a new contract with Casablanca, and in 1983, received her own daytime television show on NBC. She reclaimed her role as Dorothy in a revival of The Wiz and had a further hit with 'The Medicine Song' from I've Got The Cure. This album was produced by David 'Hawk' Wolinski, formerly with the group Rufus. In 1985 she moved to MCA, where she enjoyed further hits including 'Stand Back' and 'Comfort Of A Man'.

● ALBUMS: For The First Time (Motown 1976)★★, Whatcha Gonna Do With My Lovin'? (20th Century 1979)★★★, Sweet Sensation (20th Century 1980)★★★★, Stephanie (20th Century 1981)★★★★, Tantalizingly Hot (Casablanca 1982)★★★, Merciless (Casablanca 1983)★★★, I've Got The Cure (Casablanca 1984)★★, Stephanie Mills (MCA 1985)★★★, If I Were Your Woman (MCA 1987)★★★, Home (MCA 1989)★★, Something Real (1993)★★★.

Milltown Brothers

60s revivalist pop band formed in Colne, Lancashire, England, and featuring Matt Nelson (vocals), Simon Nelson (guitar), Barney James (keyboards), James Fraser (bass) and Nian Brindle (drums). Simon Nelson had the musical pedigree, performing in Blue Berlin while at university, then the Squire and The Word Association, who finally metamorphosed into the Milltown Brothers. They started out playing working men's clubs and then the college circuit, signing to EMI Records publishing long before they had a contract. Their debut release, 'Coming From The Mill', then 'Which Way Should I Jump', were housed on the indie label Big Round. They would subsequently move on to A&M Records where 'Which Way Should I Jump' was re-released following the relative success of 'Apple Green'. It made the UK Top 40. In 1993 they embarked on work on a follow-up album, although by this time they had become part of a large clutch of Byrds-influenced indie pop bands (Rain, Resque, etc.) trying to re-establish a profile that had been much higher in 1991. The trouble was exacerbated by difficulties with their label, stated manager Andrew Proudfoot: 'The band came up with new material, but it was darker than A&M wanted.' The much-delayed second offering failed to sell, and the band broke up soon afterwards.

● ALBUMS: Slinky (A&M 1991)★★★, Value (A&M 1993)★★★.

Milsap, Ronnie

b. Ronnie Lee Millsaps, 16 January 1943, Robbinsville, North Carolina, USA. Milsap's mother had already experienced a stillbirth and the prospect of raising a blind child made her mentally unstable. Milsap's father took him to live with his grandparents and divorced his mother. What little vision young Ronnie had was lost after receiving a vicious punch from a schoolmaster; both his eyes have now been removed. He studied piano, violin and guitar at the State School for the Blind in Raleigh, and although he had the ability to study law, he chose instead to be a professional musician. After some workouts with J.J. Cale and a 1963 single, 'Total Disaster', for the small Princess label, he toured Playboy clubs with his own band from 1965. Among his recordings for Scepter were early compositions by Ashford And Simpson, including the memorable 'Let's Go Get Stoned', relegated to a b-side. A few months later it was a million-selling single for another blind pianist, Ray Charles. Following a residency at TJ's club in Memphis, Milsap performed at the 1969 New Year's Eve party for Elvis Presley. Presley invited him to sing harmony on his sessions for 'Don't Cry Daddy' and 'Kentucky Rain', ironically the only time he has been part of a UK chart hit. After several recordings with smaller labels, Milsap made Ronnie Milsap for Warner Brothers Records, with top soul and country musicians. He worked throughout 1972 at Roger Miller's King Of The Road club in Nashville, and then signed with RCA Records. Where The Heart Is was a tuneful, country collection including the US country hits 'I Hate You' and 'The Girl Who Waits On Tables'. 'Pure Love' is an uplifting country great, while Don Gibson's 'I'd Be A Legend In My Time' was even more successful. In 1975, Milsap came to the UK as Glen Campbell's opening act, and the strength of his concert performances can be gauged from RCA's In Concert double album, hosted by Charley Pride, in which he duets with Dolly Parton on 'Rollin' In My Sweet Baby's Arms' and tackles a wild rock 'n' roll medley. His live album from the Grand Old Opry shows a great sense of humour - 'You don't think I'm gonna fall off this stage, do you? I got 20 more feet before the edge. That's what the band told me.' He had a crossover hit - number 16 on the US pop charts - with Hal David's 'It Was Almost Like A Song'. Milsap bought a studio from Roy Orbison, GroundStar, and continued to record prolifically. In 1979, RCA sent an unmarked, pre-release single to disc jockeys, inviting them to guess the performer. The funky seven-minute disco workout of 'Hi-Heel Sneakers' was by Milsap, but, more often than not, he was moving towards the Barry Manilow market. Milsap also helped with the country music score for Clint Eastwood's film Bronco Billy, and he recorded a flamboyant tribute album to Jim Reeves, Out Where The Bright Lights Are Glowing. A revival of Chuck Jackson's 'Any Day Now (My Wild Beautiful Bird)' reached number 14 on the US pop charts and also became Billboard's Adult Contemporary Song Of The Year. His Lost In The Fifties Tonight album had doo-wop touches, but the album should have remained completely in that mould. Milsap also recorded a duet with Kenny Rogers, 'Make No Mistake, She's Mine'. He moved away from synthesizers and sounded more country than ever on 'Stranger Things Have Happened'. Enjoying his 35th US country number 1 with a Hank Cochran song, 'Don't You Ever Get Tired (Of Hurtin' Me)', Milsap remained a formidable force in US country music, only Conway Twitty and Merle Haggard having had more chart-toppers. It showed remarkable consistency by an artist with little traditional country to his name. His last number 1 was 'A Woman In Love' in 1989, after which his commercial fortunes finally began to decline. He left RCA in 1992 and signed to Liberty Records, but has been unable to break back into the charts.

● ALBUMS: Ronnie Milsap (Warners 1971)★★★, Where The Heart Is (RCA 1973)★★★, Pure Love (RCA 1974)★★★, A Legend In My Time (RCA 1975)★★★, Night Things (RCA 1975)★★★, A Rose By Any Other Name (RCA 1975)★★★, 20-20 Vision (RCA 1976)★★★, Mr. Mailman (RCA 1976)★★★, Ronnie Milsap Live (RCA 1976)★★★, Kentucky Woman (RCA 1976)★★★, It Was Almost Like A Song (RCA 1977)★★★, Only One Love In My Life (RCA 1978)★★★, Images (RCA 1979)★★★, Milsap Magic (RCA 1980)★★★, There's No Gettin' Over Me (RCA 1980)★★★★, Out Where The Bright Lights Are Glowing (RCA 1981)★★★, Inside (RCA 1982)★★★, Keyed Up (RCA 1983)★★★★, One More Try For Love (RCA 1984)★★★, Lost In The Fifties Tonight (RCA 1986)★★★, Christmas With Ronnie Milsap (RCA 1986)★★, Heart And Soul (RCA 1987)★★, Stranger Things Have Happened (RCA 1989)★★★, Back To The Grindstone (RCA 1991)★★★, True Believer (Liberty 1993)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (RCA 1980)★★★★, Greatest Hits Vol. 2 (RCA 1985)★★★, Greatest Hits Vol. 3 (RCA 1991)★★★, The Essential Ronnie Milsap (RCA 1995)★★★, Sings His Best Hits For Capitol Records (Capitol 1996)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Almost Like A Song, Ronnie Milsap with Tom Carter.

Milton, Roy

b. 31 July 1907, Wynnewood, Oklahoma, USA, d. 18 September 1983, Los Angeles, California, USA. Growing up on his Chickasaw grandmother's reservation, Milton encountered blues music when his family moved to Tulsa. In the late 20s, he was a vocalist with the Ernie Fields Orchestra; while on tour in Texas, he replaced the band's drummer after the latter was arrested. He left the Fields band in 1933 and moved to Los Angeles. After a couple of years he formed Roy Milton And The Solid Senders with pianist Camille Howard, Buddy Floyd and Hosea Sapp. In December 1945 they recorded 'R.M. Blues', which became an immediate hit, establishing both Roy Milton and Specialty Records and spearheading the wave of small R&B units that tolled the death knell of the big bands. Milton remained with Specialty for 10 years, recording ballads and pop tunes alongside more popular blues and boogie material such as 'Milton's Boogie', 'Hop, Skip And Jump', 'T-Town Twist' and 'Best Wishes'. After Specialty, he recorded for Dootone, King and Warwick, but by the end of the 60s his style of music had become outdated. He appeared with Johnny Otis at the 1970 Monterey Jazz Festival and resumed a solo career that also brought him to Europe. He fell ill in 1982 and was confined to his home until his death a year later.

● COMPILATIONS: Big Fat Mama (Jukebox Lil 1985)★★★, Grandfather Of R&B (Jukebox Lil 1987)★★★, Roy Milton And His Solid Senders (Specialty/Ace 1990)★★★, Groovy Blues (Specialty/Ace 1992)★★★, Blowin' With Roy (Specialty/Ace 1994)★★★.

Mimms, Garnet, And The Enchanters

b. Garrett Mimms, 26 November 1933, Ashland, West Virginia, USA. A former member of Philadelphia-based gospel groups the Evening Stars and the Norfolk Four, Mimms formed a secular quintet, the Gainors, in 1958. The line-up included future soul star Howard Tate, as well as Sam Bell, Willie Combo and John Jefferson. Over the next three years, the Gainors made several singles for Cameo Records, Mercury Records and Tally-Ho which, although unsuccessful, betrayed a contemporary soul feel. The group subsequently evolved into Garnet Mimms And The Enchanters, where the singer and Sam Bell were joined by Charles Boyer and Zola Pearnell. Signed to United Artists in 1963, they came under the tutelage of writer/producer Jerry Ragovoy. His inspired work helped create some of urban R&B's finest moments. The impassioned 'Cry Baby' was an immediate US hit, while 'Baby Don't You Weep' and 'For Your Precious Love' consolidated their arrival. The group split in 1964, when Mimms embarked on a solo career. Although the Enchanters found a new vocalist and continued to record, they were overshadowed by their former leader. Mimms' subsequent releases, 'Look Away', 'It Was Easier To Hurt Her' and 'I'll Take Good Care Of You', were artistic triumphs, pitting the singer's church roots against Ragovoy's sophisticated backdrop. Such excellent records were not always well received, and in 1967, Mimms was demoted to United Artists' subsidiary Veep. 'My Baby' and 'Roll With The Punches' followed, but the singer's tenuous position was confirmed when the latter was only released in Britain. Ragovoy then took Mimms to Verve Records (where he was also producing Howard Tate), but the four singles that appeared, although good, found little favour. It was not until 1977 that the singer returned to the chart. Credited to Garnet Mimms And The Truckin' Company, 'What It Is' was a minor R&B hit and even clipped the UK chart at number 44. Mimms is now a born-again Christian and has not recorded for many years.

● ALBUMS: with the Enchanters Cry Baby And 11 Other Hits (United Artists 1963)★★★, As Long As I Have You (United Artists 1964)★★★, I'll Take Good Care Of You (United Artists 1966)★★, Garnet Mimms Live (United Artists 1967)★★, Garnet Mimms Has It All (Arista 1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Garnet Mimms And Maurice Monk (United Artists 1963)★★★, Sensational New Star (United Artists 1963)★★★, Warm And Soulful (United Artists 1966)★★★, Roll With The Punches (Charly 1986)★★★, Cry Baby (1991)★★★, Garnet Mimms And The Enchanters (1991)★★★, The Best Of... Cry Baby (1993)★★★.

Minami, Haruo

b. Bunji Kitazume, 1923, Tsukayama, Niigata, Japan. In 1939, in his mid-teens, Kitazume entered a school for rôkyoku, a popular art of narrative chant, and renamed himself Fumiwaka Nanjô before converting to the style of kayôkyoku (formerly the most common and typically Japanese form of popular song) and performing as Haruo Minami in 1957, when his three debut singles were released. The first couple, 'Chanchiki Okesa' (okesa is a kind of folk dance and chanchiki is an onomatopoeic word) and 'Funakatasan Yo' ('Halloa, Boatman') won Minami significant success and were followed by 'Yuki No Wataridori' ('A Wanderer In Snow') in the same year and 'Otone Mujô' ('Merciless Otone') in 1959, making him known as a singer of historical songs. Minami was hailed as a 'national singer' when his single, 'Tokyo Gorin Ondo' (Tokyo Olympic Dance), became a million-seller in 1964, the year of the Olympic Games in Tokyo for which the song was commissioned. His sinewy vocals and gaudy kimono-costumes, both of which are reminiscent of his rôkyoku background, have long been familiar to Japanese television audiences.

● COMPILATIONS: Daichûshingura (1987)★★★, Original Bests (1988)★★★, Best And Best (1989)★★★★, Zenkyokushû (Complete Works) (1989)★★★, Meien: Chôhen Kayô-rôkyoku (Mastery Performance: Longer Pieces Of Kayô-rôkyoku) (1990)★★★★.

Mince, Johnny

b. 8 July 1912, Chicago Heights, Illinois, USA, d. 23 December 1994. A highly accomplished clarinettist, Mince's early career saw him playing with several of the most sophisticated bands of the early swing era. At the age of 17, he was with Joe Haymes's excellent danceband, and during the 30s, Mince moved on to Ray Noble, Bob Crosby and Tommy Dorsey. During the spell with Noble, Mince played an important part in helping to establish the 'sound' of Glenn Miller's arrangements, a sound which Miller later developed with his own band. After military service, Mince was mostly active in studio work, but he returned occasionally to play jazz dates in clubs and on record. In later years, Mince became a familiar and popular figure at international jazz festivals, touring extensively with a variety of musicians, such as the Kings Of Jazz, and with the bands of Dixieland veterans led by Yank Lawson and Bob Haggart and by British trumpeter Keith Smith. On all such forays, Mince attracted the favourable attention of a new generation of fans through his superb technique and distinctive style.

● ALBUMS: Summer Of '79 (1979)★★★, The Master Comes Home i (1980)★★★, I Can't Give You Anything But Love (1982)★★★★, with others Swingin' The Forties With The Great Eight (1983)★★★, The Master Comes Home ii (1983)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Tommy Dorsey The Sentimental Gentleman (1941-42)★★★★.

Mindbenders

Originally a backing group for Wayne Fontana, the Mindbenders comprised Eric Stewart (b. 20 January 1945; guitar), Bob Lang (10 January 1946; bass) and Ric Rothwell (b. 11 March 1944; drums). In October 1965, they split with their leader and early the following year enjoyed a transatlantic number 2 hit with the Carole Bayer Sager/Toni Wine composition, 'Groovy Kind Of Love'. The excellent follow-up, 'Can't Live With You, Can't Live Without You', failed to chart, while its successor 'Ashes To Ashes' was only a minor hit. A cameo appearance in the film To Sir With Love maintained the group's profile and they continued to record material by name writers such as Rod Argent and Robert Knight, but to no avail. A brave stab with an average cover of the Box Tops' 'The Letter' scraped into the Top 50, but shortly after the release of 'Uncle Joe

The Ice Cream Man' in March 1968, the group dissolved. Eric Stewart and latter-day Mindbender Graham Gouldman went on to form Hotlegs and 10cc, while Bob Lang reappeared in Racing Cars.

● ALBUMS: The Mindbenders (Fontana 1966)★★★, With Woman In Mind (Fontana 1967)★★★.

Mindfunk

This intense American thrash-funk quintet was formed in 1989 by vocalist Patrick R. Dubar and rhythm guitarist Jason Coppola. Adding John Monte (ex-Method Of Destruction; bass), Reed St. Mark (ex-Celtic Frost; drums) and Louis J. Svitek (ex-MOD; guitar), they signed to Epic and debuted with an aggressive and confident self-titled album the same year. Slayer, Red Hot Chili Peppers and Anthrax were obvious reference points, as were the hardcore origins of several of their membership. However, they were dropped by Epic shortly afterwards (a fact bitterly recalled in their second album's title), and Jason Everman (ex-Nirvana; Soundgarden) and Shawn Johnson joined in place of Coppola and St. Mark, respectively.

● ALBUMS: Mindfunk (Epic 1991)★★★, Dropped (Megaforce 1993)★★★.

Mindset

Since their formation in 1994, Virginia Beach, USA-based Mindset have strived for a hard-hitting sound without compromising their direction and attitude. Don Campbell (b. 25 July 1963; guitar) left his previous band and recruited long-time friend John O'Neil (b. 29 May 1964; bass) to start the new group. They then found Kenny Windley (b. 30 May 1976; drums) and Roddy Lane (b. 3 August 1967; vocals) to complete the unit. From their diverse backgrounds the various members brought a range of influences to their sound, ranging from Tool and Soundgarden to Deep Purple. The result was a hard-driving, melodic sound, tempered by layered and passionate vocals. With the line-up in place, four weeks were spent writing and arranging material for their debut EP, which was recorded under the guidance of Stacy Heydon. The bass-heavy crunch and hardcore-influenced stance meant that the band fell neatly into the burgeoning category of extreme metal. The EP was impressive enough to secure the band a slot on the 1995 Ticketmaster Music Showcase in Virginia Beach, and they subsequently attracted record label interest. They signed to Noise International Records and eventually emerged from a 15-day recording session with a set consisting of raging hardcore and industrial-tinged heavy metal for their self-titled debut. Drawing inspiration from personal experience, the bulk of the lyrics dealt with relationships, but the band also proved to have a sense of irony and social awareness with tracks such as the memorably titled 'If The Devil Wore Adidas', a sarcastic dig at the US propensity for following the latest fads. The inevitable comparisons with Korn followed, but Mindset proved to be far more than mere copyists throughout the inevitable bout of touring that followed.

● ALBUMS: Mindset (Noise International 1996)★★★★.

Mindstorm

Mindstorm is the rock vision of vocalist Travis Mitchell. The group is in essence the Canadian equivalent of Kingdom Come or Katmandu. Employing Al Rodgers (guitar), Bruce Moffet (drums), Russ Boswell (bass) and Gary Moffet (keyboards), the songs are immaculately constructed and delivered with aplomb. However, their credibility and creativity is compromised through the overwhelming sense of déja vu their recordings invoke. With monstrously aching riffs and thunderous drumming, Mindstorm careers along a well-worn rock 'n' roll path, with only the occasional musical detour. These include Eastern influences, simple acoustic bridges and brooding power ballads.

● ALBUMS: Mindstorm (Provogue 1987)★★, Back To Reality (Provogue 1991)★★.

Mineo, Sal

b. Salvatore Mineo, 10 January 1939, New York City, New York, USA, d. 12 February 1976. After a difficult childhood, Mineo studied dancing and made his Broadway debut in The Rose Tattoo. He followed this with an appearance in The King And I in 1952. In the mid-50s he went to Hollywood and began making films, usually appearing as a troubled teenager. Among his best-known films were Rebel Without A Cause (1955), for which he was nominated for an Oscar as Best Supporting Actor, Somebody Up There Likes Me and Giant (both 1956), and Exodus (1960), another unsuccessful Oscar nomination. He also played the title role in The Gene Krupa Story (1959). In the late 50s, Mineo made a number of records, including 'Love Affair', 'Start Moving (In My Direction)', 'Lasting Love' and 'You Shouldn't Do That'. He continued making films during the 60s and also returned to stage work. He directed and starred in Fortune And Men's Eyes, a play that reflected Mineo's own homosexuality. He was returning home from the theatre when he was stabbed to death in a Hollywood street.

● ALBUMS: Sal (Epic 1958)★★.

Ming - David Murray Octet

Albert Ayler-influenced tenor saxophonist and bass clarinettist David Murray has earned a reputation for releasing more albums in a year than other important jazz musicians manage to issue in a decade. However, Ming, recorded in 1980, holds a special place in the Murray canon, for the huge enthusiasm with which it was received by fans and critics alike, and the attention it brought to Murray's superb compositional skills. Its star cast includes saxophonist Henry Threadgill, cornettist Butch Morris and trombonist George Lewis, blasting through Murray's intricate but daring arrangements and playing some intense, memorable solos.

Check out the beautiful title track, and the chaotic 'Dewey's Circle'.

- Tracks: Fast Life; The Hill; Ming; Jasvan; Dewey's Circle.
- First released 1981
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mingus

Like its subject, this documentary made in 1968 is unflinching and at times uncomfortably honest. Mingus was being evicted from his home during the making of the film and these events are depicted as is the artist at work composing, rehearsing and performing. Amongst other musicians involved are Charles McPherson and Dannie Richmond.

Mingus Ah Um - Charles Mingus

One of the five essential Charles Mingus albums to own, and even if you are not a jazz fan this is still worthy of being in any comprehensive collection. The opening track, 'Better Git It In Your Soul', rushes along at a furious pace and then there is a wonderful change of tempo into an a cappella and handclap pause. It rolls on, of course, but the nature of this track reflects the nature of Mingus who never failed to experiment (even though sometimes he failed). The personnel comprises John Handy III, Shafi Hadi and Booker Ervin (saxophones), Horace Parlan Jr (piano), Willie Dennis and James Knepper (trombones) and Charles Richmond (drums). Mingus whoops, shouts and holds it all together and then turns the pace majestically on numbers such as 'Goodbye Pork Pie Hat'.

- Tracks: Better Git It In Your Soul; Goodbye Pork Pie Hat; Boogie Stop Shuffle; Self-Portrait In Three Colours; Open Letter To Duke; Bird Calls; Fables Of Faubus; Pussy Cat Dues; Jelly Roll
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mingus Big Band

Formed to represent the music of Charles Mingus to the world this conglomerate was formed by Mingus' widow Sue. The line up in the mid-90s included Randy Brecker, Frank Lacy, Ku-Umba, Kenny Drew Jr., Ryan Kisor and John Stubblefield.

- ALBUMS: Gunslinger Birds (Dreyfus 1995)★★★, Que Viva Mingus! (Dreyfus 1998)★★★.

Mingus Mingus Mingus Mingus - Charles Mingus

While Charles Mingus is rightly revered by the jazz world, he is yet to receive the universal blessing of the rock audience in the way that Coltrane and Miles have. This album is perfect for a Mingus primer. It is fat, gorgeous, accessible and often breathtaking. Suddenly, the swinging orchestra will pause its riff completely and a few notes of Mingus's growling bass will sneak in. For once the sleeve-note is right: 'he jolts with the unexpected'. 'II B.S.' is a stunning opener and from then on the listener can settle into a comfortable half-hour. A brilliant record.

- Tracks: II B.S.; I X Love; Celia; Mood Indigo; Better Get Hit In Yo' Soul; Theme For Lester Young; Hora Decubitus.
- First released 1963
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mingus, Charles

b. 22 April 1922, Nogales, Arizona, USA, d. 5 January 1979, Cuernavaca, Mexico. Mingus was never allowed the luxury of the feeling of belonging. Reactions to his mixed ancestry (he had British-born, Chinese, Swedish and African American grandparents) produced strong feelings of anger and confirmed his sense of persecution. However, this alienation, coupled with his own deep sensitivity and tendency to dramatize his experiences, provided substantial fuel for an artistic career of heroic turmoil and brilliance. Formative musical experiences included both the strictures of European classical music and the uninhibited outpourings of the congregation of the local Holiness Church, which he attended with his stepmother. The latter included all manner of bluesy vocal techniques, moaning, audience-preacher responses, wild vibrato and melismatic improvisation, along with the accompaniment of cymbals and trombones - all of it melding into an early gospel precursor of big band that heavily influenced Mingus' mature compositional and performance style. Other influences were hearing Duke Ellington's band, and recordings of Richard Strauss' tone poems and works by Debussy, Ravel, Bach and Beethoven. Thwarted in his early attempts to learn trombone, Mingus switched from cello to double bass at high school.

He studied composition with Lloyd Reese and was encouraged by Red Callender to study bass with Herman Rheimschagen of the New York Philharmonic. He developed a virtuoso bass technique and began to think of the bass finger-board as similar to a piano keyboard. His first professional dates as a bassist included gigs with New Orleans players Kid Ory and Barney Bigard, and then stints with the Louis Armstrong Orchestra (1943-1945) and Lionel Hampton (1947), but it was with the Red Norvo Trio (1950) that he first gained national recognition for his virtuosity. Work with other great pioneers of his generation such as Charlie Parker, Miles Davis, Thelonious Monk, Bud Powell, Sonny Stitt, Stan Getz, Lee Konitz, Dizzy Gillespie, Quincy Jones and Teddy Charles continued throughout the 50s. He joined Duke Ellington's band briefly in 1953, but a more artistically profitable association with his hero occurred with the trio album Money Jungle, which they made with Max Roach in 1962. Mingus was a pioneer of black management and artist-led record labels, forming Debut in 1953, and the Charles Mingus label in 1964. His early compositions were varying in success, often due to the difficulty of developing and maintaining an ensemble to realize his complex ideas.

He contributed works to the Jazz Composers' Workshop from 1953 until the foundation of his own workshop ensemble in 1955. Here, he was able to make sparing use of notation, transmitting his intentions from verbal and musical instructions sketched at the piano or on the bass. Mingus' originality as composer first began to flourish under these circumstances, and with players such as Dannie Richmond, Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Jaki Byard, Jimmy Knepper and Booker Ervin he developed a number of highly evolved works. Crucial among his many innovations in jazz was the use of non-standard chorus structures, contrasting sections of quasi-'classical' composed material with passages of freeform and group improvisations, often of varying tempos and modes, in complex pieces knitted together by subtly evolving musical motifs. He developed a 'conversational' mode of interactive improvisation, and pioneered melodic bass playing. Such pieces as The Black Saint And The Sinner Lady (1963) show enormous vitality and a great depth of immersion in all jazz styles, from New Orleans and gospel to bebop and free jazz. Another multi-sectional piece, 'Meditations For A Pair Of Wire Cutters', from the album Portrait (1964), is one of many that evolved gradually under various titles. Sections from it can be heard on Mingus Plays Piano (1963), there called 'Myself When I Am Real'. It was renamed 'Praying With Eric' after the tragic death of Eric Dolphy, who made magnificent contributions to many Mingus compositions, but especially to this intensely moving piece.

In the mid-60s, financial and psychological problems began to take their toll, as poignantly recorded in Thomas Reichman's 1968 film Mingus. He toured extensively during this period, presenting a group of ensemble works. In 1971, Mingus was much encouraged by the receipt of a Guggenheim fellowship in composition, and the publication of his astonishing autobiography, Beneath The Underdog. The book opens with a session conducted by a psychiatrist, and the work reveals Mingus's self-insight, intelligence, sensitivity and tendency for self-dramatization. Touring continued until the gradual paralysis brought by the incurable disease Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis prevented him doing anything more than presiding over recordings. His piece 'Revelations' was performed in 1978 by the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Gunther Schuller, who also resurrected Epitaph in 1989. Also in 1978, Mingus was honoured at the White House by Jimmy Carter and an all-star jazz concert. News of his death, aged 56, in Mexico was marked by many tributes from artists of all fields. Posthumously, the ensemble Mingus Dynasty continued to perform his works.

Mingus summed up the preoccupations of his time in a way that transcended racial and cultural divisions, while simultaneously highlighting racial and social injustices. Introducing the first 1964 performance of Meditations, Mingus told the audience: 'This next composition was written when Eric Dolphy told me there was something similar to the concentration camps down South, [. . .] where they separated [. . .] the green from the red, or something like that; and the only difference between the electric barbed wire is that they don't have gas chambers and hot stoves to cook us in yet. So I wrote a piece called Meditations as to how to get some wire cutters before someone else gets some guns to us.' Off-mike, he can be heard saying to fellow musicians: 'They're gonna burn us; they'll try.' In the turmoil of his life and artistic achievements, and in his painful demise, Mingus became his own artistic creation. A desperate, passionate icon for the mid-20th century to which all can relate in some way, he articulated the emotional currents of his time in a way superior to that of almost any other contemporary jazz musician.

● ALBUMS: Red Norvo Jazz Trio (1951)★★★, with Spaulding Givens Strings And Keys (Decca 1951)★★★, The Red Norvo - Charles Mingus - Tal Farlow Trio (1951)★★★, Autobiography In Jazz (1953)★★★, Strings And Keys (Debut 1953)★★★★, with others Quintet Of The Year/Jazz At Massey Hall (1953)★★★, Jazz Composers Workshop (Savoy 1954)★★★★, Jazz Experiments (Jazztone 1954)★★★, Charles Mingus And Thad Jones (1955)★★★, Jazzical Moods, Volume 1 (Period 1955)★★★, Jazzical Moods Volume 2 (Period 1955)★★★, Jazz Composers Workshop No 2 (Savoy 1956)★★★, Mingus At The Bohemia (Debut 1955)★★★, Charlie Mingus (Savoy 1955)★★★, with Max Roach The Charles Mingus Quintet And Max Roach (Debut 1956)★★★, Pithecanthropus Erectus (Atlantic 1956)★★★★, The Clown aka Reincarnation Of A Lovebird (Atlantic 1957)★★★, with Gunther Schuller, George Russell Adventures In Sound (1957)★★★, Jazz Experiment (Jazztone 1957)★★★, Jazz Workshop Presents: Jimmy Knepper (1957)★★★, The Jazz Experiments Of Charles Mingus (Jazztone 1957)★★★, The Clown (Atlantic 1957)★★★, Mingus Three (Jubilee 1957)★★★, East Coasting (Bethlehem 1958)★★★, A Modern Jazz Symposium Of Music And Poetry (Bethlehem 1958)★★★, with Langston Hughes Weary Blues (1958)★★★, with Billie Holiday etc Easy To Remember (1958)★★★, East Coasting (Bethlehem 1958)★★★, Duke's Choice aka A Modern Jazz Symposium Of Music And Poetry (Bethlehem 1958)★★★, Wonderland (United Artists 1959)★★★, Jazz Portraits (United Artists 1959)★★★, Blues And Roots (Atlantic 1959)★★★★, Mingus Ah-Um (Columbia 1959)★★★★★, Nostalgia In Times Square (1959)★★★, Mingus Dynasty (Columbia 1960)★★★, Pre-Bird aka Mingus Revisited (Emarcy 1960)★★★, Mingus At Antibes (1960)★★★★, Charles Mingus Presents Charles Mingus! (Candid 1960)★★★★, Mingus (Candid 1960)★★★★, The Jazz Life (1960)★★★, Newport Rebels (1960)★★★, with Tubby Hayes All Night Long (1960)★★★★, Oh Yeah! (Atlantic 1961)★★★★, Pre Bird (Mercury 1961)★★★, Tonight At Noon (Atlantic 1961)★★★, Hooray For Charles Mingus (1962)★★★, J-For-Jazz Presents Charles Mingus (1962)★★★, with Duke Ellington, Max Roach Money Jungle (United Artists 1962)★★★★, Town Hall Concert (United Artists 1962)★★★, Chazz! (Fantasy 1962)★★★, The Black Saint And The Sinner Lady (Impulse 1963)★★★★★, Mingus

Mingus Mingus Mingus Mingus (Impulse 1963)★★★★,Tijuana Moods recorded 1957 (RCA 1964)★★★, Town Hall Concert (Portrait) (Original Jazz Classics 1964)★★★, Live in Oslo recorded 1964 (60s)★★★, Charles Mingus Sextet Live In Europe Volumes 1, 2 & 3 (1964)★★★, The Great Concert Of Charles Mingus (1964)★★★, Mingus In Europe Volumes 1 & 2 (1964)★★★, Charles Mingus In Amsterdam (1964)★★★, Mingus In Stuttgart Volumes 1 & 2 (1964)★★★, Right Now! Live At The Jazz Workshop (Fantasy 1964)★★★, Charles Mingus In Europe (Enja 1964)★★★, Mingus At Monterey (Prestige 1964)★★★, Music Written For Monterey 1965, But Not Heard (1965)★★★, My Favourite Quintet (1965)★★★, Statements (1970)★★★, Charles Mingus In Paris (DIW 1970)★★★, Pithy Canthropus Erectus aka Blue Bird (1970)★★★, Charles Mingus In Berlin (1970)★★★, Charles Mingus And The New Herd (1971)★★★, Let My Children Hear Music (1971)★★★, Charles Mingus And Friends In Concert (1972)★★★, Jazz Jamboree (1972)★★★, Charles Mingus Meets Cat Anderson (1972)★★★, Mingus Mingus (1973)★★★, Mingus At Carnegie Hall (1974)★★★, Cumbria And Jazz Fusion (Atlantic 1977)★★★,Three Or Four Shades Of Blue (1977)★★★, Lionel Hampton Presents: The Music Of Charles Mingus aka His Final Works (1977)★★★, Me Myself An Eye (1978)★★★, Something Like A Bird (1978)★★★, The Charles Mingus Memorial Album (1978)★★★, with Joni Mitchell Joni Mitchell - Mingus (Geffen 1979)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Mingus Connection recorded 1951-53 (1957)★★★, The Debut Recordings (1951-57)★★★★, Vital Savage Horizons (1952, 1961-62)★★★, The Atlantic Years (1956-1978)★★★★, Better Git It In Your Soul (1959)★★★★, The Complete Candid Recordings Of Charles Mingus (1960)★★★, Charles Mingus/Cecil Taylor: Rare Broadcast Performances (1962, 1966)★★★, The Impulse Years (1963)★★★★, Portrait (1964)★★★, Re-Evaluation: The Impulse Years recorded 1963-64 (1973)★★★, The Art Of Charles Mingus (1974)★★★, Passions Of A Man recorded 1956-61, 1973, 1977 (1979)★★★, Nostalgia In Times Square recorded 1959 (1979)★★★, Great Moments With Charles Mingus recorded 1963-64 (1981)★★★, Mingus, The Collection recorded 50s (1985)★★★★, Charles Mingus - New York Sketchbook recorded 50s (1986)★★★★, Charles Mingus - Shoes Of The Fisherman's Wife recorded 1959, 1971 (1988)★★★★, Abstractions recorded 1954, 1957 (1989)★★★, Charles Mingus - Mysterious Blues recorded 1960 (1989)★★★, Charles Mingus 1955-1957 (1990)★★★, Charles Mingus (1991)★★★, Charles Mingus - The Complete Debut Recordings recorded 50s, 12-CD box set (Debut 1991)★★★★, Thirteen Pictures: The Charles Mingus Anthology recorded 1956-77 (Rhino 1993)★★★★★, Meditations On Integration recorded 1964 (1992)★★★, Passions Of A Man - The Complete Atlantic Recordings 1956-1961 6-CD box set (Rhino/Atlantic 1998)★★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Charles Mingus Sextet 1964 (1994).

● FURTHER READING: Beneath The Underdog, Charles Mingus. Mingus: A Critical Biography, Brian Priestley. Revelations, Charles Mingus. Charles Mingus, Sein Leben, Seine Musik, Seine Schallplatten, Horst Weber. Mingus/Mingus, Janet Coleman.

Mini Allstars

Mini Allstars were a studio-based band of Haitian musicians brought together in New York in 1980 by the producer and owner of Mini Records, Fred Paul, to play the music of Nemours Jean-Baptiste, the pioneer of Haiti's 'compas' dance rhythm, who had his heyday in the 50s. Featuring vocalists Carlo Claudin and Willie Lacroix, plus accordionist Richard Durosseau, all veterans of Jean-Baptiste's original band, the Mini Allstars recorded two albums - Pure Gold (1980) and Compas Mas (1982) - starting a trend among Haitian musicians for nostalgic re-recordings of the songs of the 50s. Fanatiques Compas features selections from the group's two albums of joyous, big-band dance music.

● ALBUMS: Fanatiques Compas (Stern's/Earthworks 1997)★★★★.

Ministry

'The difference between Ministry and other bands is that we sold out before we even started.' Al Jourgenson (b. Havana, Cuba) began producing music under the Ministry name in the early 80s in Chicago, but was unhappy with the Euro-pop direction in which his record company pushed him for With Sympathy, later describing it as 'that first abortion of an album'. Ministry took on a more acceptable shape for Jourgenson after Twitch, with the addition to Jourgenson's guitar, vocals and keyboards of Paul Barker (b. Palo Alto, California, USA) on bass and keyboards, and drummer Bill Rieflin. The band evolved their own brand of guitar-based industrial metal, considering The Land Of Rape And Honey to be their true debut, and employed a variety of guest musicians for both live and studio work, with regular contributions from ex-Rigor Mortis guitarist Mike Scaccia and ex-Finitribe vocalist Chris Connelly. Despite Jourgenson's dislike of touring, Ministry developed a stunning live show, with a backdrop of disturbing visual images to accompany the intense musical barrage, and the sinister figure of Jourgenson taking centrestage behind a bone-encrusted microphone stand. In Case You Didn't Feel Like Showing Up (Live) displayed the metamorphosis of the songs as the band extended themselves in concert. At this stage, Jourgenson and Barker were working on numerous other studio projects in a variety of styles, including Lard with Jello Biafra, but Ministry remained one of two main acts. The other, the outrageous Revolting Cocks, served as a more blatantly humorous outlet for the pair's creative talents, in contrast to the dark anger and socio-political themes of Ministry. As alternative culture became more acceptable to the mainstream, Ministry achieved major success with Psalm 69 (subtitled The Way To Succeed And The Way To Suck Eggs), helped by the popularity on MTV of 'Jesus Built My Hotrod', featuring a guest vocal and lyric from Butthole Surfer Gibby Haynes. The band were a huge draw on the 1992 Lollapalooza tour, playing second on the bill, and their debut European tour later that year was also a resounding success. In 1994 Rieflin was replaced by former Didjits drummer Ray Washam. Jourgenson was arrested on a drugs charge in August 1995. Filth Pig contained, in true Ministry fashion, a distorted and raucous version of Bob Dylan's beautiful love song, 'Lay Lady Lay'.

● ALBUMS: With Sympathy aka Work For Love (Arista 1983)★★, Twitch (Sire 1986)★★★, The Land Of Rape And Honey (Sire 1988)★★★, The Mind Is A Terrible Thing To Taste (Sire 1989)★★★, In Case You Didn't Feel Like Showing Up (Live) mini-album (Sire 1990)★★★, Psalm 69 (Sire/Warners 1992)★★★, Filth Pig (Warners 1996)★★★.
Solo: Paul Barker as Lead Into Gold Age Of Reason (Wax Trax 1992)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Twelve Inch Singles 1981-1984 (Wax Trax 1984)★★★.

Ministry Of Sound

London club whose unique atmosphere has led to a series of highly successful releases. The first of these was a compilation mixed by Tony Humphries in August 1993. Heralded by promotions man Jason Hill as 'a natural progression', it was among the fastest-selling items in dance shops throughout the UK in 1993, selling over 35,000 copies. This first set compiled a series of club classics, such as Mother's 'All Funked Up', X-Press 2's 'London X-Press' and Gabrielle's 'Dreams', the latter a staple at the club long before it scaled the national charts. A second, similarly successful set, followed in 1994. This time there were remixes from Paul Oakenfold, who helmed a live touring version of the club through 1994. The club also rose to prominence by projecting their logo onto the Houses Of Parliament as part of their second birthday celebrations, despite police objections. The club launched its own dance magazine, Ministry, in December 1997.

● COMPILATIONS: various artists The Ministry - Volume1 (MOS 1993)★★★★, The Ministry - Volume 2 (MOS 1994)★★★.

Minit Records

Synonymous with both the New Orleans soul scene and the outstanding producer, writer and musician Allen Toussaint, Minit Records took its name from the original intention to supply disc jockeys with short (i.e., Minit) records that maximized the possibility of playing advertisements in-between. In fact, Toussaint was not present at the label's inception in 1959, when Joe Banashak and Larry McKinley formed the company. The first release was 'Bad Luck And Trouble', by Boogie Jake. However, Boogie's moniker drew resistance from radio stations, ensuring that its local popularity did not translate to national acclaim, despite Chess Records' licensing it for that purpose. Chess then reneged on its future options, although neither Boogie's follow-up (this time released under his real name, Matthew Jacobs) or a further single by Noland Pitts provided success. At this stage a twist in fortunes helped shape Minit's future. Regular A&R representative Harold Batiste temporarily left, leaving Banashak and McKinley to recruit Toussaint, who had already successfully auditioned as a musician. When Batiste failed to return, the post became Toussaint's on a permanent footing. Toussaint went on to define the Minit sound - writing much of the artistic repertoire, as well as arranging, producing and playing on the sessions. Minit's first hit, however, arrived with a rare artist's-own composition - Jessie Hill's 'Ooh Poo Pah Doo'. Reaching number 28 in the Billboard charts and number 3 in its R&B division, it was followed by a second, lesser hit, 'Whip It On Me'. Meanwhile, Toussaint had begun to shape the careers of Minit's roster. Ernie K-Doe was a veteran of the Blue Diamonds, and later recorded for Specialty and Ember Records as a solo artist. K-Doe broke through with his third release for the label, a Toussaint composition entitled 'Mother-In-Law'. This rose to number 1 in the main Billboard charts and gave New Orleans its first ever such success. Follow-ups included 'Te-Ta-Te-Ta-Ta' and 'I Cried My Last Tear'. The latter was a double a-side featuring another Toussaint composition, 'A Certain Girl', which was later covered by the Yardbirds. Benny Speelman, who had provided additional vocals on K-Doe's 'Mother-In-Law' hit, was also a fellow Minit intern. He found fame under his own name with the 1962 double a-side, 'Lipstick Traces (On A Cigarette)'/'Fortune Teller'. The first-named title was later revived by both the O'Jays and Ringo Starr. More enduringly, Aaron Neville also began his career at Minit, beginning with 1960's 'Over You'. One of many songs Toussaint composed in tandem with Allan Orange (who also recorded solo for the label), it was a precursor to the artist's major breakthrough six years later with 'Tell It Like It Is'. Another staple of the early catalogue was the subsequently popular Irma Thomas, while the Showmen achieved a 1961 hit for the label with 'It Will Stand'; leader General Johnson found subsequent success with Chairman Of The Board. However, by the time the Showmen's '30-21-46 (You)' had become another hit in 1963, Minit Records was in trouble. This coincided with Toussaint being drafted into the services, as well as the sale of Imperial Records (who distributed Minit) to Liberty Records. Minit was thus inactive until 1966, at which time Imperial revived the label, using it as a more generic soul outlet, effectively meaning that the subsidiary was now no longer dealing with exclusively New Orleans-based acts. The new roster included the Players, Jimmy Holiday, Jimmy McCracklin, Vernon Greene And The Medallions and the O'Jays, who moved over from Imperial. Ike And Tina Turner were also drafted from the parent label, and enjoyed their biggest success with Minit via the Beatles' cover version, 'Come Together'. Another important name, that of Bobby Womack, was also added to the discography in his guise as lead singer of the Valentinos, before staying with the label when he became a solo artist. Minit's death came in 1971, when Liberty merged with United Artists and all subsidiary labels surrendered their artist rosters to the new conglomeration. A beautifully designed package was issued in 1994 with a full history.

● COMPILATIONS: The Mint Records Story (EMI 1994)★★★★.

Mink DeVille

The foundation of this unit was guitarist and songwriter Willy DeVille (b. 27 August 1953, New York City, New York, USA). He arrived in London in 1971 to form a band but, unable to find the right musicians, performed as a solo artist before heading to San Francisco and assembling the embryonic Mink DeVille. The basic trio became Willy Deville (vocals, guitar, harmonica), Ruben Siguenza (bass) and Thomas R. Allen (drums). Allen had previously played with various blues musicians. They relocated to New York and recruited Louie X Erlanger on guitar. The band, by this time a wonderful live unit, recorded three tracks for the Live At CBGB's compilation and then in 1977 released their debut, which included the hit single 'Spanish Stroll'. The album, produced by Jack Nitzsche, also included a version of the Patti And The Emblems classic, 'Mixed Up Shook Up'. The second album Return To Magenta was publicized by releasing 'Soul Twist' on purple vinyl, but overall the album was an unhappy compromise between the group's original new wave sound and DeVille's more soulful ambitions. Like the debut, it included a Moon Martin cover version, 'Rolene'. For the third album, Le Chat Blue, in 1980, the band comprised Deville and Erlanger, plus Kenny Margolis (keyboards), Jerry Scheff (bass), Ron Tutt (drums) and Steve Douglas (saxophone). Although it featured co-writing credits by songwriter Doc Pomus (Joe Turner, Dion, Drifters), the album failed to spark. Savoir Faire collected the best of the three Capitol albums, after which the band moved to Atlantic Records. Unfortunately, Coup De Grâce also failed to signal a revival. Despite Nitzsche returning to produce, only the occasional song had Mink DeVille's previous edge. Things improved, however, with the release of Where Angels Fear To Tread which removed some of the over-produced clutter from their sound. Willy DeVille's new songs paid tribute to his soul heroes without affecting the band's new-found strength. Sportin' Life continued the improvement, although afterwards De Ville left to renew his solo career.

● ALBUMS: Mike DeVille (Capitol 1977)★★★, Return To Magenta (Capitol 1978)★★, Le Chat Bleu (Capitol 1980)★★★, Coup De Grâce (Atlantic 1981)★★, Where Angels Fear To Tread (Atlantic 1983)★★, Sportin' Life (Atlantic 1985)★★★, Cabretta (Razor 1987)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Savoir Faire (Capitol 1981)★★★.

Minnelli, Liza

b. Liza May Minnelli, 12 March 1946, Los Angeles, California, USA. An extremely vivacious and animated actress, singer and dancer, in films, concerts, musical shows and television. She was named Liza after the George and Ira Gershwin-Gus Kahn song- and May after the mother of her film-director father, Vincente Minnelli. Liza's mother was show-business legend Judy Garland. On the subject of her first name, Miss Minnelli is musically quite precise: 'It's Liza with 'zee', not Lisa with an 's'/'Cos Liza with a 'zee' goes 'zzz', not 'sss'. She spent a good deal of her childhood in Hollywood, where her playmates included Mia Farrow, although she also reputedly attended over 20 schools in the USA and Europe. At the age of two-and-a-half, she made her screen debut in the closing sequence of In The Good Old Summer Time, as the daughter of the musical film's stars, Garland and Van Johnson. When she was seven, she danced on the stage of the Palace Theatre, New York, while her mother sang 'Swanee'. In 1962, after initially showing no interest in a show-business career, Minnelli served as an apprentice in revivals of the musicals, Take Me Along and The Flower Drum Song, and later played Anne Frank in a stock production. By the following year she was accomplished enough to win a Promising Personality Award for her third lead performance in an Off-Broadway revival of the 1941 Ralph Blane/Hugh Martin Musical *Best Foot Forward, and later toured in road productions of Carnival, The Pajama Game, and The Fantasticks. She also made her first album, Liza! Liza! which sold over 500,000 copies shortly after it was released in 1964. In November of that year, Minnelli appeared with Judy Garland at the London Palladium. Comparatively unknown in the UK, she startled the audience with dynamic performances of songs such as 'The Travellin' Life' and 'The Gypsy In My Soul' - almost 'stealing' the show from the more experienced artist. Her Broadway debut in Flora, The Red Menace (1965), marked the beginning of a long association with songwriters John Kander and Fred Ebb, gained her a Tony Award, although the show closed after only 87 performances. In 1966 she made her New York cabaret debut at the Plaza Hotel to enthusiastic reviews, and in 1967 married Australian singer/songwriter, Peter Allen. Her film career started in 1968 with a supporting role in Albert Finney's first directorial effort, Charlie Bubbles, and in 1969, she was nominated for an Academy Award for her performance as Pookie Adams in the film of John Nichols' novel, The Sterile Cuckoo. She took time off from making her third film, Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon, to attend the funeral of her mother, who died in 1969. In the following year she and Peter Allen announced their separation.

In 1972, Liza Minnelli became a superstar. The film of Kander and Ebb's Broadway hit, Cabaret, won nine Oscars, including Best Film, and for her role as Sally Bowles, Minnelli was named Best Actress and appeared on the front covers of Newsweek and Time magazines in the same week. She also won an Emmy for her television special Liza With A Z, directed by Bob Fosse. Her concerts were sell-outs; when she played the Olympia, Paris, they dubbed her 'la petite Piaf Americano'. In 1973 she met producer/director Jack Haley Jnr. while contributing to his film project That's Entertainment! Haley's father had played the Tin Man in Judy Garland's most famous picture, The Wizard Of Oz. Haley Jnr and Minnelli married in 1974, and in the same year she broke Broadway records and won a special Tony Award for a three-week series of one-woman shows at the Winter Garden. Her next two movies, Lucky Lady and A Matter Of Time received lukewarm reviews, but she made up for these in 1977,with her next film project, New York, New York. Co-starring with Robert DeNiro, and directed by Martin Scorsese, Minnelli's dramatic performance as a young band singer in the period after World War II was a personal triumph. This was the last film she made until Arthur (1981), in which she played a supporting role to Dudley Moore. The musical theme for Arthur, 'Best You Can Do', was co-written by her ex-husband, Peter Allen. A renewed association with Kander and Ebb for the Broadway musical The Act (1977), was dismissed by some critics as being little more than a series of production numbers displaying the talents of Liza Minnelli. In brought her another Tony Award, but she collapsed from exhaustion during the show's run. In 1979, she was divorced from Jack Haley Jnr., and married Italian sculptor, Mark Gero. Rumours were appearing in the press speculating about her drug and alcohol problems, and for a couple of years she was virtually retired. In 1984 she was nominated for yet another Tony for her performance on Broadway in The Rink, with Chita Rivera, but dropped out of the show to seek treatment for drug and alcohol abuse at the Betty Ford Clinic in California. She started her comeback in 1985, and in the following year, on her 40th birthday, opened to a sold-out London Palladium, the first time she had played the theatre since that memorable occasion in 1964; she received the same kind of reception that her mother did then. In the same year, back in the USA, Minnelli won the Golden Globe Award as Best Actress in A Time To Live, a television adaptation of the true story, Intensive Care, by Mary-Lou Weisman. During the late 80s she joined Frank Sinatra and Sammy Davis Jnr. for a world tour, dubbed The Ultimate Event!, and in 1989 collaborated with the UK pop group, the Pet Shop Boys, on the album Results. A single from the album, Stephen Sondheim's 'Losing My Mind', gave Liza Minnelli her first UK chart entry, at number 6. She also appeared with Dudley Moore in the film Arthur 2: On The Rocks. In 1991 her marriage to Mark Gero ended. In the same year, after co-starring with Julie Walters in the British musical comedy Stepping Out, Minnelli used the film's title for a series of concerts she gave at Radio City Music Hall in New York which broke the venue's 59-year box office record. She later took the show to London's Royal Albert Hall, where she returned a year later for a one-off gala charity concert dedicated to the memory of her late friend Sammy Davis Jnr. Her other work in the early 90s included concerts with Charles Aznavour at the Palais des Congress and Carnegie Hall, and serving as host for the 1993 Tony Awards ceremony, during which she sang a medley of Broadway songs with her step-sister Lorna Luft. In June 1994 Minnelli was in Moscow, giving shows as part of the D-Day commemorations. Later in the year she underwent surgery to replace her right hip, after 'being in pain for 10 years'. Gently was her first 'proper' album in years, and it featured some lush duets with Donna Summer and Johnnny Mathis. Her career in film and music has enabled her to transcend the title, 'Judy Garland's daughter'.

● ALBUMS: Best Foot Forward off-Broadway cast (Cadence 1963)★★, Liza! Liza! (Capitol 1964)★★★, It Amazes Me (1965)★★, The Dangerous Christmas Of Red Riding Hood soundtrack (1965)★★, with Judy Garland 'Live' At The London Palladium (Capitol 1965)★★★★, Flora, The Red Menace Broadway cast (RCA Victor 1965)★★, There Is A Time (1966)★★★, New Feelin' (A&M 1970)★★, Cabaret soundtrack (1972)★★★★, Liza With A 'Z' (1972)★★★★, Liza Minnelli The Singer (Columbia 1973)★★★★, Live At The Winter Garden (Columbia 1974)★★★, Lucky Lady (1976)★★★, Tropical Nights (1977)★★★, Live! - At Carnegie Hall (Telarc 1988)★★★, Results (Epic 1989)★★★, Live From Radio City Music Hall (1992)★★★, Aznavour/Minnelli Paris-Palais Des Congrès (EMI 1995)★★★, Gently (Angel 1996)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Visible Results (1990), Live At Radio City Music Hall (1994), with Frank Sinatra, Sammy Davis Jnr. The Ultimate Event! (1996).

● FURTHER READING: Liza, James Robert Parish. Judy And Liza, James Spada. Liza - Born A Star, Wendy Leigh. Liza: Her Cinderella Nightmare, James Robert Parish. Me And My Shadows: Living With The Legacy Of Judy Garland, Lorna Luft.

● FILMS: In The Good Old Summertime child cameo (1949), Charlie Bubbles (1967), The Sterile Cuckoo (1969), Tell Me That You Love Me Junie Moon (1970), Cabaret (1972), That's Entertainment! on-screen narrator (1974), Journey Back To Oz (1974), Lucky Lady (1975), A Matter Of Time (1976), Silent Movie cameo (1976), New York New York (1977), Arthur (1981), The King Of Comedy cameo (1983), The Muppets Take Manhattan cameo (1984), That's Dancing! co-narrator (1985), Rent-A-Cop (1988), Arthur 2: On The Rocks (1988), Stepping Out (1991).

Minnelli, Vincente

b. 28 February 1903, Chicago, Illinois, USA, d. 25 July 1986, Los Angeles, California, USA. A distinguished film director with a sophisticated style and flair, particularly in the use of colour and the innovative filming of the most exquisite dance sequences. Minnelli is credited, in collaboration with Gene Kelly, with being the main influence on the classic MGM musicals of the 50s. As a young child Minnelli appeared in plays produced by the family Minnelli Bros. Tent Theatre, which toured the American Midwest. After leaving school at 16 he studied at the Art Institute of Chicago, and worked as a window and costume designer before moving to New York to design the scenery and costumes for two 1932 Broadway shows, the Earl Carroll Vanities and The DuBarry. From 1933-35 Minnelli was art director at the Radio City Music Hall where he staged a series of ballets and musicals. In 1935 he directed as well as designed the Beatrice Lillie musical At Home Abroad, and throughout the 30s worked successfully on productions such as Ziegfeld Follies, The Show Is On, Hooray For What! and Very Warm For May (1939). From 1940-42, under the aegis of MGM producer Arthur Freed, Minnelli trained in various aspects of Hollywood film techniques and supervised speciality numbers in a number of films including Strike Up The Band, Babes On Broadway and Panama Hattie. He made his debut as a director in 1943 with the all-black musical Cabin In The Sky, which was followed by I Dood It a year later. Then came Meet Me In St. Louis (1944), a delightful piece of nostalgic Americana that became one of the most beloved musicals of all time. Minnelli married its star, Judy Garland, in 1945 (divorced 1951), and in the following year their daughter, Liza Minnelli, was born. Over the next 25 years Minnelli directed a number of musicals that met with varying degrees of success. Yolande And The Thief (1945), which starred Fred Astaire, was followed by the all-star spectacular Ziegfeld Follies (1946), and two films with Gene Kelly, the underrated The Pirate (1948), and An American In Paris (1951), which is often considered to be Minnelli's masterpiece. However, many would argue that another of the director's collaborations with Fred Astaire, The Band Wagon (1953), or the delightful Gigi (1958), were equally important events in the director's distinguished career. Certainly, whatever their merits - and they were not inconsiderable - few would suggest Brigadoon (1954), Kismet (1955), Bells Are Ringing (1960) or On A Clear Day You Can See Forever (1970) as being prime examples of Vincente Minnelli's art. The latter film was made for Paramount after he had ended an association with MGM that had lasted for more than 25 years. However, the majority of Minnelli's films were not musicals. Over the years he made many other pictures in a wide variety of styles and moods, and finally achieved his ambition to work with daughter Liza Minnelli in 1976 on his last film, A Matter Of Time. By then, Minnelli's style of films - particularly musicals - were anachronistic, and he lived quietly in retirement until his death at his home in Beverly Hills in 1986. The year of his birth has always been the subject of speculation. The one cited above is that which was printed in the excellent obituary notice in Variety. In 1993 the young cabaret entertainer Jeff Harnar presented his solo revue Dancing In The Dark - Vincente Minnelli's Hollywood in New York.

● FURTHER READING: I Remember It Well, Vincente Minnelli.

● FILMS: as director I Dood It (1943), Cabin In The Sky (1943), Meet Me In St. Louis (1944), Yolande And The Thief (1945), The Clock (1945), Till The Clouds Roll By (Judy Garland's sequences only) (1946), Ziegfeld Follies (1946), Undercurrent (1946), The Pirate (1948), Madame Bovary (1949), Father Of The Bride (1950), An American In Paris (1951), Father's Little Dividend (1951), The Story Of Three Loves (Mademoiselle Sequence) (1952), The Bad And The Beautiful (1952), The Band Wagon (1953), Brigadoon (1954), The Long Long Trailer (1954), The Cobweb (1955), Kismet (1955), Lust For Life (1956), Tea And Sympathy (1956), Designing Woman (1957), Some Came Running (1958), The Reluctant Debutante (1958), Gigi (1958), Bells Are Ringing (1960), Home From The Hill (1960), Two Weeks In Another Town (1962), The Four Horsemen Of The Apocalypse (1962), The Courtship Of Eddie's Father (1963), Goodbye Charlie (1964), The Sandpiper (1965), On A Clear Day You Can See Forever (1970), A Matter Of Time (1976).

Minogue, Dannii

b. 20 October 1970, Australia. One of two famous Minogue sisters, Dannii actually became a star in her native country before elder sister Kylie Minogue, though the latter hit the world arena first. Dannii made her television debut at the age of seven in Skyways, and followed it with a string of television shows, including Young Talent Time, a showcase for new young acts, on which she first appeared in 1979; three years later, she became its host for the next six years. It was not all smooth running, though; twice the two sisters went for the same role, with Kylie coming out on top to land parts in The Sullivans and Neighbours. Meanwhile, in 1985, Dannii launched her recording career with an Australian-only cover version of Madonna's 'Material Girl'. She followed this with poppy stabs at Europe's 'The Final Countdown', and the Cars' 'Let's Go'. Now And Then and Phenomenon were released in 1985 and 1987 respectively, but only in Australia. Her popularity in her homeland was such that she even designed and marketed her own fashion range. After leaving the talent show in 1988, Dannii took a role in All The Way. Shortly afterwards she was signed to Australia's Mushroom Records and was sent to New York with producers Vincent Bell and Alvin Moody to record a new single. However, before it could be finished, Dannii was offered the important role of Emma Jackson in Home And Away and decided to put her musical career on hold for about a year. After she left, the single 'Love And Kisses' was completed and released in Australia in March 1990. The following year, with Home And Away turning her into a star in the UK, Dannii was signed to MCA and the single was remixed by Danny D of D Mob. Girl recieved respectable reviews, considering that her music career is very much secondary to her television work, but the album peaked at number 57 and Minogue was dropped by WEA the following year.

● ALBUMS: Dannii (MCA 1991)★★, Love And Kisses (MCA 1991)★★, Get Into You (MCA 1993)★★★, Girl (Eternal 1997)★★★.

Minogue, Kylie

b. 28 May 1968, Melbourne, Australia. Coming from a stage family, Minogue passed an audition for the Australian soap opera, Neighbours, which eventually led to her recording debut with Little Eva's hit, 'The Locomotion'. When the television series was successfully screened in Britain, prolific hit producers Stock, Aitken And Waterman intervened to mould Kylie's attractive, wholesome, anodyne image to their distinctive brand of radio-centred pop. The first UK single, 'I Should Be So Lucky', soon reached number 1, presaging an impressive chart run of instantly hummable hits, including 'Got To Be Certain', 'Je'Ne Sais'Pas Pour Qui', 'Hand On Your Heart', 'Wouldn't Change A Thing' and 'Never Too Late'. With solo success enhanced by duets with co-star Jason Donovan, Minogue emerged as one of the most successfully marketed acts of the late 80s, with books and films, including The Delinquents. In 1991, the former soap star drastically changed her girl-next door image and adopted a sexier persona, which won her even more media coverage - particularly when she became romantically involved with INXS lead singer, Michael Hutchence. Surprisingly, she even won some acclaim in the music press and found herself championed as an unlikely 'pop goddess', signing to dance label DeConstruction Records. In 1996 she recorded with Nick Cave and the following year was working in the recording studio with the Manic Street Preachers. The original title for her 1997 album, Impossible Princess, had to be changed, as it was felt that it clashed with the death of Princess Diana. Not to be confused with her 1994 release, Kylie Minogue was a much grungier album than we had any right to expect, but marked a downturn in Minogue's commercial fortunes.

- ALBUMS: Kylie (PWL 1988)★★, Enjoy Yourself (PWL 1989)★★, Rhythm Of Love (PWL 1990)★★★, Lets Get To It (PWL 1991)★★, Kylie Minogue (DeConstruction 1994)★★, Kylie Minogue (DeConstruction 1997)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (PWL 1992)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: The Superstar Next Door, Sasha Stone.

Minor Threat

One of the most influential US punk band of the 80s, Minor Threat's highly idealistic message, similar to that of Crass and the anarcho-punk bands of the UK, proved inspirational to a young audience disaffected with its political choices. Based in Washington D.C., the group was formed in 1980 from the ashes of local band, Teen Idles. The main spokesman Ian MacKaye (vocals) and drummer Jeff Nelson left that band to join Lyle Preslar (guitar) and Brian Baker (bass; ex-Government Issue) in Minor Threat. By this time Minor Threat had already recorded their anthem 'Minor Threat' and 'Straight Edge', the song that gave punk rock a new energy. Railing against the impotent whining of would-be rebels who spent all their energy on drink, drugs, abusive sex and shallow relationships, 'straight edge' stood for a code of abstinence which swept the US punk scene (no drugs, tobacco, alcohol or meat). By 1982 Steve Hansen had taken over on bass, and Baker switched to second guitar. The new line-up completed Out Of Step. This revealed a fastidiously executed, densely structured assault which sounded like nothing which had preceded it. Sadly, the enormous pressure the band was now under resulted in their demise. MacKaye, in particular, was struggling with the sort of deification that had been his last intention when he formed the band. MacKaye and Nelson continued to work together for Dischord Records, one of America's foremost underground labels. MacKaye went on to record with Egg Hunt (again with Nelson), Embrace (with members of his brother, Alec MacKaye's former band, Faith), Pailhead (with Al Jourgenson of Ministry) and finally Fugazi - the most permanent and important of those liaisons. Nelson worked with Three, Skewbald and Senator Flux, before concentrating full-time on Dischord's growth. Baker went on to stints in Meatmen, Dag Nasty and Junkyard. Preslar also worked with the Meatmen, while Hansen has recorded with Government Issue, Modest Proposal, Weatherhead and others.

- ALBUMS: Out Of Step (Dischord 1983)★★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: First Two 7-inches (Dischord 1984),★★★ Complete Discography (Dischord 1988)★★★★.

Minott, Echo

b. Noel Philips, *c.*1962, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Philips began his career in 1981 with King Jammy when he recorded 'Youthman' and an obscure album under his own name. He decided to start afresh with Michael 'Myrie' Taylor and Marshall who had set up the Sunset label. Owing to confusion over the Harry J. label of the same name, the duo discontinued Sunset and resurfaced with the Reggae Sting logo. The result of Philips' association with the team was 'Ten Miles', recording as Echo Minott. He performed in the 'sing-jay' style that was immensely popular in the early 80s. In 1982 he recorded 'Emilio Bimbo' with Prince Hammer, who took control of Minott's career on his own Berris label. Minott's popularity grew when he performed 'What The Hell The Police Can Do', a reference to the security forces' reluctance to become involved in domestic disputes. With producer Jack Scorpio he recorded 'Lazy Body', an early product of the digital age, as the rhythm was accompanied with a drum machine, considered sacrilegious by the purists. The result of the song's popularity was the release of two one-rhythm albums, Lively Body and Lively Move. At the 10th Reggae Sunsplash in Jamaica, Minott virtually stole the show at the dancehall night when he performed alongside Peter Metro, Red Dragon, Leroy Smart, Lovindeer and General Trees. Minott continued to record irregular hits through to the 90s, including 'Wherever You Go', 'Cool And Deadly', 'Jealousy Fe Done', 'When My Little Girl Is Smiling' and 'New Dimension'. In 1993 he enjoyed a dancehall success with 'Murder Weapon', which used similar vocal phrasing to Burning Spear and led to various dance remixes. In 1995 Minott had a minor hit with 'Girl Of My Complexion', which reaffirmed his enduring talent.

● ALBUMS: What The Hell (Sonic 1985)★★★, with Frankie Paul Meets Frankie Paul (Empire 1986)★★★★, Familiar Face (VP 1989)★★★.

Minott, Sugar

b. Lincoln Minott, 25 May 1956, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Minott was probably reggae music's brightest hope throughout the early 80s, but his refusal to compromise and turn his back on either his roots or his ghetto companions has marginalized his influence, and he is now a peripheral figure, as opposed to the major force that he arguably deserves to be. Minott first recorded in the mid-70s as one of the African Brothers with Tony Tuff and Derrick Howard for a variety of Kingston producers; a couple of all-time classics evolved from this period, including 'Torturing' and 'Party Night'. The African Brothers eventually arrived at Studio One, where Minott's precocious talent was immediately recognized, and he was taken on as a studio apprentice, singing whatever was required, and often providing percussion and guitar where necessary. His sweet vocals were only one facet of his talent, and his ability to write new songs to fit over existing rhythms was remarkable, the results, in many cases, eclipsing the originals. He had a few steady sellers for Studio One, but it was his debut long-player, Live Loving, that made his name and extended his popularity. He became a bigger star in the UK than in his homeland, and his first release in Britain, the self-produced 'Hard Time Pressure', was a major underground hit in 1979. He travelled to England later that year, and stayed for a lengthy period, contributing immeasurably to the indigenous reggae scene. He became a focus for UK reggae, while releasing many records in the accepted local lovers rock style, which demonstrated his ability to work successfully in any style of reggae music. A national chart hit, for Hawkeye Records, followed in 1980, and crossover success seemed to be the obvious next step for Minott.

He had previously parted company with Studio One because of his desire for independence, and set up his own Youth Promotion/Black Roots collective organization to foster and develop the abundant talent in the Kingston ghettos. Consequently, when he was offered contracts for recording and concert work with established companies, Minott refused to sign unless the rest of the Youth Promotion team were a part of the arrangement. This proved too altruistic for the large labels, and Minott continued to work in his own way, recording solo outings for many independent producers to finance his ideals. Sadly, his single-minded determination to help the youths in the ghetto did not work in his favour, and many young singers and DJs who came to prominence on Minott's Youth Promotion sound system (one of the top Kingston Sounds of the 80s) went on to greater success elsewhere, while his personal strength, too, seemed to be sapped by his constant concern for the less fortunate. His releases during the latter part of the decade were often lacklustre, relying too heavily on the stringing together of dancehall catchphrases and clichés. However, in the 90s he began to make some excellent records both for himself and other producers, including King Jammy, that at last recalled former glories.

● ALBUMS: Live Loving (Studio One 1978)★★★★, Showcase (Studio One 1979)★★★, Black Roots (Island 1979)★★★★, Bittersweet (Ballistic 1979)★★★, Ghetto-ology (Trojan 1979)★★★★, Roots Lovers (Black Roots 1980)★★★★, Give The People (Ballistic 1980)★★★, African Girl (Black Roots 1981)★★★, Good Thing Going (RCA 1981)★★★, Dancehall Showcase (Black Roots 1983)★★★★, With Lots Of Extra (Hitbound 1983)★★★, Herbman Hustling (Black Roots 1984)★★★, Slice Of The Cake (Heartbeat 1984)★★★, Wicked A Go Feel It (Wackies 1984)★★★, Leader Of The Pack (Striker Lee 1985)★★★, Rydim (Greensleeves 1985)★★★, Time Longer Than Rope (Greensleeves 1985)★★★, with Leroy Smart Rockers Award Winners (Greensleeves 1985)★★★, Inna Reggae Dancehall (Heartbeat 1986)★★, Sugar And Spice (Taxi 1986)★★, with Gregory Isaacs Double Dose (Blue Mountain 1987)★★★, Them Ah Wolf (C&F 1987)★★, Jamming In The Streets (Wackies 1987)★★, with the African Brothers Collectors Item (Uptempo 1987)★★★, African Soldier (Heartbeat 1988)★★, Buy Off The Bar (Sonic Sounds 1988)★★, Sugar Minott And Youth Promotion (NEC 1988)★★, Lovers Rock Inna Dancehall (Youth Promotion 1988)★★★, Ghetto Youth Dem Rising (Heartbeat 1988)★★, Sufferer's Choice (Heartbeat 1988)★★★, The Boss Is Back (RAS 1989)★★, Smile (L&M 1990)★★★, A Touch Of Class (Jammys 1991)★★★★, Run Things (Exterminator 1993)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Volume 1 (Black Roots 1988)★★★★, The Artist (L&M 1989)★★★, 20 Super Hits (Sonic Sounds 1990)★★★, Reggae Max (Jetstar 1997)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Official Sugar Minott Dance Hall Video (Jetstar 1988).

Mint Condition

One of a myriad of R&B-inspired groups who dot the musical landscape in the 90s, Mint Condition comprises Larry Wadell (keyboards), Homer O'Dell (guitar), Stokley Williams (vocals, drums), Jeff Allen (saxophone, keyboards), Kerri Lewis (keyboards) and Ricky Kinchen (bass). The group was formed in 1989, and two years later found itself signed to Terry Lewis's Perspective Records, for whom they released their Meant To Be debut. Despite including the hit singles 'Breakin' My Heart (Pretty Brown Eyes)' and 'Forever In Your Eyes', it failed to achieve a mainstream breakthrough for the group. The same fate befell From The Mint Factory, released two years later. This time the hit single, 'U Send Me Swingin'', reached number 2 in Billboard's Hot R&B chart. A concerted effort was then made to propel the group's third album, Definition Of A Band, higher up the charts. Whether or not the attempt to convert Mint Condition into an 'album act' succeeds, few critics quibbled with the standard of the writing and production displayed on this set, especially on the compulsive first single, 'What Kind Of Man Would I Be?'.

● ALBUMS: Meant To Be (Perspective 1991)★★, From The Mint Factory (Perspective 1993)★★★, Definition Of A Band (Perspective 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Collection1991-1998 (Perspective 1998)★★★★.

Mint Juleps

This a cappella soul group from the East End of London, England, consisted of sisters Debbie, Lizzie, Sandra and Marcia Charles, plus their friends Debbie and Julie. They all formerly worked together at the Half Moon Theatre in Putney, where they decided to form a group. They played at various benefits and toured with Sister Sledge and Billy Bragg, and worked as backing singers for Bob Geldof, the Belle Stars and Dr. Feelgood. They signed to Stiff Records, and were managed by former Darts members Rita Ray and Rob Fish. The Mint Juleps recorded vocal versions of Neil Young's 'Only Love Can Break Your Heart', Robert Palmer's 'Every Kinda People', and the original 'Girl To The Power Of 6' (produced by Trevor Horn). They later moved away from a cappella into a style of lightweight rap in the same vein as Salt 'N' Pepa. They appeared on the ex-Grateful Dead drummer Mickey Hart's Mystery Box in 1996.

● ALBUMS: One Time (Stiff 1985)★★★.

Mint Tattoo

Guitarist Bruce Stephens founded this short-lived, late 60s San Franciscan trio with Burns Kellogg (bass) and Greg Thomas (drums). Their only, blues-based, album showed promise, but the group broke up prematurely when both Stephens and Kellogg joined heavy west-coast rockers Blue Cheer. The former was later a member of Pilot (USA), prior to embarking on a solo career.

● ALBUMS: Mint Tattoo (Dot 1968)★★★.

Minter, Iverson

(see Louisiana Red)

Mintzer, Bob

b. 27 January 1953, New Rochelle, Westchester, New York, USA. Interested in music from childhood, he began serious studies shortly before he left high school. He went to Interlochen Arts Academy in Michigan by which time he was becoming adept on tenor saxophone and also was taking interest in arranging. Fellow students at Interlochen included Peter Erskine and two sons of Dave Brubeck. Mintzer then studied and played, mostly clarinet, at Hart College of Music in Hartford, Connecticut, then went to the Manhattan School of Music in New York. However, the active New York music scene proved to be a greater attraction and in 1974 he went on the road with Eumir Deodato and the following year began a two-year stint with Buddy Rich where his arranging talents blossomed. After leaving Rich he worked regularly with the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra. He continued to develop as an arranger and preferred the context of a big band, playing with Stone Alliance, and the big bands of Sam Jones and Jaco Pastorius. In 1984 he formed his own big band before becoming a regular member of the popular Yellowjackets. In his playing, Mintzer acknowledges the influence of most of the leading tenor saxophone stylists of jazz from Coleman Hawkins through to John Coltrane but has developed his own powerful and distinctive style. As an arranger he happily uses latter-day musical movements, such as rock and post-rock, without ever losing the tradition of big band jazz. His arrangements, especially when playing by his own band are finely crafted and performed, tight and urgent.

● ALBUMS: with Stone Alliance Heads Up (PM 1980)★★, Papa Lips (Sony 1984)★★★, Incredible Journey (DMP 1985)★★★, Camouflage (DMP 1986)★★, Spectrum (DMP 1987)★★★, Urban Contours (DMP 1988)★★★, Art Of The Big Band (DMP 1989)★★★, with Peter Erskine Sweet Soul (BMG 1991)★★★★, One Music (DMP 1991)★★★, I Remember Jaco (BMG 1991)★★★★, with Yellowjackets Greenhouse (GRP 1990)★★★, with Yellowjackets Run For Your Life (GRP 1990)★★, Departure (DMP 1992)★★★, Only In New York (DMP 1994)★★★.

Minutemen

Formed in 1980 in San Pedro, California, USA, and originally known as the Reactionaries, this influential hardcore trio initially comprised D. Boon (guitar, vocals), Mike Watt (bass) and Frank Tonche (drums), but the latter was replaced by George Hurley prior to recording. Although the trio donated tracks to several independent compilations, notably for the pivotal Radio Tokyo Tapes and the Posh Boy and New Alliance labels, their association with SST Records resulted in some of the genre's most impressive recordings. The unfettered rage of their early work was less apparent on Buzz Or Howl Under The Influence Of Heat and Project: Mersh ('mersh' is San Pedro slang for 'commercial'), but Double Nickels On The Dime and 3-Way Tie (For Last) showed an undeterred passion and commitment. The Minutemen came to a premature end in 1986 following the death of D. Boon. Watt and Hurley decided to drop the group's name, and in its place formed Firehose with guitarist Ed Crawford.

● ALBUMS: The Punch Line EP (SST 1981)★★, What Makes A Man Start Fires? (SST 1983)★★, Buzz Or Howl Under The Influence Of Heat (SST 1983)★★★, The Politics Of Time (New Alliance 1984)★★★, ... Just A Minute Men (Virgin Vinyl 1985)★★★,Double Nickels On The Dime (SST 1984)★★★, Project: Mersh EP (SST 1985)★★★, 3-Way Tie (For Last) (SST 1985)★★★, Ballot Result (SST 1987)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: My First Bells 1980-1983 cassette (SST 1985)★★★, Post-Mersh Volume 1 (SST 1987)★★, Post-Mersh Volume 2 (SST 1987)★★★, Post-Mersh Volume 3 (SST 1989)★★★.

Miracles

Of all the R&B vocal groups formed in Detroit, Michigan, USA, in the mid-50s, the Miracles proved to be the most successful. They were founded at the city's Northern High School in 1955 by Smokey Robinson (b. William Robinson, 19 February 1940, Detroit, Michigan, USA), Emerson Rogers, Bobby Rogers (b. 19 February 1940, Detroit, Michigan, USA), Ronnie White (b. 5 April 1939, Detroit, Michigan, USA, d. 26 August 1995) and Warren 'Pete' Moore (b. 19 November 1939, Detroit, Michigan, USA). Emerson Rogers left the following year, and was replaced by his sister Claudette, who married Smokey Robinson in 1959. Known initially as the Matadors, the group became the Miracles in 1958, when they made their initial recordings with producer Berry Gordy. He leased their debut, 'Got A Job' (an answer record to the Silhouettes' major hit 'Get A Job'), to End Records, produced a duet by Ron (White) And Bill (Robinson) for Argo, and licensed the classic doo-wop novelty 'Bad Girl' to Chess in 1959. The following year, Gordy signed the Miracles directly to his fledgling Motown label. Recognizing the youthful composing talents of Smokey Robinson, he allowed the group virtual free rein in the studio, and was repaid when they issued 'Way Over There', a substantial local hit, and then 'Shop Around', which broke both the Miracles and Motown to a national audience. The song demonstrated the increasing sophistication of Robinson's writing, which provided an unbroken series of hits for the group over the next few years. Their raw, doo-wop sound was further refined on the Top 10 hit 'You Really Got A Hold On Me' in 1962, a soulful ballad that became a worldwide standard after the Beatles covered it in 1963. Robinson was now in demand by other Motown artists: Gordy used him as a one-man hit factory, to mastermind releases by the Temptations and Mary Wells, and the Miracles' own career suffered slightly as a result. They continued to enjoy success in a variety of different styles, mixing dancefloor hits such as 'Mickey's Monkey' and 'Going To A Go-Go' with some of Robinson's most durable ballads, such as 'Oooh Baby Baby' and 'The Tracks Of My Tears'. Although Robinson sang lead on almost all the group's recordings, the rest of the group provided a unique harmony blend behind him, while guitarist Marv Tarplin - who co-wrote several of their hits - was incorporated as an unofficial Miracle from the mid-60s onwards. Claudette Robinson stopped touring with the group after 1965, although she was still featured on many of their subsequent releases. Exhausted by several years of constant work, Robinson scaled down his writing commitments for the group in the mid-60s, when they briefly worked with Holland/Dozier/Holland and other Motown producers. Robinson wrote their most ambitious and enduring songs, however, including 'The Tears Of A Clown' in 1966 (a belated hit in the UK and USA in 1970), 'The Love I Saw In You Was Just A Mirage', and 'I Second That Emotion' in 1967. These tracks epitomized the strengths of Robinson's compositions, with witty, metaphor-filled lyrics tied to aching melody lines and catchy guitar figures, the latter often provided by Tarplin. Like many of the veteran Motown acts, the Miracles went into a sales slump after 1967 - the year when Robinson was given individual credit on the group's records. Their slide was less noticeable in Britain, where Motown gained a Top 10 hit in 1969 with a reissue of 'The Tracks Of My Tears', which most listeners imagined was a contemporary record. The success of 'The Tears Of A Clown' prompted a revival in fortune after 1970. 'I'm The One You Need' became another reissue hit in Britain the following year, while 'I Don't Blame You At All', one of their strongest releases to date, achieved chart success on both sides of the Atlantic.

In 1971, Robinson announced his intention of leaving the Miracles to concentrate on his position as vice-president of Motown Records. His decision belied the title of his final hit with the group, 'We've Come Too Far To End It Now' in 1972, and left the Miracles in the unenviable position of having to replace one of the most distinctive voices in popular music. Their choice was William 'Bill' Griffin (b. 15 August 1950, Detroit, Michigan, USA), who was introduced by Robinson to the group's audiences during a 1972 US tour. The new line-up took time to settle, while Smokey Robinson launched a solo career to great acclaim in 1973. The group responded with Renaissance, which saw them working with Motown luminaries such as Marvin Gaye and Willie Hutch. The following year, they re-established the Miracles as a hit-making force with 'Do It Baby' and 'Don'tcha Love It', dance-orientated singles that appealed strongly to the group's black audience. In 1975, 'Love Machine' became the Miracles' first US chart-topper, while the concept album City Of Angels was acclaimed as one of Motown's most progressive releases. This twin success proved to be the Miracles' last commercial gasp. Switching to Columbia Records in 1977, they lost Billy Griffin, who set out on a little-noticed solo career. Donald Griffin briefly joined the group in his place, but the Miracles ceased recording in 1978. Thereafter, Ronnie White and Bill Rogers steered the outfit into the new decade as a touring band, before the Miracles disbanded without any fanfares, only to be re-formed by Bobby Rogers in 1982. He enlisted Dave Finlay and Carl Cotton as the new Miracles. Former members Billy Griffin and Claudette Robinson (ex-wife of Smokey) recorded solo tracks for Ian Levine's Motor City label during 1988-91. Another re-formed group comprising Billy Griffin, Robinson, Rogers, Donald Griffin, Cotton and Finlay also recorded for Levine, remaking 'Love Machine' in 1990. White died in 1995 after losing his battle with leukaemia.

● ALBUMS: Hi, We're The Miracles (Tamla 1961)★★★, Cookin' With The Miracles (Tamla 1962)★★★★, I'll Try Something New (Tamla 1962)★★★, The Fabulous Miracles (Tamla 1963)★★★, Recorded Live: On Stage (Tamla 1963)★★, Christmas With The Miracles (Tamla 1963)★★, The Miracles Doin' 'Mickey's Monkey' (Tamla 1963)★★★, Going To A Go-Go (Tamla 1965)★★★★, I Like It Like That (Tamla 1965)★★★, Away We A Go-Go (Tamla 1966)★★★, Make It Happen (Tamla 1967)★★★, Special Occasion (Tamla 1968)★★★, Live! (Tamla 1969)★★, Time Out For Smokey Robinson And The Miracles (Tamla 1969)★★★, Four In Blue (Tamla 1969)★★★, What Love Has Joined Together (Tamla 1970)★★★, A Pocket Full Of Miracles (Tamla 1970)★★★, The Season For Miracles (Tamla 1970)★★★, One Dozen Roses (Tamla 1971)★★★, Flying High Together (Tamla 1972)★★★, Renaissance (Tamla 1973)★★★, Do It Baby (Tamla 1974)★★★, Don't Cha Love It (Tamla 1975)★★, City Of Angels (Tamla 1975)★★, The Power Of Music (Tamla 1976)★★, Love Crazy (Columbia 1977)★★, The Miracles (Columbia 1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits From The Beginning (Tamla 1965)★★★★, Greatest Hits Vol. 2 (Tamla 1968)★★★★, 1957-72 (Tamla 1972)★★★★, Smokey Robinson And The Miracles' Anthology (Motown 1973)★★★★, Compact Command Performances (Motown 1987)★★★★, The Greatest Hits (Motown 1992)★★★★, The 35th Anniversary Collection 4-CD box set (Motown Masters 1994)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Smokey: Inside My Life, Smokey Robinson and David Ritz.

Miranda Sex Garden

Widely tagged with the terms 'classical' and 'pretentious' by UK critics, Miranda Sex Garden have faced sterner tests than that, including facing 20,000 unimpressed Depeche Mode fans on tour. The group comprises singer-songwriter Katharine Blake, and her cohorts, Ben Golomstock (keyboards), Donna McKevitt (violin) and Trevor Sharpe (percussion), having dropped original member Kelly McClusker, who formed the band with Blake after graduating from music college (Purcell School Of Music). All are accomplished musicians, and the three women each have strong falsetto voices. They spent their early days busking sixteenth century madrigals on London's Underground, with an impressed Barry Adamson catching one performance on Portobello Road. Later they would contribute to his Delusion soundtrack. Their debut release comprised two versions of the madrigal 'Gush Forth My Tears', an a cappela treatment on one side, and a dance version on the other. Their talents won them a reception that was roughly equal in incredulity and wonder, and their voices soon appeared on Derek Jarman's soundtrack to Blue (on an unlikely song entitled 'Muff Diving Size Queen'). Fairytales, meanwhile, concerned sado-masochism, and they have actually played gigs under the title of Waltzing Maggots at fetish clubs, which included Blake performing half naked in Nazi regalia (finally destroying utterly their early press reputation for Victorian-esque primness).

● ALBUMS: Madra (Mute 1991)★★★, Iris mini-album (Mute 1992)★★★, Suspiria (Mute 1993), Fairytales Of Slavery (Mute 1994)★★★.

Miranda, Carmen

b. Maria do Carmo Miranda da Cunha, 9 February 1909, near Lisbon, Portugal, d. 5 August 1955, California, USA. A flamboyant singer, dancer and actress with an animated style and a penchant for exotic, colourful costumes, 10 inch-heeled shoes, and turbans decorated with significant amounts of artificial fruit. She was raised in Rio de Janeiro and began her career there on local radio. Later she made several films and appeared in nightclubs and theatres throughout South America. Lee Shubert, the oldest of the famous trio of producer brothers, took Miranda to the USA in 1939 where she introduced Al Dubin and Jimmy McHugh's catchy 'South American Way' in the Broadway musical The Streets Of Paris. She sang it again (her peculiar accent turned it into 'Souse American Way') when she made her spectacular film debut with Betty Grable and Don Ameche in Down Argentine Way (1940). A year later she joined the comedy team of Olsen and Jolsen in another Broadway show, Sons O' Fun. However, her real impact was made in a series of film musicals in the 40s when she became known as the 'Brazilian Bombshell'. These included That Night In Rio, Weekend In Havana, Springtime In The Rockies, The Gang's All Here, Four Jills In A Jeep, Greenwich Village, Doll Face, If I'm Lucky, Copacabana, and A Date With Judy. By then her star had faded, and she made only two more pictures, Nancy Goes To Rio (1950) and Scared Stiff (1953), although in the late 40s and early 50s she continued to perform in theatres and nightclubs. She died suddenly of a heart attack in 1955 shortly after appearing with Jimmy Durante on his television show. A dynamic, much impersonated entertainer - Mickey Rooney's wickedly accurate takeoff in Babes On Broadway immediately comes to mind - Carmen Miranda was indelibly associated with several lively and diverting songs, including 'The Lady With The Tutti Frutti Hat', 'I Yi Yi Yi Yi (I Like You Very Much)', 'Chica Boom Chic', 'When I Love, I Love', 'Cuanto La Gusta', 'Mama, Eu Quero (I Want My Mama)', and 'The Wedding Samba' (the last two with the Andrews Sisters).

● ALBUMS: South American Way (c.50s, re-released 1982),★★★ By Popular Demand (MCA 1995)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Brazilian Bombshell: The Biography Of Carmen Miranda, M. Gil-Montero.

Miranda, Ismael

b. 20 February 1950, Aguada, Puerto Rico. Singer/songwriter Miranda was one of the most popular soneros (extemporizing salsa singers) of the 70s salsa boom. His parents and an uncle took him to live in Long Island, USA when he was four years old; later on he moved with his family to the Lower East Side in Manhattan, New York City. He started studying singing at about eight years old and by 11 years of age he had mastered the conga. He performed with the bands of Pipo, Benny Ortiz, Raúl González and Andy Harlow (Larry Harlow's brother) before joining Joey Pastrana's orchestra at the age of 16. He made his recording debut with Pastrana on Let's Ball (1967), performing on the big hit track 'Rumbón Mélon'. Larry Harlow, who had seen Miranda sing with his brother Andy's band, recruited the young sonero to perform lead vocals for his Orchestra Harlow in July 1967. 'His voice was young, clear, strong and above all he had great presence . . . Ismael combines his Puerto Rican blood, Cuban flavour and American know-how into a dynamic style,' wrote Harlow in his liner notes to Orchestra Harlow Presenta a Ismael Miranda. Over the next five years Miranda and Harlow developed a highly creative and successful partnership. During this period, he made seven albums with Orchestra Harlow, contributing a number of co-written (with Harlow) and self-penned hits.

By 1973 it was clear Miranda had out-grown Orchestra Harlow, and he split, taking three Harlow sidemen (Frankie Rodríguez, conga; Joe Santiago, bass; and Nicky Marrero, timbales) with him to his own newly formed Orquesta Revelación. His debut with them, Así Se Compone Un Son (1973), was arguably his finest work. Revelación's personnel contained several future prominent salsa names, such as Marrero; Nelson González, tres guitar; and Oscar Hernández, piano. 'I was 18 years old and we recorded one album and worked our butts off for about one year,' recollected Hernández in New York Latino in 1991. 'We used to play five to eight gigs a week and it was a great group. And it consisted of the young bloods who were good musicians . . . We had a great rhythm section . . .' Problems arose in the band, so Miranda disbanded and relocated to Puerto Rico to work as a solo artist, though he continued to record in New York. During the following 12 years he released a dozen albums on Fania Records, notable were En Fa Menor (1974), which he co-produced; his 1976 reunion with Larry Harlow: Con Mi Viejo Amigo, and the collaborations with Willie Colón (Doble Energía, 1980) and Cuban musical institution Sonora Matancera (Sonora Matancera - Ismael Miranda, 1984). 1977's No Voy Al Festival was Miranda's first LP where he took sole charge of production. Several of Miranda's hit compositions attained classic status, such as 'Arsenio' from Orchestra Harlow's 1971 Tribute To Arsenio Rodríguez, co-written with Harlow; 'Pa Bravo Yo' written for Justo Betancourt's 1972 album of the same title (the song became Betancourt's trademark); and 'Así Se Compone Un Son', the title track of Miranda and Orquesta Revelación's 1973 debut album. He guested at the first New York Salsa Festival in 1975 (called Super Salsa 75) at Madison Square Garden; others on the bill included Tito Puente, Ray Barretto, Willie Colón with Héctor Lavoe, Típica 73, Cheo Feliciano, El Gran Combo, Johnny Ventura and La Lupe.

In 1984 Miranda produced and acted as musical director of Nelson González and his Orquesta Revelación on Feliz y Contento for the small Bernis Records label, with future salsa romántico star Alex D'Castro providing the lead vocals. Two years later he was backed by González and Revelación (with D'Castro in the chorus) on Una Nueva Vision, his last on Fania until the mid-90s. After his departure from Fania, Miranda briefly released albums on his own IM Records label, including Por El Buen Camino (1987) and the Christmas album La Mano Maestro (1989). As his waistline thickened with advancing middle age (chronicled by his album photographs), it seemed that the harder edge of his younger, leaner years diminished in direct proportion. He signed a short term contract with RMM Records and released the weak salsa romántica sets Hasta La Ultima Gota (1991) and Entre Sombras (1992). He returned to Fania for 1993's Enamorado De Ti.

Miranda was a founder member of the Fania All Stars and sang on 17 of their albums between 1968 and 1986, and appeared with them in the movies Our Latin Thing (Nuestra Cosa) (1972; which 'catapulted this young lion even higher in the eyes of the public,' wrote Izzy Sanabria in his liner note to Así Se Compone Un Son), Live In Africa (1974) and Salsa (1976). In 1994 he participated in the three city (San Juan, Miami and New York) reunion of the Fania All Stars to mark the 30th anniversary of the Fania label. His rendition of his self-penned 'Borinquen Tiene Montuno' (originally recorded for En Fa Menor, 1974) was reportedly one of the highlights of the tour. He sang on Tito Puente's second tribute album to Beny Moré (1979) and the same bandleader's Grammy Award nominated The Mambo King: 100th LP (1991). In 1993 young salsa romántica heart-throb Rey Ruiz (b. 21 June 1966, Havana, Cuba; he defected while with the Cuban Tropicana cabaret when they were visiting the Dominican Republic in 1991) interpreted Miranda's 'Así Se Compone Un Son' on Los Soneros De Hoy Tributo A Los Soneros (Today's Soneros Pay Tribute To The Soneros). Miranda's contribution to the hip Puerto Rican all-star Latin jam session double CD Descarga Boricua (1993) helped absolve him for his flabby, undistinguished albums of the early 90s.

● ALBUMS: with Orchestra Harlow El Exigente (1967)★★★, Orchestra Harlow Presenta a Ismael Miranda (1968)★★★★, Me And My Monkey - 'Mi Mono y Yo' (1969)★★★, Electric Harlow (1970)★★★★, Abran Paso! (1971)★★★, Tribute To Arsenio Rodríguez (1971)★★★★, La Oportunidad (1972)★★★; with Orquesta Revelación Así Se Compone Un Son (1973)★★★, En Fa Menor (1974)★★★, Este Es...Ismael Miranda (1975)★★★; with Orchestra Harlow Con Mi Viejo Amigo (1976)★★★★, No Voy Al Festival (1977)★★★, Sabor, Sentimiento y Pueblo (1978)★★★; with Willie Colón Doble Energía (1980)★★★, La Clave del Sabor (1981)★★★★, Exitos De Los 50 (1982)★★★, The Master (1983)★★★★; with Sonora Matancera Sonora Matancera - Ismael Miranda (1984)★★★, Exitos De Los 50, Vol. II (1985)★★★; with Orquesta Revelación Una Nueva Vision (1986)★★★, Por El Buen Camino (1987)★★★; three Christmas albums Motivos De Mi Tierra (1987)★★, Felicitándote (1988)★★, La Mano Maestro (1989)★★; Hasta La Ultima Gota (1991)★★★, Entre Sombras (1992)★★★, Enamorado De Ti (1993)★★★.

- COMPILATIONS: with Orchestra Harlow Harlow's Harem (1971)★★★★, The Best Of Orchestra Harlow & Ismael Miranda (1976)★★★★; solo El Compositor Que Canta (1978)★★★★.

Miro

Leading lights of the late UK 80s acoustic music revival, Miro reflected pastoral traditions with a string section, guitars and Nick Drake-influenced songs, composed by the leader, Roddy Harris. The press were fond of using phrases such as 'Music for a Kensington bedsit' to describe their appeal.

- ALBUMS: Angel N.1. (1990)★★★.

Mirrors

The Mirrors were one of the pivotal acts of the punk/new wave scene centred on Cleveland, Ohio, USA. Contemporaries of Rocket From The Tombs and the Electric Eels, the Mirrors appeared alongside both groups at the 'Special Extermination Night' in December 1974, the launch-pad for Cleveland's 'alternative' music. Jamie Klimek (vocals/ guitar), Jim Crook (lead guitar/vocals), Craig Bell (bass) and Michael Weldon (drums) formed the original line-up. In January 1975 Bell joined Rocket From The Tombs and was replaced by Jim Jones. At the same time Paul Marotta (keyboards) left the Electric Eels to join the Mirrors. Dissatisfaction over musical direction led to the Mirrors' break up in August 1975. Kimeck and Marotta later formed the Styrenes. In 1977 a Mirrors' single, 'Shirley'/'She Smiled Wild', was issued on Pere Ubu's label, Hearthan records.

Misery Loves Co.

Originally formed as a duo in January 1993, Swedish group Misery Loves Co. immediately attracted positive press coverage for their blend of intelligent 90s metal and strong songwriting. Kerrang! magazine led the chorus of approval, nominating them as 'the hottest new metal combo since the arrival of Machine Head'. Comprising Örjan Örnkloo (programming, guitar) and Patrik Wirén (vocals, guitar), the latter was formerly a member of thrash band Midas Touch (who recorded one album for Noise Records), while his partner played in the female dance band the Bikinis as well as collaborating with Graham Lewis of Wire. Electing to work together as a duo, they signed a Swedish contract with the MNW Zone label (also home to Clawfinger). They made their debut appearance on a compilation album, Extreme Close Up, before the release of a three-track EP, Private Hell, in January 1994. Their debut album was licensed to Earache Records in the UK, while live appearances saw the duo augmented by the addition of Jim Edwards (guitar), Marre (bass) and Boss (drums). By the time the group entered the studio for sessions for a second album they had become permanent members of the band. In the interim they released the Happy EP, which showed them cross-fertilizing standard industrial metal with techno and dance elements, including a CD-ROM track, claimed to be the first issued by a metal band.

- ALBUMS: Misery Love Co. (MNW Zone 1994/Earache 1995)★★★, Not Like Them (Earache 1997)★★★.

Misex

Formed in New Zealand in 1977. The group comprised Steve Gilpin (d. January 1991; lead vocals), Don Martin (bass), Murray Burns (keyboards), Kevin Stanton (guitar) and Richard Hodgkinson (drums). Misex originally played cover versions of UK new-wave material, and during the group's history borrowed heavily from Elvis Costello, Mink Deville and Graham Parker, as well as cultivating an electro-pop image. They relocated to Australia in 1978 and toughened up their sound. They toured incessantly and by 1979, despite attracting derision from their contemporaries for their image, Misex were one of Australia's top live acts. Like Mother Goose, another New Zealand band, Misex had success with a novelty single 'Computer Games', which featured Gilpin's hiccuping styled vocals. Paul Dunningham replaced Hodgkinson in 1981. Their follow-up singles also charted well, but by the time the band had produced their most mature and strongest work, Where Do They Go, their following faded. They toured the USA twice, but without record company support, which set the band's back financially. By 1984, after several changes to personnel the band broke up. Steve Gilpin died in January 1991.

- ALBUMS: Graffiti Crimes (1979)★★★, Shanghaied (1981)★★★, Space Race (1980)★★★, Where Do They Go (1983)★★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Misex Greatest Hits (1984)★★★.

Misfits

Like the Thirteenth Floor Elevators in the 60s and the New York Dolls in the early 70s, this US punk band was swiftly surrounded in a cloak of mythology and cult appeal. Long after their demise (they played their last live gig in 1983), their obscure US-only records were fetching large sums of money in collecting circles, among those fascinated by the band's spine-chilling mix of horror-movie imagery and hardcore. The Misfits were formed in New Jersey, New York, in 1977 by Gerry Only (bass) and Glenn Danzig (b. 23 June 1959, Lodi, New Jersey, USA; vocals) and, like many aspiring new wave acts, played in venues such as CBGB's, adding guitarist Bobby Steele and drummer Joey Image. Later that year, 'Cough Cool' became their first single on their own Plan 9 label. A four-track EP, Bullet (in a sleeve showing John F. Kennedy's assassination), was recorded before their debut album, and was followed by 'Horror Business'. A third single, 'Night Of The Living Dead', surfaced in 1979, the reference to the classic George A. Romero film revealing the Misfits' continued fascination with blood-and-guts horror. Then came an EP, Three Hits From Hell, recorded in 1980, but not issued until the following April, and a seasonal October single, 'Halloween'. Having lost Steele to the Undead, replaced by Jerry's brother Doyle, Googy (aka Eerie Von) stepped in on drums during a European tour with the Damned as Image's narcotic problems worsened. The Misfits rounded off 1981 by recording the seven-track mini-album Evilive, originally sold through the band's Fiend fan club, which also secured a German 12-inch release. The band's only original UK release was a 12-inch EP, Beware. Other Misfits releases included several patchy albums that failed to capture their live impact: 1982's Walk Among Us, Earth A.D. (aka Wolfblood) and the posthumous brace, Legacy Of Brutality and Misfits. Danzig issued his first solo single in 1981, 'Who Killed Marilyn?', later forming Samhain with Misfits drummer Eerie Von. He was subsequently venerated in heavy metal magazines in the late 80s as his eponymous Danzig vehicle gained ground. The other Misfits mainstays, brothers Jerry and Doyle, formed the hapless Kryst The Conqueror, who released one five-song EP with the help of Skid Row guitarist David Sabo. An ambitious 4-CD set was issued in 1996 in the shape of a coffin, and the following year the band re-formed, minus Danzig, releasing an album for Geffen Records.

- ALBUMS: Beware EP (Cherry Red 1979)★★★, Walk Among Us (Ruby 1982)★★★, Evilive EP (Plan 9 1982)★★★, Earth A.D./Wolfsblood (Plan 9 1983)★★★, American Psycho (Geffen 1997)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Legacy Of Brutality (Plan 9 1985)★★★, The Misfits (Plan 9 1986)★★★★, Evilive expanded version of 1981 mini-album (Plan 9 1987)★★★, The Misfits 4-CD box set (Caroline 1996)★★★★, Static Age (Caroline 1997).

Misiani, Daniel

(see Shirati Jazz)

Misora, Hibari

b. Kazue Katô, 29 May 1937, Yokohama, Kanagawa, Japan. d. 1989. Katô began singing professionally at the age of nine at the Athens Theatre in Yokohama, and was given her stage name in 1948. 'Hibari' means a skylark and 'Misora', fair sky. After being refused by three record companies on the grounds that her performance sounded overtly pert and precocious, she was finally signed by Columbia in 1949, when her single 'Kanashiki Kuchibue' ('Plaintive Whistle'), a theme song for a film with the same title, was a Japanese hit. It was followed by more hits, including 'Tokyo Kid' and 'Watashiwa Machino Ko' ('I'm A City Girl') which gave encouragement to the defeated post-war Japanese, as did the film performances of this teen star singing grown-up songs. As well as her numerous chart successes, she also won many awards, and her stardom never waned until her death.

She was undisputably the all-time queen of kayôkyoku (formerly the most common and typically Japanese form of popular song). Some critics regret, however, that her versatile talent was prevented from fully developing by commercial manipulation; she was, for example, flexible enough to deal adeptly with American musical styles, as shown in her earlier recordings.

- ALBUMS: Kakureta Meikyokushû (Hidden Treasures) (1987)★★★, Jazzwo Utau (Sings Jazz) (1988)★★★★, Eiga Shudaida-shû, 2 Volumes (Themes Songs Of Motion Pictures) (1989)★★★★, Dôyôwu Utau (Sings Children's Songs) (1989)★★, Min'yô Wo Utau (Sings Folksongs) (1989)★★, Hauta Wo Utau (Sings Hauta) (1989)★★★, Jazz And Standards (1990)★★★, Hizô! Maboroshi No Mihatsubai Kyokushû (Treasury!: Previously Unreleased Songs) (1990)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Zenkyokushû (Complete Works) (1986)★★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Misora Hibari, Rô Takenaka. Misora Hibari, Eiji Oshita.

Misplaced Childhood - Marillion

Marillion were at the forefront of the brief progressive rock revival of the 80s, and as such had to endure constant critical carping about their similarities to Genesis. Led at this stage of their career by Fish, they reached a creative and commercial peak with this 1985 release, a concept album based loosely around the singer's childhood. What saved the album from empty bombast was Marillion's sudden emergence as a skilled and melodic rock group, exemplified by the UK hit single 'Kayleigh'. While nothing else on the album was quite able to match this song, the rest is still worthy of re-investigation.

- Tracks: Pseudo Silk Kimono; Kayleigh; Lavender; Bitter Suite; Heart Of Lothian; Waterhole (Expresso Bongo); Lords Of The Backstage; Blind Curve; Childhoods End?; White Feather.
- First released 1985
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 47

Miss America - Mary Margaret O'Hara

Sounding like a cross between Laurie Anderson (on the low notes) and Dolores from the Cranberries (on the high notes), Mary Margaret O'Hara is yet another troubadour with something to say. Miss America was recorded in 1988 and is now something of a cult item. O'Hara exhorts her romantic frustrations through some pretty powerful lyrics: 'There is but one love, but one love won't do' (on 'When You Know Why You're Happy') and 'I miss you and you give me something to cry about' ('To Cry About') should keep the tears flowing in bedsits across the land. A translucent album.

- Tracks: To Cry About; Year In Song; Body's In Trouble; Dear Darling; A New Day; When You Know Why You're Happy; My Friends Have; Help Me Lift You Up; Keeping You In Mind; Not Be Alright; You Will Be Loved Again.
- First released 1988
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Miss Hook Of Holland

One of the most popular London musicals in the early part of the century, this show was sub-titled a 'Dutch musical incident in two acts', when it opened at the Prince of Wales Theatre in London on 31 January 1907. The score was the work of Paul Rubens who had enjoyed great success five years earlier with A Country Girl. Rubens collaborated with Austen Hurgon on the book which concerns Mr. Hook (G.P. Huntley), a liqueur distiller in Amsterdam. His daughter, Sally (Isabel Jay) boosts the company's sales by inventing a liqueur made of 61 different ingredients, which she calls 'Cream In The Sky'. However, the important recipe is stolen and passed from hand to hand during a romantic, but sometimes bewildering plot, before it is returned to Hook's safe. None of the songs endured, but there were several pleasant numbers including 'Little Miss Wooden Shoes', 'The Sleepy Canal', 'A Little Pink Petty From Peter', 'Tra-La-La', 'The House That Hook Built', and 'Cream Of The Sky'. An excellent London run of 462 performances was followed by a further 119 at the Criterion Theatre in New York in 1907. In the same year the show was presented in Vienna, and there were London revivals in 1914 and 1932.

Miss Liberty

Three years after his biggest success with Annie Get Your Gun in 1946, Irving Berlin came up with the score for this show, which, on the face of it, had all the right credentials: a book by Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright Robert E. Sherwood, choreography by Jerome Robbins, direction by Moss Hart, and, of course, music and lyrics by Berlin himself. It opened at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 15 July 1949, with Sherwood's cosy, patriotic story set in New York and Paris in 1885. The plot tells of how Horace Miller (Eddie Albert), an inept newpaper photographer, travels to France to find the model who posed for the Statue Of Liberty. He returns with the wrong one, and all sorts of complications have to be overcome before everyone gathers at the statue's dedication ceremony to sing 'Give Me Your Tired, Your Poor', Berlin's musical adaptation of the poem by Emma Lazarus. Monique Dupont, played by the accomplished ballerina, Allyn McLerie, was the lady that Horace fell for in Paris and took back with him to America, only to find that, waiting for him there was his girlfriend, Maisie Dell (Mary McCarty). Berlin's score contained two songs that became popular: 'Let's Take An Old Fashioned Walk' was a big hit for Perry Como, and for Doris Day with Frank Sinatra; and both Como and Jo Stafford took 'Just One Way To Say I Love You' into the US Hit Parade. The rest of the numbers included 'Little Fish In A Big Pond', 'I'd Like My Picture Took', 'Homework', 'Falling Out Of Love Can Be Fun', 'Paris Wakes Up And Smiles', 'Only For Americans', and 'You Can Have Him', an untypical ballad containing 'truth and sarcasm, and dedicated to the "other woman"' - ('You can have him/I don't want him/He's not worth fighting for/Besides, there's plenty more where he came from'), which received a sophisticated reading on the 1965 abum The Nancy Wilson Show! Despite its virtues, and its patriotic theme, Miss Liberty did not start any parades, and closed after 308 performances.

Miss London Ltd.

Released by Gainsborough Pictures in 1943, this comedy-musical is a typical example of the cheery, tuneful fare British cinema audiences flocked to see during the dark war years. It starred Arthur 'Hallo Playmates!' Askey, one of the country's most popular funny-men. He played Arthur Bowman, the manager of the Miss London Ltd. escort agency which is visited by its attractive American owner, Terry Arden (Evelyn Dall). The business needs a shake-up, and Arthur goes on a recruitment drive and comes up with railway station announcer Gail Martin (Anne Shelton). The ensuing complications involve some of Britain's top comedy talent, such as Jack Train as Arthur's right-hand man, Max Bacon as an hilariously coy head waiter, and Richard Hearne, who plays a jitterbugging commodore in the Navy, the service into which Arthur himself is being co-opted (by another fine comic actor, Ronald Shiner) when the closing titles roll. Other parts were taken by Peter Graves and Jean Kent. Manning Sherwin and Val Guest, wrote the songs, and Evelyn Dall had one of the film's best musical moments with the punchy 'Keep Cool, Calm - And Collect!'. She also joined Askey for the lively 'It's A Fine How-Do-You-Do'. Anne Shelton, who had the distinction of singing with the Glenn Miller Orchestra during the war, was splendid on 'If You Could Only Cook', 'You Too (Can Have a Lovely Romance)', and 'The Eight Fifty Choo Choo'. Val Guest and Marriott Edgar wrote the screenplay, and Guest also directed. The producer was Edward Black.

Miss Saigon

A re-working of Puccini's enduring Madame Butterfly as a Vietnam war tale, set in Saigon during the last days of the American presence there in 1975. The music was by Claude-Michel Schönberg, with lyrics by Richard Maltby Jnr. and Alain Boublil (adapted from the original French lyrics by Boublil) with additional material by Maltby. Miss Saigon opened at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane in London on 20 September 1989. The dramatic story concerns a young marine, Chris (Simon Bowman), who falls in love with a would-be prostitute Kim (Lea Salonga). However, partly owing to the chaotic troop evacuation (aided by a stunning helicopter effect), he goes back to America without her. As with Puccini, the wartime liaison ends in tragedy, with the soldier returning to Saigon only to find the girl has commited suicide. The show was hailed as being 'savagely objective . . . a critical shot at the destabilizing and corrupting American role in Vietnam . . . more than a mature musical, a tough popular opera, clear-headed but romantic, warm as well as sordid and brutal'. Jonathan Pryce played the central role of the Engineer, the cynical and ruthless owner of the sleazy Dreamland Bar, and he had the show's big number, 'The American Dream', a savage attack on US commercialism.

The remainder of a score containing some 24 songs, with lyrics that were 'sharp, hard-hitting, elegantly but bitterly sardonic', included 'The Heat Is On In Saigon', 'The Movie In My Mind', 'Why God, Why?', 'The Last Night Of The World', 'You Will Not Touch Him', 'I'd Give My Life For You', 'Sun And Moon', 'Now That I've Seen Her', and 'The Sacred Bird'. Jonathan Pryce and Lea Salonga both won Laurence Olivier Awards for their outstanding performances, and Miss Saigon was widely acclaimed, and settled in for a long stay. The Broadway transfer was in doubt for some time when American Equity banned Pryce from reprising his role because 'it would be an affront to the Asian community'. When producer Cameron Mackintosh reportedly threatened to cancel the production, they relented, and, after opening in April 1991, the show recouped its $10.9 million investment in 39 weeks. Tony Awards went to Pryce, Salonga, and featured actor (Hinton Battle).

Since then, Miss Saigon has been successfully presented in many countries throughout the world, including Stuttgart and Toronto, where new theatres were designed specifically to house the German and Canadian productions. In December 1994, when Miss Saigon became the Theatre Royal's longest-running musical, eclipsing the 2,281-performance record set by My Fair Lady, it was estimated that the show had taken over £65 million at the London box office, and more than £400 million worldwide.

● FURTHER READING: The Story Of Miss Saigon, Edward Behr and Mark Steyn.

Missing Persons

Missing Persons consisted of Dale Bozzio (vocals), her husband Terry Bozzio (drums/keyboards; formerly of the Frank Zappa band and U.K.), Warren Cuccurullo (guitar) and Patrick O'Hearn (bass/keyboards), both also veterans of earlier Zappa formations. Outwardly bearing an image of space age sexuality they produced a radio-friendly power pop sound. They released a debut EP, having changed name from U.S. Drag, after which they signed to Capitol Records who re-released the EP with extra tracks as the Missing Persons mini-album. Their debut album, the anagramatical Spring Session M, brought Dale Bozzio's vocals to the fore, and managed to sound simultaneously playful and world-weary. The musical backing anticipated the synthesizer-led groups of the mid to late 80s, but the lyrics were largely in advance of anything those groups were using. Rhyme & Reason perfected the formula, igniting typical rock 'n' roll topics such as 'Surrender Your Heart' with an appealing subtext of intrigue and disaffection. For Color In Your Life, the band changed tack. Bernard Edwards (of Chic) took over the producer's role, and the addition of horns and funk rhythms did little to extend their appeal, and in many ways neutered it. An obvious attempt to make Missing Persons a credible dance pop band, the results were passable but disappointing given their previous work. The band broke up in consequence (the Bozzios having already done so on a personal level), leaving Cuccurullo to join Duran Duran and Dale to sign a solo contract with Prince's Paisley Park imprint. O'Hearn went on to record well-received instrumental albums for Private Music.

● ALBUMS: Missing Persons mini album (Capitol 1982),★★★ Spring Session M (Capitol 1982)★★★, Rhyme & Reason (Capitol 1984)★★★★ Color In Your Life (Capitol 1986)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Missing Persons (Capitol 1987).★★★ Dale Bozzio solo: As Dale: Riot In English (Paisley Park 1988)★★★.

Mission

This UK rock band evolved from the Sisters Of Mercy, when Wayne Hussey (b. 26 May 1959, Bristol, England; ex-Walkie Talkies; Dead Or Alive) and Craig Adams split from Andrew Eldritch. They quickly recruited drummer Mick Brown (ex-Red Lorry, Yellow Lorry) and guitarist Simon Hinkler (ex-Artery). The original choice of title was the Sisterhood, which led to an undignified series of exchanges in the press between the band and Eldritch. In order to negate their use of the name, Eldritch put out a single under the name Sisterhood on his own Merciful Release label. Thus, the name the Mission was selected instead. After two successful independent singles on the Chapter 22 label, they signed to Mercury Records in the autumn of 1986. Their major label debut, 'Stay With Me', entered the UK singles charts while the band worked on their debut album. God's Own Medicine was the outcome, revealing a tendency towards straightforward rock, and attracting criticism for its bombast. A heavy touring schedule ensued, with the band's offstage antics attracting at least as much attention as their performances. A particularly indulgent tour of America saw Adams shipped home suffering from exhaustion. His temporary replacement on bass was Pete Turner. After headlining the Reading Festival, they began work on a new album under the auspices of Led Zeppelin bass player John Paul Jones as producer. Children was even more successful than its predecessor, reaching number 2 in the UK album charts, despite the customary critical disdain. 1990 brought 'Butterfly On A Wheel' as a single, providing further ammunition for accusations that the band were simply dredging up rock history. In February, the long-delayed third album, Carved In Sand, was released, revealing a more sophisticated approach to songwriting. During the world tour to promote the album, both Hinkler and Hussey became ill because of the excessive regime. Hinkler departed suddenly when they reached Toronto, leaving Dave Wolfenden to provide guitar for the rest of the tour. On their return, Paul Etchells took over the position on a more permanent basis. Hussey had meanwhile joined with the Wonder Stuff in proposing a fund-raising concert in London under the banner The Day Of Conscience, but the event selfdestructed with a barrage of allegations about commercial intrusion. In a similar vein over the Christmas period, members of the band joined with Slade's Noddy Holder and Jim Lea to re-record 'Merry Xmas Everybody' for charity. However, 1992 brought numerous further personnel difficulties. Craig Adams returned to Brighton, while Hussey brought in Andy Hobson (bass), Rik Carter (keyboards) and Mark Gemini Thwaite (guitar). A reflective Hussey, promoting the Sum And Substance compilation, conceded: 'We had an overblown sense of melodrama. It was great - pompous songs, big grand statements. We've never attempted to do anything that's innovative'.

- ALBUMS: God's Own Medicine (Mercury 1986)★★, Children (Mercury 1988)★★★, Carved In Sand (Mercury 1990)★★★, Masque (Mercury 1992)★★, Neverland (Neverland 1995)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The First Chapter (Mercury 1987)★★, Grains Of Sand (Mercury 1990)★★, Sum And Substance (Vertigo 1994)★★★, Salad Daze (Nighttracks 1994)★★, Blue (Equator 1996)★★.
- VIDEOS: From Dusk To Dawn (Polygram Music Video 1988), South America (Mish Productions 1989), Crusade (Channel 5 1991), Waves Upon The Sand (Channel 5 1991), Sum And Substance (1994).
- FURTHER READING: The Mission - Names Are Tombstones Baby, Martin Roach with Neil Perry.

Mission Of Burma

Once cited as 'the ultimate collision of punk and pop', Boston, Massachusetts band Mission Of Burma were compared by others to the UK's art terrorists Wire. Certainly they invoked a similar level of rapture among US critics and, much like Wire, self-consciously avoided the glare of the mainstream. The original line-up of Clint Conley (bass), Peter Prescott (drums), and Roger Miller (guitar) were greatly influential for a number of more commercially viable outfits. They formed in 1979, when Miller and Conley moved to Boston from Ann Arbor and New York, respectively. They briefly put together Moving Parts before joining with resident Bostonian Prescott. Burma kicked off with supports for the UK's Gang Of Four. These went well and the Leeds funksters continued to sponsor them early in their development. They would split in 1985 after a career that embraced well-defined but chaotic live and recorded work. Through a series of reissues on the venerated underground label, Taang! Records, critics have now reassessed their historical importance. Among their staunchest admirers are R.E.M., who regularly covered 'Academy Flight Song' in their live sets. Prescott went on to SST artists Volcano Suns.

- ALBUMS: Signals, Calls, And Marches EP (Ace Of Hearts 1981)★★★, Vs (Ace Of Hearts 1982)★★★★, The Horrible Truth About Burma (Ace Of Hearts 1985)★★★, Forget (Taang! 1987)★★★, Let There Be Burma (Taang! 1990)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Mission Of Burma (Rykodisc 1988)★★★★.

Mississippi Mass Choir

This gospel choir was formed in 1988 by Frank Williams who was a member of the Jackson Southernaires and an executive of the gospel division of Malaco Records. The choir signed immediately to Malaco under the musical directorship of David R Curry. Serving God Through Song is the motto of the choir. The group's first rehearsal was in 1988 followed by the release of their first CD and video, The Mississippi Mass Choir Live, recorded before an audience of 3,000 at the Jackson Municipal Auditorium. This release reached number 1 on the Billboard gospel chart and remained there for 45 consecutive weeks, setting a new record. In 1990 they released their second live project, God Gets The Glory, which again reached number 1 in the Billboard gospel chart and was named 1992 Gospel Record Of The Year by Billboard. Their third release in January 1993 was It Remains To be Seen and has been number 1 in the gospel charts for over one year and by the mid-90s spent 2 years in the charts. This release featured the last recorded performance of the choirs founder, Frank Williams who died in March 1993. In 1995 they released Live At Jackson State University with the Rev. James Moore .

- ALBUMS: Live At Jackson, Mississippi (Malaco)★★★, God Gets The Glory (Malaco)★★★★, Live With Rev. James Moore (Malaco)★★★, Rev. James Moore With Mississippi Mass Choir-Live At Jackson State University (Malaco)★★, It Remains To Be Seen (Malaco 1995)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Malaco 1995)★★★★.

Mississippi Sheiks

This musical combination flourished between 1930 and 1935, during which time they recorded more than 80 tracks for various 'race' labels. The Sheiks was a string band made up of members and friends of the Chatman family, and included Lonnie Chatman (guitar, violin), Sam Chatman (guitar), Walter Vincson (guitar, violin), Bo (Carter) Chatman (guitar), and Charlie McCoy (banjo, mandolin). Vocal chores were handled by all the members. Most of these individuals pursued independent musical careers either at this time or later. The instrumental abilities of all members were extremely high and their repertoire covered all ground between popular waltzes to salacious party songs, with a fair quantity of high-quality blues thrown in. Their work also appeared under the names the Mississippi Mud Steppers, the Down South Boys and the Carter Brothers.

- COMPILATIONS: Sitting On Top Of The World (1972)★★★, Stop And Listen Blues (1973)★★★, The Mississippi Sheiks (1984)★★★.

Missourians

In the early 20s, St. Louis-based violinist Wilson Robinson formed a band which he named the Syncopaters. By 1924, the band was in New York and, now directed by another violinist, they were engaged as the house band at the Cotton Club. Incorporating the club's name in its title, the band was known as Andy Preer And His Cotton Club Orchestra. When the band was replaced at the club by Duke Ellington, Preer's group changed its name yet again, this time calling itself the Missourians. After Preer's death, the band secured another prestigious New York engagement, this time at the Savoy Ballroom under the leadership of George Scott. The band retained a good measure of popularity with dancers at the Savoy, playing with a propulsive, free-flowing swing that reflected its now-distant Midwestern origins. Early in 1930, the band backed singer Cab Calloway on record dates, and soon thereafter became his permanent band, changing their name to the Cab Calloway Orchestra. In its early years at the Cotton Club, the band did much to foster the type of music which was associated with that venue and which Ellington later refined. The band had a number of fine soloists, among them trumpeter R. Q. Dickerson, whose use of the plunger mute helped to establish the so-called 'jungle' music with which the Cotton Club show bands were associated.

● COMPILATIONS: The Missourians (1929-30 recordings)★★★.

Mister Rock And Roll

US DJ Alan Freed was a pivotal figure in the development of 50s rock 'n' roll. His radio programmes helped to expose the emergent music to a generation of teenagers and he later showcased many acts live in revue-styled concerts. A cavalcade of performers populated the films with which Freed was involved, including Rock Around The Clock and Rock Rock Rock, a premise equally prevalent on this 1957 feature. Mister Rock And Roll boasted a plot wherein Freed pondered why the record industry had hit a slump. Salvation arrived in the shape of R&B, but Freed must first incur parental wrath, before trying to convert his denigrators. 'Young people. Show your parents how exciting your music is. Take them to see this picture,' ran the publicity blurb for a film showcasing Little Richard, Chuck Berry, Frankie Lymon, LaVern Baker and the Moonglows. Each performance was meritorious in itself, inspiring continued interest in the feature, but the notion of grafting memorable performances to witless plots was already undermining the true potential of celluloid pop.

Misty In Roots

Misty In Roots are one of Britain's foremost roots reggae groups, fronted by brothers Walford (lead vocals) and Delvin Tyson (rhythm guitar, vocals), with other regular members including Delbert McKay (guitar, vocals), Chesley Samson (lead guitar), Tony Henry (bass) and Dennis Augustine (rhythm guitar), who took over Delvin's role on the instrument when he elected to concentrate on vocal duties. Samson was replaced by Lorrance Crossfield in 1983, though this represented the most serious of numerous line-up revisions. Through eight John Peel Radio 1 sessions (he numbered them among his favourite groups for several years in the early 80s) they exhibited radically different line-ups for each, happily adding and subtracting musicians and vocalists as the occasion demanded. The band originated in Southall, Middlesex, where they formed in 1974, backing Jamaican singer Nicky Thomas on his British tour a year later. From early on, their commercial brand of reggae attracted supporters, but they relinquished the opportunity of signing to a major in order to set up their own People Unite label. On successive releases they honed a crafted, pleasing sound that would later see them become the first band in the reggae idiom invited to play in Russia. They were also heavily involved in the Rock Against Racism movement, playing alongside punk bands such as 999 and the Ruts. The fact that their staunch Rastafarian views were aired regularly on Radio 1 via Peel served to strengthen links between the two musical camps. Their Rasta beliefs were reinforced in the 80s by playing shows in their spiritual homeland of Africa. In 1987 the band toured West Africa, but the euphoria was marred when Delvyn Tyson drowned in a swinning accident. Alongside Steel Pulse and Aswad, Misty In Roots rank as the most important UK reggae band of their generation.

● ALBUMS: Live At The Counter-Eurovision (People Unite 1979)★★, Wise And Foolish (People Unite 1981)★★★★, Earth (People Unite 1983)★★★★, Musi O Tunya (People Unite 1985)★★★, Forward (Kaz 1989)★★★.

Misunderstood

One of psychedelia's finest groups, the Misunderstood originated in Riverside, California, USA, and evolved from a local surfing group, the Blue Notes. Their first line-up - Greg Treadway (guitar), George Phelps (guitar) and Rick Moe (drums) - was augmented by Rick Brown (vocals) and Steve Whiting (bass), before adopting their new name in 1965. Phelps was then replaced by Glenn Ross 'Fernando' Campbell, who played steel guitar. The quintet completed a single, 'You Don't Have To Go'/'Who's Been Talking?', before leaving for the UK on the suggestion of disc jockey John (Peel) Ravenscroft, then working in San Bernadino. Treadway was subsequently drafted, and his place was taken by Tony Hill (b. South Shields, Co. Durham, England). The group completed six masters during their London sojourn. 'I Can Take You To The Sun', a hypnotic, atmospheric and ambitious performance, was their only contemporary release, although the rousing 'Children Of The Sun' was issued after their break-up, in 1968. Campbell later re-established the name with several British musicians. Their two blues-cum-progressive singles shared little with the early, trail-blazing unit, and the latter-day version then evolved into Juicy Lucy.

● COMPILATIONS: Before The Dream Faded (1982)★★, Golden Glass (1984)★★.

Mitchell, Billy

b. 3 November 1926, Kansas City, Missouri, USA. Mitchell studied in Detroit and played tenor saxophone with Nat Towles's band in the late 40s before moving to New York with Lucky Millinder's Orchestra. He spent a couple of months in Woody Herman's Second Herd, and then lead his own bop quintet back in Detroit, which included Thad Jones on trumpet and Elvin Jones on drums (1950-53). In the mid-50s, after a couple of years with Dizzy Gillespie, he recorded with Ray Charles and joined Count Basie's Orchestra. He co-led a sextet with ex-Basie trombonist Al Grey, and worked as musical director for Stevie Wonder in the mid-60s, before rejoining Basie (1966-67). He uses a tough, bluesy tone to construct fluent solo lines. In the 70s Mitchell settled in New York and undertook studio work, as well as teaching and performing with the Xanadu All Stars.

● ALBUMS: with Ray Charles Soul Brothers (1957)★★★, with Count Basie One More Time (1958)★★★★, Al Grey With Billy Mitchell (1961)★★★, Little Juicy (1963)★★★, with Xanadu Xanadu At Montreux (1978)★★, with Paul Lingle Vintage Piano Vol 3 (Euphonic 1979)★★, De Lawd's Blues (1980)★★★, Faces (Optimism 1987)★★★, In Focus (Optimism 1989)★★★.

Mitchell, Blue

b. Richard Allen Mitchell, 13 March 1930, Miami, Florida, USA, d. 21 May 1979. Mitchell's early professional career found him playing trumpet in a number of R&B bands, including that led in the mid-50s by Earl Bostic. Later in the decade he worked briefly with Cannonball Adderley in New York, and then joined Horace Silver's band, an engagement which established Mitchell's reputation. When Silver disbanded in 1963, Mitchell formed his own group, employing most of his fellow musicians, with Silver's place being taken by Chick Corea. This band continued until the end of the decade, at which time Mitchell joined the band that was backing Ray Charles. During the early 70s, Mitchell played with a number of artists in fields outside jazz, notably bluesman John Mayall and popular singers such as Tony Bennett and Lena Horne. Resident in Los Angeles from the mid-70s, Mitchell played in both small and big bands, including those led by Harold Land, Louie Bellson and Bill Berry. A gifted, soulful player with a full, rich tone, Mitchell's frequent excursions into areas of music outside jazz never caused him to lower his standards. Indeed, he enhanced every record date, concert or club engagement on which he played with the sincerity of his playing and the beautiful sound he drew from his instrument.

● ALBUMS: Big Six (Original Jazz Classics 1958)★★★★, with Horace Silver Finger Poppin' (1959)★★★★, Out Of The Blue (Original Jazz Classics 1959)★★★★, Blue Soul (Original Jazz Classics 1959)★★★★, with Silver Horace-Scope (1960)★★★, Blues On My Mind (Original Jazz Classics 1960)★★★, Blue Moods (1960)★★★, Smooth As The Wind (1960)★★★, A Sure Thing (1962)★★★, The Cup Bearers (Original Jazz Classics 1963)★★★★, Step Lightly (1963)★★, The Thing To Do (Blue Note 1964)★★★, Down With It (1965)★★, Bring It Home To Me (1966)★★★, Boss Horn (1966)★★★, Heads Up! (1967)★★, Collisons In Black (1968)★★★, Bantu Village (1969)★★, Blue Mitchell (1971)★★★, Vital Blue (1971)★★★, with John Mayall Jazz Blues Fusion (1971)★★★, Blue's Blues (1974)★★★, Graffiti Blues (Audio Fidelity 1974)★★, Many Shades Of Blue (1974)★★, with Bill Berry Hot & Happy (1974)★★★★, Stratosonic Nuances (1975)★★★, Funktion Junction (1976)★★★, with Berry Hello Rev (1976)★★★, with Dexter Gordon, Al Cohn True Blue (1976)★★★, with Harold Land Mapenzi (1977)★★★, with Land Best Of The West (1977)★★★, Last Dance (1977)★★, African Violet (1977)★★, Summer Soft (1977)★★★.

Mitchell, Bobby

b. 16 August 1935, Algiers, Louisiana, USA, d. 17 March 1989, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. After studying music in high school, Mitchell formed a vocal group, the Toppers, in June 1950. The group comprised various high school friends and they entered local talent shows. After being discovered by Dave Bartholomew in 1952, the group began recording for Imperial until they split up in 1955 upon graduation, leading Mitchell to a solo career and his biggest hit the following year, 'Try Rock And Roll'. This reached number 14 on Billboard's R&B chart - although he is probably better known as the originator of 'I'm Gonna Be A Wheel Someday' which was later covered by Fats Domino. Leaving Imperial in 1958, he recorded infrequently for small local labels such as Ronn, Sho-Biz and Rip, and by the late 60s, he was working outside the music business.

● COMPILATIONS: I'm Gonna Be A Wheel Someday (Mr R&B 1987)★★★.

Mitchell, Chad, Trio

Chad Mitchell, Mike Kobluk and Mike Pugh were students at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Washington, USA, when they formed this influential folk group in 1958. They then crossed America, performing when able, before arriving in New York to secure a recording deal. The following year, Pugh dropped out in favour of Joe Frazier, while the Trio's accompanist, Dennis Collins, was replaced by guitarist Roger McGuinn, who later found fame with the Byrds. The group then embarked on their most successful era, when they became renowned for songs of a satirical or socially-conscious nature. Chad Mitchell left for a solo career in 1965. He was replaced by aspiring songwriter John Denver, but the restructured act, now known as the Mitchell Trio, found it difficult to sustain momentum. Frazier and Kobluk also left the group, which was then sued by its former leader for continuing to use the 'original' name. The trio then became known as Denver, Boise And Johnson, but split up in 1969 when first Johnson, then Denver, left to pursue independent projects.

● ALBUMS: The Chad Mitchell Trio Arrives (1960)★★★, A

Mighty Day On Campus (Kapp 1961)★★★★, The Chad Mitchell Trio At The Bitter End (Kapp 1962)★★★, The Chad Mitchell Trio In Action aka Blowin' In The Wind (Kapp 1962)★★★, Hootenanny Number 3 (Kapp 1963)★★★, Singin' Our Minds (1963)★★★, The Chad Mitchell Trio In Concert (Colpix 1964)★★★, Reflecting (1964)★★★, The Slightly Irreverent Mitchell Trio (1964)★★★, Typical American Boys (1965)★★★, That's The Way It's Gotta Be (1965)★★★, Violets Of Dawn (1966)★★★, Alive (1967)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The Chad Mitchell Trio (Kapp 1963)★★★, The Chad Mitchell Trio And The Gatemen In Concert (1964)★★★, Beginnings: The Chad Mitchell Trio Featuring John Denver (1973)★★★.

Mitchell, George

b. 27 February 1917, Stirling, Scotland. Although he played the piano and sang as a youth, Mitchell intended to be an accountant, and followed his inclinations in the Royal Army Pay Corps during World War II. In his spare time he organized concerts with a mixed choir consisting of 16 ATS girls and Pay Corps personnel. In 1947, after his release, he formed the George Mitchell Choir for the BBC radio programme Cabin In The Cotton, and then, two years later, changed the name to the George Mitchell Glee Club, a group of 32 singers, that performed on popular radio shows such as Stand Easy, as well as having its own series. The Glee Club also toured the UK variety circuit and appeared in the Royal Variety Performance of 1950, the first of many in which Mitchell was involved. By 1957 the Mitchell singers were re-creating traditional minstrel shows for television, singing on fixed rostra, and wearing red facial make-up, which appeared to be black when the cameras were fitted with green filters. In 1958, masterminded by Mitchell and producer George Innes, the first Black And White Minstrel Show proper was transmitted, and continued, with occasional short breaks, in the Saturday night peak spot for 20 years. The original static format was transformed into 'the fastest moving show on television' when the male singers performed routines with the Television Toppers dance troupe. The company, and its three principal singers, Dai Francis, Tony Mercer and John Boulter, were joined at various times through the years by comedians such as Leslie Crowther, Stan Stennett and George Chisholm. Always at the heart of the show was a series of nostalgic medleys of (mostly) American popular music from the years 1920-50, cleverly arranged by Mitchell so that each number seemlessly segued into the next one. When the medleys were transferred to albums, beginning in 1960, the first three issued went to number 1 in the UK charts. In 1961 the Black And White Minstrel Show won the Golden Rose of Montreux for the best light entertainment programme. By then, a stage version, presented by Robert Luff, had toured the provinces, beginning in Bristol, and including a summer season at Scarborough, before moving into London's Victoria Palace in 1962. It stayed there, with a break of a few months, until 1972, by which time it was estimated that over seven million people had seen the show, which traditionally always closed with a half-tempo rendering of 'When The Saints Go Marching In'. During the 60s two more companies toured the UK, Australia and New Zealand. In 1978 the BBC axed the television show on the grounds that 'it might offend black people', and later refused to show clips in programmes celebrating BBC Television's history. Eventually, Mitchell and Luff issued a statement disassociating themselves from contemporary versions of the concept that had brought them so much success in the past, although the original format continued to tour Australia. A form of 'Minstrel' stage show remained a popular summer season attraction at UK seaside resorts, and, in 1985, undertook a 20-date Silver Anniversary Tour. In 1992, That Old Minstrel Magic played to capacity audiences in the provinces, but, following protests from the Commision for Racial Equality, no members of the cast appeared in black-face - an attempt by one of the lead singers to do so was rapidly quashed. By that time, Mitchell had retired and was spending most of each year in Florida, USA. His son, Rob, continued the family musical tradition, becoming a respected musical director on radio, and for various stage productions.

● ALBUMS: The Black And White Minstrel Show (HMV 1960)★★★★, Another Black And White Minstrel Show (HMV 1961)★★★★, On Stage With The George Mitchell Minstrels (HMV 1962)★★★★, On Tour With The George Mitchell Minstrels (HMV 1962)★★★, Spotlight On The George Mitchell Minstrels (HMV 1963)★★★, Magic Of The Minstrels (HMV 1965)★★★, Here Come The Minstrels (HMV 1966)★★★, Showtime (HMV 1967)★★★, Sing The Irving Berlin Songbook (Columbia 1968)★★★, The Magic Of Christmas (Columbia 1970)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 30 Golden Greats (1977)★★★.

Mitchell, George (jazz)

b. 8 March 1899, Louisville, Kentucky, USA, d. 27 May 1972. Mitchell began playing trumpet while still a child and was soon of a standard that allowed him to play with bands touring during the school holidays. By his late teens he had switched to cornet and he left Louisville, touring with various groups and also with minstrel shows. Towards the end of 1919 he settled for a spell in Chicago, playing in theatre and dancehall bands, and he also played with the celebrated ragtime pianist Tony Jackson. During the 20s he worked in the Midwest, toured Canada, and played in Chicago. Among the leaders for whom he played were Carroll Dickerson, Doc Cook, Jimmie Noone, Lillian Armstrong, Jelly Roll Morton and Earl 'Fatha' Hines. From the beginning of the 30s, Mitchell played only part-time and by the end of the decade, for all practical purposes, his playing days were over. An important early jazz player, Mitchell's work was in the early mould of Louis Armstrong and Joe Oliver and, like them, he sometimes played interesting two-cornet duets. Among these are performances with Natty Dominique, in a recording band led by Johnny Dodds, and with Shirley Clay in a recording by Hines' band of an Alex Hill arrangement of 'Beau Koo Jack', which updated to 1929 the earlier Oliver-Armstrong duets. Mitchell's playing was forceful and imaginative and although clearly in the classic tradition of New Orleans-style cornetists, he is never slavish to the famous advances made by Armstrong and Oliver during their partnership. Mitchell's work, long overdue for revaluation, has been overlooked, perhaps a side effect of his early departure from the jazz scene.

● COMPILATIONS: The Chronological Jelly Roll Morton 1926-1928 (Classics 1926-28)★★★★, The Chronological Johnny Dodds 1927 (Classics 1927)★★★★, The Chronological Earl Hines 1928-1932 (Classics 1928-32)★★★★.

Mitchell, Guy

b. Albert Cernick, 22 February 1927, Detroit, Michigan, USA. An enormously popular singer in the USA and especially the UK, particularly during the 50s, with a straightforward style and affable personality. Although his birthplace is often given as Yugoslavia, his parents' homeland, Mitchell confirmed in a 1988 UK interview that he was born in Detroit, and was brought up there until the family moved to Colorado, and then to Los Angeles, California, when he was 11 years old. In Los Angeles, he successfully auditioned for Warner Brothers and, for the next few years, was groomed for a possible movie career as a child star, in addition to singing on the Hollywood radio station KFWB. The possibility of the world having another Mickey Rooney was averted when the family moved again, this time to San Francisco. Mitchell became an apprentice saddlemaker, and worked on ranches and in rodeos in the San Joaquin Valley, and also sang on cowboy singer Dude Martin's radio show. His affection for country music stayed with him for the remainder of his career. After a spell in the US Navy, Mitchell joined pianist Carmen Cavallero, and made his first records with the band, including 'I Go In When The Moon Comes Out' and 'Ah, But It Happens'. He then spent some time in New York, making demonstration records, and also won first place on the Arthur Godfrey Talent Show. In 1949, he recorded a few tracks for King Records, which were subsequently reissued on Sincerely Yours when Mitchell became successful.

In 1950, he was signed to Columbia Records by Mitch Miller, who is said to have been responsible for changing Cernick to Mitchell, Miller's full Christian name. Their first success came in 1950, with 'My Heart Cries For You' and 'The Roving Kind', which were followed by a string of hits throughout the decade, mostly jaunty novelty numbers, usually with Miller arrangements that used French horns to considerable effect. Several of the songs were written by Bob Merrill, including 'Sparrow In The Tree Top', 'Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania', 'My Truly, Truly Fair', 'Feet Up (Pat Him On The Po-Po)', 'Belle, Belle, My Liberty Belle' and 'She Wears Red Feathers', which contained the immortal Merrill couplet: 'An elephant brought her in, placed her by my side/While six baboons got out bassoons, and played "Here Comes The Bride"!' Other US Top 30 entries during this period included 'You're Just In Love', a duet with another Miller protégée, Rosemary Clooney, 'Christopher Columbus', 'Unless' (a 30s Tolchard Evans number), 'Sweetheart Of Yesterday', 'There's Always Room At Our House', 'I Can't Help It', 'Day Of Jubilo', ''Cause I Love You, That's A-Why', 'Tell Us Where The Good Times Are' (the latter two duets with Mindy Carson) and 'Ninety-Nine Years (Dead Or Alive)'. 'Singing The Blues' (with Ray Conniff And His Orchestra) became his most successful record, staying at number 1 in the US charts for 10 weeks in 1956. In the UK, Tommy Steele had a hit with his cover version, but Mitchell also succeeded by reaching number 1. Further infectious hits followed: 'Knee Deep In The Blues', the irritatingly catchy 'Rock-A-Billy' ('rock-a-billy, rock-a-billy, rock-a-billy rock, rock-a-billy rock-a-billy, ooh rock rock'), and his last US chart entry in 1959, 'Heartaches By The Number' (number 1). Of the aforementioned singles, six sold over a million copies. Most of Mitchell's US hits were also successful in the UK, where he was highly popular, touring regularly, appearing at the London Palladium for the first time in 1952, and performing at the 1954 Royal Variety Performance. Additional chart entries in the UK included 'Pretty Little Black-Eyed Susie', 'Look At That Girl' (number 1), 'Cloud Lucky Seven', 'Cuff Of My Shirt', 'Dime And A Dollar' and 'Chicka Boom'. The latter was featured in Mitchell's first movie, a 3-D musical entitled Those Redheads From Seattle (1953), with Rhonda Fleming, Gene Barry and Teresa Brewer. Brewer and Mitchell proved a pleasant combination on the Johnny Mercer/Hoagy Carmichael song 'I Guess It Was You All The Time'. In 1954, Mitchell appeared with Gene Barry again, in the spoof western movie Red Garters, which also starred Rosemary Clooney, and contained another Mitchell 'special', 'A Dime And A Dollar'. In contrast to the somewhat perky style, so effective on his singles, some of Mitchell's albums revealed him to be an excellent ballad singer, particularly A Guy In Love, with Glenn Osser and his Orchestra, which contained standards such as 'The Moon Got In My Eyes', 'Allegheny Moon', 'East Of The Sun' and 'East Side Of Heaven'. Sunshine Guitar, with its guitar choir, was 'carefree and breezy, full of infectious gaiety', with a country 'feel' on several of the numbers. With the 60s beat boom imminent, Mitchell's contract with Columbia ended in 1962, and he released some singles on the Joy and Reprise labels. In 1967, he signed for the Nashville-based Starday label, but shortly after his Travelling Shoes and Singing Up A Storm were released, the company went out of business. During some periods of the 60s and 70s, Mitchell ceased performing. He issued only a few tracks on his own GMI label - partly because of poor health and serious alcohol problems. In 1979, he toured Australia, and started to play nightclubs in the USA. In the 80s he made several appearances in the UK, and released the old Elvis Presley favourite 'Always On My Mind', backed with 'Wind Beneath My Wings' from the Bette Midler hit movie Beaches. This was followed by A Garden In The Rain, a set of British numbers that included 'My Kind Of Girl', 'Yesterday', 'I Hadn't Anyone Till You' and Noël Coward's theme tune, 'I'll See You Again'. In the 90s, the old hits were still being repackaged and sold to a younger audience following Mitchell's appearance in John Byrne's UK television drama Your Cheatin' Heart, in 1990. During the filming in the UK he took the opportunity to play a number of country festival gigs. In 1991 during a tour of Australia he had a horse-riding accident that resulted in serious internal injuries. He spent some time in intensive care but made a complete recovery. He has a loyal following in the UK (where arguably he was more popular); these devotees of 50s nostalgia subscribe to a regular magazine Mitchell Music - it is remarkable that their enthusiasm remains as strong 40 years after his heyday. Mitchell typified 50s pop more than any other performer, and his catalogue of hits remains formidable. His work is destined to endure.

● ALBUMS: Songs Of The Open Spaces 10-inch album (Columbia 1952)★★★ UK title Guy Mitchell Sings (Columbia 1954)★★★, Red Garters film soundtrack (Columbia 1954)★★★, The Voice Of Your Choice (Philips 1955)★★★, A Guy In Love (Columbia/Philips 1959)★★★★, as Al Grant Sincerely Yours (1959)★★★, Sunshine Guitar (Columbia 1960)★★★★, Traveling Shoes (Starday 1967)★★★, Singin' Up A Storm (Starday 1968)★★★, Heartaches By The Number (Nashville 1970)★★★, The Roving Kind (1981)★★★, A Garden In The Rain (President 1985)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Guy Mitchell's Greatest Hits (Columbia 1958)★★★★, Showcase Of Hits (Philips 1958)★★★★, The Best Of Guy Mitchell (Columbia 1966)★★★, American Legend - 16 Greatest Hits (1977)★★★★, 20 Golden Greats (1979)★★★★, Hit Singles 1950-1960 (Columbia 1981)★★★★, 20 Golden Pieces Of Guy Mitchell (Bulldog 1984)★★★★, Guy's Greatest Hits (Columbia 1984)★★★★, Singing The Blues (Castle 1986)★★★★, Portrait Of A Song Stylist (Masterpiece 1989)★★★, Sweep Your Blues Away (1989)★★★, Heartaches By The Number (Bear Family 1990)★★★★, Your Cheatin' Heart film soundtrack (1990)★★★, 20 All Time Hits (MFP 1991)★★★★, 16 Most Requested Songs (Columbia/Legacy 1992)★★★★, The Essential Collection (1993)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Mitchell Music, privately published UK fanzine.

Mitchell, Joni

b. Roberta Joan Anderson, 7 November 1943, Fort McLeod, Alberta, Canada. After studying art in Calgary, this singer-songwriter moved to Toronto in 1964, where she married Chuck Mitchell in 1965. The two performed together at coffeehouses and folk clubs, playing several Mitchell originals including 'The Circle Game'. The latter was a response to Canadian Neil Young who had recently written 'Sugar Mountain', a paean to lost innocence, which Mitchell herself included in her sets during this period. While in Detroit, the Mitchells met folk singer Tom Rush, who unsuccessfully attempted to persuade Judy Collins to cover Joni's 'Urge For Going'. He later recorded the song himself, along with the title track of his next album, The Circle Game. The previously reluctant Collins also brought Mitchell's name to prominence by covering 'Michael From Mountains' and 'Both Sides Now' on her 1967 album Wildflowers.

Following her divorce in 1967, Mitchell moved to New York and for a time planned a career in design and clothing, selling Art Nouveau work. Her success on the New York folk circuit paid her bills, however, and she became known as a strong songwriter and engaging live performer, backed only by her acoustic guitar and dulcimer. At this time the astute producer Joe Boyd took her to England, where she played some low-key venues and on her return she appeared at the Gaslight South folk club in Coconut Grove, Florida. Her trip produced several songs, including the comical tribute to 'London Bridge', based on the traditional nursery rhyme. The song included such lines as 'London Bridge is falling up/Save the tea leaves in my cup . . .' Other early material included the plaintive 'Eastern Rain', 'Just Like Me' and 'Brandy Eyes', which displayed Mitchell's love of sharp description and internal rhyme.

Mitchell was initially discovered by budding manager Elliot Roberts at New York's Cafe Au Go-Go, and shortly afterwards in Coconut Grove by former Byrds member, David Crosby. She and Crosby became lovers, and he went on to produce her startling debut album Joni Mitchell aka Song To A Seagull. Divided into two sections, 'I Came To The City' and 'Out Of The City And Down To The Seaside', the work showed an early folk influence that was equally strong on the 1969 follow-up Clouds, which featured several songs joyously proclaiming the possibilities offered by life, as well as its melancholic side. 'Chelsea Morning' presented a feeling of wonder in its almost childlike appreciation of everyday observations. The title of the album was borrowed from a line in 'Both Sides Now', which had since become a massive worldwide hit for Judy Collins. The chorus ('It's love's illusions I recall/I really don't know love at all') became something of a statement of policy from Mitchell, whose analyses of love - real or illusory - dominated her work. With Clouds, Mitchell paused for reflection, drawing material from her past ('Tin Angel', 'Both Sides Now', 'Chelsea Morning') and blending them with songs devoted to new-found perplexities. If 'I Don't Know Where I Stand' recreates the tentative expectancy of an embryonic relationship, 'The Gallery' chronicles its decline, with the artist as the injured party. The singer, however, was unsatisfied with the final collection, and later termed it her artistic nadir.

Apart from her skills as a writer, Mitchell was a fine singer and imaginative guitarist with a love of open tuning. Although some critics still chose to see her primarily as a songwriter rather than a vocalist, there were already signs of important development on her third album, Ladies Of The Canyon. Its title track, with visions of antique chintz and wampum beads, mirrored the era's innocent naïvety, a feature also prevailing on 'Willy', the gauche portrait of her relationship with singer Graham Nash. Mitchell is nonetheless aware of the period's fragility, and her rendition of 'Woodstock' (which she never visited), a celebration of the hippie dream in the hands of Crosby, Stills, Nash And Young, becomes a eulogy herein. With piano now in evidence, the music sounded less sparse and the lyrics more ambitious. portraying the hippie audience as searchers for some lost Edenic bliss ('We are stardust, we are golden . . . and we've got to get ourselves back to the garden'). With 'For Free' (later covered by the Byrds), Mitchell presented another one of her hobbyhorses - the clash between commercial acceptance and artistic integrity. Within the song, Mitchell contrasts her professional success with the uncomplicated pleasure that a street performer enjoys. The extent of Mitchell's commercial acceptance was demonstrated on the humorous 'Big Yellow Taxi', a sardonic comment on the urban disregard for ecology. The single was a surprise UK number 11 hit and was even more surprisingly covered by Bob Dylan.

Following a sabbatical, Mitchell returned with her most introspective work to date, Blue. Less melodic than her previous albums, the arrangements were also more challenging and the material self-analytical to an almost alarming degree. Void of sentimentality, the work also saw her commenting on the American Dream in 'California' ('That was a dream some of us had'). Austere and at times anti-romantic, Blue was an essential product of the singer-songwriter era. On Blue, the artist moved from a purely folk-based perspective to that of rock, as the piano, rather than guitar, became the natural outlet for her compositions. Stephen Stills (guitar/bass), James Taylor (guitar), 'Sneaky' Pete Kleinow (pedal steel) and Russ Kunkel (drums) embellished material inspired by an extended sojourn travelling in Europe, and if its sense of loss and longing echoed previous works, a new maturity instilled a lasting resonance to the stellar inclusions, 'Carey', 'River' and the desolate title track. Any lingering sense of musical restraint was thrown off with For The Roses, in which elaborate horn and woodwind sections buoyed material on which personal themes mixed with third-person narratives. The dilemmas attached to fame and performing, first aired on 'For Free', reappeared on the title song and 'Blonde In The Bleachers' while 'Woman Of Heart And Mind' charted the reasons for dispute within a relationship in hitherto unexplored depths. 'You Turn Me On, I'm A Radio' gave Mitchell a US Top 30 entry, but a fifteen month gap ensued before Court And Spark appeared. Supported by the subtle, jazz-based LA Express, Mitchell offered a rich, luxuriant collection, marked by an increased sophistication and dazzling use of melody. The sweeping 'Help Me' climbed to number 7 in the USA in 1974, bringing its creator a hitherto unparaleled commercial success. The emergence of Mitchell as a well-rounded rock artist was clearly underlined on Court And Spark with its familiar commentary on the trials and tribulations of stardom ('Free Man In Paris'). The strength of the album lay in the powerful arrangements courtesy of Tom Scott, and guitarist Robben Ford, plus Mitchell's own love of jazz rhythms, most notably on her amusing version of Annie Ross's 'Twisted'. The quality of Mitchell's live performances, which included stadium gigs during 1974, was captured on the live album Miles Of Aisles.

In 1975, Mitchell produced the startling The Hissing Of Summer Lawns, which not only displayed her increasing interest in jazz, but also world music. Her most sophisticated work to date, the album was less concerned with introspection than a more generalized commentary on American mores. In 'Harry's House', the obsessive envy of personal possessions is described against a swirling musical backdrop that captures an almost anomic feeling of derangement. The Burundi drummers feature on 'The Jungle Line' in which African primitivism is juxtaposed alongside the swimming pools of the Hollywood aristocracy. 'Edith And The Kingpin' offers a startling evocation of mutual dependency and the complex nature of such a relationship ('His right hand holds Edith, his left hand holds his right/what does that hand desire that he grips it so tight?'). Finally, there was the exuberance of the opening 'In France They Kiss On Main Street' and a return to the theme of 'For Free' on 'The Boho Dance'. The album deserved the highest acclaim, but was greeted with a mixed reception on its release, which emphasized how difficult it was for Mitchell to break free from her 'acoustic folk singer' persona. The Hissing Of Summer Lawns confirmed this new-found means of expression. Bereft of an accustomed introspective tenor, its comments on suburban values were surprising, yet were the natural accompaniment to an ever-growing desire to expand stylistic perimeters. However, although Hejira was equally adventurous, it was noticeably less ornate, echoing the stark simplicity of early releases. The fretless bass of Jaco Pastorius wrought an ever-present poignancy to a series of confessional compositions reflecting the aching restlessness encapsulated in 'Song For Sharon', an open letter to a childhood friend. Though less melodic and texturous than its predecessor, Hejira was still a major work. The dark humour of 'Coyote', the sharp observation of 'Amelia' and the lovingly cynical portrait of Furry Lewis, 'Furry Sings The Blues', were all memorable. The move into jazz territory continued throughout 1978-79, first with the double album, Don Juan's Reckless Daughter, and culminating in her collaboration with jazz player Charlie Mingus. The latter was probably Mitchell's bravest work to date, although its invention was not rewarded with sales and was greeted with suspicion by the jazz community. On Mingus, she adapted several of the master musician's best-known compositions. It was an admirable, but flawed, ambition, as her often-reverential lyrics failed to convey the music's erstwhile sense of spontaneity. 'God Must Be A Boogie Man' and 'The Wolf That Lives In Lindsay', for which Joni wrote words and music, succeeded simply because they were better matched.

A live double album, Shadows And Light featured Pat Metheny and Jaco Pastorius among the guest musicians. Mitchell signed a long-term contract with Geffen Records and the first fruits of this deal were revealed on Wild Things Run Fast in 1982; following this she married bassist Larry Klein, and appeared to wind down her activities. A more accessible work than her recent efforts, Wild Things Run Fast lacked the depth and exploratory commitment of its predecessors. The opening song, 'Chinese Cafe', remains one of her finest compositions, blending nostalgia with shattered hopes, but the remainder of the set was musically ill-focused, relying on unadventurous, largely leaden arrangements. Its lighter moments were well-chosen, however, particularly on the humorous reading of Leiber And Stoller's 'Baby, I Don't Care'. The Thomas Dolby-produced Dog Eat Dog was critically underrated and represented the best of her 80s work. Despite such hi-tech trappings, the shape of the material remained constant with 'Impossible Dreamer' echoing the atmosphere of Court And Spark. Elsewhere, 'Good Friends', an up-tempo duet with Michael McDonald, and 'Lucky Girl', confirmed Mitchell's newfound satisfaction and contentment. In interviews, Mitchell indicated her intention to pursue a career in painting, a comment which some took as evidence of the loss of her musical muse. Chalk Mark In A Rain Storm continued in a similar vein, while including two notable reworkings of popular tunes, 'Cool Water', which also featured Willie Nelson, and 'Corrina Corrina', herein retitled 'A Bird That Whistles'. Their appearance anticipated the change of perspective contained on Night Flight Home, issued in 1991 following a three-year gap. Largely stripped of contemporaneous clutter, this acoustic-based collection invoked the intimacy of Hejira, thus allowing full rein to Mitchell's vocal and lyrical flair. Its release coincided with the artist's avowed wish to pursue her painting talents - exhibitions of her 80s canvases were held in London and Edinburgh - and future musical directions remain, as always, open to question. Her remarkable body of work encompasses the changing emotions and concerns of a generation: from idealism to adult responsibilities, while bearing her soul on the traumas of already public relationships. That she does so with insight and melodic flair accounts for a deserved longevity. With Chalk Mark In A Rainstorm and Night Ride Home, Mitchell reiterated the old themes in a more relaxed style without ever threatening a new direction.

The creatively quiet decade that followed did little to detract from her status, though many were pleased to witness her renaissance in the 90s. Rumours abounded in the 90s that her addiction to cigarettes had caused a serious throat ailment (her voice had become progressively lower and huskier); although this was never confirmed she was told to quit smoking - which she promtly ignored. After contributing a track, 'If I Could', to Seal's 1994 album, she embarked on her first live dates in 12 years on a tour of Canada, before settling in to the studio once more to record Turbulent Indigo with production support from ex-husband Larry Klein in Los Angeles. Although it was not a major hit she won a Grammy in 1995 for Best Pop Album. Mitchell is one artist that deserves a detailed biography; while we wait, Bill Ruhlmann's revealing 25,000 word interview for Goldmine magazine will have to suffice. Still regarded as one of the finest singer-songwriters of her generation, Mitchell has displayed more artistic depth and consistency than most of her illustrious contemporaries from the 70s.

● ALBUMS: Joni Mitchell aka Song To A Seagull (Reprise 1968)★★★, Clouds (Reprise 1969)★★★, Ladies Of The Canyon (Reprise 1970)★★★★, Blue (Reprise 1971)★★★★★, For The Roses (Asylum 1972)★★★★, Court And Spark (Asylum 1974)★★★★★, Miles Of Aisles (Asylum 1974)★★★, The Hissing Of Summer Lawns (Asylum 1975)★★★★, Hejira (Asylum 1976)★★★★, Don Juan's Reckless Daughter (Asylum 1977)★★★, Mingus (Asylum 1979)★★★★, Shadows And Light (Asylum 1980)★★★★, Wild Things Run Fast (Geffen 1982)★★★, Dog Eat Dog (Geffen 1985)★★★, Chalk Mark In A Rainstorm (Geffen 1988)★★★, Night Ride Home (Geffen 1991)★★★, Turbulent Indigo (Warners 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Joni Mitchell Hits (Reprise 1996)★★★, Joni Mitchell Misses (Reprise 1996)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Joni Mitchell, Leonore Fleischer. Both Sides Now, Brian Hinton. A Memoir, Joni Mitchell. Complete Poems And Lyrics, Joni Mitchell.

Mitchell, Kim

Having dissolved Max Webster in 1982, Mitchell was inspired to pursue a solo career. After signing with Anthem Records he released a mini-album that followed closely in the Max Webster tradition. He then took a break from music until he signed with Bronze Records. His next release was the excellent and slightly offbeat Akimbo Alogo, which also included the single 'Go For Soda'. At times reminiscent of the excesses of Frank Soda And The Imps and Neil Merryweather (c.1974), Mitchell's approach was, at times, misunderstood by the press, but there was no mistaking his obvious talent as a guitarist. He finally achieved critical acclaim with Rockland.

● ALBUMS: Kim Mitchell mini-album (Anthem 1982)★★★, Akimbo Alogo (Bronze 1985)★★★★, Shakin' Like A Human Being (Anthem 1987)★★★, Rockland (Atlantic 1989)★★★★.

Mitchell, Louis

b. Louis A. Mitchell, 1885, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 2 December 1957. A showman drummer, adept on numerous percussion instruments, Mitchell played in vaudeville from the turn of the century. He was popular in New York and attracted a great deal of attention on a visit to London in 1914. He returned to London the following year, appearing as a solo variety act on the stages of UK music halls. He went back to Europe in 1918 with a band labelled Mitchell's Jazz Kings with which he toured extensively and held a long residency in Paris. During the 30s, Mitchell was still often in Europe but increasingly worked in capacities other than as a musician. His playing revealed often startling dexterity and it is easy to understand his appeal to audiences of the era in which he played. His playing in a jazz context was less secure but his band did much to spread the word 'jazz' through the UK and continental Europe in this period.

Mitchell, Malcolm

b. 9 November 1926, London, England, d. 9 March 1998, Bognor Regis, Sussex, England. The guitarist leader of the Malcolm Mitchell Trio, a popular rhythm outfit on the UK Variety circuit and in radio programmes during the 50s, Mitchell was originally taught to play his instrument by an erudite survivor of the 30s dance bands, Ivor Mairants. Thereafter, he worked for various bands led by the likes of George Evans and Felix Mendelssohn, before joining the Jack Fallon Trio. This ensemble, with Fallon on bass, and Tony Crombie playing drums, accompanied the legendary Duke Ellington on a tour of Britain in 1949. In October 1949, the Malcolm Mitchell Trio was formed, with Johnny Pearson (piano) and Teddy Broughton (bass). After making their first appearance at a local church hall, the Trio were offered a booking in the south of France. Having spent all their funds on a one-way ticket, they found police had closed the club, so had to find work elsewhere. Broadcasting stints on Radio Monte Carlo were followed in March 1949 by an important residency at the Grand National Hotel in Lucerne, Switzerland, and the group also performed in other European locations, including Paris, before returning to London to take up an engagement at Ciro's nightclub. Early in 1950, they continued to 'double' at various West End clubs while also appearing in the Jack Buchanan revue Castle In The Air at the Adelphi Theatre. In 1952, they were signed by Ambrose for a major road tour with trumpet star Eddie Calvert, but two years later Mitchell disbanded the Trio and formed an all-star modern jazz orchestra for one-night bookings and recordings for Decca. Johnny Pearson subsequently went on to a distinguished career as a composer, arranger, instrumentalist and conductor. The strain of running the large band adversely affected Mitchell's health, and he dissolved it in 1956, losing a good deal of money. He re-formed the Trio in 1957, and also continued to appear as a soloist in cabaret, and accompany visiting stars from abroad. In 1961, the Trio appeared with the immensely popular vocal duo Nina And Frederik on the Royal Variety Performance. A year later, Mitchell joined with Henry Howard and comedian-scriptwriter Bob Monkhouse to set up Mitchell, Monkhouse Associates in order to write and produce television commercials. From then on he was responsible for numerous background scores for projects such as That Kind Of Girl and Yellow Teddy Bears, as well as composing hundreds of jingles, and the music for Mad Movies and Golden Silents. Mitchell, Monkhouse was also a pioneer company in the corporate conference field. Mitchell himself re-formed the Trio in 1997 for the Ellington '97 Conference in Leeds, England.

Mitchell, McKinley

b. 25 December 1934, Jackson, Mississippi, USA, d. 1986, USA. A formative soul singer with George Leaner's early 60s Chicago-based One-derful label, Mitchell came from the Chicago blues-club scene to launch that label with his fine, self-penned 'The Town I Live In', later re-recorded during an even more productive soul period in the 70s with the Malaco subsidiary Chimneyville. After leading the Hearts Of Harmony gospel group at the age of 16, Mitchell tried secular music with a quintet in Springfield, Massachusetts, before moving to Philadelphia to front his own gospel group, the Mitchellairs. Subsequently, he travelled to Chicago, where he sang at several blues clubs, and worked with Muddy Waters at Pepper's Lounge. Ironically, his first recording, 'Rock Everybody Rock', was in a rock 'n' roll style, cut with members of Howlin' Wolf's band for the Boxer label in 1959. In the local clubs, Mitchell had become known as McKinley 'Soul' Mitchell by the time he brought 'The Town I Live In' to Leaner in 1962. Despite this number 8 R&B hit, Mitchell's subsequent records for One-derful, although good examples of early 'tough' soul, sold poorly, and Mitchell embarked on a Chicago label-hopping exercise with the likes of St Lawrence, Chess, Spoonful, Sandman, Black Beauty and Big 3, often being produced by Chicago bluesman Willie Dixon. In 1976, Mitchell's Big 3 recording, 'Trouble Blues', received good southern coverage from Jackson's Malaco label, and it was followed by other superior soul sides for the same company's Chimneyville label, including the beautiful 'The End Of The Rainbow' and 'The Same Old Dream', as well as the fine remake of 'The Town I Live In'. A good Chimneyville album, McKinley Mitchell, was also released in 1978. In the 80s, Mitchell worked for James Bennett's Rettas label where he cut three singles and an album. Earlier material was reissued on both US and Japanese labels. Mitchell died prematurely from a heart attack in 1986, and was buried in his native Jackson.

● ALBUMS: McKinley Mitchell (Chimneyville 1978)★★★, I Won't Be Back For More (Rettas 1984)★★★, The Last Of McKinley Mitchell (1988)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: McKinley 'Soul' Mitchell (1979)★★★, The Complete Malaco Collection (1992)★★★.

Mitchell, Red

b. Keith Moore Mitchell, 20 September 1927, New York City, New York, USA, d. 8 November 1992, Salem, Oregon, USA. After studying piano and alto saxophone, Mitchell took up the bass while serving in the armed forces. In the late 40s he played in bands led by Jackie Paris, Mundell Lowe, Chubby Jackson (with whom he played piano) and Charlie Ventura. He spent two years with Woody Herman, but was hospitalized with tuberculosis in 1951. In the early 50s he worked with Red Norvo and Gerry Mulligan, opting to stay in California when Mulligan headed back to New York. Resident in Los Angeles from 1954, Mitchell became an important figure on the west coast scene, accompanying and sometimes leading artists such as Chet Baker, Bill Perkins, André Previn, Mel Lewis, Hampton Hawes, Don Cherry, Ornette Coleman and Harold Land. In the late 60s, Mitchell moved to Sweden, remaining in Europe for 10 years, accompanying visiting American musicians and leading his own groups, which included Communication. During the 80s, Mitchell divided his time between Europe and the USA, playing and recording extensively with jazzmen including Lee Konitz, Warne Marsh, Art Pepper and Jimmy Rowles. Mitchell's playing in the 50s was advanced for its time, and in some of his technical developments he opened the way for artists such as Scott La Faro. His clean articulation made his solo work of particular interest and an unaccompanied album, Home Suite, clearly revealed his remarkable talent. (His brother Whitey Mitchell, also a bass player, was active in the 50s and 60s, but later left the jazz scene.)

● ALBUMS: The Fabulous Gerry Mulligan Quartet (1954)★★★★, The Red Mitchell Sextet (1955)★★★, Jam For Your Bread (Affinity 1955)★★, Hampton Hawes Trio (1955)★★★, Sessions, Live (1957)★★, Presenting Red Mitchell (1957)★★★, with André Previn Pal Joey (1957)★★★, with Previn West Side Story (1959)★★★, Red Mitchell At The Renaissance (1960)★★★, with Harold Land Hear Ye! (1961)★★★, The Red Mitchell Trio (1969)★★★, The Red Mitchell Quartet (1972)★★★, with Konitz I Concentrate On You (1974)★★★, Communication (1974)★★, Red Mitchell Meets Guido Manusardi (1974)★★, Blues For A Crushed Soul (Sonet 1976)★★★, Chocolate Cadillac (1976)★★★, Red Mitchell And Friends (1978)★★★, Jim Hall/Red Mitchell (1978)★★★, Red Mitchell Plays Piano And Sings (1979)★★★, with Art Pepper Straight Life (1979)★★★★, Empathy (1980)★★★, with Tommy Flanagan You're Me (1980)★★★, Home Cookin' (1980)★★★★, Soft And Warm And Swinging (1982)★★★, When I'm Singing (1982), Holiday For Monica (1983), The Jimmy Rowles/Red Mitchell Trio (1985)★★★, Home Suite (1985)★★★, with Clark Terry To Duke And Basie (1986)★★, with Terry Jive At Five (1986)★★★, with Kenny Barron The Red Barron Duo (1986)★★★, with Herb Ellis Doggin' Around (1988)★★★, with Putte Wickman The Very Thought Of You (1988)★★★, with Roger Kellaway Alone Together (Dragon 1988)★★★, Talking (1989)★★★, Evolution (1990)★★★.

Mitchell, Roscoe

b. 3 August 1940, Chicago, Illinois, USA. As a child Mitchell enjoyed listening to Nat 'King' Cole, Lester Young and Charlie Parker. He studied clarinet and baritone saxophone in high school, taking up alto saxophone in his senior year and continuing with it while in the army. He went to Europe with an army band, where he heard Albert Ayler, who was also playing in a military band. After demobilization, he played bop in an outfit with Henry Threadgill, but Ayler's music had been a revelation to him. Back in Chicago, he jammed with Threadgill, Malachi Favors, Jack DeJohnette, and Muhal Richard Abrams. Abrams was even more of an influence than Ayler. In 1965 Mitchell, was a charter member of the AACM, having played in the Experimental Band (organised by Abrams, the AACM President, inspirer and prime mover) since 1961. His debut Sound was the first and one of the most famous recordings to come out of the AACM, characterizing the Chicagoan's new emphasis on sound-as-texture and the importance of the relationship between sound and silence. On these tracks, wrote critic John Litweiller, 'Music is the tension of sounds in the free space of silence'. For a while Mitchell led his own groups, and it was from one of these (a quartet including Lester Bowie, Favors and Phillip Wilson) that the Art Ensemble Of Chicago grew. He once explained: 'It was my band, but I couldn't afford to pay those guys what they deserved, so everybody was shouldering an equal amount of responsibility. We became a co-operative unit in order to remain committed to one another and in order to survive.' Since co-founding the Art Ensemble in 1969, most of his work has been accomplished with them, but he has continued to lead bands of his own, including Space (a trio with saxophonist Gerald Oshita and vocalist Tom Buckner) and Sound (a quintet with trumpet, guitar, bass and percussion). He has also worked with Byron Austin, Scotty Holt and DeJohnette; and has assembled an impressive body of solo saxophone music. Like his partners in the Art Ensemble, Mitchell plays a dazzling number of instruments, the primary ones being soprano, alto, tenor and bass saxophones, oboe, flute, piccolo and clarinet as well as various percussion and 'little instruments'. He and Joseph Jarman represent the two poles of the Ensemble's art: Jarman brings the bulk of the theatrical impulse, while Mitchell - the one member of the group who does not habitually wear facepaint or costume - is the musical structuralist who, despite the apparent freedom of the Ensemble's music, worries about how true an improviser will be to the composer's intention. As a composer he has been an influence on Anthony Braxton and Leo Smith. There is an ascetic streak to his art, and it is not insignificant that as soon as he was able, he went to live on a 365-acre farm in Wisconsin, dissatisfied with the life-style necessitated by constant touring. Recent projects have included Songs In The Wind, which features Steve Sylvester on 'bull roarers and wind wands'; a meeting with the Stockholm-based Brus Trio (After Fallen Leaves); and Four Compositions, which shows Mitchell evolving into an impressive writer of classical chamber music.

● ALBUMS: Sound (Delmark 1966)★★★, Solo Saxophone

Concerts (1974)★★★, The Roscoe Mitchell Quartet (1975)★★★, Old/Quartet 1967 recording (1975)★★★, Nonaah (1977)★★★, L-R-G/The Maze/S II Examples (1978)★★★, Duets With Anthony Braxton (1978)★★★★, Congliptious (Nessa 1978)★★★, Roscoe Mitchell (Chief 1979)★★★, Sketches From Bamboo (1979)★★★, Snurdy McGurdy And Her Dancin' Shoes (1981)★★, with Tom Buckner, Gerald Oshita New Music For Woodwinds And Voice (1981)★★★, 3x4 Eye (1981)★★, More Cutouts (Cecma 1981)★★★, Concert Toronto 4/5 October 1975 (Sackville 1981)★★★, with Space An Interesting Breakfast Conversation (1984)★★★★, And The Sound And Space Ensembles (1984)★★★, Live At The Muhle Hunziken (1986)★★★, The Flow Of Things (Black Saint 1987)★★★, Four Compositions (1987)★★★, Live In Detroit (1989)★★, Songs In The Wind (Victo 1991)★★★, with Brus Trio After Fallen Leaves 1989 reording (Silkheart 1992)★★★, Live At The Knitting Factory 1987 recording (Black Saint 1992)★★★★, with Muhal Richard Abrams Solos And Duets At Merkin Hall (Black Saint 1992)★★★★, This Dance Is For Steve McCall (Black Saint 1993)★★★, Hey Donald (Delmark 1995)★★★.

Mitchell, Walter

b. 19 March 1919, Pickens, Arkansas, USA, d. 10 January 1990, Toledo, Ohio, USA. Although his first years were spent in Louisiana, Mitchell was brought up in Detroit after his mother died around 1926, by which time he had already taken up the harmonica. Hoboing back in the south, he spent many years travelling through Louisiana, Arkansas and east Texas. Due to his diminutive stature, he earned the nickname Little Walter some time before Walter Jacobs appropriated it. Inducted into the army, he claims to have fought in both the European and Far Eastern campaigns before a foot injury brought about his discharge. Returning to Detroit, he put together the Boogie Blues Boys, which also featured his cousin, guitarist L.C. Green. In 1948, Mitchell recorded for Joe Von Battle with a band that included Robert Richard on second harmonica and pianist Boogie Woogie Red. Four years later, he accompanied Green on a session in Gallatin, Tennessee, for Dot Records. The pair remained together throughout the 50s, after which Mitchell worked with a number of Detroit musicians, including Baby Boy Warren, Eddie Burns and the Griswold brothers. Though sparsely recorded, Mitchell's records remain sought-after collector's items.

● COMPILATIONS: Detroit Ghetto Blues (Nighthawk 1974)★★★, Harp Suckers! (St. George 1983)★★★.

Mitchell, Willie

b. 3 January 1928, Ashland, Mississippi, USA. A veteran of several Memphis-based bands, Mitchell rose to prominence in the late 50s with an outfit that formed the basis for his production work and early solo recordings. The line-up included Lewis Steinberg and Al Jackson, both of whom would later appear in Booker T. And The MGs. By the 60s, Mitchell was leading the Hi Records house band. The company was established on the success of Bill Black, the one-time Elvis Presley bassist whose economical instrumental singles suggested the style later forged at the Stax studio. Although Black died in 1965, releases bearing his name continued, with Mitchell's group supplying the music. Mitchell's own recording career prospered with such classic Memphis offerings as '20-75' and 'Percolatin'' (both 1964), as well as the Junior Walker-influenced groove of 'That Driving Beat' and 'Everything Is Gonna' Be Alright' (both 1966). 'Soul Serenade' was a Top 10 US R&B single in 1968, but his releases were latterly obscured by his work with other artists. Mitchell became vice-president at Hi in 1970, and proceeded to mould its 70s sound with production work for Al Green, Syl Johnson and Ann Peebles. Other sessions at his Royal Studio included those of Bobby Bland, Otis Clay and O.V. Wright. During the early part of the decade, Mitchell's classic band - the Hodges brothers, Charles (organ), Teeny (guitar) and Leroy (bass), Howard Grimes or Al Jackson (drums) and the Memphis Horns - defined post-Stax southern soul, but the formula grew sterile as time progressed. Treasured moments still occurred, but the loss of Green, then Johnson, suggested an internal dissatisfaction. Mitchell resigned from Hi in 1979, three years after its acquisition by the Los Angeles-based Cream label, and joined the Bearsville label as a producer and artist. During the 80s he became a partner in a video production company and set up his Wayco outlet. In 1985, he was reunited with Al Green for the latter's He Is The Light and the following year's Going Away. In 1987, he produced Scottish pop group Wet Wet Wet.

● ALBUMS: 20-75 (Hi 1964)★★★, It's Dance Time (Hi 1965)★★★, That Driving Beat (Hi 1966)★★★, It's What's Happening (Hi 1966)★★★, Willie Mitchell Live (Hi 1968)★★, Soul Serenade (Hi 1968)★★, Solid Soul (Hi 1969)★★, On Top (Hi 1969)★★, Soul Bag (Hi 1970)★★, Robbins Nest (Hi 1970)★★, Hold It (Hi 1971)★★★, Listen Dance (Hi 1971)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Willie Mitchell (Hi 1977)★★★.

Mitchell-Ruff Duo

Dwike Mitchell (b. 14 February 1930, Dunedin, Florida, USA; piano) and Willie Ruff (b. 1 September 1931, Sheffield, Alabama, USA; French horn/bass) first met while they were in the army, and afterwards played together in Lionel Hampton's band. Mitchell has a formidable technique, and though Ruff sometimes solos on the horn, he usually plays bass. He is an academic musician who became a professor of music at Yale. They formed the duo in 1955, and were the first jazz musicians to appear in the USSR when they performed impromptu concerts during a tour with the Yale Russian Chorus in 1959. During the 60s they played regularly at their own club in New Haven, Connecticut, or at the Hickory House in New York - usually with the addition of a drummer, either Charlie Smith or Helicio Milito. In 1966, they were the first jazz musicians to be used by the State Department on a goodwill tour when they went to Mexico City with President Johnson. In 1967, they made a film in Brazil tracing the African roots of Brazilian music. They have continued performing together and toured China in 1981.

- ALBUMS: Mitchell-Ruff Duo (1955)★★★, Appearing Nightly (1957)★★, Ruff-Mitchell Duo Plus Strings And Brass (1958)★★★, Jazz Mission To Moscow (1959)★★★, Brazilian Trip (1966)★★, Strayhorn (1969)★★★, Dizzy Gillespie And The Mitchell-Ruff Duo In Concert (1970)★★★, Dizzy Gillespie Live With The Mitchell Ruff Duo (1971)★★★★, Virtuoso Elegance In Jazz (1984)★★.

Mittoo, Jackie

b. 1948, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies, d. 1990. The self-effacing Jackie Mittoo was probably reggae's premier keyboard player, and had as much influence on the direction of reggae in the 60s and 70s as any single musician. Mittoo was taught to play the piano by his grandmother, first performing in public before he was 10 years old. After playing with local Kingston bands the Rivals and the Sheiks, Mittoo came to the attention of Coxsone Dodd at Studio One. At 15 Mittoo was playing piano and organ in the Skatalites, thereafter performing scouting and arranging duties for Dodd's labels. His own 'Got My Bugaloo' (1966), a rare vocal outing, was one of the best records of the ska era and presaged the arrival of rocksteady, and his work with the Soul Brothers, and later, Soul Vendors bands, helped to keep Studio One ahead of rival production houses. His playing behind the Heptones, Cables, Wailers and innumerable solo acts helped to create the sound of reggae for years; later artists and studios, such as Augustus Pablo, Channel One, and virtually the entire dancehall movement of the early 80s, based their rhythm arrangements on material that Mittoo had pioneered in the 60s. Dodd also issued solo albums by Mittoo from 1967 onwards, and they (Now and Macka Fat, particularly) rank among the most artistically pleasing organ instrumental albums outside of Booker T and jazz maestros such as Jimmy Smith. In the mid-70s Mittoo left Dodd to work in Canada, where he set up the moderately successful Stine-Jac label, which produced music in a similar vein to Studio One's output, and he cut several albums for producer Bunny Lee in both Jamaica and London. He also worked extensively on some fine sessions for Sugar Minott's Youth Promotion outlet, still displaying the same taste and rhythmic acumen that had always been his trademark. He was deeply respected as an elder statesman among Minott's young reggae hopefuls. He died in 1990, an event that brought about a long-overdue reassessment of his work among the reggae cognoscenti. Undoubtedly, had he been an American musician, his name would be mentioned in the same breath as the greats of black music.

- ALBUMS: with the Soul Vendors On Tour (Studio One 1966)★★★, Evening Time (1967)★★★, In London (Coxsone 1967)★★★, Keep On Dancing (1969)★★★, Now (Studio One 1969)★★★★, Macka Fat (Studio One 1970)★★★★, Hot Blood (1977)★★★, Cold Blood (1978)★★★, Keyboard King (1978)★★★, Showcase (Studio One 1983)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Original Jackie Mittoo (Third World 1979)★★★★, Tribute To Jackie Mittoo (Heartbeat 1995)★★★★.

Mixed Company

Mixed Company were formed in 1980 after Jersey City, New Jersey, USA a cappella group the Street-Tones ground to a halt. Joseph Santora (first tenor), Jimmy Woods (second tenor), John 'Bull' Zielinski (baritone) and John Romano (bass) were the original members of that unit, who played regularly on street corners in the vicinity. They became Patty And The Street-Tones in 1979 when Patty Zielinski, wife of John, joined them. Their first single was a version of 'Rendezvous With You' (originally cut by the Desires) and they recorded another Desires' number, 'Let It Please Be You', for their next release, the first of four singles they subsequently released for Clifton Records. These were later compiled on an album by the label shared with recordings by the Ribitones. Jeff Chambers (ex-Bayonne) had replaced Santora by this time, with David Willis taking over from John Romano. The Street-Tones eventually went their separate ways in 1981 and Mixed Company came about as an immediate aftershock. This coalition saw Charles 'Cada' Brooks (bass) join the existing Street-Tones line-up of the Zielinskis, Chambers and Woods. As a more professional and motivated group they set about establishing the new name on dates within New York and New Jersey, culminating in a deal struck with Stan Krause of Catamount Records. 'Are You Ready' was released in 1986, followed by an album, Buzzin' With Mixed Company. It received a good reaction for an out-of-time a cappella release, particularly in England where the group toured.

- ALBUMS: As Patty And The Street-Tones: Patty And The Street-Tones Meet The Ribitones (Clifton 1980)★★★. As Mixed Company: Buzzin' With Mixed Company (Catamount 1986)★★★.

Mixmaster Morris

UK house guru, who arrived in the early 90s at the height of hardcore techno's domination (he titled his own music weirdcore), and whose name has subsequently graced dozens of releases, both as a producer and remixer. Morris' first live performances were at the ICA Rock Week in 1980, before he began to work with samplers in 1983. He has since claimed the honour of being 'the first to play a house set in the UK', at the Fridge in London in 1987 at his Madhouse nights. He also prepared pirate radio tapes for his 'Mongolian Hip Hop Show', and worked with experimental pirate TV. He met Colin Angus of the Shamen via mutual Psychic TV acquaintences, and began DJing on their Synergy tours. His musical style was certainly unique, often building a set to the centrepiece section, which would as likely be a This Heat track as anything more conventional. He also stressed the importance of providing DJ's with label information, not just bpm's but also the key a track was played in. In addition to his sampling and rhythmic wizardry, he has gone on to record in his own right. The first such release was 'Space Is The Place' on the Rising High label, a relationship with whom prospers to this day. Following late 80s singles 'Freestyle' and 'I Want You', his debut album arrived, also credited to The Irresistable Force, in 1992. It boasted a splendid holographic label, and was filled with samples taken from obscure and obtuse sources. A more detached, ambient based project, after a brief Kraftwerk parody on the intro it branched out into seamless 'chill-out' territory. This was the man, after all, who invented the phrase 'I think, therefore I ambient'. He has gone on to record with the new king of chill, Peter Namlook, as part of the latter's Dreamfish project, and remixed for Spiritualized among others.

● ALBUMS: As the Irresistable Force Flying High (Rising High 1992)★★★, with Peter Namlook Dreamfish (Rising High 1993)★★★.

Mize, Billy

b. 29 April 1929, Kansas City, Kansas, USA. Raised in the San Joaquin Valley of California, Mize first learned to play guitar as a child, but converted to steel guitar when he received one for his 18th birthday. Originally, he was influenced by the music of Bob Wills and when he moved to Bakersfield, he formed his own band and played residences at local venues. He also worked as a disc jockey on KPMC. In 1953, he appeared on The Cousin Herb Trading Post Show on KERO-TV Bakersfield, and became affectionately known as Billy The Kid. He was a regular with the show for 13 years, including hosting it at one stage. Mize still played his other appearances, and in 1955, began to appear on the Hank Penny Show* on Los Angeles television. In 1957, his popularity grew to the extent that, for several years, he managed to appear on seven Los Angeles television stations weekly, including Town Hall Party, and still maintained his Bakersfield commitments. He naturally developed into a television personality and, in 1966 and 1967, he became host/singer of Gene Autry's Melody Ranch network show on KTLA. He also commenced his own syndicated Billy Mize Show from Bakersfield. He first recorded for Decca in the 50s, and later for Challenge and Liberty, before making the US country charts in 1966 with his Columbia recording of 'You Can't Stop Me'. Between 1966 and 1977, he totalled 11 US chart entries, including his own composition, 'Make It Rain'. Some of his songs were hits for other artists, such as 'Who Will Buy The Wine' (Charlie Walker), 'My Baby Walks All Over Me' (Johnny Sea) and 'Don't Let The Blues Make You Bad' (Dean Martin). He maintained rigorous schedules throughout the 60s and 70s, and appeared in the television series RFD Hollywood. He later became a television producer with his own production company. He has also worked as a musician on numerous recording sessions, including playing steel and rhythm guitar on many of Merle Haggard's recordings. His brother Buddy (b. 5 August 1936, Wichita, Kansas, USA) is a noted country songwriter, record producer and radio personality. He also relocated to Bakersfield, and his songs have been recorded by Buck Owens, Johnny Cash, Marty Robbins, Hank Snow and many others. In the early 80s, Buddy and Billy worked together on various television projects. Billy currently heads Billy Mize Productions, making television spectaculars with Merle Haggard.

● ALBUMS: This Time And Place (Imperial 1969)★★★, You're Alright With Me (United Artists 1970)★★★, Love'N'Stuff (1976)★★.

Mizell, Hank

b. Bill Mizell, Asheville, North Carolina, USA. Mizell was a minor rockabilly artist best known for the 1957 recording 'Jungle Rock'. He served in the US Navy in 1947, and upon his discharge began both singing and preaching. In the early 50s he and his five-piece country band went to Montgomery, Alabama, to record. A disc jockey there nicknamed him Hank after the recently deceased Hank Williams, and the name stuck. In 1957, working with guitarist Jim Bobo, drummer Bill Collins and pianist Eddie Boyd in Chicago, Mizell recorded 'Jungle Rock' for the local EKO label. King Records picked up distribution, but the record did not sell, and Mizell gave up performing professionally. He became a preacher and moved between Chicago, Mississippi and Nashville for the next few years. Although several country singles were recorded in the 60s and 70s, Mizell remained virtually unknown until 1976, when rockabilly collectors in Europe discovered the King single. 'Jungle Rock' transcended cult credibility to reach the UK Top 10, and prompted Charly Records to release other rediscovered Mizell recordings. Mizell made a few other rockabilly and country recordings in the 80s, but remained unknown outside of hardcore rockabilly circles.

● COMPILATIONS: Jungle Rock (Charly 1976)★★★, Higher (1977)★★, We're Gonna Bop Tonight (1982)★★★.

Mlle. Modiste

Composer Victor Herbert's first collaboration with librettist and lyricst Henry Blossom was a tremendous success. - in the long term. After its debut at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York on 25 December 1905, it ran for 202 performances. That was a decent enough run in those days anyway, and it gained in popularity over the years mainly due to the its star, the lovely Fritzi Scheff, and her close identification with the operetta during its many tours and subsequent Broadway revivals. Scheff played the role of Fifi, who works in a hat shop owned by Mme. Cecil (Josephine Bartlett). She is in love with Captain Etienne de Bouvray (Walter Percival), but their romance is disapproved of by her employer, and the gentleman's uncle, Compte. de St. Mar (William Pruett). Josephine would also like to sing on the stage, and she confides her ambitions to a visiting American, the wealthy Hiram Bent (Claude Gillingwater). He is so taken by her charm and manner, that he offers to pay for an extensive course of singing lessons. Inevitably, when the dissenters hear her beautiful voice, they protest no more, and the marriage is allowed to take place. Fritzi Scheff, who had been with the Metropolitan Opera before she made her Broadway debut in the title role of Babette in 1903, introduced 'Kiss Me Again', one of the most cherished ballads in the history of operetta, and she also excelled on the delightful 'If I Were On The Stage' and 'The Mascot Of The Troops'. Pruett had the resolute 'I Want What I Want When I Want It', and Percival sang the engaging 'The Time, The Place And The Girl'. The rest of the score included 'Love Me, Love My Dog', 'When The Cat's Away', and 'The Nightingale And The Star'. Fritzi Scheff, who was born in Vienna in 1879, made her last Broadway appearance as Mlle. Modiste in 1929 when she was 50 years old. She died in New York on 8 April 1954.

MLO

A collaboration between UK-born Jon Tye and Pete Smith through the Rising High imprint, MLO's debut album was also the soundtrack to a film of the same name - shown as live accompaniment to Pink Floyd gigs in 1994. The project was put together in an intensive two week period inside one of the world's most advanced multi-media studios. The term ambient was almost inevitably invoked, though the duo opted to disassociate themselves from the bulk of the artists working within that genre. The album was titled after the seventh moon of Jupiter, the only entity in the solar system, aside from the earth, known to be volcanically active. As well as recording a film for use alongside their debut album, and producing videos for other artists, Tye has also recorded solo as Flutter ('Flutter').

● ALBUMS: Io (Rising High 1994)★★★.

MMW

Progressive jazz fusionists MMW, an acronym for Medeski, Martin and Wood, were formed in New York City, New York, USA, in the early 90s. At the beginning their shows together were regarded as part of a 'connoisseur's scene' at clubs such as the Knitting Factory. From their inception, the participants' jazz skills were tempered by soul, funk and rock embellishments. Their national tours soon won them a much broader cross-section of supporters, as the band deliberately attempted to secure a young, open-minded audience. Jan Medeski (keyboards), Billy Martin (drums) and Chris Wood (bass) could boast of previous stints in such celebrated underground acts as the Either/Orchestra and the Lounge Lizards. As Medeski told the press, 'Our deal is to try to take improvised music - an elevated art form - and bring it down to earth. And if the kids dig it, then maybe we can help turn them on to Miles or Coltrane or Mingus. That'd be cool.' As a testament to the group's wide-ranging appeal, they were invited to support Phish - a rock band but one nevertheless similarly committed to improvised live performance - at their sold-out New Orleans date at the State Theater in 1995. MMW have also supported artists as diverse as Los Lobos and Morphine, while members have contributed to studio projects by Biz Markie and Rickie Lee Jones. Phish guitarist Trey Anastasio subsequently joined MMW onstage for later shows, while Medeski contributed to his solo album, Surrender To The Air. A series of albums for Gramavision have cemented MMW's rise and confirmed the viability of their intentions to popularise contemporary jazz. Friday Afternoon In The Universe was arguably the best of these. It included 'Chubb Sub', which was featured on the soundtrack to the hit film, Get Shorty.

● ALBUMS: Notes From Underground (Accurate 1992)★★★, It's A Jungle In Here (Gramavision/Rykodisc 1993)★★★★, Friday Afternoon In The Universe (Gramavision/Rykodisc 1995)★★★, Shack-Man (Gramavision/Rykodisc 1996)★★.

MN8

Comprising the pseudonymous KG, G-Man, Kule T and Dee-Tails, UK black pop group MN8 made a major breakthrough in 1994 with the release of 'I've Got A Little Something For You'. A strangely threatening swingbeat tune, it nevertheless saw the group, who are based in Surrey, become firm favourites with the nation's teenagers. The follow-up single was 'If You Only Let Me In', another example of the group's catchy swingbeat soul. The accompanying video featured the group's lascivious dance routines - already one of their most recognizable traits. They subsequently joined Janet Jackson on her European tour and continued to appear regularly on UK television. The group's 1995 debut album, To The Next Level, demonstrated a greater versatility than might have been anticipated from the group's singles, and included a Disney-style ballad in 'Pathway To The Moon' alongside more soul-based material such as 'Lonely' and 'Happy'.

● ALBUMS: To The Next Level (Columbia 1995)★★★.

Mo' Wax Records

This label was formed by James Lavelle (b. 1975, Oxford, England) in 1992 and helped to develop the abstract hip-hop sound. As a child Lavelle heard jazz at home and later developed an interest in hip-hop through artists such as Grandmaster Flash and Doug E. Fresh. He began DJing when he was 14 and while working in specialist jazz and dance record shops in London he developed his broad tastes in music. In 1992 he formed Mo' Wax Records, with the aid of £1,000 from his boss at Honest Jon's record shop, to 'bring together all the different types of music that I've grown up with'. The first release was 'Promise' from the New York jazz group Repercussions, followed in 1993 by tracks from Raw Stylus, Palmskin Productions and DJ Takemura. However, it was DJ Shadow's 'In Flux/Hindsight' that really established the Mo' Wax approach, helping to introduce hip-hop to the techno community and vice versa. In 1994 Mo' Wax pursued this idea with releases from DJ Krush, Attica Blues and Lavelle's own project, U.N.K.L.E. La Funk Mob's 'Tribulations Extra Sensorielles' included remixes by Ritchie Hawtin and Carl Craig, while the excellent compilation Headz, as well as containing material from Mo' Wax artists, featured Howie B. and Autechre, further highlighting the label's aim to unite artists and sounds from supposedly disparate backgrounds. After turning down offers from London Records and other major labels, in 1996 Lavelle signed a distribution deal with A&M Records. The two Headz II compilations (1996) included tracks from the Beastie Boys, Black Dog Productions, Photek, Alex Reece, Roni Size, the Jungle Brothers and Massive Attack. Other artists who have released material on the label include Air, Deborah Anderson, Innerzone Orchestra (Carl Craig), Major Force, Money Mark, Dr. Octagon, Andrea Parker and Sukia.

Mo-Dettes

Despite the name, the timing of their appearance on the music scene, and the fact that they covered the Rolling Stones' 'Paint It Black', the Mo-Dettes were not modettes and disliked anyone who said they were. They were originally formed for a one-off gig at the Acklam Hall, supporting the Vincent Units. Their line-up was built around Kate Korus (b. Katherine Corris, New York, USA; guitar), who played with the Castrators before lasting just three gigs with the earliest line-up of the Slits. She left (to be replaced by Viv Albertine) and attempted to form several bands. Korus took a long time finding musicians with whom she was happy, but eventually she came across (on the set of The Great Rock 'N' Roll Swindle where both had non-acting jobs) drummer June Miles-Kingston (the sister of Bob Kingston of Tenpole Tudor) and bassist Jane Crockford. Crockford had previously played in the Banks Of Dresden with Richard Dudanski. Through a mutual friend they met Ramona Carlier, a singer from Switzerland whose experience to date had been backing vocals at a few sessions, plus a one-off party gig with a band called the Bomberettes, and had been in England about a year. The first product of their labours was 'White Mice' - on their own Mode label through Rough Trade Records. Ramona left late in 1981 to start a solo career, and was replaced by Sue Slack. Soon after, Korus left to be replaced by Melissa Ritter. The final split came shortly afterwards in 1982, owing to further internal friction. Miles-Kingston moved on to Fun Boy Three's backing band, before she produced a solo single for Go! Discs, joined the Communards and sang on various sessions. Kate Korus also released a single with Jenny of the Belle Stars.

- ALBUMS: The Story So Far (Mode 1980)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Loved By Thousands ... Hated By Millions (Bullet Proof 1995)★★.

Moanin' In The Moonlight - Howlin' Wolf

Unlike Muddy Waters, throughout his career Howlin' Wolf adhered to his Mississippi roots, learned from Charley Patton, the so-called Father of Delta blues. 'Smokestack Lightnin'', the song that epitomized the Wolf's roar, came from Patton, as did 'I Asked For Water (She Gave Me Gasoline)'. The howl was saved for 'Moanin' At Midnight' and 'Moaning For My Baby'. Although he had started on guitar, he took up the harmonica, which he played with more force than virtuosity. Having spent time around Memphis, Wolf also knew how to rock, and he drew the best from his Chicago musicians. His later collaborations with Willie Dixon may have brought him wider recognition, but the meat of the matter was in these earlier songs.

- Tracks: Moanin' In The Moonlight; How Many More Years; Smokestack Lightnin'; Baby How Long; No Place To Go; Evil; I'm Leading You; Moanin' For My Baby; I Asked For Water; Forty Four; Somebody In My Home.
- First released 1962
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Moanin' The Blues - Hank Williams

The strong blues thread in Hank Williams' music is partially the result of having learned guitar playing from a black musician, Tee-Tot. He also suffered a great deal, and proved that real suffering has to be endured before the artist can write convincingly about misery. Songwriting does not come any better than the compact, aching poetry of 'I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry'. It is not all doom and gloom, however, on this 8-track, 10-inch album: there is the unusual chording of 'Honky Tonk Blues' and the playful yodels of 'Lovesick Blues' and 'Long Gone Lonesome Blues'. Hank Williams is the most influential man country music has ever produced, or is ever likely to. Essential.

- Tracks: Moanin' The Blues; I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry; My Sweet Love Ain't Around; Honky Tonk Blues; Lovesick Blues; The Blues Come Around; I'm A Long Gone Daddy; Long Gone Lonesome Blues.
- First released 1952
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mobb Deep

Mobb Deep, a duo of rappers Havoc (b. c.1975, Queensbridge, New York, USA) and Prodigy (b. c.1975, Queensbridge, New York, USA), made a colossal impact in 1995 with their hardcore hip-hop single 'Shook Ones Part II'. Compared in the music press to the experience of hearing Schoolly D for the first time, it saw the Queensbridge, New York, USA rap team propelled to the top of the Billboard charts and national fame. It accompanied the release of their second album, The Infamous, which offered a succession of bleak inner-city narratives such as 'Survival Of The Fittest' and the Q-Tip-produced 'Drink Away The Pain'. Mobb Deep had first received attention in 1991 when US rap magazine The Source praised them in its 'Unsigned Hype' column. Both partners were just 16 years old, but their first demo possessed obvious maturity and skill, boosted by their experience of watching MC Shan and Roxanne Shante rapping in local parks. They met in 1988, Havoc having been tutored by his rapping cousin MC Tragedy. By 1992 they had secured a recording contract with Island Records' subsidiary 4th And Broadway, recruiting Large Professor and DJ Premier to help with the production of their somewhat listless debut album. Despite the initial momentum, however, the deal fell apart amid squabbles with an unethical manager. The duo regrouped in time for The Infamous, which was much-improved in terms of both production and lyrics. 'Survival Of The Fittest' was promoted by a 'paintball' competition in Long Island, with competing teams including members of the Wu-Tang Clan and Loud Records' staff.

● ALBUMS: Mobb Deep (4th And Broadway 1993)★★★, The Infamous (Loud/RCA 1995)★★★★, Hell On Earth (Loud/RCA 1996)★★★.

Mobley, Hank

b. Henry Mobley, 7 July 1930, Eastman, Georgia, USA, d. 30 May 1986. Tenor saxophonist Mobley began his professional career with an R&B band in 1950. The following year, he was attracting the attention of such important beboppers as Max Roach and Dizzy Gillespie, and by 1954 his stature was such that he was invited to become a founder member of Horace Silver's Jazz Messengers. When Silver re-formed a band under his own name, bequeathing the Messengers to Art Blakey, Mobley went along, too. In the late 50s he was briefly with Blakey, then worked with Dizzy Reece and, in 1961, spent a short but memorable time with Miles Davis. Throughout the 60s, Mobley worked with many distinguished musicians, among them Lee Morgan, Barry Harris and Billy Higgins, often leading the bands, and recording several outstanding sessions for Blue Note. In the 70s, Mobley was dogged by poor health, but he worked sporadically, including a stint as co-leader of a group with Cedar Walton. Mobley played even less frequently in the 80s, but shortly before his death in 1986, he worked with Duke Jordan. The seemingly casual ease with which Mobley performed, comfortably encompassing complex rhythmical innovations, and the long period spent on the sidelines have tended to obscure the fact that his was a remarkable talent. Also militating against widespread appeal was his sometimes detached, dry and intimate sound, which contrasted sharply with the more aggressively robust style adopted by many of his contemporaries.

● ALBUMS: with Art Blakey The Jazz Messengers At The Cafe Bohemia (1955)★★★★, The Hank Mobley Quartet (Blue Note 1955)★★★, The Jazz Message Of Hank Mobley (Savoy 1956)★★★★, Mobley's Message (1956)★★★★, Mobley's Second Message (Savoy 1956)★★★, The Hank Mobley Sextet (1956)★★★, Hank Mobley-Lee Morgan: Hank's Shout (1956)★★★, Hank Mobley And His All Stars (Blue Note 1957)★★★, Hank Mobley With Donald Byrd And Lee Morgan (Blue Note 1957)★★★, The Hank Mobley Quintet (1957)★★★★, Hank (1957)★★★, Hank Mobley (Blue Note 1957)★★★, Poppin' (1957)★★★, Peckin' Time (Blue Note 1958)★★★, Monday Night At Birdland (1958)★★★, Soul Station (Blue Note 1960)★★★★, Roll Call (Blue Note 1960)★★★, with Miles Davis Carnegie Hall 1961 (1961)★★★, with Davis At The Blackhawk (1961)★★★★, Workout (Blue Note 1961)★★★★, Another Workout (1961)★★★, Straight No Filter (Blue Note 1963-65)★★★, No Room For Squares (Blue Note 1963)★★★, 52nd Street Theme (New Jazz 1963)★★★, The Turnaround (1965)★★★, Dippin' (Blue Note 1965)★★★, A Caddy For Daddy (Blue Note 1965)★★★, A Slice Of The Top (1966)★★★, Third Season (1967)★★★, Hi Voltage (1967)★★★, Far Away Lands (Blue Note 1967)★★★, Reach Out (1968)★★★, The Flip (1969)★★★, Thinking Of Home (1970)★★★.

Moby

A New York DJ, recording artist, Christian, vegan and Philosophy graduate. Moby (b. Richard Melville Hall, *c.*1966, New York, USA) is so nicknamed because of the fact that he can trace his ancestry to the author of the famous Captain Ahab whaling tale. This is by no means the only interesting aspect of his idiosyncratic artistic life. He refuses to travel anywhere by car because of the environmental considerations, and generally displays little of the public anonymity that is the creed of the underground DJ. In 1991 he took the Twin Peaks theme, under the guise of 'Go', into the Top 10. Although that appealed to the more perverse natures of both mainstream and club audiences, the release of 'I Feel It'/'Thousand' in 1993 was yet more bizarre. The latter track was classified by the Guinness Book Of Records as the fastest single ever, climaxing at 1015 bpm. It was typical of Moby's playful, irreverent attitude to his work. In his youth he was a member of hardcore punk outfit the Vatican Commandos, and even substituted as singer for Flipper while their vocalist was in prison. He has brought these rock 'n' roll inclinations to bear on the world of dance: at the 1992 DMC/Mixmag Awards ceremony he trashed his keyboards at the end of his set. His introduction to dance music began in the mid-80s: 'I was drawn to it, I started reading about it, started hanging out in clubs. For me house music was the synthesis of the punk era.' He collected cheap, second hand recording equipment, basing himself in an old factory/converted prison in New York's Little Italy. He signed to leading independent Mute in 1993. Ambient was a collection of unissued cuts from 1988 to 1991, composed of barely audible atmospheric interludes. Story So Far gathered together a series of tracks he cut for Instinct Records. The following year Moby released 'Hymn', a transcendental religious techno odyssey, distinguished by a 35-minute ambient mix and a Laurent Garner remix. His own remix catalogue includes Brian Eno, LFO ('Tan Ta Ra'), Pet Shop Boys, Erasure ('Chorus'), Orbital ('Speed Freak'), Depeche Mode and even Michael Jackson. He moved away from his techno/dance base in 1996 with Animal Rights, and in turn sounded more like Johnny Rotten.

● ALBUMS: Ambient (Mute 1993)★★, The Story So Far (Mute 1993)★★★, Everything Is Wrong (Mute 1995)★★★, Animal Rights (Mute 1996)★★★★, I Like To Score (Mute 1997)★★★.

Moby Dick

'A Whale Of A Tale' according to the publicity handouts - but 'a whale of a mistake', according to the critics. They harpooned the show right at the start, and even the financial clout of Cameron Mackintosh could not heal the wounds. Moby Dick was tried out at the tiny Old Fire Station in Oxford in the autumn of 1991, before opening at London's Piccadilly Theatre on 17 March 1992. In Robert Longden's book, sixth-form members of a girls' school bearing a remarkable resemblance to the infamous St. Trinian's, stage a production of Herman Melville's classic story in the school swimming pool. As one critic noted: 'The degree of camp, of music-hall smut and anachronism is extreme.' Cabaret singer Tony Monopoly played Miss Dorothy Hymen, the establishment's headmistress, who in turn played Captain Ahab (with a cricket pad where his peg leg should be) in the musical production of Moby Dick. When Ahab's ship sets sail, the schoolgirls, who are supposed to be sailors, appear scantily clad in gymslips and sexy stockings, and utter ancient jokes such as 'three years at sea and no sign of Dick'. Director and librettist Longden also wrote the lyrics, and the music was composed by Hereward Kaye. Their score, which contained more than 20 numbers - but no items that stood out - included 'Hymn', 'Forbidden Seas', 'Primitive', 'Love Will Always', 'Mr. Starbuck', 'Building America', 'Save The Whale', and 'Heave'. In the face of a vicious critical reaction and dwindling audiences, Mackintosh remained committed to the production until he was forced to close after a run of 15 weeks. He sanctioned the release of a double-CD which contained a recording of the show made over the sound system as a souvenir for the cast, and indicated that Moby was not sunk for ever. In 1993, a production was mounted by a theatre company in Boston, Massachusetts, and in the same year, a scaled-down, revised version, entitled Moby!, was presented in the English city of Exeter. The show surfaced again in 1995 at Hof, a small town in Northern Bavaria, with 'a new concept worked out by the authors and director Steven Dexter'.

Moby Grape

The legend that continues to grow around this late 60s San Francisco group is mainly based on their magnificent debut album, which fans vainly willed them to repeat. This iconoclastic band was formed in September 1966, with the seminal line-up of Alexander 'Skip' Spence (b. 18 April 1946, Windsor, Ontario, Canada; guitar/vocals), Jerry Miller (b. 10 July 1943, Tacoma, Washington, USA; guitar/vocals), Bob Mosley (b. 4 December 1942, Paradise Valley, California, USA; bass/vocals), Don Stevenson (b. 15 October 1942, Seattle, Washington, USA; drums) and Peter Lewis (b. 15 July 1945, Los Angeles, California, USA; guitar/vocals). With record companies queueing up to sign them, they decided to go with CBS Records and became marketing guinea pigs for an unprecedented campaign, whereupon 10 tracks (five singles plus b-sides) were released simultaneously. Not even the Beatles could have lived up to that kind of launch. Only one of the records dented the US chart: 'Omaha' reached a dismal number 88. Had the singles been released in normal sequence, they might all have been hits, as the quality of each song was outstanding. The band fell into immediate disarray, unable to cope with the pressure and hype. The resulting debut, Moby Grape, contained all these 10 tracks plus an additional three, and it deservedly reached the US Top 30 album charts. It is now recognized as a classic. The short, brilliantly structured, guitar-based rock songs with fine harmonies still sound fresh in the 90s.

Their follow-up was a similar success (yet a lesser work), and made the US Top 20 album chart. As with their debut, CBS continued with their ruthless marketing campaign, determined to see a return on their investment, as the band had originally held out for a considerable advance. Wow sported a beautiful surrealistic painting/collage by Bob Cato, depicting a huge bunch of grapes mixed with an eighteenth-century beach scene, that came with a free album, Grape Jam. Additionally, one of the tracks was recorded at 78 rpm, forcing the listener to get up and change the speed only to hear a spoof item played by Lou Waxman And His Orchestra. Amidst this spurious package were some of their finest songs, including Spence's 'Motorcycle Irene', Miller's 'Miller's Blues', Mosley's 'Murder In My Heart For The Judge' and arguably their best track, 'Can't Be So Bad'. Penned by Miller and featuring his stinging guitar solo, this furiously paced heavy rock item is suddenly slowed down and sweetened by an outstanding five-part Mamas And The Papas-style harmony. The song failed to chart anywhere.

Spence had departed with drug and mental problems by the release of Moby Grape '69, although his ethereal composition 'Seeing' is one of the highlights of this apologetic and occasionally brilliant album (the hype of the past is disclaimed by the 'sincere' sleeve notes). Other notable tracks included Lewis' hymn-like 'I Am Not Willing' and the straightforward rocker 'Truck Driving Man'. A disastrous European tour was arranged, during which the band was constantly overshadowed by the support act Group Therapy. Mosley left on their return to the USA, and allegedly joined the marines, leaving the rest to fulfil their contract by making a fourth album. He also made a solo album. Spence, who today lives in a men's hostel as a ward of the county, released the extraordinary Oar. This album has become a cult classic since its release in 1968, and is both painfully dark ('Diana') yet hopelessly light ('Lawrence Of Euphoria'). It does at least reflect Spence's condition as a paranoid schizophrenic.

The poor-selling and lacklustre Truly Fine Citizen was badly received; the critics had already given up on them. The band then disintegrated, unable to use the name which was and still is owned by their manager, Matthew Katz. The remaining members have appeared as Maby Grope, Mosley Grape, Grape Escape, Fine Wine, the Melvills, the Grape, the Hermans and the Legendary Grape. During one of their many attempts at re-formation, Mosley and Miller actually released a record as Fine Wine. The original five reunited for one more undistinguished album in 1971, 20 Granite Creek. Out of the mire, only Mosley's 'Gypsy Wedding' showed some promise. Skip Spence delivered the quirky 'Chinese Song,' played on a koto, and the silk-voiced Lewis produced 'Horse Out In The Rain' with its unusual timing and extraordinary booming bass. A live album in 1978 delighted fans, and rumours abounded about various re-formation plans. Some of the band still play together in small clubs and bars, but the magical reunion of the five (just like the five Byrds) can never be. Spence, sadly, is in no fit state and, unbelievably it was alleged that Mosley was also diagnosed as a schizophrenic and was living rough on the streets in San Diego. The myth surrounding the band continues to grow as more (outrageous) stories come to light.

The debut album is one of the true rock/pop classics of the past 30 years (along with Love's Forever Changes), and their influence is immense. The 'grape sound' has shown up in many groups over the past 20 years including the Doobie Brothers, R.E.M., the Smithereens, Teenage Fanclub and Weezer, and Robert Plant is a long term fan. They were, more than any other band from the Bay Area in 1967/68, the true embodiment of the music (but not the culture). Their appearance at Wetlands, New York on 6 August 1997 was a delightful surprise. Mosley, Miller and Lewis performed as Moby Grape with ex-Big Brother And The Holding Company Sam Andrew replacing Spence and Randy Guzman replacing Stevenson.

- ALBUMS: Moby Grape (Columbia 1967)★★★★★, Wow (Columbia 1967)★★★, Grape Jam (Columbia 1967)★★, Moby Grape '69 (Columbia 1969)★★★★, Truly Fine Citizen (Columbia 1969)★★★, 20 Granite Creek (Reprise 1971)★★★, Live Grape (1978)★★★, as Fine Wine Fine Wine (1976)★★, Moby Grape (San Francisco Sound 1983)★★. Solo: Bob Mosley Bob Mosley (Warner 1972)★★. Peter Lewis Peter Lewis (Taxim 1996)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Great Grape (Columbia 1973)★★★, Vintage Grape 2-CD box set with unreleased material and alternate takes (Columbia/Legacy 1993)★★★★★.

Moby Grape - Moby Grape

Time and time again this album is cited as the finest debut of all time. But just who were Moby Grape? They were a stellar San Francisco rock band who became appalling victims of record company hype followed by their own excesses, as they were lulled into believing they were more than they were. Loopy Skip Spence, growling Bob Mosley and talented bluesman Jerry Miller were but three-fifths of a great band. Every track could have been issued as a single, which is exactly what CBS did when they released five on the same day, with disastrous results. An indispensable collection and superseded in 1993 by the even more indispensable Vintage Grape.

- Tracks: Hey Grandma; Mr. Blues; Fall On You; 8.05; Come In The Morning; Omaha; Naked, If I Want To; Someday; Ain't No Use; Sitting By The Window; Changes; Lazy Me; Indifference.
- First released 1967
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 24

Mock Turtles

With their promising UK hit single 'Can You Dig It?', the Mock Turtles followed a line of success stories that had emanated from Manchester, England, between 1989 and 1991. Like many of their contemporaries, the band had been playing the independent circuit for several years before realizing their potential. The band's lynchpin was singer, guitarist and songwriter Martin Coogan, who had previously fronted Judge Happiness, won a Salford University talent contest and subsequently issued a single, 'Hey Judge', on the Mynah label in 1985. As the Mock Turtles, Coogan was joined by Steve Green (bass), Krzysztof Korab (keyboards) and Steve Cowen (drums), and their recordings surfaced on several of the Imaginary label's popular tribute compilations (covering Syd Barrett's 'No Good Trying', Captain Beefheart's 'Big-Eyed Beans From Venus', the Kinks' 'Big Sky', the Byrds' 'Why' and the Velvet Underground's 'Pale Blue Eyes'), illustrating their eclectic tastes. Meanwhile, the band's first 12-inch EP, Pomona, was issued in 1987, and although it owed an obvious debt to early David Bowie and veered towards the overblown, the confidence of musicians, string arrangements and songwriting was obvious. Guitarist Martin Glyn Murray joined the band in time for 'The Wicker Man' (inspired by the film of the same name), followed by 'And Then She Smiles'. From pure folk to powerful songs verging on the pompous, the Mock Turtles conveyed a distinctive feel within their music. However, it was their next single, 1990's 'Lay Me Down', that hinted at bigger things, sporting a sparse yet infectious shuffling backbeat. Hot on its heels came a well-received debut album, Turtle Soup, in June, which fared well on the independent chart, as did the band's collaboration with one of Coogan's long-time influences, Bill Nelson, for 'Take Your Time' (the b-side of their next single, 'Magic Boomerang'). This was enough to lure Siren Records, and for their first major label single, the band chose to rework the b-side of 'Lay Me Down', 'Can You Dig It?'. The single was an instant hit, with BBC Television's Top Of The Pops appearances to match, and in its wake came another reissue of sorts, 'And Then She Smiles'. This failed to build on the success of 'Can You Dig It', and the Mock Turtles' highly commercial Two Sides suffered from a low profile, despite its abundance of musical muscle and carefully crafted songs. In the meantime, Imaginary compiled most of their early single tracks on 1987-90, for those newcomers who had missed them first time around. However, the Mock Turtles' rapid progress soon transmuted into an equally swift decline. The band dissolved when Coogan formed a new band, Ugli, with Korab and Green after Murray left to pursue an acting career. Coogan (brother of Steve) wrote songs for the latter's pseudonymous comedy crooner Tony Ferrino.

- ALBUMS: Turtle Soup (Imaginary 1990)★★★, Two Sides (Two Sides 1991)★★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: 87-90 (Imaginary 1991)★★★.

Mockingbirds

Formed in Manchester, England, in 1964, when three former members of the Whirlwinds - Graham Gouldman (b. 10 May 1945, Manchester, England; guitar/vocals), Steve Jacobsen and Bernard Basso - were joined by ex-Sabres' drummer Kevin Godley (b. 7 October 1945, Manchester, England). However, although Graham's songwriting skills provided hits for the Yardbirds, Hollies and Herman's Hermits, his group was unable to gain a similar commercial ascendancy. Between 1965 and 1966, the Mockingbirds completed five singles, of which 'You Stole My Love' was the most ambitious. Although co-produced by Giorgio Gomelsky and Paul Samwell-Smith, and abetted by vocalist Julie Driscoll, the song was a commercial failure and the group's confidence was consequently undermined. Gouldman began a solo career upon the group's collapse, but later rejoined Godley for several studio projects, which in turn inspired the formation of 10cc.

Models

The Models were Australia's premier 'new wave' band to emerge from the punk period in the second half of 1978. Original member Sean Kelly (guitar, vocals) and James Freud (bass; who joined in 1982), provided much of the Models' song material. Both had played together previously in Melbourne punk band the Teenage Radio Stars. The fluctuating line-up of the Models has in the past included notables Andrew Duffield (keyboards; replaced in 1983 by Roger Mason), drummers Janis 'Johnny Crash' Friedenfields and Barton Price, Mark Ferrie (bass, vocals) and James Valentine (keyboards). The band recorded often, and despite enjoying substantial success on the Australian alternative charts, toured frequently and extensively to repay debts that would eventually lead to acrimony between the principal songwriters. Commercial success finally came in 1985 with the 'Out Of Sight Out Of Mind' single and album, and the 'Barbados' single. The band's material was either dense rock music or melodic pop, which alienated its long-standing fans. Since the band broke up in 1987, Freud recorded a solo album, but despite its high production costs, it did not perform very well. Kelly eased himself back into the limelight by co-forming a band called the Absent Friends with various other well-known Australian musicians, including INXS bassist Garry Beers. Initially conceived as a part-time affair, the band developed into a more fully fledged outfit which earned high respect around Sydney, and released Here's Looking Up Your Address on the Mushroom label in 1990.

- ALBUMS: Alphabetacharliedeltaechofoxtrot (Mushroom 1980)★★★, Local And/Or General (Mushroom 1981)★★★, Pleasure Of Your Company (Mushroom 1983)★★★, Out Of Sight Out Of Mind (Mushroom 1985)★★★, Media (Mushroom 1986)★★★.

Modern Art - Art Farmer

Trumpet and flugelhorn player Art Farmer is a warm and lyrical improviser, capable of creating stunningly original and carefully structured solos. This fascinating 1958 Blue Note date brings Farmer together with the highly regarded swing-led tenor saxophonist Benny Golson (and prolific jazz composer, most notably of 'I Remember Clifford') a year before they went on to form the enduringly popular Jazztet. The amazing Bill Evans, on loan at the time from Miles Davis's Sextet, fills the piano chair, while Art's twin brother Addison plays bass, and Dave Bailey is on drums. This is swinging and melodic modern mainstream jazz at its very best.

- Tracks: Mox Nix; Fair Weather; Darn That Dream; The Touch Of Your Lips; Jubilation; Like Someone In Love; I Love You; Cold Breeze.
- First released 1958
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Modern English

Formed in Colchester, Essex, England, in 1979, Modern English's debut, Mesh And Lace, was released in suitably arty packaging by 4AD Records two years later. It drew heavily on the gloom rock sound already patented by bands such as Joy Division, and had little originality or focus. After The Snow, recorded by the same line-up of Robbie Gray (vocals), Gary McDowell (guitar, vocals), Richard Brown (drums), Mick Conroy (bass, vocals) and Stephen Walker (keyboards), was a minor revelation, as they introduced warmth and strong guitar harmonies, rejecting the tinny bleakness of the debut. It was well received in the USA, and the band relocated to New York to consolidate a popularity encouraged by college radio. Richochet Days had a crisper production but less creative experimentation. By Stop Start, released by Sire Records in 1986, Stephen Walker and Richard Brown had left, and Aaron Davidson (keyboards, guitar) had joined. The band had tried too hard for commercial approval and was left with an unspecific rock/pop sound that caused them to split soon afterwards. Gray returned to England to form a new group. They reconvened in 1990 for Pillow-Lips, but to little interest.

● ALBUMS: Mesh And Lace (4AD 1981)★★, After The Snow (Sire 1982)★★★, Richochet Days (Sire 1984)★★★, Stop Start (Sire 1986)★★, Pillow-Lips (TVT 1990)★★.

Modern Jazz Quartet

In 1951, four musicians who had previously played together in the Dizzy Gillespie big band formed a small recording group. Known as the Milt Jackson Quartet, the group consisted of Jackson (vibraphone), John Lewis (piano), Ray Brown (bass), and Kenny Clarke (drums). Brown's place was soon taken by Percy Heath, and by the following year, the group had adopted the name, Modern Jazz Quartet. Although initially only a recording group, they then began playing concert engagements. In 1955, Clarke dropped out to be replaced by Connie Kay. The new line-up of Jackson, Lewis, Heath and Kay continued performing as a full-time ensemble for the next few years, later reducing their collective commitments to several months each year. Seen as both a black response to the intellectualism of the Dave Brubeck quartet and New York's answer to west coast cool jazz, the MJQ were both very popular and very controversial, their detractors claiming that their music was too delicate and too cerebral. Whatever the case, there was certainly no denying that the group brought the dignity and professionalism of a classical quartet to their jazz performances. In 1974, the MJQ was disbanded, but reformed once more in 1981 for a concert tour of Japan. The success of this comeback convinced the members to reunite on a semi-permanent basis, which they did in the following year. Since 1982 they have continued to play concert and festival dates. Among the most sophisticated of all bop ensembles, the MJQ's directing influence has always been Lewis, whose sober performing and composing style was never more apparent than in this context. Lewis's interest in classical music has also been influential in MJQ performances, thus placing the group occasionally, and possibly misleadingly, on the fringes of third-stream jazz. The playing of Heath and Kay in this, as in most other settings in which they work, is distinguished by its subtle swing. Of the four, Jackson is the most musically volatile, and the restraints placed upon him in the MJQ create intriguing formal tensions which are, in jazz terms, one of the most exciting aspects of the group's immaculately played, quietly serious music.

● ALBUMS: Modern Jazz Quartet With Milt Jackson (Prestige 1953)★★★★, Modern Jazz Quartet Vol 2 (Prestige 1953)★★★, Django (1953)★★★★, Concorde (Prestige 1955)★★★★, Modern Jazz Quartet (Savoy 1955)★★★, The Artistry Of (Prestige 1956)★★★★, The MJQ At Music Inn (Atlantic 1956)★★★, Django (Prestige 1956)★★★★, Fontessa (Atlantic 1956)★★★★, Live (Jazz Anthology 1956)★★★, One Never Knows (1957)★★★, MJQ (Atlantic 1957)★★★★, Concorde (Original Jazz Classics 1957)★★★, Live At The Lighthouse (Atlantic 1957)★★★★, At Music Inn: Vol 2 (Atlantic 1958)★★★, Odds Against Tomorrow (1959)★★★, Longing For The Continent (LRC 1959)★★★, European Concert (Atlantic 1960)★★★, Patterns (United Artists 1960)★★★, Third Stream Music: MJQ And Guests (Atlantic 1960)★★★, Pyramid (Atlantic 1960)★★★★, MJQ And Orchestra (Atlantic 1961)★★, Lonely Woman (Atlantic 1962)★★★, The Comedy (Atlantic 1962)★★★, The Sheriff (Atlantic 1964)★★★, with Laurindo Almeida Collaboration (Atlantic 1964)★★★, A Quartet Is A Quartet Is A Quartet (Atlantic 1964)★★★, Plays Gershwin's Porgy And Bess (Atlantic 1965)★★★, Play For Lovers (Prestige 1966)★★★, Plays Jazz Classics (Prestige 1966)★★★, Jazz Dialogue (Atlantic 1966)★★★, Blues At Carnegie Hall (Atlantic 1967)★★★, Live At The Lighthouse (Atlantic 1967)★★★, Under The Jasmine Tree (Apple 1968)★★, Space (Apple 1969)★★, Plastic Dreams (Atlantic 1971)★★, The Legendary Profile (Atlantic 1972)★★★, Blues On Bach (Atlantic 1974)★★★★, The Complete Last Concert (Atlantic 1974)★★★★, Plus rec. 1957-71 (70s)★★★, In Memoriam (1977)★★★, Together Again! (Pablo 1982)★★★, Together Again!: Echoes (Pablo 1984)★★★, The Best Of The MJQ rec. 1984-85 (80s)★★★, Three Windows (Atlantic 1987)★★★, For Ellington (East West 1988)★★★, MJQ & Friends (Atlantic 1994)★★★, A Celebration (Atlantic 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: MJQ 40 4-CD box set (Atlantic 1992)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: 40th Anniversary (View Video 1995).

Modern Lovers

Formed in Boston, Massachusetts, USA, the Modern Lovers revolved around the talents of uncompromising singer-songwriter Jonathan Richman (b. May 1951, Boston, Massachusetts, USA). The group, which included Jerry Harrison (b. 21 February 1949, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, USA; guitar - later of Talking Heads), Ernie Brooks (bass) and future Cars drummer David Robinson, offered an inspired amalgam of 50s pop, garage bands, girl groups and the Velvet Underground, a style that both engendered a cult following and attracted the interest of ex-Velvet member John Cale, then a staff producer at Warner Brothers Records. However, having completed a series of demos, a disillusioned Richman disbanded the line-up and retreated to Boston, although Cale marked their association by recording his protégé's composition, 'Pablo Picasso', on Helen Of Troy (1975). In 1976, the unfinished tracks were purchased by the newly founded Beserkley Records label, which remixed the masters, added two new performances and released the package as The Modern Lovers. The company also signed Richman, whose new album, Jonathan Richman And The Modern Lovers, was confusingly issued within months of the first selection. The second set revealed a less intensive talent, and his regression into almost childlike simplicity was confirmed on Rock 'N' Roll With The Modern Lovers. Richman's new group - Leroy Radcliffe (guitar), Greg 'Curly' Kerenen (bass) and D. Smart (drums) - was purely acoustic and featured a repertoire which, by including 'The Ice-Cream Man', 'Hey There Little Insect', 'The Wheels On The Bus' and 'I'm A Little Aeroplane', was deemed enchanting or irritating, according to taste. The Modern Lovers nonetheless enjoyed two surprise UK hits with 'Roadrunner' and 'Egyptian Reggae', which reached numbers 11 and 5, respectively, in 1977. However, as the unit was undeniably a vehicle for Richman's quirky vision, the Modern Lovers name was dropped the following year when the singer embarked on a solo tour. He has nonetheless revived the title on occasions, notably on It's Time For Jonathan Richman And The Modern Lovers and Modern Lovers 88.

- ALBUMS: The Modern Lovers (Beserkley 1976)★★★★, Jonathan Richman And The Modern Lovers (Beserkley 1976)★★★, Rock 'N' Roll With The Modern Lovers (Beserkley 1977)★★★, The Modern Lovers Live (Beserkley 1977)★★, It's Time For Jonathan Richman And The Modern Lovers (Upside 1986)★★, Modern Lovers 88 (Rounder 1988)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Original Modern Lovers early recordings (Bomp! 1981)★★★, Jonathan Richman And The Modern Lovers - 23 Great Recordings (Beserkley 1990)★★★★.

The Modern Lovers - Modern Lovers

One of the great 'lost' albums in rock history, The Modern Lovers offered listeners a bridge between the Velvet Underground and the birth of punk. It also introduced them to Jonathan Richman, a most underrated songwriter. The Modern Lovers' only proper album is actually a collection of demos recorded with John Cale in the early 70s. They were never released until 1976, by which time the band had long passed. The classic tracks available here include 'Pablo Picasso', 'She Cracked' and 'Roadrunner', the subliminal influence at work behind Cornershop's 'Brimful Of Asha'. Richman's aching vocals, often seemingly on the point of collapse, provide the sort of direct emotional connection that great rock 'n' roll has always been about.

- Tracks: Roadrunner; Astral Plane; Old World; Pablo Picasso; I'm Straight; She Cracked; Hospital; Someone I Care About; Girl Friend; Modern World; Dignified And Old; Government Center.
- First released 1976
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Modern Mandolin Quartet

America's Modern Mandolin Quartet were co-founded by producer Mike Marshall, a native of Florida, whose early interests in bluegrass music were later qualified by his experiences as second mandolin player in the eclectic David Grisman Quartet, before he experienced full blooded modern jazz first hand with Montreaux. This circuitous passage was further complicated by a growing awareness of classical structures, which led in turn to him adapting string quartet literature to different musical forms. The MMQ was thus formed with Dana Rath in 1985. Rath's second mandolin was augmented by Paul Binkley on mandola and John Imholz on mandocello. The latter pair adopted responsibility for arranging the group's material. Binkley had previously performed on classical guitar with the San Francisco Symphony, Opera and Ballet. Marshall's intention was explicitly to 'take a folk instrument, and by tackling classical music bring the mandolin into the concert hall'. By 1988 they were sufficiently prepared to announce their self-titled debut. It was followed two years later by Intermezzo, featuring pieces drawn from the repertories of Shostakovisch, Ravel, Brahms and Bach. Continuing this thread, 1991's Nutcracker Suite became one of the top 35 Christmas releases in the US Billboard charts. The group's fourth album for Windham Hill Records was arguably their most audacious. Pan-American Journeys: 20th Century Music Of The Americas, Vol. 1, was exactly what its title suggested. Rather grandly, it invited the ensemble to adapt pieces drawing on the musical history of their continent, in an attempt to produce a patchwork map of classical music's evolution from ethnic forms. The featured writers included George Gershwin, Argentinean Astor Piazzolla, famous for his demonstrative tangos (his contribution, 'Four For Tango', was originally written for the Kronos Quartet), and Brazilian composer Heitor Villa-Lobos. Other contemporary writers consulted included Tully Cathey, whose 'Elements IV: Water', was inspired by the Colorado River that runs by his home. The set opened with 'Redonda', specially composed for the quartet by former Montreux drummer Tom Miller, and climaxed in an adaptation of a Cuban folk song, 'Ojos Brujos' ('Eye Of The Sorceror').

- ALBUMS: Modern Mandolin Quartet (Lost Lake Arts/Windham Hill 1988)★★★, Intermezzo (Windham Hill 1990)★★★★, The Nutcracker Suite (Windham Hill 1991)★★★, Pan-American Journeys: 20th Century Music Of The Americas, Vol. 1 (Windham Hill 1994)★★★.

Modern Records

Modern Records was founded in Los Angeles, California, USA, in 1945 by brothers Jules, Saul And Joe Bihari. They secured early success with Hadda Brooks and Johnny Moore's Three Blazers, and within two years Modern had become one of the leading postwar R&B labels on the west coast, alongside Imperial Records and Aladdin Records. The Biharis manufactured their own records, building one of the largest pressing plants in the region, and an agreement with a network of independent distributors ensured Modern's releases enjoyed national distribution. Etta James's 'Wallflower', Jessie Belvin's 'Goodnight My Love' and the Cadets' 'Stranded In The Jungle' were some of the label's most successful recordings during the early 50s. John Lee Hooker, Lightnin' Hopkins and Willie 'Smokey' Hogg also recorded for Modern but its eminent position was undermined by its practice of 'covering' other R&B hits. Nevertheless, the Biharis were able to establish several subsidiary companies, including RPM, founded in 1950, and Flair, founded in 1953. B.B. King was RPM's most important signing, as this seminal blues singer/guitarist remained with the company until the 60s. Rosco Gordon ('No More Doggin') and Johnny 'Guitar' Watson ('Those Lonely, Lonely Nights') were among the other artists enjoying success on this outlet. Meanwhile, Richard Berry's influential 'Louie Louie' was first issued on Flair. In 1951, armed with a Magnechord tape recorder, Joe Bihari undertook the first of several field trips to Mississippi. He made several important juke-joint blues recordings on location, notably with impassioned slide guitarist Elmore James. In 1952 Modern set up the Meteor label in Memphis, Tennessee, USA. It was managed by a fourth Bihari brother, Lester. By the end of the 50s the Modern group was being eclipsed by newer independent companies, notably Atlantic Records. The Biharis opted to concentrate on a newly founded budget line, Crown Records, which, following bankruptcy, was succeeded by Kent Records. These outlets revived recordings from Modern's halcyon era, but the entire operation ceased trading during the 80s following the death of Jules Bihari. The best of its catalogue has since been repacked for compact disc by UK licensees Ace Records.

Modern Romance

From the remnants of UK punk band, the (Leyton) Buzzards, crawled Geoff Deanne and David Jaymes. After becoming involved in the London club scene (alongside luminaries like Steve Strange), they formed a company called Business Art Productions with manager Brian O'Donoughue. Signed to WEA, they released 'Tonight'. This flopped, so in late 1980, Jaymes and Deanne formed a new line-up featuring Deanne (b. 10 December 1954; vocals), Jaymes (b. 28 November 1954; bass), brother Robbie Jaymes (b. 3 October 1962; keyboards), Paul Gendler (b. 11 August 1960; guitar) and Andy Kyriacou (b. 19 April 1958; drums, ex-Linx; Central Line). John Du Prez also featured on trumpet. Through their club connections they came across the Latin-American music salsa, which was set to be all the craze in the summer of 1981. They quickly recorded 'Everybody Salsa', which gave them their first hit. It was followed by other successful material in a similar vein; 'Ay Ay Ay Ay Moosey', 'Queen Of The Rapping Scene', and 'Cherry Pink And Apple Blossom White'. At this point Deanne left to release several solo singles and write for camp club act Divine. Former fireman Michael J. Mullins (b. 9 November 1956) was his replacement. Their hit run continued in 1983, with 'Best Years Of Our Life', 'High Life' and 'Walking In The Rain'. A cover of Baltimora's 'Tarzan Boy' the following year fared less well. They disbanded shortly afterwards. David Jaymes released a solo single in 1988, while Deanne now writes comedy scripts. John Du Prez currently lives in Hollywood where he plays on film scores.

- ALBUMS: Adventures In Clubland (Warners 1981)★★, Trick Of The Light (Warners 1983)★★, Party Tonight (Ronco 1983)★★, Move On (RCA 1985)★★.

Modern Sounds In Country And Western Music - Ray Charles

Ray Charles had dabbled with country music at Atlantic, notably 'I'm Movin' On', but the move to ABC-Paramount prompted him to record a full album. His version of Don Gibson's 'I Can't Stop Loving You' was a transatlantic number 1 and not far behind his bittersweet performance of Eddy Arnold's 'You Don't Know Me'. Charles's own favourite was 'I Love You So Much It Hurts'. The album was so successful that he recorded a second volume and had hits with 'Take These Chains From My Heart' and 'Cryin' Time'. Although the album showed that black soul and white country could be merged, Ray Charles lost his momentum, tending to cruise along on the same theme.

- Tracks: Bye Bye Love; You Don't Know Me; Half As Much; I Love You So Much It Hurts; Just A Little Lovin'; Born To Lose; Worried Mind; It Makes No Difference Now; You Win Again; Careless Love; I Can't Stop Loving You; Hey Good Lookin'.
- First released 1962
- UK peak chart position: 6
- USA peak chart position: 1

Modernaires

Originally called the Three Weary Willies, this vocal trio was formed in 1935 at Lafayette High School in Buffalo, New York, USA. Consisting of Hal Dickinson (lead and second tenor), Bill Conway (baritone) and Chuck Goldstein (first tenor), they became residents on local radio station WGR. They became Don Juan And Two And Three when they moved to New York, where they began to feature on CBS radio. At this point Ralph Brewster joined as first tenor and Goldstein moved to baritone while Conway took over on bass. After a brief time backing Ray Noble in 1939 they switched allegiance to Glenn Miller's new outfit (Miller had been trombonist with Noble during the trio's residency with Noble). They became the Modernaires, and their debut release, 'Perfidia', was as backing to Miller's singer Paula Kelly. A number 11 hit, it presaged a further 10 chart records in 1941, the most popular of which included 'The Booglie Wooglie Piggy' (with Tex Beneke) and 'I Guess I'll Have To Dream The Rest' and 'Elmer's Tune', with Ray Eberle, which rose to number 1 in the Billboard charts. Other hits included collaborations with Beneke again and Ernie Caceras. They also sang on the Glenn Miller Orchestra's signature tune, 'Chattanooga Choo Choo'. Further number 1's with Miller came in 1942 with 'Don't Sit Under The Apple Tree', '(I've Got A Gal In) Kalamazoo' and 'Moonlight Cocktails'. When Miller was enlisted in the air force during the war, the Modernaires produced another number 1 in 1943 with 'That Old Black Magic', with Miller's orchestra and Skip Nelson, which was included in the propaganda film Star Spangled Rhythm. With Miller missing in action, the Modernaires moved to Columbia Records in 1944 and began to record for the first time without an orchestra. Their second single was 'Tribute To Glenn Miller', a medley of his most popular moments. The rest of the 40s saw numerous line-up changes with Alan Copeland, Vernon Polk and Tommy Treynor all joining at some point. In 1949 the Modernaires recorded 'The Old Master Painter' with Frank Sinatra, and this was followed in 1950 by four further singles with Sinatra for Columbia. The early part of the 50s was less successful for the Modernaires, who had to wait until 1953 and a new contract with Coral Records for their next success, an update of 'Jukebox Saturday Night' which had previously been a staple of their work with Miller. However, though they continued to release records until 1958, it was to diminishing returns and by the end of the decade they were no longer releasing new material.

Modibo, Askia

b. *c.*1968, Ke-Macina, Mali. In his formative years, Modibo sang ancestral Bambara songs accompanied on the flute while he travelled with his nomadic family. Following his schooling and a stint in the army, he pursued a career in music. He became known as Modibo Kone, recording in the traditional Wassoulou sound as part of Le Super Tentemba. They cut Wass Manding L'An 2000, which elicited a positive response from critics and punters alike. When exposed to music from the West, including that of Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and Bunny Livingstone, he found reggae to be inspirational. Many African performers have turned to reggae, notably Lucky Dube and Alpha Blondy, and Modibo was no exception. He moved to the Ivory Coast where he found work with Alpha Blondy and in 1988 formed his own group. In 1988 Modibo released his own tape, Allah Akbar. Its success led to a tour of West Africa and further tapes in his African reggae style followed. Following a meeting with Ibrahma Sylla, Modibo took his band Tjiladeh to record in Paris. The result of these sessions was Les Aigles, a cassette devoted to the Malian football team who almost won the African Nations Cup in 1994. By 1996 the UK-based World Music specialist Stern's Records released a compilation of his earlier cassettes, including 'Les Aigles Du Mali' and, in the style of Buju Banton's 'Untold Stories', the haunting 'Devaluation'.

● COMPILATIONS: Wass Reggae (Stern's 1996)★★★.

Modugno, Domenico

b. 9 January 1928, Polignano a Mare, Italy, d. 6 August 1994, Lampeduso. Modugno disappointed his father, a civic dignitary, by rejecting higher education to seek a career as a film actor in Rome. However, although he passed an entrance examination to drama college, National Service postponed entry for two years. Among the parts he gained on graduation was that of a balladeer in 1955's Il Mantello Rosso. More conspicuous than expected in this role, he was contracted by both national radio and Fonit Records as a vocalist, with accompaniment that varied from his own lone guitar or accordion to full orchestra. In a developing repertoire were self-composed pieces such as 'Ninna Nanna' (a lullaby penned in 1943), 'Lu Piscispada' and - recorded by many other Latinate artists - 'La Donna Riccia'. While he was runner-up in 1957's Neapolitan Song Festival with 'Lazzarella', 'Nel Blu Dipinto Di Blu' (written with Franco Migliacci) was placed first at the more prestigious San Remo event the following year, and thus flung Modugno into a lucrative round of appearances in venues beyond Italy - including North America. With English lyrics by Mitchell Parish, the opus became better known as 'Volare', a Grammy-earning US chart-topper that also reached the UK Top 10 - despite cover versions by Charlie Drake, Marino Marini and Dean Martin. 1959's 'Piove' - another San Remo winner - was an international smash, too - if overtaken in Britain by a version from Marini - when translated by Parish (as 'Ciao Ciao Bambino'). This and lesser triumphs, such as 'Addio Addio' and 1966's 'Dio Come Ti Amo', blessed Modugno with the dubious title of 'genius', though many claim that his most enduring work was his earliest, as demonstrated by periodic revivals of 'Volare', from Bobby Rydell in 1960 to David Bowie in 1986's Absolute Beginners movie.

Moffatt, Hugh

b. 10 November 1948, Fort Worth, Texas, USA. Unlike most country performers, Moffatt played trumpet in his high school band and had a fondness for big band jazz. He gained a degree in English from Rice University in Houston and learned to play the guitar. Moffatt played acoustic sets in Austin and Washington and then, in 1973, moved to Nashville. He says, 'I was interested in Nashville purely because of Kris Kristofferson. He proved that you can take the folk and the literary tradition, and you can be in Nashville, too.' In 1974, Ronnie Milsap recorded Moffatt's 'Just In Case'. Moffatt recorded two singles for Mercury - a cover version of 'The Gambler' and his own 'Love And Only Love' - but the contract then terminated. In the early 80s he formed the band Ratz, which included Moffatt's wife, Pebe Sebert, and released a five-track EP, Putting On The Ratz. In 1987, his superb album Loving You was released, and included a song written with Sebert, 'Old Flames (Can't Hold A Candle To You)'. He admits, 'That title and the ideas were Pebe's. We wrote it three months after we were married. We spent three months writing it, as we wanted it to be right. Everybody knew it would be a hit.' The song has been successfully recorded by Joe Sun, Dolly Parton and Foster And Allen. The only other song they wrote together was 'Wild Turkey', which was recorded by Lacy J. Dalton. Other Moffatt songs include 'Love Games' (Jerry Lee Lewis), 'Praise The Lord And Pass Me The Money' (Bobby Bare), 'Why Should I Cry Over You?' (George Hamilton IV) and 'Words At Twenty Paces' (Alabama). His sister, Katy Moffatt, is also a recording artist, at home with both acoustic and hard-rocking material. Hugh and Katy released a duet of 'Rose Of My Heart', which has also been recorded by Johnny Rodriguez and Nicolette Larson. The Wognum

Sessions is so-called because Moffatt and two other musicians recorded an album in a small church in Holland. The Life Of A Minor Poet was an apt title for Moffatt's most recent album, as he now seems content to play club dates without aiming for more major commercial success.

● ALBUMS: Loving You (Philo 1987)★★★, Troubadour (Philo 1989)★★★★, Live And Alone (Philo 1991), with Katy Moffatt Dance Me Outside (Philo 1992)★★★, The Wognum Sessions (Strictly Country 1995)★★★, The Life Of A Minor Poet (Watermelon 1996)★★★.

Moffatt, Katy

b. 19 November 1950, Fort Worth, Texas, USA. Moffatt is a Texan singer-songwriter whose country-based folk has won a limited, yet loyal, following. Originally from Fort Worth, her early influences included Leonard Cohen and Tracy Nelson. She spent the early 70s playing folk clubs and small rock venues, mainly in Colorado, before signing to CBS, and releasing two commercially slanted records in the mid to late 70s. Disillusioned with the music business, Moffatt kept a low profile during the early 80s, but during the mid-80s she received a nomination from the Academy Of Country Music as Best New Female Vocalist. Her appearance on the semi-legendary compilation A Town South Of Bakersfield (1985) was a key career move, and her performance at the Kerrville Folk Festival a year later was another important step; she met the respected songwriter Tom Russell, and they began a fruitful collaboration. In 1989, Moffatt gained favourable reviews for Walkin' On The Moon, her first album for 11 years. Throughout her career she has supported many musicians including Warren Zevon, Roy Orbison, the Everly Brothers, and Don Williams, and has recorded regularly for a variety of independent labels. She has recorded an album with her brother Hugh Moffatt. Strange but true: one of the factors that helped former 60s star P.J. Proby recover from his alcoholic oblivion was hearing Katy perform one of his lesser-known songs, 'In A Moment'. He bought a CD Walkman and played it continuously while drying out.

● ALBUMS: Katy (Columbia 1976)★★★, Kissing In The California Sun (Columbia 1978)★★★, Walkin' On the Moon (Philo 1989)★★★★, Child Bride (Philo 1990)★★★, The Greatest Show On Earth (Round Tower), with Hugh Moffatt Dance Me Outside (Philo 1992)★★★, Indoor Fireworks (Red Moon 1992)★★★, The Greatest Show On Earth this album was retitled Evangeline Hotel after the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey claimed infringement of copyright (Round Tower 1993)★★★★, Hearts Gone Wild (Watermelon 1994)★★★, Midnight Radio (Rounder 1996)★★★, with Kate Brislin Sleepless Nights (Rounder 1996)★★★.

Moffett, Charles

b. 1 September 1929, Fort Worth, Texas, USA, d. 14 February 1997. Moffett began his career playing trumpet with local R&B groups, and in the same high school band as Ornette Coleman, but at the age of 16 he began to study percussion. In 1953 he gained a BA in music and went on to teach in Texas for eight years. Coleman had been best man at Moffett's wedding in 1952; in 1961 they met again, Moffett taking the drummer's stool in Coleman's band. During Coleman's lay off from performance in the early 60s, Moffett went back to teaching, but he was ready when the group reformed to tour Europe in 1965. In 1970, Moffett moved to California, where he resumed his teaching while playing with local players such as Steve Turre, Keshavan Maslak and Prince Lasha. He also formed groups with his students and with members of his family. During the 80s Moffett moved back to New York, where he taught mentally retarded children and continued to play. Moffett's easy swing and perfect sense of time often appeared to owe much to earlier styles while remaining a perfect foil for the avant garde musicians he most often accompanied. A recent, and rare, appearance on record was on Frank Lowe's Decision In Paradise (*c.*80s).

● ALBUMS: with Ornette Coleman At The Golden Circle Vols. 1&2 (1965)★★★, The Gift (1969)★★★★, Family (1974)★★★.

Mogwai

Glasgow lo-fi post-rockers, described as the 'best band of the 21st century' by Pavement's Stephen Malkmus, whose studied art-rock boldly attempts to emulate the sound of legendary American alternative rockers Slint and Sonic Youth. Formed by Stuart Braithwaite (guitar, occasional vocals) and Dominic Aitchison (bass) in 1995, they were soon joined by second guitarist John Cummings and drummer Martin Bulloch. Their early singles, including 'Summer' and 'New Paths To Helicon' (collected on the Jet Set release), received high praise from a music press anxious for an antidote to the Oasis-dominated guitar-rock scene, although they left many listeners bemused by a 'difficult' live broadcast on BBC Radio 1 that ended with ten minutes of white noise. With former Teenage Fanclub drummer Brendan O'Hare as a temporary member, the band released their 1997 debut, Young Team, which confirmed their brash claims to greatness. The gradually rising guitar crescendo of tracks such as 'Yes I Am A Long Way From Home' and 'Like Herod', merged seamlessly with the delicate 'With Portfolio' and the rare vocal track (courtesy of Arab Strap's Aidan Moffat) on 'R U Still In 2 It', establishing the album as one of the year's most important releases.

● ALBUMS: Young Team (Chemikal Underground 1997)★★★★, Kicking A Dead Pig remixes (Eye-Q 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Ten Rapid (Jet Set 1997)★★★.

Mohamed, Pops

b. Ismail Mohamed-jan, 10 December 1949, Bemoni, South Africa. Mohamed founded and played guitar with his first band, the Valients, in the mid-60s. Their repertoire was made up of soul, Latin and local kwela music. Following the break-up of the Valients, he formed Children's Society, predominantly a covers band who nevertheless had a big local hit with the self-penned 'I'm A Married Man'. In the 70s Mohamed teamed up with Basil Coetzee and Sipho Gumede, bassist with Sakhile, and made four albums that became huge hits in the townships of South Africa. The 80s saw him working behind the scenes as a producer and recording engineer while also mastering the mbira (a South African thumb piano). In the early 90s he released two solo jazz albums for the local market only, Kalamazoo in 1991 and Sophiatown a year later. Both sold well and received lavish critical praise. Having produced and played on the Outernational Meltdown recording sessions in 1994, he released Ancestral Healing, his international debut, a year later. Subtitled 'From New York To Jo'burg', it was recorded in New York and featured local musicians, such as Valerie Naranjo (vibraphonist, percussionist, ex-Caribali), along with South African players and Mohamed himself playing piano, penny whistle, mbira and a whole range of percussion instruments. The album successfully melded traditional styles with the South African jazz sound made internationally popular by artists such as Abdullah Ibrahim and the African Jazz Pioneers. At the time of the release of Ancestral Healing, Mohamed was in the Kalahari Desert recording the chants and music of the Khoisian bushmen. Tapes of these recordings were used as the basis for a recording session featuring Mohamed and a group of young British jazz musicians including Chris Bowden and Roland Sutherland. The result, released as How Far Have We Come, featured funky South African-style jazz, with the tribal elements integrated more effectively on some tracks than on others.

● ALBUMS: Ancestral Healing (B&W Music 1995)★★★★, How Far Have We Come (M.E.L.T. 2000 1997)★★★.

Mohawk, Essra

b. Sandra Elayne Hurvitz, 23 April 1948, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA. Originally a part of the Bleeker Street scene in New York's Greenwich Village, Hurvitz developed her distinctive voice jamming with such jazz luminaries as Eddie Gomez, Jeremy Steig and the Brecker Brothers. She first recorded under the name of Jamie Carter on Liberty Records, releasing 'The Boy With The Way' in 1964. She subsequently turned down staff writing positions with both United Artists and Koppelman & Rubin, but in 1966 placed songs with both the Shangri-Las ('I'll Never Learn') and Vanilla Fudge ('The Spell That Comes After'). In 1967, Hurvitz became the first female member of Frank Zappa's Mothers Of Invention, and two years later recorded her debut album for the Verve label. Newly married to producer Frazier Mohawk, Hurvitz released her first album as Essra Mohawk for Reprise, having impressed the label's vice-president Mo Ostin during a solo performance in New York. Primordial Lovers was highly acclaimed in Down Beat and Rolling Stone, but any commercial impact the album might have made was lost due to poor distribution and the sale of Reprise. During the 70s Mohawk worked as a session vocalist and released further solo work. Her self-titled third album was released on Elektra/Asylum, but despite further critical acclaim was again hampered by poor promotion. Following an album on the Private Stock label, Mohawk returned to California where she was considered as a replacement for Grace Slick in Jefferson Starship. She found steady work writing and performing with Jerry Garcia, Bobby Weir, John Mellencamp, Al Jarreau, Al Stewart, Narada Michael Walden, Mark McEntee (Divinyls) and Eric Bazilian (Hooters). She also sang on the Schoolhouse Rock project, an educational and musical cartoon series that continues to air on American television. Returning to Philadelphia in the early 80s, Mohawk wrote 'Not With Me' for McFadden And Whitehead. Two independently released albums came out in the 80s, produced by her then husband Daoud Shaw (Van Morrison). Her career as a songwriter was boosted when Cyndi Lauper recorded 'Change Of Heart'. The song reached number 3 on the Billboard Top 200 in November 1986, and won an award from BMI for airplay. Subsequently, Mohawk has placed songs with artists including Tina Turner, Lorrie Morgan ('Hand Over Your Heart'), Lisa Fischer and Rita Coolidge. Her first solo album of the 90s, Raindance, was entered for two Grammy nominations (the Best Pop Album and Best Female Pop Vocalist categories). Now resident in Nashville, Tennessee, she is currently working with bass player Tim Drummond on a new project, KillerGrooveBand. A retrospective, Essra Mohawk: The Secret Diva, is due for release in 1999.

● ALBUMS: Sandy's Album Is Here At Last (Verve 1969)★★, Primordial Lovers (Reprise 1970)★★★★, Essra Mohawk (Elektra/Asylum 1974)★★★, Essra (Private Stock 1976)★★, Burnin' Shinin' (San Francisco Sound 1982)★★, E-Turn (Eclipse 1985)★★★, Raindance (Schoolkids 1995)★★★★.

Moholo, Louis

b. 10 March 1940, Cape Town, South Africa. Moholo is simply one of the great drummers, regardless of genre. In common with Ed Blackwell and Billy Higgins, both alumni of Ornette Coleman's Quartet, he has developed a sharp, clean, agile style, and shares with Higgins a remarkable ability to play with considerable dynamic restraint without losing strength and momentum. He is equally capable of thunderous, breakneck playing, which commands attention as much through its constant inventiveness as through its inexorable power. He grew up in a musical environment (his father a pianist, his mother and sister, singers). At the age of 16 he co-founded the Cordettes big band. In 1962, he won the Best Drummer award at the Johannesburg Jazz Festival and, together with four more of the best players at the Festival, he was invited by Chris McGregor to form a band. Thus the legendary Blue Notes were created. As a mixed-race band it was impossible for them to work under apartheid and so, in 1964, while touring Europe, they decided to stay in Switzerland. After a year there they settled in London, where, ultimately evolving into the Chris McGregor Group, they made a huge impact. As well as playing in the six-piece McGregor Group and the Brotherhood Of Breath big band, Moholo put his stamp on many fine bands, including Elton Dean's Ninesense, the Mike Osborne Trio, and Keith Tippett's extra-big band, Ark. In 1966, he toured South America with Steve Lacy, Enrico Rava and Johnny Dyani. In the 70s and 80s he often worked in Europe, particularly in trios with Irène Schweizer and Rudiger Carl, and Peter Brötzmann and Harry Miller, and recorded a duo concert with Schweizer in 1986. Moholo has also worked in duos with Tippett and Andrew Cyrille, and organized the African Drum Ensemble. He currently leads Viva La Black as well as a trio with Gary Curzon and Paul Rogers (recalling the classic Osborne trio) and plays in a percussion duo with Thebe Lipere.

● ALBUMS: with Irène Schweizer, Rudiger Carl Messer (1975)★★★, Blue Notes For Mongezi (1976)★★★, with Schweizer, Carl Tuned Boots (1977)★★★, Blue Notes In Concert Volume 1 (1978)★★★★, Spirits Rejoice (1978)★★★★, with Peter Brötzmann, Harry Miller The Nearer The Bone, The Sweeter The Meat (1980)★★★, with Keith Tippett No Gossip (1980),★★★ with Brötzmann, Miller Opened, But Hardly Touched (1981)★★★★, with Tippett, Larry Stabbins Tern (1982)★★, Irène Schweizer/Louis Moholo (1987)★★, Blue Notes For Johnny (1987)★★★, Viva La Black (1988)★★★, with Cecil Taylor Remembrance (1989)★★★★, Exile (Ogun 1991)★★★, with Derek Bailey, Thebe Lipere Village Life (Incus 1992)★★★, Freedom Tour - Live In South Afrika 1993 (Ogun 1995)★★.

Moire Music Drum Orchestra

The Moire Music Drum Orchestra are Trevor Watts (saxophone), Colin Gibson (bass), Paapa J Mensah (kit drums/vocals), plus Nana Tsiboe, Nana Appiah, Jojo Yates and Nee-Daku Patato on various African percussion instruments and vocals. This multi-cultural grouping followed the break up of leader Watts' previous groups, Spontaneous Music Ensemble, Moire Music (whose drummer Liam Genockey later joined Steeleye Span) and the Drum Orchestra. 'With the earlier Moire Music, we had a purely improvisational group. With the MMDO we moved towards a more structured, integrated music in which all the musicians contribute ideas. The band was originally my idea and I fund all the recording and publicity but the group is fairly open and everybody takes responsibility,' stated Watts. Still rooted in African traditions and rhythms, the orchestra used this as a base for improvisation and original songwriting. They are based in Hastings, Sussex, England, but in 1993 toured South Africa after being given a grant by the British Council (previous tours included the USA and Canada). Typically, the shows mixed performances with workshops, with audiences fascinated by the primarily West African-derived rhythmic structures of the group, with many of the percussionists originating from Ghana.

Moist

Vancouver, Canada-based band, featuring David Usher (vocals) and Mark Makowy (guitar), who met at a party hosted by mutual friend and keyboard player Kevin Young. Makowy brought in bass player Jeff Pearce, and eventually drummer Paul Wilcox completed the line-up. Following a demo cassette in early 1993, the band went on to release a debut album on their own label in February of the following year. Picked up by EMI Music Canada just one month later, the record went platinum in their own country, mainly bolstered by a ferocious appetite for live appearances. Their most important early exposure in Europe came when they were invited to perform at the annual Smash Hits Poll Winners' Party as a token rock presence.

● ALBUMS: Silver (EMI 1994)★★★.

Mojave 3

Indie group Mojave 3 were formed in England in 1995 by former Slowdive members Rachel Goswell (b. 16 May 1971, Hampshire, England; vocals) and Neil Halstead (b. 7 October 1970, Luton, Bedfordshire, England; vocals, guitar). Recruiting percussionist Ian McCutcheon and piano player Christopher Andrews, they recorded a six-song demo tape that produced an almost instant, three-album worldwide contract with 4AD Records. Chief songwriter Halstead was keen to point out to the press that Mojave 3 represented a 'completely different approach' to that adopted by Slowdive, a group who attracted a great deal of negative comment in the UK music press. Tracks from the demo were revisited on the group's debut album, Ask Me Tomorrow, which revealed a preference for keyboard-based rather than guitar-orientated songwriting. The best example of this was the promotional single 'Love Songs On The Radio'.

● ALBUMS: Ask Me Tomorrow (4AD 1996)★★★.

Mojo Navigator

Founded in 1966 in San Francisco, California, USA, The Mojo Navigator Rock'n'Roll News was edited by Greg Shaw, later of Bomp Records. A mimeographed publication, Mojo Navigator contained some of the first interviews with the emergent Big Brother And The Holding Company and the Grateful Dead, as well as other Bay Area talent including the Mystery Trend and Charlatans. Record and concert reviews were also featured and on one occasion Shaw was banned from attending the Fillmore Auditorium by promoter Bill Graham following an uncomplimentary article. Mojo Navigator ran for 13 issues before folding in 1967. As well as being a pioneering example of a home-produced fanzine, it also captured the atmosphere of the early San Franciscan scene. This role was commemorated by Country Joe And The Fish with the track 'Mojo Navigator' on Together (1968).

Mojo Men

This San Francisco-based group - Jimmy Alaimo (vocals/guitar), Paul Curcio (guitar), Don Metchick (organ) and Dennis DeCarr (drums) - was signed to Autumn, the city's leading independent label, in 1965. Here they enjoyed a fruitful artistic relationship with producer Sly Stone, which spawned a minor US hit in 'Dance With Me'. Jan Errico, from stablemates the Vejtables, replaced DeCarr in 1966 as the quartet switched outlets to Reprise Records. The following year they secured a US Top 40 hit with a charming version of Buffalo Springfield's 'Sit Down I Think I Love You', which was engineered and arranged by Van Dyke Parks. The group truncated its name to Mojo in 1968 and, now trimmed to a trio on Metchick's departure, completed the Mojo Magic album before breaking up. Paul Curcio meanwhile founded the Pacific Recording Studio in San Mateo, where Santana recorded their early releases.

● ALBUMS: Mojo Magic (Autumn 1968)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Why's Ain't Supposed To Be (Sundazed 1996)★★, Sit Down, It's The Mojo Men (Sundazed 1996)★★.

Mojos

Originally known as the Nomads, this Liverpool beat group was formed in 1962 by Stu James (vocals), Adrian Wilkinson (guitar), Keith Karlson (bass) and John Konrad (drums). They secured early minor fame by winning a songwriting contest that resulted in a recording deal. Pianist Terry O'Toole was added to the line-up prior to the release of the Mojos' debut single, and Nicky Crouch replaced Wilkinson before a follow-up, 'Everything's Alright', was recorded. This energetic 1964 single became a UK Top 10 hit, and the crafted excitement maintained throughout the performance assured its classic status. The group's later releases failed to match this quality, and although a revitalized line-up, consisting of James, Crouch, Lewis Collins (bass) and Aynsley Dunbar (drums) continued as Stu James and the Mojos, they broke up in December 1966. The singer then pursued a career in music publishing, while Dunbar joined John Mayall's Bluesbreakers and Collins pursued a acting career, later starring in the popular UK television series, The Professionals.

● COMPILATIONS: Working (1982)★★★.

Mole, Miff

b. Irving Milfred Mole, 11 March 1898, Roosevelt, Long Island, New York, USA, d. 29 April 1961. A youthful multi-instrumentalist, Mole had settled on the trombone by his mid-teenage years. Gigging extensively in and around New York, he worked with many small early jazz bands, including one led by pianist-turned-comedian Jimmy Durante, and was also a member of the Original Memphis Five, led by Phil Napoleon. In the mid-20s he became a close friend and musical associate of Red Nichols; they made many records together and generally encouraged one another's development. After a stint with Roger Wolfe Kahn's popular society band, Mole began a long period of studio work, and in 1938 joined Paul Whiteman. In the early 40s Mole began teaching, worked briefly with Benny Goodman, and led his own small bands at nightspots in New York and Chicago. Ill-health restricted his career in the 50s. Although subsequently overshadowed by outstanding contemporaries such as Jack Teagarden and Tommy Dorsey, Mole played an important role in the development of jazz trombone. He was a major influence in elevating the instrument from its slightly jokey status as a purveyor of unusual sounds, ably demonstrating that it could be a tasteful, melodic vehicle on which to play effective jazz solos. His exceptional technique also provided a standard by which trombonists could be measured, at least until the arrival on the scene of latterday technical wizards.

● COMPILATIONS: Miff Mole's Molers '1927' 1927 recording (Swaggie 1983)★★★★, Miff Mole's Molers '1928/30' 1928-1930 recording (Swaggie 1983)★★★★, with Bobby Hackett At Nick's (1944)★★★.

Molly Half Head

This Manchester, England guitar band consists of Paul Bardsley (vocals), Phil Murphy (guitar), Aky (b. Graham Atkinson; bass) and Andy Pickering (drums), who came together after reading advertisements in Loot magazine. However, Molly Half Head have more unusual origins than the average indie band. An early incarnation of the group was reportedly an experimental coalition with a trombone player competing against a wall of noise and feedback. The band claim that said trombonist eventually went mad. Veterans of that incarnation, Pickering and Murphy had recruited Atkinson and Bardsley by the time the group signed to Manchester independent Playtime Records in 1992. After an encouraging reception at the 1993 In The City festival/conference, the band released their debut single, 'Taste Of You'. Bearing in mind their own financial struggles, this was made available to the unemployed for 75 pence, and they also played a series of free-to-enter gigs. Despite this, they were hardly the decade's most political band ('There's no great insights into life we're trying to convey'). A second single, 'Toe To Sand', preceded sessions for their debut album. The UK indie press quickly warmed to the band, whose offbeat attitude was confirmed by a series of semi-nude photos, and a resistance to any degree of preciousness. 'Barny', included on the debut, managed to gain daytime UK radio play on the Steve Wright Show, and featured an impressive collage of characters drawn from the band's home estate. Dunce saw the band move to Columbia Records, and though press interest had worn a little thin (particularly with the passing of the 'Madchester' phenomenon, where all bands from the Manchester area were briefly deemed newsworthy), it was another energetic collection of pop songs that rewarded repeated listening.

● ALBUMS: Sulk (Playtime 1993)★★★, Dunce (Columbia 1995)★★★.

Molly Hatchet

This Lynyrd Skynyrd-style, blues-rock boogie outfit emerged from the US Deep South. The name derived from a tale of a woman in 17th-century Salem who beheaded her lovers with an axe after sleeping with them. The initial line-up comprised guitarists Dave Hlubek, Steve Holland and Duane Roland, plus bassist Bonner Thomas, vocalist Danny Joe Brown and drummer Bruce Crump. Their debut album, produced by Tom Werman (of Cheap Trick and Ted Nugent fame), was an instant success, with its three-pronged guitar onslaught and gut-wrenching vocals. Brown was replaced by Jimmy Farrar in 1980, before the recording of Beatin' The Odds. Farrar's vocals were less distinctive than Brown's, and an element of their identity was lost during the time that Farrar fronted the band. Nevertheless, commercial success ensued, with both Beatin' The Odds and Take No Prisoners peaking on the Billboard album chart at numbers 25 and 36, respectively. In 1982 Danny Joe Brown rejoined the band, while Thomas was replaced by Riff West on bass. No Guts ... No Glory emerged and marked a return to their roots: explosive guitar duels, heart-stopping vocals and steadfast rock 'n' roll. Surprisingly, the album flopped and Hlubek insisted on a radical change in direction. Steve Holden quit and keyboardist John Galvin was recruited for the recording of The Deed Is Done. This was a lightweight pop-rock album, largely devoid of the band's former trademarks. Following its release, the band retired temporarily to lick their wounds and reassess their future. In 1985 Double Trouble Live was unveiled, with a return to former styles. It included versions of their best-known songs, plus a Skynyrd tribute in the form of 'Freebird'. Founder-member Dave Hlubek departed, to be replaced by Bobby Ingram in 1989. They signed a new contract with Capitol Records and released Lightning Strikes Twice. This leaned away from their southern roots towards highly polished AOR. It featured cover versions of Paul Stanley's 'Hide Your Heart' and Miller/Burnette's 'There Goes The Neighbourhood', but was poorly received by fans and critics alike. Brown, meanwhile, continued to be plagued by illness as the result of diabetes.

● ALBUMS: Molly Hatchet (Epic 1978)★★★, Flirtin' With Disaster (Epic 1979)★★★, Beatin' The Odds (Epic 1980)★★, Take No Prisoners (Epic 1981)★★, No Guts ... No Glory (Epic 1983)★★★, The Deed Is Done (Epic 1984)★★, Double Trouble Live (Epic 1985)★★, Lightning Strikes Twice (Capitol 1989)★★, Devil's Canyon (SPV 1996)★★, Silent Reign Of Heroes (Koch 1998)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Epic 1990)★★★.

Moloko

UK-based Moloko is a curious duo of singer Roison Murphy (b. 1972, Dublin, Ireland) and multi-instrumentalist Mark Brydon (b. 1962, Sheffield, England). Embracing a sense of kitsch drama reminiscent of Deee-Lite and mid-period Human League, their debut album was actually recorded in a studio adjacent to the latter band's regular base in Sheffield. By this time they had already recorded two singles, 'Where Is The What If The What Is The Why' and 'Fe Fi Fo Fun For Me', which both impressed with their cultured electro-pop textures and weird lyrical narratives. Entirely self-composed and produced, other delights on their debut album rejoiced in titles such as 'Killer Bunnies'. Do You Like My Tight Sweater? included some entertaining artwork and the very bizarre 'Cheeky Monkey'. Both partners had previous diverse experiences in the music industry; Roison with the strangely named performance art group And Turquoise Car Crash, The, and Brydon with acid jazz act Cloud 9.

● ALBUMS: Moloko (1995)★★★, Do You Like My Tight Sweater? (Echo Label 1995)★★★★.

Molton, Flora

b. 1908, Virginia, USA, d. 31 May 1990, Washington DC, USA. Molton began preaching at the age of 17, not taking up guitar until 1943, when she moved to Washington DC. Virtually blind, she supported herself by playing in the streets. From 1963, she made appearances on the folk circuit, and was later signed by a European record company when she visited Europe in 1987. Her slide guitar playing in 'Vastopol' (open D) was basic but intense, owing much to the blues whose verbal content she fiercely rejected. Her delivery was generally reminiscent of an unsophisticated Sister Rosetta Tharpe, particularly when Molton was assisted by more skilful musicians.

● ALBUMS: Flora Molton And The Truth Band (1982)★★★, Gospel Songs (1988)★★.

Moments

Formed in Hackensack, New Jersey, USA, in the late 60s, this distinctive sweet soul trio comprised Al Goodman (b. 31 March 1947, Jackson, Mississippi, USA; ex-Vipers and Corvettes), Harry Ray (b. 15 December 1946, Longbranch, New Jersey, USA, d. 1 October 1992; ex-Sounds Of Soul and Establishment) and William Brown (b. 30 June 1946, Perth Amboy, New Jersey, USA; ex-Broadways and Uniques). The falsetto-led, 50s-style harmony vocal group recorded for Sylvia Robinson's Stang label. According to Goodman, the original group led by Mark Greene was replaced by Ray, Goodman and Brown in 1969, after their first hit 'Not On The Outside'. It was this trio's fourth R&B Top 20 hit, 'Love On A Two-Way Street', in 1970, that gave them their biggest pop hit, reaching number 3 in the US charts. They had a further 21 R&B chart records, which included their self-penned Top 20 hit 'Sexy Mama' in 1973, and the R&B number 1 'Look At Me (I'm In Love)' in 1975. Their first UK success came in 1975 with 'Girls', made with fellow Stang group the Whatnauts. They had two further UK Top 10s: 'Dolly My Love' in 1975 and 'Jack In The Box' in 1977, neither of which charted in the USA. In 1979, they joined Polydor as Ray, Goodman And Brown.

● ALBUMS: Not On The Outside (Stang 1969)★★★, A

Moment With The Moments (Stang 1970)★★★, The Moments Live At The New York State Woman's Prison (Stang 1971)★★, Love At The Miss Black America Pageant (Stang 1971)★★, Those Sexy Moments (Stang 1974)★★★, Look At Me (Stang 1975)★★★, with the O'Jays The O'Jays Meet The Moments (Philadelphia International 1975)★★★, Moments With You (Stang 1976)★★, Sharp (Stang 1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Moments Greatest Hits (Stang 1971)★★★, Best Of The Moments (Stang 1974)★★★, Greatest Hits (Chess 1987)★★★, Moments (1988)★★★, Late Night Soul (Sequel 1992)★★★, Lucky Me (Collectables 1997)★★★.

Momus

b. Nicholas Currie, 1960, Paisley, Scotland. After living in Canada for a spell as a teenager, Currie returned to the UK and, during the mid-80s, began recording on the independent circuit. His primary influence was Jacques Brel, whose earthy sexuality soon infiltrated Momus's work. An EP, Beast With No Backs, on El Records, garnered minor critical attention, as did the album Circus Maximus. Momus promised a follow-up, The Poison Boyfriend, but that title was abandoned after he signed with Alan McGee's Creation Records. Finally, in 1988, Momus returned with Tender Pervert, a lacerating document of sexual and emotional psychoanalysis. His strength was his strong narrative line, particularly on songs such as 'Love On Ice' and 'Bishonen'. The following year, he issued Don't Stop The Night, which featured a more electronic, dance-orientated approach in keeping with current fashion. One song, 'Righthand Heart', was a less effective reworking of an essentially acoustic song on the previous album. Momus's lack of live experience has so far prevented any major excursion into performing. His 1991 album, Hippopotamomus, was less well received and was greeted with a zero out of 10 rating in the New Musical Express as a result of its moral perversity. The artist no doubt appreciated the irony. The early 90s saw Currie build on his audience within the gay community (parts of which admired his openess), contributing one track, 'Cocksucking Lesbian Man', to Derek Jarman's Blue movie. Philosophy Of Momus continued Curry's forays into the netherworld of twisted sexuality, utilizing a third-person mechanism as a defence against accusations of amorality. Slender Sherbet in 1996 was an intriguing re-recording of Tender Pervert. In 1997, Currie collaborated with the like-minded Anthony Reynolds of Jack. Calling themselves Jacques, they released the self-indulgent How To Make Love Volume 1. Currie also collaborated with French singer Laila France on Orgonon, a bizarre album dedicated to psychoanalyst Wilhelm Reich. Ping Pong was 1997's new Momus album, featuring the usual provocative material.

● ALBUMS: Circus Maximus (El 1986)★★★, The Poison Boyfriend (Creation 1987)★★★, Tender Pervert (Creation 1988)★★★, Don't Stop The Night (Creation 1989)★★, Hippopotamomus (Creation 1991)★★, Voyager (Creation 1992)★★★, The Ultracomformist (Creation 1992)★★★, Timelord (Creation 1993)★★★, The Philosophy Of Momus (Cherry Red 1995)★★★, Slender Sherbet (Cherry Red 1996)★★★, Twenty Vodka Jellies (Cherry Red 1996)★★★, Ping Pong (Satyricon 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Monsters Of Love - Singles 1985-90 (Creation 1990)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Lust Of A Moron: The Lyrics Of Momus, Momus.

Monaco

To many, the starkly undulating bass lines of Peter Hook (b. 13 February 1956, Manchester, England) were what gave New Order its propulsion during their peak years in the late 80s and early 90s. However, when that group broke up (or at least lost its work ethic on a permanent basis), Hook's initial attempts to form his own band were sniped at by critics. With the subsequent success of Monaco, Hook can now afford to be candid about the folly that was Revenge. Their 1991 EP, Gun World Porn, featured the guitarwork of David Potts, formerly tape operator at Hook's studio. Potts (guitar, vocals) duly became the second member of Monaco, which Hook launched in 1996, to more favourable critical reviews and much stronger sales. Rather than attempting to nullify Hook's lineage, as Revenge had done with over-complex synthesizer work, the first Monaco single, 'What Do You Want From Me', was driven by his distinctive basswork. Just as distinctive was Potts' singing voice. The attendant album, Music For Pleasure, also proved popular with critics, establishing Monaco as a viable name for the future and a reasonable surrogate for an absent New Order.

● ALBUMS: Music For Pleasure (Polydor 1997)★★★.

Monaco, James V.

b. 13 January 1885, Genoa, Italy, d. 16 October 1945, Beverly Hills, California, USA. A prolific composer, particularly for movies, whose career spanned more than 30 years. After moving to the USA with his family when he was six years old, Monaco taught himself to play piano, and began earning his living playing in Chicago clubs while still in his teens. By 1910 he was resident in New York, playing in saloons. The following year, he began writing songs, some of which were recorded and others used in Broadway shows. In 1912, he had his first hits with 'Row, Row, Row' (lyrics by William Jerome) and 'You Made Me Love You' (Joseph McCarthy). The latter was taken up by Al Jolson, a fact which ensured its enduring popularity. Monaco continued to compose, and his songs of the next few years included 'I Miss You Most Of All', (McCarthy) 'What Do You Want To Make Those Eyes At Me For?' (McCarthy), 'Caresses' and 'Dirty Hands, Dirty Face' (Edgar Leslie and Grant Clarke), which Jolson sang in the 1927 film The Jazz Singer. Among Monaco's songs of the late 20s were 'Me And My Boyfriend' (Sidney Clare), 'Me And The Man In The Moon' (Leslie) and 'Through' (McCarthy). In the 30s, Monaco was active in Hollywood, where he began a fruitful collaboration with Johnny Burke. Among the results were a string of hits sung in films and recorded by Bing Crosby, including 'On The Sentimental Side', 'I've Got A Pocketful Of Dreams', 'An Apple For The Teacher', 'Too Romantic', 'That's For Me' and 'Only Forever'. He contributed to films such as The Golden Calf, Doctor Rhythm, Sing You Sinners, East Side Of Heaven, The Star Maker, If I Had My Way, Road To Singapore, Rhythm On The River, Stage Door Canteen, Pin-Up Girl, and The Dolly Sisters (1945). In the early 40s, Monaco had more popular successes with 'Six Lessons From Madame La Zonga' (Charles Newman), 'I Can't Begin To Tell You' (Mack Gordon), 'Ev'ry Night About This Time' (Ted Koehler), 'We Musn't Say Goodbye' (Al Dubin), and 'Time Will Tell' (Gordon). Monaco died from a heart attack in 1945.

Moncur, Grachan, III

b. 3 June 1937, New York City, New York, USA. An early starter (his father played bass with Al Cooper's Savoy Sultans), Moncur had already mastered several other instruments when, at the age of 11, he turned to the trombone. In his teens, Moncur worked with local bands and also studied music. In the early 60s he was with Ray Charles, and was a member of the Art Farmer-Benny Golson Jazztet. He also worked with Jackie McLean and Sonny Rollins, recorded for Blue Note and, by the late 60s, was a leading figure of the free jazz movement, playing with Archie Shepp in the USA and Europe. In the 70s, Moncur worked with the Jazz Composers' Orchestra, and in the 80s, with Frank Lowe, among others. In the last decade or so, his experience has also been applied to teaching and to several major compositions in musical areas ranging from jazz to ballet. An accomplished performer, Moncur's fluid style has helped to make his playing more readily accessible than that of many other free jazz trombonists. Through his teaching and recording he continues to exercise considerable influence upon the rising generation of musicians.

- ALBUMS: Evolution (Blue Note 1963)★★★★, Some Other Stuff (1964)★★★, New Africa (Affinity 1969)★★★, with Jazz Composers Orchestra Echoes Of Prayer (1974)★★★.

Mondello, Toots

b. Nuncio M. Mondello, 1912, Boston, Massachusetts, USA, d. 15 November 1992. Mondello began playing saxophone as a youth, as did his brother, both becoming professional musicians. His first name-band job was with Mal Hallett's popular dance band where he remained fairly consistently for five years, playing alto. He then went into a number of bands including those led by Buddy Rogers, Benny Goodman and Ray Noble before turning to studio work. He broadcast and recorded with many diverse musicians including André Kostelanetz, Chick Bullock, Bunny Berigan, Larry Clinton, Louis Armstrong and Lionel Hampton. In 1939 he rejoined Goodman after a spell leading his own band. He recorded with the Metronome All Stars in 1940/1 before being inducted into the US Army. After the war he resumed freelance recording work, playing on sessions with Sarah Vaughan, Billie Holiday and others in the 40s and with Billy Butterfield, Artie Shaw and Goodman in the 50s and 60s. A highly skilled musician with the necessary qualities of playing lead alto in big bands, Mondell's occasional recorded solos display proficiency and intelligence. In later years he continued his studio work.

- COMPILATIONS: Benny Goodman And His Music Hall Orchestra (Saville 1934)★★★, with Lionel Hampton Historic Recording Sessions (RCA 1937-41)★★★★.

Money Jungle - Duke Ellington

Although this excellent album is listed as a Duke Ellington recording, equal billing should be given to the participation of Charles Mingus and Max Roach. The remastered CD is outstanding, having been cleaned up from the original master tape. The CD also has the addition of six extra tracks, including four unheard Ellington originals: 'Very Special', 'Rem Blues', 'Switch Blade' and 'Backward Country Boy Blues'. He is as at home in the setting of a trio as he is with a wailing big-band, and as usual, he allows the other musicians to play. The trio version of 'Caravan' is exceptional, raucous and swinging.

- Tracks: Very Special; A Little Max (Parfait); A Little Max (Parfait) Alternate Take; Fleurette Africaine (African Flower); Rem Blues; Wig Wise; Switch Blade; Caravan; Money Jungle; Solitude (Alternate Take); Solitude; Warm Valley; Backward Country Boy Blues.
- First released 1963
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Money Mark

b. Mark Ramos Nishita, USA. Money Mark first rose to prominence as keyboard player in the Beastie Boys' powerful stage show of the late 80s and early 90s. However, from his base in Los Angeles, California, he maintained a desire to write and perform his own material. Rather than use the Beastie Boys' own imprint, Grand Royal Records, Nishita was recruited by England's Mo Wax Records, whose proprietor, James Lavelle, travelled to California to persuade him to sign. His debut album was recorded with Lavelle's help, and followed the Mo Wax house style of mellow, deep hip hop with jazz flourishes, over which Nishita added keyboard motifs and laconic narratives. He repeated the process on 1996's Third Version EP, but broadened the range for the follow-up album. Push The Button took in hip-hop, dub, funk, soul, art-rock and pop styles and shaped them into an endlessly inventive and dazzling 18-track epic .

- ALBUMS: Mark's Keyboard Repair (Mo Wax 1995)★★★★, Third Version EP (Mo Wax 1996)★★★, Push The Button (Mo Wax 1998)★★★★.

Money, Eddie

Legend has it that Brooklyn native Eddie Mahoney was a New York police officer when first discovered by promoter Bill Graham (he was, in fact, a NYPD typist). Nevertheless, under Graham's managerial wing, Mahoney became Eddie Money and produced two hit singles in 'Baby Hold On' and 'Two Tickets To Paradise' from his self-titled debut, to begin a career that has seen him maintain arena-headlining status in America with a series of consistently fine R&B-flavoured AOR records. Life For The Taking produced two more hits, 'Rock And Roll The Place' and 'Maybe I'm A Fool', as Money built a strong live reputation that freed him from the constraining need for radio or MTV airplay to sell albums or concert tickets, although the hits continued to come. Where's The Party? saw a slight dip in form, but Money stormed back with perhaps his best 80s album, Can't Hold Back, producing three huge hits in the title track, 'I Wanna Go Back' and 'Take Me Home Tonight', where his warm, soulful vocals were augmented by Ronnie Spector's production. 1991's Right Here saw Money move away from the keyboard-dominated sound of preceding albums towards the rootsier feel of his early work, producing another hit in a cover version of Romeo's Daughter's 'Heaven In The Backseat'. While European success continues to elude him, Money's future in his homeland seems secure.

● ALBUMS: Eddie Money (Columbia 1977)★★, Life For The Taking (Columbia 1978)★★, Playing For Keeps (Columbia 1980)★★, No Control (Columbia 1982)★★, Where's The Party? (Columbia 1984)★★, Can't Hold Back (Columbia 1986)★★★, Nothing To Lose (Columbia 1988)★★, Right Here (Columbia 1991)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits: The Sound Of Money (Columbia 1989)★★★.

● FILMS: Americation (1979).

Money, Zoot

b. George Bruno Money, 17 July 1942, Bournemouth, Dorset, England. A veteran of his hometown's thriving music circuit, Money played in several local rock 'n' roll groups before forming the Big Roll Band in 1961. Its original line-up comprised Roger Collis (guitar), Kevin Drake (tenor saxophone), Johnny King (bass), Peter Brooks (drums) and Zoot on piano and vocals. By 1963, the singer was fronting an all-new line-up of Andy Somers aka Andy Summers (guitar), Nick Newall (saxophone) and Colin Allen (drums), but he left the group for a temporary spot in Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated. Zoot remained in London when his tenure ended, and his band subsequently joined him there. The Big Roll Band secured a residency at London's prestigious Flamingo Club, and added two new members, Paul Williams (bass/vocals) and Clive Burrows (saxophone), before recording their debut single, 'The Uncle Willie'. In 1965, the group released its first album, It Should've Been Me, a compendium of soul and R&B material that enhanced the band's growing reputation. A second album, Zoot!, recorded live at Klook's Kleek, introduced newcomer Johnny Almond, who replaced Burrows. This exciting set included a superb James Brown medley and confirmed the group's undoubted strength. However, a devil-may-care attitude undermined their potential, and only one of their excellent singles, 'Big Time Operator' (1966), broached the UK Top 30. Money became famed as much for dropping his trousers onstage as for his undoubted vocal talent, and several of the line-up were notorious imbibers. Yet this lifestyle was reversed in 1967, when Money, Somers and Alan embraced the emergent 'flower-power' movement with Dantalian's Chariot. However, by the following year Zoot had resumed his erstwhile direction with Transition, a disappointing release which was pieced together from several sessions.

In 1968, both Money and Somers joined Eric Burdon in his American-based New Animals. Zoot's vocals were heard on a number of tracks with Burdon, notably a lengthy reworking of his Dantallion's Chariot showpiece, 'Madman'. Additionally, his spoken dialogue was featured on some of Burdon's more self-indulgent efforts on Everyone Of Us. The singer completed Welcome To My Head on the group's demise before returning to London for Zoot Money. He continued an itinerant path with Centipede, Grimms and Ellis, before joining Somers in the Kevin Coyne and Kevin Ayers bands. In 1980, Zoot released the low-key Mr. Money, since which he has played on numerous sessions and enjoyed a new career as a character actor in television drama and comedy. In the early 90s he was music controller for Melody Radio, but was back on the road by 1995.

● ALBUMS: It Should've Been Me (Columbia 1965)★★★, Zoot! Live At Klooks Kleek (Columbia 1966)★★★, Transition (Direction 1968)★★, Welcome To My Head (1969)★★, Zoot Money (Polydor 1970)★★, Mr. Money (Magic Moon 1980)★★, with Chris Farlowe Alexis Korner Memorial Concert Volume 2 (Indigo 1995)★★★.

Monguito 'El Unico'

b. Ramón Quian, Manguito, Matanzas Province, Cuba. Titled 'El Unico' (The Unique), this Afro-Cuban vocalist, composer, bandleader, producer Monguito, sings in a typical Cuban style with an instantly recognizable, nasal voice. He performed with various bands in Cuba, and then Mexico, where he also worked in three films. In 1962, El Unico relocated to New York and initially joined Orquesta Broadway. The following year he made his album debut with Arsenio Rodríguez. In 1964, Monguito shared lead vocals with Pete 'El Conde' Rodríguez and sang coro (chorus) on Pacheco At The N.Y. World's Fair by, Johnny Pacheco. Pete departed and El Unico became co-lead singer with Chivirico Dávila on Pacheco's Pacheco te Invita a Bailar and Viva Africa. In 1966, Monguito appeared on the Tico All Stars' Descargas At The Village Gate-Live albums. He sessioned with Chivirico on Herbie Mann's Latin Mann, and featured on Larry Harlow's Bajándote, singing the hit title track, 'Cienfuegos'. Monguito went solo in 1967 with Pacheco Presents Monguito, and released a further three albums up to 1971. He sang lead on 'Me Gusto El Son' with the Fania All Stars on their debut Live At The Red Garter, Vol.1 in 1968. His 1979 release, Yo No Soy Mentiroso, produced by Roberto Torres, went gold. It was the third album issued on the new SAR label, founded by Sergio Bofill, Andriano García and Torres. Torres developed a highly successful house style tailored for the West African and French-speaking Caribbean markets. He stretched out Cuban son montunos and guajiras, often using old Cuban standards, with plenty of spaces for soloing. Monguito toured Africa in 1980, and recorded as a lead singer and musical director for the Ivory Coast-based Sacodis label. El Unico paralleled the SAR sound with Sacodis and used many leading New York-based musicians for the sessions, including pianist/arranger Alfredo Valdés Jnr., who was SAR's house arranger; violinists Alfredo de la Fé and Pupi Legarreta; vocalist Adalberto Santiago; saxophonist/flautist Mario Rivera. Torres produced his 1982 and 1984 albums on the Toboga label, which was a stablemate of SAR. In 1985, El Unico issued Yo Soy La Meta on Caiman Records, which was a successor of SAR.

● ALBUMS: with Johnny Pacheco Pacheco At The N.Y. World's Fair (1964)★★, Pacheco te Invita a Bailar, with Herbie Mann Latin Mann aka Big Boss Mann (1965)★★★★; with Pacheco Viva Africa (1966)★★★; with Larry Harlow Bajándote (1967)★★★; Pacheco Presents Monguito (1967)★★★; with the Fania All Stars Live At The Red Garter, Vol.1 (1968)★★★★; El Unico y su Conjunto (c.1969)★★★, De Todo Un Poco (1970)★★★, Escuchame/Listen To Me (1971)★★★, Yo No Soy Mentiroso (1979)★★★; as musical director Charanga Para Todos, Doh Alberto A Manhattan USA: Salsa Africana Vol.3; Monguito El Unico And His All Star Band: Algo Diferente (1980)★★★, Monguito El Unico International (1981)★★★, Monguito El Unico (1982)★★★, Monguito El Unico And His All Star Band: Alto Songo (1984)★★★★, El Unico! (1984)★★★★, Yo Soy La Meta (1985)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Pacheco: La Crema (1980)★★★, Sabrosura (1980)★★★. Monguito El Unico International (1988)★★★★.

Monitors

Sandra Fagin, John 'Maurice' Fagin, Warren Harris and Richard Street formed the Monitors in the early 60s, having each performed with Detroit-based vocal groups since the late 50s. In 1965, they were signed to Motown's VIP subsidiary, for whom they issued six singles and an album over the next four years. Their doo-wop-influenced style was epitomized by the 1966 R&B hit 'Say You', and their cover of the Valadiers' 'Greetings (This Is Uncle Sam)' later that year - the most successful recording of this sly piece of social comment that was taped by several artists on the Motown roster. The Monitors were unable to establish themselves among the label's frontline artists, however, and they dissolved in 1969. Richard Street replaced Eddie Kendricks in the Temptations in 1971. In 1990 the band re-formed with original members Harris and Fagin, Hershell Hunter (who joined the group in 1968), Darrell Littlejohn (who recorded for Motown as half of Keith & Darrell) and Harris's daughter Leah. They recorded with Ian Levine's Motor City label releasing Grazing In The Grass.

● ALBUMS: Greetings . . . We're The Monitors (VIP 1968)★★★, Grazing In The Grass (Motor City 1990)★★.

Monk, Meredith

b. 20 November 1943, Lima, Peru. In 1964, Monk graduated in performing arts from Sarah Lawrence College where she had been encouraged to mix the arts in a variety of projects. She saw herself as an 'orchestrator of music and image and movement', someone making 'live movies'. She first appeared in New York at Washington Square Gallery and was one of a group of artists, including painter Robert Rauschenberg, creating mixed-media pieces like Duet For Cat's Scream And Locomotive at Judson Church. She presented her theatre piece, Juice, at New York's Guggenheim Museum in 1969, and brought her group the House to Liverpool in 1972 to perform The Vessel. In the same year, she received a Village Voice Award for outstanding achievement in the Off-Broadway Theatre. She also performed solo vocal pieces like 'Raw Recital', from which 'a definite American Indian quality emerged'. She sees herself as performing ethnic music from a culture she has herself created. In 1978, she formed the Vocal Ensemble to perform compositions which consist of simple, often modal melodies or melodic cells which are repeated with small variations and contrasted with different material. These performances are sometimes accompanied by repetitive keyboard parts reminiscent of the minimalist movement, and usually depend on extended vocal techniques. The success of Dolmen Music and Turtle Dreams has brought the Ensemble to an international audience.

● ALBUMS: Our Lady Of Late (1973)★★★, Key: An Album Of Invisible Theatre (Lovely 1977)★★★, Songs From The Hill (1979)★★★★, Dolmen Music (1980)★★★, Dolmen Music (ECM 1981)★★★, Turtle Dreams (ECM 1983)★★★, Do You Be (ECM 1987)★★★, Book Of Days (ECM 1990)★★★★, with Robert Een Facing North (1992)★★, Atlas (ECM 1993)★★★, Volcano Songs (ECM 1997)★★★.

Monk, T.S.

b. Thelonious Sphere Monk Jnr., 27 December 1949, New York City, New York, USA. Inevitably, Monk grew up in a musically aware household. His father and his father's friends, who included Max Roach, Dizzy Gillespie, Miles Davis and John Coltrane, were all prime movers in the development of jazz in the 50s and 60s. At school he ran into problems with music teachers who could not understand his father's music and hence resented his fame. Determined to build a career of his own in music, Monk sought tuition outside school, gradually turning to drums as his instrument. When he was 16 years old he was given lessons by Roach and at 20 joined his father with whom he played until 1975. He then moved into R&B, forming the band, Circles, which included singers Yvonne Fletcher and his sister, Barbara. In the early 80s both young women died and he subsequently helped form the Thelonious Monk Foundation (later the TM Institute of Jazz) and gradually returned to the jazz fold. In 1989 he joined Roach in a series of school clinics, sat in with various leading jazzmen including Gillespie and Clark Terry, played with Clifford Jordan's big band, and then, in 1991, formed his own jazz group. Fiercely determined to have a first-class band, he ensured that its members were skilled, well-rehearsed and as committed as himself. With the help and support of George Wein, who booked him internationally, and with a recording contract with Blue Note Records, he was soon on his way to considerable fame. No longer in the shadow of his famous father as an instrumentalist and bandleader, Monk also writes music for his band, a talent which will present him with another hurdle to surmount. An exceptionally gifted drummer and wholly dedicated to his craft, he is ensuring that the family name lives on at the cutting edge of jazz.

● ALBUMS: Take One (Blue Note 1991)★★, A Changing Of The Guard (Blue Note 1993)★★★, Monk On Monk (N2K 1997)★★★.

Monk, Thelonious

b. 11 October 1917, Rocky Mount, North Carolina, USA, d. 17 February 1982. Monk's family moved to New York when he was five years old. He started playing piano a year later, receiving formal tuition from the age of 11 onwards. At Stuyvesant High School he excelled at physics and maths, and also found time to play organ in church. In the late 30s he toured with a gospel group, then began playing in the clubs and became pianist in Kenny Clarke's house band at Minton's Playhouse between 1941 and 1942. He played with Lucky Millinder's orchestra in 1942, the Coleman Hawkins Sextet between 1943 and 1945, the Dizzy Gillespie Big Band in 1946 and started leading his own outfits from 1947. It was Hawkins who provided him with his recording debut, and enthusiasts noted a fine solo on 'Flyin' Hawk' (October 1944). However, it was the Blue Note sessions of 1947 (subsequently issued on album and CD as Genius Of Modern Music) that established him as a major figure. With Art Blakey on drums, these recordings have operated as capsule lessons in music for subsequent generations of musicians. An infectious groove makes complex harmonic puzzles sound attractive, with Monk's unique dissonances and rhythmic sense adding to their charm. They were actually a distillation of a decade's work. ''Round Midnight' immediately became a popular tune and others - 'Ruby My Dear', 'Well You Needn't', 'In Walked Bud' - have become jazz standards since. In his book, Bebop, Leonard Feather recognized Monk's genius at composition, but claimed his playing lacked technique (a slight for which he later apologized). Monk certainly played with flat fingers (anathema to academy pianists), but actually his bare-bones style was the result of a modern sensibility rather than an inability to achieve the torrents of Art Tatum or Oscar Peterson. For Monk, the blues had enough romance without an influx of European romanticism, and enough emotion without the sometimes over-heated blowing of bebop. His own improvisations are at once witty, terse and thought-provoking.

A trumped-up charge for possession of drugs deprived Monk of his New York performer's licence in 1951, and a subsequent six-year ban from playing live in the city damaged his career. He played in Paris in June 1954 (recorded by Vogue Records). Riverside Records was supportive, and he found sympathetic musicians with whom to record - both under his own name and guesting with players such as Miles Davis, Sonny Rollins and Clark Terry. Plays Duke Ellington (1955) was a fascinating look at Duke Ellington's compositions, with a non-pareil rhythm section in bassist Oscar Pettiford and drummer Clarke. Brilliant Corners in 1956 showcased some dazzling new compositions and featured Sonny Rollins on tenor saxophone. Regaining his work permit in 1957, Monk assembled a mighty quintet for a residency at the Five Spot club: Shadow Wilson (drums), Wilbur Ware (bass) and John Coltrane (tenor). Coltrane always spoke of what an education he received during his brief stay with the band - although the group was never recorded live, the studio albums that resulted (Thelonious Monk With John Coltrane, Monk's Music) were classics. Monk repaid Coleman Hawkins' earlier compliment, and featured the tenorman on these records: history and the future shook hands over Monk's keyboard. Previously considered too 'way out' for mass consumption, Monk's career finally began to blossom. In 1957, he recorded with Gerry Mulligan, which helped to expose him to a wider audience, and worked with classical composer Hall Overton to present his music orchestrally (At Town Hall, 1959). He toured Europe for the first time (1961) and also Japan (1964). He formed a stable quartet in the early 60s with Charlie Rouse on tenor, John Ore (later Butch Warren or Larry Gales) on bass and Frankie Dunlop (later Ben Riley) on drums. Critics tend to prefer his work with other saxophonists, such as Harold Land (1960) or Johnny Griffin (the late 50s), but overlook the fact that Rouse really understood Monk's tunes. He may not have been the greatest soloist, but his raw, angular tone fitted the compositions like a glove.

In the early 70s, Monk played with Pat Patrick (Sun Ra's alto player), using son T.S. Monk on drums. Illness increasingly restricted his activity, but he toured with the Giants Of Jazz (1971-72) and presented a big band at the Newport Festival in 1974. Two albums recorded for the English Black Lion label in 1971 - Something In Blue and The Man I Love - presented him in a trio context with Al McKibbon on bass and Blakey on drums: these were stunning examples of the empathy between drummer and pianist - two of Monk's best records. When he died from a stroke in 1982, at Englewood, New Jersey, leaving his wife (for whom he had written 'Crepuscule With Nellie') and son, he had not performed in public for six years. Monk's influence, if anything, increased during the 80s. Buell Neidlinger formed a band, String Jazz, to play only Monk and Ellington tunes; Steve Lacy, who in the early 60s had spent a period playing exclusively Monk tunes, recorded two solo discs of his music; and tribute albums by Arthur Blythe (Light Blue, 1983), Anthony Braxton (Six Monk's Compositions, 1987), Paul Motian (Monk In Motian, 1988) and Hal Wilner (That's The Way I Feel Now, 1984, in which artists as diverse as the Fowler Brothers, John Zorn, Dr. John, Eugene Chadbourne, and Peter Frampton celebrated his tunes) prove that Monk's compositions are still teaching everyone new tricks. His son, T.S. Monk, is a gifted drummer who continues a tradition by encouraging young musicians through membership of his band. One of the most brilliant and original performers in jazz, Thelonious Monk was also one of the century's outstanding composers. ''Round Midnight' is probably the most recorded jazz song of all time. His unique ability to weld intricate, surprising harmonic shifts and rhythmic quirks into appealing, funky riffs means that something special happens when they are played: his compositions exact more incisive improvising than anybody else's. In terms of jazz, that is the highest praise of all.

● ALBUMS: Genius Of Modern Music, Volume 1 (Blue Note 1951)★★★★★, Genius Of Modern Music Volume 2 (Blue Note 1952)★★★★★, Thelonious Monk Trio (Prestige 1953)★★★, And Sonny Rollins (Prestige 1954)★★★★, Thelonious Monk Quintet (Prestige 1954), Pure Monk (1954)★★★★, Solo 1954 (Vogue 1955)★★★★, Plays Duke Ellington (Riverside 1955)★★★, The Unique (Riverside 1956)★★★★, Brilliant Corners (Riverside 1957)★★★★, Thelonious Himself (Riverside 1957)★★★, With John Coltrane (Jazzland 1957)★★★★, with Gerry Mulligan Mulligan Meets Monk (Riverside 1957)★★★★, Art Blakey/Thelonious Monk (1958)★★★, Monk's Music (Riverside 1958)★★★★, Thelonious In Action (Riverside 1958)★★★★, Misterioso (Riverside 1958)★★★★★, The Thelonious Monk Orchestra At Town Hall (Riverside 1959)★★★, Five By Monk By Five (Riverside 1959)★★★, Thelonious Alone In San Francisco (Riverside 1960)★★★★, At The Blackhawk (Riverside 1960)★★★★, Two Hours With Thelonious (1961)★★★, Criss Cross (Columbia 1963)★★★, Monk's Dream (Columbia 1963)★★★, April In Paris (Riverside 1963)★★★★, Thelonoious Monk In Italy (Riverside 1963), Big Band And Quartet In Concert (1964)★★★, with Miles Davis Miles & Monk At Newport (Columbia 1964)★★★, It's Monk's Time (Columbia 1964)★★★, Monk (Columbia 1965)★★★, Solo Monk (Columbia 1965)★★★, The Thelonious Monk Story Vol. 1 (Riverside 1965)★★★, The Thelonious Monk Story Vol. 2 (Riverside 1965)★★★, Monk in France (Riverside 1965)★★★, Straight No Chaser (Columbia 1966)★★★★, Monk's Blues (Columbia 1968)★★★, Underground (Columbia 1968)★★★, Epistrophy (1971)★★★, Something In Blue (1972)★★★, The Man I Love (1972)★★★, Sphere (1979)★★★, April In Paris/Live (1981)★★★, Live At The It Club rec. 1964 (Columbia 1982,)★★★, Live At The Jazz Workshop rec. 1964 (Columbia 1982)★★★, Tokyo Concerts rec. 1963 (1983)★★★, The Great Canadian Concert Of Thelonious Monk rec. 1965 (1984)★★★, 1963 - In Japan (1984)★★★, Live In Stockholm 1961 (1987)★★★, Solo 1954 (1993)★★★, The Nonet Live rec. 1967 (Charly 1993)★★★

● COMPILATIONS: Thelonious Monk's Greatest Hits (Riverside 1962)★★★★, Mighty Monk (Riverside 1967)★★★, Best Of Thelonious Monk (Riverside 1969)★★★, Always Know rec. 1962-68 (1979)★★★, Memorial Album rec. 1954-60 (1982)★★★★, The Complete Blue Note Recordings Of Thelonious Monk rec. 1947-52, 4-LP box set (1983)★★★★★, The Complete Black Lion And Vogue Recordings Of Thelonious Monk 4-LP box set (1986)★★★★, The Composer (Giants Of Jazz 1987)★★★.

● VIDEOS: American Composer (1993), Thelonious Monk: Live In Oslo (1993).

● FURTHER READING: Monk On Records: A Discography Of Thelonious Monk, L. Bijl and F. Canté. Straight, No Chaser: The Life And Genius Of Thelonious Monk, Leslie Gourse, Monk, Laurent De Wilde.

Monkees

Inspired by the burgeoning pop phenomena and armed with an advance from Columbia's Screen Gems subsidiary, US television producers Bob Rafelson and Bert Schneider began auditions for a show about a struggling pop group in 1965. When extant acts, including the Lovin' Spoonful, proved inappropriate, an advertisement in the Daily Variety solicited 437 applicantions, including Stephen Stills, Danny Hutton (later Three Dog Night) and Paul Williams. Following suitably off-beat auditions, the final choice paired two musicians - Michael Nesmith (b. Robert Michael Nesmith, 30 December 1942, Houston, Texas, USA; guitar/vocals) and folk singer Peter Tork (b. Peter Halsten Thorkelson, 13 February 1944, Washington, DC, USA; bass/vocals) - with two budding actors and former child stars - Davy Jones (b. 30 December 1945, Manchester, England; vocals) and ex-Circus Boy star Mickey Dolenz (b. George Michael Dolenz, 8 March 1945, Los Angeles, California, USA; drums/vocals). On 12 September 1966, the first episode of The Monkees was aired by NBC-TV and, despite low initial ratings, the show quickly became hugely popular, a feat mirrored when it was launched in the UK. Attendant singles 'Last Train To Clarksville' (US number 1) and 'I'm A Believer' (US and UK number 1), and a million-selling debut album confirmed the group as the latest teenage phenomenon, drawing inevitable comparisons with the Beatles. However, news that the quartet did not play on their records fuelled an already simmering internal controversy. Early sessions had been completed by Tommy Boyce And Bobby Hart, authors of 'Last Train To Clarksville', and their backing group, the Candy Store Prophets, with the Monkees simply overdubbing vocals. Musical supervision was later handed to Screen Gems executive Don Kirshner, who in turn called in staff songwriters Gerry Goffin and Carole King, Neil Diamond and Jeff Barry to contribute material for the show. This infuriated the Monkees' two musicians, in particular Nesmith, who described the piecemeal More Of The Monkees as 'the worst album in the history of the world'.

Sales in excess of five million copies exacerbated tension, but the group won tacit approval from Schneider to complete several tracks under their own devices. An undeterred Kirshner coaxed Jones to sing on the already-completed backing track to 'A Little Bit Me, A Little Bit You' which was issued, without group approval, as their third single. The ensuing altercation saw Kirshner ousted, with the quartet gaining complete artistic freedom. Although not issued as a single in the USA, 'Alternate Title' (aka 'Randy Scouse Git'), Dolenz's ambitious paean to London, reached number 2 in Britain, while two further 1967 singles, 'Pleasant Valley Sunday' and 'Daydream Believer' (composed by John Stewart), achieved gold record status. Headquarters, the first Monkees album on which the group played, was a commercial and artistic success, consisting largely of self-penned material ranging from country-rock to vaudevillian pop. Pisces, Aquarius, Capricorn And Jones Ltd featured material drawn from associates Michael Murphy, Harry Nilsson and Chip Martin as the unyielding call on the group's talents continued. This creative drain was reflected in the disappointing The Birds, The Bees And The Monkees and its accompanying single, 'Valleri'. The track itself had been recorded in 1966, and was only issued when 'pirate' recordings, dubbed off-air from the television series, attracted considerable airplay. 'The Monkees are dead!', declared an enraged Nesmith, yet the song sold over a million copies, the group's last such success. The appeal of their series had waned as plots grew increasingly loose, and the final episode was screened in the USA on 25 March 1968. The quartet had meanwhile embarked on a feature film, Head, which contained many in-jokes about their artistic predicaments. Although baffling their one-time teenage audience, it failed to find favour with the underground circuit who still viewed the Monkees as bubblegum. However, Head has since been rightly lauded for its imagination and innovation. A dispirited Peter Tork left following its release, but although the remaining trio continued without him, their commercial decline was as spectacular as its ascendancy. Nesmith left for a solo career in 1969. and the following year the Monkees' name was dissolved in the wake of Dolenz/Jones recording Changes. However, in 1975, the latter-day duo joined their erstwhile songwriting team in Dolenz, Jones, Boyce And Hart which toured under the banner 'The Great Golden Hits Of The Monkees Show'. The project drew cursory interest, but the group's reputation was bolstered considerably during the 80s, when the independent Rhino Records label reissued the entire Monkees back catalogue and the entire series was rescreened on MTV. Although Nesmith demured, Dolenz, Jones and Tork embarked on a highly successful, 20th anniversary world tour which engendered a live album and a new studio set, Pool It. The group then disbanded as members pursued contrasting interests, while attempts to create the New Monkees around Marty Roos, Larry Saltis, Jared Chandler and Dino Kovas in 1987 were aborted. Although reviled by many contemporary critics, the original group's work is now regarded as among the best American pop of its era. Rhino Records released an ambitious 21-volume video collection in 1995 containing all 58 episodes of their television series. The following year's Justus was the first recording by the original band (including Nesmith) for over 20 years, and was followed by their first tour of the UK as a quartet.

● ALBUMS: The Monkees (Colgems 1966)★★★★, More Of The Monkees (Colgems 1967)★★★★, Headquarters (Colgems 1967)★★★, Pisces, Aquarius, Capricorn And Jones Ltd (Colgems 1967)★★, The Birds, The Bees And The Monkees (Colgems 1968)★★, Head film soundtrack (Colgems 1968)★★, Instant Replay (Colgems 1969)★★★, The Monkees Present ... (Colgems 1969)★★★, Changes (Colgems 1970)★★★, Pool It (1986)★★, 20th Anniversary Concert Tour 1986 (1986)★★, Justus (Rhino 1996)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Monkees Greatest Hits (Colgems 1969)★★★★, A Barrel Full Of Monkees (Colgems 1971)★★★★, The Monkees Golden Hits (RCA Victor 1972)★★★★, Refocus (Bell 1973)★★★, Monkeemania (1979)★★★, The Monkees (1981)★★★, Monkee Business (1982)★★★, Monkee Flips (1984)★★★, The And Now ... The Best Of The Monkees (1986)★★★★, Missing Links (1987)★★★, The Monkees Live - 1967 (1987)★★, Hey! Hey! It's The Monkees Greatest Hits (Platinum/K-Tel 1989)★★★★, Missing Links Volume 2 (Rhino 1990)★★, Missing Links Volume 3 (Rhino 1996)★★, Anthology 2-CD set (Rhino 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Monkees Collection (Rhino 1995), 33 1/3 Revoloutions Per Monkee (Rhino Home Video 1996).

● FURTHER READING: Love Letters To The Monkees, Bill Adler. The Monkees Tale, Eric Lefcowitz. The Monkees Scrapbook, Ed Finn and T. Bone. Monkeemania, Glenn A. Baker. The Monkees: A Manufactured Image, Ed Reilly, Maggie McMannus and Bill Chadwick. I'm A Believer-My Life Of Monkees, Music And Madness, Mickey Dolenz and Mark Bego.

● FILMS: Head (1968).

Monks

This uncompromising US group originated in 1962. Disenchanted US servicemen Gary Burger (guitar/vocals), Dave Day (guitar/vocals) and Larry Clark (organ) formed the Torquays in Gelnhausen, near Frankfurt, Germany with a local civilian recalled solely as 'Hans' (drums). Eddie Shaw (bass) joined the line-up soon afterwards, while a fifth inductee, Roger Johnson, became their permanent drummer in 1964. A highly popular live attraction, the Torquays completed a single, 'Boys Are Boys'/'There She Walks' for the tiny SCH label the following year before mutating into the Monks. Armed with a set comprising largely of original material and now free of army commitments, the quintet opted for a radical image. To complete the transition, the tops of their heads were shaved and each member wore a black shirt with a white noose around the neck in place of a tie. Musically the Monks were unlike any contemporaries and with Day switching to electric banjo, they unleashed a startlingly different sound. Barked vocals, chopped rhythms, thudding bass and screaming feedback coalesce on Black Monk Time, which owes something to R&B but is quite unlike any release from this period. A new version of 'Boys Are Boys' sat beside as 'Blast Off', 'Shut Up!' and 'I Hate You', uncompromising titles which merely hint at the stark power on offer. A gruelling series of one-night stands ensued before 'Love Can Tame The Wild'/'He Went Down To The Sea', released in 1967, showed the group embracing emergent psychedelic textures. However, conflict between Day and Clark undermined the unit, before Johnson left for Texas, tiring of strife and life in exile, Johnson left for Texas. The remaining Monks opted to disband. Burger and Shaw did reconvene in 1969 as Gary Alan And The Professionals. A three-track single, 'Jaded Figurine'/'Where There's A Will There's A Way'/'Pretty Suzanne' - the last of which was from their erstwhile group's repertoire - appeared on a local Minneapolis label, but the unit split up soon afterwards, closing the career of one of rock's most enigmatic bands. The album was reissued by Rick Rubin in 1997.

● ALBUMS: Black Monk Time (Polydor 1966)★★★.

Monochrome Set

Any all-encompassing classification of the Monochrome Set's music would be difficult. During a sporadic career that has spanned as many musical styles as it has record labels, they have been on the verge of breaking to a wider audience on a number of occasions. Formed in the UK during late 1976, Andy Warren (bass), Lester Square (guitar) and Bid (guitar, vocals) were playing in the B-Sides with Adam Ant. When the B-Sides became Adam And The Ants, Bid and Lester Square left. They formed the Monochrome Set in January 1978, later joined by Warren in 1979 after his role on the debut Ants album. With Jeremy Harrington (bass, ex-Gloria Mundi; Mean Street) and J.D. Haney (drums, ex-Art Attacks), the band issued singles during 1979-80 for Rough Trade Records, including 'He's Frank', 'Eine Symphonie Des Graeuns', 'The Monochrome Set' and 'He's Frank (Slight Return)', each completely different in style and content. Their debut, The Strange Boutique, skirted the UK charts. After the title track came further singles '405 Lines' and 'Apocalypso', and a second album, Love Zombies. Lex Crane briefly sat in on drums before ex-Soft Boys member Morris Windsor joined for the release of the brilliant sex satire 'The Mating Game', in July 1982, followed by 'Cast A Long Shadow' and the memorable Eligible Bachelors. By this time Carrie Booth had joined on keyboards while Nick Wesolowski took up the drums and Foz the guitar soon after. Volume, Brilliance, Contrast compiled their Rough Trade recordings and selected BBC Radio 1 sessions, and coincided with another indie hit, 'Jet Set Junta' (like many Monochrome Set compositions deflating class/monetary division). 'Jacob's Ladder' seemed a sure-fire hit for 1985, but like 'Wallflower' later that year and the charming The Lost Weekend, eluded the charts. Disheartened, the band split and it was left to Cherry Red Records' El subsidiary to issue a sympathetic retrospective, Fin! Live, a year later. Various collections filtered out over the next three years (Colour Transmission featured much of the DinDisc material, while Westminster Affair highlighted their earliest recordings). In December 1989 the band re-formed, with Bid, Lester and Warren joined by Orson Presence on guitar and keyboards, marking their return with Dante's Casino. From there on they have concentrated primarily on their cult following in the Far East, with frequent tours there. Their most recent album was 1995's Trinity Road.

● ALBUMS: The Strange Boutique (DinDisc 1980)★★, Love Zombies (DinDisc 1980)★★, Eligible Bachelors (Cherry Red 1982)★★★, The Lost Weekend (Blanco y Negro 1985)★★★, Dante's Casino (Vinyl Japan 1990)★★★, Charade (Cherry Red 1993)★★★, Misere (Cherry Red 1994)★★★, Trinity Road (Cherry Red 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Volume, Brilliance, Contrast (Cherry Red 1983)★★★, Fin! Live (El 1986)★★★, Colour Transmission (Virgin 1988)★★★, Westminster Affair (Cherry Red 1988)★★, Black & White Minstrels (Cherry Red 1995)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Destiny Calling (Visionary 1994).

Monotones

Formed in 1955 in Newark, New Jersey, USA, the Monotones recorded one of the most memorable doo-wop novelty songs of the 50s, 'Book Of Love'. The group was a sextet, Warren Davis, George Malone, Charles Patrick, Frank Smith, and John and Warren Ryanes. They had sung in the same church choir as Dionne Warwick and Cissy Houston before forming their own group. In 1956, they appeared on the Ted Mack's Amateur Hour television programme, singing the Cadillacs' 'Zoom'. They won first prize and began to think more seriously about a career in music. Inspired by a television commercial for toothpaste ('You'll wonder where the yellow went when you brush your teeth with Pepsodent'), Patrick, Malone and Davis wrote 'Book Of Love' to a similar melody. They recorded it at Bell Studio in New York and it was released on the small Mascot label, a subsidiary of Hull Records. It was then picked up by Argo Records for national distribution and ultimately reached number 5 in the USA. The group was touring when their record entered the charts, and months passed before they had a chance to record a follow-up. A single called 'Tom Foolery' was released but failed to chart; the third, 'The Legend Of Sleepy Hollow', was a fine record and is still played on doo-wop radio programmes today, but it also failed to chart in its own time. After a few more singles, the Monotones gave up, although some of the original members performed under that name in the 90s. John Ryanes died on 30 May 1972.

● COMPILATIONS: Who Wrote The Book Of Love? (Collectables 1992)★★★.

Monro, Matt

b. Terry Parsons, 1 December 1930, London, England, d. 7 February 1985, Ealing, London, England. This velvet-voiced balladeer first played in bands under the pseudonym Al Jordan before adopting the name Monro, allegedly borrowed from Winifred Atwell's father. Between stints as a bus driver and singer on the UK Camay soap commercial, he recorded for a number of labels, but his choice of material was generally too predictable. His interpretation of 'Garden Of Eden', for example, had to compete with four other versions by hit artists Frankie Vaughan, Gary Miller, Dick James and Joe Valino. Monro's luck changed when producer George Martin asked him to contribute a pseudo-Frank Sinatra version of 'You Keep Me Swingin'' to a Peter Sellers comedy album. This led to a contract with Parlophone Records and a Top 3 hit with 'Portrait Of My Love' (1960). For the next five years, Monro was a regular chart entrant with his classic up-tempo version of 'My Kind Of Girl', along with ballads such 'Why Not Now/Can This Be Love', 'Gonna Build A Mountain', 'Softly As I Leave You', and 'When Love Comes Along'. His excellent interpretation of Lionel Bart's James Bond movie theme 'From Russia With Love', 'Born Free' and the emotive 'Walk Away' proved particularly successful. The speedy release of a slick adaptation of the Beatles' 'Yesterday' underlined the sagacity of covering a song before your competitors. His 1962 album of Hoagy Carmichael songs, with arrangements by his regular musical director Johnny Spence, was right out of the top drawer. A move to the USA in 1965 brought a decline in Monro's chart fortunes in the UK, but he sustained his career as an in-demand nightclub performer. The enduring commercial quality of his voice was recognized by Capitol Records with the Christmas release and television promotion of the compilation album, Heartbreakers, in 1980. Ill-health dogged the singer in the early 80s, and he died from cancer in 1985. Ten years later, his son Matt Jnr, who had carved out a career for himself as a golf professional, 'duetted' with his father on an album of some of Matt Snr.'s favourite songs. Since his death, the tag that he was merely a Sinatra copyist has completely reversed, especially in America. Monro's appeal continues and the rich patina of his voice is now seen as original rather than derivative.

● ALBUMS: Blue And Sentimental (Decca 1957)★★★, Portrait (Ace Of Clubs 1961)★★★, Love Is The Same Anywhere (Parlophone 1961)★★★, My Kind Of Girl (1961)★★★★, Matt Monro Sings Hoagy Carmichael (Parlophone 1962)★★★★, I Have Dreamed (Parlophone 1965)★★★, Matt Monro And Don Rennie (1965)★★★, Walk Away (1965, USA)★★★★, Hits Of Yesterday (Parlophone 1965)★★★★, This Is The Life! (Capitol 1966)★★★★, Let's Face The Music And Dance (Capitol 1966)★★★, Here's To My Lady (Capitol 1967)★★★★, Invitation To The Movies (Capitol 1967)★★★, Tiempo De Amor Spanish language (1967)★★★, These Years (Capitol 1967)★★★, The Late Late Show (Capitol 1968)★★★★, Invitation To Broadway (Capitol 1968)★★★, Alguien Canto Spanish language (Capitol 1969)★★★, Here And Now (1969)★★★, The Southern Star film soundtrack (RCA Victor 1969), We're Gonna Change The World (Capitol 1970)★★★, Matt Monro En Espana Spanish language (1970)★★★, For The Present (Columbia 1973)★★★, The Other Side Of The Stars (Columbia 1975)★★★, The Long And Winding Road (1975)★★★, If I Never Sing Another Song (1979)★★★, Heartbreakers (EMI 1980)★★★, Un Toque De Distincion Spanish language (RCA 1982)★★★, More Heartbreakers (EMI 1984)★★★, with Matt Monro Jnr. Matt Sings Monro (EMI 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: By Request (EMI 1987)★★★, Softly As I Leave You (EMI/MFP 1987/1998)★★★, A Time For Loving (EMI/MFP 1989/1998)★★★, The EMI Years (EMI 1990)★★★★, The Capitol Years (EMI 1990)★★★★, Matt Monro Sings Don Black (EMI 1990)★★★, Matt Monro Sings 2-CD set (EMI/MFP 1991)★★★, The Very Best Of Matt Monro (EMI/MFP 1992)★★★, This Is Matt Monro 2-CD set (EMI/MFP 1993)★★★, Through The Years (EMI 1994)★★★, Hollywood & Broadway (EMI/MFP 1994)★★★, The Best Of Matt Monro (EMI/MFP 1995)★★★★, Great Gentlemen Of Song-Spotlight On Matt Monro (Capitol 1995)★★★, Matt Monro 3-CD box set (EMI 1995)★★★★, Complete Heartbreakers (EMI 1996)★★★, Songs Of Love 3-CD set (EMI/MFP 1997)★★★.

Monroe, Bill

b. William Smith Monroe, 13 September 1911, on a farm near Rosine, Ohio County, Kentucky, USA, d. 9 September 1996. The Monroes were a musical family; his father, known affectionately as Buck, was a noted step-dancer, his mother played fiddle, accordion and harmonica, and was respected locally as a singer of old-time songs. Among the siblings, elder brothers Harry and Birch both played fiddle, and brother Charlie and sister Bertha played guitar. They were all influenced by their uncle, Pendleton Vanderver, who was a fiddler of considerable talent, and noted for his playing at local events. (Monroe later immortalized him in one of his best-known numbers, 'Uncle Pen', with tribute lines such as 'Late in the evening about sundown; high on the hill above the town, Uncle Pen played the fiddle, oh, how it would ring. You can hear it talk, you can hear it sing'). At the age of nine, Monroe began to concentrate on the mandolin; his first choice had been the guitar or fiddle, but his brothers pointed out that no family member played mandolin, and as the baby, he was given little choice, although he still kept up his guitar playing. His mother died when he was 10, followed soon after by his father. He moved in to live with Uncle Pen and they were soon playing guitar together at local dances. Bill also played with a black blues musician, Arnold Schultz, who was to become a major influence on the future Monroe music. After the death of his father, most of the family moved away in their search for work. Birch and Charlie headed north, working for a time in the car industry in Detroit, before moving to Whiting and East Chicago, Indiana, where they were employed in the oil refineries. When he was 18, Bill joined them, and for four years worked at the Sinclair refinery. At one time, during the Depression, Bill was the only one with work, and the three began to play for local dances to raise money.

In 1932, the three Monroe brothers and their girlfriends became part of a team of dancers and toured with a show organized by WLS Chicago, the radio station responsible for the National Barn Dance programme. They also played on local radio stations, including WAE Hammond and WJKS Gary, Indiana. In 1934, Bill, finding the touring conflicted with his work, decided to become a full-time musician. Soon afterwards, they received an offer to tour for Texas Crystals (the makers of a patent purgative medicine), which sponsored radio programmes in several states. Birch, back in employment at Sinclair and also looking after a sister, decided against a musical career. Bill married in 1935, and between then and 1936, he and Charlie (appearing as the Monroe Brothers) had stays at various stations, including Shenandoah, Columbia, Greenville and Charlotte. In 1936, they moved to the rival and much larger Crazy Water Crystals and, until 1938, they worked on the noted Crazy Barn Dance at WBT Charlotte for that company. They became a very popular act and sang mainly traditional material, often with a blues influence. Charlie always provided the lead vocal, and Bill added tenor harmonies. In February 1936, they made their first recordings on the Bluebird label of RCA Victor, which proved popular. Further sessions followed, and in total they cut some 60 tracks for the label. Early in 1938, the brothers decided that they should follow their own careers. Charlie kept the RCA recording contract and formed his own band, the Kentucky Pardners. Since he had always handled all lead vocals, he found things easier and soon established himself in his own right. Prior to the split, Bill had never recorded an instrumental or a vocal solo, but he had ideas that he wished to put into practice. He moved to KARK Little Rock, where he formed his first band, the Kentuckians. This failed to satisfy him, and he soon moved to Atlanta, where he worked on the noted Crossroad Follies; at this point, he formed the first of the bands he would call the BlueGrass Boys. In 1939, he made his first appearance on the Grand Ole Opry, singing his version of 'New Muleskinner Blues', after which George D. Hay (the Solemn Old Judge) told him, 'Bill, if you ever leave the Opry, it'll be because you fire yourself' (over 50 years later, he was still there). During the early 40s, Monroe's band was similar to other string bands such as Mainer's Mountaineers, but by the middle of the decade, the leading influence of Monroe's driving mandolin and his high (some would say shrill) tenor singing became the dominant factor, and set the Blue Grass Boys of Bill Monroe apart from the other bands. This period gave birth to a new genre of music, and led to Monroe becoming affectionately known as the Father of Bluegrass Music. He began to tour with the Opry roadshows, and his weekly network WSM radio work soon made him a national name. In 1940 and 1941, he recorded a variety of material for RCA Victor, including gospel songs, old-time numbers and instrumentals such as the 'Orange Blossom Special' (the second known recording of the number). Wartime restrictions prevented him from recording between 1941 and early 1945, but later that year, he recorded for Columbia. In 1946, he gained his first country chart hits when his own song, 'Kentucky Waltz', reached number 3, and his now-immortal recording of 'Footprints In The Snow' reached number 5 in the US country charts. By 1945, several fiddle players had made their impact on the band's overall sound, including Chubby Wise, Art Wooten, Tommy Magness, Howdy Forrester and in 1945, guitarist/vocalist Lester Flatt and banjo player Earl Scruggs joined. Stringbean had provided the comedy and the banjo playing since 1942, although it was generally reckoned later that his playing contributed little to the overall sound that Monroe sought. Scruggs' style of playing was very different, and it quickly became responsible for not only establishing his own name as one of the greatest exponents of the instrument, but also for making bluegrass music an internationally identifiable sound. It was while Flatt and Scruggs were with the band that Monroe first recorded his now-immortal song 'Blue Moon Of Kentucky'. By 1948, other bands such as the Stanley Brothers were beginning to reflect the influence of Monroe, and bluegrass music was firmly established. During the 40s, Monroe toured with his tent show, which included his famous baseball team (the reason for Stringbean's first connections with Monroe), which played against local teams as an attraction before the musical show began. In 1951, he bought some land at Bean Blossom, Brown County, Indiana, and established a country park, which became the home for bluegrass music shows. He was involved in a very serious car accident in January 1953, and was unable to perform for several months. In 1954, Elvis Presley recorded Monroe's 'Blue Moon Of Kentucky' in a 4/4 rock tempo and sang it at his solitary appearance on the Opry. A dejected Presley found the performance made no impact with the Opry audience, but the song became a hit. It also led to Monroe re-recording it in a style that, like the original, started as a waltz, but after a verse and chorus featuring three fiddles, it changed to 4/4 tempo; Monroe repeated the vocal in the new style (Paul McCartney's 1991 Unplugged album features a version in both styles). Monroe toured extensively throughout the 50s, and had chart success in 1958 with his own instrumental number, 'Scotland'. He used the twin fiddles of Kenny Baker and Bobby Hicks to produce the sound of bagpipes behind his own mandolin - no doubt his tribute to his family's Scottish ancestry. By the end of the decade, the impact of rock 'n' roll was affecting his record sales and music generally. By this time, Flatt and Scruggs were firmly established with their own band and finding success on television and at folk festivals. Monroe was a strong-willed person and it was not always easy for those who worked with him, or for him, to achieve the perfect arrangement. He had stubborn ideas, and in 1959, he refused to play a major concert in Carnegie Hall, because he believed that Alan Lomax, the organizer, was a communist. He was also suspicious of the press and rarely, if ever, gave interviews. In 1962, however, he became friendly with Ralph Rinzler, a writer and member of the Greenbriar Boys, who became his manager.

In 1963, Monroe played his first folk festival at the University of Chicago. He soon created a great interest among students generally and, with Rinzler's planning, he was soon busily connected with festivals devoted solely to bluegrass music. In 1965, he was involved with the major Roanoke festival in Virginia, and in 1967, he started his own at Bean Blossom. During the 60s, many young musicians benefitted from their time as a member of Monroe's band, including Bill Keith, Peter Rowan, Byron Berline, Roland White and Del McCoury. In 1969, he was made an honorary Kentucky Colonel, and in 1970, was elected to the Country Music Hall Of Fame in Nashville. The plaque stated: 'The Father of Bluegrass Music. Bill Monroe developed and perfected this music form and taught it to a great many names in the industry'. Monroe has written many songs, including 'Memories Of Mother And Dad', 'When The Golden Leaves Begin To Fall', 'My Little Georgia Rose' and 'Blue Moon Of Kentucky' (the latter a much-recorded country standard) and countless others. Many have been written using pseudonyms such as Albert Price, James B. Smith and James W. Smith. In 1971, his talent as a songwriter saw him elected to the Nashville Songwriters' Association International Hall Of Fame. He kept up a hectic touring schedule throughout the 70s, but in 1981, he was diagnosed with cancer. He survived after treatment and, during the 80s, maintained a schedule that would have daunted much younger men. In 1984, he recorded the album Bill Monroe And Friends, which contains some of his songs sung as duets with other artists, including the Oak Ridge Boys ('Blue Moon Of Kentucky'), Emmylou Harris ('Kentucky Waltz'), Barbara Mandrell ('My Rose Of Old Kentucky'), Ricky Skaggs ('My Sweet Darling') and Willie Nelson ('The Sunset Trail'). Johnny Cash, who also appears on the album, presumably did not know any Monroe songs because they sang Cash's own 'I Still Miss Someone'.

Over the years since Monroe first formed his bluegrass band, some of the biggest names in country music have played as members before progressing to their own careers. These include Clyde Moody, Flatt And Scruggs, Jim Eanes, Carter Stanley, Mac Wiseman, Jimmy Martin, Sonny Osborne, Vassar Clements, Kenny Baker and his own son James Monroe. Amazingly, bearing in mind his popularity, Monroe's last chart entry was 'Gotta Travel On', a Top 20 country hit in March 1959. However, his records are still collected and the German Bear Family label has released boxed sets on compact disc of his Decca recordings. (Between 1950, when he first recorded for Decca and 1969, he made almost 250 recordings for the label.) He continued to play the Opry, and in 1989, he celebrated his 50th year as a member, the occasion being marked by MCA (by then the owners of Decca) recording a live concert from the Opry stage, which became his first ever release on CD format. He underwent surgery for a double coronary bypass on 9 August 1991, but by October, he was back performing and once again hosting his normal Opry show. The acknowledged 'father of bluegrass music' died a few days before his 85th birthday in 1996.

● ALBUMS: Knee Deep In Bluegrass (Decca 1958)★★★, I Saw The Light (Decca 1959)★★★, Mr. Bluegrass (Decca 1960)★★★, The Great Bill Monroe & The BlueGrass Boys (Harmony 1961)★★★, Bluegrass Ramble (Decca 1962)★★★, with Rose Maddox Rose Maddox Sings Bluegrass (Decca 1962)★★★, The Father Of Bluegrass Music (Decca 1962)★★★, My All-Time Country Favorites (Decca 1962)★★★, Bluegrass Special (Decca 1963)★★★★, Bill Monroe Sings Country Songs (Decca 1964)★★★, I'll Meet You In Church Sunday Morning (Decca 1964)★★★, Original Bluegrass Sound (Harmony 1965)★★★, Bluegrass Instrumentals (Decca 1965)★★★, The High Lonesome Sound Of Bill Monroe (Decca 1966)★★★, Bluegrass Time (Decca 1967)★★★, I Saw The Light (Decca 1969)★★★, A Voice From On High (Decca 1969)★★★, Bluegrass Style (Vocalion 1970)★★★, Kentucky Bluegrass (Decca 1970)★★★, Bill Monroe's Country Hall Of Fame (Decca 1971)★★★★, Uncle Pen (Decca 1972)★★★, Bean Blossom (Decca 1973)★★★, with James Monroe Father And Son (Decca 1973)★★★, The Road Of Life (Decca 1974)★★★, with Birch Monroe Brother Birch Monroe Plays Old-Time Fiddle Favorites (Decca 1975)★★★, with Doc Watson Bill & Doc Sing Country Songs (FBN 1975)★★★, with Kenny Baker Kenny Baker Plays Bill Monroe (Decca 1976)★★★, Weary Traveller (Decca 1976)★★★, Sings Bluegrass, Body And Soul (Decca 1977)★★★, Bluegrass Memories (Decca 1977)★★★, with James Monroe Together Again (Decca 1978)★★★, Bill Monroe With Lester Flatt & Earl Scruggs:The Original Bluegrass Band (Rounder 1979)★★★★, Bluegrass Classic (Radio Shows 1946-1948) (MCA 1980)★★★, Bean Blossom 1979 (MCA 1980)★★★, Orange Blossom Special (Recorded Live At Melody Ranch) (MCA 1981)★★, Master Of Bluegrass (MCA 1981)★★★, Live Radio (1982)★★★, Bill Monroe & Friends (MCA 1984)★★★, Bluegrass '87 (MCA 1987)★★★, Southern Flavor (MCA 1988)★★★, Live At The Opry: Celebrating 50 Years On The Grand Ole Opry (MCA 1989)★★★, Muleskinner Blues 1940-1941 recordings (RCA 1991)★★★. As The Monroe Brothers Early Bluegrass Music (Camden 1963)★★★, The Monroe Brothers, Bill & Charlie (Decca 1969)★★★, Feast Here Tonight (Bluebird 1975)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Bill Monroe & His Blue GrassBoys (16 Hits) (Columbia 1970)★★★, The Classic Bluegrass Recordings Volume 1 (County 1980)★★★, The Classic Bluegrass Recordings Volume 2 (County 1980)★★★, MCA Singles Collection Volumes 1, 2 & 3 (MCA 1983)★★★, Columbia Historic Edition (Columbia 1987)★★★, Bill Monroe Bluegrass 1950-1958 4-CD box set (Bear Family 1989)★★★★, Country Music Hall Of Fame (MCA 1991)★★★, Bill Monroe Bluegrass 1959-1969 4-CD box set (Bear Family 1991)★★★★, The Essential Bill Monroe 1945-1949 (Columbia/Legacy 1992)★★★★, with the Blue Grass Boys Live Recordings 1956-1969: Off The Record Volume 1 (Smithsonian/Folkways 1993)★★★, with Doc Watson Live Duet Recordings 1963-80 (Smithsonian/Folkways 1993)★★★, The Music Of Bill Monroe 4-CD box set (MCA 1994)★★★★, Bluegrass (1970-1979) 4-CD box set (Bear Family 1995)★★★★, 16 Gems (Columbia/Legacy 1996)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Bossmen: Bill Monroe And Muddy Waters, J. Rooney. Bill Monroe And His Blue Grass Boys, Neil V. Rosenberg.

Monroe, Birch

b. 1901, on a farm near Rosine, Ohio County, Kentucky, USA, d. 15 May 1982. Birch was the fiddle-playing elder brother of Bill Monroe who, after the death of his parents, moved to Detroit with brother Charlie Monroe. Here, they worked for a time in the motor industry, before moving to work in the oil refineries at Whiting and East Chicago, Indiana. In 1929, they were joined by brother Bill, and during the Depression, the three began to play at local venues; eventually Bill and Charlie worked professionally together as the Monroe Brothers. From the mid-to late 40s, he worked with brother Bill's band, playing bass and taking bass vocals, as well as acting as their manager and booking agent. He remained connected with his brother's business enterprises, and from 1951 to the end of the 70s, he managed the country park at Bean Blossom, Indiana, which featured the weekly Brown County Jamboree. His recording career was limited to those recordings made with his brother's band, except in the mid-70s, when, accompanied by the BlueGrass Boys and under the production of Bill, he recorded an album of fiddle music. Birch Monroe died in 1982, and is buried in the Monroe family plot on Jerusalem Ridge, Rosine, Kentucky.

● ALBUMS: with Bill Monroe Brother Birch Monroe Plays Old-Time Fiddle Favorites (Decca 1975)★★★.

Monroe, Charlie

b. 4 July 1903, on a farm near Rosine, Ohio County, Kentucky, USA, d. 27 September 1975. Charlie was the elder brother of Bill Monroe who, after the death of his parents, moved to Detroit with fiddle-playing brother Birch Monroe. Here they worked for a time in the motor industry, before moving to work in the oil refineries at Whiting and East Chicago, Indiana. In 1929, they were joined by brother Bill and during the Depression, the three began to play at local venues; eventually Bill and Charlie worked professionally together as the Monroe Brothers. In 1938, they decided to pursue their own careers. At the time of the split, they had a contract with RCA-Victor, for whom they had recorded 60 songs; Charlie, who had always taken the lead vocals (though Bill had written many of their songs), kept this contract. Throughout the 40s, he toured and recorded for RCA-Victor, and at times his band, the Kentucky Pardners, which became one of North Carolina's most popular hillbilly bands, included notable musicians such as guitarist Lester Flatt and mandolin players Red Rector, Ira Louvin and Curly Sechler. He differed from his brother in that his band played a mixture of country and bluegrass, and Charlie, a highly respected guitarist, frequently used an electric guitar. He made many fine recordings, and although he never achieved a chart hit, Monroe is remembered for his versions of numbers such as 'Down In The Willow Garden' (an old folk song) and his own compositions 'Rubber Neck Blues', 'It's Only A Phonograph Record' and 'Who's Calling You Sweetheart Tonight?'. He joined Decca around 1950, and although they made some concert appearances together, further recordings with brother Bill never materialized. In the early 50s, tired of the touring, he broke up his band and semi-retired to his Kentucky farm. In 1957, he supposedly retired to manage a coalmine and yard near Rosine, but made some special appearances, and during the early 60s, recorded two albums on the Rem label. His wife became ill with cancer, and to meet the medical expenses, Monroe left Kentucky and worked in Indiana for a lift company until his wife died. He remarried in 1969 when he moved to Tennessee, and in 1972, he was persuaded to appear with Jimmy Martin at a Gettysburg bluegrass festival, which led him to make some further appearances at similar events. He relocated to Reidsville, North Carolina, and in late 1974, he, too, was diagnosed as suffering from cancer. He made his last public performance in his old home area of Rosine, Kentucky, around early August, and died at his home in Reidsville in September 1975, but is buried in the Monroe family plot on Jerusalem Ridge, Rosine, Kentucky. Although his work was not as important as that of brother Bill, he nevertheless made a significant contribution to the formation of what is now known as bluegrass music.

● ALBUMS: Bluegrass Sound (1963)★★★, Lord Build Me A Cabin (Starday 1965)★★★, Charlie Monroe Sings Again (Starday 1966)★★★, Who's Calling You Sweetheart Tonight? (Camden 1969)★★★, Noon-Day Jamboree (Radio Shows 1944) (1970)★★★, Songs Of Charlie Monroe & the Kentucky Pardners (Vintage Radio Recordings) (1970)★★★, Live At Lake Norman Music Hall (1975)★★★, Tally Ho (1975)★★★, one side of second album by Phipps Family Memories Of Charlie Monroe (1975)★★★, Charlie Monroe's Boys:The Early Years (1982)★★★, Vintage Radio 1944 (1990)★★★. As The Monroe Brothers Early Bluegrass Music (Camden 1963)★★★, The Monroe Brothers, Bill & Charlie (Decca 1969)★★★, Feast Here Tonight (Bluebird 1975)★★★.

Monroe, Gerry

b. unknown, d. November 1989. After signing with the independent Chapter One label, this mild-mannered, bespectacled counter tenor made a startling television debut in May 1970 on BBC's Top Of The Pops, with a version of 'Sally', the signature tune of Gracie Fields, an entertainer he greatly admired. This reached number 4 in the UK, and although later singles, until 1972, were less successful, they all made the charts. Most of his a-sides were upper-octave revivals of sentimental ballads such as Johnnie Ray's 'Cry' (1970, Top 40), the Platters' 'My Prayer' (1970, Top 10) and the evergreen 'It's A Sin To Tell A Lie' (1971, Top 20). However, the last two chart entries, 'Little Drops Of Silver' (1971, Top 40) and 'Girl Of My Dreams' (1972, Top 50), were composed especially for him. Monroes's cache of hits formed the backbone of his act when he returned to the working men's club netherworld from which he had emerged. While his voice remained a thing of wonder, failing health obliged him to cut back on engagements by the mid-80s.

● ALBUMS: Sally Pride Of Our Alley (Chapter One)★★, Gerry Monroe (Chapter One 1971)★★.

Monroe, James

b. James William Monroe, 1941. Son of Bill Monroe. James began his musical career in 1964, playing upright bass with his father's BlueGrass Boys. In 1969, he became the band's guitarist and also began to take lead vocals. He left the Bluegrass Boys in 1972, and formed his own bluegrass band, the Midnight Ramblers, but later recorded two albums with his father. In the mid-70s, he recorded several albums for Atteiram, including a tribute to his uncle, Charlie Monroe, on which his father also appeared. Soon afterwards he drastically reduced his performing to help with the running of his father's business affairs.

● ALBUMS: with Bill Monroe Father And Son (Decca 1973)★★★, Sings Songs of 'Memory Lane' Of His Uncle Charlie Monroe (Atteiram 1976)★★★, Together Again (Decca 1978)★★★. With the Midnight Ramblers Something New! Something Different! Something Good! (Atteiram 1974)★★★, Midnight Blues (Atteiram 1976)★★★, Satisfied Mind (1984)★★★.

Monroe, Marilyn

b. Norma Jean Mortenson, 1 June 1926, Los Angeles, California, USA, d. 5 August 1962, Brentwood, California, USA. As well as being a talented comedienne and the number 1 sex symbol in movies during the 50s, Monroe proved to be an appealing interpreter of flirtatious ballads in several of her most popular films. As one of the Ladies Of The Chorus (1948), she made a promising start with Lester Lee and Allan Roberts' 'Every Baby Needs A Da-Da-Daddy', which, with its reference to 'Tiffany's', was a precursor to one of her most celebrated performances a few years later, when the same New York store cropped up in 'Diamonds Are A Girl's Best Friend', from Jule Styne and Leo Robin's score for Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (1953). In that film Monroe duetted with another of Hollywood's top glamour girls, Jane Russell, on 'Two Little Girls From Little Rock', 'Bye Bye Baby' and a Hoagy Carmichael/Harold Adamson number, 'When Loves Goes Wrong'. Co-starring with Robert Mitchum in River Of No Return (1954), Monroe's role as a saloon singer conveniently gave her the opportunity to perform the title song and 'I'm Gonna File My Claim', among others, and, in the same year, she registered strongly with a bundle of Irving Berlin numbers in There's No Business Like Show Business. These included 'A Man Chases A Girl' (with Donald O'Connor), 'After You Get What You Want You Don't Want It', 'Heatwave', 'Lazy' and 'You'd Be Surprised'. In 1959 she made what became her most commercially successful film - and arguably the highlight of her career. The classic Some Like It Hot, with Tony Curtis, Jack Lemmon and Joe E. ('nobody's perfect') Brown, featured some of Monroe's most effective vocal performances, such as 'I'm Through With Love', 'I Wanna Be Loved By You' and 'Running Wild'. She sang for the last time on screen in Let's Make Love (1960). Apart from contributing the film's high spot, a compelling version of 'My Heart Belongs To Daddy', Monroe duetted with two European heart-throbs, Yves Montand and Frankie Vaughan, on Sammy Cahn and Jimmy Van Heusen's 'Specialization', 'Incurably Romantic' and the title song. Her final performance, a sultry rendering of 'Happy Birthday Mr. President' and 'Thanks For The Memory', was given in May 1962 for President Kennedy's birthday celebrations in Madison Square Garden. Just over two months later she died as the result of an overdose of barbiturates, at the age of 36 (Monroe's death has since been the subject of numerous conspiracy theories, most of which concern her alleged affair with John F. Kennedy). One of the musical selections chosen for her funeral service was a recording of 'Over The Rainbow' sung by Judy Garland, another showbusiness legend who met a tragic end. Since her death, it has been estimated that over 100 Monroe biographies have been published. She was also the subject of several songs, the most famous being Elton John's 'Candle In the Wind'. Others included James Cunningham's 'Norma Jean Wants To Be A Movie Star' and 'Elvis And Marilyn' by Leon Russell.

● COMPILATIONS: Marilyn (20th Century Fox 1962)★★★, Collection: 20 Golden Greats (Deja Vu 1985)★★★★, Marilyn Monroe -The Complete Recordings (Rare 1988)★★★, The Marilyn Monroe Story (Deja Vu 1989)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Marilyn And The Kennedys (Say Goodbye To The President) (Weinerworld 1998).

● FURTHER READING: Marilyn, Norman Mailer. Marilyn Monroe: The Biography, Donald Spoto. Goddess: Secret Lives Of Marilyn Monroe, Anthony Summers. The Complete Films Of

Marilyn Monroe, Mark Ricci and Michael Conway, Young Marilyn Becoming The Legend James Haspiel.

● FILMS: Dangerous Years (1948), Ladies Of The Chorus (1948), Love Happy (1950), A Ticket To Tomahawk (1950), The Asphalt Jungle (1950), All About Eve (1950), The Fireball (1950), Right Cross (1950), Home Town Story (1951), As Young As You Feel (1951), Love Nest (1951), Let's Make It Legal (1951), We're Not Married (1952), Clash By Night (1952), Full House (1952), Monkey Business (1952), Don't Bother To Knock (1952), Niagara (1952), Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (1953), How To Marry A Millionaire (1953), River Of No Return (1954), There's No Business Like Show Business (1954), The Seven-Year Itch (1955), Bus Stop (1956), The Prince And The Showgirl (1957), Some Like It Hot (1959), Let's Make Love (1960), The Misfits (1960).

Monroe, Melissa

b. Melissa Katherine Monroe, 1936, d. December 1990. Daughter of Bill Monroe. A singer and instrumentalist, Monroe toured with her father's roadshow during the 40s and 50s. She made some solo recordings for Columbia in the early 50s, but did not achieve any chart success.

Monroe, Michael

When Hanoi Rocks folded following the death of drummer Razzle in 1984, Monroe took several years' break before deciding to start again with a solo career. In 1988, Nights Are So Long emerged on the independent Yahoo label, featuring a mixture of originals and cover versions of songs by the Heavy Metal Kids, Johnny Thunders, MC5 and the Flamin' Groovies. This low-key comeback was a soul-cleansing process for Monroe, before he signed to Mercury Records, and threw himself back into the spotlight with all guns blazing. Recruiting Phil Grande (guitar), Tommy Price (drums), Kenny Aaronson (bass) and Ed Roynesdal (keyboards), he recorded Not Fakin' It, a streetwise selection of sleazy rock 'n' roll numbers, delivered in Monroe's inimitable, alley cat style. The album was well received and the tour to support it was a further triumph, proving easily the most successful of the Hanoi Rock spin-off projects.

● ALBUMS: Nights Are So Long (Yahoo 1988)★★★, Not Fakin' It (Polygram 1989)★★★.

Monroe, Vaughn

b. 7 October 1911, Akron, Ohio, USA, d. 21 May 1973, Stuart, Florida, USA. Monroe was a Wisconsin State Trumpet Champion in 1926 with an ambition to become an opera singer. This eventually led him to join Austin Wylie And His Golden Pheasant Orchestra and Larry Funk And His Band Of A Thousand Melodies. He studied voice at the New England Conservatory Of Music, and in 1939 sang and played for the Jack Marshard Orchestra. Monroe then formed his own band in Boston in 1940, and immediately had a big hit with 'There I Go', quickly followed by 'My Devotion', 'When The Lights Go On Again', 'Let's Get Lost' and his theme tune 'Racing With The Moon'. His robust baritone, sometimes called The Voice With Hairs On Its Chest, sold the band to the public, although Monroe also had some leading sidemen such as future Glenn Miller trumpeter Bobby Nichols, guitarist Carmen Mastren, drummer Alvin Stoller and vocalist Marilyn Duke. Throughout the 40s Monroe had great success in clubs, radio and especially on records. 'There I've Said It Again', 'Ballerina' and 'Riders In The Sky' each sold over a million, while 'Someday', 'Let It Snow! Let It Snow! Let It Snow!', 'Red Roses For A Blue Lady', 'The Trolley Song', 'Seems Like Old Times', 'How Soon' and 'Sound Off' all made the US Top 10. Monroe also made two films in the 40s: Meet The People (1944) with Lucille Ball and Dick Powell, and Carnegie Hall (1947), which featured Monroe with the New York Symphony Orchestra. He disbanded the orchestra in the early 50s and worked in television. Monroe was also involved in films such as Singing Guns (1950) and many other b-movie westerns, sometimes as a singing cowboy. In 1955 he also flirted with the 'rock' age by getting his recording of Leiber And Stoller's 'Black Denim And Motor Cycle Boots' into the US Top 40. He was still active, touring, playing clubs and running his own Massachusetts restaurant until his death in 1973.

● ALBUMS: There I Sing/Swing It Again (RCA 1958)★★★, Vaughn Monroe (RCA 1958)★★★, Surfer's Stomp (1962)★★, Themes Of Bands And Singers (1963)★★★, Great Gospels (1964)★★★, Racing With The Moon (1965)★★★, Dance With Me! (1969)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (1962)★★★, The Best Of Vaughn Monroe (1987)★★★.

Monsieur Beaucaire

A romantic operetta with music and lyrics by André Messager and Adrian Ross, and a book by Fredererick Lonsdale, which was based on the novel by Brook Tarkington. Set in the stylish city of Bath, England, in the early 18th century, when it was ruled by the so-called King of Bath, Richard 'Beau' Nash, the familiar plot concerned yet another nobleman disguised as a commoner. In this instance, the Duc d'Orléans (Marion Green), son of the King of France, is masquerading as the barber Monsieur Beaucaire. In spite of stern opposition from the Duke of Winterset (Robert Parker) (a bounder who cheats at cards), the ducal barber wins the heart of Lady Mary Carlisle (Maggie Teyte), and eventually accedes to the throne of France. After opening at the Prince's Theatre in London on 19 April 1919, the show transferred to the Palace Theatre in July, and ran for 221 performances. The gay and lively score included songs such as 'Honour And Love', That's A Woman's Way', 'Lightly, Lightly', 'Say No More', 'Gold And Blue And White', 'Red Rose', 'The Honours Of War', 'Going To The Ball', and 'I Love You A Little'. Maggie Teyte, who had sung in leading operatic roles before turning to the musical stage, was outstanding. Monsieur Beaucaire was presented on Broadway in December 1919, and was produced in Paris in 1925, 1929, 1935, and 1954. A London revival played Daly's Theatre in 1931. The 1946 film version starred Bob Hope and Joan Caulfield.

Monsoon

The nucleus of UK-based Monsoon were producer/writer/musician Steve Coe and his collaborator Martin Smith. Together they produced a hybrid of raga-pop, fusing Indian and Western influences. They were fronted by the schoolgirl vocalist Sheila Chandra (b. 14 March 1965, Waterloo, London, England), and augmented by session musicians, particularly on percussion instruments. Chandra had previously acted in the UK children's television programme Grange Hill. Monsoon's brief UK success arrived in 1982 with 'Ever So Lonely' and the follow up 'Shakti (The Meaning Of Within)'. However, when 'The Wings Of Dawn' failed Chandra embarked on an adventurous solo career.

● ALBUMS: Third Eye (1983)★★.

Monster - R.E.M.

Although not the chart monster the record company expected, this album nevertheless contained enough hit singles to satisfy. There was a self-consciously harder edge to the recording, although the trademark melodies and haunting hooks were present in small doses. 'Crush With Eyeliner' was the commercial highlight, and tracks such as 'Star 69' harked back to the punk feel of the early R.E.M. albums. The tremelo tone of Peter Buck's guitar is constant throughout, irritating some, but also reflecting the band's desire to move as far as possible from the mandolin-dominated ballads of their most recent work. Stipe's vocals were also mixed down, a perplexing move for what the band had planned as their all-out rock album.

● Tracks: What's The Frequency, Kenneth?; Crush With Eyeliner; King Of Comedy; I Don't Sleep, I Dream; Star 69; Strange Currencies; Tongue; Bang And Blame; I Took Your Name; Let Me In; Circus Envy; You.

● First released 1994

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 1

Monster Magnet

This space-rock revivalist band was formed in New Jersey in 1989 by vocalist/guitarist David Wyndorf, with guitarist John McBain, bassist Joe Calendra and drummer Jon Kleinman. After a promising debut and the rather self-indulgent Tab, Monster Magnet suddenly found broad press and public support with Spine Of God, despite the back cover disclaimer that 'It's a satanic drug thing . . . you wouldn't understand'. The sound and songs drew on Wyndorf's obsession with late 60s psychedelia, music and culture, producing a hypnotic set that blended Space Ritual-era Hawkwind style with an MC5/Black Sabbath guitar barrage and a liberal sprinkling of drug references, all played with a 90s venom. The band were quick to capitalize, touring almost non-stop around Europe and the USA, and, following a US tour with Soundgarden, they lost McBain but gained a contract with A&M, who were happy to give the group creative freedom. The resultant Superjudge, with new guitarist Ed Mundell, was, if anything, more intense, and saw Monster Magnet pay tribute to Hawkwind with an affectionate blast through 'Brainstorm'. Their live shows remained an experience in themselves, with lighting engineer Tim Cronin's astral projection backdrop proving to be an essential component as the band whipped up a frenzy on stage, touring Europe with Paw and the USA with Raging Slab in 1994. Dopes To Infinity and Powertrip took space rock to perfection and established them as arguably the leaders of the genre.

● ALBUMS: Monster Magnet (Primo Scree 1991)★★★, Tab (Primo Scree 1991)★★★, Spine Of God (Primo Scree 1991)★★★, Superjudge (A&M 1993), Dopes To Infinity (A&M 1995)★★★, Powertrip (A&M 1998)★★★★.

Montage

In 1967 Michael Brown (b. Michael Lookofsky, New York, USA) parted company from the Left Banke, hitmakers with the original 'Walk Away Renee'. He then 'discovered' Montage - Bob Steyarr (vocals), Mike Smyth (lead guitar/vocals), Lance Cornelius (bass/vocals) and Vance Chapman (drums/vocals) - secured their record deal and proceeded to arrange, produce and play keyboards on the group's only album. As Brown composed every selection, often in partnership with Bert Somner, the results were similar to his 'baroque-styled' work with Left Banke and it even features a version of their classic, 'Desiree'. Indeed Montage contains some of Brown's best work, notably, 'I Shall Call Her Mary' and 'Grand Pianist'. However, he split from Montage soon after the album was issued and the group disintegrated. Brown subsequently formed the equally worthwhile Stories.

● ALBUMS: Montage (Laurie 1968)★★★★.

Montana Rose

Montana Rose is a goodtime country band from Gallatin Gateway, Montana, USA. It is fronted by Claudia Appling Williams and her bandleader/bassist husband, Kenny. The band also features Rick Winkling (guitar) and Mike Gillan (drums) with accordion playing from Fats Kaplan on Star Of Bannack. Their cynical look at modern country music in 'Hillbilly With A Record Deal' did well and they may become hillbillies with a major record deal themselves.

● ALBUMS: Highway 191 (Cowboy Heaven 1995)★★★, Star Of Bannack (Cowboy Heaven 1996)★★★.

Montana Slim

(see Carter, Wilf)

Montana, Patsy

b. Rubye Blevins, 30 October 1912, Hot Springs, Arkansas, USA, d. 3 May 1996, San Jacinto, California, USA. Montana was the eleventh child and first daughter of a farmer, and in her childhood she learned organ, guitar, violin and yodelling. In 1928 she worked on radio in California as Rubye Blevins, the Yodelling Cowgirl from San Antone. In 1931 she joined Stuart Hamblen's show, appearing on radio and at rodeos as part of the Montana Cowgirls. Hamblen renamed her Patsy as it was 'a good Irish name'. In 1933 she joined the Kentucky Ramblers, who, because of their western image, became the Prairie Ramblers. In 1935 Montana recorded her self-penned 'I Want To Be A Cowboy's Sweetheart', the first million-seller by a female country singer. She recorded many other western songs including 'Old Nevada Moon' and 'Back On The Montana Plains' (several of her songs had Montana in the title). She appeared in several films including Colorado Sunset with Gene Autry. During the war, she recorded with the Sons Of The Pioneers and the Lightcrust Doughboys; her 'Goodnight Soldier' was very popular. She continued with her cowgirl image after the war but retired in 1952 and moved to California. She returned to touring in the 60s, often with her daughter Judy Rose, and recorded for Starday with Waylon Jennings on lead guitar. She won popularity outside the USA, particularly in the UK, with her appearances in country clubs. Montana, who presented a picture of independence through her cowgirl image, has inspired many yodelling singers including Rosalie Allen, Texas Ruby and Bonnie Lou. In 1993 she received the Living Legends Of Western Music award. She died in May 1996, and was posthumously inducted into the Country Music Hall Of Fame the same year.

● ALBUMS: New Sounds Of Patsy Montana At The Matador Room (Sims 1964)★★★, Precious Memories (Burch 1977)★★★, Mum And Me (Look 1977)★★★, I Want To Be A Cowboy's Sweetheart (1977)★★★, Patsy Montana Sings Her Original Hits (Cattle 1980)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Early Country Favourites (Old Homestead 1983)★★★, Patsy Montana And The Prairie Ramblers (1984)★★★, The Cowboy's Sweetheart (Flying Fish 1988)★★★.

Montañez, Andy

b. 7 May, Puerto Rico. For 15 years Montañez's rich and powerful voice was an essential part of El Gran Combo's trademark sound. In 1977 Dimensión Latina, based in then oil wealthy Venezuela, made him a lucrative offer he could not refuse, and he joined them as a co-lead singer until 1980, when he left to go solo. He released a string of albums during the 80s and in 1990. His 1983 Hoy . . . y Ayer (Today and Yesterday), contained a medley of El Gran Combo hits to mark their 20th anniversary. Mirroring El Gran Combo, Montañez uses a line-up that contains two trumpets, two saxophones and a trombone, plus a rhythm section (conga, bongo, timbales, cowbell, maracas, bass, piano) and coro (chorus). The 1985 chart-topper, Andy Montañez, was one of his best. It contained the superb C. Curet Alonso composition 'Genio y Figura'. Ernesto Rivera wrote all the arrangements and Montañez's sons, Andy Jnr. and Harold, sang coro. The sons became members of Andy's gigging band, led by flamboyant timbales player Don Perignon, whom backed him on the hit Mejor Acompañado Que Nunca (Better Accompanied Than Ever), 1986. This was another fine album and contained the outstanding 'Me Lo Estas Poniendo Dificil' (You Are Making It Difficult For Me), arranged by Rivera. Andy and the band won awards in Colombia and Puerto Rico and made one more album together in 1988.

Andy Jnr. and Harold began recording as a duo in 1987 with El Comienzo Del Camino . . ., followed by Siguiendo El Camino in 1989. Both albums were produced by bandleader, trombonist, arranger, composer Julio 'Gunda' Merced. Don Perignon went solo as a bandleader and debuted on La Buena Vida! in 1989. His trio of lead vocalists included Luisito Carrión, who previously worked with 'Gunda' Merced's Salsa Fever, La Terrifica, and Bobby Valentín. In 1990, Carrión became a member of Sonora Ponceña (see Papo Lucca). Andy became the centre of controversy in early 1989 when the Kiwanis Club, which organize Miami's Calle Ocho Festival, vetoed his appearance because he had visited Cuba in 1979 while still a member of Dimensión Latina. Paradoxically, he had been allowed to perform at the festival during the previous four years. Andy retorted that his political views were private, and added that he was not a communist. The same year, Montañez and El Gran Combo appeared on the same bill at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival. Montañez returned in 1990 with Todo Nuevo . . !, recorded with some of Puerto Rico's finest session musicians. 'Fantasma', arranged by trumpeter Tommy Villariny, was the first hit from the album. In the tradition of the 70s Puerto Rico All Stars albums, which Andy participated in, Don Perignon assembled a mini-galaxy of Puerto Rico's current stars under the banner of La Puertorriqueña for Festival De Soneros in 1990. Besides Montañez, other artists involved were: Gilberto Santa Rosa, Pedro Brull (from Mulenze), Luisito Carrión, Primi Cruz (from Willie Rosario's band), lead vocals were by Tony Vega, Alex D'Castro, coro; Mario Ortiz, trumpet; Humberto Ramírez, arranger, co-musical director and trumpet; Andy Guzmán, piano and arranger. Leading Puerto Rican composers C. Curet Alonso and Johnny Ortiz, were amongst those contributing songs.

● ALBUMS: with El Gran Combo El Gran Combo . . . de Siempre (1962)★★★, Acángana (1963),★★★★ Ojos Chinos - Jala Jala (1964)★★★, El Caballo Pelotero (1965)★★★★, El Swing del Gran Combo (1966)★★★, El Gran Combo en Navidad, Maldito Callo, Esos Ojitos Negros, Fiesta con El Gran Combo, Boleros Románticos con El Gran Combo, Boogaloos con El Gran Combo, Tu Querias Boogaloo?, Pata Pata Jala Jala Boogaloo, Tangos Por El Gran Combo (1967)★★★★, Los Nenes Sicodelicos, Latin Power, Smile It's El Gran Combo (1968)★★★, Este Si Que Es El Gran Combo (1969)★★★, Estamos Primeros (1970)★★★, De Punta A Punta (1971)★★★, Por El Libro (1972)★★★★, En Acción

(1973)★★★, El Gran Combo 5 (1973)★★, Disfrútelo Hasta El Cabo! (1974)★★★, El Gran Combo 7 (1975)★★★, El Gran Combo (1975)★★★★; with the Puerto Rico All Stars Puerto Rico All Stars (1976)★★★; with El Gran Combo Mejor Que Nunca (Better Than Ever) (1976)★★★; with Dimensión Latina Los Generales de la Salsa aka Presentanda: Andy Montañez (1977)★★; with the Puerto Rico All Stars Los Profesionales (1977)★★★; with Dimensión Latina Dimensión Latina 78/780 Kilos de Salsa (1977)★★★★, Inconquistable (1978)★★★, Dimension Latina '79 (1978)★★★; solo Una Dimensión Desconocida (1978)★★★ with Dimensión Latina . . . Tremenda Dimensión! (1978)★★★, Combinación Latina No.4 (1979)★★★, Dimensión Latina (1980)★★, Dimensión Latina en el Madison Square Garden (1980)★★; solo Salsa Con 'Cache' (1980)★★★; with Dimensión Latina Para Siémpre (1981)★★★; solo Andy Montañez (1981)★★, Trovador del Amor, Para Ustedes . . . con Sabor! (1981)★★★, Solo Boleros (1982)★★★, Hoy . . . y Ayer (1983)★★★, Tania & Andy Montañez (1983)★★★, Versátil (1984)★★★, Andy Montañez (1985)★★; duo on one track with Milagros Hernández La Milagros (1986)★★; Mejor Acompañado Que Nunca (1986)★★★, El Eterno Enamorado (1988)★★★, Todo Nuevo . . ! (1990)★★★; with La Puertorriqueña Festival De Soneros (1990)★★★, El Catedrático de la Salsa (1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 14 Grandes Exitos (1984)★★★★, Canta Sus Exitos (1989)★★★★.

Montclairs

This R&B vocal group from East St. Louis, Illinois, USA, comprised lead Phil Perry, David Frye, George McLellan, Kevin Sanlin and Clifford 'Scotty' Williams. The Montclairs were representative of the vocal group renaissance of the early 70s when falsetto lead and sweet-sound vocals were fashionable. The group recorded their first single in 1969, which was only distributed in the St. Louis area, and the following year began recording for bandleader/producer Oliver Sain at his Archway Studio. Sain arranged for the group to be signed with Paula Records, based in Shreveport, Louisiana. Their outstanding hits for the label were 'Dreaming Out Of Season' (number 34 R&B) from 1972, and 'Make Up For Lost Time' (number 46 R&B) from 1974. Their last chart record was 'Baby You Know (I'm Gonna Miss You)' from 1974. After the Montclairs left Paula in 1975 they disbanded.

● ALBUMS: Dreaming Out Of Season (Paula 1972)★★★.

Monte Carlo

Slightly less risqué than The Love Parade (1929), Monte Carlo, which was released by Paramount a year later, was nevertheless a hot-bed of romance and intrigue in the hands of director-producer Ernst Lubitsch. Jeanette Macdonald, who had raised temperatures and blood pressures with her sizzling scenes in The Love Parade, exchanged her European co-star in that film for another - Britain's premiere suave and sophisticated song-and-dance man Jack Buchanan. In Ernest Vajda and Vincent Lawrence's screenplay, which was adapted from the play The Blue Coast by Ernest Mueller, MacDonald plays a countess who leaves her intended (titled) husband waiting at the church while she boards the Blue Express which takes her to Monte Carlo. After falling for a barber (Buchanan), her penchant for gambling pays off when he turns out to be a wealthy count. By this stage in his career, director Lubitsch was well into his stride as the leader in intelligent and integrated musicals. Acclaimed highlights of this particularly example of his outstanding work include his setting of the song 'Beyond The Blue Horizon', which MacDonald sings aboard the famous train accompanied by familiar sounds and movements of the train itself; and a novel operatic sequence which was based on Booth Tarkington's story Monsieur Beaucaire. The film's engaging score was written by Richard Whiting and W. Franke Harling (music) and Leo Robin (lyrics), and included a variety of numbers such as 'Trimmin' With Women', 'Give Me A Moment Please', 'Whatever It Is, It's Grand', 'Always In All Ways', and 'She'll Love Me And Like It'. Also in the cast were Claud Allister, ZaSu Pitts, Tyler Brooke, and Lionel Belmore.

Montenegro, Hugo

b. 1925, New York City, New York, USA, d. 6 February 1981. An accomplished and prolific composer, arranger and orchestral conductor for film music. After two years in the US Navy where he arranged for Service bands, Montenegro graduated from Manhattan College and entered the record industry in 1955. He served as staff manager to André Kostelanetz, and was conductor-arranger for several artists, including Harry Belafonte. Montenegro also made his own orchestral albums such as Arriba!, Bongos And Brass, Boogie Woogie And Bongos, Montenegro And Mayhem, Pizzicato Strings, Black Velvet and American Musical Theatre 1-4. After moving to California he wrote the score for Otto Preminger's 1967 film Hurry Sundown, a racial melodrama starring Jane Fonda and Michael Caine. In 1968, with his orchestra and chorus, he recorded Ennio Morricone's theme from the Italian film The Good, The Bad And The Ugly. The record went to number 2 in the US, topped the chart in the UK, and sold well over a million copies. The instrumental contrasted with Montenegro's big, romantic string sound, and the effects were startling. From the haunting introduction featuring Arthur Smith on the ocarina, the unusual instruments used included an electric violin, electric harmonica and a piccolo trumpet, aided by a vocal group which featured the whistling of Muzzy Marcellino reinforced by grunting vocals. In 1969 Montenegro had a minor UK hit with the theme from Hang 'Em High, the film with which Hollywood attempted to match the brutal style of the 'spaghetti' originals, partly by using the same star, Clint Eastwood. The soundtrack album, Music From 'A Fistful Of Dollars' & 'For A Few Dollars More' & 'The Good, The Bad And The Ugly' made the US Top 10. There was a refreshing change from the usual film themes on Broadway Melodies, where the material included standards such as 'Varsity Drag', 'Thou Swell', 'Tea For Two' and 'I Got Rhythm'. Throughout the late 60s and 70s he continued to provide music for films such as The Ambushers (1968) and The Wrecking Crew (1969), both Matt Helm adventures starring Dean Martin; Lady In Cement, featuring Frank Sinatra as private eye Tony Rome; Charro! (1969), an Elvis Presley western; The Undefeated (1969), starring John Wayne; Viva Max! (1969); Tomorrow (1972); and The Farmer (1977).

● ALBUMS: Original Music From 'The Man From UNCLE' (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, More Music From 'The Man From UNCLE' (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Hurry Sundown soundtrack (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Music From 'A Fistful Of Dollars' & 'For A Few Dollars More' & 'The Good, The Bad And The Ugly' (RCA Victior 1968)★★★★, Hang 'Em High (1968)★★★, Moog Power (RCA Victor 1969)★★★, Lady In Cement (Stateside 1969)★★★ Arriba! (70s/80s)★★★, Bongos And Brass (70s/80s)★★★, Boogie Woogie And Bongos (70s/80s)★★★, Montenegro And Mayhem (80s)★★★, Pizzicato Strings (80s)★★★, Black Velvet (80s)★★★, American Musical Theatre 1-4 (80s)★★★, Plays For Lovers (1981)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Broadway (1977)★★★, The Best Of Hugh Montenegro (1980)★★★.

Monterey International Pop Festival - Jimi Hendrix/Otis Redding

'Yeah dig brother, it's really outasite here, didn't even rain, no buttons to push' - the opening words from Jimi Hendrix at the legendary festival as he introduces 'Like A Rolling Stone' with great humour and plays it with casual ease. The two artists on this album are probably the greatest of their genre. Both are black, one plays rock, one sings soul, one charms as the other sweats. Both were outstanding stars at this festival, and although both are dead they remain towering giants of music. Even when first released in 1970 the subtitle Historic Performances already expressed the importance of this album.

●Tracks: Like A Rolling Stone; Rock Me, Baby; Can You See Me; Wild Thing; Shake; Respect; I've Been Loving You Too Long; (I Can't Get No) Satisfaction; Try A Little Tenderness.

●First released 1970

●UK peak chart position: did not chart

●USA peak chart position: 16

Monterey Jazz Festival

Founded in 1958 by Jimmy Lyons and Ralph J. Gleason, the festival has been held every year since its inception and has become one of the most prestigious and popular of all jazz events in the USA. Lyons, a missionary's son born in Peking, China, was a DJ in Southern California in the early 40s and introduced many of the early broadcasts by the Stan Kenton band. During his army service in and after World War II he produced many 'Jubilee' shows for the Armed Forces Radio Service, including sessions with Dizzy Gillespie, Charlie Parker and Milt Jackson. He was also involved in recording the first Jazz At The Philharmonic concert staged by Norman Granz. After his military service was over Lyons became a DJ in San Diego, then was a publicist for the Woody Herman Four Brothers band. He settled in San Francisco in 1948, working again as a radio DJ, presenting a late night show with a strong orientation towards modern jazz. Lyons developed an ambition to establish a west coast jazz festival along the lines of those being staged in the east by George Wein. He had discussed this with jazz writer Gleason and, in 1953, when Lyons moved south of San Francisco to Big Sur, he decided that Monterey was the place in which to realize his ambition. With Gleason as advisor and Lyons as the enthusiastic generator of support from local businessmen, the festival was eventually under way. After the success of the first festival, which included Louis Armstrong, Gillespie, John Lewis, Max Roach, Gerry Mulligan, Dave Brubeck, Harry James, Benny Carter and Billie Holiday, Gleason recommended that Lewis should be appointed permanent musical director. Lewis retained the post until 1983, missing only occasional years when major tours clashed with the festival's regular late September date. For a few years after Lewis the musical director was Mundell Lowe, who was later replaced by Bill Berry. Among other artists who have played the festival have been Chris Barber, George Lewis, Earl Hines, Herman, Coleman Hawkins, Ornette Coleman, Count Basie, Duke Ellington, Modern Jazz Quartet, Charles Mingus, Anita O'Day, Don Ellis, Gil Evans, Johnny Otis, Cannonball Adderley, Hampton Hawes, Sonny Stitt, Sarah Vaughan, Big Joe Turner, Art Blakey, Betty Carter, Tito Puente, Horace Silver, Jay McShann, JoAnne Brackeen, Cal Tjader, Billy Eckstine, Herbie Mann, Freddie Hubbard. Several major musical works have been premiered at Monterey and the festival has also become a major showcase for emerging talent with regular appearances of all-star Californian high school bands. Much of the material played over each of the three-day festivals has been recorded and issued. Lyons was due to retire in 1991 but the festival he created looks set to continue for many more years.

● FURTHER READING: Dizzy, Duke, the Count and Me: The Story Of The Monterey Jazz Festival, Jimmy Lyons with Ira Kamin.

Monterey Pop Festival

16-18 June 1967. The burgeoning west coast American music scene was effectively launched at Monterey, California, USA, in 1967. In a transition from 'pop music', performers and bands suddenly found that they were preaching their new music to a like-minded mass audience. The sounds became more adventurous as they explored other musical routes. Blues, jazz and folk became tinged with Eastern and African influences. This galvanization in turn made people more aware and tolerant of these ambitious and different styles. Nevertheless, the music was still labelled 'progressive pop' rather than rock. The festival was the brainchild of John Phillips, Alan Pariser, Paul Simon and Lou Adler, who assembled a board of artists to help stage the event. Derek Taylor, the skilful former press officer of the Beatles and the Byrds, was enrolled. Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys pulled out prior to the event. The Beatles were notably missing. The Rolling Stones, although absent, were there in spirit, with Brian Jones on the advisory board seen wandering in the crowd throughout the proceedings.

The three-day festival was a forerunner to Woodstock, and history has subsequently shown that Monterey was more 'musically' important, although by today's standards it was a comparatively small affair with only 35,000 people present at any one time. The festival gave birth to a movement and introduced major new artists to the general public. It was at Monterey that Jimi Hendrix first attracted mass attention with the public burning of his guitar. Likewise it was Janis Joplin with her band, Big Brother And The Holding Company, who grabbed the audience's imagination with her orgasmic and electrifying performance, as did a quasi-live album by the Mama And Papas. Otis Redding's accomplishment was memorable in that he brought together black soul and white rock music and became accepted by a predominantly white pop audience. His thrilling and frantic performance broke down all barriers, even although he wore a conservative blue suit instead of the regulation kaftan, beads and flowers. The first major pop music revolution since the Beatles was born at Monterey.

Among other artists who paraded their music at the festival were the Grateful Dead, Electric Flag (featuring the brilliant young Mike Bloomfield), Canned Heat, Buffalo Springfield, the Byrds, the Mamas And The Papas, Eric Burdon And The Animals, Hugh Masekela, Jefferson Airplane, Ravi Shankar, Booker T. And The MGs, the Who, Moby Grape, the Steve Miller Band, Country Joe And The Fish, Simon And Garfunkel, Beverly (Martyn), the Paupers, Lou Rawls, the Association, Johnny Rivers, Quicksilver Messenger Service, Laura Nyro, and the Blues Project. D.A. Pennebaker's 80 minute film Monterey Pop captured the event. No official album was ever released although a Jimi Hendrix/Otis Redding album included highlights of their performance. However, the show was broadcast on radio almost in its entirety in 1989 and further extracts from the festival have since been issued on CD.

● ALBUMS: Monterey International Pop Festival 4-CD box set (Castle 1992)★★★.

Monterose, J.R.

b. Frank Anthony Monterose, 19 January 1927, Detroit, Michigan, USA, d. 26 September 1993, Utica, New York, USA. After gaining experience playing tenor saxophone in a number of mid-western bands of the 40s, He joined Buddy Rich in the early 50s. He became known on the New York bebop scene, playing and recording with a wide range of musicians, including Charles Mingus and Kenny Dorham. Although he has worked elsewhere, including a spell of some three years in Belgium, Monterose has chosen to spend much of his career in and around New York and Albany, thus limiting his international reputation. A soft-spoken, introverted individual, Monterose plays with a rich and warm sound and in an intensely melodic style.

● ALBUMS: J. R. Monterose (1956)★★, Straight Ahead (1960)★★★★, In Action (Studio 4 1964)★★★, Live In Albany (Uptown 1979)★★★, Luan (1979)★★, with Tommy Flanagan ...And A Little Pleasure (Uptown 1981)★★★, Bebop Loose And Live (1981)★★★, The Message (Fresh Sounds 1993)★★★.

Montez, Chris

b. Christopher Montanez, 17 January 1943, Los Angeles, California, USA. Teenage vocalist Montez was discovered by impresario Jim Lee in 1961, and having joined the latter's Monogram label, enjoyed an international hit the following year with 'Let's Dance'. This exciting, Lee-penned single, redolent of the Hispanic 'latino-rock' style of Ritchie Valens sold over one million copies and climbed to number 2 in the UK. A follow-up, 'Some Kinda Fun', reached the UK Top 10 in 1963, but a three-year hiatus ensued before the singer resurfaced on A&M in the US with a version of the much-covered 'Call Me'. The charmingly simple 'The More I See You' gave Montez a second UK Top 3 entry, while minor US successes followed with 'There Will Never Be Another You' and 'Time After Time'. Re-released in the UK in 1972, 'Let's Dance' confirmed its timeless appeal by reaching the UK Top 10.

● ALBUMS: Let's Dance And Have Some Kinda Fun!!! (Monogram 1963)★★★, The More I See You/Call Me (A&M 1966)★★★, Time After Time (Pye 1966)★★★, Foolin' Around (A&M 1967)★★, Watch What Happens (A&M 1968)★★.

Montgomery, Bob

b. 1936, Lambasas, Texas, USA. While attending Lubbock's Hutchinson High School, this rhythm guitarist was partnered by Buddy Holly as a 'Singer of Western and Bop' when entertaining at parents' evenings, parties and, indeed, 'anywhere we could get to a microphone'. Sometimes augmented by the younger Larry Welborn on double bass, they were heard regularly on local radio with Montgomery as main vocalist in a repertoire that embraced his (and Holly's) own compositions. Among these were 'Flower Of My Heart' and other items taped as demos in the mid-50s. With superimposed backing, these would be released after Holly's death gave them historical importance, as it was Buddy who was singled out by Decca Records in 1956 as the most commercial talent. However, not begrudging him his luck, Montgomery continued to write songs with his friend, among them 'Wishing', 'Love's Made A Fool Of You' and other Holly hits. After serving as engineer in Norman Petty's Clovis studio, Montgomery moved to Nashville in 1959 where, as a songwriter, he provided Wilma Burgess with 'Misty Blue' (revived in 1976 by Dorothy Moore), 'Two Of A Kind' (written with Earl Sinks) for Sue Thompson and Roy Orbison, and 1965's 'Wind Me Up' for Cliff Richard. Among other recipients of Montgomery pieces were Bob Luman and Mel Tillis. In 1966 he became a United Artists staff producer. His most enduring labours in this sphere were for Bobby Goldsboro (including 'Honey' and 'Summer The First Time') but other ventures into what was to be named 'country-pop' included records by Bill Dees, Johnny Darrell, Buddy Knox, Del Reeves and Earl Richards. In the early 70s Montgomery founded House Of Gold, one of Nashville's most respected music publishing concerns.

● ALBUMS: with Buddy Holly: Holly In The Hills (1965, reissued as Wishing in 1968)★★★, with Holly Western And Bop (1977)★★★.

Montgomery, John Michael

b. 20 January 1965, Danville, Kentucky, USA. Montgomery arrived on the country music scene in 1993 with a debut album, Life's A Dance, that became the only million-seller on the country charts by a new artist that year. Its title track was also a number 1 single. Kickin' It Up was number 1 on both the US Country and Adult Contemporary charts, and produced two more successful singles, 'I Swear' and 'Rope The Moon'. However, Montgomery remained unchanged by his success, and refused to leave Lexington to go to Nashville. Instead he continued to enjoy traditional rock 'n' roll pursuits such as fishing and golfing. His musical talent had been initially encouraged by his father, who performed in a local country band and taught his son his first chords. Montgomery joined the family band as guitarist, before taking the lead singing role when his parents divorced. Afterwards, he made a frugal living on the local honky tonk scene as a solo artist playing what he referred to as 'working man's country'. Eventually, Atlantic Records signed him, although it was Montgomery himself rather than the record company who rejected his own material for inclusion on his debut ('Mine just weren't good enough'). There were problems during the recording, typified in an anecdote regarding a late-night call to the head of Atlantic that resulted in a change of producer. Atlantic's faith in their artist was subsequently rewarded by Montgomery's swift rise, even though some questioned his political correctness with songs such as 'Sold'. Kickin' It Up and John Michael Montgomery were massive hits, both number 1 albums. In the mid-90s he stands as one of the hottest artists in country music, appealing to lovers of both Garth Brooks and Lynyrd Skynyrd. What I Do The Best, though a slightly disappointing album, showed no signs of his commercial appeal waning. It transpires that Montgomery had throat surgery during this time. He was almost back to full health with Leave A Mark in 1998.

● ALBUMS: Life's A Dance (Atlantic 1992)★★★, Kickin' It Up (Atlantic 1994)★★★★, John Michael Montgomery (Atlantic 1995)★★★★, What I Do The Best (Atlantic 1996)★★★, Leave A Mark (Atlantic 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Atlantic 1997)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: I Swear (1993), Kickin' It Up (1994).

Montgomery, Little Brother

b. Eurreal Wilford Montgomery, 18 April 1906, Kentwood, Louisiana, USA, d. 6 September 1985, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Impressed by the piano players who visited his parents' house, including Jelly Roll Morton and Cooney Vaughan, Little Brother began playing at the age of five. At the age of 11 he ran away, and worked as a musician for the rest of his life. He played the southern jukes and lumber camps as a solo blues pianist, singing in his unmistakable voice, nasal and with a strong vibrato, yet somehow pleading and wistful. With Friday Ford and Dehlco Robert he developed 'The Forty-Fours' into one of the most complex themes in the repertoire, calling his own version 'Vicksburg Blues'. In the 20s Montgomery played jazz in New Orleans with Clarence Desdune and toured Mississippi with Danny Barker; he also worked briefly with Buddy Petit, and on the blues side toured with Big Joe Williams. In 1928 Brother headed for Chicago, playing blues at rent parties with Blind Blake among others, and recording as an accompanist in 1930, under his own name in 1931. During the 30s he returned south to Jackson, Mississippi, from where he travelled as leader of the jazz-playing Southland Troubadours until 1939. He continued to play blues, and on a single day in 1935 recorded no fewer than 18 titles and five accompaniments to other singers for Bluebird, including his instrumental masterpieces 'Shreveport Farewell' and 'Farish Street Jive', the latter a technically daunting blend of boogie and stride. In 1941 Montgomery settled in Chicago. He worked with Kid Ory at Carnegie Hall in 1949, and was for a long time a member of the Franz Jackson Band; he also continued to work solo (including a residency at an Irish tavern in the 60s) and to record, and was on the first releases by Otis Rush and Magic Sam. In 1960 he visited Europe for the first time, and began recording for a white audience. As well as promoting young protegées such as Elaine McFarland (later 'Spanky' of Spanky And Our Gang) and Jeanne Carroll, Montgomery recorded himself at home, issuing material on his FM label, named from the initials of himself and his devoted wife Janet Floberg, whom he married in 1967. With her encouragement and support, he was active in music until not long before his death. Montgomery was a consummate musician, with a huge repertoire and an excellent memory, but his recordings mostly reflect the preferences, first of record companies in the 30s, then of the white audience of the 60s and after; he was a giant of the blues, but it should not be forgotten that he was also a capable pop singer, and an excellent jazz pianist.

● ALBUMS: Little Brother Montgomery (Windin' Ball 1954)★★★, Tasty Blues (Bluesville 1961)★★★, Blues

(1961)★★★, Little Brother Montgomery (1961)★★★, Farro Street Jive (1961)★★★, Church Songs (1962)★★★, Chicago: The Living Legends (1962)★★★, After Hour Blues (1969)★★★, 1930-1969 (1971)★★★, Little Brother Montgomery (1972)★★★, Bajes Copper Station (1973)★★★, Crescent City Blues (1977)★★★, Tishomingo Blues (1980)★★★, Unissued Recordings Vol. 1 (Magpie 1987)★★★, Unissued Recordings Vol. 2 (Magpie 1988)★★★, Little Brother Montgomery At Home (1990)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Deep South Piano, The Story Of Little Brother Montgomery, Karl Gert Zur Heide.

Montgomery, Marian

b. 17 November 1934, Natchez, Mississippi, USA. Montgomery quit school to sing on television in Atlanta, Georgia. After working in advertising and publishing, performing in plays and singing in strip joints and jazz clubs, she became an established cabaret performer. She moved to the UK in 1965 to sing at a new London club, the Cool Elephant, with the John Dankworth Band. That same year she married composer and musical director Laurie Holloway. Possessing a voice which has been likened to 'having a long, cool glass of mint julep on a Savannah balcony', she expanded her career with a starring role in the 1969 West End revival of Anything Goes, and frequent appearances on radio and television, as well as concerts and cabaret in the UK and abroad. Her one-woman show was televised by the BBC in 1975. Besides her musical association with Holloway, she successfully collaborated with classical composer/pianist Richard Rodney Bennett on several projects, including Puttin' On The Ritz, Surprise Surprise and Town And Country. With an instantly recognizable, relaxed and intimate style, she has become one of a handful of American artists to take up permanent residence in the UK.

● ALBUMS: Swings For Winners And Losers (Capitol 1963)★★★, Let There Be Marian Montgomery (Capitol 1963)★★★, What's New (Decca 1965)★★★, Lovin' Is Livin' (1965)★★★, Marian Montgomery On Stage (1979)★★★, with Richard Rodney Bennett Town And Country (1978)★★★, with Bennett Surprise Surprise (1981)★★★, with Bennett Puttin' On The Ritz (1984)★★★, I Gotta Right To Sing (1988)★★★, Sometimes In The Night (1989)★★★, Nice And Easy (1989)★★★.

Montgomery, Melba

b. 14 October 1938, Iron City, Tennessee, USA. Born into a musical family, Montgomery's father ran a church choir and both her brothers, Carl and Earl, became country songwriters, often supplying her with material. In 1958 she and her brothers were finalists in a nationwide talent contest sponsored by Pet Milk - another finalist was Johnny Tillotson. Her success led to an appearance on the Grand Ole Opry, where she impressed Roy Acuff. He added her to his roadshow and she spent four years touring the USA and its military bases abroad. In 1962 she recorded two singles, 'Happy You, Lonely Me' and 'Just Another Fool Along The Way', for Lonzo and Oscar's Nugget label. She recorded prolifically for United Artists and Musicor, and made the US country charts with 'Hall Of Shame' and 'The Greatest One Of All', although Melba is better known for her duets with George Jones ('We Must Have Been Out Of Her Minds', which she wrote) and Gene Pitney ('Baby, Ain't That Fine'). Substantial success eluded her at Capitol, although she recorded duets with Charlie Louvin, notably 'Something To Brag About'. She gave Elektra a number 1 country single with 'No Charge', written by Harlan Howard, although it was covered for the UK market by J.J. Barrie. She has spent the past decade raising her family.

● ALBUMS: with George Jones What's In Our Heart (United Artists 1963)★★★, Melba Montgomery - America's Number One Country And Western Girl Singer (United Artists 1964)★★★, Down Home (United Artists 1964)★★★, with Jones Bluegrass Hootenanny (United Artists 1964)★★★, I Can't Get Used To Being Lonely (United Artists 1965)★★★, shared with Dottie West Queens Of Country Music (Starday 1965)★★★, with Jones Blue Moon Of Kentucky (United Artists 1966)★★★, Country Girl (Musicor 1966)★★★, Hallelujah Road (Musicor 1966)★★★, with Gene Pitney Being Together (Musicor 1966)★★★, with Jones Close Together (Musicor 1966)★★★, The Mood I'm In (Unart 1967)★★★, Melba Toast (Musicor 1967)★★★, with the Jordanaires Don't Keep Me Lonely Too Long (Musicor 1967)★★★, I'm Just Living (Musicor 1967)★★★, with Jones Let's Get Together/Party Pickin' (Musicor 1967)★★★, with Jones Great Country Duets Of All Time (Musicor 1969)★★★, The Big Country World Of Melba Montgomery (1969)★★★, with Charlie Louvin Somethin' To Brag About (Capitol 1971)★★★, with Louvin Baby, You've Got What It Takes (Capitol 1971)★★★, Melba Montgomery - No Charge (Elektra 1973)★★★, Aching Breaking Heart (1975)★★★, Don't Let The Good Times Fool You (1975)★★★, The Greatest Gift Of All (1975)★★★, Melba (1976)★★★, Melba Montgomery (1978)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Jones Vintage Collection Series (Capitol 1996)★★★.

Montgomery, Monk

b. William Montgomery, 10 October 1921, Indianapolis, Indiana, USA, d. 20 May 1982. One of three musical brothers, Montgomery began playing relatively late in life. After first taking up the acoustic bass he switched to the electric bass guitar in 1951. He toured with Lionel Hampton, recording in Paris in 1953, then became a member of the Montgomery-Johnson Quintet, which included his brothers Buddy, a pianist and vibraphonist, and Wes Montgomery. In the mid-50s he settled in San Francisco, often working with Buddy. Montgomery continued playing throughout the 60s and 70s with leaders such as Cal Tjader, Hampton Hawes and Red Norvo. In the late 70s and early 80s he worked in Las Vegas, Nevada, as a studio and show band musician, as a radio disc jockey and as the founder and organizer of the Las Vegas Jazz Society.

● ALBUMS: with Lionel Hampton He Swings The Most

(1953)★★★, with Hampton The Complete 1953 Paris Session (1953)★★★, Jazz Showcase (1957)★★★, with Wes Montgomery Montgomeryland (1959)★★, Grooveyard (1961)★★, with Hampton Hawes The Green Leaves Of Summer (1964)★★★, It's Never Too Late (1969)★★★, Reality (1974)★★★.

Montgomery, Wes

b. John Leslie Montgomery, 6 March 1923, Indianapolis, Indiana, USA, d. 15 June 1968. Montgomery was inspired to take up the guitar after hearing records by Charlie Christian. Nearly 20 years old at the time, he taught himself to play by adapting what he heard on records to what he could accomplish himself. Guided in part by Christian's example, but also by the need to find a way of playing which did not alienate his neighbours, he evolved a uniquely quiet style. Using the soft part of his thumb instead of a plectrum or the fingers, and playing the melody line simultaneously in two registers, Montgomery was already a distinctive stylist by the time he began to work with local bands. In 1948 he joined Lionel Hampton, touring and recording. In the early 50s he returned to Indianapolis and began playing with his brothers Buddy and Monk Montgomery in the Montgomery-Johnson Quintet (the other members being Alonzo and Robert Johnson). During an after-hours session at a local club, the visiting Cannonball Adderley asked him if he would like a record date. On Adderley's recommendation, Montgomery was recorded by Riverside in a series of trio albums which featured artists such as Hank Jones and Ron Carter. These albums attracted considerable attention and Montgomery quickly became one of the most talked about and respected guitarists in jazz. In the early 60s he worked with his brothers in Northern California and also played with John Coltrane. Further recordings, this time with a large string orchestra, broadened Montgomery's horizons and appealed to the non-jazz public. However, despite such commercially successful albums as Movin' Wes, Bumpin', Goin' Out Of My Head and A Day In The Life, he continued to play jazz in small groups with his brothers and with Wynton Kelly, Herb Alpert, Harold Mabern and others. In 1965 he visited Europe, playing club and festival dates in England, Spain and elsewhere. His career was at its height when he died suddenly in June 1968. An outstanding guitarist with an enormous influence upon his contemporaries and countless successors, Montgomery's highly personal style was developed deliberately from Christian, and unwittingly shadowed earlier conceptions by musicians such as Django Reinhardt. In Montgomery's case he stumbled upon these methods not with deliberate intent but through what jazz writer Alun Morgan has described as 'a combination of naïvety and good neighbourliness'.

● ALBUMS: New Concepts In Jazz Guitar (Riverside 1959)★★★★, Far Wes (1958-59)★★★★, The Wes Montgomery Trio/A Dynamic New Sound (Riverside 1959)★★★, Movin' Along (Riverside 1960)★★★★, The Incredible Jazz Guitar Of Wes Montgomery (Riverside 1960)★★★★, So Much Guitar (Riverside 1961)★★★, Far Wes (Pacific 1961)★★★, Full House (Riverside 1962)★★★, Fusion (Riverside 1963)★★★, Portrait Of Wes (Riverside 1963)★★★, The Alternative Wes Montgomery (Milestone 1960-63 recordings)★★★, Boss Guitar (Riverside 1963)★★★★, Guitar On The Go (Riverside 1965)★★★, Goin' Out Of My Head (Verve 1965)★★★, Bumpin' (Verve 1965)★★★, 'Round Midnight (1965)★★★, Straight No Chaser (1965)★★★, Movin' Wes (Verve 1965)★★★, Live In Paris (1965)★★★, Smokin' At The Half Note (1965)★★★, Tequila (Verve 1966)★★★, California Dreaming (Verve 1966)★★★, Easy Groove (Pacific Jazz 1966)★★★, In The Wee Small Hours (Riverside 1967)★★★, A Day In The Life (A&M 1967)★★★, Road Song (1968)★★★, Kismet (Pacific Jazz 1968)★★★, Down Here On The Ground (A&M 1968)★★★, Willow Weep For Me (Verve 1969)★★★, Eulogy (Verve 1969)★★★, Mood I'm In (Sunset 1969)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Wes Montgomery (Verve 1967)★★★★, March 6 1925-June 15 1968 (Riverside 1968)★★★★, Portrait (Pacific Jazz (1968)★★★★, Panorama (Riverside 1969)★★★★, The Best Of Wes Montgomery Vol. 2 (Verve 1969)★★★★, The Silver Collection (Polygram 1984)★★★★, Wes Montgomery Plays The Blues (Verve 1988)★★★, Verve Jazz Masters Wes Montgomery (Verve 1990)★★★★, Classics (A&M 1991)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Wes Montgomery, Adrian Ingram.

Montoliu, Tete

b. Vincente Montoliu y Massana, 28 February 1933, Barcelona, Spain, d. 24 August 1997. Blind from birth, pianist Montoliu studied classical music as a child, but at the start of his teens started listening to the American jazz records issued by the La Vos de su Amo label, in particular the challenging work of artists like Art Tatum, Earl Hines and Bud Powell. His own playing developed into a European interpretation of these American greats. He began playing with the American tenor Don Byas when he was thirteen, while still studying at the Barcelona Conservatory. By the mid-50s he was regularly sitting in with visiting American artists, including Lionel Hampton. By the end of the decade he had ventured north to play at a number of important European jazz festivals and had also played in Scandinavia. Montoliu's own recording career began in 1958, and he was to prove a prolific recording artist. In the late 60s he played in New York, thereafter establishing an international reputation as a gifted soloist with enormous technical gifts which never obstructed his ability to generate a powerful swing. Among the musicians with whom he worked are Ben Webster, Anthony Braxton, Roland Kirk and Dexter Gordon. He led a series of talented trios from the mid-Seventies onwards, including bassists George Mraz and Neils-Henning Ørsted Pedersen, and drummers Al "Tootie" Heath and Al Foster. He was active up until his death in 1997.

● ALBUMS: The Tete Montoliu Trio (1965)★★★, Blues For Nuria (1968)★★★, Ben Webster Meets Don Byas In The Black Forest (1968)★★★★, Interpreta A Serrat (1969)★★★, Ricordando A Line (1971)★★, Songs For Love (Enja 1971)★★★, That's All (Steeplechase 1971)★★★, Body And Soul (1971)★★★★, Lush Life (Steeplechase 1971)★★★, Temi Latino Americani (1973)★★★, Temi Brasiliani (1973)★★, Music For Perla (Steeplechase 1974)★★★, Catalonian Fire (Steeplechase 1974)★★★, Tete (Steeplechase 1974)★★★, Vampyria (1974)★★★, Tete A Tete (Steeplechase 1976)★★★, Tootie's Tempo (Steeplechase 1976)★★, Words Of Love (1976)★★, Blues For Myself (1977)★★★★, Yellow Dolphin Street (Timeless 1977)★★★, Secret Love (1977)★★★, Boleros (1977)★★★, Catalonian Folksongs (Timeless 1977)★★, Al Palau (1979)★★★, Live At The Keystone Corner (Timeless 1979)★★, Lunch In LA (1980)★★, Catalonian Nights Vols 1-2 (Steeplechase 1980)★★★★, Boston Concert (Steeplechase 1980)★★★, I Wanna Talk About You (1980)★★★, Face To Face (1982)★★★, Carmina (1984)★★★, The Music I Like To Play Vols 1-2 (Soul Note 1986)★★★, with Peter King New Year's Morning '89 (1989)★★★★ , Sweet N' Lovely Vols 1-2 (Fresh Sound 1990)★★★, The Man From Barcelona (Timeless 1991)★★★, A Spanish Treasure (Concord 1992)★★★.

Montrell, Roy

b. 27 February 1928, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. Guitarist Montrell joined Roy Milton's Solid Senders upon his discharge from the US Army in 1951, but soon returned to New Orleans where he formed a trio called the Little Hawkettes, which worked various clubs along Bourbon Street. After touring with Lloyd Price, he began to do session work in New Orleans for Ace and Specialty, recording with artists including Edgar Blanchard and Little Richard. He only had two releases under his own name: one on Specialty in 1956 - the black rock 'n' roll classic 'Ooh Wow That Mellow Saxophone' - and another on Minit in 1960. The most renowned New Orleans session guitarist by 1960, Montrell played with Allen Toussaint's band and Harold Battiste's AFO combo, and in 1962 he took over from Walter Nelson as Fats Domino's guitarist, becoming Domino's bandleader in the late 60s.

Montreux International Jazz Festival

Held at the Montreux Casino over 17 days in July, since its opening in 1967 the Montreux Jazz Festival has become one of the leading European festivals. Attracting large audiences and a host of major artists, the festival has benefitted through close association with record companies, notably Pablo, and regular filming for transmission over television networks in many countries. Among the recorded results have been masterly sets by the likes of Dizzy Gillespie, Monty Alexander and Benny Carter. More fusion-orientated than most jazz festivals, at times Montreux has proved less than wholly attractive to hardcore jazz fans but high standards of performance and presentation have helped it maintain its rightful place as a major venue.

Montrose

After working with Van Morrison, Boz Scaggs and Edgar Winter, guitarist Ronnie Montrose (b. Colorado, USA) formed Montrose in San Francisco in the autumn of 1973. Comprising vocalist Sammy Hagar, bassist Bill Church and drummer Denny Carmassi, they signed to Warner Brothers Records and released their self-titled debut the following year. Produced by Ted Templeman, Montrose was an album that set new standards in heavy metal; the combination of Hagar's raucous vocals with the guitarist's abrasive guitar sound became a blueprint against which new bands judged themselves for many years to come. Including the classic recordings 'Bad Motor Scooter', 'Space Station No. 5' and 'Rock The Nation', the album still ranks as one of the cornerstones of the hard rock genre. Alan Fitzgerald replaced Bill Church on bass before the recording of the follow-up, Paper Money. Hagar was fired shortly after the tour to support the album was completed. Bob James and Jim Alcivar were drafted in on vocals and keyboards, but they never recaptured the magic of the debut release. Hagar and Ronnie Montrose, the principal protagonists, went on to solo careers, the latter joined by several ex-members of Montrose in Gamma. Carmassie, in addition, re-emerged in the 90s as drummer for the much hyped Coverdale/Page project.

● ALBUMS: Montrose (Warners 1974)★★★, Paper Money (Warners 1974)★★, Warner Brothers Presents Montrose (Warners 1975)★★, Jump On It (Warners 1976)★★, Open Fire (Warners 1978)★★.

Montrose, Ronnie

After rock guitarist Ronnie Montrose (b. Colorado, USA) dissolved his own band, Montrose, in 1976, he decided to pursue a solo career. Switching styles from hard rock to jazz rock, he released Open Fire, an instrumental album that was unpopular with fans and critics alike. Disillusioned, he formed Gamma, who recorded three albums between 1979 and 1982. When Gamma ground to a halt in 1983, Montrose recorded Territory, another low-key solo set. In 1987 he teamed up with vocalist Johnny Edwards (later Foreigner) and drummer James Kottak (later of Kingdom Come), both ex-Buster Brown, and ex-Gamma bassist Glen Letsch. Mean was the result, an uncompromising hard rock record that had the guts and musical firepower of Montrose's debut, released 13 years previously. This line-up was short-lived, with Johnny Bee Bedanjek replacing Edwards and the addition of synthesizer player Pat Feehan, before The Speed Of Sound was recorded. Adopting a more sophisticated, melody-conscious approach, it lost much of the ground that had been recaptured by the previous album. Montrose decided to go solo again, producing The Diva Station in 1990. This was a semi-instrumental affair and incorporated rock, metal, jazz and soul influences, including an astonishing version of the old Walker Brothers hit, 'Stay With Me Baby'.

Ronnie Montrose remains an extremely gifted guitarist, but as yet he has found it difficult to channel his energies in a direction that also brings commercial rewards.

This situation has seen him devoting more time to production work.

● ALBUMS: Open Fire (Warners 1978)★, Territory (Passport 1986)★★, Mean (Enigma 1987)★★★★, The Speed Of Sound (Enigma 1988)★★★, The Diva Station (Roadrunner 1990)★★★.

Monyaka

This six-piece, Jamaican-born reggae act, based in Brooklyn, New York, USA, was led by guitarist/vocalist Errol Moore. At the time of their hit in 1983 other group members included Beres Barnet (guitar, vocals), Paul Henton (bass, vocals), Richard Bertram (drums, percussion), William Brown and John Allen (keyboards). Formed in 1974 as the Soul Supersonics, they backed visiting reggae stars and released their first single, 'Rocking Time', in 1977. They followed this with Classical Roots, both records being released in the USA on their Hevyaka label. Under the new name Monyaka (Swahili for 'good luck'), they recorded 'Stand Up Strong' in 1982. A year later, with just three original members left, they had a UK Top 20 hit with 'Go Deh Yaka' (patois for 'go to the top'), which cleverly fused reggae and contemporary R&B. The follow-up, 'Reggae-matic Funk', failed to sustain the interest and this unique band joined the ranks of reggae one-hit-wonders.

● ALBUMS: Classical Roots (Monyaka 1977)★★★.

Mood II Swing

A house production duo tipped by many to challenge the traditional supremacy of Clivilles And Cole and Masters At Work, Mood II Swing were formed when Lem Springsteen and John Ciafone met in an ill-fated R&B group in Brooklyn, New York, USA. When that group dissolved in 1989 the duo elected to remain working together, specifically on projects concerned with the burgeoning house music scene. Inspired by Masters At Work's Little Louie Vega, with whom they would subsequently work, they first broke through into the club scene with the release of Urbanised (Featuring Silvano)'s 'Helpless'. Wall Of Sound featuring Gerald Latham's 'Critical' for 8 Ball Records, and Loni Clark's 'Rushing' confirmed their production expertise. A further Wall Of Sound single, 'Run To Me', followed at the end of 1995. Their collaboration with Vega came on Barbara Tucker's 'Beautiful People' and 'I Get Lifted', which they co-wrote. They have remixed for Indigo ('Fly To The Moon'), DoublePlusGood ('Conga Te') and India ('I Can't Get To Sleep' and 'Whenever U Touch Me'), and collaborated with esteemed New York singer Fonda Rae ('Living In Ecstasy').

Mood Six

Mood Six were central to the short-lived UK psychedelic revival that swept London's West End in the early 80s, and had evolved from various units with mod leanings. Drummer Simon Smith (b. 3 December 1958, Merton Park, London, England; ex-Merton Parkas), songwriter Tony Conway (b. 28 February 1958, Newbury, Berkshire, England) and Andy Godfrey (b. 28 December 1957, Ilford, Essex, England) were both drawn from Security Risk, Paul Shurey and Guy Morley came from VIP's, leaving only Phil Ward without high-profile previous experience. The group debuted on WEA's 1982 new psychedelia compilation A Splash Of Colour. The band contributed two tracks, the catchy 'Plastic Flowers' and the atmospheric 'Just Like A Dream', although both owed as much to late 60s pop as psychedelia. The resulting publicity surrounding that scene led to an interview on BBC Television's Nationwide and a contract with EMI. 'Hanging Around' (later covered by Toni Basil) became the band's first single but was commercially disappointing and the follow-up, 'She's Too Far (Out)', was scrapped as the band were dropped from the label. Mood Six re-emerged early in 1985 on the psychedelic reissue label Psycho, with The Difference Is..., which saw the introduction of Chris O'Connor. This was followed in May by a re-recording of 'Plastic Flowers'. The band then moved to the Cherry Red label for 1986's classy 'What Have You Ever Done?', drawn from A Matter Of!. Unfortunately, although Mood Six were writing endearing pop music, the final sound was occasionally bland, lacking that spark of originality. Keyboard player Simon Taylor (b. 28 December 1960, Redhill, Surrey, England) was inducted before the release of 'I Saw The Light' in May 1987, after which the band's relationship with Cherry Red fizzled out, and Phil Ward was ousted from the group. Simon Smith recently turned up in Small Town Parade, another band with strong mod connections, as did Taylor, though Mood Six continued in a low-key manner. Phil Ward's replacement on vocals would be Gerry O'Sullivan (b. 25 March 1963, Paddington, London, England). A new album was released in 1993 on the band's own label.

● ALBUMS: The Difference Is... (Psycho 1985)★★★, A Matter Of! (Cherry Red 1986)★★★, And This Is It (Lost Recording Company 1993)★★★.

Moodswings

Formed by indie stalwarts JFT 'Fred' Hood, a drummer and friend of Johnny Marr (Smiths), plus producer Grant Showbiz (the Fall, Smiths), this was still a decidedly house-aimed project. They first interceded in the dance scene with the release of 1990's 'Spiritual High', a cover of the Diana Ross song with additional lyrics interspersed from the Beatles' 'Tomorrow Never Knows', with vocals from Chrissie Hynde. After appearing on a blue label it was snapped up by Zoom before Arista gave it a big push and stock release in 1991. However, instead of building on the acclaim they slaved over their debut album for five years before release.

● ALBUMS: Moodfood (Arista 1993)★★★, Psychedelicatessen (Arista 1997)★★★★.

Moody Blues

The lengthy career of the Moody Blues has come in two distinct phases. The first from 1963-67, when they were a tough R&B-influenced unit, and the second from 1967 to the present, where they are now regarded as rock dinosaurs performing a blend of melodic pop utilizing symphonic themes which has been given many labels, among them pomp-rock, classical-rock and art-rock. The original band was formed in 1964 by Denny Laine (b. Brian Hines, 29 October 1944, Jersey, Channel Islands; vocals, harmonica, guitar), Mike Pinder (b. 12 December 1942, Birmingham, England; piano, keyboards), Ray Thomas (b. 29 December 1942, Stourport on Severn, England; flute, vocals, harmonica), Graeme Edge (b. 30 March 1941, Rochester, Staffordshire, England; drums) and Clint Warwick (b. 25 June 1940, Birmingham, England; bass). During their formative months they established a strong London club following, and soon received their big break, as so many others did, performing live on the influential UK television show Ready Steady Go. A few months later their Bessie Banks cover, 'Go Now' topped the UK charts, complete with its striking piano introduction and solo. Although the single made the US Top 10, their commercial fortunes were on an immediate decline, although following releases were impeccable. Their excellent debut The Magnificent Moodies was a mature effort combining traditional white R&B standards with originals. In addition to 'Go Now' they tackled James Brown's 'I'll Go Crazy' and delivered a frenetic version of Sonny Boy Williamson's 'Bye Bye Bird'. Laine and Pinder contributed among others 'Stop' and 'Let Me Go'. Warwick and Laine departed in 1966 to be replaced by Justin Hayward (b. 14 October 1946, Swindon, Wiltshire, England) and John Lodge (b. 20 July 1945, Birmingham, England). So began phase two, which debuted with Hayward's classic, 'Nights In White Satin'. The accompanying Days Of Future Passed was an ambitious orchestral project with Peter Knight conducting the London Festival Orchestra and Tony Clark producing. The album was a massive success and started a run that continued through a further five albums, all involving Knight and Clark. The increased use of the mellotron gave an orchestrated feel to much of their work, and while they became phenomenally popular, they also received a great deal of criticism. During this period they founded Threshold Records, their own record label based from their home territory in Cobham, Surrey. In 1973 the group reached the UK Top 10 with a re-entry for 'Nights In White Satin'. (A further reissue made it a hit again in 1979.)

The band parted company in 1974 to allow each member to indulge in spin-off projects. Hayward and Lodge became the Blue Jays, with great success, Thomas released From Mighty Oaks and Edge teamed with Adrian Gurvitz for Kick Off Your Muddy Boots. The group reunited for Octave, which became another huge hit, although shortly after its release Pinder decided to leave the music business. Further discontent ensued when Clark resigned. Patrick Moraz from Yes and Refugee joined the band as Hayward's 'Forever Autumn' hit the charts. This track was taken from the Jeff Wayne epic, The War Of The Worlds.

The Moodies march on with the comforting knowledge that they have the ability to fill concert halls and possess a back catalogue that will sell until the days of future have passed.

● ALBUMS: The Magnificent Moodies (Decca 1965)★★★★, Days Of Future Past (Deram 1967)★★★★, In Search Of The Lost Chord (Deram 1968)★★★★, On The Threshold Of A Dream (Deram 1969)★★★★, To Our Children's Children's Children (Threshold 1969)★★★★, A Question Of Balance (Threshold 1970)★★★, Every Good Boy Deserves Favour (Threshold 1971)★★★, Seventh Sojourn (Threshold 1972)★★★★, Caught Live + 5 (Decca 1977)★★, Octave (Decca 1978)★★, Long Distance Voyager (Threshold 1981)★★★★, The Present (Threshold 1983)★★★, The Other Side Of Life (Polydor 1986)★★★, Sur La Mer (Polydor 1988)★★, Keys Of The Kingdom (Polydor 1991)★★, A Night At Red Rocks With The Colorado Symphony Orchestra (Polydor/Threshold 1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: This Is The Moody Blues (Threshold 1974)★★★★, Out Of This World (K-Tel 1979)★★★, Voices In The Sky - The Best Of The Moody Blues (Threshold 1985)★★★, Greatest Hits (Threshold 1989)★★★, Time Traveller 5-CD box set (Polydor 1994)★★★, The Very Best Of The Moody Blues (PolyGram 1996)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Cover Story (Stylus 1990), Star Portrait (Gemini Vision 1991), Legend Of A Band (Channel 5 1991), Live At Red Rocks (1993).

Moody Boyz

Tony Thorpe's incarnation of the dub-house ethic, his most high-profile banner since 80s experimentalists 400 Blows. After the demise of that tempestuous outfit he formed Warrior Records. This was superceded by his BPM label, which won its spurs releasing compilations like Acid Beats (1988), the musical tastes determined by Thorpe's immersion in the club scene (the legendary Spectrum nights in particular). Later he became in-house remixer for the KLF, before the Moody Boyz' name was first employed on a series of acid-inspired 12-inch releases such as 'Boogie Woogie Music', 'King Of The Funky Zulus' and the Journey Into Dubland EP. His debut long playing set as the Moody Boyz combined his traditional love of reggae bass with a strong philosophy of black emancipation, particularly on 'Fight Back (27-4-94)', dedicated to the democracy movement's victory in South Africa. There were also intriguing collaborations with Black Dog on 'Elite Doodz Presents Snooze', and the Italian Vibraphone set-up. Thorpe has also recorded as Voyager, House Addicts and Urban Jungle, and remixed for Joi, Bocca Juniors and Fun-Da-Mental. He also provides Channel 4 with much of its incidental music.

● ALBUMS: Product Of The Environment (Guerilla 1994)★★★. As Voyager: Transmission (Underworld/Virgin 1993)★★★.

Moody, Clyde

b. 19 September 1915, Cherokee, North Carolina, USA, d. 7 April 1989, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. Raised in Marion, North Carolina, Moody had learned the guitar by the age of eight and soon after became a professional musician. He left home when he was 14. He first worked with Jay Hugh Hall, initially as Bill And Joe on WSPA Spartanburg, South Carolina, in 1929, but later with Steve Ledford, they became the Happy-Go-Lucky Boys. (He also played some semi-professional baseball with Asheville, South Carolina.) Between 1937 and 1940, while continuing to appear as a duo, they also played with Wade Mainer's Sons Of The Mountaineers and recorded for Bluebird, both as a duo and with the group. They performed on many Carolina radio stations until they left Wade Mainer and joined his brother, J.E. Mainer, in Alabama. In 1941 Moody had a disagreement with both Hall and Mainer, and left to join Bill Monroe back in North Carolina. During his time with Monroe, Moody appeared on various recordings including the classic version of his own song 'Six White Horses', which was coupled with 'Mule Skinner Blues' as Monroe's Blue Grass Boys' first Bluebird single release. Moody soon left, and hiring Lester Flatt as his partner, he worked WHBB Burlington as the Happy-Go-Lucky Boys; however, in 1942, he rejoined Monroe and stayed with him until 1945. When he finally left, his place was taken by Flatt. Moody worked with Roy Acuff for a short time but soon went solo and made his first solo recordings that year. He played the Grand Ole Opry during the late 40s but left to work on early television in Washington DC. His 1947 recording of 'Shenandoah Waltz' (co-written with Chubby Wise) is reputed to be the top-selling record for the King label, having had sales in excess of three million. The song is now a bluegrass standard, although most experts would say that Moody's original version is more that of a country ballad singer, such as Red Foley, than that of a bluegrass artist. He began to specialize in waltz numbers, having such success that he acquired the nickname of The Hillbilly Waltz King. In 1948, he had Top 20 US country chart hits with 'Carolina Waltz' and 'Red Roses Tied In Blue', and in 1950, his recording of 'I Love You Because' reached number 8. He left King in 1951 and recorded for Decca, but from 1957 to the early 60s, he was less active on the music scene. He returned to North Carolina, where he developed business interests in mobile homes and for a long time hosted his own daily television show, Carolina In The Morning in Raleigh. During the 60s, he recorded for Starday, Wango and Little Darlin'. He returned to Nashville in 1971 and once more became involved with the music scene. He guested on the Opry, played various bluegrass festivals, toured extensively with his friend Rambling Tommy Scott's Medicine Show and recorded for Old Homestead. During the mid-70s, his health began to suffer but he continued to perform whenever he was able, until he died in 1989.

● ALBUMS: The Best Of Clyde Moody (King 1964)★★★, All Time Country & Western Waltzes (1969)★★★, Moody's Blues (1972)★★★, A Country Tribute To Fred Rose (Old Homestead 1976)★★★, with Tommy Scott We've Played Every Place More Than Once (Starday 1978)★★★, with Scott Early Country Favorites (1980)★★★.

Moody, James

b. 26 February 1925, Savannah, Georgia, USA. Beginning to play saxophones in his mid-teens, Moody developed his abilities as an instrumentalist during a spell in the American armed forces. Discharged in 1946, he joined Dizzy Gillespie's big band (on tenor saxophone), later touring Europe (mostly playing alto saxophone). His 1949 recording of 'I'm In The Mood For Love' became a hit and greatly enhanced his reputation at home and abroad. During the 50s he led a number of small groups, some of which were R&B oriented. In the 50s he also began to play the flute. By the 60s he had become a major figure on the USA club scene and the international festival circuit. An able and melodic soloist on all three of his instruments, Moody is especially effective on ballads.

● ALBUMS: Sax Talk (Vogue 1952)★★★, Hi Fi Party (Original Jazz Classics 1955)★★★★, Wail Moody Wail (Original Jazz Classics 1955)★★★★, Flute'n The Blues (1956)★★, Moody's Mood For Blues (Original Jazz Classics 1956)★★★★, Moody's Mood For Love (1956)★★★★, Easy Living (1956-63)★★★, Last Train From Overbrook (1958)★★★, James Moody i (1959)★★★, Hey! It's James Moody (1959)★★★, Moody With Strings (1961)★★, Cookin' The Blues (1961)★★★, Another Bag (1962)★★★, Great Day (1963)★★★, Comin' On Strong (1963)★★, Running The Gamut (1964)★★, Group Therapy (1964)★★, The Blues And Other Colours (1967)★★★, Don't Look Away Now (1969)★★★, Heritage Hum (1971)★★, Lush Life (1971)★★★, Too Heavy For Words (1971)★★★, with Gene Ammons Chicago Concert (1971)★★★, Never Again! (1972)★★★, Feelin' It Together (1973)★★★, James Moody ii (1973)★★★, James Moody iii (1975)★★, Beyond This World (1977)★★★, Something Special (Novus 1987)★★★, with Stan Getz Tenor Contrasts (Esquire 1988)★★★, Moving Forward (Novus 1988)★★★, Sweet And Lovely (Novus 1990)★★★, Honey (Novus 1991)★★★, Live At The Blue Note (Telarc 1995)★★★, Feelin' It Together (32 Records 1998)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: James Moody And His Modernists (1948)★★★★, Bebop Revisited Vol. 4 (1948-50)★★★, Bebop Enters Sweden (1949)★★★, The James Moody Story (1951-53)★★★★.

Moog, Robert A.

b. 1934, USA. Moog was responsible for designing the first commercially viable keyboard synthesiser. He started designing electronic musical instruments as a teenager and later trained as an electrical engineer. He began synthesiser research at New York University in the early 60s and with Donald Buchla, developed a system of voltage control where each note on a synthesiser keyboard produced a different voltage. By 1967, the Moog synthesiser was fully developed. It came to public attention through the 1968 recording, Switched On Bach by Walter Carlos. Although other firms like ARP and Buchla brought out their own versions of the synthesiser, Moog stuck as the generic name for the instrument. Among its earliest exponents were Keith Emerson and Jan Hammer. Moog's most commercially successful product was the mini-Moog launched in 1971. This was suitable for use in live performance and was capable of 'bending' notes in the same way as a guitar. Later models included the Polymoog (1976), a polyphonic synthesiser (it could play more than one note at a time), the pedal-operated Taurus system - used by Rush in the 80s - and the Memory Moog. The company did not join the trend towards digital synthesizers, but Herbie Hancock, Hammer and Gary Wright were among those involved with its Source model. In the early 70s the Moog company was acquired by Norlin, owners of the Gibson guitar operation.

Moon

Formed in Los, Angeles, California, USA, Moon consisted of David Marks (guitar/vocals), an early member of the Beach Boys until he was replaced by Al Jardine in 1964, David Jackson (bass/vocals; ex-Hearts And Flowers), Larry Brown (drums; ex-Davie Allen And The Arrows) and Matthew Moore (keyboards/vocals; ex-Matthew Moore And The Four). Both Moon albums show similarities to the Beatles and Bee Gees, but neither sold well. Marks then dropped out of music, Jackson joined Dillard And Clark, while Moore became an integral part of the Joe Cocker revue, Mad Dogs And Englishmen. He later recorded as a solo artist.

● ALBUMS: Moon Without Earth (Imperial 1968)★★, Moon (Imperial 1968)★★.

Moon Over Miami

This typically lavish 1941 20th Century-Fox Technicolor extravaganza was a remake of the same studio's somewhat less opulent Three Blind Mice which was produced three years earlier in 1938. The slight story concerns sisters Kay and Barbara Latimer (Betty Grable and Carole Landis) and their Aunt Charlotte (Charlotte Greenwood), who anxiously anticipate a substantial legacy. When the original $55,000 is whittled down to $4,287 and 96 cents (to be split three ways), the trio give up their jobs at a roadside diner and set off for Miami with the intention of finding Kay a rich husband. After going through the usual charades and complications, Kay lands the young well-heeled smoothie (Robert Cummings) - and then turns him down for the equally smooth but less well-off Don Ameche. In the sparkling supporting cast were funnyman Jack Haley, Cobina Wright Jnr., Robert Conway, Lynne Roberts, George Lessey, and dancers Jack Cole, the Condos Brothers and Hermes Pan (who also staged the dances). Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger came up with a bright and lively score which included 'You Started Something', 'Kindergarten Conga', 'I've Got You All To Myself', 'What Can I Do For You?', 'Oh Me, Oh Mi-ami', 'Is That Good?', 'Loveliness And Love', and 'Hurrah For Today'. The screenplay was written by Vincent Lawrence and Brown Holmes, and adapted by George Seaton and Lynn Starling from a 1938 English play by Stephen Powys. The director for this entertaining and colourful film was Walter Lang. Another remake appeared in 1946 entitled Three Little Girls In Blue and starring June Haver, George Montgomery and Celeste Holm.

Moon, Keith

b. 23 August 1947, Wembley, London, England, d. 7 September 1978. As the unpredictable, madcap drummer in the Who, Keith Moon cultivated a reputation as one of rock's great characters. His devil-may-care propulsiveness was always apparent in a drumming technique which eschewed conventional rhythm and goaded fellow instrumentalists into equally powerhouse retorts. His talent enhances the cream of the Who's output, including 'The Ox' (1965), 'I Can See For Miles' (1967) and 'Won't Get Fooled Again' (1971) while his quirky compositions for the group have included 'I Need You', 'Waspman', 'Cobwebs And Strange' and 'Tommy's Holiday Camp'. A life-long fan of surf music, Moon also inspired the Beach Boys/Jan And Dean selections on the 1966 EP Ready Steady Who. This particular fascination was also apparent on the drummer's lone solo album, Two Sides Of The Moon, which included a version of Brian Wilson's 'Don't Worry Baby'. The set featured material by John Lennon, Harry Nilsson and the Who, but a supporting cast drawn from the Los Angeles music fraternity failed to conceal it's self-indulgence. Its release emphasized the euphemistic 'rock 'n' roll life-style' in which Moon was now trapped, and having established a reputation for unconventional behaviour, he now felt compelled to live up to it. Tales of destruction were legendary, but Moon was now increasingly debilitated by drug and alcohol abuse, and his professional life inevitably suffered. Indeed 'Music Must Change', a track on Who Are You (1978), was left without a drum track when he was unable to hold the required beat. 'I'm still the best Keith Moon-style drummer in the world' he defiantly proclaimed, but the failure doubtless hurt. Sadly, the album was to be the last to feature Moon, who died in September 1978 as a result of an overdose of prescription drugs. Admired among both the rock and jazz fields, his talent was bound to his extrovert personality and the sound of the Who has been appreciably different without him. Since his death his standing as a musician has increased and many feel that Moon was unique in his chosen field. His private life was another affair, and this is superbly documented in outrageous fashion in Tony Fletcher's recent biography.

● ALBUMS: Two Sides Of The Moon (Polydor 1975)★.

● FURTHER READING: Full Moon:The Amazing Rock & Roll Life Of Keith Moon, Late Of The Who, Dougal Butler, Dear Boy: The Life Of Keith Moon, Tony Fletcher.

Moondance - Van Morrison

Where on previous recordings Van Morrison had implied soul and R&B roots, on Moondance he set them free. He had rarely sounded so relaxed, whether on the bubbling joy of 'And It Stoned Me', the finger-popping ease of the title track or the celebratory bliss of 'Caravan'. Morrison revelled in the music's tight arrangements, clearly enjoying the punchy horn section ('Glad Tidings') and empathizing with quieter, acoustic settings ('Crazy Love'). Where Astral Weeks was a cathartic stream-of-consciousness, Moondance shows an artist enraptured by a new-found musical freedom, from this moment on everything he sang had soul.

● Tracks: And It Stoned Me; Moondance; Crazy Love; Caravan; Into The Mystic; Come Running; These Dreams Of You; Brand New Day; Everyone; Glad Tidings.

● First released 1970

● UK peak chart position: 32

● USA peak chart position: 29

Moondoc, Jemeel

b. 5 August 1951, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Despite being a creative musician from Chicago, saxophonist Moondoc never touched base with the AACM - by the time he was looking for people to play with in the late 60s, Anthony Braxton, Leroy Jenkins and the Art Ensemble Of Chicago had left for Paris and New York. Turning down a career as an architect in the early 70s he studied music with Ran Blake in Boston, where he also played in the James Tatum Blues Band, and then followed Cecil Taylor to Wisconsin University and Antioch College, playing alto and soprano saxophones in Taylor's student orchestras. He moved to New York in 1972, where he met and played with avant garde luminaries such as bassist William Parker and trumpeter Roy Campbell, and also formed his Ensemble Munta, which lasted for nearly 10 years. In 1981 he toured Poland and recorded The Intrepid for the Poljazz label. In 1984 he formed the Jus Grew Orchestra, a wild 15-piece which had a residency at the Neither/Nor club on the Lower East Side. He says 'I try to speak through the horn - it's something I learned from Jimmy Lyons and Ornette Coleman', and he often plays deliberately sharp, like a free version of Jackie McLean. Moondoc's approach, which combines the looseness of bar-room blues with post-Ornette multi-key valency, found a willing accomplice in guitarist Bern Nix from Ornette's harmolodic outfit Prime Time. Their band - with Parker on bass and Dennis Charles on drums - provided a tipsy, dislocated jazz that was excellently captured on Nostalgia In Times Square. Moondoc remains a strikingly individual musical mind in a jazz scene too often willing to conform to the standards of the past.

● ALBUMS: First Feeding (1977)★★★, The Evening Of The Blue Men (1979)★★★, New York Live (1981)★★, Konstanze's Delight (1981)★★★, The Intrepid Live In Poland (1981)★★, The Athens Concert (1982)★★, Judy's Bounce (1982)★★★, Nostalgia In Times Square (1985)★★★.

Moondog

b. Louis Hardin, 26 May 1916, Marysville, Kansas, USA. This idiosyncratic composer lost his sight at the age of 16 following an accident with a dynamite cap. He was introduced to classical music at the Iowa School for the Blind, studying violin, viola and piano, but having moved to New York, opted for a life as a 'street musician'. He took the name Moondog in 1947 and established a pitch on the city's fabled Times Square. Such was his notoriety, Hardin successfully retained this sobriquet after issuing legal proceedings against disc jockey Alan Freed, who had claimed the 'Moondog' name for his radio show.

In a manner similar to fellow maverick Harry Partch, Moondog constructed his own instruments, claiming conventional scales could not reproduce the sounds heard in his head. This was immediately apparent on his first release, On The Streets Of New York (1953), a 45 rpm EP issued by Epic and London/American. Percussive devices, named the 'oo' and 'trimba', were at the fore of albums recorded for the Prestige label, notably More Moondog and The Story Of Moondog, although a distinctive jazz influence can also be detected. Further releases ensued, including Moondog And His Honking Geese, which the composer financed and distributed. Hardin also arranged an album of Mother Goose songs for singer Julie Andrews. During the 1960s Moondog continued to perform and beg on the city's streets, but his unconventional lifestyle and appearance - he wrapped himself in army surplus blankets and wore a Viking-styled helmet - found succour in the emergent counter-culture. He performed with anti-establishment comedian Lenny Bruce and eccentric singer Tiny Tim, while several groups, including Big Brother and the Holding Company and the Insect Trust, recorded his distinctive musical rounds. In 1969, James Guercio, producer of the highly successful Chicago, introduced Moondog to CBS. Buoyed by a full orchestra, Moondog encapsulates twenty years of compositions, showing musical references to such diverse figures as Stravinsky and Charlie Parker, the latter of whom often conversed with Moondog. One particular selection, 'The Witch Of Endor', stands as one of his finest pieces. Moondog 2 was a collection of rounds, inspired by the recognition afforded the composer by the hip cognoscenti. In 1974 Moondog undertook a tour of Germany where he opted to settle. 'I am a European at heart', he later stated. A further series of albums maintained his unique musical vision, but although he has ceased recording, interest in this fascinating individual continues to flourish.

● ALBUMS: Moondog And His Friends 10-inch album (Epic 1954)★★★, Moondog (Prestige 1955)★★★, More Moondog (Prestige 1956)★★★, The Story Of Moondog (Prestige 1957)★★★, Moondog (Columbia 1969)★★★★, Moondog 2 (Columbia 1970)★★★, Moondog In Europe (1978)★★★, H'Art Songs (1979)★★★, A New Sound Of An Old Instrument (1980)★★★, Selected Works (1980)★★★, Big Band (Trimba 1996)★★★.

Moondogg

Moondogg was formed by guitarist Derwood (ex-Generation X) and singer Liz Westwood in the mid-90s after the collapse of their former band, Westworld. Westworld had been left penniless in Arizona after their then label, Savage Records, floundered. While the rest of the band returned home in 1991, the group's central duo took a sabbatical in the small town of Carefree. Derwood used the time to learn slide guitar and they also made a small arthouse movie together. Eventually they returned to the UK in 1994 and began to immerse themselves in the club sounds of London. They embarked on a new musical project in keeping with these jungle and trip-hop influences, working alongside producer Martin Lee Stephenson, who records as Law And Order for labels such as Suburban Base and has produced several drum 'n' bass acts including Kenny Ken. Their demos eventually reached the ears of Tim Abbot, marketing consultant to Oasis and manager of Robbie Williams (ex-Take That). Abbot had recently established his own Better Records label, and considered Moondogg to be the perfect band to start the new label. The mix of slide guitar, dub and jungle proved instantly appealing on their debut single, 'Wonderfool', which was followed by the group's debut album, Fat Lot Of Good, released in April 1996.

● ALBUMS: Fat Lot Of Good (Better 1996)★★★.

Mooney, Art

b. 1911, Lowell, Massachusetts, USA. A popular bandleader in the late 40s and 50s, Mooney started out by leading a band mostly in Detroit and the midwest area during the 30s. After military service in World War II, he formed a new outfit with a similar style and sound to Glenn Miller, especially in the reed section. The band's arrangers included Neal Hefti and George Williams, and it made its New York debut in 1945, playing clubs, and appearing on radio. The big breakthrough came three years later, when Mooney recorded an old-fashioned version of Mort Dixon and Harry Woods' 1927 song 'I'm Looking Over A Four Leaf Clover', featuring the banjo playing of Mike Pingatore, an ex-Paul Whiteman sideman. The record sold over a million copies and put Mooney in the big money bracket for the band's personal appearances. Once down that lucrative road, he frequently used arrangements which featured the banjo and unison singing. His other hits, through to 1955, included 'Baby Face', 'Bluebird Of Happiness', 'Again', 'Beautiful Eyes', 'I Never See Maggie Alone', 'Toot Toot Tootsie (Goodbye)', 'Twenty Four Hours Of Sunshine', 'Hop Scotch Polka', 'M-I-S-S-I-S-S-I-P-P-I', 'Lazy River', 'Heartbreaker', 'Honey-Babe' and the band's theme, 'Sunset To Sunrise'. In 1955 he provided the orchestral backing for seven year-old Barry Gordon's US Top 10 novelty, 'Nuttin' For Christmas'. By the late 50s Mooney's popularity had declined, but he played on through the 60s into the 70s, and toured with the Big Band Cavalcade from 1973-74. In 1988 he was still attracting enthusiastic crowds at venues such as the Erie County Fair in Hamburg, New York.

● ALBUMS: Dance and Dream (Coronet 1954)★★, Banjo Bonanza (MGM 1955)★★★, Art Mooney And His Orchestra In Hi-Fi Play For Dancing (MGM 1956)★★★, Songs Everybody Knows (Decca 1962)★★, Best Of (RCA 1967)★★★.

Mooney, John

b. 3 April 1955, East Orange, New Jersey, USA. His combination of Delta guitar patterns with New Orleans second-line rhythms gives Mooney the edge when slide guitarists are under consideration. He was 12, living in Rochester and playing guitar to Ernest Tubb songs on the radio when he first heard Son House's records; four years later he was playing alongside House. After spending time in Arizona and California, he moved to New Orleans in 1976 and learned the city's complex rhythmic style from Professor Longhair and the Meters. He formed his band, Bluesiana, in 1983, which has since featured bass guitarists George Porter Jnr. and Glenn Fukunaga, and drummers John Vidacovich and Kerry Brown, among others. Sideways In Paradise consisted of a series of acoustic duets with Jimmy Thackery recorded in Jamaica in 1984. Testimony enlisted the help of Dr. John, Jon Cleary and Ivan Neville, while Travelin' On was recorded live in Germany at the 1991 Breminale Festival. His debut for the House Of Blues label in 1996 was particularly noteworthy.

● ALBUMS: Comin' Your Way (Blind Pig 1977)★★★, with Jimmy Thackery Sideways In Paradise (Seymour/Blind Pig 1985)★★★, Late Last Night (Bullseye Blues 1990)★★★, Telephone King (Powerhouse 1991)★★★, Testimony (Domino 1992)★★, Travelin' On (CrossCut 1993)★★★, Against The Wall (House Of Blues 1996★★★★.

Moonglows

This R&B vocal group was formed in Cleveland, Ohio, USA, in 1952. If there were any group that best signalled the birth of rock 'n' roll - by which R&B emerged out of its black subculture into mainstream teen culture - it was the Moonglows. The group's career paralleled that of their mentor, legendary disc jockey Alan Freed, who in his rise in rock 'n' roll made the Moonglows the mainstays of his radio programmes, motion pictures and stage shows. Their membership comprised lead singer Bobby Lester (b. 13 January 1930, Louisville, Kentucky, USA, d. 15 October 1980), Harvey Fuqua (b. 27 July 1929, Louisville, Kentucky, USA), Alexander 'Pete' Graves (b. 17 April 1930, Cleveland, Ohio, USA), and Prentiss Barnes (b. 12 April 1925, Magnolia, Mississippi, USA). After recording for Freed's Champagne label in 1953, the group signed with Chicago-based Chance, where they managed to secure a few regional hits, most notably a cover version of Doris Day's 'Secret Love' in 1954. Freed used his connections to sign the Moonglows to a stronger Chicago label, the fast-rising Chess Records, and the group enjoyed a major hit with 'Sincerely' (number 1

R&B/number 20 pop 1954). Joining the group at this time was guitarist Billy Johnson (b. 1924, Hartford, Connecticut, USA, d. 1987).

Using a novel technique they called 'blow harmony', other great hits followed: 'Most Of All' (number 5 R&B 1955), 'We Go Together' (number 9 R&B 1956), 'See Saw' (number 6 R&B/number 25 pop 1956), all of which featured Lester on lead; and a remake of Percy Mayfield's 'Please Send Me Someone To Love' (number 5 R&B/number 73 pop 1957) and 'Ten Commandments Of Love' (number 9 R&B/number 22 pop 1958), which featured Fuqua on lead. The original Moonglows disbanded in 1958, and Fuqua put together a new group that included Marvin Gaye. In 1960 Fuqua disbanded this group and he and Gaye went to Detroit to work in the industry there. Fuqua worked with Berry Gordy's sister, Gwen Gordy, on the Anna label and Gaye joined Berry Gordy's Motown operation. Fuqua carved out a very successful career as a producer and record executive, working with Motown artists in the 60s and a stable of Louisville artists in the 70s on the RCA label.

● ALBUMS: Look! It's The Moonglows (Chess 1959)★★★, The Return Of The Moonglows (RCA Victor 1972)★★★, The Moonglows On Stage (Relic 1992)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Bobby Lester And The Moonglows (Chess 1962)★★★, The Flamingos Meet The Moonglows (Vee Jay 1962)★★★, The Moonglows (Constellation 1964)★★★, Moonglows (Chess 1976)★★★, Their Greatest Sides (Chess 1984)★★★, Blue Velvet: The Ultimate Collection (MCA/Chess 1993)★★★, The Flamingos Meet the Moonglows: 'On The Dusty Road Of Hits': The Complete 25 Chance Sides (Vee Jay 1993)★★★, Their Greatest Hits (MCA 1997)★★★.

Moonlight And Roses - Jim Reeves

It is fashionable to like Nat 'King' Cole but Jim Reeves is largely a voice from the past. It is hard to find the reason for this, as both were warm-voiced balladeers who specialized in intimate love songs. They had not started out that way: Cole had been a jazz pianist and Reeves a high-pitched singer of country novelties. Reeves' most romantic album, Moonlight And Roses, did not contain any of his hit singles, but it nearly topped the UK album charts. Recording songs about the moon or roses and calling it a concept is somewhat twee, but it works well, and ironically, 'It's Only A Paper Moon' is usually associated with Cole.

● Tracks: Moonlight And Roses; Mexicali Rose; Carolina Moon; Rosa Rio; Oh What It Seemed To Be; What's In It For Me?; Roses; One Dozen Roses; Moon River; There's A New Moon Over My Shoulder; It's Only A Paper Moon; When I Lost You.

● First released 1964

● UK peak chart position: 2

● USA peak chart position: 30

Moontrekkers

As the Raiders, Gary Le Port (lead guitar), Jimmy Rayther (rhythm guitar), Pete Johnson (bass) and Tony White (drums) were fronted originally by singer Robert Farrent (stage name: Bobby Shafto) but in 1960 it was with Rod Stewart that they were auditioned in a north London church hall by Joe Meek who was seeking an instrumental act to record an opus entitled 'Night Of the Vampire'. Submitting to Meek's masterplan, they cast Stewart aside and, as the Moontrekkers, were rewarded with one week at number 50 in the UK Top 50 and a BBC ban because of this Parlophone single's sound effects (creaking coffin lid, wailing wind). When a second single, 'There's Something At The Bottom Of The Well', did not emulate this achievement, Johnson and White joined the Aristocats and, minus Rayther too, Le Port with new Moontrekkers went out in a blaze of glory when a 1963 Decca single, 'Moondust', entered Sweden's Top 10. The original personnel regrouped in 1991 for some Joe Meek memorial concerts and later semi-professional bookings.

Moore, 'Whistlin" Alex

b. 11 November 1899, Dallas, Texas, USA, d. 20 January 1989, Dallas, Texas, USA. A lifelong individualist and eccentric, Moore came in later life to be regarded as a patriarch of Texas piano blues, although his inspirational technique wilfully avoided categorization. He grew up in Freedman's Town, a section of Dallas where the children of slaves congregated. He became interested in piano while working as a delivery boy for a grocery store, and developed his style in the dives and whorehouses of north Dallas. He recorded six titles for Columbia in December 1929, including the first version of 'Blue Bloomer Blues', and recorded this blues again for Decca in February 1937. With typical initiative, he financed his own session, recording eight titles, of which only two were later issued on album. A session for RPM in 1951 yielded five titles, two issued on a single, a third on album. In July 1960, Chris Strachwitz and Paul Oliver recorded him extensively for Arhoolie and Oliver's 'Conversations With The Blues' project. He was a member of the 1969 American Folk Blues Festival tour of Europe and recorded another album in Stuttgart, Germany. Throughout the 70s he was a feature of the festival circuit. In 1987 he received a Lifetime Achievement Award from the National Endowment for the Arts. Two years later, he recorded his last album for Rounder. Idiosyncratic to the end, he was returning home from a domino game at the Martin Luther King Centre in south Dallas and died on the bus, riding at the front, no doubt.

● ALBUMS: Alex Moore (Arhoolie 1960)★★★, In Europe (Arhoolie 1981)★★★, Wiggle Tail (Rounder 1988)★★★, From North Dallas To The East Side (Arhoolie 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Complete Recorded Works 1929-37 (Document 1994)★★★.

Moore, Abra

b. 8 June 1969, San Diego, California, USA. Folk-pop artist Moore has established herself as a striking new voice in the alternative singer-songwriter field, alongside acclaimed artists such as Liz Phair and Ani DiFranco. Raised in Hawaii by a musical family, Moore lost her jazz-loving mother at the age of four, a loss she would later articulate to striking effect on the title track of her debut album. She went on to study piano in New York as a teenager, before moving back to Hawaii to attend university. While there she formed the band Poi Dog Pondering with fellow college students, and set off on a haphazard tour where, according to Moore, 'we'd set up on campuses all over the country, and would start trying to create a scene that would bring people together.' With an ever-changing roster of musicians Poi Dog Pondering went on to release two albums on Columbia Records, but Moore had already decide to pursue a career as a solo artist (although she remains a 'floating' member of the band). A temporary move to Europe saw her playing solo club dates in England as well as busking on the streets of Paris, but Moore chose to establish herself in Austin, Texas, recording Sing for the independent label Bohemia Beat. A passionate and eloquent collection, Moore drew praise from critics for her remarkably mature songwriting, with Q Magazine going as far as to compare her to 'the angry young Bob Dylan.' Not content to rest on her laurels, she then unveiled a more aggressive approach at live shows, backed by Mitch Watkins (guitar), Chris Maresh (bass) and Chris Searles (drums). Having generated considerable A&R interest among the majors, Moore then opted to sign to the Arista-Austin label for her new album*Strangest Places.* This was one of the highlights of 1997, with a punchier and tighter sound that suggested comparisons with Joan Osborne, Alanis Morissette and the new wave of spunky female artists. The opening track, 'Four Leaf Clover', is outstanding, providing an air of expectancy for the following 'Don't Feel Like Crying', which features a memorable middle eight, and surely promises chart success in the future. The pace is sustained throughout the album, holding the listener's attention and only very rarely lapsing. On the strength of Moore's recorded work, there is little doubt that commercial success is on the way for this major talent.

● ALBUMS: Sing (Bohemia Beat 1995)★★★, Strangest Places (Arista/Austin 1997)★★★★.

Moore, Alton

b. 7 October 1908, Selma, Alabama, USA, d. 1978. After being taught formally on baritone horn, Alton 'Slim' Moore took up the trombone and in his late teens was playing professionally with tent and other travelling shows. He played in several territory bands including those led by Gene Coy, Jesse Stone and Jap Allen before joining Blanche Calloway in 1931. He remained with this band for three years, then settled in New York where he played and sometimes recorded with many leading jazz artists of the late 30s and early 40s, among them Oran 'Hot Lips' Page, Fats Waller, Coleman Hawkins, Ella Fitzgerald and Louis Armstrong. In this same period he also visited the west coast, appearing in the film Stormy Weather (1943) with Waller, Zutty Singleton, Benny Carter and others. After leaving Armstrong's big band in 1947 he worked with Herbie Fields, then spent a few years with less well-known bands before leaving full-time music in 1952. A solid section player with a sympathetic ear for the needs of the ensemble and of soloists, Moore's contribution to the bands in which he played was substantial even if his work sometimes went underestimated by audiences. Although in semi-retirement in the 50s and 60s he returned from time to time, most notably in the Fletcher Henderson reunion band in 1957.

Moore, Arnold Dwight 'Gatemouth'

b. 8 November 1913, Topeka, Kansas, USA. At the age of 16, Moore went to Kansas City, where he sang with the bands of Bennie Moten, Tommy Douglas and Walter Barnes. Moore was one of the few survivors of the infamous 'Natchez Rhythm Club Fire' tragedy that wiped out most of Barnes' orchestra. His first recordings were made for the small K.C. labels Chez Paree and Damon, and they caused enough of a stir to interest National Records. They brought Moore to Chicago and New York for four sessions in 1945-46 and were successful with Moore's 'I Ain't Mad At You, Pretty Baby', 'Did You Ever Love A Woman?' and 'Christmas Blues'. In 1947, Moore joined King Records and re-recorded his National hits along with some new material. By the end of that year he had introduced Wynonie Harris to King and had abandoned blues for a new career as the Reverend Moore. He became a gospel disc jockey and recorded gospel music in the early 50s for Chess/Aristocrat, Artists and Coral, and albums for Audio Fidelity (1960) and Bluesway (1973). However, Johnny Otis did manage to persuade Moore to recreate some of his blues for a Blues Spectrum album in 1977.

● ALBUMS: Gatemouth Moore (1950)★★★, Rev. Dwight 'Gatemouth' Moore & his Gospel Singers (Audio Fidelity 1960)★★★, After Twenty-One Years (Bluesway 1973)★★★, Great R&B Oldies (Blues Spectrum 1977)★★★.

Moore, Billy

b. William Moore Jnr., 7 December 1917, Parkersberg, West Virginia, USA, d. 28 February 1989. Although he was a competent pianist, it was as an arranger that Moore made his greatest mark on jazz. An important contributor to the development of big band arranging in the 30s, his talents were often overlooked, sometimes deliberately so. As he told documentary film-maker John Jeremy, he started writing music in 1937, offered some material to Chick Webb, and was told they needed an arrangement. He taught himself arranging, meanwhile working outside music. In his non-musical capacity he met Sy Oliver but chose not to prevail upon the acquaintanceship until Oliver discovered accidentally of his abiding interest. Coincidentally, Moore was with Oliver soon after he had left Jimmie Lunceford for Tommy Dorsey. When Lunceford asked for some new charts, Oliver promptly recommended Moore. In addition to arranging for the Lunceford band, Moore also wrote for Charlie Barnet. He formed his own music publishing company in order to combat the then prevalent habit of bandleaders taking credit for the work of their arrangers and composers. Moore's actions thus predating the commonplace practice amongst present-day musicians by almost half a century. The struggle to be granted the credit that was his due eventually disillusioned Moore and in the early 50s he abandoned his career in the USA and emigrated to Denmark where he remained for the rest of his life. Amongst his uncredited works is the famous countermelody to Barnet's million-selling hit 'Skyliner'. In his later years Moore was administrator in Denmark of the music foundation established in Ben Webster's name and for whom he also worked as a business aide. He was also manager to and musical director for the European tours of the Peters Sisters.

Moore, Bob

b. 30 November 1932, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. A popular studio musician who progressed from bass player to musical director for country star Red Foley and pop artists Brenda Lee and Connie Francis, Moore then toured with Elvis Presley. His accompaniments for Roy Orbison earned him a solo contract with Monument Records (London in the UK) for his own combo, which made an impression with singles like 'Hot Spot', 'My Three Sons' and 'Mexico'. The first and last were issued back to back in Britain, the second and third as Moore's contribution to the anthological Demand Performance album, with other tracks by Orbison, Billy Grammer, Jerry Byrd, Jack Eubanks and the Velvets. 'Mexico' reached number 7 in the US charts and earned Moore a Gold Disc in 1961, but this was the peak of his achievement. Two albums were issued on London in the late 60s but little else has been heard from him in recent years.

● ALBUMS: Mexico And Other Great Hits! (Monument 1961)★★★, Viva! (Hickory 1967)★★★, Good Time Party (London 1968)★★★.

Moore, Brew

b. Milton Aubrey Moore, 26 March 1924, Indianola, Mississippi, USA, d. 19 August 1973. After learning to play a range of instruments, Moore concentrated on tenor saxophone and in his teens sought work in various parts of the USA. A melodic player with a liquid ballad style, Moore's roots were in the style of the early Lester Young, and the advent of bebop restricted his progress. Nevertheless, he made many records in the 50s, then in 1961 became resident in Europe where, apart from a three-year return to the USA (1967-70), he remained for the rest of his life. Although his decision to stay away from America for so many years, allied to his refusal to move with the times, kept him out of the spotlight, it is now generally acknowledged that the quality of Moore's ballad playing was of the very highest order. His early death from a fall, attributed to his dependence upon alcohol, silenced a player whose talent, if not his career, was comparable to that of near-contemporaries such as Stan Getz and Zoot Sims.

● ALBUMS: Brewer's Brew (1950),★★★ Fru And Brew (1953),★★★ The Brew Moore Quintet (1956)★★★, Danish Brew (1959)★★★★, The Brew Moore Quartet i (1962)★★★★, Svinget 14 (Black Lion 1963)★★★, If I Had You (1965)★★★, I Should Care (Speeplechase 1965)★★★, Brew's Stockholm Dew (1971)★★★, No More Brew (Storyville 1971)★★★.

Moore, Charlie

b. Charles B. Moore Jnr., 13 February 1935, Piedmont, South Carolina, USA, d. 24 December 1979. Fascinated by country music, in particular bluegrass, he grew up listening to local radio, being greatly influenced by the easy balladeering singing styles of Jim Eanes and Red Smiley. He learned guitar and made his first broadcasts on radio programmes in the Piedmont area and on television with Cousin Wilbur, in Asheville. His first recording was a Starday single in 1958. In 1960, he and Bill Napier formed the Dixie Partners. They worked together with their band until 1967, during which time they recorded nine albums for King, the last being released after their split. They appeared regularly on radio and televisions shows in South Carolina and Florida and made countless festival appearances in various States. After he and Napier parted, Moore worked as a DJ until, in 1970, he formed another band (also named the Dixie Partners), with which he worked the circuits for some time. He became a cast member of WWVA Wheeling's Jubilee USA and a regular with top bluegrass artists on the concert circuit. In the early 70s, he recorded for Vetco, Wango and Starday, before joining Old Homestead in 1973. In the mid-70s, he struggled badly with personal problems, he suffered from two failed marriages and faced financial support for his children. These problems saw his health fail and at times, he resorted to heavy drinking, which worsened a liver infection that he had suffered with for some years. Whenever possible, he worked and his touring at this time saw him make trips to Europe, where he recorded albums in the Netherlands. He also recorded once more with Bill Napier. In November 1979, while travelling to play a show in Maryland, he collapsed and was taken to hospital in a coma. He never recovered and died on 24 December 1979. Moore is rated one of the best vocalists to have sung in bluegrass music and will always be remembered for his fine version of 'The Rebel Soldier'. Originally recorded for Wango in 1976, it was reissued by Rebel in 1988.

● ALBUMS: with Bill Napier Folk 'N' Hill (King 1963)★★★, Country Hymnal (King 1964)★★, City Folk Back On The Farm (King 1964)★★★, Country Music Goes To Vietnam (King 1966)★★★, Songs For All Lonesome Truck Drivers (King 1966)★★★, Brand New Vocal Country & Western Songs (King 1967)★★★, Gospel & Sacred Songs (King 1967)★★★, Spectacular Instrumentals (King 1967)★★; Charlie Bluegrass (Country Jubilee 1970)★★, Sings Good Bluegrass (Vetco 1972)★★★, Gospel Time (Vetco 1973)★★★, A Tribute To

Clyde Moody (Old Homestead 1973)★★★, On A High High Mountain (Old Homestead 1974)★★★, The Fiddler (Old Homestead 1975)★★★, The Traditional Sound Of Charlie Moore (Old Homestead 1975)★★★, The Original Rebel Soldier (Wango 1976)★★★★, Wheeling (Old Homestead 1976)★★★, with Johnny Dacus Tennessee Fiddle (Old Homestead 1976)★★★★, with the Blue Grass Clodhoppers T For Texas (Philips 1977)★★, Cotton Farmer (Old Homestead 1979)★★★, Avery County (Old Homestead 1979)★★★, The Legendary Charlie Moore (Leather 1979)★★★, with Smoketown Strut Mountain Sweetheart (Racoon 1979)★★, with Smoketown Strut Mountain Sweetheart reissue (Old Homestead 1987)★★, The Original Rebel Soldier reissue (Rebel 1989)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Moore & Napier (King 1963)★★★★, Best Of Charlie Moore & Bill Napier (Starday 1975)★★★★, Charlie Moore & Bill Napier Collector's Classics (Old Homestead 1978)★★★★, with Napier Truckin' On (Gusto 1979)★★★, Country Music Memories Volume 1 (Old Homestead 1980)★★★★, Country Music Memories Volume 2 (Old Homestead 1981)★★★.

Moore, Christy

b. 7 May 1945, Prosperous, Co. Kildare, Eire. Moore's beginnings were fairly typical for a solo folk performer in the 60s: playing the club circuit in Eire, subsequently doing likewise in England while in between working on building sites and road gangs. Influenced by the American styles of Woody Guthrie, Bob Dylan and the British folk giant, Ewan MacColl, Moore performed in the UK folk clubs alongside the rising stars of the period. It was in England, in 1969, that he recorded his first album, a collaboration with Dominic Behan, Paddy On The Road. His first solo album led to the forming of Planxty, where he stayed until 1975. Having once again embarked on a solo career, he became involved in the mid-70s with the Anti-Nuclear Roadshow which featured performers, environmental activists and politicians. The 'Roadshow' established Moore's reputation as a campaigning and political performer and the ensemble's success made a heavy contribution to undermining the plans for a Irish nuclear power programme. After a brief reunion with Planxty in the late 70s, Moore and fellow Planxty member Donal Lunny split in 1981 to form Moving Hearts. This progression from the former group fused folk with rock. Despite the group taking a similar ideologically agit-prop stance, Moore eventually felt uncomfortable within a group set-up and once again returned to solo work in 1982. Since that time, Moore's mixture of traditional songs with contemporary observations of Irish life, social and political, has also tackled the political problems of Central America and South Africa as well as the problems in his homeland and Ulster. His songs are notable not only for their spiky commentary but also an engaging humour. Christy Moore's standing in Irish folk music is of a stature unparalleled and his influence spills over into the field of pop and rock, winning critical favour, respect and debt, from such contemporary pop performers as the Pogues, Elvis Costello, Billy Bragg and U2.

● ALBUMS: with Dominic Behan Paddy On The Road (1969)★★★, Prosperous (Trailer 1971)★★★, Whatever Tickles Your Fancy (Polydor 1975)★★★, Christy Moore (1976)★★★, The Iron Behind The Velvet (1978)★★★, Live In Dublin (1978)★★★, The Spirit Of Freedom (Warners 1983)★★★, The Time Has Come (Warners 1983)★★★, Ride On (Warners 1984)★★★, Ordinary Man (Warners 1985)★★★, Nice 'N' Easy (Polydor 1986)★★★, Unfinished Revolution (Warners 1987)★★★, Voyage (Warners 1989)★★★, Smoke And Strong Whiskey (Newberry 1991)★★★, King Puck (Equator 1993)★★★, Live At The Point (Grapevine 1994)★★★, Graffiti Tongue (Grapevine 1996)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Christy Moore Collection '81-'91 (East West 1991)★★★★, Collection - Part Two (Grapevine 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Christy (SMV 1995).

Moore, Dorothy

b. 13 October 1947, Jackson, Mississippi, USA. Moore was one of the last great southern soul singers finding success in the late 70s when disco and funk were making deep soul increasingly a marginalized form limited to the south. She began her career at Jackson State University where she formed an all-female group called the Poppies. The group recorded for Columbia Records' Date subsidiary but never reached the national charts. She established a solo career in 1976 with a series of remarkable ballads for Malaco Records, hitting in 1976 with 'Misty Blue' (number 2 R&B, number 3 pop) and 'Funny How Time Slips Away' (the Willie Nelson song, number 7 R&B, number 58 pop), and 'I Believe You' (number 5 R&B, number 27 pop) in 1977. Moore's recordings in the next few years were not nearly as successful as she succumbed increasingly to the disco trend. She left the business for several years, but in 1986 recorded a fine gospel album in Nashville, Giving It Straight To You for the Rejoice label. It yielded a masterful remake of Brother Joe May's 'What Is This' that became a Top 10 gospel hit. Moore returned to secular music in 1988, recording, in a deep-soul style, two albums for the Volt subsidiary of Fantasy. In 1990 she began recording for her original label, Malaco.

● ALBUMS: as the Poppies Lullaby Of Love (Epic 1966)★★★, Misty Blue (Malaco 1976)★★★, Dorothy Moore (Malaco 1977)★★★, Once More With Feeling (Malaco 1978)★★★, Definitely Dorothy (Malaco 1979)★★★, Talk To Me (Malaco 1980)★★★, Giving It Straight To You (Rejoice 1986)★★★, Time Out For Me (Volt 1988)★★★, Winner (Volt 1989)★★★, Feel The Love (Malaco 1990)★★★, Stay Close To Home (Malaco 1992)★★★, More Moore (Malaco 1997)★★★★.

Moore, Dudley

b. 19 April 1935, Dagenham, Essex, England. Although severely hampered by having a deformed foot and spending a great deal of his time in hospital as a child, this did not deter Moore from becoming passionately interested in music from an early age. The young Dudley played piano in a local youth club and organ at his church. He wore an old brown boot strapped over his normal shoe to give his bad foot extra length to touch the pedals easily. As a young teenager Moore played semi-professionally in various jazz clubs. He studied music at Oxford University, graduating in the late 50s and thereafter playing with Vic Lewis. Early in the following decade he worked with John Dankworth before forming his own trio with Pete McGurk (bass) and Chris Karan (drums). For a while he successfully performed jazz while concurrently appearing in Beyond The Fringe in London and New York. During this time he forged a partnership with comedian Peter Cook. With the trio, he also made records and appeared on television with the seminal Not Only But Also (with Cook). By the mid-60s Moore's acting career had begun to take precedence over his jazz work and he later moved to Hollywood. His musical interests continued with the writing of scores for feature films including The Wrong Box (1966), 30 Is A Dangerous Age Cynthia (1967), Inadmissible Evidence (1968), Bedazzled (1968) and Staircase (1969), and also for stage shows, plays and the ballet. His own acting career took off to such an extent that 'Cuddly Dudley' became a huge Hollywood star in such films as 10 (1979), Wholly Moses (1980), Arthur (1981), Six Weeks (1982), Lovesick (1983), Best Defence (1984), Micki And Maude (1984) and Santa Claus (1985). Additionally, he made three hilarious albums with Cook of pure filth and bad language as Derek And Clive. Moore has cited Erroll Garner and Oscar Peterson as two of his main influences. His jazz playing is notable for his lightness of touch and deft right-hand filigrees although his eclecticism, allied to his absorption with other interests, has inhibited the development of a truly identifiable personal style. In recent years, having achieved everything as a 'movie star' Moore has returned to recording and performing, and has resurrected the definitive Dudley Moore Trio. In a revealing biography published in 1997 Moore disclosed a troubled soul who has seemingly succeeded at everything, but remains deeply unfulfilled. Leaving behind him a trail of broken marriages and a number of critically slammed films during the 80s and 90s, Moore has always returned to music in times of stress. His brilliance as both jazz and classical pianist has been constantly undermined by his personal life.

● ALBUMS: Beyond The Fringe (Parlophone 1961)★★★, Theme From Beyond The Fringe And All That Jazz (Atlantic 1962)★★★, Beyond The Fringe; Original Broadway Cast (Capitol 1962)★★★, The Other Side Of The Dudley Moore Trio (Decca 1965)★★★★, Genuine Dud (Decca 1966)★★★★, Bedazzled soundtrack (Decca 1968)★★★, The Dudley Moore Trio (Decca 1968)★★★★, The Music Of Dudley Moore (Decca 1969)★★★, Today With the Dudley Moore Trio (Atlantic 1971)★★★, Dudley Moore At The Wavendon Festival (Black Lion 1976)★★★, The Dudley Moore Trio (Warners 1978)★★★, Dudley Down Under (1978)★★★, Smilin' Through (Finesse 1982)★★★, Orchestra (Decca 1991)★★★,Songs Without Words (GRP 1991)★★★, Concerto! (RCA Victor 1992)★★★, Grieg Piano Concerto In A Minor (EMI 1995)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Dudley, Paul Donovan. Off Beat: Dudley Moore's Book Of Musical Anecdotes, Dudley Moore. Dudley Moore: The Authorized Biography, Barbra Paskin.

Moore, Freddie

b. 20 August 1900, Washington, North Carolina, USA, d. 3 November 1992, New York, USA. He began playing drums as a child and was soon working in tent shows, travelling throughout southern states. After playing with Charlie Creath and leading his own band, he moved to New York, joining Wilbur Sweatman, then toured with King Oliver and once again led his own band. During the 40s and 50s he was constantly in demand, mostly in New York but also for tours as far afield as Europe,. and played in bands led by, amongst others, John Kirby, Sidney Bechet, Wilbur De Paris, Bob Wilber, Mezz Mezzrow, Sammy Price and Emmett Berry. In the 60s and 70s he was still playing, with musicians such as Tony Parenti and Roy Eldridge but by the mid-80s had slowed down a little and mostly played washboard. A robust drummer steeped in the solid timekeeping tradition of early jazz, he took naturally to the mainstream and provided steady, fluid support to the front line horns with which he played.

● ALBUMS: Emmett Berry And His Orchestra (Columbia 1956)★★★.

Moore, Gary

b. 4 April 1952, Belfast, Northern Ireland. This talented, blues-influenced singer and guitarist formed his first major band, Skid Row, when he was 16 years old - initially with Phil Lynott, who left after a few months to form Thin Lizzy. Skid Row continued as a three-piece, with Brendan Shields (bass) and Noel Bridgeman (drums). They relocated from Belfast to London in 1970 and signed a contract with CBS Records. After just two albums they disbanded, leaving Moore to form the Gary Moore Band. Their debut, Grinding Stone, appeared in 1973, but progress was halted the following year while Moore assisted Thin Lizzy after guitarist Eric Bell had left the band. This liaison lasted just four months before Moore was replaced by Scott Gorham and Brian Robertson. Moore subsequently moved into session work before joining Colosseum II in 1976. He made three albums with them, and also rejoined Thin Lizzy for a 10-week American tour in 1977 after guitarist Brian Robertson suffered a severed artery in his hand. Moore finally became a full-time member of Thin Lizzy, but he subsequently left midway through a US tour and formed a new band called G-Force, though this outfit soon foundered. Moore then resumed his solo career, recording a series of commercially ignored albums until he achieved hit singles in 1985 with 'Empty Rooms' and another collaboration with Phil Lynott, 'Out In The Fields'. His 1989 album

After The War revealed a strong Celtic influence, and also featured guest artists such as Ozzy Osbourne and Andrew Eldritch (Sisters Of Mercy). However, his breakthrough to mainstream commercial acceptance came in 1990 with the superb, confident guitarwork and vocals of Still Got The Blues. Mixing blues standards and originals, Moore was acclaimed as one of the UK's foremost artists, a stature that the release of After Hours - featuring cameo appearances from B.B. King and Albert Collins - only confirmed. In 1994 with Jack Bruce and Ginger Baker as BBM, he released an accomplished and satisfying album, but personality conflicts meant that the collaboration was short-lived. In 1995 he released the excellent Blues For Greeny, an album of songs written by Peter Green and played on Green's Gibson Les Paul guitar, which had been a gift from Green to Moore many years earlier. Dark Days In Paradise had little blues on offer; instead, Moore attempted rock, AOR and pop. Just as his followers were becoming used to his recent style, he switched, and the album's tepid success no doubt reflected their rejection of his new approach.

● ALBUMS: as Gary Moore Band Grinding Stone (Columbia 1973)★★, Back On The Streets (MCA 1979)★★★★, Corridors Of Power (Virgin 1982)★★★, Rockin' Every Night - Live In Japan (Virgin 1983)★★★, Live (Jet 1984)★★★, Run For Cover (Ten 1985)★★★, Wild Frontier (Ten Ten 1988)★★★, After The War (Virgin 1989)★★★, Still Got The Blues (Virgin 1990)★★★★, After Hours (Virgin 1992)★★★, Blues Alive (Virgin 1993)★★★★, Blues For Greeny (Virgin 1995)★★★★, Dark Days In Paradise (Virgin 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Anthology (Raw Power 1986)★★★, The Collection double album (Castle 1990)★★★, CD Box Set (Virgin 1991)★★★, Ballads + Blues 1982 - 1994 (Virgin 1994)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Emerald Aisles (Virgin Vision 1986), Video Singles: Gary Moore (Virgin Vision 1988), Gary Moore: Live In Sweden (Virgin Vision 1988), Evening Of The Blues (Virgin Vision 1991), Live Blues (1993), Ballads And Blues 1982-1994 (1995), Blues For Greeny Live (Warner Musicvision 1996).

Moore, Glen

b. 28 October 1941, Portland, Oregon, USA. It was on sets with Tim Hardin and Cyrus that Moore came to public notice. However, upon uniting with Ralph Towner, Paul McCandless, and Collin Walcott within the fluid context of Oregon Moore's bass style was best showcased. Like his co-members he revealed an easy command of classical, folk, Eastern, and jazz overtones. Since Oregon was formed in 1970, Moore's distinctive upright bass sound has distinguished each of their albums, wherein he has also been known to play viola and flute. The intermittent development of Oregon has allowed Moore the freedom to pursue a parallel career in sessions.

● ALBUMS: For ratings see individual artist entries With Tim Hardin Bird On A Wire (1970), with Annette Peacock Bley/Peacock Synthesizer Show (1971), with Cyrus Cyrus (1971), with Peacock I'm The One (1972), with Oregon Music Of Another Present Era (1973), with Oregon Distant Hills (1974), with Oregon Winter Light (1974), with Larry Coryell Restful Mind (1975), with Oregon In Concert (1975), with Ralph Towner Trios/Solos (1975), with Oregon Friends (1975), with Oregon Together (1977), with Oregon Violin (1978), with Oregon Out Of The Woods (1978), with Oregon Roots In The Sky (1979), with Zbigniew Seifert We'll Remember Zbiggy (1980), with Oregon In Performance (1980), Oregon (1983), with Oregon Crossing (1984), with Oregon Ecotopia (1987), with Oregon 45th Parallel (1989), with Oregon Always, Never And Forever (1991).

Moore, Grace

b. 5 December 1901, Slabtown, Tennessee, USA, d. 26 January 1947. Gifted with a remarkable singing voice, Moore first made her name on Broadway in musical comedies. The quality of her singing brought her to the attention of New York's Metropolitan Opera Company and from there she went to Hollywood where her physical beauty enhanced a number of 30s musicals. Moore's lyrical soprano voice was far better than anything offered by most singing actresses in Hollywood, as he demonstrated in A Lady's Morals (1930), New Moon (1931), One Night Of Love (for which she was nominated as Best Actress, 1934), Love Me Forever (1935), The King Steps Out (1936), When You're In Love (1937), I'll Take Romance (1937), and Louise (1940). In the 20s and 30s she made several successful recordings, including 'Listening', 'Tell Her In The Springtime', 'One Night Of Love', and 'Ciribiribin'. While on a concert tour of Europe, Moore was killed when the aircraft in which she was travelling crashed near Copenhagen. The 1953 film So This Is Love (UK title: The Grace Moore Story), in which she was portrayed by Kathryn Grayson, gave a reasonable account of her career and times.

● ALBUMS: The Art Of Grace Moore (RCA 1987)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: You're Only Human Once, Grace Moore.

Moore, GT, And The Reggae Guitars

A popular act in London's pub and club circuit during the early 70s, this quintet consisted of former Heron member Gerald 'GT' Moore (guitar/vocals), Martin Hayward (guitar), Tim Jones (keyboards), Tom Whyte (bass) and Malcolm Mortimer (drums). Their melodic blend of rock and reggae was partially captured on the unit's self-titled debut, released in 1974, but like many contemporaries, GT Moore were unable to commit a live excitement to record. Their musicanship, however, was never in question and Whyte, Hayward and Moore made telling contributions to contemporaneous releases by Shusha. Tony Redunzo replaced Mortimer for Reggae Blue, but by this point the group was losing impetus and it was dissolved soon afterwards.

● ALBUMS: GT Moore And The Reggae Guitars (Charisma 1974)★★, Reggae Blue (Charisma 1975)★★.

Moore, Jackie

b. 1946, Jacksonville, Florida, USA. This powerful soul singer moved to Philadelphia in the late 60s and, with help from top local R&B disc jockey Jimmy Bishop, had two releases on Shout and one on Wand. When success was not forthcoming she returned to Jacksonville and, partly owing to her cousin, noted producer Dave Crawford, joined Atlantic in 1970. Crawford produced and co-wrote 'Precious, Precious', which, after lying dormant for some months on a b-side, eventually sold a million and in 1970 became her only US Top 40 pop hit. After six Top 40 R&B hits she joined Kayvette Records in 1975 when she achieved her biggest R&B success, 'Make Me Feel Like A Woman', which was produced by Brad Shapiro. Moore moved to Columbia in 1978 and continued to sell records in the US soul market. She also had her only UK hit with 'This Time Baby', which narrowly missed the Top 40 in 1979. A consistent R&B hitmaker for over a decade, she increased her tally of US R&B chart entries to 15 in 1983 when she recorded on Catawba.

● ALBUMS: Sweet Charlie Babe (Atlantic 1973)★★★, Make Me Feel Like A Woman (Kayvette 1975)★★★★, I'm On My Way (Columbia 1979)★★★, With Your Love (Columbia 1980)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Precious Precious: The Best Of ... (1994)★★★★.

Moore, James

(see Slim Harpo)

Moore, Johnny

b. John Dudley Moore, 20 October 1906, Austin, Texas, USA, d. 6 January 1969, Los Angeles, California, USA. The elder brother of guitarist Oscar Moore, Johnny began playing guitar with his violinist father's string band in 1934 and moved to the west coast, where Oscar joined Nat 'King' Cole's Trio and Johnny Moore joined a group called the Blazes. Fired by that group in 1942, Moore decided to form his own group, which he christened the Three Blazers. This featured Eddie Williams on bass and, briefly, pianist Garland Finney. When Finney left the trio the following year, Moore hired Charles Brown, a singer and pianist he had seen at an amateur talent show, and the Blazers began recording in 1944 for the small Atlas label. This was followed in 1945-48 by extensive recording for Exclusive, Philo/Aladdin and Modern. During this period the Blazers became a household name with huge hits such as 'Driftin' Blues', 'Merry Christmas Baby', 'Sunny Road' and 'More Than You Know'. When Oscar Moore joined the group in 1947, it was the start of several major problems that ultimately resulted in a split, and Moore tried to replace Charles Brown with a succession of soundalikes. The most successful of these was Billy Valentine, who took the Blazers back to the R&B charts with RCA-Victor's 'Walkin' Blues' in 1949. After his 1949-50 association with Victor, Johnny Moore's Blazers recorded for the gamut of Los Angeles labels, but were successful only with 1953's novelty 'Dragnet Blues' on Modern and 1955's morbid 'Johnny Ace's Last Letter' on Hollywood. Johnny Moore and Charles Brown were reconciled in the mid-50s and the real Three Blazers reunited for records on Aladdin, Hollywood and Cenco; however, by that time, Moore's cool, sophisticated, melodic blues guitar was out of favour with R&B fans. He was an inspiration to most of the electric blues guitarists of the late 40s and early 50s (he is numbered among B.B. King's Top 10 guitarists of all time), and his solos on recordings by Ivory Joe Hunter, Floyd Dixon and Charles Brown, as well as tracks with his own group, bear witness that he was one of the unsung greats of his instrument.

● COMPILATIONS: with Charles Brown Sunny Road (Route 66 1980)★★★, with Brown Race Track Blues (Route 66 1981)★★★, with Brown Sail On Blues (Jukebox Lil 1989)★★★, This Is One Time, Baby (Jukebox Lil 1989)★★★, Why Johnny Why? (Route 66 1989)★★★, with Brown Drifting And Dreaming (Ace 1995)★★★.

Moore, Johnny B.

b. 24 January 1950, Clarksdale, Mississippi, USA. Moore was first taught to play the guitar at the age of seven by his Baptist minister father. Four years later he was already playing in early evening sessions at local juke-joints. In 1964 he moved north to Chicago to join his father who had moved there six years earlier. He learned to read music at school and after leaving to work in a lamp factory, played evenings and weekends around the city. In 1975, Koko Taylor asked him to join her band, the Blues Machine. Two years later, he took part in the New Generation of Chicago Blues, a Berlin concert hosted by Willie Dixon. He subsequently toured Europe three times with Taylor and twice with Dixon, working with the latter until his death in 1992. His records show him to be a worthy performer, adept with a bottleneck and an adequate soloist in the post-B.B. King manner, who nevertheless conducts himself with undue restraint.

● ALBUMS: Hard Times (B.L.U.E.S. R&B 1987)★★★, Lonesome Blues (Wolf 1992)★★★, 911 Blues (Wolf 1994)★★, Live At Blue Chicago (Delmark 1996)★★, Troubled World (Delmark 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: From West Helena To Chicago (Wolf 1988)★★★.

Moore, Lee

b. Walter LeRoy Moore, 24 September 1914, Circleville, Ohio, USA, d. 17 August 1997. He learned to play guitar (and later dobro) as a boy and first worked with the Yodelling Texas Cowboys, a travelling show. In the mid-30s, he sang with the Mountain Melody Boys, before moving to WRHS Charleston, as vocalist with Buddy Starcher's Mountaineers. After marrying Juanita Picklesimer (b. 1917), in 1938, he worked as a duo with his new wife. For many years, they proved a popular act on various radio stations, including WHIS Bluefield and WHMN Fairmont, West Virginia, WSVA

Harrisonburg, Virginia, WROL Knoxville, Tennessee and WPAQ Mount Airey, North Carolina, before arriving at WWVA West Wheeling, in 1949, where they became regulars on the Wheeling Jamboree. Moore always portrayed the cowboy image (he even wore a pair of Colt revolvers on stage) but their repertoire was wide and varied from popular ballads and country songs to religious numbers at which Juanita excelled. Their young son, Roger Lee Moore (b. 1940), also appeared with them from a very early age. Between 1953 and 1969, quite apart from his performing, Moore also presented a four-hour late night country music programme on WWVA, which gained him the nickname of the Coffee Drinking Night Hawk. They made their first recordings in 1953 and Moore became popular for his version of 'The Cat Came Back', which he used as a signature tune. He and Juanita divorced in 1960 but he stayed on the Jamboree as a solo act, until 1974 when, after remarrying (he later divorced and married for the third time), he relocated to Troy, New York, where he continued to perform at various events throughout the Northeastern US States into the 80s when, except for special events, he basically retired. He recorded for several labels over the years, including albums for the Canadian ARC and the German Cattle but his main input to country music was as an important radio performer. In 1983, Cattle even released an album of previously unissued RCA Bluebird recordings.

● ALBUMS: Lee And Juanita Moore (Point 1962)★★★, The Coffee Drinking Night Hawk (ARC 1964)★★★★, More Coffee Drinking Night Hawk (ARC 1965)★★, Radio Favorites Of Country Music (Rural Rhythm 1967)★★★, Everybody's Favorite (Rural Rhythm 1967)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Wheeling's Coffee Drinking Night Hawk 60s recordings (Cattle 1983)★★★★, A Living Legend In Country Music (Cattle 1984)★★★.

Moore, Marilyn

b. 16 June 1931, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, USA, d. March 1992. Born into a showbiz family, Moore began performing at the age of three, singing and dancing in the finale of her family's vaudeville act. As a teenager, she decided to concentrate on singing and soon turned to jazz, working in clubs in Oklahoma City and Chicago. In 1949 she sang with Woody Herman, then with Charlie Ventura and by the early 50s had settled in New York. She sang with various groups, including those led by Ray McKinley, Boyd Raeburn and Al Cohn, whom she married in 1953. They had two children, Lisa and Joe Cohn (now a leading jazz guitarist), and Moore's life became focused upon her home and family. In 1957, however, she was invited to record for Bethlehem and the resulting album, on which she is backed by Cohn, Joe Wilder, Don Abney, Barry Galbraith and other leading jazzmen, attracted a great deal of interest. The following year, she was cast in a jazz show, Oh Captain!, recorded by MGM Records in which Coleman Hawkins, Art Farmer, Oscar Pettiford and Harry 'Sweets' Edison also appeared. Soon afterwards, Moore and Cohn were divorced and once again she was tied to home-making and family-raising. Despite a deep desire to return to professional singing and to make more records, she never did make it back. A warm and sensitive voice marked Moore's work and in her phrasing and overall style there is evidence of her affinity for Billie Holiday. Overlooked and under-recorded (the MGM album was swiftly deleted and never reissued), the quality of Moore's singing on her first album, reissued on CD in 1990, marks her out as one of the great losses to the world of jazz.

● ALBUMS: Moody Marilyn Moore (Affinity 1957)★★★, with others Oh Captain! (MGM 1958)★★.

Moore, Melba

b. Melba Hill, 29 October 1945, New York City, New York, USA. Based in New York, Melba Moore first attracted attention in the Broadway production of Hair. Although she has continued her thespian inclinations, winning an award for her performance in the musical Purlie, Moore has also forged a successful singing career. 'This Is It', a minor US hit, reached the UK Top 10 in 1976, and although her pop chart placings have since been inconsistent, Moore remained a fixture on the R&B lists over the following decade.

● ALBUMS: Look What You're Doing To The Man (Mercury 1971)★★, Peach Melba (Buddah 1975)★★★, This Is It (Buddah 1976)★★, Melba (Buddah 1976)★★, A Portrait Of Melba (Buddah 1978)★★, Melba (Epic 1978)★★, Burn (Epic 1979)★★, Dancin' With Melba Moore (Buddah 1979)★★, What A Woman Needs (Capitol 1981)★★, The Other Side Of The Rainbow (Capitol 1982)★★, Never Say Never (Capitol 1983)★★, Read My Lips (Capitol 1985)★★, A Lot Of Love (Capitol 1987)★★, I'm In Love (Capitol 1988)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (Razor & Tie 1995)★★★, This Is It (Camden 1998)★★★.

● FILMS: Def By Temptation.

Moore, Monette

b. 19 May 1902, Gainesville, Texas, USA, d. 21 October 1962, Garden Grove, California, USA. Moore was also known as Ethel Mayes, Nettie Potter, Susie Smith and Grace White. Interested in music from an early age, Moore taught herself piano in her early teens and became a fan of Mamie Smith. Among the first wave of classic blues singers, from 1923 onwards she was recording in New York City for Paramount, Vocalion, Columbia and RCA Victor. She also worked with the orchestras of Charlie 'Fess' Johnson, Walter Page and Lucky Millinder in myriad shows and revues. She was briefly married to singer/pianist/songwriter John Erby in the late 20s and in 1933 she opened her own nightclub, Monette's Place, but continued performing and recording. In the early 40s, she moved out to the west coast to record for various specialist labels with Teddy Bunn, Hilton 'Nappy' Lamare and George Lewis, then started a new career in television and films. In 1960 she secured a singing job on the Mark Twain Riverboat at Disneyland theme park in Anaheim, California, where she suffered a critical emphysema attack and died before reaching hospital. Although she did not enjoy an extensive recording career, Moore was a very effective jazz and blues stylist who easily coped with the various styles she encountered during her 40-year career.

Moore, Oscar

b. 25 December 1912, Austin, Texas, USA, d. 8 October 1981. Moore formed his first band with his brother Johnny (who was also a guitarist), while still in his mid-teens. In 1937 he became a founder-member of the Nat 'King' Cole Trio, and for the next few years was an important part of the group's success. In 1947 Moore joined the Three Blazers, a group led by his brother, and also led his own groups for recording sessions. In the mid-50s he dropped out of music, but returned occasionally to gig and make recording dates as a sideman. An outstanding guitarist in the mould of Charlie Christian, Moore was an exceptionally gifted soloist and an accompanist of rare distinction. The quicksilver exchanges between him and Cole on their early records provide eloquent testimony to his talent and make his long and presumably self-determined absence from the scene a matter of considerable regret.

● ALBUMS: The Oscar Moore Trio (Skylark 1954), Gallivantin' Guitar (Tampa 1957), Tribute To Nat King Cole (1965).

● COMPILATIONS: The Complete Capitol Recordings Of The Nat 'King' Cole Trio 18-CD box set (Mosaic 1990)★★★★★.

Moore, R. Stevie

b. 1959, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. The son of a leading session bass-player, young Moore was recording with Jim Reeves at the age of seven, but grew up to have very different ambitions to his father. Absorbed in home-taping techniques, Moore waited many years before unleashing his songwriting and multi-instrumental talents upon an unsuspecting world. The early limited edition Phonography was followed by a handful of albums and a deluge of cassettes flowing from his New Jersey home. The most consistent feature of his material is its very unpredictability: a quirky, melodic writer, Moore covers a variety of musical and instrumental styles. Distancing himself from the music business, he continues to provide music of rare quality for his listeners.

● ALBUMS: Everything (1984),★★★ What's the Point (1984),★★ Verve (1985)★★★, Warning (1988)★★★, Has Beens And Never Weres (1990)★★★.

Moore, Ralph

b. 1956, London, England. So assured, so steeped in the post-bop language and sensibility is Ralph Moore that it can come as a surprise that he is actually a British-born saxophonist (he has an English mother and an American father). He began learning the trumpet when he was 14, but was gradually seduced by the tenor saxophone. He moved to the USA at 15, settling on the west coast and served his apprenticeship in America's jazz hothouse environment until he reached a standard that enabled him to study at the prestigious Berklee College Of Music in Boston. Leaving after a couple of years, his innate ability and solid, raspy tone led to a period with the great drummer Roy Haynes, and then three years with the legendary hard-bop pianist and leader Horace Silver. With enough of a reputation to make it on the world's most competitive jazz scene, he moved to New York, and continued working with the greats, including John Hicks, Dizzy Gillespie, Gene Harris and Freddie Hubbard, as well as leading his own groups with some of the new wave of gifted, young hard-bop players, including trumpeter Brian Lynch, guitarist Kevin Eubanks and pianists Dave Kikoski, Benny Green and Mulgrew Miller. Ralph Moore's tenor work is characterised by an attractive, throaty tone, a little reminiscent of Charlie Rouse, and solid, self-assured phrasing. Hardly unorthodox but always creative and confident, he is undoubtedly one of the most promising of the new generation of bop saxophonists.

● ALBUMS: Round Trip (Reservoir 1985)★★★, 623 C Street (Criss Cross Criss 1987)★★★★, with Marvin 'Smitty' Smith Keeper Of The Drums (Concord 1987)★★, with Bobby Hutcherson Cruisin' The 'Bird (Landmark 1988)★★★, Rejuvenate! (Criss Cross Criss 1988)★★★, Furthermore (Landmark 1990)★★★, with Freddie Hubbard Bolivia (Musicmasters/Limelight 1991)★★.

Moore, Ray

b. 1942, Liverpool, England, d. 1988. A broadcaster and unlikely 80s records hitmaker, Moore left school in the summer of 1960 and started a good job in the then-thriving docks. However, a desire to do something different led him to Oldham Repertory Theatre where he became assistant stage manager. He managed to do some acting and even appeared in a b-movie called A Touch Of Brass made for the Billy Graham organization. After spending some more time in repertory, Moore joined Granada television as an announcer in 1962, working alongside Bernard Youens, later to star in Coronation Street. After a move to ATV in 1964, Moore was employed by BBC Manchester in television and as a radio disc jockey, hosting Pop North among other programmes. In the summer of 1967 he went to the BBC in London as a holiday stand-in for the Saturday Club show and was later invited to join Radio 2 when it was launched in September 1967. In 1986 he teamed up with the eccentric west country musician Shag Connors to record the novelty single 'My Father Had A Rabbit' which was a surprise hit with proceeds going to charity. By the time Moore and Connors recorded the follow-up 'Bog Eyed Jog' in the following year, Moore had learnt that he was suffering from cancer of the mouth. He soldiered on bravely until he was unable to speak, but sadly died in 1988. His biography subsequently became a best seller.

● FURTHER READING: Tomorrow Is Too Late, Ray Moore. Tomorrow, Who Knows?, Alma and Ray Moore.

Moore, Rev. James, And The Mississippi Mass Choir

b. Detroit, Michigan, USA. Moore originally sang in local Detroit church choirs, where the gospel tradition remains strong, from the age of seven onwards. His rise to prominence began with the receipt of the Thurston Frazier Scholarship Award at the Rev. James Cleveland Gospel Music Workshop Of America, held in Chicago in 1974. By the end of the year he had recorded and released his first record for Savoy Records, I Thank You Master. After working with three different labels on as many projects during the 70s he returned to Savoy for Rev. James Moore Live. Reaching the Top 10 of the Billboard gospel chart, it established his reputation and earned a Stellar Award in 1989 for Best Solo Performance, Male, Traditional. Even greater success awaited him, however. The Mississippi Mass Choir's debut album, on which he was a guest vocalist, was a massive crossover success. A reciprocal invitation to join Moore for Live With The Mississippi Mass Choir was accepted, and produced another major success in 1991. Reaching number 1 in the gospel charts, it won a Stellar award for best gospel album. Subsequent releases, including Live In Detroit and I Will Trust In The Lord (which won a Grammy) were also successful, but his 1995 reunion with the Mississippi Mass Choir for Live At Jackson State University prompted greater popularity.

● ALBUMS: I Thank You Master (Savoy 1974)★★★, Rev. James Moore Live (Savoy 1989)★★★, Live With The Mississippi Mass Choir (Savoy 1991)★★★, Live In Detroit (Savoy 1992)★★★, I Will Trust In The Lord (Savoy 1994)★★★★, Live At Jackson State University With The Mississippi Mass Choir (Savoy 1995)★★★★.

Moore, Russell 'Big Chief'

b. 13 August 1912, nr. Sacaton, Arizona, USA, d. 15 December 1983. A Native American, of the Pima tribe, Moore began playing trombone in the Chicago area before settling in the mid-30s in Southern California, where he played in one of Lionel Hampton's first bands. By the end of the decade he had moved to New Orleans, where he became a regular musical associate of many of the older generation of traditional jazzmen. In 1944 he joined Louis Armstrong for a three-year spell, then worked in and around New York with Sidney Bechet, Eddie Condon, Buck Clayton, Red Allen, Oran 'Hot Lips' Page, Pee Wee Russell and many others. Occasional trips to Europe brought him to the attention of a wider range of fans and a short period with Armstrong's All Stars, beginning in 1964, further enhanced his reputation. He spent part of the 60s in Canada and led his own bands, recording occasionally on into the 70s. In the early 80s he was again on tour in Europe but died in 1983. Moore's style was well-suited to the ensemble playing of the traditional New Orleans-style band, but his soloing had much to commend it.

● ALBUMS: Russell 'Big Chief' Moore (1953-74)★★★, Russell 'Big Chief' Moore's Pow Wow Jazz Band (1973)★★★.

Moore, Scotty

b. Winfield Scott Moore, 27 December 1931, Gadsden, Tennessee, USA. Guitarist Moore started playing at the age of eight and formed his first band while in the US Navy in 1948. After he left the service he joined the Memphis group Doug Poindexter And His Starlite Wranglers who also included bass player Bill Black. The band recorded Moore's 'My Kind Of Carryin' On' for Sam Phillips' Sun label and both Moore and Black played on several other Sun artists' recordings. In June 1954 Phillips invited a young singer he was trying out to Moore's apartment to rehearse some songs: that man was Elvis Presley. A week later, Moore, Presley and Black went into Sun studios to record together for the first time. As a trio (later a quartet with drummer D.J. Fontana) they recorded some of Elvis's finest recordings. When Presley was sold to RCA for a 'king's ransom', Moore and Black were taken on as his sidemen on a relatively meagre salary. Moore had acted as a kind of unpaid manager before Bob Neal and then Colonel Tom Parker took over the role. While Presley was busy filming Loving You, Moore and Black headed for the Dallas State Fair where they performed as Scotty And Bill, Elvis's Original Backing Group. Scotty also went to work for the small Memphis label Fernwood Records, whose most successful record was Thomas Wayne's 'Tragedy'. Moore himself released a solo single called 'Have Guitar Will Travel'. During the same period he also played on some sessions for Dale Hawkins at Chess. Unlike Black, Moore returned to play with Presley when he came out of the army in 1960, but not for long. Over the next few years he recorded infrequently with Presley and went back to Sun as production manager. Later in the 60s he went to Nashville to start his own studio. Presley invited him back for the 1968 television special, which was the last time Moore played with, or even saw, him. In 1970 Moore recorded an album with D.J. Fontana but by now he had virtually retired from playing to concentrate on production (most notably engineering Ringo Starr's Beaucoups Of Blues). He was enticed out of retirement by Billy Swan to play on his self-titled 1976 album and later played on Ral Donner's Elvis tribute album. By the 80s Moore had established a successful tape copying service in Nashville and rarely picked up his guitar. In 1997 Moore recorded with Fontana again.

● ALBUMS: The Guitar That Changed The World (Epic 1964)★★★, What's Left (1970)★★, with Carl Perkins 706 Reunion - A Sentimental Journey (Belle Meade 1993)★★★, with D.J. Fontana All The King's Men (Sweetfish 1997)★★.

● FURTHER READING: That's Alright Elvis, Scotty Moore and James Dickerson.

Moore, Thom

b. Eire. Songwriter Thom Moore has combined several peripatetic careers alongside his musical development, which includes spells in both Pumpkinhead and Midnight Well. He spent time in Africa, the Middle East and US Navy before his degree in Slavonic languages took him to teaching positions in California during the 80s and Russia in the 90s. These travels and studies have fuelled a deep respect for the musical traditions of several countries and continents, all of which have been entwined in his songwriting and lyrics. In 1977 he worked on Midnight Well's self-titled debut album, considered by many to be the first Irish experiment in world music, with guests including Donal Lunny, Shaun Davey and Ciaran Brennan. Afterwards Moore's songs were used by a variety of artists, including Mary Black and Maura O'Connell. His first solo album, Dreamer In Russia, was made in a single day and was the result of his post as Interpreter-Inspector with the INF Permanent Monitoring Site in Votlinski, at which time he split his time between bases in Russia and Ireland. A second solo album followed in 1994, Gorgeous And Bright, with contributions from Brian Kennedy, Mary Black, Cormac Breatnach and Dave Earlie. He described his process of adapting traditional songs thus: 'Sometimes I put them through sort of mathematical hoops or something like that in order to come up with something that can have a set of lyrics put on it.' This highly distinctive and unusual approach has produced a canon of songs much admired in Ireland, particularly 'Carolina Rua', a song also recorded by Mary Black.

● ALBUMS: with Midnight Well Midnight Well (Mulligan 1977),★★★ Dreamer In Russia (Starc 1992)★★★★, Gorgeous And Bright (Starc 1994)★★★.

Moore, Tiny

b. Billie Moore, 12 May 1920, Energy, Hamilton County, Texas, USA, d. 15 December 1987, Jackpot, Nevada, USA. His mother taught piano, but as a child, he learned to play fiddle from his grandfather and was soon playing for dances with a group that included his mother. After also learning guitar, he played with some school friends, in the Clod Hoppers, until 1937. In the next few years, he played in a jazz trio in Mobile, Alabama, with Lloyd Ellis and at Rayne, Louisiana with the Rainbow Ramblers, a Cajun band, before relocating to Houston, where he played on radio with the Crustene Ranch Gang. He also became an accomplished mandolinist but between 1943 and 1945, he served in the US Air Force. (His nickname came from an humorist, who thought it an amusing way to describe his 19 stone). In 1946, he joined Bob Wills's Texas Playboys, where he played electric mandolin and fiddle. He toured and recorded with Wills on the 1946/7 Tiffany Transcriptions and at several other sessions until 1950 and also managed Wills's Sacramento dancehall. He disliked the travelling with Wills and left to play on KFRK Sacramento with Billy Jack Wills. (He recorded with Billy Jack on Crazy Man Crazy and Billy Jack Wills And His Western Swing Band, Sacramento 1952-1954). Impressed by jazz mandolinist Leo Raley's instrument, he obtained a Bigsby custom built electric five-string mandolin. He worked some local shows with Bob Wills, in the mid-50s, but refused to tour and remained in Sacramento, where he played on a televised children's programme, Ranger Roy. In 1961, when this ended, he opened his Tiny Moore Music Center and gave mandolin, guitar and fiddle lessons. In 1970, he played on Merle Haggard's Tribute To The Best Damn Fiddle Player In The World (Or My Salute To Bob Wills), which featured other Texas Playboys. He also played on The Last Time, in 1973, which was the last occasion that Bob Wills played on a recording. Between 1973 and 1976, Moore was a member of Haggard's band but in the late 70s, he played at old time fiddle contests and with his fellow Playboy, guitarist Eldon Shamblin. He recorded a twin mandolin album with fellow mandolin genius Jethro Burns (of Homer And Jethro) and a solo album for Kaleidoscope. Sadly for him, the weight and associated health problems finally took their toll when, on 15 December 1987, while playing with the Cadillac Band in a Jackpot, Nevada nightclub, he suffered a fatal heart attack.

● ALBUMS: with Jethro Burns Back To Back (Kaleidoscope 1980)★★★, Tiny Moore Music (Kaleidoscope 1980)★★.

Moore, Vinnie

b. 1965, USA. This jazz-trained virtuoso guitarist was playing the guitar competently by the age of 12. Picked up by talent scout Mike Varney, he was introduced to the techno-thrash band Vicious Rumours, with whom he recorded Soldiers Of The Night in 1985. He left the band as soon as the album was released to concentrate on a solo career. Mind's Eye emerged in 1986, a self-written guitar instrumental collection. This combined a fusion of classical jazz, blues and hard rock that was heavily melodic and technically brilliant, earning comparisons to Joe Satriani's finest work. Two subsequent albums followed a similar pattern but were mellower still, after which he was employed by Alice Cooper as lead guitarist on his 1991 Hey Stoopid tour.

● ALBUMS: Mind's Eye (Shrapnel 1986)★★★★, Time Odyssey (Squawk 1988)★★★, Meltdown (Squawk 1991)★★★.

Moore, Willie C.

b. 22 April 1913, Kinston, North Carolina, USA, d. 2 May 1971, Albany, New York, USA. Moore began playing guitar about 1930, and in 1934 won a talent contest organized by J.B. Long. It has been speculated that Moore recorded as Boll Weenie Bill for ARC, but this now seems unlikely. When located in 1970, he still possessed a wide repertoire, but died after preliminary recordings had been made.

● COMPILATIONS: Another Man Done Gone (1978)★★★.

Moose

This UK group comprised Russell Yates (vocals), Kevin McKillop (guitar), Damien Warburton (drums) and Lincoln Fong (bass). They inadvertently began the so-called 'shoegazing' movement, so dubbed because of the static nature of bands who focused on the floor-boards instead of their audience, when Yates read lyrics taped to the floor. They rose to notoriety with supports to Lush, from whom they borrowed Chris Acland when Warburton failed to appear at gigs. Another temporary change arose when McKillop attended his child's birth, and Tim Gane from Sterolab stepped in. Conversely, Yates moonlights as a Stereolab guitarist and McKillop has played with See See Rider. It is this sort of activity that fuelled 'The Scene That Celebrates Itself' tag, summoned by the Melody Maker's Steve Sutherland to describe the incestuous nature of a clutch of upcoming bands who were not indulging in traditional rivalries. Three EPs comprised the original batch of recordings, the last of which was the first to confirm that the band could offer more than the voguish My Bloody Valentine influences. The C&W-tinged 'This River Will Never Run Dry' was applauded from almost all corners. Yates also achieved prominence through the Lillies, the brainchild of Stuart Mutler, editor of Tottenham Hotspurs' soccer magazine The Spur. This included Miki Berenyi and Chris Acland from Lush, Yates and Kevin McKillop from Moose, and was masterminded by Simon Raymonde of the Cocteau Twins. Together they recorded a flexi-disc entitled: 'And David Seaman Will Be Very Disappointed About That'. Despite strong critical reaction in their favour, Moose were dropped by Virgin Records subsidiary Circa when they failed to garner significant commercial reward for XYZ. The band relocated to the Play It Again Sam label, for whom Honey Bee and Live A Little, Love A Lot further moved them away from indie rock territory, dabbling in soul, folk and country nuances. The critical response was still strong, but again did not provide an upsurge in sales. It would seem that Moose are destined to remain a glorious cult.

● ALBUMS: XYZ (Circa 1992)★★★, Honey Bee (Play It Again Sam 1993)★★★, Live A Little, Love A Lot (Play It Again Sam 1995)★★★.

Moraes, Angel

b. 7 August 1965, Brooklyn, New York, USA. One of the more prominent of a new wave of New York DJs and remixers of the mid-90s, Moraes is also one of the most prolific. Before his first appearances as a DJ in the mid-80s he had worked as a Manhattan truck driver. By the 90s he had secured bookings at many of the premier New York clubs, including the Sound Factory, where his notoriously 'smooth and soulful' mixing pleased large clienteles. As an artist, all his records have been mastered by the producer Tom Moulton, a close friend and adviser. In 1996 alone he released three albums - Burnin' Up, Time To Get Down and New York In The Mix for three separate record labels. He has also remixed for London, Subversive and Tribal Records.

● ALBUMS: Burnin' Up (Strictly Rhythm 1996)★★, Time To Get Down (Hot 'N' Spicy 1996)★★★, New York In The Mix (Subversive 1996)★★★.

Morales, David

b. *c.*1961, Brooklyn, New York, USA. Born and bred in the capital, and of Puerto Rican parents, David Morales is the leader of the pack in terms of his country's premier remixers. His style, melodic garage house with a strong disco influence, belies his personal physique and presence, that of a pencil-bearded, tattooed bodybuilder. Married with a son, he works out for two hours every day, though he also employs a bodyguard for his regular evening shows (he was shot in his youth). As a young man he attended both the Loft and Paradise Garage, before being invited to play at the latter through Judy Weinstein's For The Record organisation. His other stomping grounds included all the major New York clubs, including the Ozone Layer, Inferno and Better Days. The Morales style has graced literally hundreds of records, his first remix being Insync's 'Sometimes Love'. He possibly works best in tandem with a strong garage vocalist (Alison Limerick, Ce Ce Penniston, Yazz, Jocelyn Brown, Chimes etc.). A good selection of his greatest work might be permed from the following: Robert Owens' 'I'll Be Your Friend', Clive Griffin's 'I'll Be Waiting', Black Sheep's 'Strobelite Honey', Pet Shop Boys' 'So Hard', Thompson Twins' 'The Saint' or Limerick's 'Where Love Lives'. Many other remixes have been completed with longstanding friend Frankie Knuckles (as Def-Mix), who he also met through For The Record (Weinstein going on to manage both artists). His productivity is made possible by the fact that he is happy to churn out up to two remixes a week under his own auspices. His live sets, however, are often less glossy than the productions he is best known for: 'When I DJ I'm not as pretty as a lot of the records I make'. He has had trouble in constructing solo hits on his own account, though his debut album included guest appearances from Sly Dunbar and Ce Ce Rogers.

● ALBUMS: The Programme (1993)★★.

Morales, Noro

b. Norberto Morales, 4 January 1911, Puerta de Tierra, Puerto Rico, d. 14 January 1964, San Juan, Puerto Rico. Imposing and charismatic Latin pianist, bandleader, composer and 'arranger' Morales enjoyed considerable popularity with both Latino and non-Latino audiences in the 40s and early 50s. Born to a large musical family, Noro was initially tutored by his father and a sister; he first studied trombone and bass, but made better progress on the piano. In 1924 the Morales family were invited by the Venezuelan dictator President Juan Gómez to become his official court orchestra. His father died the same year and Noro took over leadership. After returning to Puerto Rico in 1930, the family orchestra disbanded and Noro freelanced with various bands (including Ralph Sánchez, The Midnight Serenaders, Carmelo Díaz Soler and Rafael Muñoz) before moving to New York in 1935. Following stints with Alberto Socarrás, Augusto Coen, Leo Marini and Johnny Rodríguez (Tito Rodríguez's older brother), he founded a rumba band called the Hermanos Morales Orchestra in 1937 (renamed Noro Morales And His Orchestra in 1938). They were an immediate success and became the resident band at the El Morocco club for five years. In the early 40s Morales founded a big band which, along with the orchestras of Machito, Marcelino Guerra and Miguelito Valdés, became one of the most popular during the mid-40s. Some fine examples of his big band work are contained on the Tumbao CD Rumbas And Mambo. An early crossover hit composition by Noro, 'Bim Bam Bum', was introduced in 1942 by Xavier Cugat, sung by Tito Rodríguez (the recording is included on the Tumbao CD Xavier Cugat And His Orchestra 1940-42, 1991). Noro's 1942 self-penned hit 'Serenata Ritmica', which he was to record several more times and became his signature tune, consolidated his popularity with non-Latinos. That year, and for many after, his orchestra was hired to perform at the prestigious annual New York Daily News Harvest Moon Ball. During the 40s, Noro pioneered a hip piano and Latin percussion style (bass, bongo, conga and timbales, plus maracas and claves on occasion) that was commercially watered-down and sweetened by various imitators (he too succumbed to downtown commercial demands), whose vapidity encouraged a prejudice amongst many that obscured the genius of the original. Some of Noro's most highly regarded recordings in this piano and rhythm style were made for the Coda Record Company, founded in January 1945 by Gabriel Oller. 'On January 16, 1945, Noro was the first to record for Coda,' Oller told Max Salazar. 'He recorded 'Rumba Rhapsody', 'Bangin' The Bongo', 'Linda Mujer' and 'Begin The Beguine'. Our friendship began in the 30s . . . He was always well dressed, shoes shined, nails polished and reeked of expensive cologne . . . He loved women. He had to work steadily to pay the alimony his three wives collected . . . Noro made 12 great recordings for me.' The named tracks and other Coda cuts are included on the indispensable Tumbao CD Rumba Rhapsody. Noro adapted readily to the late 40s advent of the mambo (which peaked during the first half of the 50s), and his band remained popular during the early 50s. Rumbas And Mambo contains a couple of notable self-penned big band mambos Noro recorded for MGM in 1949: the outstanding '110th Street And 5th Avenue', which immortalized the New York corner meeting place for Latin musicians (near Tatay's Spanish Music Centre record store, opened by Oller and his brother Vicente in the early 30s); and 'Ponce', a tribute to the southern coastal Puerto Rican town known as 'la cuna de los musicos' (the musicians cradle). Noro continued to maintain his appeal to both Latinos and non-Latinos during the remainder of the 50s: at one stage he was practically the house band at the famous China Doll night club on Broadway, from where his shows were broadcast live on a daily basis. Many future major Latin names passed through Noro's band, including singers Machito (late 30s), Tito Rodríguez (mid-40s), Pellín Rodríguez, Vicentico Valdés, Dioris Valladares and Vitín Avilés; percussionists Tito Puente, Ray Romero (1942), Sabú Martínez, Manny Oquendo and Willie Rosario; saxophonist/arranger Ray Santos; and bass player Julio Andino. Jazz trumpeter Doc Severinson was a sideman between 1950 and 1951. Noro used a number of arrangers to write for him, including René Hernández, Joe Loco, Arturo 'Chico' O'Farrill, Ray Santos, Ben Pickering, Charlie Diamond (aka Carlos Diamante) and others. He worked particularly closely with Pickering and Diamond, dictating his ideas for them to transcribe. One of Noro's last albums was 1960's His Piano And Rhythm on Ansonia, which contained his elegant and haunting 'Maria Cervantes'. Noro became virtually blind due to chronic diabetes. From 1961, the last three years of his life were spent in Puerto Rico, where his big band, featuring Vitín Avilés, was contracted to play at the prestigious Hotel la Concha, and became one of the island's biggest attractions. In 1984 Charlie Palmieri revived the piano and rhythm format for his classic A Giant Step, which included his interpretation of 'Rumba Rhapsody'. According to Charlie's brother, Eddie Palmieri: 'Definitely, the inspiration for Charlie was Noro, because he owned all of his records and classic recordings of piano solos which he loved' (Latin Beat, 1991). One of the last surviving Latin pianists who was directly exposed to Noro is Dr. Ken 'Leo' Rosa (b. New York; Chiropractic Orthopaedist/1965; a 'Mr Universe' runner-up and a broadcaster), who refreshingly recreates, as well as extemporizes in, Noro's inimitable style.

● ALBUMS: His Piano And Rhythm 1960 recording (1991)★★★★, Recordando Los Exitos De Noro Morales, Vol. 1 1953-1956 recording (1992)★★★, with Miguelito Valdés Mr. Babalú 1949-1951 recording (1993)★★★★, Rumbas And Mambo 1945-1950 recordings (1993)★★★★, Rumba Rhapsody 1945-1951 recordings (1994)★★★.

Morand, Herb

b. 1905, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. d. 23 February 1952. Beginning to play trumpet as a youth, Morand became a professional musician at the age of 18. He worked in bands led by Nat Towles, Chris Kelly and others, often in and around his home town. In Chicago from the late 20s, he played and recorded with many musicians, including Johnny Dodds, Rosetta Howard, and the Harlem Hamfats. In the early 40s he returned to New Orleans where he led his own bands, later joining George Lewis. A competent player raised in the New Orleans tradition, during his career Morand's playing took on characteristics of other styles of jazz. He remained a good ensemble player, his solo work seldom having the dash and fire of many of his contemporaries.

● ALBUMS: Herb Morand And His New Orleans Band (1950)★★★.

Morbid Angel

Formed in Florida, USA, in 1984, the band's original line-up consisted of Stering Von Scarborough (bass, vocals), Trey Azagthoth (guitar), Richard Brunelle (guitar) and Pete Sandoval (drums). They quickly gained a following on the underground death metal scene on account of their extreme, ultra-fast musical approach. The band recorded the self-financed Abominations Of Desolation in 1986. However, unhappy with the recordings, they decided not to release them, as had originally been intended, on their own Gorque Records label. They then underwent a personnel change, replacing the departed Scarborough with David Vincent (ex-Terrorizer), who gave the band much more of an identity with his strong, charismatic presence (he had previously produced Abominations Of Desolation). Morbid Angel continued to gain momentum and eventually attracted the attention of Earache Records, resulting in the band's official debut, Altars Of Madness, released in 1989, to great acclaim among death metal fans. By the release of Blessed Are The Sick, they had toured Europe extensively, establishing a strong following in the process. The album, like its forerunner, produced by Tom Morris, was once again a marked improvement on previous efforts, and strengthened their position within a growing fanbase. Owing to widespread bootlegging and the band's burgeoning popularity, Earache Records released the original recordings of Abominations Of Desolation in 1991. For 1993's Covenant, released through Giant/Warner in the USA, Flemming Rassmussen (Metallica, etc.) was drafted in to produce, and their rising profile was cemented by a US tour supporting Black Sabbath and Motörhead. 1994 saw the replacement of Richard Brunelle by Eric Rutan (ex-Ripping Corpse). His arrival seemed to revitalize Morbid Angel and 1995's Domination was a much more varied selection. While still undoubtedly death metal, songs such as 'Dawn Of The Agony' and 'Dreaming' touched on both classical and industrial traditions to expand the band's sound. Vincent left in June 1996 to pursue a solo career, in addition to working with Genitorturers. His departure seems to have had little effect on Morbid Angel's sound.

● ALBUMS: Altars Of Madness (Earache 1989)★★★★, Blessed Are The Sick (Earache 1991)★★★, Abominations Of Desolation (Earache 1991)★★★, Covenant (Earache 1993)★★★, Domination (Earache 1995)★★★, Entangled In Chaos (Earache 1996)★★★★, Formulas Fatal To The Flesh (Earache 1998)★★★.

Morcheeba

Morcheeba, popularly known as the 'trigger hippie' UK trip-hop combo, consists of Paul Godfrey, Ross Godfrey and Skye Edwards. The Godfrey brothers began working from their home-town of Hythe, Kent, around the early 90s, drawing on a number of influences including 30s blues and 90s hip-hop. This fusion resulted in a complex sound that is difficult to categorize. Their quest for acclaim led the brothers to relocate to Clapham, London, where they continued recording, meeting Edwards at a party in Greenwich, London. The trio discovered a mutual affinity for songwriting, marijuana and soundtracks, and Edwards was enlisted to add her debonair vocals to their recording sessions. In the winter of 1995 they released their debut, 'Trigger Hippie', a huge underground hit. The success of the single led to the release of Who Can You Trust, which was selected by DJ magazine as one of the top 100 dub albums. The band were as astonished as the hardcore reggae fraternity, although the album did display clear traits of dub, notably on the title track. In 1996 the band released a remix of the album track 'The Music That We Hear', and also the crossover hit 'Tape Loop'. The latter led to a triumphant US tour, collaborations with David Byrne and major critical acclaim. In 1997 the band played the Phoenix Festival and A Day At The Races, followed by the release of 'Shoulder Holster'. The single included a mix by DJ Swamp with added vocals from Spikey T. The group embarked on the promotional circuit with television appearances and an acclaimed tour supported by Zion Train. Skye also performed alongside Burning Spear et al on the 'Perfect Day' single which topped the UK chart in 1997/8. In the spring of 1998 the group released their eagerly anticipated follow-up, Big Calm. Among the mellifluous matchless melodies was the reggae-styled 'Friction', featuring the horn section from Zion Train.

● ALBUMS: Who Can You Trust (Indochina 1996)★★★, Big Calm (Indochina 1998)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Who Can You Trust/Beats And B Sides (Indochina 1997)★★★.

Mordred

Formed in San Francisco, USA, in 1985, Mordred were one of the first of a new breed of thrash metal bands that incorporated elements of funk into their high-speed onslaught. Comprising Scott Holderby (vocals), Danny White (guitar), James Sanguinetti (guitar), Art Liboon (bass) and Gannon Hall (drums), they signed to Noise Records and released Fool's Game in 1989. On their next album they recruited Aaron (Pause) Vaughn, a scratch disc jockey, to give their sound a new dimension. This approach was thought to offer enormous crossover potential, combining elements of Faith No More, Megadeth and Parliament, but so far the band have failed to gain a footing outside of a strictly cult following.

● ALBUMS: Fool's Game (Noise 1989)★★★, In This Life (Noise 1991)★★, Vision (Noise 1992)★★★.

More

This N.W.O.B.H.M. band was led by guitarist Kenny Cox with Paul Mario Day (vocals), Laurie Mansworth (guitar), Brian Day (bass) and Frank Darch (drums). Wild live shows that ended with most of the audience on stage, coupled with a promising session for BBC Radio 1's Friday Rock Show, led to a contract with Atlantic as major N.W.O.B.H.M. acts such as Saxon and Iron Maiden began to make a serious impact. Warhead was a solid debut, but failed to match the live shows, and sales were poor despite a series of UK support performances that generally upstaged headliners Krokus, followed by an appearance in the opening slot of the 1981 Donington Festival. This lack of immediate success, plus record company problems, led to internal fighting, and by the release of Blood And Thunder, Cox had assembled an entirely new line-up of Nick Stratton (vocals), Andy John Burton (drums) and Barry Nicholls (bass). The album adhered faithfully to the riff-heavy style of Warhead, but without a UK release from a disinterested label, the band quickly faded.

- ALBUMS: Warhead (Atlantic 1980)★★★, Blood And Thunder (Atlantic 1982)★★★.

More American Graffiti

American Graffiti was not only a milestone in pop-orientated cinema, it remains one of the finest films of its era. Sadly, this 1979 sequel lacks its charm, atmosphere and characterization. Ron Howard, Paul LeMat and Candy Clark reprise their earlier roles as the action shifts from 1962 to a late 60s dominated by the Vietnam War, protest and counter-culture idealism. Where the canvas of American Graffiti was tight - the action unfolded over a single night - the attempt to compress several years of changing attitudes into the follow-up robbed it of potential resonance. However, appearances by Country Joe And The Fish, with their anti-war anthem 'I Feel Like I'm Fixin' To Die', and Doug Sahm, enliven the proceedings, while legendary disc jockey Wolfman Jack makes another welcome cameo. More American Graffiti did boast another stellar soundtrack. A succession of Tamla Motown classics, including 'Heatwave' (Martha And The Vandellas), 'Stop! In The Name Of Love' (the Supremes) and 'My Guy' (Mary Wells) are set beside folk-rock from the Byrds, Bob Dylan and Simon And Garfunkel. Garage bands Sam The Sham And The Pharoahs and ? And The Mysterions give way to 'west coast' acolytes the Doors, Grateful Dead and Frank Zappa in a collection which, in microcosm, charts the development of US music during a highly-prolific decade.

More Of The Monkees - Monkees

Clearly they were not America's answer to the Beatles, even though at the time moptop fans seethed and decided to boycott them. They were the best manufactured pop group ever, and in Michael Nesmith had a musical semi-genius. Their second album, apart from the wretched 'Your Auntie Grizelda', carries on from their debut. It contains the mantric '(I'm Not Your) Steppin' Stone', Neil Diamond's chunka-chunka-chunk 'Look Out (Here Comes Tomorrow)', the funky 'Mary Mary' and the paragon, 'I'm A Believer', also written by Neil Diamond. Euphoric and nostalgic and completely marijuana-free.

- Tracks: When Love Comes Knockin' (At Your Door); Mary, Mary; Hold On Girl; Your Auntie Grizelda; (I'm Not Your) Steppin' Stone; Look Out (Here Comes Tomorrow); The Kind Of Girl I Could Love; The Day We Fall In Love; Sometime In The Morning; Laugh; I'm A Believer.
- First released 1967
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 1

More Songs About Buildings And Food - Talking Heads

Even though this was recorded at the beautiful Compass Point studio in the Caribbean, this album manages to retain the concrete urbanism of the American city, the subject of many of David Byrne's songs. Again produced by the mercurial Brian Eno; he and Byrne did work particularly well together. Eno's elaborate arrangements never once clouded the clarity of some of those simple pop riffs (especially some of those guitar trills on 'With Our Love'). Talking Heads seemed arty and complex at the time. More than twenty years later they seem less awesome but much more accessible and enjoyable. This album, in particular, holds up well.

- Tracks: Thank You For Sending Me An Angel; With Our Love; The Good Thing; Warning Sign; The Girls Want To Be With The Girls; Found A Job; Artists Only; I'm Not In Love; Stay Hungry; Take Me To The River; The Big Country.
- First released 1978
- UK peak chart position: 21
- USA peak chart position: 29

More, Anthony

b. Anthony Moore. UK-born vocalist, songwriter, keyboard player More was a founder member of the early 70s, German-based, progressive act Slapp Happy. Pieces From The Clouded Ballroom predated their founding, whereas Secrets Of The Blue Bag and Reed, Whistle And Sticks were recorded and released in tandem with Slapp Happy's debut, Sort Of. He left the group in 1975 when the remaining members opted to amalgamate with Henry Cow. The haunting Out ensued, after which More slipped from public view. He resumed recording in 1979 with Flying Doesn't Help, a breathtaking collection of gorgeous pop, crammed with hook-laden melodies and pithy, razor sharp lyrics. The set drew favourable comparison with the best of Kevin Ayers and John Cale. By contrast World Service exposed More's experimental side, with a largely downbeat atmosphere. Atonal guitar and bitter lyricism ensures that the album is a disquieting - but no less rewarding - experience. The Only Choice featured the assistance of Jimmie O'Neill (Fingerprintz/the Silencers) and former Slapp Happy vocalist Dagmar Krause. More's understated melodic gifts were still to the fore and where several tracks were enhanced by African rhythms, others featured found-sound tapes. The result was another compulsive set. Although his own recording career is currently in abeyance, More has occasionally worked as a producer, notably with acts revolving around the New York-based Golden Palominos.

● ALBUMS: Pieces From The Cloudland Ballroom (Polydor 1971)★★★, Secrets Of The Blue Bag (Polydor 1972)★★★, Reed, Whistle And Stocks (Polydor 1972)★★★★, Out (Virgin 1976)★★★★, Flying Doesn't Help (Quango 1979)★★★★, World Service (Do It 1981)★★★★, The Only Choice (Parlophone 1984)★★★.

Moré, Beny

b. Bartolomé Maximiliano Moré Gutiérrez, 24 August 1919, Santa Isabel de las Lajas, La Villas Province, Cuba, d. 19 February 1963. An outstanding singer ('his voice was like a bambo in the wind', said Cuban writer Miguel Barnet in 1984), bandleader, composer and arranger, the inimitable Moré, nicknamed 'El Bárbaro del Ritmo' (The Barbarian of Rhythm), is still idolized and the subject of tributes nearly three decades after his death. Beny worked with various groups, duos and trios before arriving in Havana in the early 40s. There he performed in the cafes and bars of the capital's bohemian society; sang with Cuarteto Cordero and Sexteto Cauto and debuted on Radio Mil Diez. In the mid-40s he joined the group of Miguel Matamoros (1894-1971; leader/composer/guitarist/vocalist; writer of the immortal 'Son de la Loma' and other classics), with whom he made his recording debut and travelled to Mexico. Matamoros returned to Cuba, but Moré remained and recorded prolifically with the orchestras of Cubans, Mariano Mercerón, Arturo Nuñez (with whom he had his first major hit 'Mucho Corazón') and Pérez Prado, and Mexican composer Rafael de Paz, among others. With Prado, he toured Mexico and performed at Carnival in Panama.

After his 1950 return to Cuba, Beny worked with the orchestras of Mariano Mercerón (again), Pacho Alonso, Fernando Alvarez and Bebo Valdés. In 1953, Moré organized a 21-piece aggregation which he named his Banda Gigante (Giant Band). Personnel included the great pianist/arranger Peruchín (Pedro Jústiz, 1913-1977), trumpeter Alfredo 'Chocolate' Armenteros, trombonist/arranger Generoso Jiménez and Beny's brother Delfin Moré. Moré and Banda Gigante had hit after hit and made a tremendous impact throughout the Latin Caribbean, Latin America and the North American Latino community. Salsa singer/songwriter and film star Rubén Blades, who was born and raised in Panama, said in 1986: 'Beny Moré for many reasons was a god-like man . . . this black man had a band of black guys who played as good as any white band anybody had ever seen in the movies, you know, the big bands from the North. We had never seen so many guys from Latin America playing with that authority. And Beny himself had a fantastic voice'. Beny was reputed to have led a bohemian and bawdy lifestyle, which included lengthy drinking-bouts. He died at the early age of 44, reportedly from cirrhosis of the liver.

More, Julian

b. 1929, England. A librettist and lyricist for some of the most successful British hit musical shows of the late 50s, More became interested in the theatre while at Cambridge University. He was involved as a performer and writer in undergraduate revues, and contributed the occasional item to the Watergate Theatre. In 1953 he wrote some material for the West End revue Airs On A Shoestring, which starred Max Adrian, Moyra Fraser and Betty Marsden. Two years later, he collaborated with composer James Gilbert for the Windsor Theatre production of a 'revusical', The World's The Limit, and in the following year, they had a smash hit with Grab Me A Gondola. Set at the Venice Film Festival, with the character of the film star heroine 'moulded' on Britain's Diana Dors, the show starred Joan Heal, Denis Quilley and June Wenham. It featured numbers such as 'That's My Biography', 'Cravin' For The Avon', 'A Man, Not a Mouse' and 'New To Me'. Even more successful was Irma La Douce (1958) for which More, with Monty Norman and David Heneker, provided the English book and lyrics translation to Marguerite Monnot's music. The story included such songs as 'Our Language Of Love' and 'Dis-Donc', and ran for 1,512 performances in London, and over 500 in New York. The More-Heneker-Norman team combined with Wolfe Mankowitz later in 1958 for Expresso Bongo. The 'most important British musical for years' starred Paul Schofield, Hy Hazell and James Kenny, and ran for nine months. The score, which included 'The Shrine On The Second Floor' and 'I've Never Had It So Good', virtually disappeared from the innovative 1960 film version starring Cliff Richard and Laurence Harvey. The lead in the road version was taken by Colin Hicks, the brother of Tommy Steele. London's theatrical scene was changing and More was unable to match previous achievements. Throughout the 60s and 70s his offerings included The Golden Touch (with Gilbert), The Art Of Living (his last collaboration with both Norman and Heneker), The Perils Of Scobie Prilt (with Norman), The Man From The West (with David Russell), Quick, Quick, Slow (Norman), Good Time Johnny (Gilbert), R Loves J (with Alexander Ferris) and Bordello (with Americans Al Frisch and Bernard Spiro). In 1979 he was back with Monty Norman for Songbook, 'a burlesque tale' of the work of the prolific songwriter Mooney Shapiro. Subsequently, More settled in France, with homes in Paris and Provence, and became a successful writer of travel books. Since then, he has re-emerged occasionally, and wrote the book and lyrics to Gilbert Becaud's music for the Broadway show Roza (1987), 'a maudlin and awkwardly constructed story with inferior songs'. He also adapted Abe Burrows' original book for a London revival of Cole Porter's Can-Can in 1988.

Morehouse, Chauncey

b. 11 March 1902, Niagara Falls, New York, USA, d. 31 October 1980, Medford, New Jersey, USA. Morehouse's early career found him playing drums, with his pianist father, in the pit at silent-movie theatres, from which he graduated to danceband work. In 1922 he joined the popular band led by Paul Specht, with whom he came to New York. His recordings with Frank Guarente's Georgians (a band drawn from the Specht group) attracted much favourable attention in the jazz world. After leaving Specht, Morehouse remained in New York, playing in the bands of Ted Weems and Howard Lanin. In 1925 he joined one of contractor Jean Goldkette's bands, this one at the Goldkette flagship ballroom, the Greystone in Detroit. In the Goldkette band, Morehouse accompanied major jazz artists such as Bix Beiderbecke and Frank Trumbauer, making records which became classics of their kind. After the Goldkette band folded, Morehouse returned to New York and in 1930 began a gradual drift into studio work, which is where he remained for the next three decades. He retired at the end of the 60s, but played occasionally thereafter with the New York Jazz Repertory Orchestra and a revived Goldkette band.

Moreira, Airto

b. 5 August 1941, Itaiopolis, Brazil. Moreira moved to Rio de Janeiro when he was 16 years old. In the 60s he played in a quartet with the pianist/flautist Hermeto Pascal, travelling the length and breadth of Brazil collecting and using over 120 percussion instruments. He moved to Los Angeles in 1968 and then to New York in 1970. He was a musician who managed to be in the right place at the right time; jazz was being opened up to the kind of extra rhythmic subtlety a second percussionist could offer. Moreira describes how 'you look and listen for your own place in the music - your own space - and then you start to make sounds . . . music is like a picture; it's not just sound'. He worked with Miles Davis in 1970 as he sought to establish the changes announced in Bitches Brew. He played percussion on the Weather Report debut album in 1971 and then worked with Chick Corea's Return To Forever. Since then he has worked with musicians ranging from tenor saxophonists Stan Getz and Gato Barbieri to the Grateful Dead's drummer Mickey Hart with whom he recorded the percussion soundtrack for Francis Ford Coppola's film Apocalypse Now. He worked most regularly with his wife Flora Purim. In the mid-80s he played with the Al DiMeola Project, with which he toured Europe. Moreira also began to lean towards world music, including his own native Brazilian traditions, recording with Hart, Zakir, Hussain, Babatunde Olatunji and T.H. Vinyakram as Planet Drum (whose album won a Grammy Award) and as part of the highly regarded Fourth World. He also released his successful solo album, The Other Side Of This, for Rykodisc, which again paired him with Hussain. The central appeal of this was the unfettered approach to improvising songs, all of which were unrehearsed. The sparkling, spontaneous performances of songs such as 'Dom Um' provided a further career highlight.

- ALBUMS: with Miles Davis At Fillmore (1970)★★★, Black Beauty (1970)★★, Live - Evil (1970)★★★★; Weather Report (1971)★★★, with Chick Corea Return To Forever (1972)★★★★, Fingers (1973)★★★, with Stan Getz Captain Marvel (1975)★★★, with Mickey Hart Rhythm Devils Play River Music (1980)★★★, with Flora Purim Colours Of Life (In & Out 1988)★★★★, Struck By Lightning (Virgin 1989)★★★, The Other Side Of This (Rykodisc 1992)★★★, with Fourth World Fourth World (Ronnie Scott's Jazz House 1992)★★, with the Gods Of Jazz Killer Bees (B&W 1993)★★★.

Morello, Joe

b. 17 July 1928, Springfield, Massachusetts, USA. After studying violin Morello turned to playing drums while still at school. He played locally, accompanying fellow high school student Phil Woods among others. In the early 50s he moved to New York, performing with many bands in a wide variety of musical settings, including the big band of Stan Kenton. He was, however, most often to be found playing in small groups, notably those led by guitarists Johnny Smith, Tal Farlow, Sal Salvador and Jimmy Raney, pianist Marian McPartland and singers Jackie Cain and Roy Kral. He first attracted wide attention when he joined the Dave Brubeck Quartet in 1956. He remained with Brubeck for 12 years and, Paul Desmond apart, was that band's most accomplished jazzman. Indeed, Morello's playing with Brubeck was exemplary in its unassertive precision which, allied to a remarkably delicate swing, provided object lessons during a period when jazz drumming was notable for its aggression. After leaving Brubeck in 1967 Morello, who was partially-sighted from childhood, was involved mostly in teaching. He occasionally led small groups in the 70s and also made a handful of records with Brubeck, McPartland and Salvador. An outstanding small group drummer, Morello's long stint with Brubeck, while giving him a highly visible presence, resulted in a considerable loss to the wider world of jazz.

- ALBUMS: with Marian McPartland Jazz at The Hickory House (1953)★★★★, with Tal Farlow The Tal Farlow Album (1954)★★★, with Dave Brubeck Jazz Impressions Of The USA (1956)★★★, with Brubeck Time Out (1959)★★★★, It's About Time (1961)★★★★, The Dave Brubeck Quartet At Carnegie Hall (1963)★★★★, The Dave Brubeck Quartet's 25th Anniversary Reunion (1976)★★★, with Sal Salvador Juicy Lucy (1978)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: All In Good Time, Marian McPartland.

Morells

Formed in Springfield, Missouri, USA, in 1982, the Morells recorded only one album, Shake And Push, on Borrowed Records. Although it never charted, this roots-rock group built a devoted following on the US alternative circuit. Consisting of bassist Lou Whitney (who had once performed with soul singer Arthur Conley), his wife Maralie (keyboards), D. Clinton Thompson (guitar) and Ron Gremp (drums), the group started in the late 70s as the Skeletons and then the Original Symptoms before settling in as the Morells, combining within their sound rockabilly, soul, blues and jazz. The group disbanded in the mid-80s. Lou Whitney went on to produce the debut album by New York rockers the Del-Lords before re-forming the Skeletons in 1988 with Thompson.

● ALBUMS: Shake And Push (Borrowed 1982)★★★.

Moreno, Buddy

b. Los Angeles, California, USA. Moreno began his musical apprenticeship in 1933 as a very young singer with the Griff Williams band, based in San Francisco. Healso contributed guitar to that band. His next destination was the orchestra led by Dick Jurgens. He recorded widely with Jurgens, appearing on many of his releases for OKeh Records in the early 40s as featured vocalist. By 1943 he had joined Harry James' band, again recording widely and also featuring in their MGM film appearances and radio shows. With such significant experience behind him, he felt ready to launch his own dance band in 1947, in Chicago. His vocalists included his wife, Perri Mitchell, while Frank Hudec would occasionally partner him as male lead. A 12-piece orchestra consisting of five reeds, four brass and three rhythm musicians, they worked heavily in the Midwest region of America. The band played its first New York dates in 1948 at the Paramount Theater. Other venues included the Muehlebach, the Peabody, the Roosevelt and the Chase in St. Louis where he was director of their house band for several years. He also appeared regularly on his own local television spot, The Buddy Moreno Show. By the late 60s he had all but abandoned bandleading to become a major radio personality on the WIL station, later becoming programme director at competing station WEW.

Morgan Heritage

Morgan Heritage initially consisted of Denroy Morgan's (b. *c.*1954, Spanish Town, Jamaica, West Indies) eight children. The line-up featured Jamaican-born drummer Denroy Junior (b. 1970) and lead guitarist Jeffrey (b. 1971). The remaining six siblings were born in New York, USA: vocalist and keyboard player Una (b. 1973), bass guitarist David (b. 1974), vocalists and keyboardists Roy (b. 1976) and Peter (b. 1977), rhythm guitarist Nakamyah (b. 1977) and percussionist Memmalatel (b. 1981). Morgan's interest in the music business began after witnessing the annual Junkanoo celebrations in 1965. His enthusiasm led to him following local artists, although the recording industry was still in its infancy. At 19 years of age, Denroy emigrated to the USA, where he formed the Mad Creators, performing US chart hits on the live circuit. By the early 70s Denroy had written his debut recording, 'Cheating', which inspired him to pursue a new direction with a new band, the Black Eagles. The group followed the session with 'I Come From Jamaica', which led to a recording contract with CBS Records. In 1977 a change of line-up ensued, and the group reappeared winning a talent show at the New York Reggae Festival. The group continued performing through to the 80s, releasing local hits including 'I'll Do Anything For You', 'Reggae' and 'Last Change'. The Morgan family were based in Brooklyn, New York, although the children were educated in Springfield, Massachusetts, returning home at weekends to practise in their father's studio. In 1992 Denroy introduced his family band Morgan Heritage on the international night at the Jamaican Reggae Sunsplash Festival, where they caused a sensation. The family group had spent time supporting Sister Carol and Judy Mowatt, appearing at prestigious venues including the Apollo Theatre, the Lincoln Centre and Brooklyn Academy Of Music, but the media hype surrounding this performance resulted in the band securing a major label contract. Recording sessions were greeted with indifference, however, in spite of the collection featuring guest performances from Nona Hendryx, and Donald Kinsey alongside Sly And Robbie performing 'Love Police', 'Mother Africa' and the title track. The band attracted increased interest with a series of popular singles including 'Rasta Know Seh', 'Chant We A Chant' and 'Return Of Jah Son'. The group has since performed at Reggae Sunsplash in 1995/6, Reggae Sumfest and Tony Rebel's acclaimed Solution event. By early 1997 the group's line-up had reduced to five, but success continued when they released further hit singles, including the King Jammy-produced collaboration with Lady Saw, 'Ladies', and 'Gimme A License', while Bobby Digital released 'Let's Make Up', 'Mama And Papa', 'Set Yourself Free' and 'People Are Fighting'. In 1997 the group embarked on a tour of Africa and Europe, securing a hit in the UK reggae chart with 'Pray For Love'.

● ALBUMS: Miracle (MCA 1994)★★, Protect Us Jah (VP 1997)★★★, One Calling (Greensleeves 1997)★★★★.

Morgan, Al

b. Albert Morgan, 19 August 1908, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 14 April 1974. The youngest of four Morgan brothers who all became professional musicians, he first played clarinet and drums before settling on the bass. Among his early engagements was one with his bandleading brother Isaiah (although he never worked with his more famous brother, Sam Morgan). He also played with Lee Collins and Davey Jones, and spent some time on riverboats under the leadership of Fate Marable. At the end of the 20s he went to New York where he recorded with Fats Waller, continuing to gig in the city for the next few years. During this period he played on the justly celebrated sides recorded by an all-star group under the nominal leadership of Billy Banks. The same year, 1932, he joined Cab Calloway, making records and films, then settled in Los Angeles where he played in bands led by Eddie Barefield and Les Hite and he also worked with Louis Armstrong. In the early 40s he played with Sabby Lewis for a couple of years, then with Louis Jordan, before returning to Lewis's band in Boston where he remained until the late 50s. Morgan then returned to the west coast, playing in several small groups including one led by Joe Darensbourg. A strong, highly rhythmic player in his younger days, Morgan's early style owed much to the post-New Orleans tradition of bass playing which he later adapted into a more fluid, subtler style.

Morgan, Cindy

b. Tennessee, USA. A contemporary Christian singer/songwriter with a penchant for pop-dance stylings, Cindy Morgan's reputation is built on her powerful, passionate vocal style and her renowned integrity as a writer. Not only has she composed the vast majority of her own material, but her songs have been recorded by Michael English, Sandi Patty, Bebe Winans and other stars of the 90s gospel scene. Frequently compared to Anita Baker by dint of her uproarious, committed singing style, Morgan grew up in a musical family in East Tennessee, where her father was an aspiring country songwriter (his song, 'Listen', became the title-track to Morgan's 1996 Word Records album). She made her debut for that label in 1992 with Real Life, a strong collection of songs about which Edwin Smith, of Rejoice magazine, wrote: 'Morgan's voice falls somewhere between Mariah Carey and Gloria Estefan, but she avoids being a sound-alike. On top of her unique singing abilities, Morgan is a prolific songwriter, addressing spiritual themes without speaking in the usual clichés. Add the hip hop sound of the streets and she could be the next voice to reach the youth with the message of the gospel.' 'I Will Be Free', included on the follow-up set, A Reason To Live, won a Dove Award from the Gospel Music Association for its shortform video as Morgan consolidated her position. 1996's Listen was just as purposeful, and, at times, insightful. It saw her move to a new working relationship with producer/writer Brent Bourgeois after amicably ending her long-term partnership with producer Mark Hammond. The Loving Kind was a concept album detailing the last week of the life of Christ.

● ALBUMS: Real Life (Word 1992),★★★★ A Reason To Live (Word 1994)★★★★, Listen (Word 1996)★★★, The Loving Kind (Word 1998)★★★★.

Morgan, Derrick

b. March 1940, Stewarton, Jamaica, West Indies. Morgan's recording career stretches back to the birth of the Jamaican record industry, *c.*1959-60. An imposing figure, invariably topped with an almost brimless porkpie hat, his cool, hip and rhythmic voice, enlivened by the occasional excited yelp, was successfully applied to a variety of styles in those formative years, such as the Latin beat of 'Fat Man' (1960), the gospel fervour of 'I Pray For You' (1961) and the shuffling R&B of his Jamaican Independence anthem, 'Forward March' (1962). He duetted with female singer Patsy on a series of Shirley And Lee-styled numbers, that duo being popular at the time in Jamaica, before settling into a ska style with 'Shake A Leg' (1962) and other recordings for Prince Buster. His split from Buster to join the Chinese-owned Beverley's Records led to an entertaining and successful exchange of insults on singles such as Morgan's 'Blazing Fire' and Buster's unequivocal 'Blackhead China Man' (Buster resented the idea of the Jamaican music industry being controlled by non-blacks). Morgan recorded prolifically throughout the 60s and into the 70s, recording rocksteady cuts such as 'Greedy Gal' (1967). He quickly became a very popular figure with reggae's UK skinhead followers. Around this time, his sight, always impaired, deteriorated to the extent where he could see only 'light and clouds', and he is now musically less active, though as recently as 1990 he travelled to London for a ska revival concert.

● ALBUMS: Forward March (Island 1963)★★★, Seven Letters (1969)★★★, Moon Hop (1970)★★★, In The Mood (Magnet 1974), Development (1975)★★★, People Decision (Third World 1977)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Blazing Fire Volumes 1 & 2 (1988)★★★★, I Am The Ruler (Trojan 1993)★★★, Ska Man Classics (Heartbeat 1995)★★★.

Morgan, Elaine

b. 11 February 1960, Cardiff, Wales A singer who has started to secure a place for her talent. Morgan started out by working in a Cardiff recording studio, supplying voice overs and vocals for jingles. Additionally, she supplied backing vocals for many of the recording artists using the studio, with the result that Robin Williamson recruited her to sing on his Ten Of Songs album. Her next break came, in 1985, when she was asked to play support, with her new band Rose Among Thorns, to Fairport Convention. Since then, she has worked with Ashley Hutchings and the Albion Band, and has toured the UK, as support to Ralph McTell, on a number of occasions. Morgan's first solo release, First Blush, was produced by Ashley Hutchings and Phil Beer. The recording also featured other members of the Albion Band. Elaine has also appeared, in an acting capacity, in numerous television series. Despite one or two changes of personnel, the current line-up of Rose Among Thorns is her husband Derek Morgan (b. 14 October 1953, Cardiff, Wales; bass), John Turner (b. 30 January 1949, Cardiff, Wales; drums), and Tim Gray (b. 2 August 1961, Abercynon, Mid-Glamorgan, Wales; lead guitar). Dave Dutfield (electric and acoustic guitar), who had earlier been with the group, left in January 1993, to return to teaching. With her strong vocals, the sound has taken the group outside of the confines of the purely folk spectrum, into the more mainstream, and commercial, market.

● ALBUMS: Masquerade-On The Wings Of Change (1988)★★★, First Blush (1989)★★, Changing Moods (1989)★★★, Rose Among Thorns (HTD 1991)★★★, This Time It's Real (1992)★★★.

Morgan, Frank

b. 23 December 1933, Minneapolis, Minnesota, USA. The west coast bebop altoist Frank Morgan's career was obscured for over 30 years by prison sentences for narcotics offences and it is only in recent times that his talents and imagination have been more widely displayed or discussed. Morgan began playing guitar under the tuition of his guitarist father then, after moving to Los Angeles in 1947, learned alto saxophone at LA's Jefferson High from the same teacher who taught Dexter Gordon, Wardell Gray and Don Cherry. He began on saxophone as a Charlie Parker admirer, then grew closer to the interpretation of his west coast contemporary, Art Pepper, whom he resembles in his sharply accented sounds, fragmented figures and blurted, episodic delivery. Morgan once told the American critic Francis Davis 'for me, prowess isn't as important as rapport' and he has always spaced out his statements with patience, artifice, a wide tonal palette and an avoidance of fireworks. At the age of 15 he won a television talent contest, which eventually led to a place in Lionel Hampton's band. He also recorded as a sideman with Ray Charles, Teddy Charles, Kenny Clarke and others before releasing his debut as leader, Introducing Frank Morgan, in 1955. Since 1953 Morgan's drug problems have resulted in several prison sentences.

Although largely absent from the jazz scene he did continue to play (mostly inside prison). Morgan returned to the outside jazz world in the mid-80s to startle audiences with his exhilarating Parker-inspired style. Morgan was over 50 before he made his second record, Easy Living, which introduced his sparkling bebop to a new generation of admirers. With further releases and tours to his credit, he is now recognized as one of the premier bebop altoists of the day. Interviewed in 1988 by Stan Woolley for Jazz Journal International, Morgan declared that he was 'one of the old purists and proud of it.' New albums and appearances on the international circuit have brought his strikingly inventive playing to the attention of a new and admiring audience. His recovery from the problems which beset him during more than half his lifetime is fortunate and he appears to be well aware of how much he has lost. In the same interview he spoke of the present and future, remarking, 'I just want to take time and absorb everything.'

● ALBUMS: Introducing Frank Morgan (1955)★★★, Easy Living (1985)★★★, Lament (Contemporary 1986)★★, Double Image (Contemporary 1987)★★★, Bebop Lives! (JVC 1987)★★★★, Quiet Fire (Contemporary 1987)★★★★, Major Changes (Contemporary 1987)★★★, Yardbird Suite (Contemporary 1989)★★★★, Reflections (Contemporary 1989)★★★, Mood Indigo (Antilles 1989)★★★, A Lovesome Thing (Antilles 1991)★★★, You Must Believe In Spring (Antilles 1992)★★★, Listen To The Dawn (Antilles 1994)★★★, Love, Lost & Found (Telarc 1995)★★★, Bop! (Telarc 1997)★★★★.

Morgan, George

b. 28 June 1924, Waverley, Tennessee, USA, d. 7 July 1975. Morgan was raised in Barberton, Ohio, and by the time he was nine, he was performing his own songs on guitar. He enlisted in the US Army during the war but was discharged three months later on medical grounds. He formed a band and found work on a radio station in Wooster, Ohio, and wrote 'Candy Kisses' after a broken romance. RCA showed an interest in Morgan, who performed 'Candy Kisses' on the Grand Ole Opry to great acclaim, but their tardiness led to US Columbia signing him instead. 'Candy Kisses' was a US country number 1 in 1949 despite competition from cover versions from Elton Britt, Red Foley and Eddie Kirk. However, there was friction between Morgan and Hank Williams, who regarded 'Candy Kisses' as 'stupid' and its singer 'a cross-eyed crooner'. Morgan, a crooner in the vein of Eddy Arnold, called his band the Candy Kids and he consolidated his reputation with 'Please Don't Let Me Love You', 'Room Full Of Roses', 'Almost', 'You're The Only Good Thing' and 'Mr. Ting-A-Ling (Steel Guitar Man)'. In 1953 Morgan became the first country performer to record with a symphony orchestra. In 1964 Morgan's duet of 'Slippin' Around' with Marion Worth was very successful, but by then Morgan was finding hits hard to come by. In 1967 he moved to Starday and then Nashville, Stop, US Decca and 4 Star, all with only minor successes. Morgan, a CB buff, suffered a heart attack while helping a friend install an aerial on his roof. Later that year, he celebrated his birthday at the Opry with the debut of his daughter, Lorrie. Within a few days he was undergoing open heart surgery but died on 7 July 1975. In 1979, a posthumous duet with Lorrie, 'I'm Completely Satisfied With You', made the US country charts.

● ALBUMS: Morgan, By George (Columbia 1957)★★★, Golden Memories (Columbia 1961)★★★, Tender Lovin' Care (Columbia 1964)★★★, with Marion Worth Slippin' Around (Columbia 1964)★★★, Red Roses For A Blue Lady (Columbia 1965)★★★, A Room Full Of Roses (Starday 1967)★★★, Candy Kisses (Starday 1967)★★★, Country Hits By Candlelight (Starday 1967)★★★, Steal Away (Starday 1968)★★★, Barbara (Starday 1968)★★★, Sounds Of Goodbye (Starday 1969)★★★, Misty Blue (Nashville 1969)★★★, George Morgan Sings Like A Bird (Stop 1969)★★★, The Real George (Stop 1969)★★★, Red Roses From The Blue Side Of Town (Decca 1974)★★★, A Candy Mountain Melody (Deccaq 1974)★★★, George Morgan - From This Moment On (4-Star 1975)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (Starday 1970)★★★, Remembering The Greatest Hits (Columbia 1975)★★★, George Morgan - Country Souvenirs Of The 1950s (1990), Room Full Of Roses: The Best Of George Morgan (Razor & Tie 1996)★★★★, Candy Kisses 8-CD box set (Bear Family 1996)★★★★.

Morgan, Helen

b. Helen Riggins, 2 August 1900, Danville, Ohio, USA, d. 8 October 1941, Chicago, Illinois, USA. One of the first, and certainly one of the most accomplished torch singers in the history of popular music. After working at a number of unskilled jobs, Morgan began singing in small Chicago clubs. She graduated to revue, appearing in New York in George White's Scandals (1925), and Americana (1926) in which she was noticed by Florenz Ziegfeld, who signed her to play the role of Julie La Verne in the original production of Jerome Kern's Show Boat (1927). Her performance of 'Bill' (lyric by P.G. Wodehouse and Oscar Hammerstein II) was a show-stopper. In fact, the song had been cut from Oh Lady! Lady!! (1918) and Zip, Goes A Million (1919), before Morgan gave it immortality in Show Boat. In the same show she also sang 'Can't Help Lovin Dat Man', and, 10 years later, introduced 'Why Was I Born?' and 'Don't Ever Leave Me' in another Kern-Hammerstein show, Sweet Adeline. She later appeared on Broadway in Ziegfeld Follies (1931) and the 1932 revival of Show Boat, and was in the 1929 and 1936 screen versions of Show Boat. Here other film appearances included Applause, Roadhouse Nights, Glorifying The American Girl, Marie Galante, You Belong To Me, Sweet Music, Go Into Your Dance, and Frankie And Johnny (1936). As well as the above songs from the shows, she had several hit records in the late 20s and early 30s, such as 'A Tree In The Park', 'Mean To Me', 'Body And Soul'. She is also particularly remembered for her version of George and Ira Gershwin's 'The Man I Love'. By the late 30s her career was in disarray and she was heavily dependent upon alcohol. As owner of a number of Prohibition-era speakeasies she had ready access to liquor and her health rapidly deteriorated until she died of cirrhosis of the liver. Her life story was the subject of a 1957 biopic, The Helen Morgan Story (UK title: Both Ends Of The Candle), in which she was played by Ann Blyth. In 1998, with Show Boat back in the West End, Helen Morgan's unique interpretations of 'Bill' and 'Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man', along with other ballad classics such as 'Why Was I Born', were re-issued on a celebratory album.

● ALBUMS: Helen Morgan (Audio Rarities 1962)★★★, The Glory Of Helen Morgan (MCI 1998)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Helen Morgan, Her Life And Legend, Gilbert Maxwell.

Morgan, Jane

b. Jane Currier, 1920, Boston, Massachusetts, USA. A popular singer with a clear, strong voice and an ability to sing in several languages, Morgan was accepted in many parts of the world during the 50s and 60s. Raised in Florida, she trained as a lyric soprano at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, supplementing her income by singing in night-clubs. At one of them, she was spotted by the French impresario Bernard Hilda, who offered her a contract to sing in Paris. Within weeks of arriving in France she became a major attraction and, during the next few years became established throughout Europe. On her return to the USA, she was billed as 'The American Girl From Paris', and appeared successfully on television and in night-clubs. Signed for Kapp Records, she had a minor hit in 1956 with 'Two Different Worlds', one of the several tracks she recorded with pianist Roger Williams.

In the following year she had a million seller with 'Fascination', adapted from the old French number 'Valse Tzigane', with an English lyric by Dick Manning, which became the theme for the Cary Grant-Audrey Hepburn movie Love In The Afternoon. Despite the rock 'n' roll revolution, she continued to be successful, especially in Europe, and in 1958, she had a UK number 1 with Gilbert Becaud and Carl Sigman's 'The Day The Rains Came'. Her French version of the song was on the b-side. Among her other hits in the early 60s, were 'If Only I Could Live My Life Again', 'With Open Arms' and 'Romantica', and her 1957 album, Fascination, made the US Top 20. Morgan's husband, Jerry Weintraub, was instrumental in Elvis Presley's re-emergence in the early 70s, and managed several top US singers such as John Denver.

● ALBUMS: Fascination (Kapp 1957)★★★★, All The Way (Kapp 1958)★★★, Something Old, New Borrowed, Blue (Kapp 1958)★★★, Great Songs From The Great Shows Of The Century Kapp 1958)★★★, Jane Morgan (Kapp 1958)★★★, The Day The Rain Came (Kapp 1958)★★★, Broadway In Stereo (Kapp 1959)★★★, Jane In Spain (Kapp 1959)★★, Jane Morgan Time (Kapp 1959)★★★★, The Ballads Of Lady Jane (London 1960)★★★, The Second Time Around (London 1961)★★★, At The Coconut Grove (London 1962)★★, What Now My Love (London 1962)★★★, Love Makes The World Go Round (London 1963)★★★, Jane Morgan Serenades The Victors (Colpix 1963)★★★, In My Style (Columbia 1965)★★, Fresh Flavour (Epic 1966)★★★.

Morgan, Jaye P.

b. Mary Margaret Morgan, 1932, Mancos, Colorado, USA. Morgan performed with the Morgan Family Variety Troupe until her father's death in 1945. At 18, her voice had matured to the husky contralto that would land her a job as featured singer with Frank de Vol's orchestra and then that of Hank Penny, an RCA recording artist. Through Penny, the company signed Morgan who reached a wider audience during two years of weekly radio exposure on New York's Robert Q. Lewis Show and, less regularly, on the nationally transmitted Stop The Music. After 'That's All I Want From You' came close to topping the US chart in 1954, 'Danger! Heartbreak Ahead', 'The Longest Walk' and 'Pepper-Hot Baby' were smashes the following year - as were 'Chee Chee Oo Chee' and 'Two Lost Souls' (from Broadway musical Damn Yankees) - duets with Perry Como. However, a link-up on record with Eddy Arnold proved a flop, and that Christmas, 'If You Don't Want My Love' barely scraped into the Top 40. Subsequently, though still planting feet in both the C&W and pop camps, only 1959's 'Are You Lonesome Tonight' and a 1960 version of Johnny Cash's 'I Walk The Line' could be even remotely classed as 'hits'. Nevertheless, established as an all-American showbusiness 'personality', she would appear on television variety spectaculars and talk programmes as late as the mid-80s.

● ALBUMS: with Kaye Ballard Long-Time Friends (Original Cast Records 1996)★★.

Morgan, Lanny

b. Harold Lansford Morgan, 30 March 1934, Des Moines, Iowa, USA. As a child he played violin before taking up the alto saxophone. When he was 10 his family moved to Los Angeles and he continued his studies. As a young man he played in big bands including those led by Charlie Barnet, Terry Gibbs and Bob Florence, then settled for a while in New York where he worked with Maynard Ferguson. Back on the west coast he played and recorded with several bands including Supersax and that led by Bill Berry. In addition to performing, Morgan also developed a reputation as a teacher. Since the mid-80s he had played mostly in small groups and has toured Europe and the UK as a single. A hard blowing saxophonist, with a crisply incisive tone, Morgan is a commanding musician and is much respected by his peers.

● ALBUMS: Maynard Ferguson Sextet (1965)★★★★, with Bill Berry Hello Rev (Concord 1976)★★★, with Supersax Dynamite! (1978)★★★★, It's About Time (Pausa 1981)★★★, with Jeff Hamilton Indiana (1982)★★★.

Morgan, Lee

b. 10 July 1938, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 19 February 1972. Prodigiously talented, Morgan played trumpet professionally at the age of 15 and three years later joined Dizzy Gillespie's big band. During this same period he recorded with John Coltrane, Hank Mobley and others. In 1958 the Gillespie band folded and Morgan joined Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers where he made a tremendous impact not only nationally but around the world, thanks to the group's recordings. In the early 60s Morgan returned to his home town, where he played in comparative obscurity, but by 1963 he was back in New York, leading his own groups and also working for a while with Blakey in 1964. Morgan's popularity was enhanced by the success of a recording of his own composition, the irresistibly catchy 'The Sidewinder' which helped to spark a jazz/funk mini-boom and has remained a dance floor favourite ever since. Morgan's trumpet style was marked by his full-blooded vitality aided by the richness of his tone. Playing with the strictly-controlled Blakey band impacted his natural enthusiasm and the resulting tensions created some of the best hard-bop trumpet playing of the period. Indeed, despite the passage of time and the many fine trumpeters to have entered jazz in his wake, only a handful have attained Morgan's remarkable standards of emotional virtuosity. In the late 60s, Morgan's career was damaged for a while by personal problems, but a female friend helped him recover. Unfortunately, this same woman became jealous of a new relationship he had formed and on 19 February 1972 she shot and killed him at the New York nightclub, where his quintet were performing.

● ALBUMS: Introducing Lee Morgan (Savoy 1956)★★★, Lee Morgan Indeed (Blue Note 1956)★★★, Lee Morgan Volume 2 (Blue Note 1957)★★★, with Hank Mobley Hank's Shout (1956)★★★★, City Lights (Blue Note 1957)★★★, Lee Morgan Volume 3 (Blue Note 1957)★★★, with John Coltrane Blue Train (1957)★★★★, The Cooker (Blue Note 1958)★★★★, Peckin' Time (1958)★★★, Candy (Blue Note 1959)★★★, with Thad Jones Minor Strain (1960)★★★, Lee-Way (Blue Note 1960)★★★, Heres Lee Morgan (Vee Jay 1960)★★★, Expoobident (Vee Jay 1960)★★★, Indestructible Lee (Affinity 1960)★★★, with Art Blakey The Freedom Rider (1961)★★★, Take Twelve (Jazzland 1962)★★★, The Sidewinder (Blue Note 1963)★★★★★, Search For The New Land (Blue Note 1964)★★★, Tom Cat (Blue Note 1964)★★★, Cornbread (Blue Note 1965)★★★★, The Rumproller (Blue Note 1965)★★★★, Lee Morgan Quintet (Vee Jay 1965), Infinity (1965)★★★★, with Mobley Dippin' (1965)★★★, The Cat (1965)★★★, Delightfulee Morgan (Blue Note 1966)★★★, Charisma (Blue Note 1966)★★★, The Rajah (Blue Note 1966)★★★, The Procrastinator (1967)★★★, Caramba (1968)★★★, The Sixth Sense (Blue Note 1969), Live At The Lighthouse (Fresh Sound 1970)★★★, Capra Beach (1971)★★★, We Remember You (Fresh Sound 1972)★★★, Standards 1967 recording (Blue Note 1998)★★★.

Morgan, Lorrie

b. Loretta Lynn Morgan, 27 June 1959, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. The youngest daughter of country crooner and Grand Ole Opry star George Morgan, she followed in her father's footsteps. She naturally began singing with Dad and made her own Opry debut at the age of 13 at the old Ryman Auditorium, where her rendition of 'Paper Roses' gained her a standing ovation. After her father's death in 1975, she worked as a backing singing with George Jones's roadshow and for a time was married to Ron Gaddis, who played steel guitar in Jones's band. In 1979, she scored her first minor chart successes with 'Two People In Love' and 'Tell Me I'm Only Dreaming', as well as with a duet recording made earlier with her late father, 'I'm Completely Satisfied With You'. The same year, she had a daughter but her marriage ended and, tiring of life on the road, she basically retired. In 1984, the lure of the music enticed her back; she became a member of the Opry and relaunched her career. She met and married singer Keith Whitley in 1986 but the marriage ended when Whitley's heavy drinking finally took his life in May 1989 (she later recorded a tribute to Whitley, 'If You Came Back From Heaven', which appeared on her 1994 album War Paint). In 1988, she joined RCA and had a Top 20 hit with 'Trainwreck Of Emotion', but it was a number 9 weepy, 'Dear Me', entering the charts just a few weeks before Whitley's death, that finally established her as a major star. In 1990, she achieved her first number 1 with 'Five Minutes' and from that point, she has registered a regular stream of hit recordings. They include 'Til A Tear Becomes A Rose' (a duet made with Whitley), 'Except For Monday' and 'A Picture Of Me Without You' (a brave and very successful cover version of a 1972 George Jones hit) on RCA. A change of label to BNA in 1992, immediately produced a number 2 with 'Watch Me' and a further number 1 with 'What Part Of Me'. She is equally at home with up-tempo numbers or with ballads that call for the 'big voice' technique, such as her brilliant recording of 'Something In Red', which peaked at number 14. She attempted something different in 1993, when she recorded a Christmas album that had the New World Philharmonic Orchestra providing the music and featured duets with Tammy Wynette, Andy Williams and Johnny Mathis (the music was recorded in London and the vocals added in Nashville, Branson or L.A.). In 1993, she gained a Top 10 hit with 'Half Enough' and a minor placement for her version of 'Crying Time', which came from the movie The Beverly Hillbillies. In 1995, the release of Greatest Hits led to further chart successes. 'I Didn't Know My Own Strength' gave her another number 1 and soon afterwards, 'Back In Your Arms Again', a Fred Knobloch/Paul Davis song, with a catchy chorus, peaked at number 4. Her stunning version of 'Standing Tall', a Larry Butler/Ben Peters song that Billie Jo Spears had taken to number 15 in 1980, followed. A video of her singing the number, actually filmed on the stage of the old Ryman Auditorium home of the Opry, gained her recording major exposure on CMT and probably represents her best vocal performance since 'Something In Red'. There seems little doubt that Morgan will easily beat her father's record of 35 country chart entries, unless she is lost to country music in favour of the bright lights and highly paid circuits of venues such as Las Vegas.

● ALBUMS: Leave The Light On (RCA 1989)★★★, Something In Red (RCA 1991)★★★, Watch Me (BNA 1992)★★★★, Merry Christmas From London (BNA 1993)★★, War Paint (BNA 1994)★★★, Greater Need (BNA 1996)★★★, Shakin' Things Up (BNA 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (BNA 1995)★★★★, Super Hits (BNA 1998)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: War Paint - Video Hits (1994), I Didn't Know My Own Strength (1995).

Morgan, Mike

b. 30 November 1959, Dallas, Texas, USA. Morgan was a motorcycle racer before applying himself seriously to playing blues guitar. He wears an eyepatch over his right eye as the result of a racing crash, making his appearance rather piratical. His band, the Crawl, was formed in the mid-80s with harmonica player Lee McBee. The band's repertoire placed them alongside Anson Funderburgh And The Rockets and Ronnie Earl's Broadcasters and successive albums have not seen any concerted stylistic change. In line with the James Harman and William Clarke bands, they have experimented with an acoustic approach without much success. Morgan stopped touring with the band in the early 90s. His 1994 collaboration with Jim Suhler of Monkey Beat pitted his more traditional stance against Suhler's post-SRV thrash without complete success.

● ALBUMS: Raw & Ready (Black Top 1990)★★★, Mighty Fine Dancin' (Black Top 1991)★★, Full Moon Over Dallas (Black Top 1992)★★★, Ain't Worried No More (Black Top 1994)★★★, with Jim Suhler Let The Dogs Run (Black Top 1994)★★, Looky Here (Black Top 1996)★★★★, The Road (Black Top 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Lowdown And Evil (Black Top 1996)★★★.

Morgan, Russ

b. 29 April 1904, Scranton, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 7 August 1969. A popular bandleader, particularly during the 30s and 40s, who also wrote several durable songs, Morgan worked as a coalminer to finance his music lessons, becoming proficient on trombone and piano, as well as developing into a good arranger. After playing piano in local theatres, he switched to trombone, and in 1921 joined Billy Lustig's Scranton Sirens. He moved to New York in the early 20s and arranged for Victor Herbert and John Philip Sousa, then toured Europe with the Paul Specht band. In 1926 he joined Jean Goldkette in Detroit as an arranger, and then served briefly as musical director for radio station WXYX in Detroit. He spent the late 20s and early 30s in New York, and arranged for top names, Fletcher Henderson, Chick Webb, Louis Armstrong, the Dorsey Brothers and the Boswell Sisters, and wrote for Harlem's Cotton Club revues.

In 1934 he joined Freddy Martin as trombonist-arranger, and developed his distinctive muted, wah-wah style. He formed his own hotel-style band in 1935 with the aid of Rudy Vallee, and played important engagements at the Biltmore Hotels in New York and Los Angeles, and the Edgewater Hotel in Chicago. Morgan developed a very relaxed, easy style as a leader, along with his distinctive smooth singing voice, which was particularly effective on radio. With his tag-line, 'Music In The Morgan Manner', and his theme, 'Does Your Heart Beat For Me?', he featured on network radio in The Rinso Show, The Lifebuoy Show, and The Philip Morris Program. During the early part of World War II he lived on the west coast, playing a long engagement at the Claremont Hotel, Berkeley, California, and in 1946 he went into the Biltmore Bowl for a two-year run, and made several tours of eastern USA.

He had been recording with his own band since 1935, and had a string of US Top 10 hits through to 1948, including, 'Tidal Wave', 'Love Me Forever', 'In A Little Gypsy Tea Room', 'I'm In A Dancing Mood', 'When The Poppies Bloom Again', 'The Merry-Go-Round Broke Down' (number 1), 'Stop! You're Breaking My Heart', 'So Many Memories', 'Farewell My Love', 'The Dipsy Doodle', 'I Double Dare You', 'Bei Mir Bist Du Shoën', 'Will You Remember Tonight Tomorrow ?', 'I've Got A Pocketful Of Dreams' (number 1), 'Lambeth Walk', 'Wishing (Will Make It So)', 'Goodnight Wherever You Are', 'Dance With A Dolly (With A Hole In Her Stocking)', 'There Goes That Song Again' and 'I'm Looking Over A Four Leaf Clover'. Morgan was steady, rather than sensational, so it is not clear why, in 1949, he should suddenly become the year's number 1 recording artist, with hits such as 'Forever And Ever' (number 1), 'So Tired', 'Sunflower', 'Johnson Rag' and 'Cruising Down The River' (number 1, and the winner of a UK amateur songwriting contest, and his only million-seller). Morgan's own catalogue of songs, co-written with various composer-lyricists included 'Somebody Else Is Taking My Place', 'Flower Of Dawn', 'Please Think Of Me', 'Sweet Eloise', 'You're Nobody 'Till Somebody Loves You', 'So Tired', 'Does Your Heart Beat For Me?', 'So Long' (his closing theme), 'Whisper', 'California Orange Blossom', 'Don't Cry Sweetheart', 'Goodnight Little Angel' and 'It's All Over But The Crying'.

During the 50s Morgan appeared extensively on television, and had his own show in 1956 which featured ex-Jimmy Dorsey vocalist Helen O'Connell. Despite the general demise of the big bands he maintained his 17-piece unit until 1960, when he reorganized, and with a 12-piece unit played dates around Los Angeles. In 1965 he made his home in Las Vegas, and played regularly at 'The Top Of The Strip' in the Dunes Hotel. His band was still playing there when he died in 1969, after a short illness following a stroke. His son Jack, who had been with the band for 10 years, replaced him as leader.

● COMPILATIONS: One Night Stand (1982)★★★, Music In The Morgan Manner (1987)★★★, Golden Favorites (1988)★★, The Best Of Russ Morgan (1988)★★★, Russ Morgan And His Orchestra 1937-38 (1988)★★★★, The Memory Lingers On (1989)★★★.

Morgan, Sam

b. *c.*1895, Bertrandville, Louisiana, USA, d. 25 February 1936. Immensely popular in and around New Orleans, trumpeter Morgan's career was dogged by ill-health. Nevertheless, he achieved lasting fame thanks to some classic recordings made in 1927 which showed his to be a band of great style and attack, playing in the New Orleans manner. The band survived changing fashions but, following Morgan's second stroke, broke up in 1933. Morgan had two musical brothers: Isiah, who also played trumpet, and Al, who played bass with numerous bands including those of Cab Calloway, Fats Waller and Les Hite and also worked with Louis Armstrong, Louis Jordan and Sabby Lewis.

● COMPILATIONS: with others The Sound Of New Orleans (1925-45)★★★, The Get Happy Band (1927)★★★.

Morillo, Erick 'More'

b. c.1971, USA. Morillo started DJing at the age of 11, playing sets in his local New Jersey that matched ragga with techno (a precursor to the sound of Reel 2 Real). As a student at New York's Centre For The Media Arts, he started collecting studio equipment, and became a self-taught maestro. He graduated to recording his own material by sampling Jamaican toasters on to DAT. One night a gentleman came forward from the crowd to enquire as to the source of a particular sampled voice. It transpired that the questioner, known as General, was the owner of said layrnx. Together they went on to record 'The Funky Buddha' and Move It album for RCA. Influenced by old school Chicago house like Lil' Louis, Todd Terry and Kenny 'Dope' Gonzalez, Morillo has gone on to build his own studio, Double Platinum, where Little Louie Vega's Hardrive EP and Barbara Tucker's 'Deep Inside' were recorded. His own productions included Deep Soul's 'Rhythms' (which featured future Smooth Touch collaborator Althea McQueen). He tried to get work at Nervous but was continually turned down by A&R head Gladys Pizarro. On the day he tried Strictly Rhythm instead Pizarro had just been installed in their offices, and this time she relented. He has gone on to be one of the leading lights of the Strictly Rhythm empire, for whom he released over 25 records, under nearly as many pseudonyms, within 1993 alone (His first release on the label having been Reel 2 Real's debut). Among his productions were Deep Soul's 'Rhythm', RAW's 'Unbe', Smooth Touch's 'Come And Take A Trip' and Club Ultimate's 'Carnival 93'. He was also represented by albums in 1994 by Deep Soul and Reel 2 Real (whose 'I Like To Move It' and 'Go On Move' were both massive worldwide hits), and recorded his own More EP. Part of the secret of Morillo's success may lie in his refusal to simply sample current rhythms and beats, preferring instead to write his own drum patterns and arrangements. He is nicknamed 'More' due to everybody connected being astonished at the number of different mixes he would put on to each of his releases.

Morissette, Alanis

b. Nadine Morissette, 1 June 1974, Ottawa, Toronto, Canada. Morissette enjoyed considerable critical and public acclaim in her native Canada before that success began to translate to international audiences in the mid-90s. An accomplished singer, dancer and pianist, she began writing her own material at the age of nine. She then achieved her first domestic hit single at the age of 10 ('Faith Stay With Me'). The single led to a publishing deal four years later, but she now dismisses her first two albums where she was pushed very strongly in a pop rock direction. Worldwide recognition followed her move to Madonna's Maverick Records in 1994, by which time she was based in Los Angeles with musical collaborator Glen Ballard (previously co-writer of Michael Jackson's 'Man In The Mirror'). A tape was passed to Maverick by the mixer Jimmy Boyelle. Her third album, Jagged Little Pill, was composed almost entirely of those unadulterated demo tracks. It earned rave reviews across America for her confrontational poise and loaded lyrics, reaching number 1in the Billboard album charts. It included an appearance by friends the Red Hot Chili Peppers on 'You Oughta Know', which featured her most quoted lyric: 'Is she perverted like me?/Would she go down on you in a theater?' As Morissette surmised: 'I have a difficult time socially, emotionally and musically because I like to communicate on an overwhelmingly intense level. To get it all out, I write as an overt, aggressive woman.' Just about every music industry award was won by Morissette in 1995 in what was an extraordinary year. In the USA alone by 1997 Jagged Little Pill was certified as achieving 15 million sales.

● ALBUMS: Alanis (MCA Canada 1990)★★, Now Is The Time (MCA Canada 1992)★★★, Jagged Little Pill (Maverick/Reprise 1995)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Alanis Morissette: Death Of Cinderella, Stuart Coles. Ironic - Alanis Morissette: The True Story, Barry Grills.

Morley, Angela

In the 50s, 60s and into the 70s, Wally Stott was a highly respected conductor, arranger and composer on the UK music scene. In the early 70s he underwent a sex-change operation, and was subsequently known professionally as Angela Morley. Stott was born in 1924 in Sheffield, England. He attended the same Mexboro school as Tony Mercer, who went on to become one of the principal singers with the Black And White Minstrel Show. Mercer sang and played the piano accordion, while Stott concentrated on the saxophone. On leaving school, they each spent some time with Archie's Juveniles and Oscar Rabin's Band. Stott's route to Rabin was via the bands of Billy Merrin and Bram Martin. By 1944, after some years with the Rabin Band, Stott was leading the saxophone section on alto, and had become the band's sole arranger: a great future was already being forecast for him. Stott's next move was to Geraldo, with whom he stayed for about four years, leaving in late 1948 to 'pursue arranging and film music work, which he is to make his future career'. He still managed to find the time to play the saxophone for outfits such as Jack Nathan's Coconut Grove Orchestra. In the early 50s Stott joined Philips Records, and soon became one of their key arrangers, along with Peter Knight and Ivor Raymonde. During the next 20 years he arranged and conducted for some of the UK's most popular artists, such as Frankie Vaughan ('Green Door', 'The Garden Of Eden' and 'The Heart Of A Man'), Anne Shelton ('Lay Down Your Arms' and My Heart Sings), Harry Secombe ('This Is My Song'), the Beverley Sisters ('Somebody Bad Stole De Wedding Bell' and 'Happy Wanderer'), Roy Castle (Newcomer), Ronnie Carroll ('Say Wonderful Things' and Carroll Calling), the Kaye Sisters ('Paper Roses'), Shirley Bassey ('Banana Boat Song' and 'As I Love You'), Muriel Smith ('Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me'), the Polka Dots (Nice Work & You Can Buy It) and many more, plus a few 'foreigners', too, as on Mel Tormé Meets The British (1959). Stott also made several of his own instrumental albums, sometimes augmented by a vocal chorus. He began writing music early in his career, and his first significant piece came to light in November 1954, when Hancock's Half Hour began. It proved to be one of BBC Radio's most popular programmes, later moving to television, and its opening theme, played on a tuba over Tony Hancock's stuttering introduction, was composed by Stott. He also wrote and arranged the show's instrumental links, and conducted the orchestra for many other radio programmes, including The Last Goon Show Of All. Stott composed numerous pieces of mood music for London publishers, especially Chappell's, which included 'A Canadian In Mayfair' (dedicated to Robert Farnon, who gave Stott valuable advice on arranging and composition), 'Mock Turtles', 'Quiz', 'Travelling Along', 'Miss Universe', 'Flight By Jet', 'Casbah', 'Commenwealth March', 'Practice Makes Perfect', 'China', 'Focus On Fashion' and 'Skylight'. In the late 60s and early 70s, Stott wrote the music for several films, including The Looking Glass War, Captain Nemo And The Underwater City and When Eight Bells Toll, and for television productions such as Hugh And I, and the The Maladjusted Busker. Around that time, credits began to be given in the name of Angela Morley, and these include two Academy Award nominations, for her arrangements of Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's score for The Little Prince (1974), and Richard M. and Robert B. Shermans' score for The Slipper And The Rose (1977). Morley also composed for the animated feature Watership Down, the Italian production La Colina Dei Comali, and for televison films such as Friendships, Secrets And Lies, Madame X, Summer Girl, Two Marriages and Threesome (1984). Most of this work has been completed in the USA, where Morley is reported to have been living for most of the last 20 years.

● ALBUMS: Wally Stott Tribute To George Gershwin (Parlophone 1955)★★★★, Tribute To Irving Berlin (Parlophone 1956)★★★, Tribute To Jerome Kern (Parlophone 1957)★★★★, London Pride (1959)★★★, Chorale In Concert (1967)★★, Christmas By The Fireside (1969)★★.

Morning

Formed in Los Angeles, California, USA, in 1970, Morning, originally known as Morning And Evening, consisted of Jim Hobson (keyboards, vocals), Jay Lewis (guitar, vocals), an ex-member of Love under the name Jay Donnellan, Barry Brown (guitar, drums), Jim Kehn (guitar, drums), Terry Johnson (guitar) and Bruce Wallace (bass). After the country rock album Morning, Johnson and Wallace left and in came bassist Stuart Brotman, lately of Kaleidoscope. Struck Like Silver sounded similar to Morning, and consisted of original songs by Lewis and intelligent versions of material by Joni Mitchell and Hoyt Axton. However the group split up soon after its release, with Hobson joining Delaney Bramlett and Lewis enjoying a fruitful period with Albert Hammond.

● ALBUMS: Morning (Vault 1971),★★★ Struck Like Silver (Fantasy 1972)★★.

Moroccos

This R&B vocal ensemble were from Chicago, Illinois, USA. With the impassioned lead work of the great Sollie McElroy (d. 1995), the Moroccos proved to be one of the finest doo-wop groups to come out of Chicago. They formed in 1952, and by 1954, when they were signed to United Records, the line-up consisted of Ralph Vernon (lead), George Prayer (d. 1992; baritone), Melvin Morrow (d. 1982; tenor), and Fred Martin (d. 1986; bass). Only after they added the ex-lead of the Flamingos, Sollie McElroy, did United release their recordings. The Moroccos' remake of the Harold Arlen/E.Y. 'Yip' Harburg tune, 'Somewhere Over The Rainbow' (1955), gave the group their biggest sales, but only regionally. Other fine regional hits were 'Pardon My Tears' (1955), 'What Is A Teen-Ager's Prayer' (1956) and 'Sad Sad Hours' (1957). On the latter, George Prayer had been replaced with Calvin Baron from the Sun Ra organization. The Moroccos broke up in 1957. In 1966 soul singer Joe Simon had a big hit with 'Teenager's Prayer', a remake of the Moroccos' song.

Moross, Jerome

b. 1 August 1913, Brooklyn, New York, USA, d. 25 July 1983, Miami, Florida, USA. A highly regarded composer who wrote symphonic works as well as scores for films and Broadway shows. After graduating from New York University at the age of 18, Moross contributed some incidental music to the theatre, and then composed most of the score for the short-lived Broadway revue Parade in 1935. Later in that same year he was engaged by George Gershwin as assistant conductor and pianist for the last few weeks of the New York run of Porgy And Bess, and subsequently for the west coast production. Moross moved to Hollywood in 1940 and spent the next decade orchestrating scores for a great many films, including Our Town, Action In The North Atlantic and Conflict. He also worked on Hugo Friedhofer's Oscar-winning score for The Best Years Of Our Lives (1946). In 1948 he was given the opportunity to compose his own original score for Close-Up, which was followed during the 50s and 60s by others such as When I Grow Up, Captive City, The Sharkfighters, Hans Christian Andersen (ballet music only), Seven Wonders Of The World (with David Raksin and Sol Kaplan), The Proud Rebel, The Jayhawkers, The Adventures Of Huckleberry Finn (1960), The Mountain Road, Five Finger Exercise, The Cardinal, The War Lord, Rachel Rachel, Valley Of The Gwang! and Hail, Hero! (1969). His most acclaimed work during that time was undoubtedly for William Wyler's dramatic western, The Big Country (1958), for which he was nominated for an Academy Award. The music, and particularly its electrifying main theme, is considered to be among the most memorable in the history of the cinema. His work was also heard regularly on television in such popular programmes as Lancer and Wagon Train. On Broadway, Moross collaborated twice with the author and librettist John Latouche, firstly in 1948 for Ballet Ballads, a musical adaptation of three one-act plays, and again in 1954, for the innovative The Golden Apple, which, although it folded after only 127 performances, won the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for best musical, and has since become a cult piece. One of its songs, the ballad 'Lazy Afternoon', has been recorded by several artists, including Tony Bennett. During his long and distinguished career, Moross also won two Guggenheim fellowship awards, in 1947 and 1948. He brought his own individual brand of folksy homespun Americana to his music for ballets such as American Patterns, The Last Judgement and Frankie And Johnny, along with numerous orchestral works which included 'Biguine', 'A Tall Story', 'Paeans', 'Those Everlasting Blues' and 'First Symphony'. His last completed work was a one-act opera, Sorry, Wrong Number!

Morphine

Purveyors of quite startling, low-end alternative rock/jazz, US trio Morphine are one of the few bands in the field who do not use guitars. Even vocalist Mark Sandman's bass is a rudimentary affair, composed of only two strings. Together with Dana Colley (baritone saxophone) and Jerome Deupree (drums), the group was inaugurated by Sandman and Colley after the break-up the former's previous outfit, Treat Her Right. After playing a few tentative gigs they released their debut album, which, probably because no one had heard anything quite like it before, won many admirers. Their local community honoured them when they picked up Indie Debut Album Of The Year at the Boston Music Awards. Following its release Deupree departed, to be replaced by former Treat Her Right drummer Billy Conway. On the back of the attention they were receiving they secured a contract with Rykodisc, while the band's music continued to be more influenced by literature, notably Jim Thompson, than musical peers. They came of age with Yes in 1995, having never compromised their line-up. They are poised to succeed as one of the more interesting bands of the 90s; rarely has jazz mixed with rock with such satisfying results. From Yes, 'Honey White' is a blistering romp with the baritone sax sounding hauntingly like a 50s R&B band. Like Swimming was gentle, surreal and lyrically fascinating. The 1997 compilation B-Sides And Otherwise is also a rewarding experience, culled from singles over the past few years. Morphine are addictive, unusual and totally original.

● ALBUMS: Good (Accurate/Distortion 1992)★★★, Cure For Pain (Rykodisc 1993)★★★, Yes (Rykodisc 1995)★★★★, Like Swimming (Rykodisc 1997)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: B-Sides And Otherwise (Rykodisc 1997)★★★★.

Morricone, Ennio

b. 11 October 1928, Rome, Italy. A distinguished and prolific composer, whose revolutionary scores for 'spaghetti Westerns' have made him one of the most influential figures in the film music world. He studied trumpet and composition before becoming a professional writer of music for radio, television and the stage as well as the concert hall. During the 50s he wrote songs and arrangements for popular vocalist Gianni Morandi and he later arranged Paul Anka's Italian hit 'Ogni Volta' (1964). Morricone's first film score was for the comedy Il Federale in 1961. Three years later he was hired by Sergio Leone to compose music for A Fistful Of Dollars. Using the pseudonym Dan Savio, Morricone created a score out of shouts, cries and a haunting whistled phrase, in direct contrast to the use of pseudo-folk melodies in Hollywood Westerns. His work on Leone's trilogy of Italian Westerns led to collaboration with such leading European directors as Pontecorvo (Battle Of Algiers 1966), Pasolini (Big Birds, Little Birds, 1966) and Bertolucci (1900, 1976). In the 70s he began to compose for US films, such as Exorcist II (1977), Days Of Heaven (1978), The Untouchables (1987) and Frantic (1988). Morricone won an Oscar for Roland Joffe's The Mission (1986), where he used motifs from sacred music and native Indian melodies to create what he called 'contemporary music written in an ancient language'. In 1992 Morricone's score for Bugsy received an Oscar nomination. The composer's other scores in the early 90s included Husbands And Lovers, City Of Joy, Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!, Everybody's Fine, Hamlet, State Of Grace, Octopus 6 - The Force Of The Mafia, Jonah Who Lived In A Whale, In The Line Of Fire, and Cinema Paradiso - The Special Edition, La Scorta, Wolf, and Disclosure (1994). The Spaghetti western sound has been a source of inspiration and samples for a number of rock artists including BAD, Cameo and John Zorn (Big Gundown, 1987). Morricone has recorded several albums of his own music and in 1981 he had a hit with 'Chi Mai', a tune he composed for a BBC television series. A double album for Virgin Records in 1988 included Morricone's own selection from the over 100 films which he has scored, while in the same year Virgin Venture issued a recording of his classical compositions.

● ALBUMS: The Good, The Bad And The Ugly film soundtrack (Capitol 1968)★★★★, Moses film soundtrack (Pye 1977)★★★, This Is ... (EMI 1981)★★★, Chi Mai (BBC 1981)★★★, The Mission film soundtrack (Virgin 1986)★★★★, Chamber Music (Venture 1988)★★★, Frantic film soundtrack (Elektra 1988)★★★, The Endless Game television soundtrack (Virgin 1989)★★★, Live In Concert (Silva Screen 1989)★★★, Casualties Of War (1990)★★★, Morricone '93 Movie Sounds (1993)★★★, Wolf film soundtrack (Columbia 1994)★★★, Disclosure film soundtrack (Virgin 1995)★★★, Ninfa Plebea film soundtrack (AM Original Soundtracks 1995)★★★, Concerto: Premio Rota 1995 (AM Original Soundtracks 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Film Hits (RCA 1981)★★★, Film Music 1966-87 (Virgin 1988)★★★★, The Very Best Of (1992)★★★, The Ennio Morricone Anthology (A Fistfull Of Film Music) (Rhino 1995)★★★★, His Greatest Themes (Allegro 1995)★★★, The Singles Collection, Volume Two (Cinemavox 1997)★★★.

Morris Brothers

Wiley (d. 1990; mandolin, guitar, vocals) and Claude 'Zeke' Morris (guitar, vocals) are one of the many brother acts remembered for their fine harmony singing. At different times both worked with other bands including those of J.E. Mainer, Wade Mainer and Charley Monroe. They made their first recordings (accompanied by fiddler Homer Sherrill) for Bluebird in January 1938 and their next session (in September) yielded their noted version of 'Let Me Be Your Salty Dog'. They retired in the late 40s but did make some rare appearances later, including at the 1964 Newport Folk Festival and on a special television programme with Earl Scruggs. They were actually the first musicians ever to employ noted banjoists Earl Scruggs and Don Reno in their band. A third brother George Morris also played with them on occasions.

● ALBUMS: with Homer Sherrill Wiley, Zeke & Homer (Rounder 1972)★★★.

Morris Minor And The Majors

A UK comedy group, they had a novelty hit in 1987 with 'Stutter Rap'. The group comprised Morris Minor (b. Tony Hawkes, 27 February 1960), Rusty Wing (b. Paul Boross, 18 September 1959, London, England) and Phil Erup (b. Phil Judge, 13 February 1960). In 1985 songwriter Hawkes (author of a musical about strip cartoon character Bristow) had joined forces with actors Boross and Judge to perform a comic song on a television talent show. Afterwards, they continued with Morris Minor And The Majors as a comedy act on London's alternative cabaret circuit. 'Stutter Rap (No Sleep 'Til Bedtime') was a song from the cabaret act adapted to be a parody of the Beastie Boys' 'No Sleep 'Til Brooklyn'. Produced by Jakko M. Jakszyk (under the name Grandmaster Jellytot) and released by the Virgin subsidiary 10 Records, it swiftly rose into the UK Top 10. However, the follow-up, 'This Is The Chorus' (whose target was Stock, Aitken And Waterman) flopped. Soon afterwards Boross and Judge left the group when Hawkes was given a television comedy series. Under the name Morris And The Minors, he issued 'Morris Minor' (1989). Judge returned to acting, Hawkes to acting and scriptwriting for comedian Harry Enfield while Boross concentrated on songwriting, releasing a single as the Calypso Twins in 1991.

Morris, Audrey

b. 12 November 1928, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Raised in Chicago, Morris studied piano as a child and would listen to the radio when she was supposed to be sleeping, hearing artists such as Fats Waller when he broadcast from the city's Sherman House Hotel. Her studies were at the American Conservatory of Music in Chicago, and she also studied with Mildred Davis. Although her piano playing was of a very high standard, she was sometimes cajoled into singing. Her initial reluctance to sing was eventually overcome and a significant part in this was played by Gene Gifford, who was writing arrangements for a band with which she was working. He insisted that she should sing and wrote an arrangement especially for her of a song made popular by Peggy Lee, 'What More Can A Woman Do?'. After her marriage to reed player Stu Genovese she abandoned band work and thereafter appeared on her own, singing and playing the piano. In the late 50s Morris appeared on Bobby Troup's television show, Stars Of Jazz, but was mainly active and very much in demand in Chicago's upper echelon supper clubs, including the London House. Her skills were also admired by musicians and she became friendly with Billy Strayhorn when the Duke Ellington band played the Cloister Inn in Chicago. In the mid-80s she sang on George Shearing's New York radio show. A 1996 engagement at Eighty-Eights in Greenwich Village, where she initiated a series of evening performances paying homage to singer-pianist composers, led to her recording Look At Me Now. An outstanding interpreter of the great American Song Book, Morris sings with seemingly effortless command of music and lyric, her voice ageing with grace. Her self-accompaniment, a difficult art in itself, is highly accomplished. Although Morris is reluctant to place too much emphasis on influences, when pressed she has cited Lee in particular, but also Billie Holiday, Carmen McRae and Lee Wiley. As is apparent from her repertoire, which is replete with the great standards, Morris believes that lyrics are the most important thing in a song. However, she does not ignore latter-day songs, declaring, 'I don't agree that good songs are not being written nowadays, it's just that there aren't too many of them.'

● ALBUMS: Bistro Ballads (RCA 1954)★★★, The Voice Of Audrey Morris (Bethlehem 1956)★★★, Afterthoughts (Fancy Faire 1985)★★★, Film Noir (Fancy Faire 1989)★★★, Look At Me Now (Audiophile 1996)★★★★, Roundabout (Fancy Faire 1998)★★★.

Morris, Butch

b. Lawrence Morris, 10 February 1947, Long Beach, California, USA. Playing cornet on the west coast, Morris worked with bop tenor saxophonist J.R. Monterose, bassist George Morrow and avant garde players Frank Lowe and Don Moye as well as studying with well-known west coast mentors, Horace Tapscott and Bobby Bradford (which is where he first met his longtime associate David Murray). In 1975 he relocated to New York, playing free jazz in the Loft scene. From 1976-77 he lived in Paris, working with Lowe and bassist Alan Silva. In 1977 he joined Murray's seminal Octet, recording on Ming, Home and Murray's Steps. Morris developed what he called 'conduction', a method of leading improvisers with visual instructions, conducting the David Murray Big Band at Sweet Basil in 1984 (recorded for Black Saint). Meanwhile, Morris had also been recording his own music: In Touch...But Out Of Reach was a 1978 live concert with a sextet that included trombonist Grachan Moncur III and drummer Steve McCall; The New York City Artists' Collective Plays Butch Morris had him conducting an eight-piece group, which featured vocalist Ellen Christi, through a set of his own pieces. In 1985 he recorded a free-improvisation record with guitarist Bill Horvitz (Trios) and 1988 saw the appearance of two albums featuring a trio of Morris, Wayne Horvitz, and Robert Previte, (Nine Below, Todos Santos), the latter album showcasing the compositions of pianist/singer Robin Halcomb. In 1986 he released Current Trends In Racism In Modern America, an innovative music in which he led 10 musicians (including Lowe, John Zorn, harpist Zeena Parkins and drummer Thurman Barker) through poignant, desolate and highly charged 'free-improvisations'. Homeing (1987) and Dust To Dust (1991) continued his search for a new method of assembling musicians drawn from both the black avant garde and white avant-rock circles. In a period where conservatism has become the normal approach, Morris has bravely taken steps to provide a part of the future.

● ALBUMS: In Touch...But Out Of Reach 1978 recording (1982)★★★, The New York City Artists' Collective Plays Butch Morris (1984)★★★, with Bill Horvitz, J.A. Deane Trios (1985)★★, Current Trends In Racism In Modern America (Sound Aspects 1986)★★, Homeing (Sound Aspect 1988)★★★, with Robert Previte, Wayne Horvitz Nine Below (1988)★★★, with Previte, Wayne Horvitz Todos Santos (1988)★★, Dust To Dust (New World 1991)★★★.

Morris, Gary

b. 7 December 1948, Fort Worth, Texas, USA. Morris sang in a church choir and learned guitar, playing along to the Beatles' records. When he and two friends auditioned for a club owner in Denver, they were told they were 'on in 15 minutes . . . providing they played country music'. They stayed at the club for five years and then Morris returned to Texas. He started campaigning for Jimmy Carter and in 1978, after Carter's election, Morris performed on a country show at the White House. As a result, he was signed to MCA, but when the singles did not sell, he moved to Colorado and formed a band, Breakaway. Producer Norro Wilson, who had been at the White House, signed him to Warners, but when Wilson moved to RCA, Morris found himself in limbo. Eventually, he had US country hits with 'Headed For A Heartache', 'Dreams Die Hard', 'Don't Look Back' and 'Velvet Chains'. In 1983, he became the first artist to put 'The Wind Beneath My Wings' on the US country charts and also had hits with 'The Love She Found In Me', 'Why Lady Why?' and a duet with Lynn Anderson, 'You're Welcome To Tonight'. He first appeared on the Grand Ole Opry in 1984, the same year he appeared on Broadway in La Bohème (alongside Linda Ronstadt). Morris had his first US country number 1 in 1985 with 'Baby Bye Bye' and he has had further US number 1 records with 'I'll Never Stop Loving You', 'Making Up For Lost Time' (a duet with Crystal Gayle), '100% Chance Of Rain' and 'Leave Me Lonely'. He returned to Broadway in 1987 for the main role in Les Misérables and was also featured on the 1988 symphonic recording. He moved from opera to soap opera by playing the blind country singer Wayne Masterson in The Colbys. Morris has the vocal and acting ability to take his career in any number of directions, although his commercial standing had dropped substantially by the early 90s.

● ALBUMS: Gary Morris (Warners 1982)★★★, Why Lady Why (Warners 1983)★★★, Faded Blue (Warners 1984)★★★, Anything Goes... (Warners 1985)★★★, Second Hand Heart (Warners 1986)★★★, Plain Brown Wrapper (Warners 1986)★★, with Crystal Gayle What If We Fall In Love (Warners 1987)★★, Stones (Liberty 1989)★★★, Full Moon, Empty Heart (Liberty 1991)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Hits (Warners 1987)★★★★, Greatest Hits, Volume 2 (Warners 1990)★★★.

Morris, Jenny

b. New Zealand. Morris has surprised many with her solo albums, writing most of the material herself. Arriving in Australia in 1980 with the Crocodiles, a new wave pop band from New Zealand, Morris joined QED, who recorded a warm, but sadly-neglected album in 1984. After this she worked as a backing singer with bands such as INXS. After touring with her own band, Morris found mainstream airplay with her strong, modern pop songs. She toured Europe during 1990 as support to Prince, presenting a more raunchy image.

● ALBUMS: Body & Soul (1987)★★★★, Shiver (1989)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Story So Far (1992).

Morris, Joe

b. 1922, Montgomery, Alabama, USA, d. November 1958, Phoenix, Arizona, USA. Morris studied music at Alabama State Teachers' College, and toured with the college band led by the Trenier Twins. Heard by Lionel Hampton in Florida in 1942, Morris joined Hampton's Orchestra, where he became a valued writer/arranger as well as a trumpeter. He remained with Hampton until 1946, when he briefly joined Buddy Rich's band. After forming his own band towards the end of 1946, Morris went on to record for Manor, Atlantic, Decca and Herald, introducing new jazz and R&B stars such as Johnny Griffin, Elmo Hope, Matthew Gee, Percy Heath, Philly Joe Jones, Laurie Tate and Faye Adams. On the strength of his 'Blues Cavalcade' one of the first self-contained, touring R&B package shows, Morris had several hits including 'Any Time, Any Place, Anywhere' and 'Don't Take Your Love From Me' on Atlantic and, most notably, 'Shake A Hand' and 'I'll Be True' on Herald.

● ALBUMS: Lowdown Baby (1985)★★★, with Johnny Griffin Fly Mister Fly (1985)★★★.

Morris, Marlowe

b. 16 May 1915, New York, USA, d. c.1977. Morris became proficient on several instruments before settling on piano. In the mid- to late 30s he played with June Clark, then joined Coleman Hawkins in the early 40s. He was briefly in the army at the start of the US involvement in World War II, then returned to the New York scene where he was active with several leaders including Al Sears and Sid Catlett, performing in the latter's quartet with Ben Webster. He appeared in the short film Jammin' The Blues in 1944, and was briefly with Tiny Grimes before forming his own small group. By the end of 1946, however, he had dropped out of full-time musics, returning at the end of the decade when he began to make a mark as an organist. He continued to play this instrument for most of the remaining years of his career. A good soloist and worthy accompanist, Morris played in a swing-rooted style, but his later work displayed an awareness of, if not a direct involvement in, the changes in jazz brought about by the advent of bop.

● ALBUMS: with Jimmy Rushing If This Ain't The Blues (Vanguard 1957)★★★, Play The Thing (Columbia 1961)★★★.

Morris, Russell

As leader of the Melbourne pop group Somebody's Image (1966-68), Morris came to the notice of Molly Meldrum, who soon became the group's, and subsequently Morris's, manager. Meldrum produced Morris's huge 1969 hit 'The Real Thing' which is regarded as the best psychedelic song of that era in Australia. The song featured a myriad of overdubs including snatches of speeches and ending, like one of its influences, with an atomic bomb exploding. Morris further developed his own songwriting skills sufficiently to release a low-key album release, Bloodstone which was greeted with luke-warm praise from the critics ('The Cell' often garnered praise), although little acknowledgement from the public. Deserted by Meldrum, Morris formed his own band and recorded several more albums which did achieve minor success. He moved to the USA in 1978, where he eventually obtained a green card, but was unable to establish himself in any musical niche. On his return to Australia, he formed the Rubes who backed him live and on record until they parted company in 1983. Since then he has played with a 60s' revival band and has remained unrecorded, although there have been plans to record in the early 90s. Morris possesses an excellent tenor voice, which is particularly distinctive on his pop material.

● ALBUMS: Bloodstone (1971)★★, Wings Of An Eagle (1973),★★★ Russell Morris (1975)★★★, Turn It On (1976)★★★, Foot In The Door (1979)★★★, Almost Frantic (1980)★★.

Morris, Sarah Jane

This UK singer rose to fame as joint vocalist on the Communards number 1 hit 'Don't Leave Me This Way' in 1986. Sarah Jane's previous work as a vocalist had principally comprised Berlin theatre songs with groups like the Happy End. As well as duetting on the Commmunards' hit she appeared on the group's debut album track 'Lover Man'. Her presence and husky tones, alongside Jimmy Somerville in live appearances became an integral part of the Communards' show, so much so, that audiences constantly link her with the group. Whether this has ultimately helped or hindered her solo career is subjective, for while her solo album on the Jive label received warm reviews it met with little UK chart success. A constant guest artist, her early 90s contributions have included an appearance on Peter Hammill's The Fall Of The House Of Usher.

- ALBUMS: Sarah Jane Morris (Jive 1989)★★★, Blue Valentine (Ronnie Scott's Jazz House 1995)★★★.

Morrison Hotel - Doors

Feted first as underground heroes, then reviled as teeny-bop stars, the Doors threw off such conundrums with this magnificent release. Morrison Hotel reaffirmed their blues roots, opening with the powerful 'Roadhouse Blues' before unfolding through a succession of songs showcasing all the group members' considerable strengths. Distinctively tight instrumental playing underscores memorable material, while Jim Morrison's authoritative vocal ranges from the demonstrative ('Maggie McGill') to the melancholic ('The Spy'). Despite contemporary problems, the Doors emerged with an album the equal of their first two stunning releases.

- Tracks: Roadhouse Blues; Waiting For The Sun; You Make Me Real; Peace Frog; Blue Sunday; Ship Of Fools; Land Ho; The Spy; Queen Of The Highway; Indian Summer; Maggie McGill.
- First released 1970
- UK peak chart position: 12
- USA peak chart position: 4

Morrison, Barbara

b. Ypsilanti, Michigan, USA. Raised in a suburb of Detroit, Morrison sang as a child, mostly in church. Success in a talent contest was rewarded with a scholarship to Eastern Michigan University. She continued to sing, gaining in confidence with maturity and in 1973 moved to Southern California, teaming up with Eddie 'Cleanhead' Vinson with whose band she remained for a few years. Later, she toured the USA and Europe and also recorded with R&B legend Johnny Otis. In 1987 Morrison went solo, dividing her time between Los Angeles and Europe where she developed a following thanks in part to her recordings made for the company owned by German jazz drummer Thilo Berg. In the mid-90s she was continuing this roving career, attracting the attention of a growing number of fans who include singer Dionne Warwick. Morrison sings in a ringing soul-inflected jazz style and her striking and exuberant personality shines through her voice.

- ALBUMS: Doing All Right (Mons 1992)★★★, Blues For Ella (Mons 1993)★★★★.

Morrison, James

b. James Lloyd Morrison, 11 November 1962, Sydney, Australia. Morrison was born into a musical family and at the age of seven started to play the cornet at school and in church. Within a year he was also playing other instruments including, trombone, tuba and saxophone. In 1971, with his brother John, he formed a band that played at local shopping centres. Morrison progressed to performing in various bands and in 1975 entered the New South Wales Conservatorium. A meeting with Don Burrows proved to be a decisive moment in Morrison's fledgling career. Burrows encouraged him to join his quartet, which was about to tour Australia and Asia. At the age of 17 Morrison made his debut American performance at the Monterey Jazz Festival. In 1982 he became Lecturer Of Jazz Studies at the NSW Conservatorium. The following year, with Burrows, Morrison made his featured recording debut on At The Winery. This displayed Morrison's technical virtuosity and personal flamboyance as a trumpet and trombone player. Another project, the Morrison Brothers Big Band, featured James and John with some of Sydney's most talented young musicians, they recorded an album and were featured in an ABC television special. With a flair for publicity, Morrison became a national television celebrity, performing instrumental theatrics, playing a dozen instruments, mountain climbing while playing his trumpet, car racing and playing trombone while flying an aircraft. Serious musical events included a 1986 Royal Command Performance and a five-month association with veteran trumpet player, Red Rodney. A well received album, Swiss Encounter - Live At The Montreux Jazz Festival, enhanced Morrison's ever increasing international profile. In 1989 he played the trombone in the all-star international Phillip Morris Superband. The following year Morrison's prodigious talents and fame inspired a feature film entitled, The Wizard Of Oz. He also began touring with the veteran bass player, Ray Brown and his trio. The outfit recorded Snappy Doo and the title tune became a successful single. In 1992 Morrison expanded his musical activities by performing in Brisbane with opera singer Joan Carden and the Queensland Symphony Orchestra. There was also an encore performance at the Royal Opera House in London's Covent Garden. The following year he recorded a Christmas album in the Berlin Opera House with the 70-piece RIAS Radio Orchestra and the Ray Brown Trio. In Australia, Morrison enjoyed the position of a national celebrity as a regular on television and radio, he also became an ubiquitous performer on the jazz and cabaret circuit with groups ranging from trios to big bands, always with an ever increasing arsenal of musical instruments. In October 1996 he travelled to Davenport, Iowa, USA to perform a new work by Lalo Schifrin dedicated to Bix Beiderbecke. Playing Beiderbecke's own cornet, Morrison performed A Rhapsody For Bix, with the Quad Symphony Orchestra. Within a week of returning to Australia, he was recording a live album at Brisbane's Bass Note Restaurant. James Morrison is Australia's most popular and talented Australian jazz musician. He is virtuoso on trumpet and trombone, an excellent euphonium and tuba player and competent on piano and alto saxophone.

● ALBUMS: A Night In Tunisia (ABC 1984)★★★★, James Morrison At The Winery (ABC 1985)★★★, Postcards From Down Under (WEA 1988)★★★, Swiss Encounter (WEA 1988)★★★, Snappy Doo (WEA 1990)★★, Two In The Max (WEA 1991)★★★, This Is Christmas (WEA 1993)★★, James Morrison And The Hot Horn Happening - Live In Paris.(WEA 1994)★★★, Live At The Sydney Opera House (WEA 1995)★★★.

Morrison, Mark

b. 1973, Leicester, Leicestershire, England. Although the swingbeat or urban R&B sound of R. Kelly, SWV, TLC and others had made a huge impression among British record buyers, until the breakthrough of Mark Morrison in 1995 the UK had failed to provide a credible domestic alternative. Morrison had grown up in Leicester and Palm Beach, Florida, USA, and was thus better disposed to adopt the style than most. His debut single, 1995's 'Crazy', saw him announce himself as the 'UK King Of Swing', and brought immediate chart success. His irresistible March 1996 single 'Return Of The Mack' was highly derivative of his American peers in style, language and content, but again brought major chart success both in the UK and USA. It was followed by an album of the same title which was co-produced with Phil Chill. He was found guilty of threatening behaviour with a gun and was sentenced to three months' imprisonment in May 1997. In March 1998 a catalogue of further misdemeanours culminated in a 12 month jail sentence.

● ALBUMS: Return Of The Mack (WEA 1996)★★★.

Morrison, Neville

b. *c.*1965, Manchester, England. Although born in the UK, Morrison spent his formative years in Jamaica. His route to stardom included several successful appearances on local talent shows in Kingston and singing over dub plates on sound systems. By 1986 he was encouraged by dancehall singer Half Pint to go for an audition with George Phang, who had produced the singer's classic 'Greetings'. Having convinced the producer of his abilities, Morrison recorded his debut, 'Lovers Feeling'. By 1988 Morrison had returned to the UK where his cousin Dennis Rowe asked him to sing on the legendary Saxon sound system, and produced his UK debut, 'Got To Make A Change'. By the early 90s he had a string of hits for a number of producers, including 'Best Of Me', 'Wanna Make Love', 'Phone Me', 'You're Gonna Leave' and his number 1 hit 'Crying Over You'. In 1995 Morrison accepted the role of Mango in Devon Morgan's musical play, Johnny Dollar. The show featured a number of top UK performers including Sylvia Tella, Peter Hunningale and Tippa Irie. He returned to the recording scene with the Christmas 1995 release of his biggest-selling single to date, 'True Friends', which reached the top of the reggae chart in the spring of 1996. A year later he repeated his chart success with 'This Game Called Love', enhanced by an infectious loop including the horn riff from Delroy Wilson's 'Dancing Mood'.

● ALBUMS: True Friends (Fashion 1996)★★★.

Morrison, Van

b. George Ivan Morrison, 31 August 1945, Belfast, Northern Ireland. The son of a noted collector of jazz and blues records, Morrison quickly developed an interest in music. At the age of 12 he joined Deannie Sands And The Javelins, an aspiring skiffle group, but within two years was an integral part of the Monarchs, a showband which, by 1963, was embracing R&B and soul. Tours of Scotland and England were undertaken before the group travelled to Germany where they completed a lone single for CBS, 'Bozoo Hully Gully'/'Twingy Baby', before disbanding. The experience Morrison garnered - he took up vocals, saxophone and harmonica - proved invaluable upon his return to Belfast and a subsequent merger with members of local attraction the Gamblers in a new act, Them. This exciting group scored two notable hit singles with 'Baby Please Don't Go' and 'Here Comes The Night' (both 1965), while the former's b-side 'Gloria', a snarling Morrison original, is revered as a classic of the garage-band genre. The group's progress was hampered by instability and Morrison's reluctance to court the pop marketplace - a feature continued throughout his career - but their albums showed the early blossoming of an original stylist. His reading of Bob Dylan's 'It's All Over Now, Baby Blue' (Them Again) is rightly regarded as one of the finest interpretations in a much-covered catalogue. Them was dissolved in 1966 following an arduous US tour, but within months the singer had returned to New York at the prompting of producer Bert Berns. Their partnership resulted in 'Brown-Eyed Girl', an ebullient celebration of love in a style redolent of classic black harmony groups. The single deservedly reached the US Top 10, in turn inspiring the hurriedly issued Blowin' Your Mind. Morrison later claimed the set was culled from sessions for projected singles and, although inconsistent, contained the cathartic 'T.B. Sheets', on which Morrison first introduced the stream-of-consciousness imagery recurring in later work. Berns' premature death brought this period to a sudden end, and for the ensuing 12 months Morrison punctuated live performances by preparing his next release.

Astral Weeks showed the benefit of such seclusion, as here an ambition to create without pop's constraints was fully realized. Drawing support from a stellar backing group which included Miles Davis' bassist Richard Davis and Modern Jazz Quartet drummer Connie Kay, Morrison created an ever-shifting musical tapestry, inspired by blues, soul and gospel, yet without ever imitating their sound. His vocal performance was both assured and highly emotional and the resultant collection is justifiably lauded as one of rock's landmark releases. On Moondance the artist returned to a more conventional sense of discipline, on which tighter, punchier, jazzier arrangements formed the platform for the singer's still-soaring inflections. 'Caravan', 'Into The Mystic' and the title track itself (reminiscent of Kenny Burrell's 'Midnight Blue'), became a staple part of Van's subsequent career, offering an optimistic spirit prevalent in the artist's immediate recordings. Both Van Morrison, His Band And The Street Choir and Tupelo Honey suggested a newfound peace of mind, as a now-married Morrison celebrated the idyll of his sylvan surroundings. 'Domino' and 'Wild Night' were the album's respective US hit singles, both of which invoked the punch of classic Stax-era soul, and if the former set offered a greater debt to R&B, its counterpart showed an infatuation with country styles. Both preoccupations were maintained on Saint Dominic's Preview, one of Morrison's most enigmatic releases. Having opened the set with 'Jackie Wilson Said', an effervescent tribute to the great soul singer later covered by Dexys Midnight Runners. Morrison wove a path through rock and late-night jazz culminating in two lengthy compositions, both laced with chiming acoustic 12-string guitar, 'Listen To The Lion' and 'Almost Independence Day'. Here he resumed vocal improvisation and by alternately whispering, pleading, shouting and extolling, created two intoxicating and hypnotic performances.

Morrison's next release, Hard Nose The Highway, proved disappointing as the artist enhanced an ever-widening palette with contributions by the Oakland Symphony Chamber Chorus and such disparate inclusions as 'Green', culled from the educational children's show, Sesame Street, and the folk standard 'Wild Mountain Thyme', herein retitled 'Purple Heather'. Despite the presence of 'Wild Love' and 'The Great Deception', the album is generally regarded as inconsistent. However, Morrison reclaimed his iconoclastic position with the enthralling It's Too Late To Stop Now, an in-concert selection on which he was backed by the Caledonia Soul Orchestra. Morrison not only restated his own impressive catalogue, but acknowledged his mentors with a series of tight and outstanding recreations, notably of Sonny Boy 'Rice Miller' Williamson ('Take Your Hand Out Of Your Pocket'), Ray Charles ('I Believe To My Soul') and Bobby Bland ('Ain't Nothing You Can Do'). The result was a seamless tribute to R&B and one of rock's definitive live albums. It was succeeded by the pastoral Veedon Fleece, a set inspired by a sabbatical in Ireland during 1973. Its sense of spirituality - a keynote of Morrison's later work - is best captured on 'You Don't Pull No Punches But You Don't Push The River', but 'The Streets Of Arklow' and 'County Fair' are equally evocative. The judicious use of uillean pipes and woodwind enhanced the rural atmosphere of a collection which, although received with mixed reviews, is, in retrospect, a lynchpin in the artist's subsequent development.

A three-year hiatus ended with the release of A Period Of Transition, a largely undistinguished set on which the singer collaborated actively with Dr. John. Wavelength, which featured former Them organist Peter Bardens, was welcomed as a marked improvement and if lacking the triumphs of earlier work, contained none of its pitfalls and instead offered a mature musical consistency. Similar qualities abounded on Into The Music which included the noticeably buoyant 'Bright Side Of The Road', Van's first solo, albeit minor, UK chart entry. It also featured 'And The Healing Has Begun', wherein Morrison celebrated his past in order to address his future, and the shamelessly nostalgic 'It's All In The Game', a cover version of Tommy Edward's 1957 hit single. Although a general penchant for punchy soul suggested part of a continuing affinity, it instead marked the end of a stylistic era. On Common One Morrison resumed his introspective path and, on the expansive 'Somewhere In England', referred to the works of Wordsworth, Coleridge and T.S. Eliot in a piece whose gruff, improvisatory nature polarized critics proclaiming it either mesmerizing or self-indulgent. A greater sense of discipline on Beautiful Vision resulted in another much-lauded classic. Although noted for 'Cleaning Windows', a joyous celebration of the singer's formative Belfast years, the album contained several rich, meditative compositions, notably 'Dweller On The Threshold' and 'Across The Bridge Where Angels Dwell'.

Inarticulate Speech Of The Heart and A Sense Of Wonder continued in a similar vein, the former boasting the compulsive 'Rave On John Donne', wherein Morrison again placed his work on a strictly literary pantheon, while the latter opened with the equally evocative 'Tore Down A La Rimbaud'. The title track of the latter set the style for many beautifully wandering and spiritually uplifting songs of the next fertile period. Live At The Grand Opera House, Belfast was an insubstantial resumé, failing to capture the sense of occasion demonstrably apparent in person, but Morrison confirmed his artistic rebirth with No Guru, No Method, No Teacher. Here he openly acknowledged his musical past - the set included the punningly titled 'Here Comes The Knight' - as well as offering a searing riposte to those perceived as imitators on 'A Town Called Paradise'. 'Tir Na Nog' and 'One Irish Rover' continued his long-running affair with Celtic themes, a feature equally relevant on Poetic Champions Compose. The wedding of love and religion, another integral part of the artist's 80s work, was enhanced by the sumptuous 'Sometimes I Feel Like A Motherless Child', on which the singer's contemplative delivery was truly inspirational. Morrison, many years into his career, was now producing an astonishingly high standard of work. His albums during this period were events, not mere releases.

Irish Heartbeat, a festive collaboration with traditional act the Chieftains, offered a joyous but less intensive perspective. Although the title song and 'Celtic Ray' were exhumed from Morrison's own catalogue, its highlights included moving renditions of 'She Moved Through The Fair' and 'Carrickfergus'. By this time

(1988) Morrison was resettled in London and had invited R&B vocalist/organist Georgie Fame to join his touring revue. Avalon Sunset enhanced the singer's commercial ascendancy when 'Whenever God Shines His Light On Me', a duet with Cliff Richard, became a UK Top 20 single, Morrison's first since Them's halcyon days. The album had once again a strong spiritual feel combined with childhood memories. Morrison, however, was also able to compose and deliver quite immaculate love songs, including the stunning 'Have I Told You Lately That I Love You'. Enlightenment thus engendered considerable interest although Morrison, as oblivious to pop's trappings as always, simply maintained his peerless progress. The mixture was as before, from the pulsating opening track, 'Real Real Gone', itself once considered for Common One, through gospel and the biographical, where 'Days Before Rock 'N' Roll' recalls the singer's discovery, by radio, of Ray Charles and Little Richard. 1991 witnessed another unlikely collaboration when Morrison recorded several songs with Tom Jones, one of which, 'Carrying A Torch', was remade for Hymns To The Silence. This expansive double set confirmed the artist's prolific nature, yet reviews lauding its sense of grandeur also queried its self-obsession. Too Long In Exile, visited his R&B roots and includes a reworked 'Gloria', featuring a duet with John Lee Hooker. In February 1994 he was honoured at the Brit Awards for his outstanding contribution to music. Days Like This was highly accessible, easy on the ear and probably the most 'contented' album he has made since Tupelo Honey 24 years previously. That year a lacklustre tribute album, No Prima Donna, was issued by Morrison's Exile productions, featuring contributions from diverse names including Shana Morrison (his daughter), Lisa Stansfield, Elvis Costello and the Phil Coulter Orchestra; however, it was a grave disappointment for Morrison's fans. How Long Has This Been Going On, recorded with Georgie Fame in 1995, was a comfortable jazz album revisiting the past. He continued in this vein with Fame, Ben Sidran and one of his idols, Mose Allison, with a tribute album to the latter in 1996. The same year, Morrison was awarded the OBE for his services to music. His 1997 offering was The Healing Game. Breaking no new ground, this album featured more original songs using the same glorious chord changes which the converted loved. Morrison, whose disdain for the press is legendary, doubtless remained unmoved by his critics, yet the paradox of a man capable of sumptuous music and a barking temper is indeed intriguing. It is a tribute that such aberrations can be set aside in order to enjoy his enthralling catalogue. Taken as a whole, this body of work is one the most necessary, complete and important collections in rock music, and it is still growing. The Philosopher's Stone was a compilation of Morrison's unreleased material.

● ALBUMS: Blowin' Your Mind (Bang 1967)★★, Astral Weeks (Warners 1968)★★★★★, Moondance (Warners 1970)★★★★, Van Morrison, His Band And The Street Choir (Warners 1970)★★, Tupelo Honey (Warners 1971)★★★★, Saint Dominic's Preview (Warners 1972)★★★★, T.B. Sheets (Bang 1973)★★, Hard Nose The Highway (Warners 1973)★★, It's Too Late To Stop Now (Warners 1974)★★★★, Veedon Fleece (Warners 1974)★★★★, A Period Of Transition (Warners 1977)★★★, Wavelength (Warners 1978)★★★, Into The Music (Vertigo 1979)★★★, Common One (Mercury 1980)★★, Beautiful Vision (Mercury 1982)★★★, Inarticulate Speech Of The Heart (Mercury 1983)★★, Live At The Grand Opera House, Belfast (Mercury 1984)★★, A Sense Of Wonder (Mercury 1984)★★★★, No Guru, No Method, No Teacher (Mercury 1986)★★★★, Poetic Champions Compose (Mercury 1987)★★★★, with the Chieftains Irish Heartbeat (Mercury 1988)★★★★, Avalon Sunset (Mercury 1989)★★★★, Enlightenment (Mercury 1990)★★★, Hymns To The Silence (Polydor 1991)★★★★, Too Long In Exile (Polydor 1993)★★★, A Night In San Francisco (Polydor 1994)★★, Days Like This (Polydor 1995)★★★, with Georgie Fame How Long Has This Been Going On (Verve 1995)★★★, with Fame, Mose Allison, Ben Sidran Tell Me Something: The Songs Of Mose Allison (Verve 1996)★★, The Healing Game (Polydor 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Van Morrison (Bang 1971)★★, This Is Where I Came In (Bang 1977)★★, The Best Of Van Morrison (Polydor 1990)★★★★★, Bang Masters (Legacy 1991)★★★, The Best Of Volume 2 (Polydor 1992)★★★★, New York Sessions '67 (Burning Airlines 1997)★★, The Philosopher's Stone (Polydor 1998)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Concert (Channel 5 1990).

● FURTHER READING: Van Morrison, Ritchie Yorke. Van Morrison: A Portrait Of The Artist, Johnny Rogan. Van Morrison: The Mystic's Music, Howard A.DeWitt. Van Morrison: Too Late To Stop Now, Steve Turner. Van Morrison: Inarticulate Speech Of The Heart, John Collis.

Morrissey

b. Steven Patrick Morrissey, 22 May 1959, Davyhulme, Manchester, England. Morrissey began his career with the vague intention of succeeding as a music journalist. Unemployed in Manchester during the late 70s, he frequently wrote letters to the music press and was eventually taken on by Record Mirror as a freelance local reviewer. During this period, he also ran a New York Dolls fan club and wrote a booklet about them. Another small illustrated volume, James Dean Is Not Dead, briefly catalogued the career of another Morrissey obsession. Two other projects, on girl groups and minor film stars, failed to reach the printed page. In the meantime, Morrissey was attempting unsuccessfully to progress as a performer. He had played a couple of gigs with local group the Nosebleeds and failed a record company audition with a relaunched version of Slaughter And The Dogs. In 1982 he was approached by Wythenshawe guitarist Johnny Maher (later Marr) with the idea of forming a songwriting team. They soon developed into the Smiths, the most important and critically acclaimed UK group of the 80s. Morrissey's arch lyrics, powerful persona and general newsworthiness made him a pop figure whose articulacy was unmatched by any of his contemporaries. By the late summer of 1987, the Smiths had disbanded, leaving Morrissey to pursue a solo career. Early the following year he issued his first post-Smiths single, 'Suedehead', with Vini Reilly (Durutti Column) filling the guitarist's spot. The track was irresistibly commercial and reached the UK Top 5. The subsequent Viva Hate hit number 1 in the UK album charts soon after, indicating a long and successful future with EMI Records. A further UK Top 10 single with the John Betjemen-influenced 'Everyday Is Like Sunday' reiterated that point. In spite of his successes, Morrissey was initially keen on promoting a Smiths reunion but the closest this reached was the equivalent of a farewell concert in the unlikely setting of Wolverhampton Civic Hall. On 22 December 1988, Morrissey performed alongside former Smiths Andy Rourke, Mike Joyce and Craig Gannon for a 1,700 capacity audience, many of whom had queued for days in order to gain admittance to the venue. The following year brought several problems. Although he continued to release strong singles such as 'The Last Of The Famous International Playboys' and 'Interesting Drug', both reviews and chart placings were slightly less successful than expected. By the time of 'Ouija Board, Ouija Board', Morrissey suffered the most disappointing reviews of his career and, despite its charm, the single only reached number 18. Financial wrangles and management changes, which had characterized the Smiths' career, were repeated by Morrissey the soloist. A projected album, Bona Drag, was delayed and eventually cancelled, although the title served for a formidable hits and b-side compilation. In the meantime, Morrissey concentrated on the singles market, issuing some fascinating product, most notably the macabre 'November Spawned A Monster' and controversial 'Piccadilly Palare'. In March 1991, Morrissey issued the long-awaited Kill Uncle, a light yet not unappealing work, produced by Clive Langer and Alan Winstanley. By this time, the artist had not toured since the heyday of the Smiths, and there were some critics who wondered whether he would ever perform again. That question was answered in the summer and winter of 1991 when the singer embarked on a world tour, backed by a rockabilly group, whose raw energy and enthusiasm brought a new dimension to his recently understated studio work. The fruits of this collaboration were revealed on Your Arsenal, a neat fusion of 50s rockabilly influences and 70s glam rock. The presence of former David Bowie acolyte Mick Ronson as producer added to its impetus. During 1992 Morrissey again hit the headlines when he issued a bitter attack on author Johnny Rogan. Prior to the publication of a book on the Smiths, which he had yet to read, Morrissey decreed: 'Personally, I hope Johnny Rogan ends his days very soon in an M3 pile-up.' The much-publicized and long-running dispute merely served to focus attention on the book and heighten appreciation of his Smiths work. Beethoven Was Deaf, a live album that disappeared after only two weeks in the charts, was a dismal failure. However, Morrissey was now beginning to cultivate a following in the USA substantially beyond the cult devotees who had followed the Smiths in that country. This offered welcome succour at a time when UK critics were predicting his imminent downfall. Then came the Madstock disaster - a live appearance in support of a re-formed Madness that saw Morrissey bedecked in a Union Jack - which, when combined with song titles such as 'Bengali In Platforms' and 'The National Front Disco', saw a huge debate rage in the media over the artist's interpretation of 'Englishness'. Vauxhall And I, a chilling treatise of pained reflection proved Morrissey's most outstanding release to date, reaching number 1 in the UK. With the more sedate production from Steve Lillywhite, this was the closest the artist had come to matching his lyricism with the right material components since the Smiths. Indeed, as Select magazine decreed: 'If he keeps making albums like this, you won't want the Smiths back'. However, it was to be his last album with EMI/HMV Records, apart from the much-criticized compilation The World Of Morrissey. Meanwhile, a collaboration with Siouxsie on the single 'Interlude', fell outside the UK Top 40. Morrissey next moved to BMG Records as they chose to revive another old label, this time RCA Victor for 1995's Southpaw Grammar. This set opened with 'The Teachers Are Afraid Of The Pupils', an arresting 11-minute update to the Smiths' 'The Headmaster Ritual', which placed the secondary school teacher in the role of victim. Critics were not overly impressed and the album disappeared from the playlists and people's minds after a few weeks. Morrissey made the headlines in 1997 with the long-standing court case over Mike Joyce's claim on royalties. The judge ruled against Morrissey and Marr. This must have been his absolute nadir; even his tracker-dog biographer Rogan was able to confront him at the courtrooms. Ploughing on, Morrissey released the delayed Maladjusted for new label Island, although he was forced to omit a track that allegedly attacked Joyce and Rourke.

● ALBUMS: Viva Hate (HMV 1988)★★★★, Kill Uncle (HMV 1991)★★, Your Arsenal (HMV 1992)★★★★, Beethoven Was Deaf (HMV 1993)★★, Vauxhall And I (HMV 1994)★★★★, Southpaw Grammar (RCA Victor 1995)★★★, Maladjusted (Island 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Bona Drag (HMV 1990)★★★★, The World Of Morrissey (EMI 1995)★★, Suedehead - The Best Of (EMI 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live In Dallas (1993), Introducing Morrissey (Warner Music Video 1996).

● FURTHER READING: Morrissey In His Own Words, John Robertson. Morrissey Shot, Linder Sterling. Morrissey & Marr: The Severed Alliance, Johnny Rogan. Peepholism: Into The Art Of Morrissey, Jo Slee. Landscapes Of The Mind, David Bret.

Morrissey, Dick

b. 9 May 1940, Horley, Surrey, England. A self-taught tenor saxophonist who is also adept on clarinet, flute and soprano saxophone, Morrissey became a professional musician at the end of his teens. In 1960 he played in a band led by Harry South and soon afterwards formed his own quartet with South, Phil Bates and Phil Seamen. He maintained a small band throughout the 60s, playing club engagements in the UK, backing visiting American jazzmen (including Jimmy Witherspoon) and making records. In the 70s Morrissey was deeply involved in jazz-rock, co-leading the band highly respected If, working with Herbie Mann, and recording with the Average White Band. The most important of the bands in this idiom with which he was associated was the excellent Morrissey-Mullen band he co-led with Jim Mullen. The band became one of the UK's best-known jazz-rock bands and remained in existence into the mid-80s, after which Morrissey returned to leading a more mainstream jazz-orientated group.

● ALBUMS: It's Morrissey, Man! (1961)★★★, Have You Heard? (1963)★★★, Jimmy Witherspoon At The Bull's Head (1966)★★, Storm Warning (Mercury 1967)★★★★, After Dark (Coda 1983)★★★, Resurrection Ritual (Miles 1988)★★★, Souliloquy (Coda 1988)★★★. As Morrissey-Mullen Up (1977)★★★, Cape Wrath (Harvest 1979)★★★★, Badness (1981),★★★ Life On The Wire (1982)★★★, It's About Time (1983)★★★, This Must Be The Place (1985)★★★, Happy Hour (1988)★★★.

Morrissey, Louise

b. 23 March 1961, Bansha, Co. Tipperary, Eire. She grew up with a love of music and after completing her schooling, began to sing with her brothers, Billy and Norman, as the Morrisseys Folk And Ballad Group. She made her first recording, 'Farewell To Carlingford', in 1978. The group recorded several successful albums, including Ireland's Morrisseys and On Stage (Live From Olympia). In 1988, encouraged by the popularity of Irish singers such as Ray Lynam and Philomena Begley, she gave up folk music in favour of the ever-popular country and Irish (Norman became the bass guitarist in her band and Billy the band's manager). Her second country music recording, 'The Night Daniel O'Donnell Came To Town' (based on Johnny Cash's hit 'The Night Hank Williams Came To Town'), was a big hit for her in Ireland and quickly established her as a major Irish country singer. In 1990, in Zurich, competing against 14 countries, she won the European Country Music Gold Star Award singing 'Tipperary On My Mind', and since then she has continued to build her reputation with fine record releases. Her video Memories Of Home (1990) has sold in large numbers and she proved very popular on an appearance at the Wembley International Festival Of Country Music. Her touring has seen her play venues in the USA, Denmark and the Lebanon. On 26 September 1993, she survived a head-on car crash when travelling to a concert. She was scheduled to fly to Nashville the following day to record another album and make US concert appearances, but her injuries were so severe that it was six months before she was able to perform again. During her absence, the talented Trudi Lalor, a promising young vocalist, fronted Louise's band and fulfilled all her Irish and UK commitments. In 1995, completely recovered, Morrissey toured the UK with Charley Pride, receiving glowing tributes for her singing. She is equally at home with Irish ballads such as 'The Rose Of Allendale', country standards like 'Blue Eyes Crying In The Rain' or modern songs, including 'Achy Breaky Heart', one of the 14 tracks she recorded on an earlier visit to Nashville. She is the possessor of one of the finest female voices currently performing around the Irish and UK country music scene.

● ALBUMS: Louise (CMR 1988)★★★, When I Was Yours (CMR/Ritz 1990)★★★, Here I Am In Love Again (CMR/RTE 1991)★★★, Silver Threads Among The Gold - Reflections (CMR 1993)★★★, You'll Remember Me (Ritz 1994)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Memories Of Home (Ritz 1990).

Morrissey-Mullen

(see Morrissey, Dick; Mullen, Jim)

Morrow, Buddy

b. Muni Zudecoff, 8 February 1919, New Haven, USA. Morrow, after graduating from Juilliard, began his prolific career as a sideman with the hotel bands of Eddy Duchin and Vincent Lopez. He developed into a jazzman in Vocalion sessions with Sharkey Bonano's Sharks Of Rhythm, a 1936 Eddie Condon Dixieland group. He reached swing band status with Artie Shaw the same year, under his real name then later Muni Morrow (his adopted name). He joined Tommy Dorsey's trombone section in 1938 for 'Boogie Woogie' and 'Hawaiian War Chant', the next year playing with Paul Whiteman's Concert Orchestra in their Decca/Brunswick recording of Gershwin's 'Concerto In F'. He joined Tony Pastor in 1940 on his way to replacing Ray Conniff with the Bob Crosby band (1941). (The next year saw him in the US Navy, with a one-off Red McKenzie jazz session for Commodore producing inter alia 'Sweet Lorraine' and 'Talk Of The Town'). On demob Morrow played with Jimmy Dorsey for a while ('Jumping Jehosaphat') then moved into radio; conducting in the studios gave him a taste for leading, and RCA Victor decided to back him with his own band in 1951. His first minor hit was a crossover into R&B with 'Night Train', taken from Duke Ellington's 'Happy Go Lucky Local' by Jimmy Forrest, who had his own hit on United. There was little room for big bands in subsequent years, on singles at least, and after more minor hits with 'Man With The Golden Arm' and 'Dragnet', Morrow concentrated in the late 50s and early 60s on albums of standards for Mercury, Victor and Camden, not all of which were issued in the UK. He returned to studio work, emerging on occasion to front revivals of the Dorsey and Miller bands.

Morse, Ella Mae

b. 12 September, 1924, Mansfield, Texas, USA. A singer with an appealing jazz/blues style, Morse first sang with a band organized by her pianist mother and her father who was a drummer. At the age of 12 she was heard at a Houston Jam session by Jimmy Dorsey, who hired her as replacement for June Richmond. Her stay with Dorsey was a brief one, and she returned to Texas and sang with local bands. Subsequently she was heard singing in a San Diego club by Freddie Slack, who had been the pianist when she was with the Dorsey band. He signed her as the vocalist on his first Capitol recording session in 1942, which resulted in 'Cow Cow Boogie'. The record became a million-seller, and Morse had further hits in the 40s with 'Mr. Five By Five', 'Shoo Shoo Baby', 'Tess's Torch Song (If I Had A Man)', 'Milkman, Keep Those Bottles Quiet', 'The Patty Cake Man', 'Captain Kidd', 'Buzz Me', and 'House Of Blue Lights' (1946). She also appeared in a few minor films such as Reveille With Beverly, Ghost Catchers, South Of Dixie, and How Do You Do It? Morse retired for a time, but made a spectacular comeback in 1952 with another enormous hit, 'Blacksmith Blues', on which she was accompanied by Nelson Riddle and his orchestra. She continued to perform over the years, and was spotted in 1987 at Michael's Pub in New York with another 40s survivor, Nellie Lutcher.

● COMPILATIONS: The Morse Code (1957)★★★, Sensational 1951-57 recordings (Capitol 1986)★★★, Barrel House, Boogie And The Blues (Pathé Marconi 1984)★★★, The Hits Of (Pathé Marconi 1984)★★★, Capitol Collectors (Capitol 1992)★★★, The Very Best Of (Collectables 1998)★★★★.

Morse, Steve, Band

Instrumental rock guitarist Steve Morse (b. Ohio, USA) took his primary influence, like so many others, from the Beatles. Expanding his listening to include prevalent rock bands such as the Yardbirds, Jimi Hendrix and Led Zeppelin, as well as a nascent interest in country music, Morse moved with his family to Georgia at the age of 13. There he was captivated by a live concert by classical guitarist Juan Mercadal, and he persuaded the artist to give him lessons. He went on to study with Mercadal at the University of Miami, while also assembling his first band, Dixie Dregs (aka the Dregs). Inspired by a campus performance from John McLaughlin's original Mahavishnu Quartet, he dedicated himself to exploring the conventions and frontiers of instrumental rock music. The Dregs, essentially a vehicle for these experiments, went on to record eight albums of bright, impressive fusion. Morse qualified as a pilot during this time, and flying remains his greatest passion outside of music. He also began his solo career after briefly joining Kansas for two albums. The Steve Morse Band's debut, The Introduction, continued to mine a particularly adept blend of instrumental rock fusion, with a guest role for guitarist Albert Lee. There was more of a vocal presence for Stand Up, which featured an appearance from another renowned guitarist, Eric Johnson. By the advent of Southern Steel, the Steve Morse Band was a core team of Morse, Berklee graduate Dave LaRue (bass) and Van Romaine (drums, ex-Blood, Sweat And Tears; Kansas; and Naughty By Nature). The acclaim surrounding Morse has rarely died down throughout his career - Guitar Player magazine made him ineligible for their Best Overall Guitarist poll after he won it five times in succession. He has also collaborated with artists including Eddie Van Halen, Steve Howe and Lynyrd Skynyrd, and accepted an invitation to join Deep Purple for a spell during the mid-90s. The Steve Morse Band's sixth album, Structural Damage, revealed an undiminished talent, and included the Celtic-influenced 'Sacred Ground' and the cinematic 'Dreamland'.

● ALBUMS: The Introduction (Elektra 1984)★★★, Stand Up (Elektra 1985)★★★, High Tension Wires (MCA 1989)★★★, Southern Steel (MCA 1991)★★★★, Coast To Coast (MCA 1993)★★★, Structural Damage (High Street 1995)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Highlights (Warner Music 1995).

Morta Skuld

Milwaukee-based four-piece Morta Skuld specialize in a provocative cocktail of death metal and noise, brewed by Dave Gregor (vocals, guitar), Jason Hellman (bass), Jason O'Connell (guitar) and Kent Truckebrod (drums). Their debut for Deaf Records was somewhat lacklustre, and several personnel difficulties erupted following its release, resulting in the band splitting in two. However, by the advent of a second long-playing set, the group had moved up a gear both in tempo and cohesion. The improvement was partially justified by the fact that, although their debut was released early in 1993, it had actually been written and recorded over a year earlier. The newer material, akin to a skinnier Obituary sound, brought good reviews in the metal press.

● ALBUMS: Dying Remains (Deaf 1993)★★, As Humanity Fades (Deaf 1994)★★★.

Morton, Benny

b. 31 January 1907, New York City, New York, USA, d. 28 December 1985. Largely self-taught, Morton played trombone in bands in and around New York during his teenage years and by 1926 was sufficiently advanced to be hired by Fletcher Henderson. He subsequently played in bands led by Chick Webb, Don Redman and Count Basie; in 1940 he became a member of Teddy Wilson's superb sextet. He also made record dates with Billie Holiday. In 1943 he joined Edmond Hall's small group, then led his own band for a few years before becoming active in theatre pit bands in New York. In the 50s and 60s he was also busy in radio and recording studio bands, but occasionally turned up on record dates with artists such as Buck Clayton and Ruby Braff, and by the end of the 60s was mostly back on the jazz scene. He toured widely, playing in various bands including the Saints And Sinners package and outfits led by Wild Bill Davison, Bobby Hackett and Sy Oliver. A smooth and polished player with a relaxed and elegant style, Morton was one of the unsung heroes of the swing era.

● ALBUMS: with Buck Clayton, Ruby Braff Buck Meets Ruby (1954)★★★.

Morton, George 'Shadow'

b. 1942, Richmond, Virginia, USA. Shadow Morton - so named because he was never found where he was expected - began his career as a member of the Marquis. This New York vocal group often accompanied Ellie Gaye who, as Ellie Greenwich, later enjoyed success as a songwriter with husband Jeff Barry. In 1964 Morton brought her a demo of his first composition, '(Remember) Walkin' In The Sand', performed by the then-unknown Shangri-Las. Captivated by the ethereal performance, the couple placed the song with the nascent Red Bird label where it became the first of several atmospheric collaborations between the artist and this popular act. A US Top 5 hit, the single was succeeded by 'Leader Of The Pack' (a 1964 chart-topper), 'Give Him A Great Big Kiss', 'Out In The Streets' and 'I Can Never Go Home Anymore', but Morton then tired of the girl-group genre. In 1967 he helped launch the career of Janis Ian with the controversial 'Society's Child', but found greater fame for his production work for Vanilla Fudge. The melodramatic air of the Shangri-Las was herein blended to psychedelic pop, most notably on 'You Keep Me Hanging On', a funereally-paced interpretation of a former hit for the Supremes. This inspired rendition sold over one million copies and established a pattern for several subsequent releases. However, Morton left the music business having produced Too Much Too Soon (1974) for the New York Dolls and undertook a five-year sabbatical. His return in 1979 garnered some publicity, but he failed to recapture the success of the previous decade.

Morton, Jelly Roll

b. Ferdinand Joseph Lemott (or La Menthe), 20 October 1890, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 10 July 1941. A gifted musician, Morton played various instruments before deciding to concentrate on piano. In the early years of the 20th century he was a popular figure on the seamier side of New Orleans nightlife. He played in brothels, hustled pool and generally lived the high-life. His reputation spread extensively, owing to tours and theatrical work in various parts of the Deep South and visits to Kansas City, Chicago, Los Angeles and other important urban centres. He also worked in Canada, Alaska and Mexico. From 1923 he spent five years based in Chicago, touring and recording with various bands, including the New Orleans Rhythm Kings and his own band, the Red Hot Peppers. He later worked with Fate Marable and W.C. Handy, and by the end of the 20s had moved to New York for residencies and more recording sessions. He also formed a big band, with which he toured throughout the east coast states. Various business ventures played a part in his life, often with disastrous financial consequences, but he remained musically active throughout the 30s, even though he was on the margins of the commercial success which many jazzmen enjoyed in that decade. During the 30s Morton moved to Washington, DC, where he made many recordings, also playing and reminiscing for Alan Lomax Snr. of the US Library of Congress. By 1940 his health was failing and he moved to Los Angeles, where he died in July 1941.

One of the major figures in jazz history and a significant musical conceptualist, in particular the role of the arranger, Morton's penchant for self-promotion worked against him and for many years critical perceptions of his true worth were blighted. Many of the recordings which he made during his stay in Chicago have proved to be classics, not least for the construction of those songs he composed and the manner in which they were arranged. Although some thought that carefully arranged music went contrary to the spirit of improvisation that was inherent in jazz, Morton's arrangements, to which he insisted his musicians should strictly adhere, inhibited neither soloists nor the ability of the ensembles to swing mightily. In his arrangements of the mid-20s, Morton foreshadowed many of the musical trends which only emerged fully a decade later as big band jazz became popular. Curiously, Morton failed to grasp the possibilities then open to him and preferred to concentrate on small group work at a time when popular trends were moving in the opposite direction. His compositions include many jazz standards, among them 'The Pearls', 'Sidewalk Blues', 'King Porter Stomp', 'Dead Man Blues', 'Grandpa's Spells', 'Doctor Jazz', 'Wolverine Blues', 'Black Bottom Stomp' and 'Mister Jelly Lord'. As a pianist, Morton's early work was ragtime-oriented; but unlike many of his contemporaries, he was able to expand the rather rigid concept of ragtime to incorporate emerging jazz ideas and his later playing style shows a vital and often exhilarating grasp of many styles. It was, however, as an arranger that Morton made his greatest contribution and he can be regarded as the first significant arranger in jazz. Morton himself certainly never underestimated his own importance; quite the opposite, in fact, since he billed himself as the Originator of Jazz, Stomps and Blues. Shortly before his death he became involved in a mildly embarrassing public wrangle over the origins of the music, denying (rightly, of course) that W.C. Handy was the 'originator of jazz and the blues' and counter-claiming that he had created jazz in 1902. This outburst of self-aggrandizement was ridiculed and created an atmosphere in which few fans, critics or fellow musicians took his work seriously. By the early 50s, however, some more perceptive individuals began to reassess his contribution to jazz and this reappraisal gradually swelled into a tidal wave of critical acclaim. By the 70s musicians were eager to play Morton's music, and through into the 90s many concerts and recordings in the USA and UK have been dedicated to his achievements.

● ALBUMS: New Orleans Memories (Commodore 1950)★★★, Peppers (Jazz Panorama 1951)★★★, The Saga Of Mr Jelly Lord Volumes 1-12 (Circle 1951)★★★, Immortal Performances (RCA Victor 1952)★★★, Rediscovered Solos (Riverside 1953)★★★, First Recordings (Riverside 1954)★★★, Classic Jazz Piano Volumes 1 & 2 (Riverside 1954)★★★, Classic Piano Solos (Riverside 1955)★★★, The Incomparable Jelly Roll Morton (Riverside 1956)★★★, Mr Jelly Lord (Riverside 1956)★★★, Plays And Sings (Riverside 1956)★★★, Rags And Blues (Riverside 1956)★★★, Library Of Congress Recordings Volumes 1-12 (Riverside 1956)★★★★, Mr Jelly Lord (RCA Victor 1956)★★★, Stomps And Joys (RCA Victor 1965)★★★, Jelly Roll Morton (Mainstream 1965)★★★, I Thought I Heard Buddy Bolden Say (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Jelly Roll Morton Centennial: His Complete Victor Recordings 1926-1939 recordings (Bluebird 1990)★★★★, Rarities And Alternatives 1923-1940 recordings (Suisa 1991)★★★, Mr Jelly Lord (Pickwick 1992)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Mister Jelly Roll: The Fortunes Of Jelly Roll Morton, New Orleans Creole And 'Inventor Of Jazz', Alan Lomax. Jelly Roll Morton, M. Williams. Jelly Roll, Jabbo, And Fats, Whitney Balliett. Jelly Roll Morton's Last Night At The Jungle Inn, Samuel B. Charters.

Morton, Pete

b. 30 July 1964, Leicester, England. Morton is one of the newer group of folk singer/songwriters to emerge in recent years who have gained a growing acceptance and respectability. During school days, he played in a punk band redolent of the Ramones, and subsequently moved into the folk scene. Having already 'discovered' Bob Dylan, Morton found a good deal of interest in the talent available on the circuit. He moved to Manchester in 1987, and was signed by Harbourtown Records, which released the highly acclaimed Frivolous Love. This brought Morton to the attention of a wider audience, and he began touring the UK. With the follow-up One Big Joke appearing a year later to good reviews, Morton undertook his first tour of the USA in 1989. His style is generally rock-orientated, but still based on traditional styles.

● ALBUMS: Frivolous Love (Harbourtown 1987)★★, One Big Joke (Harbourtown 1988)★★★★, with Roger Wilson, Simon Edwards Urban Folk Volume One (Harbourtown 1990)★★★, Mad World Blues (Harbourtown 1992)★★★, Courage, Love And Grace (Harboutown 1995)★★★.

Morton, Tex

b. Robert William Lane, 8 August 1916, Nelson, New Zealand, d. 23 July 1983, Sydney, Australia. A Maori neighbour taught Morton his first guitar chords and he became so obsessed with music that, at the age of 15, he ran away from home and busked on the streets of Waihi. When asked one day by the town's policemen if his name was Bobby Lane, he noticed a nearby garage sign that gave the name of 'Morton' and quickly informed the officer that his name was Bob Morton and that he was a street singer and entertainer. He worked on various jobs, including one with a travelling troupe known as the Gaieties Of 1932. He made some aluminium disc recordings in Wellington (never commercially released), which proved very popular on local radio and may well be the first country music records made outside the USA. In 1932, he moved to Australia and worked with travelling shows, where, in addition to singing, he worked as a magician, a boxing booth fighter, with wild animals, as the stooge for others, and even rode as a Wall Of Death rider. In 1934, with a repertoire of Australian bush ballads as well as the early country songs that he had heard on record, he moved to Sydney. He undertook whatever jobs he could find, including going to sea as a stoker and electrician, and once worked as a labourer for the firm responsible for installing the lighting on Sydney Harbour Bridge. After eventually winning a major talent show, he made his first recordings for Regal Zonophone in February 1936 when, among the four tracks recorded, two, 'Happy Yodeller' and 'Swiss Sweetheart', were his own compositions. The records sold well, further sessions soon followed and by 1937, Tex Morton the Yodelling Boundary Rider was a nationally known star. When he played his first concert in Brisbane, the crowd totalled 50,000. He continued to record throughout the late 30s, the material ranging from known country songs and his own numbers to recitations of the works of famous Australian poets Henry Lawson and Banjo Patterson. He published his Tex Morton songbook and a newspaper even ran a comic strip of his adventures. In 1939, a major star, he had established his own travelling circus/rodeo, where apart from singing, he entertained with trick shooting, fancy riding, a memory act and magic. World War II forced him to close his show and he invested heavily in a dude ranch, losing all his money when the project failed. After the war, he re-formed his rodeo, linked it with another major touring zoo and circus and toured all over Australia. In 1949, he decided to move to the USA and, having by then learned an act using hypnotism as well as his other talents, he moved to Los Angeles. After spending two years working as a singer and acting on radio and in some films, he began to appear as The Great Doctor Robert Morton - the World's Greatest Hypnotist. In 1951, he toured the USA and Canada with his one-man show on which he sang, did recitations, trick shooting, mind reading and hypnotism. He proved so popular that he set attendance records in many cities, including St. Louis, Boston and Vancouver and in Toronto his show outran South Pacific. Ever the showman, he used many gimmicks to attract the crowd, including stunts such as walking blindfold on the parapet of the tallest building in the town. In the early 60s, with many similar acts now performing, he gave up the hypnotism and, for a time, he worked on the stage and in films as Robert Morton. He briefly and unsuccessfully resurrected The Great Morton upon his return to Australia in 1965. He toured for a while with a small rodeo show but soon found that television had made such entertainment no longer viable. He continued to record and in 1973, he scored a major Australian hit with his song 'The Goodiwindi Grey' (a tribute to a famous racehorse), recorded at what turned out to be his last recording session. Throughout the 70s, he appeared on television and in Australian films and although he often tried to leave out the old hillbilly and yodelling songs, the public would not let him. It is estimated that during his long career he recorded over 1000 songs and had many major national hits with numbers such as 'Beautiful Queensland', 'The Black Sheep' (his best-selling song) and 'Good Old Droving Days'. Tex Morton died from pneumonia in July 1983.

● ALBUMS: The Tex Morton Story (1959)★★★, Tex Morton Looks Back (1961)★★★, Songs Of The Outback (1961)★★★, The Versatile Tex Morton (1962)★★★, Sing, Smile And Sigh (1964)★★★, Encores (60s)★★★, Hallelujah I'm A Bum (60s)★★★, The Travelling Showman (60s)★★★, Tex Morton Today (1970)★★★, Tex Morton's Australia (1973)★★★, early tracks some with sister Dorrie Red River Valley (1975)★★★.

Morwells

Formed in 1973, in Kingston, Jamaica, this group featured Maurice 'Blacka' Wellington (vocals, percussion) and Eric 'Bingi Bunny' Lamont (b. *c.*1956, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies, d. January 1994; vocals, guitar). Prior to forming the group (the group's name is a contraction of Maurice Wellington), Wellington had been a record salesman, and Lamont had recorded with Bongo Herman for Derrick Harriott. In 1974 they released 'Mafia Boss' and 'You Got To Be Holy' on their own Morwell Esquire label, and followed these with their debut, Presenting The Morwells, in 1975. The album was a blend of strong original songs and cover versions of hits by the Melodians and Delroy Wilson. A dub version of the album, Dub Me, was also released, and proved even more popular than the vocal album. In 1976 Wellington became an engineer and producer for Joe Gibbs, and Lamont became the rhythm guitarist with the Revolutionaries, Channel One's house band. This gave them considerable access to the island's top musicians and studios, and in this period they reached peak form. Singles on Morwell Esquire included 'Proverb' (1976) and 'Crab In A Bag' (1977), and eight tracks from their first album plus four singles were released in the UK as Crab Race. Bassist Errol 'Flabba' Holt joined the group on a permanent basis, and further singles in 1977 included ''77 Festival' for Joe Gibbs, 'Mix-up' for Winston 'Niney' Holness and 'Africa We Want To Go' for Tony Robinson. Excellent albums followed with Cool Runnings, Kingston 12 Toughie and The Best Of The Morwells. The group then broke up, with Maurice Wellington continuing with the Morwell label, and Eric Lamont and Errol Holt forming the Roots Radics.

● ALBUMS: Presenting The Morwells (Morwells 1975)★★★, Dub Me (1975)★★★★, Crab Race (Burning Sounds 1978)★★★, Cool Runnings (Bushays 1979)★★★★, Kingston 12 Toughies (Carib Gems 1980)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The Morwells (Night Hawk 1981)★★★★.

Mosby, Johnny And Jonie

Mosby (b. 26 April *c.*30s, Ft. Smith, Arkansas, USA) moved to Los Angeles when a child and during the 50s built a reputation around the local country circuit, soon fronting his own band. He first met Jonie (b. Janice Irene Shields, 10 August 1940, Van Nuys, Los Angeles, California, USA) when she successfully auditioned for the post of female vocalist with his band early in 1958, and that same year they married. They made their first recordings for a minor label in 1959 and had local chart success with 'Just Before Dawn'. They were later signed to Columbia Records and achieved their first US country chart entry in 1963 with a Harlan Howard song called 'Don't Call Me From A Honky Tonk'. They left Columbia and joined Capitol in 1964, and by 1973 had 16 further hits to their credit. These included 'Trouble In My Arms', 'Keep Those Cards And Letters Coming In' and 'Just Hold My Hand'. They also showed a penchant for recording, with minor success, country versions of songs that were pop hits, such as 'Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me' (Mel Carter), 'I'm Leaving It Up To You' (Dale And Grace) and 'My Happiness' (Connie Francis). Jonie and Johnny limited their touring in favour of raising their family, but appeared on various television shows and for several years had their own Country Music Time on Los Angeles television. They moved to Nashville in the 70s but achieved no chart hits after 1973.

● ALBUMS: The New Sweethearts Of Country Music (Starday 1965)★★★, Mr & Mrs Country Music (Columbia 1965)★★★, Make A Left And Then A Right (Capitol 1968)★★★, Hold Me (Capitol 1969)★★★, I'll Never Be Free (Capitol 1969)★★, Just Hold My Hand (Capitol 1969)★★★, My Happiness (Capitol 1970)★★★, Oh, Love Of Mine (Capitol 1970)★★.

Mosca, Sal

b. Salvatore Joseph Mosca, 27 April 1927, Mount Vernon, New York, USA. A student, disciple and close friend of Lennie Tristano, pianist Mosca has followed his mentor's example by recording and touring only rarely. In the 50s he did play on several Lee Konitz albums, and some sessions with Peter Ind later appeared on the bassist's Wave label. In the 70s Mosca again worked with Konitz and with Warne Marsh, toured Europe as a solo artist and played at the Lennie Tristano Memorial Concert in 1979.

In the 80s he was seldom heard as a performer, but remained active as a teacher. A remarkably subtle player, with the sophisticated harmonic ear characteristic of Tristanoites, Mosca can disguise the chord changes of the best-known standard so cleverly that he makes it virtually unrecognizable, creating an entirely new tune in the process.

● ALBUMS: With Peter Ind At The Den 1959 recording

(1969)★★★, On Piano 1955-1959 recordings (1969)★★★★, Sal Mosca Music (1977)★★, For You (1979)★★, with others Lennie Tristano Memorial Concert (1979)★★★★, with Warne Marsh How Deep, How High 1977-1979 recordings (1980)★★★, A Concert 1979 recording (Jazz Records 1990)★★.

Moseley Shoals - Ocean Colour Scene

Riding on a crest of late 60s retro rock, this band have received a disproportionate dollop of criticism since their considerable success with this, their second album. Revealing influences ranging from 10CC and the Idle Race ('The Day We Caught The Train') to the Love Affair and Beatles ('The Circle'), the derivative nature of this record is nevertheless highly palatable. Even a Randy Newman soundalike rears up in 'Lining Your Pockets' and Eric Clapton's Disraeli Gears wah-wah guitar can also be found liberally sprinkled throughout ('The Riverboat Song', 'Policeman & Pirates'). A necessary album for anyone with a magpie complex.

- Tracks: The Riverboat Song; The Day We Caught The Train; The Circle; Lining Your Pockets; Fleeting Mind; 40 Past Midnight; One For The Road; It's My Shadow; Policemen & Pirates; The Downstream; You've Got It Bad; Get Away.
- First released 1996
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Moses, Bob

b. 28 January 1948, New York, USA. Moses grew up surrounded by musicians like Charlie Mingus, for whom his father was press agent. Largely self-taught, he started to play drums when he was 10 years old and also played vibes in local Latin bands in his teens. He appeared with Rahsaan Roland Kirk in the mid-60s and formed Free Spirits with Larry Coryell, one of the first jazz-rock bands. After a short stay with Dave Liebman's Open Sky he joined Gary Burton. In the early 70s he formed Compost with Harold Vick (tenor) and Jack DeJohnette and toured the UK with the Mike Gibbs Orchestra before returning to the groups of Gary Burton and Pat Metheny. At this stage he was also writing for large ensembles and formed his own label - Mozown Records - to release the results. The music was recorded by all-star line-ups of New York musicians and was accorded great critical acclaim. Moses makes personal use of a wide range of influences to create colourful, complex yet swinging music.

In the 80s he played with the Steve Kuhn/Sheila Jordan Band (1979-82), George Gruntz Big Band and his own quintet. He is the author of the drum method Drum Wisdom.

- ALBUMS: with Rahsaan Roland Kirk I Talk With the Spirits (1966)★★★★, with Kirk Rip, Rig And Panic (1966)★★★★, with Gary Burton Lofty Fake Anagram (1967)★★★, with Compost Life Is Round (1971)★★, with Mike Gibbs The Only Chrome Waterfall Orchestra (1975)★★★★, with Pat Metheny Bright Size Life (1975)★★★★, with Steve Swallow Bittersweet In The Ozone (1975)★★★, with Swallow Home (1979)★★★, with Swallow When Elephants Dream Of Music (1982)★★★, with Swallow Visits With The Great Spirit (Gramavision 1983)★★★, Wheels Of Coloured Light (Open Minds 1983)★★★, with Gibbs Big Music (Virgin 1988)★★★★, Story Of Moses (Gala 1989)★★★, with Billy Martin East Side (ITM 1989)★★★.

Moses, J.C.

b. John Curtis Moses, 18 October 1936, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 1977. Moses began as a percussionist, learning congas and bongos, with drummer Paula Roberts. Between 1958 and 1960 he played with Walt Harper, then relocated to New York. His accurate, expansive timekeeping was embraced by the progressive jazz community, most notably Eric Dolphy, who used him on the sessions which produced the little-known masterpieces Conversations and Iron Man (1964). Other musical associates included pianists Cedar Walton and Herbie Hancock and bebop trumpeter Kenny Dorham. In 1963 he left for Europe with the short-lived New York Contemporary Five and later appeared on fellow-Fiver Archie Shepp's Fire Music (1965) and On This Night (1966). Between 1965 and 1967 he drummed with Roland Rahsaan Kirk. For the next two years he freelanced, playing with John Coltrane, Sonny Stitt, Jackie McLean, Hal Singer and singer Nancy Wilson. In 1969 he left for Denmark and became house drummer at the famous Cafe Montmartre in Copenhagen. As well as working with fellow expatriates Dexter Gordon and Kenny Drew, he accompanied Coleman Hawkins, Ben Webster, Ted Curson and Tete Monteliou, and also recorded with John Tchicai's Cadentia Nova Danica orchestra (Afrodisiaca, 1969). After 1970, problems with his kidneys limited his activities and he returned to Pittsburgh, where he played with Nathan Davis and Eric Kloss. His death in 1977, aged 41, deprived the world of a drummer who could relate both to New Thing iconoclasts and swing veterans.

- ALBUMS: with Eric Dolphy Conversations (1964)★★★, with Dolphy Iron Man (1964)★★★, Archie Shepp & The New York Contemporary Five (1963)★★.

Moses, Pablo

b. Pablo Henry, *c.*1953, Jamaica, West Indies. In 1975 Moses made his debut recording, 'I Man A Grasshopper'. It was immediately evident that an extraordinary talent was at work, an impression that was sustained by the release of 'We Should Be In Angola' (1976), produced by Clive Hunt. His first album, Revolutionary Dream, was released in 1977, and it still stands as a genuine mid-70s reggae classic. Moses's detached delivery of his parable-like songs coalesced with Geoffrey Chung's brilliant production and arrangements to form a truly remarkable whole. Two further excellent albums under Chung's supervision followed, A Song and Pave The Way. Moses then decided to produce himself, but was unable to sustain the quality of his previous releases. Since the early 80s, he has toured extensively, and gained a strong reputation internationally as a live performer.

● ALBUMS: Revolutionary Dream (Tropical Sound Track 1977)★★★★, A Song (Island 1980)★★★, Pave The Way (Mango/Island 1981)★★★, In The Future (Alligator/Mercury 1983)★★, Tension (Alligator/Mercury 1985)★★, Live To Love (Rohit 1985)★★, We Refuse (Profile 1990)★★, Charlie (Profile 1990)★★, The Confessions Of A Rastaman (Musidisc 1993)★★.

Mosley, Snub

b. Lawrence L. Mosley, 29 December 1905, Little Rock, Arkansas, USA, d. 21 July 1981. Starting out on trombone, in the 20s Mosley joined in the popular territory band led by Alphonso Trent. Noted for his aggressive, attacking style, Mosley was dissatisfied with what he saw as the limitations of the trombone and invented his own instrument. This was a slide saxophone, which he thereafter preferred to a more orthodox instrument, although he still continued to play trombone. Leaving Trent in 1933, Mosley worked with some of the best-known bands of the period, including those led by Claude Hopkins, Fats Waller and Louis Armstrong. He also tried his hand at bandleading, but while he worked steadily throughout the 40s and into the 50s, accommodating shifts in musical tastes by playing and singing R&B, he never made the breakthrough to nationwide success. In the late 70s he became a popular figure on the international club and festival scene.

● ALBUMS: Snub Mosley Live At The Pizza Express (1978)★★★.

Moss, Buddy

b. Eugene Moss, 26 January 1914, Hancock County, Georgia, USA, d. October 1984, Atlanta, Georgia, USA. It was as a harmonica player that Moss first appeared on record, in 1930, as one of the Georgia Cotton Pickers with Barbecue Bob and Curley Weaver. Although he apparently learned guitar from Bob, his playing was distinctly in the ragtime-inflected Eastern blues tradition of artists such as Blind Blake. Moss had his own style, however, a carefully crafted blues sound that later established his name as one of the most popular Atlanta-based singers of the 30s. He recorded prolifically between 1933 and 1935, sometimes backed by Weaver and occasionally Blind Willie McTell. On later dates he teamed up with Josh White and the two musicians accompanied each other on their respective recordings. Altogether, Moss made over 60 tracks in these three years, but there followed a long hiatus when he was sentenced to a prison term soon after the 1935 session. He was released in 1941 and recorded again, this time with Sonny Terry and Brownie McGhee. The outbreak of war cut short his prospects and he earned his living working outside music until he was rediscovered in the 60s, although this led to only a few new recordings and live appearances.

● COMPILATIONS: Georgia Blues 1930-1935 (Travellin' Man 1983)★★★, Red River Blues (Travellin' Man 1988)★★★, Buddy Moss 1930-1941 (Travellin' Man 1990)★★★.

Moss, Danny

b. 16 August 1927, Redhill, Surrey, England. By the late 40s tenor saxophonist Moss had established a reputation as an outstanding musician and was hired by many of the leading UK jazz and dancebands of the day, including those of Ted Heath, Oscar Rabin, Vic Lewis, John Dankworth and Humphrey Lyttelton. From the early 60s Moss led his own small groups, touring the UK and sometimes working with fellow UK musicians such as Sandy Brown and Dave Shepherd. Additionally, he was in great demand as an accompanist and featured soloist with visiting American artists, most notably with a succession of leading singers that included Ella Fitzgerald, Sarah Vaughan and Rosemary Clooney. In 1990 Moss, whose wife is singer Jeannie Lambe, took up residence in Australia. In the summer of the same year he was awarded an MBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours List. A committed jazzman, Moss's distinctive playing style shows him to be at ease whether on uptempo swingers, where his full-bodied sound is a delight, or on soulful ballads to which he brings great emotional depth.

● ALBUMS: Danny Moss Quintet With Strings (1966)★★★, The Good Life (1968)★★★, Straighten Up And Fly Right (1979)★★, Danny Moss Quartet With Geoff Simkins (1979)★★★, Jeannie Lambe (1980)★★★★, with Lambe Blues And All That Jazz (1982)★★★, with Simpkins Danny Moss And Geoff Simpkins Vol 2 (Flyright 1982)★★★, with Lambe The Midnight Sun (1984)★★★.

Moss, Jerry

(see A&M Records)

Most Happy Fella, The

Any show that opened in the same season as My Fair Lady was bound to be somewhat overshadowed by Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's masterpiece, which was destined to be a smash hit. However, The Most Happy Fella was, in some ways, a more ambitious work than its female counterpart, and enjoyed a satisfactory run of 676 performances on Broadway. The show opened on 3 May 1956 at the Imperial Theatre, and immediately confused many of the critics: was it an opera? A play with music, perhaps? Frank Loesser, who wrote the music, lyrics, and libretto, settled on 'an extended musical comedy'. His adaptation of Sidney Howard's 1924 Pulitzer Prize-winning play, They Knew What They Wanted, was set in Napa Valley, California, and tells of an Italian vintner, Tony (Robert Weede, a former opera singer, making his Broadway debut), who is maturing rather more quickly than the grapes in his vineyard. He longs for a wife, and proposes by post to Rosabella (Jo Sullivan, who later became Loesser's wife), a waitress he has noticed in a San Francisco restaurant. To increase his chances of success, he includes a photograph of his handsome young foreman, Joey (Art Lund), and she hurried there to meet him. Even though he has deceived her, she still marries Tony - but tarries with Joey. When she discovers that she is pregnant with Joey's child she is determined to leave, but Tony forgives her and adopts the child as his own. With spoken dialogue at a minimum, The Most Happy Fella is a virtually sung-through show, and Loesser's score has moments of high emotion in songs such as 'Somebody Somewhere', My Heart Is Full Of You', and 'Joey, Joey'. Rosabella's friend Cleo (Susan Johnson), who follows her out from San Francisco, becomes fairly friendly herself with one of the ranch hands, Herman (Shorty Long), and leads the company in a hymn to Dallas, the rousing 'Big D'. The show's big hit song was 'Standing On The Corner', which became popular in the USA for Dean Martin, and the Four Lads who repeated their success in the UK, in competition with the King Brothers. Another of the show's lighter numbers, 'Happy To Make Your Acquaintance', also entered the UK chart in a version by Sammy Davis Jnr. and Carmen McRae. The rest of Loesser's highly distinguished score, which contained well over 30 songs in a wide variety of musical styles such as arias and choral pieces, included 'Ooh! My Feet', 'Mama, Mama', 'Warm All Over', 'I Like Everybody', 'Song Of A Summer Night', 'Sposalizio', 'How Beautiful The Days', 'Rosabella', 'The Most Happy Fella' and 'Abbondanza'. The Most Happy Fella was not everybody's idea of what a Broadway musical should be, but during a 20-month stay on Broadway, it won the New York Drama Critics Award for best musical, and subsequently ran for 288 performances at the London Coliseum. Lund reprised his role in the West End, during which time he became a favourite of audiences there, and returned with Richard Rogers' No Strings in 1963. The Most Happy Fella was revived on Broadway in 1979, and presented by the New York City Opera in 1991, with Giorgio Tozzi in the lead. In the following year the show was back on Broadway again, via the Goodspeed Opera House and Los Angeles, this time with just a two-piano orchestration, which Loesser himself had commissioned some years previously. Although critically acclaimed, the production ran for only 229 performances and lost most of its $1.4 million investment. It was nominated for four Tony Awards, but won just one - Scott Waara for best featured actor - being pipped at the post for 'best revival' by Guys And Dolls, which is, of course, another Frank Loesser show. Unusually, the Original Cast album was recorded in 'real time' - in two long takes - just as the show was performed in the theatre. Even with part-retakes, the recording took only one day to complete, in comparison with the 1956 three-album set which needed a week of session time. In 1993, a concert performance of The Most Happy Fella became 'the first of its kind to be broadcast on BBC radio in England'.

Most, Mickie

b. Michael Peter Hayes, June 1938, Aldershot, Hampshire, England. In the late 50s Most toured and recorded for Decca as the Most Brothers with Alex Wharton who later produced the Moody Blues' hit 'Go Now'. From 1959-63 he worked in South Africa, producing his own hit versions of songs such as Chuck Berry's 'Johnny B. Goode' and Ray Peterson's 'Corrina Corrina'. He returned to Britain aiming to develop a career in production and after scoring a minor hit with 'Mister Porter', he became producer of the Newcastle R&B group the Animals. Beginning with 'Baby Let Me Take You Home' in 1964, Most supervised seven hit singles by the group and was now in demand as a producer. Much of his skill at this time lay in his choice of songs for artists such as the Nashville Teens and Herman's Hermits, for whom he found 'Silhouettes', 'I'm Into Something Good' and 'Wonderful World'. After his earliest UK successes Most was given a five-year retainer production deal by CBS in America, under which he produced records by Lulu, Terry Reid, Jeff Beck and Donovan, for whom he created a new electric sound on 'Sunshine Superman' (1966). He had later successes with artists such as Mary Hopkin (the 1970 Eurovision Song Contest entry, 'Knock Knock Who's There') and Julie Felix ('El Condor Pasa') but after 1969 he concentrated on running the RAK label. For over a decade, RAK singles were regularly to be found in the UK Top 10. The roster included Hot Chocolate, Alexis Korner's CCS, Smokie, Chris Spedding, Kim Wilde, New World, Suzi Quatro and Mud. The last three acts were produced by Nicky Chinn and Mike Chapman for RAK. During the 70s Most was a member of the panel on the UK television talent show New Faces and with the arrival of punk, he presented Revolver, a short-lived show devoted to the new music. However, he was out of sympathy with much of punk and the subsequent New Romantic trend and after the RAK back catalogue was sold to EMI in 1983, Most was less active. Among his few later productions was 'Me And My Foolish Heart' an early record by Johnny Hates Jazz which included his son Calvin. After taking a brief sabbatical, Most returned in 1988 with a revived RAK label, producing Perfect Stranger which featured ex-Uriah Heep singer Peter Goalby. In 1995 Most appeared once more in the Sunday Times 'Britain's Richest 500', this time announcing a car collection worth over £1m and a new house costing £4m with claims that it is the largest private house in Britain.

Motello, Elton

Alan Ward had originally been the singer with punk hopefuls Bastard, which also included in its ranks future Damned guitarist Brian James. After the band split Ward assumed the pseudonym of Elton Motello, alternating between England and Belgium, where he had built up associations touring with Bastard. He made his debut appearance at the end of 1977 with 'Jet Boy, Jet Girl', first in Belgium on Pinball, followed a month later by a UK release on Lightning. The track achieved international success with the re-titled French version, 'Ca Plane Pour Moi', by pop-punk exponent Plastic Bertrand. Success for Motello's original was much more limited, even though it was released in many different countries. A few months later, 'Jet Boy, Jet Girl' was re-recorded to greater notoriety by Captain Sensible And The Softies. Towards the end of 1978 Motello recorded his debut album, Victim Of Time, which was released in March 1979 by Attic Records, but only in Canada. He was backed by various players including Peter (guitar), Nobby (drums) and Willie Change (bass), with the help of Jet Staxx (guitar), Tony Boast (guitar) and former Pink Fairies and Pretty Things drummer John 'Twink' Alder. In addition to the single, the album included a remake of the Small Faces' 'Sha La La La Lee' and another 11 compositions that fluctuated between pop and punk. With the new decade came two further releases, '20th Century Fox' and a second album, Pop Art.

● ALBUMS: Victim Of Time (Attic 1979)★★★, Pop Art (Attic 1980)★★★.

Motels

Formed in Berkeley, California, in the early 70s, the Motels comprised Martha Davis (vocals), Jeff Jourard (guitar), his brother Martin (keyboards, saxophone), former jazzer Michael Goodroe (bass) and UK session drummer Brian Glascock (ex-Toe Fat). Transferring to Los Angeles, the group assembled for appearances at Hollywood's Whiskey club throughout July 1978, attracting a modicum of music industry interest in the process. In 1979 their stunning debut album was issued by Capitol Records. Like its remaining tracks, the hit ballad 'Total Control' was produced by John Carter and composed by central figure Davis, whose eclectic tastes included blues, Broadway musicals and Stravinsky. Her onstage presence was 'exceptionally charismatic', wrote The Los Angeles Times, wrongly predicting that she 'could become one of the most influential female performers in rock'. Her boyfriend, Tim McGovern (ex-Captain Kopter And The Fabulous Twirlybirds), replaced Jeff Jourard during sessions for Careful, with a sleeve adorned with a print of a Dougie Fields painting. Though its singles, 'Whose Problem' and 'Days Are OK', flitted into the US and UK charts, they fared well in regional charts in Australasia, a territory where the group made its strongest impact. Their albums and tie-in singles tended to hover around the lower half of the UK Top 40 after All Four One, at number 16, marked the Motels' commercial zenith. In their home-land they enjoyed two US Top 10 hits with 'Only The Lonely' and 'Suddenly Last Summer', but folded in 1987.

● ALBUMS: The Motels (Capitol 1979)★★★★, Careful (Capitol 1980)★★★, All Four One (Capitol 1982)★★★, Little Robbers (Capitol 1983)★★, Shock (Capitol 1985)★★.

Moten, Bennie

b. 13 November 1894, Kansas City, Missouri, USA, d. 2 April 1935. In his youth, Moten gained a substantial reputation in and around his home town as a pianist; by 1920 he had become an established and respected bandleader. His unit, originally a small outfit, gradually expanded until it was a big band ready to take advantage of the upsurge in interest in this kind of ensemble. As a pianist and an accomplished arranger, Moten deftly blended New Orleans concepts into the free-wheeling style popular in the midwest. Beginning its recording career in 1923, the band built a reputation far afield, and residencies in New York followed. Moten attracted many excellent musicians until his was the outstanding band of the region. Some of the best men were poached from Walter Page's Blue Devils, among them Bill (not yet Count) Basie, Oran 'Hot Lips' Page, Eddie Durham and Jimmy Rushing. Eventually, Walter Page went along, too. Later additions to the band included Ben Webster, Herschel Evans, Eddie Barefield and Lester Young. By the mid-30s the band was not merely the finest in the region, but was superior to many of the headline bands in the east and elsewhere. In 1935 the unit visited Chicago to audition for a residency at the Grand Terrace Ballroom. When they headed for home Moten remained behind for a tonsillectomy and died when the surgeon's knife slipped and severed his jugular vein. The band subsequently broke up, but later many of the musicians reformed under the leadership of Buster Smith and Basie, and later still the band became Basie's. As the leader of an outstanding band, Moten occupies an important position in the history of Kansas City jazz, even if he was understandably overshadowed by his musical legatees.

● COMPILATIONS: The Complete Bennie Moten Vols 1/2, 3/4, 5/6 (RCA, 1923-32 recordings)★★★★.

Moth Macabre

Originally based in Minneapolis, Minnesota, USA, Moth Macabre comprise Daniel Presley (guitar, vocals), Michelle Muldrow (bass), Tom Risse (guitar) and David White (drums). According to Presley, their name is synonymous with the sound they have produced since their formation in the early 90s: 'It's an oxymoron, a dichotomy. We can be ethereal and then all of a sudden be in your face. That imbalance and conflict appeals to us.' Presley had grown up in Miami, Florida, taking piano lessons, which he loathed, from the age of six. He recovered his interest in music in time to buy a guitar at the age of 12. After completing high school he moved to Minneapolis, reportedly after having a dream in which Prince advised him to do so. In 1990 he met Muldrow, and they began collaborating immediately. Presley managed to find the band free recording space through his jobs at various studios as a sound engineer. After a demo tape was forwarded to a manager in San Francisco the duo was invited west. They moved there in January 1992 with songs already written, and placed adverts for a drummer and rhythm guitarist in the free music magazine Bam, eventually recruiting Risse and White. The advert copy mentioned the influence of the Breeders and Pixies, and Presley's songs follow a similar, angular path - being loud and aggressive without sacrificing musical or lyrical literacy. Topics covered on their debut album included self-mutilation, vampires, surf songs, fossil fuel use and communicating with dolphins, with musical shading to match that diversity.

● ALBUMS: Moth Macabre (Interscope/East West 1994)★★★.

Mother Earth (60s)

Formed in Texas in 1966, Mother Earth was one of several American groups to move to the more liberal San Francisco during the west coast beat boom of the late 60s. The original line-up featured three former members of the Wigs, John 'Toad' Andrews (guitar), Bob Arthur (bass) and George Rains (drums), as well as songwriter R. Powell St. John, who composed several songs for the 13th Floor Elevators. Blues singer Tracy Nelson (b. 27 December 1944, Madison, Wisconsin, USA), was Mother Earth's featured vocalist, while the group was latterly augmented by Mark Naftalin (keyboards) and Martin Fierro (horns). The ensemble made its tentative debut on the soundtrack of the film Revolution, before completing a promising debut album in 1968. Nelson's powerful voice enhanced its blues-based foundation, while admirable cameos from guitarist Mike Bloomfield and fiddler Spencer Perkin added to the informal atmosphere. The following year Mother Earth moved to a farm on the outskirts of Nashville. Their music became increasingly country-orientated and by the release of a fourth album, Satisfied, only Nelson and Andrews remained from the group's first release. In 1973 they took the name Tracy Nelson/Mother Earth, but the group was dissolved when the singer's self-titled solo album won critical and commercial plaudits.

● ALBUMS: Living With The Animals (Mercury 1968)★★★, Make A Joyful Noise (Mercury 1969)★★★, Mother Earth Presents Tracy Nelson Country (Mercury 1969)★★, Satisfied (Mercury 1970)★★, Bring Me Home (Reprise 1971)★★, Mother Earth (1972)★★, Poor Man's Paradise (1973)★★★.

Mother Earth (90s)

Matt Deighton (vocals/guitar), Neil Corcoran (bass guitar), Chris White (drums), Bryn Barklam (Hammond organ). The UK's 'acid jazz' craze gained momentum in the mid-80s, when the original Acid Jazz label began to capitalise on the swelling interest in jazz, by encouraging a series of crossover bands who were mixing the music with funk and creating a danceable but harmonically rich, essentially live sound. As more and more London musicians began looking to the 70s, and projects led by Herbie Hancock, Billy Cobham or Lonnie Liston Smith, for inspiration, Mother Earth came together in 1990, originally as a six-piece, with additional vocalists Shauna Greene and Bunny. Their first recordings – '5th Quadrant' and 'Riot On 103rd Street' on the Totally Wired 6 and Totally Wired 7 Acid Jazz compilations – swiftly gained the group a cult popularity and a contract with the label. A funky, Hammond organ-led affair very much in the jazz funk mould, Stoned Woman was released in 1992, and the band quickly followed up with a hectic tour schedule, establishing a trendy, retro stage image heavy on flared trousers and sheepskin. If Stoned Woman suffered from an occasional blandness and lack of musical direction, Mother Earth tightened things up in 1994, with the release of The People Tree. Harder and funkier, with catchier tunes, The People Tree featured guest appearances by Paul Weller and popular Acid Jazz percussionist Snowboy, and represented a significant change in direction for the band, who were now looking towards 70s funk rock for a tougher, Santana-influenced sound. Deighton released a wistful solo set, Villager, before Mother Earth bowed out with another strong collection, You Have Been Watching. One of Acid Jazz's more interesting acts, Mother Earth's vocalist Deighton can now be found playing guitar in Paul Weller's touring band.

● ALBUMS: Stoned Woman (Acid Jazz 1992)★★★, The People Tree (Acid Jazz 1994)★★★★, You Have Been Watching (Focus 1995)★★★★.

Mother Goose

Formed in Dunedin, New Zealand in 1975 and finding themselves rejected by their home country, Mother Goose emigrated to Australia in 1976. Their first single 'Baked Beans' was a novelty hit which caused the band many problems in relating to a wider rock audience. Like the Village People, each member dressed in a character's costume, and their stage choreography meant that the audience were entertained musically and visually. The line-up comprised Kevin Collings (guitar), Denis Gibbins (bass), Craig Johnston (vocal), Marcel Rodeka (drums), Steve Young (keyboards) and Pete Dickson (guitar, replaced by American Justin McCarthy in 1979). The band was never able to shake off the novelty image even though its recorded output was of a high standard, and the mime and satire in its stage show had a serious edge. Although Mother Goose released three albums they never achieved significant radio success, despite being one of Australia's most popular live acts, with a fiercely loyal following. The band spent 1978-79 in the USA, but record company troubles prevented them making any inroads into that market. On return to Australia the band based itself in Perth. When the third album enjoyed some success in Canada the band moved there, working under the name Landing Party, before returning to Australia to break up in 1984.

● ALBUMS: Stuffed (1977),★★★ Don't Believe In Fairy Tales (1979)★★, This Is The Life (1982)★★★.

Mother Love Bone

This short-lived, Seattle-based quintet comprised Andrew Wood (vocals), Greg Gilmore (drums), Bruce Fairweather (guitar), Stone Gossard (guitar, ex-Green River) and Jeff Ament (bass, ex-Green River). Drawing influences from the Stooges, MC5 and the Velvet Underground, they specialized in heavy-duty garage rock laced with drug-fuelled psychotic overtones. Signing to Polydor, they debuted with Apple in 1990 to widespread critical acclaim. Their promising career was curtailed abruptly by the untimely death of vocalist Andrew Wood in March, shortly after the album was released. Gossard and Ament went on to enjoy further success with Temple Of The Dog and, to a much greater extent, Pearl Jam.

● ALBUMS: Apple (Polydor 1990)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Stardog Champion (Polydor 1992)★★★.

Mother Superia

b. Miami, Florida, USA. A formidable female rapper in the vein of MC Lyte, this refreshingly principled hip hop artist spent some nine years in the wilderness before the release of her debut album in 1997. Inspired by the old-skool rapping of KRS-1, Melle Mel and Eric B. And Rakim, she signed with Island Records subsidiary 4th & Broadway because of the label's widely-acknowledged history with some of rap music's pioneering forces. Her hardcore lyrics, meanwhile, carrying hardcore social messages through metaphor, were widely compared to those of Queen Latifah. She came to the attention of 4th & Broadway through the independently-released local hit, 'Rock Bottom'. The biggest rap song to come from Miami since 2 Live Crew were at their peak, it led to hip hop writers referring to the city itself as 'The Bottom' in rap parlance. Superia stayed true to her local heritage by employing an all-Miami production team to work on her debut album, Levitation.

● ALBUMS: Levitation (4th & Broadway 1997)★★★.

Mother Wore Tights

20th Century-Fox teamed their top pin-up girl, Betty Grable, with one of their most popular and likeable song-and-dance-men, Dan Dailey, in this 1947 release which was produced by Lamar Trotti. He was also responsible for the screenplay which was based on a book by Miriam Young. Set in the early part of the century and told in flashback, it was a warm-hearted tale about a married vaudeville couple, Burt and McKinley (Grable and Dailey) whose hoity-toity elder daughter (Mona Freeman) derides her parents' performing lifestyle ('my friends go to the opera and things') until the entire class of her swanky music school go to see the 'old folks' show' - and actually enjoy it. The wayward miss then realises what a fool she has been, and at her graduation ceremony sings 'You Do', one of her father and mother's big hit songs. Josef Myrow and Mack Gordon wrote that one, and several of the others, including 'There's Nothing Like A Song', 'This Is My Favourite City', 'Kokomo, Indiana', 'Rolling Down To Bowling Green', and 'On A Little Two-Seat Tandem'. Gordon also collaborated with Harry Warren on 'Tra-la-la', and there were several more nostalgic numbers by various composers, such as 'Burlington Bertie From Bow' (William Hargreaves). Musical director Alfred Newman won an Oscar for his work on the score. Connie Marshall played the younger (but more mature) daughter, and there were excellent performances from Vanessa Brown, Robert Arthur, Sara Allgood, William Frawley, Ruth Nelson, Anabel Shaw, Michael Dunne, George Cleveland, Veda Ann Borg, Sig Ruman, Lee Patrick, and especially the highly amusing Señor Wences. Seymour Felix and Kenny Williams handled the olde worlde dance sequences and the director was Walter Lang. Mother Wore Tights was one of the Top 20 musicals of the 40s, and Betty Grable's most financially successful picture.

Mother's Finest

Despite the 90s fixation with funk rock, Mother's Finest have long been considered the greatest in this musical field. Led by vocalist Baby Jean (b. Joyce Kennedy) and originating from Atlanta, Georgia, USA, the band boasts the talents of Moses Mo (b. Gary Moore; guitar), Glen Murdock (guitar, vocals), Mike (keyboards), Wizzard (b. Jerry Seay; bass) and B.B. Queen (b. B.B. Borden; drums). Formed in 1972, their music was basically funk with a metal edge, and Kennedy's vocals ranged from the sensual to all-out attack. The band never found great success in their homeland and only gained a cult following in Europe, although they were popular in Holland. In 1983, following the release of Iron Age, probably their hardest and most enduring record, the band disintegrated. Kennedy subsequently released two soul albums for A&M. Wizzard later linked up with Rick Medlocke's Blackfoot. The original line-up re-formed in 1989 but the accompanying album failed to capture the fire and soul of earlier releases. Undaunted, they soldiered on and released a live recording, Subluxation, to critical acclaim. In its wake, and with a line-up boasting just three original members: Baby Jean, Murdock and Wizzard, they provided the agenda-setting Black Radio Won't Play This Record.

● ALBUMS: Mother's Finest (RCA 1972)★★★★, Mother's Finest (Epic 1976)★★★, Another Mother Further (Epic 1977)★★, Mother Factor (Epic 1978)★★★, Live Mutha (Epic 1979)★★, Iron Age (Epic 1982)★★★, One Mother To Another (Epic 1983)★★★, Looks Could Kill (Capitol 1989),★★ Subluxation (Capitol 1990)★★★★, Black Radio Won't Play This Record (Scotti Bros 1992)★★★.

Motherlode

Formed in London, Ontario, Canada in the late 60s, Motherlode were best-known for their Top 20 entry, 'When I Die'. The group consisted of saxophonist Steve Kennedy, keyboardist William 'Smitty' Smith, guitarist Kenny Marco and drummer Wayne 'Stoney' Stone. The band was working at Top 40 clubs when it was signed to the Canadian label Revolution Records. Their local soul-orientated single 'When I Die', written by Smith and Kennedy, was picked up by Buddah Records and ultimately reached number 18 in the US. An album of the same title made the bottom of the charts but follow-up recordings failed to sell and the group disbanded in the early 70s. Smith formed a new Motherlode group and the remaining three members continued as Dr. Music. Smith and Marco later went on to become successful session musicians.

● ALBUMS: When I Die (1969)★★★★ Tuffed Out (1973)★★.

Mothers Of Invention

This celebrated group was formed in 1965 when guitarist Frank Zappa (b. 21 December 1940, Baltimore, Maryland, USA, d. 4 December 1993) replaced Ray Hunt in the Soul Giants, a struggling R&B-based bar band. Ray Collins (vocals), Dave Coronado (saxophone), Roy Estrada (bass) and Jimmy Carl Black (drums) completed their early line-up, but Coronado abandoned the group when the newcomer unveiled his musical strategy. Now renamed the Mothers, the quartet was relocated from Orange County to Los Angeles where they were briefly augmented by several individuals, including Alice Stuart, James Guercio and Henry Vestine, later guitarist in Canned Heat. Jim Fielder (b. 4 October 1947, Denton, Texas, USA) was another bass player who passed through the ranks. He actually joined Buffalo Springfield before he had officially handed in his niotice. These temporary additions found Zappa's vision daunting as the Mothers embarked on a disarming mélange of 50s pop, Chicago R&B and avant garde music. They were embraced by the city's nascent Underground before an appearance at the famed Whiskey A Go-Go resulted in a recording deal when producer Tom Wilson caught the end of one of their sets.

Now dubbed the Mothers Of Invention, owing to pressure from the record company, the group added guitarist Elliott Ingber (Winged Eel Fingerling) before commencing Freak Out, rock music's first double album. This revolutionary set featured several exceptional pieces including 'Trouble Every Day', 'Hungry Freaks, Daddy' and 'The Return Of The Son Of Monster Magnet', each of which showed different facets of Zappa's evolving tableau. The Mothers second album, Absolutely Free, featured a radically reshaped line-up. Ingber was fired at the end of 1966 while Zappa added a second drummer, Billy Mundi, plus Don Preston (b. 21 September 1932; keyboards), Bunk Gardner (horns) and Jim 'Motorhead' Sherwood (saxophone) to the original group nucleus. A six-month residency at New York's Garrick Theater combined spirited interplay with excellent material and the set showed growing confidence. Satire flourished on 'Plastic People', 'America Drinks & Goes Home' and 'Brown Shoes Don't Make It', much of which was inspired by the 'cocktail-bar' drudgery the group suffered in its earliest incarnation. However, Zappa's ire was more fully flexed on We're Only In It For The Money, which featured several barbed attacks on the trappings of 'flower-power'. Housed in a sleeve which cleverly mocked the Beatles' Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band, the set included 'The Idiot Bastard Son' ('The father's a Nazi in Congress today, the mother's a hooker somewhere in LA') and 'Who Needs The Peace Corps' ('I'll stay a week and get the crabs and take a bus back home') and indicated Zappa's growing fascination with technology. The album also introduced new member Ian Underwood (saxophone/keyboards), who became an integral part of the group's future work. Cruising With Ruben And The Jets was, to quote the liner notes, 'an album of greasy love songs and cretin simplicity'. Despite such cynicism, the group displayed an obvious affection for the 50s doo-wop material on offer, all of which was self-penned and included re-recordings of three songs, 'How Could I Be Such A Fool', 'Any Way The Wind Blows' and 'You Didn't Try To Call Me', first aired on Freak Out. However, the album was the last wholly new set committed by the 'original' line-up. Later releases, Uncle Meat (a soundtrack to the then unmade film), Burnt Weeny Sandwich and Weasels Ripped My Flesh, were all compiled from existing live and studio tapes as tension within the group pulled it apart. The musicians enjoyed mixed fortunes; Estrada joined newcomer Lowell George in Little Feat, third drummer Arthur Dyre Tripp III switched allegiance to Captain Beefheart, while Jimmy Carl Black formed Geronimo Black with brothers Buzz and Bunk Gardner.

A new Mothers was formed in 1970 from the musicians contributing to Zappa's third solo album, Chunga's Revenge, and the scatalogical 'on the road' documentary, 200 Motels. Three former Turtles, Mark Volman, Howard Kaylan (both vocals) and Jim Pons (bass) joined Aynsley Dunbar (drums) and long-standing affiliates Ian Underwood and Don Preston in the group responsible for Fillmore East - June 1971. Here, however, the early pot-pourri of Stravinsky, John Coltrane, doo-wop and 'Louie Louie' gave way to condescending innuendo as Zappa threatened to become the person once the subject of his ire. Paradoxically, it became the group's best-selling album to date, setting the tone for future releases and reinforcing the guitarist's jaundiced view of his audience. This period was brought to a sudden end at London's Rainbow Theatre. A 'jealous' member of the audience attacked the hapless Zappa onstage, pushing him into the orchestra pit where he sustained multiple back injuries and a compound leg fracture. His slow recuperation was undermined when the entire new Mothers, bar Underwood, quit en masse to form what became known as Flo And Eddie. Confined to the studio, Zappa compiled Just Another Band From L.A. and used the Mothers epithet for the jazz big band on The Grand Wazoo. Reverting to rock music, the Mothers' name was re-established with a new, tighter line-up in 1973. However subsequent albums, Over-Nite Sensation, Roxy And Elsewhere and One Size Fits All, are indistinguishable from projects bearing Zappa's name and this now superfluous title was abandoned in 1975, following the release of Bongo Fury, a collaboration with Captain Beefheart. Since Zappa's death a number of biographies have appeared; Neil Slaven's Electric Don Quixote is particularly noteworthy. Zappa's entire catalogue has been expertly remastered and reissued with the advent of the compact disc. Rykodisk are to be congratulated for their programme, having purchased the whole work from Gail Zappa for a large undisclosed sum. The quality of those early Mothers Of Invention recordings are by today's standards quite outstanding.

- ALBUMS: Freak Out (Verve 1966)★★★★, Absolutely Free (Verve 1967)★★★★, We're Only In It For The Money (Verve 1968)★★★★, Cruising With Ruben And The Jets (Verve 1968)★★★, Uncle Meat (Bizarre 1969)★★★★, Burnt Weeny Sandwich (Bizarre 1969)★★★, Weasels Ripped My Flesh (Bizarre 1970)★★★★, Fillmore East - June 1971 (Bizarre 1971)★★★, 200 Motels (United Artists 1971)★★, Just Another Band From L.A. (Bizarre 1972)★★★, The Grand Wazoo (Bizarre 1972)★★★, Over-Nite Sensation (DiscReet 1973)★★★, Roxy And Elsewhere (DiscReet 1974)★★★, One Size Fits All (DiscReet 1975)★★★, with Captain Beefheart Bongo Fury (DiscReet 1975)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Mothermania (Verve 1969)★★★★, The Worst Of The Mothers (MGM 1971)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Electric Don Quixote: The Story Of Frank Zappa, Neil Slaven.
- FILMS: 200 Motels (1970).

Motian, Paul

b. 25 March 1931, Providence, Rhode Island, USA. Motian played guitar in Providence in his teens, then served a term in the US army. On his discharge in 1954 he went to New York to study music at the Manhattan School. By 1956 he was playing drums for George Wallington and Russell Jacquet. Between 1956 and 1958 he worked with Tony Scott, with whom he met the pianist Bill Evans. His work in the Evans trio (1959-64) has since achieved legendary status for delicacy and balance. Motian also played with Oscar Pettiford, Zoot Sims and Lennie Tristano in the late 50s. In the mid-60s he worked with singers Mose Allison and Arlo Guthrie and was part of the Paul Bley trio in 1964. Motian had met Ornette Coleman's bassist Charlie Haden in 1959 and got a chance to work with him in Keith Jarrett's band with Dewey Redman (1967-76); he also joined Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra for its debut recording in 1969 and toured with the re-formed Orchestra in the 80s. In the 70s he was active in the Jazz Composers' Orchestra and played on Carla Bley's Escalator Over The Hill in 1972. He emerged as a leader in 1974, since when he has released an impressive series of albums on the ECM, Soul Note and JMT labels that have confirmed his stature as a drummer and composer. Tribute (1974) featured Carlos Ward on alto, while Dance and Le Voyage from the late 70s boast rare appearances by saxophonist Charles Brackeen. In the 80s he began long-term associations with guitarist Bill Frisell, whose arching, tremulous interpretations of Motian's melodies are particularly sympathetic, and the inventive tenorist Joe Lovano. In the late 80s he renewed his acquaintance with Paul Bley on a marvellous album of improvised duets (Notes), and joined with Haden and pianist Geri Allen to form one of the most thoughtful of contemporary piano trios; a guest appearance with Marilyn Crispell's trio (Live In Zurich, 1991) proved he was also at home in more exploratory modes. Motian's examination of Thelonious Monk (Monk In Motian), standards (Motian On Broadway) and his piano-less tribute to Bill Evans (1991) show a questing musical mind, still working as keenly as ever. He recorded with his Electric Bebop band in the 90s, which included Steve Swallow and Don Alias.

- ALBUMS: Conception Vessel (ECM 1974)★★★, Tribute (ECM 1974)★★★, Dance (1977)★★★, Le Voyage (ECM 1979)★★★★, Psalm (ECM 1982)★★★★, The Story Of Maryam (ECM 1984)★★★, It Should've Happened A Long Time Ago (ECM 1985)★★★★, Jack Of Clubs (ECM 1985)★★★, Misterioso (Soul Note 1986)★★★★, with Paul Bley Notes (1987)★★★★, with Geri Allen, Charlie Haden Etudes (1988)★★★, Monk In Motian (JMT 1988)v, Paul Motian On Broadway Vol 1 (JMT 1989)★★★, with Allen, Haden In The Year Of The Dragon (1989)★★★, with Allen, Haden Segments (1989)★★★, One Time Out (Soul Note 1990)★★★, Paul Motian On Broadway Vol 2 (JMT 1990)★★, Motian In Motian (JMT 1989)★★★★, Bill Evans (JMT 1991)★★★, with Allen, Haden Live At The Village Vanguard (1991)★★★★, Motian In Tokyo (JMT 1992)★★★, On Broadway Vol. 3 (JMT 1992)★★★, And The Electric Bebop Band (JMT 1992)★★★, with Keith Jarrett, Gary Peacock At The Deer Head Inn (ECM 1994)★★★, Trioism (JMT 1994)★★★, Reincarnation Of A Love Bird (JMT 1995)★★★, At The Village Vanguard (Verve 1996)★★★★, Sound Of Love (Winter & Winter 1998)★★★.

Mötley Crüe

This heavy rock band was formed in 1980 by Nikki Sixx (b. Frank Faranno, 11 December 1958, California, USA; bass) and consisted of former members of several other Los Angeles-based groups. Tommy Lee (b. 3 October 1962, Athens, Greece; drums) was recruited from Suite 19; Vince Neil (b. Vince Neil Wharton, 8 February 1961, Hollywood, California, USA; vocals) from Rocky Candy; while Sixx himself had recently left London. Mick Mars (b. Bob Deal, 3 April 1956, USA; guitar) was added to the line-up after Sixx and Lee answered an advertisement announcing 'Loud, rude, aggressive guitarist available'. Their first single, 'Stick To Your Guns'/'Toast Of The Town', was issued in 1981 on their own Leathür label, followed by their self-produced debut, Too Fast For Love. The band signed to Elektra Records in 1982, and the album was remixed and reissued that August. The following year they recorded a new set, Shout At The Devil, with producer Tom Werman. He stayed at the helm for the two albums that broke them to a much wider audience in the USA, Theatre Of Pain (which sold more than two million copies) and Girls, Girls, Girls, which achieved the highest entry for a heavy metal album on Billboard's album chart since The Song Remains The Same by Led Zeppelin in 1976. These albums refined the raw sound of earlier releases, without hiding the influence that Kiss and Aerosmith have exerted on their work. This change in style, which saw Mötley Crüe experimenting with organs, pianos and harmonicas in addition to their traditional instruments, has been described as a move from 'club-level metal glam' to 'stadium-size rock 'n' roll'. The band have not been without their setbacks: in 1984, Vince Neil was involved in a major car crash in which Hanoi Rocks drummer Razzle was killed. The subsequent Theatre Of Pain was dedicated to his memory, and this grim incident helped to inform the mood of the recording. Three years later, Nikki Sixx came close to death after a heroin overdose following touring with Guns N'Roses. Feuds with that same band, particularly between Neil and Axl Rose, later provided the group with many of their column inches in an increasingly disinterested press. The band survived to appear at the Moscow Peace Festival in 1989 before more than 200,000 people, and then in 1991 to issue Dr. Feelgood, which gave them their first US number 1 chart placing. Vince Neil was unexpectedly ejected from the band's line-up in 1992, establishing the Vince Neil Band shortly thereafter. His replacement for 1994's self-titled album was John Corabi (ex-Scream), although the band's problems continued with a record label/management split and a disastrous North American tour. Neil was working with the band again in Autumn 1996. Lee became the focus of much press attention as a result of his explosive marriage to actress Pamela Anderson. Corabi was sacked in 1996 and the following year instigated litigation against the band members for damages arising from non-payment of monies owed to him. This action was taken as Generation Swine was released.

● ALBUMS: Too Fast For Love (Leathur 1981)★★, Shout At The Devil (Elektra 1983)★★, Theatre Of Pain (Elektra 1985)★★, Girls, Girls, Girls (Elektra 1987)★★★, Dr. Feelgood (Elektra 1989)★★★, Mötley Crüe (Elektra 1994)★★★, Generation Swine (Elektra 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Raw Tracks (Elektra 1988)★★★, Decade Of Decadence (Elektra 1991)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Uncensored (1987), Dr. Feelgood, The Videos (1989), Decade Of Decadence (1991).

● FURTHER READING: Lüde, Crüde And Rüde, Sylvie Simmons and Malcolm Dome.

Motley, Frank

b. 30 December 1923, Cheraw, South Carolina, USA. Motley learned the rudiments of trumpet playing from Dizzy Gillespie and soon developed a novelty technique of playing two trumpets simultaneously, thereafter being known by the nicknames of 'Dual Trumpet' and 'Two Horn' Motley. After navy service, Frank studied music at Chicago and Washington D.C. and formed his own band in 1949. The Motley Crewe, included drummer T.N.T. Tribble and recorded for Lilian Claiborne who placed masters with Gotham, RCA Victor, Specialty, Gem, DC, Big Town, Hollywood and many other small labels. In the mid-50s, with the advent of rock 'n' roll, Motley married and moved north to Toronto, Canada, where he continued to play and perform until 1984 when he retired to Durham, North Carolina.

● ALBUMS: Frank Motley (1986)★★★, with T.N.T. Tribble The Best Of Washington D.C. R&B (1991)★★★.

Motor Town Revue

The celebrated Motor Town Revue was instigated by Motown Records founder Berry Gordy as an adjunct to his activities as label boss, manager (through International Talent Management) and publisher (Jobete) of his many talented artists. Indeed, some have suggested that this was an attempt to bring every aspect of their performance under his personal remit. The idea for the revue came as a result of discussions between Gordy, Thomas 'Bean' Bowles and Esther Gordy Edwards. The first show was scheduled for 2 November 1962 at the Boston Arena, before sweeping across the US mainland playing 19 further major cities in 23 days. Promoted by Henry Wynne's Supersonic Attractions, the Motor Town Revue gave the lie to the carefully projected impression of a 'happy family' at Motown. In the touring buses musicians were separated from artists. With musicians at the back and artists at the front, the sections of the bus were analogized as 'Broadway' (front) and 'Harlem' (back) by some of the incredulous travellers. Artists including the Supremes, Stevie Wonder, the Temptations, the Marvelettes, and Martha And The Vandellas were among those taking part, but they encountered significant resistance when they travelled through America's Deep South. The artists found themselves playing in the firmament of the civil rights movement, and they were often refused entry to 'white only' restaurants as they travelled. Bowles' task as road manager became increasingly frenetic, and on Thanksgiving Day 1962 he was seriously injured in a car crash that killed driver Ed McFarland Jnr. Luckily, the tour proceeds he was carrying, some $12,000, still found their way back to Motown headquarters. With Bowles confined to hospital, it then looked likely that the tour would collapse, but Esther Gordy Edwards immediately took over his responsibilities to stabilize the situation. The tour finally finished in triumph with 11 dates at Harlem's Apollo Theatre. Motown learned the lessons of the tour well, making sure that subsequent revues were better orchestrated and regulated, and that the artists concerned were tightly disciplined on stage. A UK Motor Town Revue of 1965 (with Georgie Fame as special 'guest star') also proved problematic, although it too was a relative success and helped to develop a major international fanbase for Motown's galaxy of stars.

Motorcycle Boy

This UK 'indie' pop group was formed in 1987 by former Shop Assistants singer Alex Taylor (vocals) with ex-Meat Whiplash personnel Michael Kerr (guitar), Paul McDermott (drums), Eddie Connelly (bass) and outsider, 'Scottie' (b. David Scott; guitar). Their debut single for Rough Trade Records, 'Big Rock Candy Mountain' (formerly a title for Burl Ives), reached number 3 in the UK independent chart. Despite this promising start, and much music press attention, they failed, largely through disorganization, to set the live circuit alight and subsequently broke up soon after the release of their lone album, which was recorded for major label Chrysalis Records. Alex Taylor was reportedly last spotted working as (ironically) a shop assistant for a record store chain.

● ALBUMS: Scarlet (Chrysalis 1989)★★★.

Motörhead

In 1975 Lemmy (b. Ian Fraiser Kilmister, 24 December 1945, Stoke, England; vocals, bass) was sacked from Hawkwind after being detained for five days at Canadian customs on possession charges. The last song he wrote for them was entitled 'Motörhead', and, after ditching an earlier suggestion, Bastard, this became the name of the band he formed with Larry Wallis of the Pink Fairies on guitar and Lucas Fox on drums. Together they made their debut supporting Greenslade at the Roundhouse, London, in July. Fox then left to join Warsaw Pakt, and was replaced by 'Philthy' Phil Taylor (b. 21 September 1954, Chesterfield, England; drums), a casual friend of Lemmy's with no previous professional musical experience. Motörhead was a four-piece band for less than a month, with Taylor's friend 'Fast' Eddie Clarke (b. 5 October 1950, Isleworth, Middlesex, England) of Continuous Performance as second guitarist, until Wallis returned to the Pink Fairies. The Lemmy/Taylor/Clarke combination lasted six years until 1982, in which time they became the most famous trio in hard rock. With a following made up initially of Hell's Angels (Lemmy had formerly lived with their president, Tramp, for whom he wrote the biker epic 'Iron Horse'), the band made their debut with the eponymous 'Motörhead'/'City Kids'. A similarly titled debut album charted, before the group moved over to Bronze Records. Overkill and Bomber firmly established the group's modus operandi, a fearsome barrage of instruments topped off by Lemmy's hoarse invocations. They toured the world regularly and enjoyed hit singles with 'Ace Of Spades' (one of the definitive heavy metal performances, it graced a 1980 album of the same name that saw the band at the peak of their popularity) and 'Please Don't Touch' (as Headgirl). Their reputation as the best live band of their generation was further enhanced by the release of No Sleep 'Til Hammersmith, which entered the UK charts at number 1. In May 1982 Clarke left, citing musical differences, and was replaced by Brian Robertson (b. 12 September 1956, Glasgow, Scotland), who had previously played with Thin Lizzy and Wild Horses. This combination released Another Perfect Day, but this proved to be easily the least popular of all Motörhead line-ups. Robertson was replaced in November 1983 by Wurzel (b. Michael Burston, 23 October 1949, Cheltenham, England; guitar) - so-called on account of his scarecrow-like hair - and Philip Campbell (b. 7 May 1961, Pontypridd, Wales; guitar, ex-Persian Risk), thereby swelling the Motörhead ranks to four. Two months later and, after a final appearance on television's The Young Ones, Taylor left to join Robertson in Operator, and was replaced by ex-Saxon drummer Pete Gill. Gill remained with the band until 1987 and played on several fine albums including Orgasmatron, the title track of which saw Lemmy's lyric-writing surpass itself. By 1987 Phil Taylor had rejoined Motörhead, and the line-up remained unchanged for five years, during which time Lemmy made his acting debut in the Comic Strip film Eat The Rich, followed by other celluloid appearances including the role of a taxi driver in Hardware. In 1992 the group released March Or Die, which featured the American Mikkey Dee (ex-King Diamond) on drums and guest appearances by Ozzy Osbourne and Slash (Guns N'Roses). The title track followed on from '1916' and revealed a highly sensitive side to Lemmy's lyrical and vocal scope, both songs dealing with the horrors of war. The idiosyncratic Lemmy singing style, usually half-growl, half-shout, and with his neck craned up at 45 degrees to the microphone, remained in place. On a more traditional footing they performed the theme song to the horror film Hellraiser 3, and convinced the film's creator, Clive Barker, to record his first promotional video with the band. Lemmy also hammed his way through insurance adverts, taking great delight in his press image of the unreconstructed rocker. Wurzel left the band and formed Wvkeaf in 1996. Now recording as a trio, the band released their nineteenth album (Snake Bite Love) in 1998.

● ALBUMS: Motörhead (Chiswick 1977)★★★, Overkill (Bronze 1979)★★★, Bomber (Bronze 1979)★★★, On Parole (United Artists 1979)★★★, Ace Of Spades (Bronze 1980)★★★★, No Sleep Till Hammersmith (Bronze 1981)★★★★, Iron Fist (Bronze 1982)★★★, Another Perfect Day (Bronze 1983)★★, What's Wordsworth (Big Beat 1983)★★, Orgasmatron (GWR 1986)★★★, Rock'N'Roll (GWR 1987)★★★, Eat The Rich (GWR 1987)★★★, No Sleep At All (GWR 1988)★★★, 1916 (Epic 1991)★★★, March Or Die (Epic 1992)★★★, Bastards (ZYX 1993)★★★, I (SPV 1996)★★, Overnight Sensation (SPV 1996)★★★, Snake Bite Love (SPV 1998)★★★, Live On The King Biscuit Flower Hour recorded 1983 (King Biscuit 1998)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: No Remorse (Bronze 1984)★★★★, Anthology (Raw Power 1986)★★, Dirty Love (Receiver 1989)★★, From The Vaults (Sequel 1990)★★, Best Of (Action Replay 1990)★★, Collection (Castle 1990)★★★, Meltdown 3-CD box set (Castle 1991)★★★, All The Aces (Castle 1993)★★, The Best Of... (Castle 1993)★★★, Protect The Innocent 4-CD box set (Essential 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Toronto Live (Avatar 1984), Deaf Not Blind (Virgin Vision 1984), Birthday Party (Virgin Vision 1986), The Best Of Motorhead (Castle Music Pictures 1991), Everything Louder Than Everything Else (Sony Music Video 1991).

● FURTHER READING: Motörhead: Born To Lose, Live To Win, Alan Burridge. Motörhead, Giovanni Dadomo.

Motors

The Motors were based around the partnership of Nick Garvey (b. 26 April 1951, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire, England) and Andy McMaster (b. 27 July 1947, Glasgow, Scotland) who first met in the pub rock band Ducks Deluxe. McMaster had a long career in pop music, having played in several bands in the 60s including the Sabres, which also featured Frankie Miller. McMaster released a solo single, 'Can't Get Drunk Without You', on President, and joined Ducks Deluxe in November 1974. Garvey was educated at Kings College in Cambridge and was an accomplished pianist, oboeist and trumpeter. Before he joined Ducks Deluxe in December 1972 he had acted as a road manager for the Flamin' Groovies. The pair left the Ducks early in 1975, just a few months before the unit disbanded. Garvey joined a group called the Snakes (along with future Wire vocalist Rob Gotobed) and they released one single. McMaster, meanwhile, went to work for a music publisher. Garvey's friend and manager Richard Ogden suggested that Garvey form his own band in order to record the songs he had written. This led to him contacting McMaster and in January 1977 they recorded demos together. The following month they recruited Ricky Wernham (aka Ricky Slaughter) from the Snakes on drums - he is the cousin of Knox from the Vibrators. Guitarist Rob Hendry was quickly replaced by Bram Tchaikovsky and the Motors were up and running. They made their live debut at the Marquee Club, London, in March 1977 and signed to Virgin in May.

A tour with the Kursaal Flyers and the Heavy Metal Kids led to the release of their debut single, 'Dancing The Night Away', and first album, produced by Mutt Lange. However, it was their second single, 'Airport', which became a huge hit in the UK. It is widely used to this day as a stock soundtrack when television programmes show film clips of aeroplanes taking off or landing. Despite this success, the group were already burning out. After performing at Reading in August the Motors decided to concentrate on writing new material. Wernham took the opportunity to leave, while Tchaikovsky formed his own band with the intention of returning to the Motors, though he never did. Garvey and McMaster eventually re-emerged with some new material for Tenement Steps. It was recorded with the assistance of former Man bassist Martin Ace, and drummer Terry Williams (ex-Man and Rockpile; future Dire Straits). After Tenement Steps the Motors seized up, but both Garvey and McMaster have since released solo singles.

● ALBUMS: The Motors I (Virgin 1977)★★★, Approved By The Motors (Virgin 1978)★★★★, Tenement Steps (Virgin 1980)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Virgin 1981)★★★.

Motown Records

The history of Motown Records remains a paradigm of success for independent record labels, and for black-owned industry in the USA. The corporation was formed in 1959 by Berry Gordy, a successful R&B songwriter who required an outlet for his initial forays into production. He used an $800 loan to finance the release of singles by Marv Johnson and Eddie Holland on his Tamla label, one of a series of individual trademarks that he eventually included under the Motown umbrella. Enjoying limited local success, Gordy widened his roster, signing acts including the Temptations and Marvelettes in 1960. That year, the Miracles' 'Shop Around' gave the company its first major US hit, followed in 1961 by their first number 1, the Marvelettes' 'Please Mr Postman'. Gordy coined the phrase 'The Sound Of Young America' to describe Motown's output, and his apparently arrogant claim quickly proved well founded. By 1964, Motown was enjoying regular hits via the Supremes and the Four Tops, while Mary Wells' 'My Guy' helped the label become established outside the USA. The label's vibrant brand of soul music, marked by a pounding rhythm and a lightness of touch that appealed to both pop and R&B fans, provided America's strongest response to the massive impact of the British beat group invasion in 1964 and 1965. At the same time, Gordy realized the importance of widening his commercial bases; in 1965, he overtly wooed the middle-of-the-road audience by giving the Supremes a residency at the plush Copa nightclub in New York - the first of many such ventures into traditional showbiz territory. The distance between Motown's original fans and their new surroundings led to accusations that the company had betrayed its black heritage, although consistent chart success helped to cushion the blow.

In 1966, Motown took three steps to widen its empire, snapping up groups such as the Isley Brothers and Gladys Knight And The Pips from rival labels, opening a Hollywood office to double its promotional capabilities, and snuffing out its strongest opposition in Detroit by buying the Golden World and Ric-Tic group of R&B companies. Throughout these years, Gordy maintained a vice-like grip over Motown's affairs; even the most successful staff writers and producers had to submit their work to a weekly quality control meeting, and faced the threat of having their latest creations summarily rejected. Gradually, dissent rose within the ranks, and in 1967 Gordy lost the services of his A&R controller, Mickey Stevenson, and his premier writing/production team, Holland/Dozier/Holland. Two years of comparative failure followed before Motown regained its supremacy in the pop market by launching the career of the phenomenally successful Jackson Five in 1969. Gordy made a bold but ultimately unsuccessful attempt to break into the rock market in 1970 with his Rare Earth label, one of a variety of spin-off companies launched in the early part of the decade. This was a period of some uncertainty for the company; several major acts either split up or chose to seek artistic freedom elsewhere, and the decision to concentrate the company's activities in its California office in 1973 represented a dramatic break from its roots. At the same time, Gordy masterminded the birth of Motown's film division, with the award-winning biopic about Billie Holiday, Lady Sings The Blues. The burgeoning artistic and commercial success of Stevie Wonder kept the record division on course, although outsiders noted a distinct lack of young talent to replace the company's original stalwarts.

The mid-70s proved to be Motown's least successful period for over a decade; only the emergence of the Commodores maintained the label as a contemporary musical force. Motown increasingly relied on the strength of its back catalogue, with only occasional releases, such as the Commodores' 'Three Times A Lady' and Smokey Robinson's 'Being With You', rivalling the triumphs of old. The departure of Marvin Gaye and Diana Ross in the early 80s proved a massive psychological blow, and, despite the prominence of Commodores leader Lionel Richie, the company failed to keep pace with the fast-moving developments in black music. From 1986, there were increasing rumours that Berry Gordy was ready to sell the label; these were confirmed in 1988, when Motown was bought by MCA, with Gordy retaining some measure of artistic control over subsequent releases. After more than a decade of disappointing financial returns, Motown remains a record industry legend on the strength of its remarkable hit-making capacities in the 60s. Some realignment was tackled in the 90s by the new label chief Andre Harrell; his brief was to make Motown the leading black music label once again. New releases from Horace Brown, Johnny Gill, Queen Latifah and Boyz II Men started the rebirth. George Jackson became president of the company in Novemmber 1997.

● COMPILATIONS: Motown Chartbusters Volumes 1 - 10 (Motown 1968-1977), 20th Anniversary Album (Motown 1986)★★★★, Hitsville USA: The Motown Singles Collection 1959 - 1971 4-CD box set (Motown 1993)★★★★★, This Is Northern Soul! 24 Tamla Motown Rarities (Debutante 1997)★★★, This Is Northern Soul! Volume 2 - The Motown Sound (Debutante 1998)★★★, Tamla Motown Early Classics (Spectrum 1998)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Sounds Of Motown (PMI 1985), The Sixties (CIC Video 1987), Time Capsule Of The 70s (CIC Video 1987), Motown 25th: Yesterday, Today, Forever (MGM/UA 1988).

Mott

This short-lived group was founded in 1975. Morgan Fisher (keyboards), Overend Watts (bass, vocals) and Dale Griffin (drums), each formerly of Mott The Hoople, decided to drop the earlier suffix upon adding Nigel Benjamin (vocals) and Ray Major (guitar) to the line-up. Their albums proved sadly disappointing, provoking unfavourable comparisons with their previous, highly successful incarnation. The departure of Benjamin precipitated yet another change and, having invited ex-Medicine Head singer John Fiddler to join, the unit changed its name to British Lions.

● ALBUMS: Drive On (Columbia 1975)★★★, Shouting And Pointing (Columbia 1976)★★★.

Mott The Hoople

Having played in a number of different rock groups in Hereford, England, during the late 60s, the founding members of this ensemble comprised: Overend Watts (b. Peter Watts, 13 May 1947, Birmingham, England; vocals/bass), Mick Ralphs (b. 31 March 1944, Hereford, Herefordshire, England; vocals/guitar), Verden Allen (b. 26 May 1944, Hereford, England; organ) and Dale Griffin (b. 24 October 1948, Ross-on-Wye, England; vocals/drums). After dispensing with their lead singer Stan Tippens, they were on the point of dissolving when Ralphs sent a demo tape to Island Records producer Guy Stevens. He responded enthusiastically, and after placing an advertisement in Melody Maker auditioned a promising singer named Ian Hunter (b. 3 June 1946, Shrewsbury, England; vocals/keyboards/guitar). In June 1969 Stevens christened the group Mott The Hoople, after the novel by Willard Manus. Their self-titled debut album revealed a very strong Bob Dylan influence, most notably in Hunter's nasal vocal inflexions and visual image. With his corkscrew hair and permanent shades Hunter bore a strong resemblance to vintage 1966 Dylan and retained that style for his entire career. Their first album, with its M.C. Escher cover illustration, included pleasing interpretations of the Kinks' 'You Really Got Me' and Sonny Bono's 'Laugh At Me', and convinced many that Mott would become a major band. Their next three albums trod water, however, and it was only their popularity and power as a live act that kept them together. Despite teaming up with backing vocalist Steve Marriott on the George 'Shadow' Morton-produced 'Midnight Lady', a breakthrough hit remained elusive. On 26 March 1972, following the departure of Allen, they quit in disillusionment. Fairy godfather David Bowie convinced them to carry on, offered his assistance as producer, placed them under the wing of his manager, Tony De Fries, and even presented them with a stylish UK hit, 'All The Young Dudes'. The catchy 'Honaloochie Boogie' maintained the momentum but there was still one minor setback when Ralphs quit to form Bad Company. With new members Morgan Fisher and Ariel Bender (Luther Grosvenor) Mott enjoyed a run of further UK hits including 'All The Way From Memphis' and 'Roll Away The Stone'. During their final phase, Bowie's sideman Mick Ronson joined the group in place of Grosvenor (who had departed to join Widowmaker). Preparations for a European tour in late 1974 were disrupted when Hunter was hospitalized suffering from physical exhaustion, culminating in the cancellation of the entire tour. When rumours circulated that Hunter had signed a deal instigating a solo career, with Ronson working alongside him, the upheaval led to an irrevocable rift within the group resulting in the stormy demise of Mott The Hoople. With the official departure of Hunter and Ronson, the remaining members, Watts, Griffin and Fisher, determined to carry on, working simply as Mott.

● ALBUMS: Mott The Hoople (Island 1969)★★★, Mad Shadows (Island 1970)★★★, Wild Life (Island 1971)★★, Brain Capers (Island 1971)★★★, All The Young Dudes (Columbia 1972)★★★, Mott (Columbia 1973)★★★★, The Hoople (Columbia 1974)★★★★, Live (Columbia 1974)★★★, Original Mixed Up Kids: The BBC Recordings (Windsong 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Rock And Roll Queen (Island 1972)★★, Greatest Hits (Columbia 1975)★★★★, Shades Of Ian Hunter - The Ballad Of Ian Hunter And Mott The Hoople (Columbia 1979)★★★★, Two Miles From Heaven (Island 1981)★★★, All The Way From Memphis (Hallmark 1981)★★★, Greatest Hits (Columbia 1981)★★★★, Backsliding Fearlessly (Rhino 1994)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: The Diary Of A Rock 'N' Roll Star, Ian Hunter.

Mott The Hoople - Mott The Hoople

From the brilliant cover illustration by M.C. Escher to what nearly every critic called a 'straightfaced' version of Sonny Bono's 'Laugh At Me' (as though it was impossible to perform it any other way), Mott The Hoople's debut album showed that they were clearly no ordinary post-psychedelic British band. Their original material, particularly guitarist Mick Ralph's 'Rock And Roll Queen', presaged the glam sound for which they would later become renowned. Appropriately, Mott The Hoople was produced by the inventive (and seriously whacked) Guy Stevens. A decade later, the Clash, who were strongly influenced by Mott The Hoople, called upon him to produce London Calling.

● Tracks: You Really Got Me; At The Crossroads; Laugh At Me; Backsliding Fearlessly; Rock And Roll Queen; Rabbit Foot And Toby Time; Half Moon Bay; Wrath And Wroll.

● First released 1969

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 191

Mould, Bob

b. 16 October 1960, Malone, New York, USA. The former guitarist, vocalist and co-composer in Hüsker Dü, Mould surprised many of that leading hardcore act's aficionados with his reflective solo debut, Workbook. Only one track, 'Whichever Way The Wind Blows', offered the maelstrom of guitars customary in his former group's work and instead the set was marked by a predominantly acoustic atmosphere. Cellist Jane Scarpantoni contributed to its air of melancholy, while two members of Pere Ubu, Tony Maimone (bass) and Anton Fier (drums; also Golden Palominos), added sympathetic support, helping to emphasize the gift for melody always apparent in Mould's work. Maimone and Fier also provided notable support on Black Sheets Of Rain, which marked a return to the uncompromising power of the guitarist's erstwhile unit. The set included the harrowing 'Hanging Tree' and apocalyptical 'Sacrifice Sacrifice/Let There Be Peace', but contrasted such doom-laden material with a brace of sprightly pop songs in 'It's Too Late' and 'Hear Me Calling', both of which echoed R.E.M. Mould also formed his own record company, SOL (Singles Only Label), which has issued material by, among others, William Burroughs. The artist abandoned his solo career in 1993, reverting to the melodic hardcore trio format with Sugar. By 1995, following the apparent demise of the band, he returned once again to his solo career. Bob Mould was an excellent album, although the ever perverse singer refused to undertake any promotional duties. Not surprisingly, it sounded like a cross between Hüsker Dü and Sugar, with sparkling tracks such as the venomous 'I Hate Alternative Rock' and the Tom Petty-esque 'Fort Knox, King Solomon'. Equally energetic was The Last Dog And Pony Show, with Mould still finding those memorable chord changes that lift the heart.

● ALBUMS: Workbook (Virgin 1989)★★★, Black Sheets Of Rain (Virgin 1990)★★★, Bob Mould (Creation/Rykodisk 1996)★★★★, The Last Dog And Pony Show (Creation 1998)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Poison Years (Virgin 1994)★★★★.

Mound City Blue Blowers

Formed in 1924 by Red McKenzie as a novelty group, the Mound City Blue Blowers expanded to include Eddie Lang, with whom they visited London in the mid-20s. Later the band became a more orthodox, and often much larger, Dixieland outfit under McKenzie's leadership. In its bigger form the band was occasionally home in the late 20s to leading musicians such as Eddie Condon, Gene Krupa, Glenn Miller and Jack Teagarden. McKenzie continued to record under this collective title into the mid-30s, using artists including Yank Lawson, Bob Haggart, Dave Tough and Bunny Berigan. Although the band's first record, 'Arkansas Blues' in 1924, was its biggest seller, the finest jazz performance came at a 1929 session featuring Coleman Hawkins, which included 'Hello Lola' and the classic '(If I Could Be With You) One Hour (Tonight)'.

Mounka, Pamelo

b. Bemba Pamelo Mounk'a, 30 October 1945, Ouesso, Congo-Brazzaville. Vocalist Mounka is one of the most popular Congo-Brazzaville recording artists, performing in a style which to Western ears is indistinguishable from that of the country's larger neighbour, Zaire. In fact, Mounka's first break in the music business came via Zairean bandleader Rochereau, who recorded him in 1963. A member of the Bantous for some years, Mounka went solo in the mid-60s, releasing an unbroken string of over 70 hit singles between then and 1980, when he was taken to Paris by the Eddyson label to record, a venture that resulted in the major-selling album L'Argent Appelle L'Argent. In 1983 he was reunited with Rochereau on the album 20 Ans De Carriere, celebrating his 20 years in the record business. In 1985 he recorded the superb En Plein Maturite, which remains his finest work to date.

● ALBUMS: L'Argent Appelle L'Argent (Eddyson 1981)★★★★, Samantha (Sonodisc 1982)★★★★, Propulsion (Sonodisc 1983)★★★, 20 Ans De Carriere (Genidia 1983)★★★★, Camatana (Sonodisc 1984)★★★, Cynthia (IS 1986)★★★, Bonne Chance (1989)★★★.

Mounsey, Paul

b. Scotland. A Scotsman now resident in Brazil, Mounsey's highly affecting debut album took a full two years to complete. With full-time employment at the Play It Again Sam Music House in Brazil, where he is musical director, plus various professional projects in commercial and contemporary music, time was limited for extra-curricular activities. A first class honours graduate in music at Trinity College, London, Mounsey's multi-instrumental and compositional skills were finally turned to his own recordings for 1994's Nahoo. At once contemporaneous and traditional, this project utilised both recently discovered field recordings of the School Of Scottish Studies, Celtic harp excerpts and modern recording techniques. Songs such as 'Alba' related Runrig's version of the song with traditional samples to mesmerising effect, helping to produce a truly modern folk album.

● ALBUMS: Nahoo (Iona 1994)★★★★, NahooToo (Iona 1997)★★★.

Mount Rushmore

This third generation, late 60s San Francisco rock group comprised Glen 'Smitty' Smith (vocals), Mike 'Bull' Bolan (guitar), Terry Kimball (bass) and Travis Fullerton (drums). Although they failed to garner the same commercial or artistic plaudits of many contemporaries, the group's two albums revealed a competent, if unadventurous, act. Mount Rushmore disbanded in 1969 following the release of their second album, although Fullerton later found success as a member of Sylvester And The Hot Band.

● ALBUMS: High On Mount Rushmore (Dot 1968)★★★, Mount Rushmore 69 (Dot 1969)★★★.

Mountain

Mountain were one of the first generation heavy metal bands, formed by ex-Vagrants guitarist Leslie West (b. Leslie Weinstein, 22 October 1945, Queens, New York, USA) and bassist Felix Pappalardi (b. 1939, Bronx, New York, USA, d. 17 April 1983) in New York in 1968. Augmented by drummer Corky Laing and Steve Knight on keyboards, they played the Woodstock festival in 1970, releasing Mountain Climbing shortly afterwards. Featuring dense guitar lines from West and the delicate melodies of Pappalardi, they quickly established their own sound, although Cream influences were detectable in places. The album was an unqualified success, peaking at number 17 in the Billboard album chart in November 1970. Their next two albums built on this foundation, as the band refined their style into an amalgam of heavy riffs, blues-based rock and extended guitar and keyboard solos. Nantucket Sleighride (the title track of which was used as the theme tune to the UK television programme World In Action) and Flowers Of Evil made the Billboard charts at numbers 16 and 35, respectively. A live album followed, which included interminably long solos and was poorly received. The group temporarily disbanded to pursue separate projects. Pappalardi returned to producing, while West and Laing teamed up with Cream's Jack Bruce to record as West, Bruce And Laing. In 1974, Mountain rose again with Alan Schwartzberg and Bob Mann replacing Laing and Knight to record Twin Peaks, live in Japan. This line-up was short-lived as Laing rejoined for the recording of the disappointing studio album, Avalanche. The band collapsed once more and West concentrated on his solo career again. Pappalardi was shot and killed by his wife in 1983. Two years later, West and Laing resurrected the band with Mark Clarke (former Rainbow and Uriah Heep bassist) and released Go For Your Life. They toured with Deep Purple throughout Europe in 1985, but split again soon afterwards.

● ALBUMS: Mountain Climbing (Bell 1970)★★★, Nantucket Sleighride (Island 1971)★★★, Flowers Of Evil (Island 1971)★★★★, The Road Goes On Forever-Mountain Live (Island 1972)★★, Avalanche (Epic 1974)★★★, Twin Peaks (Columbia 1974)★★, Go For Your Life (Scotti Brothers 1985)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (Island 1973)★★★, Over The Top (Legacy 1995)★★, Blood Of The Sun 1969-75 (Raven 1996)★★★.

Mountain Ash Band

The Mountain Ash Band produced yet another of those 'old friends get it together' albums, forming a UK folk/rock band from Colin Cripps' musical about an old tramp, Job Senior. They made the album, did the show, and then vanished. The music was very gritty, at times reminiscent of Bob Pegg, and mixed narrative lyrics with traditional material. The album was reissued by Vinyl Tap in 1996.

● ALBUMS: The Hermit (1975)★★★.

Mourneblade

London band whose main claim to fame was that one member was a British skateboarding champion.

Formed in late 1984, the group comprised Derek Jasnock (keyboards), Richard Jones (guitar), Dunken Mullet (vocals), Jeff Ward (drums) and Clive Baxter (bass). They blended the heavier qualities of Hawkwind with the bass-driven power of Motörhead. In keeping with that tradition they took their name from a novel by Michael Moorcock, and signed to the Hawkwind-allied Flicknife Records. It was their tenuous links with the latter band that first brought them attention, and their debut album contained six excellent songs, though it failed to impress the Hawkwind fraternity or rock fans in general. They vanished from the music scene for a couple of years before regrouping in 1988, gaining a session on BBC radio's, then influential, Friday Rock Show in July of the following year. This saw them unveil a new sound, which had already been sketched more fully in January, when their second album had arrived. This contained further Hawkwind-inspired tracks, including 'Hall Of The Mountain King', but also grim tales such as 'Lolita' and 'Blonde Beautiful And Dead'. A few gigs and poor record sales later, they returned to obscurity.

● ALBUMS: Times Running Out (Flicknife 1985)★★★, Live Fast, Die Young (Plastic Head 1989)★★★.

Mourning Reign

Formed in San Jose, California, USA, the Mourning Reign were garage band peers of the Chocolate Watchband and the Harbinger Complex. Initially known as the English, they consisted of Frank Beau Maggi (vocals), Johnnie Bell (lead guitar), Steve Canali (rhythm guitar), Charlie Garden (bass) and Craig Maggi (drums). They were highly popular in the suburbs of south and east San Francisco, playing punk-styled material derivative of the Rolling Stones and Yardbirds. The group recorded a cover version of 'Evil Hearted You' as their debut in 1966, before completing a compulsive original song, 'Satisfaction's Guaranteed', as its follow-up. Thomas O'Bonsawin then replaced Bell, but although two further tracks were completed for a third single, it remained unissued as the Mourning Reign split up in 1968 when several members were drafted to Vietnam.

Mouse And The Traps

This US group was formed in Tyler, Texas, USA in 1965 by guitarist/vocalist Ronnie 'Mouse' Weiss. Jerry Howell (keyboards) and Dave Stanley (bass), ex-colleagues from Jerry Vee And The Catalinas, joined him in this new venture which was completed by Bugs Henderson (lead guitar) and Ken Murray (drums). The quintet made its debut in February 1966 with 'A Public Execution' on which Weiss's Bob Dylan inflections topped a punk-style backing. 'Maid Of Sugar, Maid Of Spice' followed in a similar manner, while other notable singles included 'Lie, Beg, Borrow And Steal' (1967) and 'I Satisfy' (1968). By this point Doug Rhone had replaced Henderson. The Traps also recorded as Positively Thirteen O'Clock (with singer Jimmy Rabbit), and backed Dale Hawkins on L.A., Memphis And Tyler. The singer reciprocated by producing the group's final singles, 'Wicker Vine' and 'Knock On My Door' (both 1969). Barring a brief 1972 reunion, these releases brought Mouse And The Traps to a close, although Weiss, Stanley and Murray remained together in a country-rock act, Rio Grande.

● COMPILATIONS: The Fraternity Years (Big Beat 1997)★★★.

Mouse Records

This eclectic, revivalist label was formed by musician Dave Clarke in 1993. Previously a veteran of Essex, England band the Blue Angels, he had recorded his first solo album in 1973 with the help of Jimi Hendrix bassist Noel Redding and Deep Purple drummer Ian Paice. Over the ensuing years Clarke was involved in a number of musical ventures, none of which proved permanent. It was only in 1992 when he formed the group Shut Up Frank! that he again found stability, working alongside Redding once more and also others including keyboard player Dave Rowberry (ex-Animals). Mouse Records was originally formed as an outlet for the first Shut Up Frank! recordings, which were effectively songs written with Redding in California in 1992 and 1993. Clarke then made the decision to release an album of previously unissued material by White Line, the EMI Records artists who released two singles in 1977 who featured both Clarke and fellow Shut Up Frank! member Jim McCulloch (ex-Thunderclap Newman, Wings). Further reissues of albums by Dave Carlsen, the Dream Circle (a Clarke solo 'whim') and others followed. The rest of the roster quickly expanded, featuring artists including New York Hare Krishna punk band the Devas, Middlesborough pop band the Guests, and solo artists Joe Stone and Tim Rose.

Mouskouri, Nana

b. 13 October 1934, Athens, Greece. This bespectacled vocalist was steeped in the classics and jazz but was sufficiently broadminded to embrace a native style of pop after a stint on Radio Athens in 1958, and an artistic (and marital) liaison with orchestra leader Manos Hadjidakis facilitated a debut single, 'Les Enfants Du Piree', which was aimed at foreign consumers. Well-received performances at several international song festivals were added incentives for her team to relocate to Germany, where 'Weiss Rosen Aus Athen' (derived from a Greek folk tune), a number from Wadjidakis' soundtrack to the 1961 film Traumland Der Sehnsucht, sold a million copies. Now one of her country's foremost musical ambassadors, Mouskouri undertook a US college tour which was followed by further record success, particularly in France with such songs as 'L'Enfant Au Tambour', 'Parapluies De Cherbourg' (a duet with Michel Legrand) and a 1967 arrangement of the evergreen 'Guantanamera'. From the late 60s in Britain, she scored almost exclusively with albums with

Over And Over lingering longest on the lists. Sales were boosted by regular BBC television series on which her backing combo, the Athenians, were granted instrumental spots. A collection of Mouskouri favourites from a BBC season in the early 70s spent many weeks in the Top 30 but, other than a postscript Top 10 single ('Only Love') in 1986, her UK chart career climaxed with 1976's Passport. By then, however, she had mounted a plateau of showbusiness high enough to survive comfortably without more hits. Recently she has combined her music career with the post of Ambassador and world representative of the entertainment business at UNICEF, and the Greek deputy to the European parliament. Recording regularly in five languages (French, English, German, Spanish and Greek), her new English album Return To Love was released in 1997.

● ALBUMS: with Harry Belafonte An Evening With Belafonte/Mouskouri (RCA 1966)★★★, Over And Over (Fontana 1969)★★★, The Exquisite Nana Mouskouri (Fontana 1970)★★★, Recital '70 (Fontana 1970)★★★, Turn On The Sun (Fontana 1971)★★★, British Concert (Fontana 1972)★★★, Songs From Her TV Series (Fontana 1973)★★★, Spotlight On Nana Mouskouri (Fontana 1974)★★★, Songs Of The British Isles (Philips 1976)★★★, Passport (Philips 1976)★★★, Roses And Sunshine (Philips 1979)★★★, Come With Me (RCA 1981)★★★, Ballades (Philips 1983)★★★, Nana i (Mercury 1984)★★★, Farben (Fontana 1984)★★★, Athens (Virgin 1984)★★★, Nana Mouskouri (Philips 1984)★★★, Why Worry? (Philips 1986)★★★, Alone (Philips 1986)★★★, Live At The Herodes Hatticus Theatre (Philips 1986)★★★, Nana ii (Philips 1987)★★★, Love Me Tender (Philips 1987)★★★, Je Chante Avec Toi Liberte (Philips 1988)★★★, The Magic Of Nana Mouskouri (Philips 1988)★★★, The Classical Nana (Philips 1990)★★★, Gospel (Philips 1990)★★★, Oh Happy Day (Philips 1990)★★★, Return To Love (Mercury 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Romance Of Nana Mouskouri (Spectrum 1998)★★★.

Moustaki, Georges

b. 1934, Alexandria, Egypt. A singer, songwriter, actor and film music composer of Greek ancestry, early in his life Moustaki studied French which enabled him to work in Paris as a journalist. He began to write songs, and played the piano and guitar in the College Inn in Montparnasse. He also met the gypsy musician Henri Crolla, a cousin of Django Reinhardt. Crolla introduced him to the legendary performer, Edith Piaf, and in 1958, he became her guitarist and lover. With Marguerite Monnet, who was involved with many of Piaf's songs, he wrote 'Milord', which became Piaf's last big hit before she died three years later. Her record spent 15 weeks in the UK chart in 1960, easily beating a version by Frankie Vaughan, which had an English lyric by Decca recording manager Bunny Lewis. Moustaki was driving the car late in 1959 when Piaf had her third serious car accident. He escaped unscathed, and accompanied the singer on her ninth tour of the USA, where their relationship was terminated following her collapse onstage at the Waldorf Astoria, and subsequent four-hour operation. In the 60s, long haired, with a grey beard, Moustaki toured the music festivals, writing and performing his own songs. These included the dramatic 'Le Gitan Et La Fille', 'Un Etranger', 'Les Orgues De Barbarie', 'Les Gestes', which was memorably sung by Serge Reggiani and 'Le Meteque' (the outcast), perhaps the song most identified with Moustaki, which ran: 'Look at me, a bloody foreigner/A wandering Jew, a Greek peasant/Hair all over the place, eyes washed out . . .' In the 70s Moustaki worked with Jacques Potrenaud on the film of Albert Cosseri's book, Mendiants Et Orgueilleux, and played the central character, Hadjis. He also composed the music for movies such as The Man With Connections, Solo, The Five Leaf Clover and At The Brink Of The Bench. Although little known outside the French-speaking world, in the early 90s Moustaki had several albums in the UK catalogue.

● ALBUMS: Troubador (Polydor 1978),★★★ Le Meteque (Polydor 1984),★★★ Georges Moustaki (Polydor 1985)★★★★.

Mouth And McNeal

Although former construction worker Willem Duyn ('Mouth') was a rock 'n' roll exponent, he teamed up with classically-trained vocalist Sjoukje Van't Spiijker ('McNeal') in 1971 after she heard a tape he made at Amsterdam's Phonogram studio. Recording a debut single, 'Hey Love You', in English, the pair anticipated the US million-seller, 1972's 'How Do You Do' (composed by Hans Van Hemert and Hans Van Hoff), when it was issued in North America, following chart triumphs in Austria and the Netherlands. As this overseas breakthrough could not be sustained, the duo concentrated on the European market, touring constantly both before and after their second - and last - international smash with 'I See A Star', a UK Top 10 entry and Holland's entry in 1974's Eurovision Song Contest.

Mouth Music

Formed by Martin Swan, a Sheffield born Scot, and an American, Talitha MacKenzie, Mouth Music made an impressive debut in 1990 with a fusion of Gaelic vocals, African percussion and synthesisers. An EP, Blue Door, Green Sea, released in 1992, confirmed their direction, and a constant stream of influences made their live shows exciting as well as experimental. One of the EP's tracks, a dance mix of their earlier, 'Sienn O', revealed a further advance. On Mo-di (1993), there were more apparent moves into the dance area, and it seems that the band's apparent folk origin is now only one aspect of its work, which includes samba and hip-hop. When Talitha MacKenzie departed, she was replaced by vocalist, Jackie Joyce. The group's live performances are usually augmented by a seven piece band.

● ALBUMS: Mouth Music (Triple Earth 1990),★★ Mo-Di (1993)★★★, Shorelife (Triple Earth 1994)★★★.

Mouzon, Alphonze

b. 21 November 1948, Charleston, South Carolina, USA. Mouzon started playing when he was four years old and was taught drums at high school. He relocated to New York when he was 17 and in 1969 played in the Broadway musical Promises, Promises. He released his first record in the same year, with Gil Evans. He freelanced for a time before playing with Weather Report in 1971, McCoy Tyner (1972-73), Larry Coryell's Eleventh House (1973-75) and in a trio with Albert Mangelsdorff and Jaco Pastorius. After that Mouzon again freelanced until he joined Herbie Hancock in the late 70s. Mouzon tries to bring 'jazz polyrhythms to a rock pulse' and in this he succeeds, with his furiously propulsive drumming which is as welcome in a rock setting as in straight jazz.

● ALBUMS: Gil Evans (1969)★★★, Funky Snakefoot (1973)★★★, Mind Transplant (RPM 1975)★★, with Albert Mangelsdorff, Jaco Pastorius Trilogue-Live (1976)★★★★, In Search Of A Dream (MPS 1981)★★★, Back To Jazz (L&R 1986)★★★, The Night Is Still Young (Tenacious 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Alphonse Mouzon (Black Sun 1989)★★★★.

Move

Formed in late 1965 from the ashes of several Birmingham groups, the original Move comprised Roy Wood (vocals/guitar), Carl Wayne (vocals), Chris 'Ace' Kefford (bass), Trevor Burton (guitar) and Bev Bevan (drums). Under the guidance of Tony Secunda, they moved to London, signed to Decca's hit subsidiary Deram, and rapidly established themselves as one of the most inventive and accomplished pop groups on the live circuit. Their first two hit singles, the classically inspired 'Night Of Fear' and upbeat psychedelic 'I Can Hear The Grass Grow' sounded fresh and abrasive and benefitted from a series of publicity stunts masterminded by Secunda. Like the Who, the Move specialized in 'auto-destruction', smashing television sets and cars onstage and burning effigies of Adolf Hitler, Ian Smith and Dr Veerwoord. In 1967, they signed to the reactivated Regal Zonophone label which was launched with the fashionably titled 'Flowers In The Rain', the first record played on BBC Radio 1. The mischievous Secunda attempted to promote the disc with a saucy postcard depicting Harold Wilson. The Prime Minister promptly sued for libel, thereby diverting Roy Wood's royalties to charity. In February 1968, the group returned as strong as ever with the high energy, 50s inspired, 'Fire Brigade'. Soon afterwards, Ace Kefford suffered a nervous breakdown and left the group which continued as a quartet, with Burton switching to bass. The catchy but chaotic 'Wild Tiger Woman' fared less well than expected, as did their bizarrely eclectic EP Something Else. Management switches from Tony Secunda to Don Arden and Peter Walsh brought further complications, but the maestro Wood responded well with the evocative 'Blackberry Way', a number 1 in some UK charts. A softening of their once violent image with 'Curly' coincided with Burton's departure and saw Carl Wayne recklessly steering them on to the cabaret circuit. Increasing friction within their ranks culminated in Wayne's departure for a solo career, leaving the Move to carry on as a trio. The heavy rock sound of 'Brontosaurus' and 'When Alice Comes Down To The Farm' supplemented their diverse hit repertoire, and further changes were ahead. The recruitment of Jeff Lynne from the Idle Race encouraged them to experiment with cellos and oboes while simultaneously pursuing their career as an increasingly straightforward pop act. The final flurry of Move hits ('Tonight', 'Chinatown' and 'California Man') were bereft of the old invention, which was henceforth to be discovered in their grand offshoots, the Electric Light Orchestra (ELO) and Wizzard.

● ALBUMS: The Move (Regal Zonophone 1968)★★★★, Shazam (Regal Zonophone 1970)★★★★, Looking On (Fly 1970)★★★, Message From The Country (Harvest 1971)★★★, California Man (Harvest 1974)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Collection (Castle 1986)★★★, The Early Years (Dojo 1992)★★★, The BBC Sessions (Band Of Joy 1995)★★, Movements - Thirtieth Anniversary Anthology 3-CD box set (Westside 1997)★★★★, Looking Back - The Best Of The Move (Music Club 1998)★★★.

Movement Ex

A Los Angeles, California-based duo combining Lord Mustafa Hasan Ma'd and DJ King Born Khaaliq, whose Afrocentric/Muslim opinions (they support the Five Percent Nation Islamic creed) are frankly and sharply put. The production of their debut, recorded when they were still teenagers, was dense and tightly-wrought, engaging the listener with its austere atmosphere. Subjects included drugs, gun-running, ecology, history and sexually transmitted diseases. Light listening for a saturday evening.

● ALBUMS: Movement Ex (CBS 1990)★★★.

Movin' Melodies

A label founded in March 1993 by DJ's Rob Boskamp and Patrick Prins. Boskamp had started as a mobile DJ at the age of 14 in his native Amsterdam, joining DMC Holland in 1986. He worked with Go! Bang and ESP before releasing his own material on MTMT Records. Boskamp's other labels include Urban Sound Of Amsterdam, Gyrate, Weekend, Dutch Volume, Looneyville, Ces, Dutch Club Culture, Mulatto, Fast Food and Red Skins. Prins started DJing in Vegas, learning drums and keyboards before taking a course in production/engineering, building up his own studio. The two partners were introduced in January 1993 by a Dutch dance magazine. The Movin' Melodies name was first invoked for an EP on Urban Sound Of Amsterdam in March 1993. The label was inaugurated properly by July's French Connection EP, then 'Bailando Guitarra' a month later. 1994 brought Peppermint Lounge ('Lemon Project') and Artemsia ('Bits & Pieces').

Moving Cloud

Formed in County Clare, Eire, Moving Cloud play waltzes, jigs, reels and polkas. The band consists of Paul Brock (button accordion), Manus McGuire (fiddle), Maeve Donnelly (fiddle), Carl Hession (piano) and Kevin Crawford (b. Birmingham, England; flute). Brock was already a well known instrumentalist when the group was formed, having won several fleadh cheoil titles and having played with Artie Shaw and Glenn Miller. Before forming Moving Cloud he had recorded two other albums, Tribute To Joe Cooley with Frankie Gavin in 1986 and Mo Chairdin in 1992. McGuire was born in Sligo, and released two albums with Buttons & Bows, The First Month Of Summer and Buttons & Bows. Donnelly is from Abbey in County Galway and as a keen folklorist selects much of Moving Cloud's music. Hession, a music teacher, is also from Galway and is classically trained. The band was officially formed in 1989 with the idea of playing dance music around the local pubs and clubs.

● ALBUMS: Moving Cloud (Green Linnet 1995)★★★.

Moving Hearts

This Irish group was formed in 1981, by former Planxty members Christy Moore and Donal Lunny and was notable for its innovative use in Irish folk of traditional music of an eclectic array of instruments, which at times included saxophones, pipes, bouzoukis and synthesizers. All the original members had a history in Irish folk scene. The original line-up with Moore and Lunny comprised: Eoghan O'Neill (bass/vocals), Davy Spillane (uileann pipes/whistles), Brian Calnan (percussion/drums) and Keith Donald (saxophone). This exciting blend of folk music, jazz and electric rock challenged the popular pre-conceptions of Irish - indeed, British - folk music, although the group never gained the recognition it fully deserved. The song subject matter ranged from the traditional to the more contemporary, chronicling the internment of terrorist suspects ('On The Blanket') and nuclear weapons ('Hiroshima'). Moore ultimately found the group format uncomfortable and returned to solo work in 1982. He was replaced by Mick Hanly, who in turn was supplanted by Florence McSweeney in 1984. The costs of running such a large line-up led to the eventually demise of the group in 1985, although they have since reformed for special concerts as in 1986's Self-Aid benefit.

● ALBUMS: Moving Hearts (1981)★★★, Dark End Of The Street (1982)★★★★, Live Hearts (1983)★★, The Storm (1985)★★★.

Moving Pictures

Formed in Sydney, Australia in 1980, Moving Pictures had a monster single, 'What About Me?', in early 1982 which went to number 1 in Australia and made the US Top 30. The band Comprised Alex Smith (vocals), Ian Lees (bass), Garry Frost (guitar/vocals), Charlie Cole (keyboards/trumpet/vocals), Andrew Thompson (saxophone) and Mark Meyer (drums), Moving Pictures' debut album featured strong ballads, but its rock-orientated live act was successfully captured on their second album which was a minor success. The band continued for several more years releasing a series of unsuccessful singles and another album before disbanding. The group would probably have achieved more success in the USA had its label Elektra not struck difficulties just as the band first charted. Guitarist Gary Frost later formed 1927 which also had an excellent response from Australian radio and the public.

● ALBUMS: Days Of Innocence (1981),★★★ Matinee (1983)★★★, Last Picture Show (1987)★★★.

Moving Pictures - Rush

The Canadian trio's new-found technological musing, which infuriated their more traditionally minded audience, came to glorious fruition with this record. The organic sensibilities of their quite excellent musicianship, combined with their dextrous inventiveness, made for a diverse and compelling record. Adopting a surprise reggae beat for 'Vital Signs', and with drummer Neil Peart's literary leanings much in evidence in a goggle-eyed adaptation of John Dos Passos' 'USA Trilogy' for the mini-epic 'The Camera Eye', Rush created a rich mesh of styles that is somehow both restrained and wildly evocative in the same instant. Reassuringly mature stuff.

● Tracks: Tom Sawyer; Red Barchetta; YYZ; Limelight; The Camera Eye; Witch Hunt (Part III Of Fear); Vital Signs.

● First released 1981

● UK peak chart position: 3

● USA peak chart position: 3

Moving Shadow Records

Rob Playford's hardcore label, founded in 1990 ('Hardcore is totally different from the rest of the music industry, cos its not showbiz. There's no band loyalty and nothing to read about in teeny mags'). Playford comes from a hip hop DJ background, and records on the label with various guest personnel as 2 Bad Mice (including 'Waremouse' and 'Bombscare', both of which featured the label's distinctive, heavy snare sound which was widely imitated/sampled subsequently). The label found its stride in 1992 with major releases from 2 Bad Mice ('Hold It Down'), Cosmo & Dibs ('Sonic Rush' - Playford and 'Little' Stevie 'T' Thrower's follow-up to 'Oh So Nice' and 'Star Eyes') and Blame ('Music Takes You'), which went to the top of the dance lists.

By 1993 the roster included 'intelligent techno/ambient tunes like Omni Trio's 'Mystic Stepper' and 'Renegade Snares', Four Play's 'Open Your Mind' and Hyper-On-Experience's 'Lords Of The Null Lines'. The label also started the Two On One series of EPs, where two artists were encouraged to experiment on either side of one record. The label's biggest record in the first half of 1994 would be Deep Blue's 'The Helicopter Tune'. Playford also promotes parties and raves (Voodoo Magic etc), runs a record shop (Section 5) and the compilation label Reanimate.

- ALBUMS: Various Renegade Selector Issue 1 (Reanimate/Moving Shadow 1994)★★★★.

Moving Sidewalks

Formed in Houston, Texas, USA, the Moving Sidewalks comprised of Billy Gibbons (lead guitar/vocals), Tom Moore (keyboards), Don Summers (bass) and Dan Mitchell (bass). They made their debut in 1967 with the powerful '99th Floor', which adeptly crossed a garage-band sound with emergent acid-rock. Further singles included a radical reappraisal of the Beatles' 'I Want To Hold Your Hand', while the superior Flash blended neo-psychedelic styles ('Flashback') with experimental material ('Eclipse' and 'Reclipse'), in which Gibbons' Jimi Hendrix-influenced guitar work was particularly memorable. The Moving Sidewalks began to disintegrate in 1970 when first Tom Moore, then Don Summers, were drafted into the armed forces. Lanier Greig (keyboards) joined Gibbons and Mitchell for the unit's final gigs, before the revamped trio took a new name, Z.Z. Top.

- ALBUMS: Flash (1968)★★★★.

Moving Targets

This hardcore punk band, led by Kenny Chambers (vocals, lead guitar), formed in 1981 in Ipswich, Massachusetts, USA, a quaint fishing town just north of Boston. In keeping with their regional origins, Moving Targets would display a definite Mission Of Burma influence as their career progressed. They made their debut by recording three tracks for the Boston regional compilation Bands That Could Be God, alongside the likes of Salem 66 and Deep Wound (whose J. Mascis would later spearhead Dinosaur Jr). However, it was quite some time before anyone paid attention to their numerous demos and invited them into a 'proper' studio. In 1986 Lou Giordana (who had originally produced the compilation tracks) helped the band record 15 songs which finally persuaded Taang! Records to offer them a contract. Burning In Water, Drowning In Flames emerged in October 1986. A strong debut, the band's progress was nevertheless impeded when Chambers became involved in a variety of sidelines. These included Dred Foole And The Din (two albums), the Groinoids and Bullet Lavolta, with whom he toured. Moving Targets eventually re-formed with Pat Leonard (guitar) and Chuck Freeman (bass). During disagreements over the second album's direction, the group's original bass player returned. Chambers then recorded a solo album. A new line-up of Moving Targets, featuring two ex-members of Jones Very, Jeff Goddard (bass) and Jamie Van Bramer (drums), as well as guitarist Ben Segal, recorded Fall. Goddard had also appeared on Chambers' solo work.

- ALBUMS: Burning In Water, Drowning In Flames (Taang! 1986)★★★★, Brave Noise (Taang! 1989)★★★, Fall (Taang! 1991)★★★.

Moving Targets - Penetration

Press acclaim and the patronage of Radio One's John Peel was not enough to sustain this female-led five-piece. Their debut single, the excellent 'Don't Dictate', which came out in the autumn of 1977, set the tone and created a widely regarded reputation for their punky enthusiasm. This, their debut album, which appeared the following year, cemented their critical acclaim. However, their much-vaunted appeal never truly translated into record sales, both their albums never managing to break into the UK Top 20. Pauline Murray eventually went solo but her releases suffered a similar fate.

- Tracks: Future Daze; Life's A Gamble; Lovers Of Outrage; Vision; Silent Community; Stone Heroes; Movement; Too Many Friends; Reunion; Nostalgia; Freemoney.
- First released 1978
- UK peak chart position: 22
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mowatt, Judy

b. *c.*1952, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. In her teens Mowatt joined a dance troupe that toured the Caribbean. There she met up with Beryl Lawson and Merle Clemonson, with whom she formed the Gaylettes (aka the Gaytones). Together they backed many artists on releases for the Federal label in the mid-60s, until Mowatt's two companions left for America in 1970. Deciding to persevere with a solo career, she recorded widely in both soul and reggae styles, under a variety of names due to contractual complications. The most notable of these releases was 'I Shall Sing', the first of a string of reggae chart successes. Subsequently, Mowatt joined the Twelve Tribes Of Israel organization, aligning herself with fellow Jamaican musicians such as Dennis Brown and Freddie McGregor. She formed her own label, Ashandan, and in the early 70s joined Marcia Griffiths on stage, alongside Rita Marley. Eventually, the trio was cemented as the I-Threes, Bob Marley having been suitably impressed by their performance. While working with Marley, she continued her solo career, and also managed to find time to raise a family. She also had the honour of being the first to record at Bob Marley's Tuff Gong studio in Kingston, sessions that produced Black Woman. It was the first time that a female artist had produced her own album in Jamaica. Not only was it an outstanding work in its own right, but it offered an articulate voice for Jamaican women, who had previously been either under- or mis-represented in the reggae idiom. Largely self-penned (with notable contributions from Bob Marley and Freddie McGregor), it proved a landmark work, showcasing her sweet and plaintive voice. She has continued to forge a solo career and rivals her old sparring partner Griffiths for the title of Jamaica's first woman of reggae. However, attempts to cross over have been less successful, notably Love Is Overdue, which included takes on 'Try A Little Tenderness' and UB40's 'Sing Our Own Song'. The album did bring her a Grammy nomination, the first occasion on which a female reggae artist had been honoured in this way.

- ALBUMS: Mellow Mood (Ashandan 1975)★★★, Black Woman (Tuff Gong/Shanachie 1979)★★★★, Only A Woman (Shanachie 1982)★★★, Mr D.J. (Ashandan 1982)★★★, Working Wonders (Shanachie 1985)★★★, Love Is Overdue (Greensleeves 1986)★★.

Mowrey, Dude

Dude Mowrey is a typical 90s country singer - young, good-looking and able to hold a tune, but ultimately fairly bland and anonymous. He is managed by Mel Tillis and, although his records have sold reasonably well, he has yet to make a big breakthrough.

- ALBUMS: Honky Tonk (Capitol 1991)★★, Dude Mowrey (Arista 1993)★★★.

Moxy Früvous

A cappella Toronto, Canada band Moxy Früvous initially made their name opening for the likes of Bob Dylan and Bryan Adams. The members had, allegedly, previously met on a school trip to a pig-calling contest. They did not win, but shared instead the prize for 'Most Promising Pig-Caller'. Hence Mike Ford (guitar/percussion), Murray Foster (bass/guitar), Jean Ghomeshi (drums) and David Matheson (guitar/bass/accordion) formed a band, taken after the pigs' names; Moxy and Fruvous. They subsequently began to write and rehearse together at high school. However, one pair broke off to write three full-length musicals, while the others started a pop/funk combo called Tall New Buildings. They quartet regrouped while attending university in 1990 and began busking on the streets of Toronto. Their eclectic tastes saw them draw on rap, soca, folk and theatrical traditions. The single unifying factor was the band's distinctive four-part vocal harmonies. The irreverent and occasionally incisive lyrics offered an additional attraction, as on the single 'Stuck In The '90s', a grim take on counter-culture and the politics of protest. The band's debut album, Bargainville, was released in 1993, the songs conducted with the type of alternating restraint and fervour which recalled the passionate melodicism of the Proclaimers.

- ALBUMS: Bargainville (East West 1993)★★★.

Moye, Famoudou Don

b. 23 May 1946, Rochester, New York, USA. Moye studied at Wayne State University, Detroit and with trumpeter Charles Moore participated in the Detroit Free Jazz Artists' Workshop, where he met Joseph Jarman. In 1968 Moye began touring Europe and Morocco with Detroit Free Jazz, playing also with Steve Lacy in Rome, North Africa and Paris, where he joined the Art Ensemble Of Chicago in 1969. Since then most of his work has been with the Ensemble, and with the group he co-leads with Jarman and with the Leaders, an all-star post-bop group. He has also worked with the Gospel Messenger Singers, Sonny Sharrock, Dave Burrell, Gato Barbieri, Pharoah Sanders, Randy Weston and Alan Shorter, and in 1989 replaced Phil Wilson in Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy.

- ALBUMS: with Joseph Jarman: Egwu-Anwu (1978)★★★, with Jarman, Don Pullen The Magic Triangle (1979)★★★, with Jarman Black Paladins (1980)★★, Earth Passage - Density (1981)★★, with the Leaders Mudfoot (1986)★★★, with the Leaders Out Here Like This (1988)★★★, with the Leaders Unforseen Blessings (1989)★★★.

Moyet, Alison

b. 18 June 1961, Basildon, Essex, England. The former singer of the synthesizer duo Yazoo, Moyet embarked on a solo career in 1983, after critics had consistently praised her outstanding natural blues voice. The debut Alf was a superb recording produced and co-written by Tony Swain and Steve Jolley. 'Invisible', 'Love Resurrection' and 'All Cried Out' were all UK hits, while the album made number 1 and took root in the charts for nearly two years. In 1985 she abandoned pop and toured with a jazz band led by John Altman, performing standards which included a version of Billie Holiday's 'That Ole Devil Called Love', which became her biggest hit to date. The tour was not well-received and following her performance with Paul Young at the Live Aid concert, little was seen or heard of her, apart from a major UK hit with 'Is this Love' in 1986. During this time she gave birth to a daughter and experienced the break-up of her marriage. Raindancing appeared in 1987 and narrowly missed the number 1 position in the UK chart. Two single successes were the driving 'Weak In The Presence Of Beauty' and a sensitive cover of Ketty Lester's 'Love Letters'. Once again Moyet disappeared, giving birth to another child but experiencing another bout of lack of self-confidence. She returned in 1991, embarking on a UK tour and releasing a new album. Hoodoo was a diverse record that broke Moyet away from the mould she was anxious to escape. It was artistically satisfying, although commercially pedestrian and effectively enabled this highly talented singer to start again. Another lengthy hiatus was broken by the release of Essex in 1994, but this album failed to redress the balance with material that was nowhere near as strong as her outstanding voice deserved. There was a reminder of the quality of her past songs on a well-compiled retrospective, which reached number 1 in the UK album chart in 1995.

- ALBUMS: Alf (Columbia 1984)★★★★, Raindancing (Columbia 1987)★★, Hoodoo (Columbia 1991)★★★, Essex (Columbia 1994)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Alison Moyet Singles (Columbia 1995)★★★.

Mr Fantasy - Trafffic

Released at the height of flower power, Traffic were originally the perfect 'tangerine candy coloured bicycle' group. Dave Mason's hippie ditties blended with Steve Winwood's more ambitious musical aspirations. Although they were given the same title, the US and UK albums had different track-listings. The US version has the edge because it includes the hit singles 'Hole In My Shoe' and 'Paper Sun' as well as 'Smiling Phases', which was covered by Blood Sweat And Tears. The UK version has 'Utterly Simple' and 'Hope I Never Find Me There' in their place. Mercifully, both versions include the magnificent title track with the definitive Winwood guitar solo (or was it Mason?).

- Tracks: Paper Sun; Dealer; Coloured Rain; Hole In My Shoe; No Face, No Name, No Number; Heaven Is In Your Mind; House For Everyone; Berkshire Poppies; Giving To You; Smiling Phases; Dear Mr Fantasy.
- First released 1967
- UK peak chart position: 8
- USA peak chart position: 88

Mr Lucky - John Lee Hooker

With the success of The Healer behind him, a newly rich man who now had enough money to live his years in some comfort, John Lee Hooker could only call himself Mr Lucky. He had first recorded the song in 1967, and this time he had the Robert Cray Band giving him enthusiastic backing. Other guests included Ry Cooder, Albert Collins, John Hammond, Van Morrison, Carlos Santana, Johnny Winter and Keith Richards. 'This Is Hip', with Cooder and Terry Evans, became the soundtrack for a Lee Jeans television advert. Most of the other songs revisited his huge song catalogue but 'Stripped Me Naked', with Carlos Santana's band, showed that he could still pen a powerful lyric.

- Tracks: I Want To Hug You; Mr. Lucky; Backstabbers; This Is Hip; I Cover The Waterfront; Highway 13; Stripped Me Naked; Susie; Crawlin' Kingsnake; Father Was A Jockey.
- First released 1991
- UK peak chart position: 3
- USA peak chart position: 101

Mr Tambourine Man - Byrds

The only other major group of the 60s, other than the Beatles (the fab four), to elicit such universal love and approval are the Byrds (the famous five). They were originally seen as copyists, and were certainly slammed when they first came to hostile England. The great Byrdologist Johnny Rogan and most of us lesser mortals now realise their massive influence on popular music since 1965. The Roger McGuinn 12-string Rickenbacker opening of the title track is still one of the greatest sounds in music! On this, Gene Clark showed us he was a genius songwriter. The CD reissue with bonus tracks is as essential and dutiful as breathing and smiling. Just like David Crosby did in those days.

- Tracks: Mr Tambourine Man; I'll Feel A Whole Lot Better; Spanish Harlem Incident; You Won't Have To Cry; Here Without You; The Bells Of Rhymney; All I Really Want To Do; I Knew I'd Want You; It's No Use; Don't Doubt Yourself Babe; Chimes Of Freedom; We'll Meet Again; She Has A Way; You And Me.
- First released 1965
- UK peak chart position: 7
- USA peak chart position: 6

Mr. Big (70s)

With their name taken from an album track by the disbanded Free, Jeff Dicken (vocals), Pete Crowther (guitar), Robert Hirschman (bass) and John Burnip (drums) attempted to fill this market void by ploughing a hard rock furrow with a similar blues-derived stalk. On stage, hirsute Dicken's tight-trousered gyrations ensured a healthy cluster of fans round the central microphone as the group garnered a grassroots following on the British and European club circuit, and an EMI contract, in 1975. More touring ensured that their two albums sold well without actually making the charts, though the second spawned the singles 'Romeo' and 'Feel Like Calling Home' which reached the UK Top 40. By 1977, Burnip had been replaced by Vincent Chaulk and then John Marter, and Crowther was replaced by Edward Carter. Despite enriching their sound on record with keyboards, the group were categorized as another outmoded 'heavy' act as they drowned in the rip-tide of punk.

- ALBUMS: Sweet Silence (1975)★★★, Mr. Big (1977)★★★.

Mr. Big (80s)

Mr. Big (not to be confused with the 70s group of the same name) are a supergroup project, featuring bassist Billy Sheehan (ex-David Lee Roth), guitarist Paul Gilbert (ex-Racer X), drummer Pat Torpey (ex-Impelliteri and Robert Plant) and vocalist Eric Martin (ex-Eric Martin Band). Signing to Atlantic Records, their self-titled debut was a high-energy blast of sophisticated hard rock. Lean Into It, released two years later, marked a considerable progression; the band had evolved their own style and sounded more comfortable together. Drawing on influences from a wider musical spectrum, the album was well received by the critics and charted on both sides of the Atlantic. The exposition of AOR that has graced the charts remains, however, in sharp contrast to their reputation for strong live performances. After his departure in 1997, Gilbert went solo and released King Of Clubs in 1998.

- ALBUMS: Mr. Big (Atlantic 1989)★★★, Lean Into It (Atlantic 1991)★★★★, Live (Atlantic 1992)★★, Bump Ahead (Atlantic 1993)★★★, Hey Man (Atlantic 1996)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Big, Bigger, Biggest (Atlantic 1997)★★★.

Mr. Bloe

'Groovin' With Mr. Bloe', an instrumental dominated by harmonica, was put together by pianist Zack Laurence and issued on DJM Records, a division of Dick James Music. It was prevented from topping the UK chart in the summer of 1970 by Mungo Jerry's 'In The Summertime'. The Mr. Bloe project was abandoned after efforts including 'Anyway You Want It', 'One More Time' fell on deaf ears, despite contributions of compositions by Elton John and other James associates. The influence of the hit single was felt, nevertheless, in 1977 on the overall sound of 'A New Career In A New Town' on David Bowie's Low.

- ALBUMS: Groovin' With Mr Bloe (DJM 1973)★★★.

Mr. Bo

b. Louis Collins, 7 April 1932, Indianola, Mississippi, USA, d. 19 September 1995. Collins moved to Chicago in 1946 and by the early 50s had settled in Detroit. His musical apprenticeship began in the time-honoured tradition with appearances at blues house parties, where he was often to be found in the company of Washboard Willie, John Lee Hooker, Vernon Harrison 'Boogie Woogie Red', Little Sonny and others. By the late 50s he had adopted the sobriquet Mr. Bo, at which time he released his first recordings. He issued singles on labels including Northern, Big D, Reel and Diamond Jim. His fluent guitar playing and steady, understated vocals impressed many, particularly on the original version of 'If Trouble Was Money', a song he co-wrote with his brother. Both Charlie Musselwhite and Albert Collins have subsequently covered the song. Though still playing regularly on the club scene, his profile diminished in the 70s and 80s. In 1993 a resurgence of interest in his original singles led to an appearance at the Blues Estafette in Holland, his first European appearance. He returned to the studio in 1995 for the first time in 20 years, as well as appearing in a local television advertisement. He died from pneumonia later that year before being able to reap the rewards of the new interest surrounding him.

Mr. Bungle

Originating in Eureka, California, USA, in the mid-80s, this bizarre punk-metal-jazz-avant garde amalgam was Mike Patton's first band prior to joining Faith No More, and the success of The Real Thing helped Patton to secure a record contract for his previous project. Patton and colleagues Trey Spruance (guitar), Trevor Dunn (bass) and Danny Heifetz (drums) adopted an oddly costumed image to match their eclectic musical style, with Patton and Spruance adopting the respective pseudonyms Vlad Dracula and Scummy, enlisting jazz-noise experimentalist John Zorn to produce Mr Bungle. The album received surprisingly positive reviews considering its extreme, genre-hopping, improvisational format and strange lyrical themes, although Zorn's sympathetic production helped to focus the eccentricity. Mr Bungle sold respectably on the strength of Patton's name, but his Faith No More commitments kept live shows to a minimum. Spruance subsequently replaced Jim Martin in Faith No More for the recording of King For A Day...Fool For A Lifetime, although he departed shortly afterwards.

● ALBUMS: Mr Bungle (Warners 1991)★★★★, Disco Volante (London 1995)★★★.

Mr. Cinders

The distinguished English composer, Vivian Ellis, enjoyed his first hit with this show which opened on 11 February 1929 at the Adelphi Theatre in London. Ellis's co-composer was Richard Myers, and the book and lyrics were by Greatrex Newman and Clifford Grey, with additional lyrics by Vivian Ellis and Leo Robin. As the title suggests, the book is a gender-reversal of the well-worn Cinderella story with Bobby Howes as Jim Lancaster, a young man whose father has married again, thereby providing Jim with two ugly step-brothers. Binnie Hale is the rich girl masquerading as a parlour maid who becomes his 'fairy godmother', and sings the show's big hit song, 'Spread A Little Happiness', while 'dressed as a parlourmaid, high-kicking around the stage with a feather duster'. The rest of the songs in a delightful and engaging score included 'On the Amazon', 'I'm A One-Man Girl', 'Ev'ry Little Moment', 'I've Got You', 'I Could Be True To Two', and 'I Want The World To Know'. Basil Howes, Jack Melford, and Lorna Lubbard were also in the cast, and Mr. Cinders was a tremendous hit right away. After five months at the Adelphi, the show transferred to the London Pavilion in March 1929, and continued to run for a total of 529 performances. A film version with Kenneth and George Western (the Western Brothers), Clifford Mollison and Zelma O'Neal, was released in 1934. A major London revival of Mr. Cinders opened in the West End in 1983 and stayed for two performances short of the original. It's star, Denis Lawson, won a Laurence Olivier Award for best actor. Probably sparked by the 1992 Vivian Ellis biographical revue, Spread A Little Happiness, London audiences saw Mr. Cinders again during the following year, but only briefly. All the revivals 'borrowed' the occasional Vivian Ellis song from his various other shows. This was also the case when Mr. Cinders was produced in 1988 at the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut, USA. The piece was finally given its New York premiere at the Mazur Theatre in 1992. That most appealing song, 'Spread A Little Happiness', has endured, and surfaces frequently. Sting, the ex-lead singer with the Police, sang it in the 1982 film Brimstone And Treacle, and it became his first solo chart hit in the UK. It was also used during the 80s in a television commercial for margarine.

Mr. Fingers

b. Larry Heard. The house music DJ Larry Heard, based in Chicago, Illinois, USA, was given the nickname, 'Fingers', because of his dexterity when spinning records. Before this Heard had played percussion in several bands, until he became fascinated by electronics and its musical possibilities. He made his recording debut in 1985 with Fingers Inc's 'Mystery Of Love' (the original copies credited it solely to Mr Fingers) on DJ International Records, following it a year later with 'You're Mind'/'A Path'. He also formed the It with Harry Dennis, releasing two further singles, 'Donnie' and 'Gallimaufry Gallery', named after a Chicago club. Some say that Fingers invented acid house music in 1986 on the track 'Washing Machine' that was included on the three-track single, 'Can You Feel It?' (on Trax Records), but others say that DJ Pierre and Marshall Jefferson got there first. There can be no dispute, though, about the strength of his mid-80s releases such as 'Slam Dance', or his production of Robert Owens' 'Bring Down The Walls' and 'I'm Strong'. Owens had also sung on 'Washing Machine' and other Fingers Inc tracks. Fingers then established Alleviated Records, and in 1988 under the name of the House Factors released 'Play It Loud', and his first album, this time under the name Fingers Inc. In 1989 he produced records by Kym Mazelle ('Treat Me Right'), Lil' Louis ('Touch Me'), Blakk Society ('Just Another Lonely Day') and Trio Zero ('Twilight'), and as Mr Fingers he released 'What About This Love?' on ffrr Records. He also remixed and/or produced other artists, including Adamski, Electribe 101 and Massive Attack. Mr Fingers' second album included the singles 'Closer' and 'On A Corner Called Jazz'. Back To Love was a restrained and mature collection of mellow house tracks, which broke few musical barriers but which cemented Finger's reputation as one of house music's pivotal forces.

● ALBUMS: Amnesia (Trax 1989,),★★★ Introduction (MCA 1992),★★★★ Back To Love (Black Market International 1994)★★★. As Fingers Inc: Fingers Inc (Jack Trax 1988)★★★. As The It: On Top Of The World (1990)★★★.

Mr. Fox

One of the genre's forgotten acts, Mr. Fox's pioneering influence in folk/rock was equal to that of Steeleye Span and Fairport Convention. Concerned at the lack of a band that could play atmospheric English music, Ashley Hutchings and traditionalist Bob Pegg, recruited Pegg's wife, Carole (fiddle), Alun Eden (drums), Barry Lyons (bass), Andrew Massey (cello) and John Myatt (woodwinds). They recorded a powerful, haunting album for Transatlantic, for which Pegg wrote mature, gothic songs, inspired by his Yorkshire homeland. Economically unfeasible, the band was reduced to a rock four-piece unit, and released the excellent The Gypsy. In 1971 they toured the festival circuit, but various aspects of their perfomance at Loughborough were heavily criticized. In the following year Alan Edun and Barry Lyons left the group, to join Trees, and were replaced by Nick Strutt (guitar) and Ritchie Bull (bass). This drastic move changed the band's character, and Carole Pegg's departure reduced Mr. Fox to a trio, after which they disbanded. Carole Pegg later worked with Graham Bond, and issued a solo record influenced by 'magic'. Bob Pegg continued to perform with Nick Strutt, and, in the late 70s, released a series of characteristically black folk albums. He has since remarried, and moved into theatrical education, although he still has a number of unreleased concept albums.

● ALBUMS: Mr. Fox (Transatlantic 1970)★★★★, The Gypsy (Transatlantic 1971)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Complete Mr. Fox (Transatlantic 1975)★★★★. As Bob And Carole Pegg He Came From The Mountains (1971)★★★, as Carole Pegg Carolanne (1973)★★★, as Bob Pegg, Nick Strutt Bob Pegg & Nick Strutt (1973)★★★★, The Shipbuilder (1974)★★★, Ancient Maps (1975)★★★.

Mr. Lee

b. Lee Haggard, c.1968, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Haggard's introduction to music came via his elder brother, who taught him bass, drums and keyboards in the tradition of James Brown, Parliament and Funkadelic. By the time he was 18 he was to be caught DJing at local clubs and recording demo tapes at home, perfecting his own sound. Confident of his newfound abilities, he approached a friend, who brought him to the attention of Mitchball Records. A few singles emerged from the deal, but failed to sell. More success was to be found with the Trax label, for whom he recorded the hip house cut 'Shoot Your Best Shot'. Popular in his native Chicago, it paved the way for the follow-up, 'I Can't Forget', on which he sang for the first time, to become an international hit. However, from then on he changed his vocal delivery to that of a rapper, releasing singles like 'Pump Up Chicago' and 'Pump Up England'. While promoting these in the latter territory he was the subject of intense bidding by the majors, finally signing with Jive. Following singles like 'Do It To Me' (which featured an all-star cast, being produced by Mr Fingers, part-penned by Stevie Wonder and featuring samples of Quincy Jones' 'Betcha'), his debut album would sell over one million copies worldwide, the title-track reaching number 1 on the Billboard dance chart when released as a single. By the time of his second collection he was experimenting with the New Jack Swing sound, a new way of maintaining the blend of R&B/house and rap which had served him so well perviously. His adoption of the style was made explicit on album cuts like 'New House Swing'. The first single taken from it, 'Hey Love', featured labelmate R. Kelly, though there was a return to hip hop roots with the samples of Chuck D (Public Enemy)'s 'Bring The Noise' chant on 'Time To Party'.

● ALBUMS: Get Busy (Jive 1990)★★★, I Wanna Rock Right Now (Jive 1992)★★★.

Mr. Mention - Buju Banton

Mr. Mention effectively collects together Banton's early dancehall hits, recorded at Donovan Germain's Penthouse Studio. 'Love Mi Browning' caused some controversy by announcing Banton's love for light-skinned girls, to which he replied with the self-explanatory 'Love Black Woman'. Other cuts defining the dancehall fashions included 'Batty Rider' and 'Woman Nuh Fret', while 'Who Say' and 'Bonafide Love' featured vocal contributions from Beres Hammond and Wayne Wonder, respectively.

● Tracks: Batty Rider; Love How The Gal Flex; Love Black Woman; Look How You Sweet; Woman Nuh Fret; Have To Get You Tonight; Dickie; Love Mi Browning; Buju Moving; Who Say; The Grudge; How The World A Run; Buju Love You To The Max; Man Fe Dead; Bonafide Love.

● First Released 1991

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mr. Mister

Although formed in Phoenix, Arizona, USA soft metal artists Mr Mister were based in Los Angeles and were the brainchild of Richard Page (bass/vocals) and Steve George (b. 20 May 1955; keyboards) who had previously played together in the Pages. They were both also experienced session men, working alongside REO Speedwagon and John Parr. The band were completed when Steve Farris (guitar) and Pat Mastelotto (drums) joined in 1982. Their debut in 1984, I Wear The Face, provided the minor US hit 'Hunters Of The Night'. The album was released in the UK two years later. The next album broke the band by scaling the top of the charts and delivering 2 US number 1 singles in 'Broken Wings' and 'Kyrie'. Its release coincided with a marathon Tina Turner support tour. Both singles also made the UK Top 20. After one more album Farris left and was replaced by the well-known session guitarist Buzzy Feiten. Page has since resisted offers to become vocalist for both Toto and Chicago.

● ALBUMS: I Wear The Face (RCA 1984)★★, Welcome To The Real World (RCA 1985)★★, Go On (RCA 1987)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Broken Wings (Camden 1998)★★★.

Mraz, George

b. Jírí Mraz, 9 September 1944, Písek, Czechoslovakia. A gifted musician as a child, Mraz studied formally at the music conservatory in Prague. Although skilled on several instruments, he settled eventually on the bass. He worked in his homeland and in Germany, then in 1968 emigrated to the USA. He entered Berklee College Of Music for further studies, after which he played with Dizzy Gillespie, Oscar Peterson and other leading jazzmen. In New York in the mid-70s he became a member of the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra and also recorded with Stan Getz, Pepper Adams, Zoot Sims, Stéphane Grappelli and in duos with Walter Norris and his fellow Jones-Lewis rhythm section-mate, Roland Hanna. Towards the end of the decade he worked with the New York Jazz Quartet and with John Abercrombie. By the 80s Mraz, who became an American citizen in 1973, was established as a major force among jazz bass players.

● ALBUMS: Stéphane Grappelli Meets The Rhythm Section (1973)★★★, with Roland Hanna Sir Elf + 1 (1977)★★, with Zoot Sims Warm Tenor (1978)★★★, with John Abercrombie M (1980)★★, with Pepper Adams Urban Dreams (1981)★★★★, Jazz (Milestone 1995)★★★.

Mrs Brown You've Got A Lovely Daughter

As well as being popular in their native country, British beat group Herman's Hermits also enjoyed considerable success in the USA. Their impish pop singles seemed to suggest a vision of 'Swinging England', one exacerbated by smash-hit recordings of music-hall standards, "I'm Henry XIII, I Am' and 'Leaning On The Lamp Post', neither of which were issued as singles in the UK. Another exclusive song, 'Mrs Brown You've Got A Lovely Daughter', topped the US charts in 1965, the theme of which inspired this 1968 film. The group had already completed a 'quickie' feature, Hold On in 1966, but its jejune plot and direction were at least related to the era inspiring it. Mrs Brown You've Got A Lovely Daughter surfaced amid rock films exposing drugs, protest, psychedelia and the counter-culture, none of which touched this misguided vehicle. Here the group acquire a greyhound and travel to London to race it in the Greyhound Derby. The presence of veterans Stanley Holloway and Mona Washbourne only served to enhance its anachronistic premise. If there was ever any possibility that Herman's Hermits would slip from pop to rock in the manner of the Pretty Things or Spencer Davis Group, it ended with this film.

Ms Melodie

b. Ramona Parker, Flatbush, Brooklyn, New York, USA. Gruff female rapper whose self-written rhymes and couplets were aided and abetted by the production skills of her (now ex-) husband KRS-1, on her debut album. The conscious lyrics were occasionally insightful, with 'Remember When' added a fitting testimony to the growth of the hip-hop movement: 'The street is the root of the tree that branches out to R&B'. Melodie had formerly served time on Boogie Down Productions' roster of artists. She came from a musical family; her father played saxophone and clarinet, while her mother and sisters were regulars in the local church choirs. Though her first love was soul, Melodie was immediately drawn into the emerging hip hop world when it hit her native Brooklyn streets. In additon to her work with BDP, she had also made a film appearance in the blaxploitation movie parody, I'm Gonna Git You, Sucka, in 1987. Her abilities also extended to fashion design which incorporated her 'sophiticated B-girl' look.

● ALBUMS: Diva (Jive 1989)★★★.

Mseleku, Bheki

b. 1955, Durban, South Africa. Proper recognition of this fine multi-instrumentalist's (pianist, composer, vocalist, saxophonist) jazz talents seemed long overdue, but since 1991 this modest and dignified performer has been very much in the limelight, touring internationally and releasing an album annually. One of a number of supremely talented improvising musicians who have left South Africa and its oppressive apartheid system to take up residence in London, Mseleku made the move relatively recently, touring out of South Africa in the late 70s, moving to Sweden in 1980 and finally settling in London in 1985. A Ronnie Scott's club debut in 1987, with some of the more prominent figures from London's jazz revival, including Courtney Pine and Cleveland Watkiss, did much to bring his talents to the notice of the local scene, and helped pave the way for Celebration - a star-studded, major label debut featuring London-based musicians Pine, Steve Williamson, Eddie Parker and Jean Toussaint and a high-power American rhythm section comprising Michael Bowie and Marvin 'Smitty' Smith. A lively and enthusiastic record, it mixed gentle, township-inspired compositions with modal, post-John Coltrane burnouts, and was marked by a hectic touring campaign and a deserved nomination for British Mercury Music Prize for Album Of The Year. After the media furore had died down, Mseleku resumed the solo performances in which he excels, accompanying overtly spiritual and dedicatory vocal-lines with gently rocking, township-inspired piano voicings, and punctuating the whole with sparkling, McCoy Tyner-style runs and one handed riffs on the tenor saxophone. Meditations, a live recording from the Bath International Music Festival, captured this absorbing style on two long tracks. Signing to the Verve/PolyGram label at the end of 1993, Mseleku's Timelessness found him in the company of some top American heavy-weights, including Joe Henderson, Pharoah Sanders, Abbey Lincoln and Elvin Jones, and was accompanied by another media furore.

● ALBUMS: Celebration (World Circuit 1992)★★★, Meditations (1993)★★★★, Timelessness (Verve 1994)★★★, Star Seeding (Verve 1996)★★★.

MSG

After stints with UFO and the Scorpions, guitarist Michael Schenker (b. 10 January 1955, Savstedt, Germany) decided to step out into the spotlight on his own in 1980. Enlisting the services of Gary Barden (vocals), Simon Phillips (drums), Mo Foster (bass) and Don Airey (keyboards), the Michael Schenker Group (later shortened to MSG) was born. Their approach, characterized by Schenker's screaming guitarwork, had much in common with both his previous bands. Schenker, now in complete control, hired and fired musicians at will, so the line-up of MSG has rarely been stable. Only Barden remained to record their second album; Cozy Powell (drums), Chris Glen (bassist, ex-Sensational Alex Harvey Band) and Paul Raymond (keyboards, ex-UFO) were the replacements. They enjoyed great success in the Far East, where they recorded a double live set at the Budokan Hall, Tokyo. This album went some way towards establishing the band in Europe. Graham Bonnet replaced Barden on Assault Attack and ex-Rory Gallagher drummer Ted McKenna was also recruited. Bonnet insisted on making a significant contribution to the compositions and his influence can clearly be heard on the album, which is far more blues-orientated than previous releases. Schenker fired Bonnet shortly after the album's launch and welcomed back former vocalist Gary Barden. The next two album releases were rigidly formularized. Old ideas were simply rehashed as the band remained stuck in a creative rut. Even the contribution of Derek St. Holmes (ex-Ted Nugent vocalist) could not elevate the very ordinary material. Barden left to form Statetrooper and MSG disintegrated. Schenker moved back to Germany and teamed up with singer Robin McAuley (ex-Grand Prix) to form the McAuley Schenker Group, still retaining the acronym MSG. They completed the new-look band, with Steve Mann, Rocky Newton and Bobo Schopf on keyboards, bass and drums, respectively. They also concentrated on a more melodic direction, as McAuley's prolific writing skills were, for once, accepted by Schenker. With the release of Perfect Timing and Save Yourself, they began to re-establish a solid fan base once more, though 1992's confusingly titled MSG was universally despised.

● ALBUMS: The Michael Schenker Group (Chrysalis 1980)★★★★, MSG (Chrysalis 1981)★★★★, One Night At Budokan (Chrysalis 1982)★★, Assault Attack (Chrysalis 1982)★★★, Built To Destroy (Chrysalis 1983)★★★, Rock Will Never Die (Chrysalis 1984)★★, Perfect Timing (EMI 1987)★★★, Save Yourself (Capitol 1989)★★★, MSG (EMI 1992)★★.

Mtukudzi, Oliver

b. 1952, Harare, Zimbabwe. Along with Thomas Mapfumo, Mtukudzi, and his band the Black Spirits, has played one of the most prominent roles in the modernization of traditional Zimbabwean music, mixing African-American soul with mbira and other traditional beats. He recorded his first single, 'Pezuna', in 1976, after which he joined the Wagon Wheels Band, and recorded his first major hit, 'Dzandimometera'. The band was steeped in Zairean rumba, then hugely popular in Zimbabwe, and in 1977 Mtukudzi, keen to reflect more of Zimbabwe's culture in his music, left to form the Black Spirits. The band released their first album, Ndipeyiozano, in 1978. In 1979, when the wartime curfew and travel restrictions were lifted, Mtukudzi took the Black Spirits on the road and built up substantial followings in Zambia, Botswana and Malawi. Recent albums have offered a mixture of reggae, soul and deeper Zimbabwean sounds like the mbakumba and katekwe, and have helped maintain Mtukudzi's position as one of Zimbabwe's great innovators.

● ALBUMS: Hwena Handirase (1986)★★★, Mbakumba (1988)★★★, Shoko (1992)★★★.

MTV

The first television channel entirely devoted to music was launched in the USA in 1981. MTV was also the major influence on the growth of music video during the 80s. Although there had been numerous US rock television shows since American Bandstand in the 50s, the immediate predecessor of MTV was Popclips, a 30-minute show combining comedy with music videos. It was produced by Michael Nesmith's Pacific Arts company in 1981 for the Nickelodeon cable television channel. In that year, Nickelodeon's owners Warner-Amex Television launched MTV (Music Television) with Buggles' 'Video Killed The Radio Star' as its first offering. Headed by Robert Pittman, the 24-hour station hired five V-Js (video-jockeys) from radio and the theatre to announce the videos. Starting from a small audience base, the station used 'I Want My MTV' promotional spots by artists such as Pete Townshend, David Bowie, Mick Jagger and Pat Benetar to increase its reach. (In 1986, Dire Straits affectionately parodied the slogan in 'Money For Nothing', which duly won that year's MTV Award for best video.) Soon, MTV plays for their promotional videos were boosting record sales for bands like the Human League ('Don't You Want Me'), Duran Duran ('Hungry Like The Wolf', 'Rio') and the US success in 1983/4 of such UK artists as Haircut 100 and A Flock Of Seagulls was widely attributed to MTV airplay. The impact of MTV led to the formation of specialist cable channels for black music (Black Entertainment TV) and country (the Nashville Network). But a direct competitor launched by Ted Turner failed to dislodge MTV from its pre-eminence. Meanwhile, the growth in television video programming and its influence on the charts forced record companies to produce accompanying videos for almost every new single they issued.

By 1984, MTV was making annual profits of six million dollars and it began a programme of international expansion with outlets in Japan (1984), Australia (1987) and Brazil (1990). Opened in 1987, MTV Europe had built up a reach of 30 million households in 28 countries by the early 90s, and operated its own programming policy, using videos by local artists as well as programmes imported from the USA. In 1991, MTV Asia was launched from Hong Kong as a satellite channel, also with a pledge to feature local acts. Expansion in the USA took the form of the creation of VH-1, devoted to album and adult-orientated rock in 1987, shortly after MTV Networks was purchased by Viacom Ltd.

● VIDEOS: MTV's Greatest Hits (1993).

● FURTHER READING: MTV Unplugged: First Edition, Sarah Malarkey (ed).

MTV Unplugged In New York - Nirvana

Recorded in November 1993, Kurt Cobain was dead by the time this beautiful record was released, shooting himself into notoriety as rock music's most significant casualty since John Lennon. MTV Unplugged is the acoustic antithesis of Nirvana's studio albums, casting the net wide to take in cover versions of songs by Lead Belly, David Bowie, the Meat Puppets and the Vaselines, alongside eloquent readings of songs from all three Nirvana albums. Though Cobain's voice struggles on several of the tracks, the overall atmosphere is of an intimate and wonderfully human recording, offering little indication of the tragedy that was to follow.

● Tracks: About A Girl; Come As You Are; Jesus Doesn't Want Me For A Sunbeam; The Man Who Sold The World; Pennyroyal Tea; Dumb; Polly; On A Plain; Something In The Way; Plateau; Oh Me; Lake Of Fire; All Apologies; Where Did You Sleep Last Night.

● First released 1994

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 1

Mu

A Californian band of legendary proportions, this cult quartet named themselves after the lost continent of Mu (of which the Hawaiian Islands are the remnants.) Founder member Merrell Fankhauser began his career in a surfing act, the Exiles, a group evolving into Merrell and the Exiles upon embracing nascent West Coast pop. By the release of 'Sorry For Crying' (1965) the line-up featured Fankhauser (vocals/guitar), Jeff Cotton (lead guitar), Larry Willey (bass) and Randy Wimer (drums). The group split the following year - Fankhauser then founded Fapardokly and HMS Bounty while Cotton joined Captain Beefheart, appearing on Strictly Personal and Trout Mask Replica under the name Antennae Jimmy Semens. The above Exiles reconvened during sessions for the latter album and, taking the name Mu, began playing live in Los Angeles. A single, 'Nobody Wants To Shine'/'Ballad Of Brother Lew' (1971), was issued on the group's own Mantra label, Mu (aka Lemurian Music) followed later the same year. A wondrous blend of oriental blues guitar, chopped rock rhythms and Beach Boys' harmonies, it established Mu's reputation for unique music. United Artists gave the set a belated British release in 1974, adding both sides of the preceding single in the process. In 1972 the group, bar Willey, decamped to the island of Maui. They purchased a banana and papaya plantation to finance their recordings, two singles, 'One More Day'/'You've Been Here Before' (1972) and 'On Our Way To Hana'/'Too Naked For Demetrius' (1973) were issued on the MU label. Jeff Parker (bass) and Mary Lee (violin) had joined the fold, but Mu disintegrated in 1974 when both Wimer and Cotton announced they were leaving to become Christian ministers. The latter reportedly now refuses to play guitar and has since established a dry cleaning business. Fankhauser embarked on a fascinating solo career but, mindful of Mu's heritage licensed the group's proposed second album to the Italian Appaloosa label in 1982. The Last Album confirmed the special nature of the band's music. A second collection, Children Of The Rainbow was complied from re-recovered tape thought lost upon Mu's disintegration. Quieter and more gentle in tone than its predecessors, it provided the missing link between this innovative group and Fankhauser's first solo releases.

● ALBUMS: Mu (1971)★★★★, The Last Album (1982)★★★, Children Of The Rainbow (1985)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: End Of An Era (1988)★★★, Mu (Sundazed 1998)★★★★.

Muana, Tshala

b. May 1955, Lubumbashi, Zaire. Vocalist and dancer Muana was born into a musical family and began performing in public at the age of six. Her adult career began with dancing, but she switched to singing in the early 70s. In 1980 she settled in Cote D'Ivoire, and from 1981-84 toured widely throughout West and Central Africa. She recorded her first album, Kami, in Paris in 1984, followed a year later by Mbanda Matiere, recorded during a tour of the USA. Both were dominated by the shuffling dance rhythm known as the mutuashi, and when Muana returned to Zaire she discovered a new and enlarged audience. Encouraged, she released a number of singles in the late 80s, many of which became Zairean and pan-African chart hits. A slew of albums followed, several of which were distributed outside of Africa via the auspices of French record labels such as Disques Esperance or Syllart.

● ALBUMS: Kami (TM 1984)★★★, Mbanda Matiere (SAS 1985)★★★, M'Pokolo (SAS 1986)★★★★, Munanga (Les Disques Esperance 1988)★★★, Nasi Nabali (Les Disques Esperance 1990)★★★, La Divine (Les Disques Esperance 1990)★★★, Soukous Siren (Shanachie 1991)★★★★, Mutuashi (Stern's 1996)★★★.

Much Ado

(see Taylor, Bernard J.)

Muckram Wakes

This largely traditional folk UK group specialized in songs, and later, dance music of the Midlands. Formed in 1970, the original line-up comprised Roger Watson (b. 7 February 1946, Mansfield, Nottinghamshire, England; concertina, tuba, melodeon), Helen Wainwright (b. 16 May 1951, Marchington, Staffordshire, England; harmonium, whistle, piano, bouzouki) - Helen and Roger married in 1972 - and John Tams (fiddle, banjo, concertina). This unit survived until October 1973, when Tams left to join the Albion Band. Shortly afterwards John Adams (fiddle, banjo, trombone), and Suzie Adams (drum, percussion), were added. In this format they continued until 1980, gaining much respect on the folk circuit. They also contributed to the short-lived 11-piece New Victory Band, and their highly-regarded 1978 release One More Dance And Then. In 1980 a complete change of line-up, brought about by personal and professional break-ups, meant that the group comprised of John Adams, Keith Kendrick (concertina), Barry Coope (vocals) and Ian Carter. This group only lasted for a short while before disbanding. Roger Watson also performed and recorded with American banjo player and singer Debbie McClatchy, and he was also a member of the Robb Johnson Band. Watson is now director of TAPS (Traditional Arts Projects), in Berkshire.

● ALBUMS: A Map Of Derbyshire (1973)★★★, Muckram Wakes (1976)★★★, Warble, Jangles And Reeds (1980)★★. Roger Watson: The Pick And The Malt Shovel (1974)★★★, Mixed Traffic (1981)★★★, Chequered Roots (1988)★★★, with Debbie McClatchy Radioland (1988)v, Suzie Adams And Helen Watson Songbird (1983)★★★.

Mucky Pup

The rock group Mucky Pup was formed in New York, USA, in 1985, by John Milnes (drums), Dan Nastasi (guitar), Chris Milnes (brother of John; vocals) and Scott LePage (bass). Following the release of their debut album, 1988's Can't Take A Joke, LePage was replaced by David Neabore, who subsequently left to form the much-praised Dog Eat Dog with Dan Nastasi. However, as Chris Milnes revealed: 'The idea behind Mucky Pup has always been that I am the head of the band and the director, but every record and tour is with different people. It's fun always playing with different line-ups; kind of like a kaleidoscope, which is always the same, but by shaking it you end up with entirely new images.' Since the late 80s Mucky Pup has toured widely alongside bands including the Offspring, Primus, Live, Bad Religion and the Red Hot Chili Peppers, releasing a number of albums which have generally been overlooked by critics. Promotion for their debut album included a European tour of six countries, and they have returned to Europe on an almost six-monthly basis ever since. After the release of their second album, A Boy In A Man's World, Neabore's replacement on bass was Belgian native Mark D. Baker. A quick follow-up, Now, was issued in 1990. Two years were spent on the completion of the smoother-sounding Act Of Faith. Dan Nastasi contributed guitar to some of the album, but after his defection to Dog Eat Dog he was replaced by 'Junior'. This arrangement proved unsatisfactory, and for 1993's Lemonade John Milnes switched to guitar, his position as drummer taken by Kevin Powers. He returned to the drums for 1996's Five Guys In A Really Hot Garage, by which time the line-up featured 'The Hinge' on guitar and Billy Joe Mama on bass. Recorded at Showplace Studios in New York, this offered a further glimpse of Mucky Pup's episodic but intriguing development.

● ALBUMS: Can't Take A Joke (SPV 1988)★★★, A Boy In A Man's World (SPV 1989)★★★, Now (SPV 1990)★★, Act Of Faith (SPV 1992)★★★, Lemonade (SPV 1993)★★★, Alive & Well (SPV 1994)★★, Five Guys In A Really Hot Garage (SPV 1996)★★★.

Mud

Originally formed in 1966, this lightweight UK pop outfit comprised Les Gray (b. 9 April 1946, Carshalton, Surrey, England; vocals), Dave Mount (b. 3 March 1947, Carshalton, Surrey, England; drums/vocals), Ray Stiles (b. 20 November 1946, Carshalton, Surrey, England; bass guitar/vocals) and Rob Davis (b. 1 October 1947, Carshalton, Surrey; lead guitar/vocals). Their debut single for CBS, 'Flower Power', was unsuccessful but they continued touring for several years. The group's easy-going pop style made them natural contenders for appearances on The Basil Brush Show, but still the hits were not forthcoming. Eventually, in early 1973, they broke through in the UK with 'Crazy' and 'Hypnosis'. Their uncomplicated blend of pop and rockabilly brought them an impressive run of 12 more Top 20 hits during the next three years, including three UK number 1 hits: 'Tiger Feet', 'Lonely This Christmas' and 'Oh Boy'. The group continued in cabaret, but their membership atrophied after the hits had ceased.

Gray attempted a solo career with little success, while Stiles turned up unexpectedly in 1988 as a latter day member of the Hollies at the time of their belatedly chart-topping 'He Ain't Heavy He's My Brother'.

● ALBUMS: Mud Rock (RAK 1974)★★★, Mud Rock Vol. 2 (RAK 1975)★★, Use Your Imagination (Private Stock 1975)★★, It's Better Than Working (Private Stock 1976)★★, Mudpack (Private Stock 1978)★★, Rock On (RCA 1979)★★, As You Like It (RCA 1980)★, Mud (Runaway 1983)★.

● COMPILATIONS: Mud's Greatest Hits (RAK 1975)★★★, Let's Have A Party (EMI 1990)★★, L-L-Lucy (Spectrum 1995)★★, The Gold Collection (EMI 1996)★★.

Muddy Waters

b. McKinley Morganfield, 4 April 1915, Rolling Fork, Mississippi, USA, d. 30 April 1983, Chicago, Illinois, USA. One of the dominant figures of post-war blues, Muddy Waters was raised in the rural Mississippi town of Clarksdale, in whose juke-joints he came into contact with the legendary Son House. Having already mastered the rudiments of the guitar, Waters began performing and this early, country blues period was later documented by Alan Lomax. Touring the south making field recordings for the Library Of Congress, this renowned archivist taped Waters on three occasions between 1941-42. The following year Waters moved to Chicago where he befriended Big Bill Broonzy, whose influence and help proved vital to the younger performer. Waters soon began using amplified, electric instruments and by 1948 had signed a recording contract with the newly founded Aristocrat label, the name of which was later changed to Chess Records. Waters' second release, 'I Feel Like Goin' Home'/'I Can't Be Satisfied', was a minor R&B hit and its understated accompaniment from bassist Big Crawford set a pattern for several further singles, including 'Rollin' And Tumblin'', 'Rollin' Stone' and 'Walking Blues'. By 1951 the guitarist was using a full backing band and among the musicians who passed through its ranks were Otis Spann (piano), Jimmy Rogers (guitar), Little Walter, Walter 'Shakey' Horton and James Cotton (all harmonica). This pool of talent ensured that the Muddy Waters Band was Chicago's most influential unit and a score of seminal recordings, including 'Hoochie Coochie Man', 'I've Got My Mojo Working', 'Mannish Boy', 'You Need Love' and 'I'm Ready', established the leader's abrasive guitar style and impassioned singing. Waters' international stature was secured in 1958 when he toured Britain at the behest of jazz trombonist Chris Barber. Although criticized in some quarters for his use of amplification, Waters' effect on a new generation of white enthusiasts was incalculable. Cyril Davies and Alexis Korner abandoned skiffle in his wake and their subsequent combo, Blues Incorporated, was the catalyst for the Rolling Stones, the Graham Bond Organisation, Long John Baldry and indeed British R&B itself. Paradoxically, while such groups enjoyed commercial success, Waters struggled against indifference. Deemed 'old-fashioned' in the wake of soul music, he was obliged to update his sound and repertoire, resulting in such misjudged releases as Electric Mud, which featured a reading of the Rolling Stones' 'Let's Spend The Night Together', the ultimate artistic volte-face. The artist did complete a more sympathetic project in Fathers And Sons on which he was joined by Paul Butterfield and Mike Bloomfield, but his work during the 60s was generally disappointing. The London Sessions kept Waters in the public eye, as did his appearance in the Band's The Last Waltz, but it was an inspired series of collaborations with guitarist Johnny Winter that signalled a dramatic rebirth. This pupil produced and arranged four excellent albums that recaptured the fire and purpose of Muddy's early releases and bestowed a sense of dignity to this musical giant's legacy. Waters died of heart failure in 1983, his status as one of the world's most influential musicians secured.

● ALBUMS: Muddy Waters Sings Big Bill Broonzy (Chess 1960)★★★, Muddy Waters At Newport, 1960 (Chess 1963)★★★★, Muddy Waters, Folk Singer (Chess 1964)★★★★, Muddy, Brass And The Blues (Chess 1965)★★, Down On Stovall's Plantation (Testament 1966)★★★, Blues From Big Bill's Copacabana (Chess 1968)★★★, Electric Mud (Cadet 1968)★★, Fathers And Sons (Chess 1969)★★★, After The Rain (Cadet 1969)★★, Sail On (Chess 1969)★★★, The London Sessions (Chess 1971)★★★, Live At Mister Kelly's (1971)★★★, Experiment In Blues (1972)★★★, Can't Get No Grindin' (Chess 1973)★★★, Mud In Your Ear (Musicor 1973)★★★, London Revisited (Chess 1974)★★, The Muddy Waters Woodstock Album (Chess 1975)★★, Unk In Funk (Chess 1977)★★, Hard Again (Blue Sky 1977)★★★, I'm Ready (Blue Sky 1978)★★★, Muddy Mississippi Waters Live (Blue Sky 1979)★★★, King Bee (Blue Sky 1981)★★★, Muddy Waters In Concert 1958 (1982)★★★, Paris 1972 (Pablo 1997)★★★, Goin' Way Back recorded 1967 (Just A Memory 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Muddy Waters (Chess 1957)★★★★★, The Real Folk Blues Of Muddy Waters (Chess 1966)★★★★, More Real Folk Blues (Chess 1967)★★★★, Vintage Mud (Sunnyland 1970)★★★, They Call Me Muddy Waters (Chess 1970)★★★, McKinley Morganfield aka Muddy Waters (Chess 1971)★★★★, Back In The Early Days (Red Lightnin' 1977)★★★, Chess Masters 3 volumes (Chess 1981-83)★★★★, Rare And Unissued (Chess 1982)★★★, Rolling Stone (Chess 1982)★★★, Trouble No More (Singles, 1955-1959) (Chess/MCA 1989)★★★, Muddy Waters 6-LP box set (Chess 1989)★★★★★, The Chess Box 1947-67 9-CD box set (Charly 1990)★★★★★, Funky Butt recorded early 70s (1993)★★★, Gold Collection (1993)★★★★, The King Of Chicago Blues (Charly 1995)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Messin' With The Blues (BMG 1991), Live (BMG 1993).

● FURTHER READING: The Complete Muddy Waters Discography, Phil Wight and Fred Rothwell. Muddy Waters Biographie, Francis Hofstein. Muddy Waters: Mojo Man, Sandra B. Tooze.

Muddy Waters At Newport - Muddy Waters

The old cover photograph of Muddy Waters clutching John Lee Hooker's guitar gave the impression that he was at a folk festival rather than the prestigious Newport Jazz Festival. The record reveals the King of Chicago blues at his very best, shouting his music above the discordant wail of a band that included Otis Spann, James Cotton, Pat Hare and Francis Clay. Film of the event shows a sharply dressed Muddy shimmying and jiving around the stage with the energy of a man half his age. Some of that atmosphere is apparent on the record, which includes 'Hoochie Coochie Man', Big Bill Broonzy's 'I Feel So Good', the singles 'I Got My Brand On You' and 'Soon Forgotten', and a massive 'Got My Mojo Working'. The set ends in poignant mood with the announcement of the end of the Festival and Spann's improvised 'Goodbye Newport Blues'.

- Tracks: I Got My Brand On You; I'm Your Hoochie Koochie Man; Baby, Please Don't Go; Soon Forgotten; Tiger In Your Tank; I Feel So Good; Got My Mojo Working; Got My Mojo Working Part 2; Goodbye Newport Blues.
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Muddy Waters Folk Singer - Muddy Waters

The title was a contradiction in terms, of course. Muddy Waters had never been a folk-singer but in 1963 producers Ralph Bass and Willie Dixon decided it would be advantageous to identify him with all the acoustic blues artists that were touring Europe on a regular basis. Muddy never made a bad record and here he sings impressively and plays acoustic slide better than his audience had a right to expect. Buddy Guy shows that he is no slouch on an unamplified instrument. The only drawback to the enterprise is the starkness of the sound, which implies conscious artistry and preciousness in a set of songs that should express a stronger range of emotions. This is Muddy Waters without a tiger in his tank and with a mojo operating on half power.

- Tracks: My Home Is In The Delta; Long Distance; My Captain; Good Morning Little Schoolgirl; You Gonna Need My Help; Cold Weather Blues; Big Leg Woman; Feel Like Going Home.
- First released 1964
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Mudhoney

Mudhoney, forged from a host of hobbyist bands, can lay claim to the accolade 'godfathers of grunge' more legitimately than most - whether or not they desire that title. The band comprises brothers Mark Arm (b. 21 February 1962, California, USA; vocals) and Steve Turner (b. 28 March 1965, Houston, USA; guitar), plus Matt Lukin (b. 16 August 1964, Aberdeen, Washington, USA; bass) and Dan Peters (b. 18 August 1967, Seattle, Washington, USA; drums). Arm and Turner were both ex-Green River, the band that also gave birth to Pearl Jam, and the less serious Thrown Ups. Lukin was ex-Melvins, and Peters ex-Bundles Of Hiss. Mudhoney were the band that first took the sound of Sub Pop Records to wider shores. In August 1988 they released the fabulous 'Touch Me I'm Sick' single, one of the defining moments in the evolution of 'grunge', followed shortly by their debut mini-album. Contrary to popular belief, Turner chose the name Superfuzz Bigmuff after his favourite effects pedals rather than any sexual connotation. Early support included the admiration of Sonic Youth who covered their first a-side, while Mudhoney thrashed through Sonic Youth staple 'Halloween' on the flip-side of a split single. The first album was greeted as a comparative disappointment by many, though there were obvious stand-out tracks ('When Tomorrow Hits'). The EP Boiled Beef And Rotting Teeth contained a cover version of the Dicks' 'Hate The Police', demonstrating a good grasp of their 'hardcore' heritage. They had previously demonstrated an ability to choose a sprightly cover tune when Spacemen 3's 'Revolution' had appeared on the b-side to 'This Gift'. The band also hold the likes of Celibate Rifles and Billy Childish in high esteem. Members of the former have helped in production of the band, while on trips to England they have invited the latter to join as support. It was their patronage that led to Childish's Thee Headcoats releasing material through Sub Pop. Meanwhile, Mudhoney's shows were becoming less eye-catching, and progressively close to eye-gouging. Early gigs in London saw Arm invite every single member of the audience onto the stage, with the resultant near-destruction of several venues. Every Good Boy Deserves Fudge was a departure, with Hammond organ intruding into the band's accomplished rock formula. It demonstrated their increasing awareness of the possibilities of their own songwriting. Far from being wooden-headed noise dolts, the band members all have middle-class backgrounds, and while Arm is an English graduate, Turner has qualifications in anthropology. After much speculation, Mudhoney became the final big players in the Sub Pop empire to go major when they moved to Warner Brothers Records, though many argue that none of their efforts thus far have managed to reproduce the glory of 'Touch Me I'm Sick' or other highlights of their independent days. My Brother The Cow, however, revealed a band nearly back at its best. Released after extensive worldwide touring with Pearl Jam, highlights included 'Into Your Schtick', which reflected on the passing of one-time friend Kurt Cobain. Jack Endino's production, meanwhile, added lustre and managed effectively to capture the band's always compelling live sound. Mark Arm also plays with the trashy Australian garage rock band Bloodloss, who released their major label debut, Live My Way, in 1995.

- ALBUMS: Superfuzz Bigmuff mini-album (Sub Pop 1988)★★★, Mudhoney (Sub Pop 1989)★★, Every Good Boy Deserves Fudge (Sub Pop 1991)★★★, Piece Of Cake (Warners 1992)★★★, Five Dollar Bob's Mock Cooter Stew mini-album (Warners 1993)★★, My Brother The Cow (Warners 1995)★★★.

- COMPILATIONS: Superfuzz Bigmuff Plus Early Singles (Sub Pop 1991)★★★.
- VIDEOS: Absolutely Live (Pinnacle 1991), No 1 Video In America This Week (Warner Video 1995).

Mudie, Harry

b. *c.*1940, Spanish Town, Jamaica, West Indies. One of the unsung pioneers of Jamaican recording, Mudie first developed his interest in music while a pupil at St. Jago High School during the mid-50s. His debut with the legendary Rasta drummer Count Ossie and saxophonist Wilton Gaynair, entitled 'Babylon Gone', aka 'Going Home', backed with 'So Long' by Winston And Roy, was released in the UK on the Blue Beat label in 1962. In the same year, he opened the Scaramouch Garden Amusement Center in Spanish Town. Little seems to have emerged, however, between 1962 and 1970, when Trojan Records began releasing his productions on the specially formed Moodisc label. A year later, Rita and Benny King's R&B Discs Ltd created their own Moodisc label. Using a studio band led by pianist Gladstone Anderson, Mudie deftly combined sweet, tuneful melodies with heavy rhythms. The records issued on these and his Jamaican labels, including organist Winston Wright's 'Musically Red', Winston Shand's 'Time Is The Master', the Eternal's 'Push Me In The Corner', the Ebony Sisters' 'Let Me Tell You Boy', John Holt's 'It May Sound Silly', Dennis Walks' 'The Drifter' and 'Heart Don't Leap', Count Ossie's 'Whispering Drums', Lloyd Jones' 'Rome' and trumpeter Jo Jo Bennett's instrumental version, 'Leaving Rome', established Mudie's name among the very best of the reggae producers of the day. He launched DJ I. Roy on record with 'Musical Pleasure' and a version of 'The Drifter'. He was probably the first to use strings in the music, notably on John Holt's classic love song album, 1973's Time Is The Master, and it is arguably this fact that seems to have prejudiced his standing among some of the more reactionary elements of the reggae audience.

In 1973 he enjoyed a big reggae hit with Dennis Walks' calypso-flavoured 'Margaret', released on the Cactus label in the UK, following it with vibist Lennie Hibbert's version, 'Margaret's Dream'. He also produced the Heptones on the classic 'Love Without Feeling', DJ tunes by Count Sticky, Big Joe ('Set Your Face At Ease' on the 'Rome' rhythm), and Jah Lloyd, and a number of 'Drifter' cuts by Bongo Herman and others. During the mid-70s Mudie issued three classic dub albums mixed by King Tubby, instrumental sets by Gladstone Anderson and Ossie Scott, vocal albums by Dennis Walks and Bunny Maloney, for whom he produced the popular Jamaican lovers favourite 'Baby I've Been Missing You', and two excellent various artists collections. During the 80s and 90s he concentrated on his back catalogue with re-presses and some excellent new compilations such as Reggae History Volume One and Reggae Bible, the latter being a whole album based on the 'Drifter' rhythm. This prolific period produced over 100 singles and several 12-inch 'discomix' singles as the decade closed. Mudie recorded a variety of other artists, including Gregory Isaacs, Freddie McKay, Joe White, Cornell Campbell, Jah Walton (now known as Joseph Cotton), and Prince Heron. During the 80s he kept a low profile, moving to Miami, Florida, issuing his back catalogue and an album by Bunny Maloney.

- ALBUMS: with King Tubby Harry Mudie Meets King Tubby In Dub Conference Volumes 1, 2 & 3 (Moodisc 1975/76/77)★★★, Harry Mudie And Friends Let Me Tell You Boy 1970-71 (Trojan 1988)★★★, various Quad Star Revolution Volume 1 (1974)★★★, Quad Star Revolution Volume 2 (1976)★★★, Reggae History Volume 1 (Moods 1985)★★★.

Mudlarks

Soprano Mary Mudd, baritone Fred Mudd and tenor Jeff Mudd were the Mudlarks: a clean-cut family pop trio from Bedford, Bedfordshire, England. They started singing in public as the Mudd Trio in 1951 when they were just 12, 14 and 16 years old. Discovered by disc jockey David Jacobs and produced on Columbia Records by Norrie Paramor, they had a hit in 1958 with their second single, 'Lollipop', a cover version of the Chordettes' US hit. Their follow-up, 'Book Of Love', originally by the Monotones, also made the UK Top 10. They were often seen on the pioneering UK television series 6.5 Special, and won the New Musical Express poll award as Top British Vocal Group for both 1958 and 1959. Jeff was called up by the army in early 1959 and David Lane replaced him until his return two years later. One of the few UK pop groups in the 50s, they recorded several more cover versions of US hits without further chart success.

Mueller-Westernhagen, Marius

b. 6 December 1948, Duesseldorf, Germany. This popular singer and performer made his first move into the entertainment industry via theatre acting and singing courses in Hamburg (where he currently lives) and Duesseldorf. He made his television debut in 1964, and has gone on to appear in over 50 movies since. Possibly the most famous of these was his role in 1980's Theo Gegen Den Rest Der Welt. In the meantime he had also provided vocals for a beat band named the Rabbits, and a rock ensemble called Harakiri. These pursuits eventually culminated in the release of a debut solo album in 1975, pursuing a path somewhere between the exploits of his two previous groups. With a fluctuating line-up of sidemen and accomplices who have included Eddie Taylor (saxophone), Simon Crowe (drums), Klaus Voorman (bass), Ian Parker (keyboards) and Dolphin Taylor (drums; of Stiff Little Fingers), Mueller-

Westernhagen went on to become arguably Germany's biggest live attraction of the 80s, and was certainly his nation's biggest-selling popular music artist of the period. Empirical evidence of the continued favour he carried with his public came in 1992 when JaJa produced quadruple platinum sales figures. By this time his name had been abbreviated to simply Westernhagen. 1994's Affentheater had achieved sales in advance of 1.7 million units by 1995, while the tour to support it attracted over 850,000.

● ALBUMS: Das Erste Mal (1975)★★★, Bittersuess (1976),★★★★ Ganz Allein Krieg Ich's Nicht Hin (1977)★★★, Mit Pfefferminz Bin Ich Dein Prinz (1979)★★★, Sekt Oder Selters (1980)★★★★, Stinker (1981)★★★, Das Herz Eines Boxers (1982)★★★, Geiler Is Schon (1983)★★★, Die Sonne Ist Rot (1984)★★★, Lausige Zeiten (1986)★★★, Westernhagen (1987)★★★, Halleluja (1989)★★★, Live (1990)★★, JaJa (WEA 1992)★★★★, Affentheater (WEA 1994)★★★.

Mugwumps

Formed in New York, USA, in 1964, the Mugwumps consisted of Zalman 'Zally' Yanovsky, Denny Docherty, 'Mama' Cass Elliot and Jim Hendricks. Yanovsky and Docherty were previously members of the Halifax Three while Elliot and Hendricks, at that time husband and wife, worked as a folk duo. The quartet issued two singles, 'I Don't Wanna Know' and 'Searchin'', before breaking up a few months after their formation. Elliot and Docherty were later reunited in the Mamas And The Papas, Hendricks formed the Lamp Of Childhood and Yanovsky joined John Sebastian in the Lovin' Spoonful. An Historic Recording shows an act blending folk, rock 'n' roll and British Beat.

● ALBUMS: An Historic Recording (Warners 1967)★★.

Muhammad, Idris

b. Leo Morris, 13 November 1939, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. Immaculate, imaginative and equally at home on contemporary jazz and more popular funk and soul sessions, Idris Muhammad is one of America's most impressive and swinging drummers. Playing since the age of eight, he began working professionally in the soul scene in the early 60s, accompanying vocalists Jerry Butler, Sam Cooke and the Impressions. The gifted bebop alto saxophonist Lou Donaldson hired Muhammad for his soul-jazz group in 1965, and work with guitarist George Benson followed. In the early 70s, Muhammad became house drummer for the Prestige label, again playing mainly an unadventurous soul/jazz that offered him little room to stretch out and take advantage of his talents. Spells with Roberta Flack followed, but by the end of the 70s, Muhammad was able to put together his own band and started concentrating on modern jazz. Toward the end of the decade he joined hard-bop tenor saxophonist Johnny Griffin, and then began a celebrated spell with another tenor saxophonist, Pharoah Sanders. He continues to work intermittently with Sanders, and recently toured internationally and recorded with an all-star saxophone-orientated band, that included Chico Freeman, Arthur Blythe, Sam Rivers and pianist Don Pullen.

● ALBUMS: with Charles Earland Black Talk! (1969)★★★, with George Coleman Big George (1977)★★★, with Johnny Griffin NYC Underground (1979)★★★★, with Pharoah Sanders Journey To The One (1980)★★★★, Kabsha (1981)★★★, with Lou Donaldson Sweet Poppa Lou (1981)★★★, Heart Is A Melody (1982)★★★, Live (1982)★★, Manhattan Panorama (1983)★★★, with James Moody Something Special (1986)★★★★, Africa (1987)★★★, with Tony Coe Canterbury Song (1988)★★★.

Mukwesha, Virginia

b. Zimbabwe. The daughter of the singer Stella Chiweshe, Mukwesha's debut album of 1993 displayed much of her parent's influence, but also managed to position itself astutely within Zimbabwe's ever evolving musical context. Closest in style to the jit or imported South African kwela tradition, Ferai featured both traditional instruments such as the hosho, marimbas and percussion, as well as electric guitars and kit drums. This highly commercial marriage, on one hand redolent of the Bhundu Boys at their 80s peak, nevertheless maintained the style of authentic roots edge frequently associated with her mother. A 14-member band backed Mukwesha on the recording, allowing both tangents to be fully explored, often to captivating effect on tracks such as 'Ndin Wenda' and 'Susan', the former a mighty rhythmic piece, the latter an almost unaccompanied arrangement of complex vocal passages.

● ALBUMS: Ferai (Piranha 1993)★★★, Matare (Shava 1996)★★★.

Muldaur, Geoff

b. *c.*1940, Pelham, New York, USA. Muldaur began performing at the folk haunts of Cambridge, Massachusetts, while a student at Boston University. He worked as a soloist at the Club 47, as well as becoming a featured member of the Jim Kweskin Jug Band. Muldaur's debut, Sleepy Man Blues, boasted support from Dave Van Ronk and Eric Von Schmidt, and offered sterling interpretations of material drawn from country-blues singers Bukka White, Sleepy John Estes and Blind Willie Johnson. Despite this recording, the artist remained with Kweskin until the Jug Band splintered at the end of the 60s. He then completed two albums, Pottery Pie (1970) and Sweet Potatoes (1972) with his wife, Maria Muldaur, before joining Paul Butterfield's 70s venture, Better Days. The singer resumed his solo career upon the break-up of both the band and his marriage. The Joe Boyd-produced Geoff Muldaur Is Having A Wonderful Time showed the artist's unflinching eclecticism, a facet prevailing on all his releases. A longstanding professional relationship with guitarist and fellow Woodstock resident Amos Garrett resulted in Geoff Muldaur And Amos Garrett, on which the former's penchant for self-indulgence was pared to a minimum. Despite this trait, Muldaur's entire catalogue is worthy of investigation and deserves respect for its attention to music's ephemera.

● ALBUMS: Sleepy Man Blues (Folklore 1963)★★★, Geoff Muldaur Is Having A Wonderful Time (1975)★★★, Motion (1976)★★, Geoff Muldaur And Amos Garrett (1978)★★★, Blues Boy (1979)★★★.

Muldaur, Maria

b. Maria Grazia Rosa Domenica d'Amato, 12 September 1943, Greenwich Village, New York, USA. Her name was changed to Muldaur when she married Geoff Muldaur, with whom she performed in the Jim Kweskin Jug Band. Although her mother was fond of classical music, Muldaur grew up liking blues and big band sounds. The 60s scene in Greenwich Village thrived musically, and she first joined the Even Dozen Jug Band, playing alongside John Sebastian, Stefan Grossman, Joshua Rifkin and Steve Katz. After leaving them she teamed up with the Jim Kweskin Jug Band. After two albums together, they split up, and Geoff and Maria were divorced in 1972. Maria Muldaur, her first solo effort, went platinum in the USA. It contained the classic single 'Midnight At The Oasis', which featured an excellent guitar solo by Amos Garrett. The album reached number 3 in the US charts in 1974, with the single making the US Top 10. A follow-up, 'I'm A Woman', made the Top 20 in the US charts in 1975. Muldaur toured the USA in 1975, and shortly after played in Europe for the first time. The US Top 30 album, Waitress In A Donut Shop, featured the songs of contemporary writers such as Kate And Anna McGarrigle, and with the assistance of musicians including Amos Garrett and J.J.Cale, she created a stronger jazz influence on the album. With sales of her records in decline, she was dropped by WEA, and since then has concentrated on recording with smaller labels such as Takoma, Spindrift, Making Waves and the Christian label Myrhh with whom she released There Is A Love. Shortly after Live In London was released, the label, Making Waves, folded. On The Sunny Side appeared on the largely unknown Music For Little People label. She has never been able to match the success of 'Midnight At The Oasis', but her soulful style of blues, tinged with jazz is still in demand.

● ALBUMS: Maria Muldaur (Reprise 1973)★★★★, Waitress In A Donut Shop (Reprise 1974)★★★, Sweet Harmony (Reprise 1976)★★★★, Southern Winds (Warners 1978)★★, Open Your Eyes (Warners 1979)★★★, Gospel Nights (1980)★★, There Is A Love (Myrhh 1982)★★, Sweet And Slow (Spindrift 1984)★★★, Transblucency (1985)★★★, Live In London (Making Waves 1987)★★★, On The Sunny Side (Music For Little People 1991)★★★, Louisiana Love Call (1992)★★★, Meet Me At Midnite (Black Top 1994)★★★, Jazzabelle (Stony Plain 1995)★★★, Fanning The Flames (Telarc 1996)★★★, Southland Of The Heart (Telarc 1998)★★★.

Muldowney, Dominic

b. 19 July 1952, Southampton, Hampshire, England. This highly talented composer has amassed a formidable list of accomplishments over the past decade for films, television and theatre. He is now Director of Music at the Royal National Theatre, London. His television and film credits include, Betrayal, The Ploughman's Lunch, Loose Connections, The Big H, Bedroom Farce, Only Yesterday, 1984, Singleton's Pluck, The Beggar's Opera, Defence Of The Realm, The Act, The Burston Rebellion, The Blasphemer's Banquet, Baal, The Ginger Tree, Available Light, The Black Candle, Growing Rich and Sharpe. His series of classical concerto's for violin, saxophone, percussion, oboe and piano have been performed by some of the UK's major orchestras, yet he is equally at home composing popular music for artists such as Sting and David Bowie. Muldowney also performs as a pianist and conductor and has done much to bridge classical and popular music in contemporary film and drama.

● ALBUMS: with John Tams Over The Hills And Far Away - The Music Of Sharpe (Virgin 1996)★★★★.

Mule

Formed in Detroit, Michigan, USA, Mule amalgamated members from two existing bands from that area, Wig and the Laughing Hyaenas. Preston 'PW' Long (guitar/vocals), Kevin Munro (bass) and Jim Kimball (drums) set out on the familiar budget touring route prior to the release of their self-titled debut album for Quarterstick Records in 1991. Garnering critical acclaim for its ferocious, skewed rock 'n' roll, particularly in the small press, it was followed by an EP, Wrong, and touring engagements with Unsane and Neurosis. Their second album, If I Don't Six, featured new drummer Jake Wilson, and was released in the summer of 1994. However, touring plans were aborted when Munro was bitten by a water moccasin snake while walking through the Louisiana grasslands. Wilson's stay proved a short one, and by early 1995 Jason Kourkounis had become Mule's third drummer as they toured the UK with Jon Spencer's Blues Explosion. The group then announced plans to write a guide book for groups touring the USA with sections on restaurants, motels and other necessaries. A tongue-in-cheek request for National Geographic to document their experiences was refused.

● ALBUMS: Mule (Quarterstick 1991)★★★, If I Don't Six (Mammoth 1994)★★★.

Mulenze

Puerto Rico-based Mulenze are led by bassist/producer Edwin Moráles. They are a salsa orquesta with a line-up of two trumpets, two trombones, rhythm section (conga, bongo, timbales, bass, piano) and three vocalists (lead and chorus). 'Edwin Moráles is a victim of his own good taste. Mulenze unfailingly produce almost excessively sophisticated albums. Two elements stand out: the arrangements, always an astonishing demonstration of how jazz can be harnessed to clave (the rhythmic heartbeat of salsa) to produce superb swing. And then, the marvellous Pedro Brull: blessed with a gorgeous voice, he has that timing which places him among the great soneros (improvising salsa singers). How bitterly disappointing that Mulenze are not better appreciated' (quote from Tomek, UK salsa broadcaster).

The band's first four albums were issued on the PDC label. They signed to Bobby Valentín's Bronco Records and debuted on the label with the excellent Con Pocas Palabras Basta . . . (Just A Few Words Are Enough) in 1984. Pedro Brull sang lead on the outstanding track 'No Te Vayas Todavia', which was written by Pedro Arroyo (b. 9 November 1957, Mayagüez, Puerto Rico; composer/vocalist/bandleader), who has composed 10 other songs for the band to date. Ex-Willie Rosario pianist/arranger Javier Fernández arranged the song. Co-lead singer Kenny Cruz departed after Con Pocas Palabras Basta . . . and later appeared on De Cara Al Pueblo (1988) by Concepto Latino. This band's style was in a similar mould to Mulenze and contained several sidemen who had recorded with them. Rafy Andino replaced Cruz on Te Damos Las Gracias. Brull supplied the lead vocals to the stand-out cut 'La Crianza', which was written by prominent Puerto Rican composer Johnny Ortiz. He also wrote the superb 'Buscando Aventuras' (sung by Brull) and two other songs on Mulenze No.7. Mulenze switched to the Hitt Makers label for 1988's Toco Madera. The title track was one of the year's biggest successes. Keyboardist/arranger Andy Guzmán left to work with bandleader/timbales player Don Perignon and the romantic salsa stars, Luis Enrique and Pupy Santiago. In 1982, Guzmán played and arranged on Mamey by bandleader, conguero, flautist, singer, composer, producer Julio Castro, another Puerto Rican exponent of sophisticated salsa. Keyboardist/arranger Ricky Rodríguez occupied the vacancy on Extravagante in 1990. Rodríguez was a member of Willie Rosario's band between 1984 and 1988. In addition to writing charts for Rosario, Ricky arranged for Pedro Arroyo, Conjunto Chaney (see Eddie Santiago), Tito Rojas, Viti Ruiz, and others. On Extravagante, he arranged the Arroyo composition 'Quedate', which again featured the glorious lead vocals of Pedro Brull. Two trombonists who recorded with Mulenze, Eliut Cintron and Daniel Fuentes, together with Brull and Guzmán participated in Don Perignon's all-star La Puertorriqueña line-up for Festival De Soneros in 1990.

● ALBUMS: Desde El Principio, . . . Que Cambio, Creciendo (1981),★★★ Otra Vez . . . (1982)★★★, Con Pocas Palabras Basta . . . (1984)★★★, Te Damos Las Gracias (1985)★★★, Mulenze No.7 (1986)★★★★, Toco Madera (1988)★★★★, Extravagante (1990)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Lo Mejor de La Mulenze: Veneno (1985)★★★★, Lo Mejor de La Mulenze 2da Etapa : La Vida (1986)★★★, Grandes Exitos (1990)★★★★.

Muleskinner

Formed in San Francisco, California, USA, in 1971, Muleskinner was a superior bluegrass ensemble originally known as the Bluegrass Dropouts. Commitments to other groups meant they were largely a part-time project although they remained active for two years. Muleskinner featured the talents of Peter Rowan (guitar, lead vocals), Richard Greene (violin, bass vocals), both of Seatrain, David Grisman (mandolin, harmony vocals), Bill Keith (banjo) and Byrds guitarist Clarence White. White's death in 1973 brought the group to an end, prompting the release of Muleskinner, which was dedicated to his memory. White's unique playing style is one of the many highlights on offer, but the warmth of the ensemble's collective musicianship makes this a truly captivating set. Rowan, Grisman and Greene later formed Old And In The Way with auxiliary Muleskinner bassist John Kahn.

● ALBUMS: Muleskinner (Warners 1974)★★★.

Mullen, Jim

b. 26 November 1945, Glasgow, Scotland. After starting out on guitar while he was still a small child, Mullen switched to bass in his early teens. He played in various dance bands in his home town before forming his own trio and reverting to guitar. At the end of the 60s he relocated to London and moved into R&B. In the early 70s he was frequently associated with jazz-rock and other fusion bands including Paz, the Average White Band, Kokomo (UK) and Herbie Mann's group. He also formed a group with Dick Morrissey, Morrissey-Mullen, which became one of the best known jazz-rock bands in the UK. The band remained in existence until 1985, after which Mullen led his own small bands. Towards the end of the decade he occasionally appeared again with Morrissey, performing at jazz festivals throughout the UK. A dynamic and forceful player, Mullen's years in jazz-rock and his deep affinity with the blues give his music a quality of earthy excitement.

● ALBUMS: Thumbs Up (Coda 1984)★★★, Into The 90s (Castle 1990)★★★, Soundbites (EFZ 1993)★★★. As Morrissey-Mullen Up (1977)★★★★, Cape Wrath (Harvest 1979)★★★★, Badness (1981),★★★ Life On The Wire (1982)★★★, It's About Time (1983)★★★, This Must Be The Place (1985)★★★, Happy Hour (1988)★★★.

Mullican, Moon

b. Aubrey Mullican, 29 March 1909, Corrigan, Polk County, Texas, USA, d. 1 January 1967, Beaumont, Texas, USA. Mullican was raised on a farm that was manned by black workers. One sharecropper, Joe Jones, taught Mullican how to play blues guitar. His father bought an old pump organ so that the family could practise hymn-singing, but Aubrey preferred to pound out boogie-woogie and the blues. When Mullican was 14 years old, he went into a cafe in nearby Lufkin and sat at the piano; he came out two hours later with $40 in tips. When aged 16, and after an argument with his father, he moved to Houston and started playing the piano in brothels and honky tonks. He would work all night and sleep all day, hence his nickname 'Moon'. In the late 30s Mullican made his first recordings for US Decca as part of Cliff Bruner's Texas Wanderers, taking the lead vocal for 'Truck Driver Blues', arguably the first trucking song. He also recorded as part of Leon Selph's Blue Ridge Playboys. He helped musician Jimmie Davis became the State Governor of Louisiana and later joined his staff. In 1944 he invested his savings in 10 large juke-boxes but they were confiscated by the authorities because he refused to pay the appropriate tax. In 1946 he was signed by Sid Nathan to the new King label and 'New Pretty Blonde', a parody in pigeon French of 'Jole Blon', became a million-seller. He won another gold disc with 'I'll Sail My Ship Alone', and also found success with a tribute to mothers, 'Sweeter Than The Flowers', the double-sided 'Mona Lisa'/'Goodnight Irene' and 'Cherokee Boogie', which was one of a succession of boogie records. In 1949 he wrote 'Jambalaya' with Hank Williams, although he was not given a credit. This is probably unjust because the style of the song - and the subject matter of food! - were more in keeping with Mullican's other work than Williams'. In the mid-50s, Mullican delighted in the advent of rock 'n' roll as he said he had been doing that all along. Backed by the hit-making Boyd Bennett And His Rockets, he recorded 'Seven Nights To Rock'. However, he was too portly and bald for teenage record buyers. Jerry Lee Lewis acknowledges Mullican as a major influence - in particular, Mullican's playing of the melody with just two fingers on his right hand - and has recorded 'I'll Sail My Ship Alone'. He recorded for Coral and Starday but alcohol and too much jambalaya got the better of him. When asked why he chose the piano, Mullican replied, 'Because the beer kept sliding off my fiddle.' In 1962, the 19-stone Mullican collapsed on stage in Kansas City. He stopped drinking and returned to performing, making an album for Kapp, The Moon Mullican Showcase, produced by Jack Clement. He recorded the novelty number 'I Ain't No Beatle (But I Want To Hold Your Hand)' for Spar. On New Year's Eve 1966, he resolved to cut down on pork chops but died the following day. Governor Jimmie Davis sang at his funeral.

● ALBUMS: Moon Over Mullican (Coral 1958)★★★, Moon Mullican Sings His All-Time Greatest Hits (King 1958)★★★, The Old Texan Sings And Plays 16 Of His Favorite Tunes (King 1959)★★★, The Many Moods Of Moon Mullican (King 1960)★★★, Instrumentals (Audio Lab 1962)★★★, Playin' And Singin' (Starday 1963)★★★, Mr. Piano Man (Starday 1964)★★★, Moon Mullican Sings 24 Of His Favorite Tunes (King 1965)★★★, Good Times Gonna Roll (Hilltop 1966)★★★, Moon Mullican's Unforgettable Great Hits (Starday 1967)★★★, The Moon Mullican Showcase (Kapp 1968)★★, I'll Sail My Ship Alone (Nashville 1970)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Seven Nights To Rock: The King Years, 1946-1956 (Western 1983)★★★★, Sweet Rockin' Music (Charly 1984)★★★, Moonshine Jamboree (Ace 1993)★★★★.

Mulligan, Gerry

b. 6 April 1927, New York City, New York, USA, d. 19 January 1996, Darien, Connecticut, USA. Raised in Philadelphia, Mulligan started out on piano before concentrating on arranging. He also took up the saxophone, first the alto and a few years later the baritone. Among the name bands that used his arrangements were those led by Gene Krupa and Claude Thornhill and he occasionally played in their reed sections. While writing for Thornhill he met and began a musical association with fellow-arranger Gil Evans. In New York in 1948 Mulligan joined Evans and Miles Davis, for whom he wrote and played, by now almost exclusively on baritone. In the early 50s Mulligan led his own groups but continued to arrange on a freelance basis. In this capacity his work was performed by Stan Kenton (these charts also being performed in the UK by Vic Lewis). In 1952 Mulligan began a musical association that not only attracted critical acclaim but also brought him widespread popularity with audiences. This came about through the formation with Chet Baker of a quartet that was unusual for the absence of a piano. When Baker quit in 1953, Mulligan subsequently led other quartets, notably with Bob Brookmeyer in the mid-50s. Although the quartet format dominated Mulligan's work during this part of his career he occasionally formed larger groups and early in the 60s formed his Concert Jazz Band. This band was periodically revived during the decade and beyond. He interspersed this with periods of leading groups of various sizes, working and recording with other leaders, including Dave Brubeck, in frequently rewarding partnerships with musicians such as Paul Desmond, Stan Getz, Johnny Hodges, Zoot Sims and Thelonious Monk, and writing arrangements on a freelance basis. In the early 70s Mulligan led big bands, some of which used the name Age Of Steam, and small groups for worldwide concert tours, recording sessions and radio and television appearances. The 80s and early 90s saw him following a similar pattern, sometimes expanding the size of the big band, sometimes content to work in the intimate setting of a quartet or quintet. As an arranger, Mulligan was among the first to attempt to adapt the language of bop for big band and achieved a measure of success with both Krupa (who recalled for George T. Simon that Mulligan was 'a kind of temperamental guy who wanted to expound a lot of his ideas'), and Thornhill. For all the variety of his later work, in many ways his music, as writer and performer, retains the colours and effects of his 50s quartets. In these groups Mulligan explored the possibilities of scoring and improvising jazz in a low-key, seemingly subdued manner. In fact, he thoroughly exploited the possibilities of creating interesting and complex lines which always retained a rich, melodic approach. His classic compositions from the 50s, including 'Night At The Turntable', 'Walkin' Shoes', 'Venus De Milo', 'Soft Shoe' and 'Jeru', and his superb arrangements for 'Bernie's Tune', 'Godchild' and others helped to establish the sound and style of the so-called 'cool school'. The intimate styling favoured in such settings was retained in his big-band work and his concert band recordings from the 60s retained interest not only for their own sake, but also for the manner in which they contrasted with most other big-band writing of the same and other periods. As a player, the lightness of touch Mulligan used in his writing was uniquely brought to the baritone saxophone, an instrument which in other, not always lesser, hands sometimes overpowers the fragility of some areas of jazz. It is hard to see in Mulligan's work, whether as writer or performer, a clearly discernible influence. Similarly, despite the enormous popularity he enjoyed over more than five decades, few, if any, writers or players seem to have adopted him as a role model. At the least, this must be something to regret and maybe in time his contribution to jazz, especially in the pioneering decade of the 50s will be seen as 'great'.

● ALBUMS: with Miles Davis Birth Of The Cool (Capitol 1951)★★★★★, Gerry Mulligan 10-inch album (Prestige 1951)★★★★, Mulligan Plays Mulligan (Prestige 1951)★★★★, Jazz Superstars (1952)★★★, The Gerry Mulligan Quartet With Chet Baker (Pacific 1952-53)★★★★, with Lee Konitz Konitz Meets Mulligan 10-inch album (Pacific Jazz 1953)★★★, Gerry Mulligan And His Ten-tette 10-inch album (Capitol 1953)★★★, The Fabulous Gerry Mulligan Quartet: Paris Concert 1954 (Vogue 1954)★★★★, Gerry Mulligan And His Quartet, Featuring Guests Zoot Sims And Bob Brookmeyer: California Concerts (World Pacific 1954)★★★, California Concerts Vols 1 & 2 (Pacific Jazz 1955)★★★, Presenting The Gerry Mulligan Sextet (EmArcy 1955)★★★★, Gerry Mulligan Live In Stockholm (1955)★★★, The Original Gerry Mulligan Quartet (Pacific Jazz 1955)★★★★, Mainstream Of Jazz (EmArcy 1955)★★★, The Vibes Are On (Chazzer 1955)★★★, Paris Concert (Pacific Jazz 1956)★★★★, Recorded Live In Boston At Storyville (Pacific Jazz 1956)★★★, Lee Konitz With The Gerry Mulligan Quartet (Pacific Jazz 1956)★★★★, with Paul Desmond Gerry Mulligan Quartet/Paul Desmond Quintet (Fantasy 1956)★★★★, Gerry Mulligan, The Arranger (Columbia 1957)★★★, Quartet Live In Stockholm (Moon 1957)★★★, The Mulligan Songbook (World Pacific 1957)★★★, Blues In Time (Verve 1957)★★★, with Thelonious Monk Mulligan Meets Monk (Riverside 1957)★★★★, with Monk Alternate Takes (1957)★★★, Gerry Mulligan With Vinnie Burke's String Jazz Quartet (Pacific Jazz 1957)★★★, At Storyville (Pacific Jazz 1957)★★★★, with Chet Baker Reunion With Baker (Pacific Jazz 1957)★★★, Gerry Mulligan Quartet At Newport (1958)★★★★, I Want To Live (United Artists 1958)★★★, with Paul Desmond The Gerry Mulligan-Paul Desmond Quartet (Verve 1958)★★★★, with Annie Ross Annie Ross Sings A Song With Mulligan! (World Pacific 1958)★★★, with Stan Getz Getz Meets Gerry Mulligan In Hi-Fi (Verve 1958)★★★★, What Is There To Say? (Columbia 1959)★★★★★, with Ben Webster Gerry Mulligan Meets Ben Webster (Verve 1959)★★★★★, A Profile Of Gerry Mulligan (Mercury 1959)★★★, The Subterraneans: Original Soundtrack (MGM 1959)★★★, Gerry Mulligan And The Concert Band On Tour (1960)★★★, New York-December 1960 (Jazz Anthology 1960)★★★, Gerry Mulligan And The Concert Jazz Band (Verve 1960)★★★, Nightwatch (United Artists 1960)★★★, Mulligan Columbia 1960)★★★, with Johnny Hodges Gerry Mulligan Meets Johnny Hodges (Verve 1960)★★★, Gerry Mulligan Presents A Concert In Jazz (Verve 1961)★★★, Gerry Mulligan And The Concert Jazz Band Live At The Village Vanguard (Verve 1961)★★★★, with Judy Holliday Holliday With Mulligan (DRG 1961)★★★, The Gerry Mulligan Quartet (Verve 1962)★★★, Jeru (Columbia 1962)★★★★, Gerry Mulligan And The Concert Jazz Band Presents A Concert In Jazz (Verve 1962)★★★, with Paul Desmond Two Of A Kind (RCA Victor 1962)★★★★★, Gerry Mulligan And The Concert Jazz Band On Tour With Guest Soloist Zoot Sims (Verve 1962)★★★, Blues In Time (Verve 1962)★★★, Historically Speaking (Prestige 1963)★★★, Timeless (Pacific Jazz 1963)★★★, Gerry Mulligan '63-The Concert Jazz Band (Verve 1963)★★★, Spring Is Sprung (Philips 1963)★★★, Night Lights (Philips 1963)★★★, The Essential Gerry Mulligan (Verve 1964)★★★, Butterfly With Hiccups (Limelight 1964)★★★, If You Can't Beat 'Em, Join Em' (Limelight 1965)★★★, with Kai Winding and Red Rodney Broadway (Status 1965)★★★, The Gerry Mulligan Quintet (1965)★★★, Feelin' Good (Limelight 1965)★★★, Gerry Mulligan Meets Zoot Sims (1966)★★★, Gerry's Time (Verve 1966)★★★, Something Borrowed Something Blue (Limelight 1966)★★★, Concert Days (Sunset 1966)★★★, Gerry Mulligan With The Dave Brubeck Quartet (1968)★★★, Live In New Orleans (1968)★★★, The Age Of Steam (A&M 1971)★★★★, The Shadow Of Your Smile (Moon 1971)★★★★, Summit (1974)★★★, Astor Piazzolla Summit Tango Nuevo (Atlantic 1974)★★★, Carnegie Hall Concert (CTI 1974)★★★, Gerry Mulligan Meets Enrico Intra (Pausa 1975)★★★, Idle Gossip (Chiaroscuro 1976)★★★, Lionel Hampton Presents Gerry Mulligan (1977)★★★, Mulligan (LRC 1977)★★★, with Benny Carter Benny Carter/Gerry Mulligan (LRC 1977)★★★, with Judy Holliday Holliday With Mulligan 1961 recording (DRG 1980)★★★★, Walk On The Water (DRG 1980)★★★, LA Menace film soundtrack (DRG 1982)★★★, Little Big Horn (GRP 1983)★★★, with Barry Manilow 2 am Paradise Cafe (Arista 1984)★★★, with Scott Hamilton Soft Lights & Sweet Music (Concord 1986)★★★, Symphonic Dream (Sion 1988)★★★, Lonesome Boulevard (A&M 1990)★★★, Re-Birth Of The Cool (GRP 1992)★★★, Dream A Little Dream (Telarc 1995)★★★, Dragonfly (Telarc 1995)★★★, Symphonic Dreams (Sion 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Gerry Mulligan And Chet Baker 1951-65 recordings (GNP Crescendo 1988)★★★★, The Best Of The Gerry Mulligan Quartet With Chet Baker 1952-57 recordings (Pacific Jazz 1991)★★★★, The Complete Pacific Jazz Recordings Of The Gerry Mulligan Quartet With Chet Baker 4-CD box set (Pacific Jazz 1996)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Gerry Mulligan's Ark, Raymond Horricks. Listen: Gerry Mulligan: An Aural Narrative In Jazz, Jerome Klinkowitz.

● FILMS: The Subterraneans (1959), The Fortune Cookie (1966).

Mulligan, Mick

b. 24 January 1928, Harrow, Middlesex, England. Mulligan taught himself to play trumpet during early jazz revival of the 40s. Ignoring the fact that he was practically a raw beginner, he promptly formed his own group which he named the Magnolia Jazz Band. With the enthusiastic support of sidemen such as Bob Dawbarn, Roy Crimmins, Archie Semple, Ian Christie and singer George Melly, the band became very popular. With radio broadcasts, occasional appearances on television and endless one-night stands at clubs, pubs and theatres throughout the UK, the band established itself as a driving force of the British trad boom. Later renamed Mick Mulligan's Jazz Band, the group continued until the early 60s before folding in the face of a new kind of popular music. Mulligan stayed on in music for a short while before retiring. A forceful player, Mulligan has left behind only a few records but his band's often hilarious exploits have been extensively recounted in books by Melly and the band's manager, Jim Godbolt. Although in its early days the Mulligan band was noted more for enthusiasm than skill, towards the end it had become one of the finest examples of UK trad even if, probably deliberately, it always remained engagingly unpolished.

- ALBUMS: George Melly With Mick Mulligan's Band (1957)★★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Owning Up, George Melly. All This And Many A Dog, Jim Godbolt.

Mulry, Ted

b. 8 September 1949, England. Mulry was a successful solo act, recording soft, romantic ballads and love songs, several of which entered the Australian charts during 1970-72. These included the number 1 'Julia' and he also made a name for himself as a songwriter for other artists. During this period, Mulry returned to the UK briefly to perform under the name of Steve Ryder. Back in Australia in 1972, with Herm Kovak (drums), Les Hall (guitar, replaced by Gary Dixon in 1974), Mulry formed the trio, the Ted Mulry Gang (later shortened to TMG), changing musical direction to a rock/pop vein. He revived old standards, such as 'Darktown Strutters Ball', wrote a hit, 'Jump In My Car', toured widely and appealed to young teenage fans, who loyally followed his career through seven albums and 15 singles. The band continued to perform as a popular act on the live circuit, without releasing any more records until the mid-80s, when Mulry retired to run a garage. The band was reformed for a 70s' revival show in 1990.

- ALBUMS: Falling In Love Again (1971)★★★, I Won't Look Back (1973)★★★★, with the Ted Mulry Gang Here We Are (1974)★★, Struttin' (1976)★★★, Steppin' Out (1976)★★★, TMG LP (1977)★★★, Disturbing The Peace (1978)★★★, TMG Live (1979)★★, Locked In (1980)★★★, Re-Union (1990)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (1977)★★★★

Mundell, Hugh

b. 14 June 1962, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies, d. 1983. Hugh Mundell made his first recording for producer Joe Gibbs, the unreleased 'Where Is Natty Dread', while barely in his teens. After this false start, his career really began when his precocious talent impressed session player/producer Augustus Pablo. Pablo enlisted his services as a DJ alongside Jah Bull on his Rockers sound system, and produced his first single release, 'Africa Must Be Free', in 1975. Several more singles were released over the next two years, including 'My Mind', 'Don't Stay Away Too Long', 'Let's All Unite' and 'Book Of Life', before the classic Africa Must Be Free By 1983, which was released in 1978, swiftly establishing Mundell's name as a bright new roots star in the ascendant. Pablo further recorded Mundell on such sides as 'That Little Short Man', 'Feeling Alright', 'Jah Says The Time Has Come', 'One Jah One Aim And Destiny' and 'Great Tribulation'. Sundry other recordings were undertaken in his DJ mode as Jah Levi, surfacing mainly on 12-inch releases. In 1979 Mundell tried his hand at self-production on 'Stop Them Jah' and 'Blackman's Foundation', as well as producing the teenage 'Little' Junior Reid on his debut, 'Speak The Truth', which emerged on Pablo's Rockers label in Jamaica. Another excellent song, 'Rastafari's Call' appeared on Mundell's own Muni Music label, while 'Can't Pop No Style' surfaced in 1981 on Greensleeves, coupled with Junior Reid's 'Know Myself'. The same year, Mundell issued a co-produced album with Pablo entitled Time And Place, containing many of tracks previously released as singles, after which he broke with Pablo altogether, going on to record 'Jah Fire Will Be Burning' for Prince Jammy and Mundell for Henry 'Junjo' Lawes. Ironically, it was in 1983, the year he prophesied for Africa's emancipation on his first record, that Mundell was tragically shot and killed while sitting in his car after an argument over a fridge.

- ALBUMS: Africa Must Be Free By 1983 (Message 1978)★★★★, Time & Place (Ja Mun Rock 1981)★★★, Mundell (Greensleeves 1982)★★★, Black Man Foundation (Shanachie 1985)★★★, Arise (Atra 1987)★★★.

Mundy

b. Edmund Enright, 1976, Birr, Offaly, Eire. Mundy grew up in the one-record-shop town of Birr, on a musical diet of Bob Dylan and the Doors, and was in his late teens before he heard any more contemporary artists, such as the Pixies or Nirvana. After moving to Dublin, he began setting his poems to music, mixing his 60s influences with the grunge angst of Nirvana's Kurt Cobain and the Celtic overtones of Mike Scott (the Waterboys). His lyrics, however, were something else, dotted with neo-Joycean puns and wordplay ('I want us to be a plural/I know a little place way out in the rural'). Backed by Stephen Farrell (guitars), Shane Fitzsimons (bass) and Cion O'Callaghan (drums), he supported Alanis Morissette on her UK tour in 1996 and released his debut album, produced by Youth, in October of that year. It seemed to fit better into the rootsy singer-songwriter revival being pioneered by American artists such as Morissette and Sheryl Crow than contemporary British indie sounds, and it may be that Mundy will achieve his biggest success in the USA.

- ALBUMS: Jelly Legs (Epic 1996)★★★.

Mundy, Jimmy

b. 28 June 1907, Cincinnati, Ohio, USA, d. 24 April 1983. Formally taught as a classical musician, Mundy began to concentrate on arranging for big bands in the late 20s and by the beginning of the next decade was well-placed to take advantage of their popularity. During the 30s he wrote for the bands of Earl Hines ('Cavernism'), Benny Goodman ('Madhouse', 'Sing, Sing, Sing', 'Solo Flight') and Gene Krupa. His inclination towards medium and uptempo swingers with impressively orchestrated riffs attracted the interest of Count Basie ('Feather Merchant'), for whom he arranged throughout the 40s. Late in the decade he also wrote for Dizzy Gillespie. Inevitably, Mundy's tenor saxophone-playing career suffered from his emphasis on his arranging, but he did make some records and briefly led his own band. In the 50s he drifted out of jazz, continuing to arrange for large studio orchestras. He died in 1983.

- ALBUMS: Jimmy Mundy And His Orchestra i (1958)★★★, Jimmy Mundy And His Orchestra ii (1959)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Groovin' High (1946)★★★.

Mungo Jerry

Mungo Jerry - Ray Dorset (vocals/guitar), Colin Earl (piano/ vocals), Paul King (banjo/jug/guitar/vocals) and Mike Cole (bass) - was a little-known skiffle-cum-jug band that achieved instant fame following a sensational appearance at 1970's Hollywood Pop Festival, in Staffordshire, England, wherein they proved more popular than headliners the Grateful Dead, Traffic and Free. The group's performance coincided with the release of their debut single, 'In The Summertime', and the attendant publicity, combined with the song's nagging commerciality, resulted in a runaway smash. It topped the UK chart and, by the end of that year alone, global sales had totalled six million. Despite an eight-month gap between releases, Mungo Jerry's second single, 'Baby Jump', also reached number 1. By this time Mike Cole had been replaced by John Godfrey and the group's jug band sound had grown appreciably heavier. A third hit, in 1971, 'Lady Rose', showed a continued grasp of melody (the maxi-single also included the controversial 'Have A Whiff On Me' which was banned by the BBC). This successful year concluded with another Top 20 release, 'You Don't Have To Be In The Army To Fight In The War'. Paul King and Colin Earl left the group in 1972 and together with bassist Joe Rush, an early member of Mungo Jerry, formed the King Earl Boogie Band. Dorset released a solo album, Cold Blue Excursions, prior to convening a new line-up with John Godfrey, Jon Pope (piano) and Tim Reeves (drums). The new line-up had another Top 3 hit in 1973 with 'Alright Alright Alright', but the following year the overtly sexist 'Longlegged Woman Dressed In Black' became the group's final chart entry. Dorset continued to work with various versions of his creation into the 80s, but was never able to regain the group's early profile. A short-lived collaboration with Peter Green and Vincent Crane under the name Katmundu resulted in the disappointing A Case For The Blues (1986), but Dorset did achieve further success when he produced 'Feels Like I'm In Love' for singer Kelly Marie. This former Mungo b-side became a UK number 1 in August 1980.

- ALBUMS: Mungo Jerry (Dawn 1970)★★★, Electronically Tested (Dawn 1971)★★★, You Don't Have To Be In The Army To Fight In The War (Dawn 1971)★★★, Memories Of A Stockbroker (Janus 1971)★★, Baby Jump (Pye 1971)★★★, Boot Power (Dawn 1972)★★, Impala Saga (Polydor 1976)★★, Lovin' In The Alleys, Fightin' In The Streets (Polydor 1977)★★, Ray Dorset And Mungo Jerry (Polydor 1978)★★★, Vig (Balkanton 1978)★★, Six Aside (Satellite 1979)★★, Together Again (CNR Capriccio 1981)★★, Boogie Up (Music Team 1984)★★, Too Fast To Live And Too Young To Die (PRT 1987)★★, All The Hits Plus More (Prestige 1987)★★★, Snakebite (Prestige 1990)★★.

Solo: Ray Dorset Cold Blue Excursions (Dawn 1972)★★★. Paul King Been In The Pen Too Long (Dawn 1972)★★, Houdini's Moon (A New Day 1995)★★, the King Earl Boogie Band Trouble At Mill (Dawn 1972)★★★, The Mill Has Gone (A New Day 1995)★★.

- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Dawn 1973)★★★, Long Legged Woman (Dawn 1974)★★★, Golden Hour Presents (Golden Hour 1974)★★★, The File Series (Pye 1977)★★★, Greatest Hits (Astan 1981)★★★, In The Summertime (Flashback 1985)★★★, Mungo Jerry Collection (Castle 1991)★★★, Some Hits And More (Reference 1991)★★★, The Early Years (Dojo 1992)★★★, Hits Collection (Pickwick 1993)★★★, Summertime (Spectrum 1995)★★★.

Munn, Billy

b. 12 May 1911, Glasgow, Scotland. His father led a local amateur orchestra and at the age of seven Munn began formal piano studies at the Athenaeum School of Music. Four years later, while still at school, he was playing piano at silent movie theatres in Glasgow. He graduated to playing with an orchestra and at 14 played in a dance band. Eventually, he and a friend, Andy Lothian, became regulars at Glasgow's Kings Café where they were heard by a local theatrical impresario. Munn moved on to larger venues and at 17 was ready for the bigtime. In London he played with Arthur Rosebery then returned to Glasgow to audition for Jack Hylton's band which happened to be appearing in Scotland. From 1930 he played with Hylton throughout the UK, Europe and also visited the USA. When Hylton remained in the USA, Munn led the band in London for a while, then joined Sydney Lipton. During World War II Munn played whenever he could and after the war continued playing in various London nightspots and also in Brittany. He broadcast on the BBC's Jazz Club but was then hired to lead a band at Torquay's Imperial Hotel where he remained for the next 30 years. In the early 90s Munn was still playing in shows at theatres along England's south coast.

Muranyi, Joe

b. 14 July 1928, Martin's Ferry, Ohio, USA. Muranyi is of Hungarian descent and first played in a balalaika ensemble. He studied for three years with Lennie Tristano and played in New York with a variety of dixieland groups as well as joining the Red Onion Jazz Band (1952-54). He worked as a producer and sleevenote writer for major record labels while playing with trumpeters Max Kaminsky, Yank Lawson and Jimmy McPartland. Between 1967 and 1971 he played with Louis Armstrong's All Stars, providing just the kind of elegant support Armstrong then required. Since Armstrong's death he has played with Roy Eldridge, the World's Greatest Jazz Band (1975) and the Classic Jazz Quartet (1983) as well as continuing his career as a record producer.

● ALBUMS: Clarinet Wobble (1970)★★★, Classic Jazz Quartet (1984)★★★, with Keith Ingham Unsaturated Fats (1990)★★★.

Murata, Hideo

b. Isamu Kajiyama, 17 January 1929, Ochi, Saga, Japan. Making a public appearance at the age of five as the son of performers of rôkyoku (a popular art of narrative chant), Kajiyama was hailed a 'rôkyoku genius'. Singing in this style, he won an award in 1954 and subsequently took the stage name, Hideo Murata. After having enjoyed a reputation through the experiments with sound effects and orchestral accompaniment in his rôkyoku performances, he converted, in 1958, to kayôkyoku (formerly the most common and typically Japanese form of popular song) at the confident recommendation of Masao Koga, a renowned kayôkyoku composer. Murata's first single, 'Muhômatsu No Isshô' ('The Life Of Outrageous Matsu') was a national hit, which was followed by 'Jinsei Gekijô' ('Life's Theatre) in 1959 and by the million-selling 'Oshô' ('The Chess King') in 1961. Common to all these songs is the image of a manly, industrious protagonist who is going through hardships, and this suitably matched Murata's deep vocals trained in his rôkyoku days. Other notable hits in the following years included 'Jûdô Ichidai' ('A Life Of Jûdo'), 'Hana To Ryû ('A Flower And A Dragon') and 'Jinsei Tôge' ('A Life's Ridge'), which also celebrated a man who bears the sorrows of life.

● COMPILATIONS: Zenkyokushû (Complete Works) (1986),★★★★ New Best Now (1987)★★★, Best Now (1989)★★★.

Murder Inc.

This avant garde/industrial metal band was formed in London during 1992 by ex-Killing Joke members and ex-Revolting Cocks vocalist Chris Connelly. Utilizing two drummers in Martin Atkins and Paul Ferguson, their style was inevitably dominated by a strong rhythmic element. Geordie Walker (guitar), Paul Raven (bass) and John Bechdel (guitar, keyboards) completed the line-up. Contracted to Music For Nations Records, the band debuted with a self-titled album in June 1992. This built on the brutal rhythms of Killing Joke's material, but, as with the other spin-off projects, it failed to inspire similar devotion to that enjoyed by the parent group.

● ALBUMS: Murder Inc. (Music For Nations 1992)★★★.

Murk

US record label, based in Miami, who are probably best known for club hits such as the Funky Green Dogs From Outer Space's 'Reach For Me' (voted third best dance song of 1992 by the New Musical Express) and Coral Way Chiefs' 'Release Myself'. Ralph Falcon and Oscar Gaetan also remixed D.O.P.'s 'Oh Yeah' for Guerilla, and Karen Pollack's 'You Can't Touch Me' for Emotive. The group behind the majority of the label's product is also known as the Deep South Recording team, who were also responsible for providing Warp with their Miami sampler EP. In 1992 they bowed to consumer demand and released a three-track DJ sampler which combined the hard-to-find trio of Funky Green Dogs From Outer Space ('Reach For Me'), Liberty City ('Some Lovin'') and Interceptor ('Together'). In the wake of their cult success the label's product was licensed to Network in the UK.

Murmaids

This rock 'n' roll female group came from Los Angeles, California, USA. The members were sisters Carol (b. 1948) and Terry Fischer (b. 1946), and Sally Gordon (b. 1946). Their 'Popsicles And Icicles' went to number 3 on the pop chart in 1963. The song, written by David Gates of Bread and produced by Kim Foley, was as substantial as cotton-candy, but girl groups were the rage in 1963 and the song had an appealing young teen sound. The Murmaids were devoid of show business aspirations, having been brought to their label, Chattahoochee Records, by their parents, and having left the music business to go to college shortly after 'Popsicles And Icicles' was a hit. Chattahoochee Records continued the Murmaids name through the 60s by recruiting other female members.

Murmur - R.E.M.

R.E.M.'s debut was a brilliant, original masterpiece, blending punk, garage and folk influences with their own inspired musical vision, and in the process creating a perplexing and organic whole. Michael Stipe's muffled, mumbled vocals were the focus of attention, seemingly consisting of phonetic approximations of words rather than actual lyrics (significantly, 'conversation fear' was the only audible lyric in '9-9'). Peter Buck's insistent Rickenbacker dominates the melodies, and the echoing vocal harmonies are precise throughout. Providing alternative radio anthems ('Radio Free Europe') as well as understated R.E.M. classics ('Perfect Circle'), this remains one of the band's best albums, and one of the greatest indie debuts in popular music history.

- Tracks: Radio Free Europe; Pilgrimage; Laughing; Talk About The Passion; Moral Kiosk; Perfect Circle; Catapult; Sitting Still; 9-9; Shaking Through; We Walk; West Of The Fields.
- First released 1983
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 36

Murphey, Michael Martin

b. 13 March 1945, Dallas, Texas, USA. Having been influenced by gospel music at an early age, Murphey aspired to become a Baptist minister. From 1965-70, as a staff songwriter for Screen Gems, Murphey was writing theme tunes and soundtrack material for television. He grew disillusioned with the poor financial rewards, and left. For a short time he was a member of the Lewis And Clark Expedition, which he formed, before going solo. Geronimo's Cadillac was produced in Nashville by Bob Johnston, who was responsible for Murphey's signing with A&M Records. The title track was released as a single, and achieved a Top 40 place in the USA. As well as folk, country and blues, Murphey's early gospel leanings are evident in the overall sound of what is an excellent album. He signed to Epic in 1973 after releasing Cosmic Cowboy Souvenir, which continued the urban cowboy theme of his earlier work. His albums followed a more middle-of-the-road format after this, with occasional glimpses of his better work, as in Peaks, Valleys, Honky-Tonks And Alleys. However, he did reach number 3 in the US singles charts in 1975, achieving a gold disc with 'Wildfire'. Murphey has never had the degree of commercial success his writing would indicate that he is capable of. However, as a writer, Murphey has had songs covered by John Denver, Cher, Claire Hamill, Hoyt Axton, Bobby Gentry and the Monkees, for whom he wrote 'What Am I Doin' Hangin' 'Round'. He also wrote songs for Michael Nesmith including 'The Oklahoma Backroom Dance'. Murphey later played at Ronnie Scott's club in London, for a press presentation, and was supported on the occasion by J.D. Souther, Don Henley, Dave Jackson and Gary Nurm. Geronimo's Cadillac is probably his best-remembered work. Michael Martin Murphey included a number of songs Murphey had co-written with Michael D'Abo. Murphey was featured in the film Urban Cowboy, which included his song 'Cherokee Fiddle'. Much of the film was shot at Mickey Gilley's Bar. Murphey has continued recording easy-listening country and, in 1987, had a number 1 country single with a wedding song, 'A Long Line Of Love'. He had US country hits with 'A Face In The Crowd', a duet with Holly Dunn, and 'Talkin' To The Wrong Man', which featured his son, Ryan. He went off at a tangent in the 1990s and, like Ian Tyson, he has chosen to revive old cowboy songs as well as writing his own. He is a superb performer of this material, but whether this will prove to be a good career move remains to be seen, as many country performers want to forget the music's cowboy roots. He could be described as a latter-day Marty Robbins and Cowboy Songs III does include, with the aid of modern technology, a seamless duet with Robbins on 'Big Iron'. However, Murphey is far more ambitious than Robbins, as he ably demonstrated with 1995's Sagebrush Symphony (recorded with the San Antonio Symphony Orchestra) and 1997's The Horse Legends. He started his own record label in 1998 following his departure from Warner Brothers.

- ALBUMS: Geronimo's Cadillac (A&M 1972)★★★★, Cosmic Cowboy Souvenir (A&M 1973)★★★, Michael Murphey (Epic 1973)★★★, Blue Sky - Night Thunder (Epic 1975)★★★★, Swans Against The Sun (Epic 1976)★★★★, Flowing Free Forever (Epic 1976)★★★, Lone Wolf (Epic 1977)★★★, Peaks, Valleys, Honky-Tonks And Alleys (Epic 1979)★★★, Michael Martin Murphey (Liberty 1982)★★★, The Heart Never Lies (Liberty 1983)★★★, Tonight We Ride (Warners 1986)★★★, Americana (Warners 1987)★★★, River Of Time (Warners 1988)★★★, Land Of Enchantment (Warners 1989)★★★, Cowboy Songs (Warners 1990)★★★, Cowboy Christmas - Cowboy Songs II (Warners 1991)★★★, Cowboy Songs III (Warners 1993)★★★, Sagebrush Symphony (Warners 1995)★★★, The Horse Legends (Warners 1997)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Michael Martin Murphey (EMI 1982)★★★★.

Murphy's Law

Formed in 1985, New York, USA hardcore punk band Murphy's Law have endured a number of line-up shuffles over the ensuing decade. Jimmy 'G' Drescher has remained vocalist and leader in all subsequent incarnations, though he has dropped his original sobriquet of Jimmy Gestapo. Other members on the group's 1986 debut, Murphy's Law, were Pete Hines (drums), Pete Martinez (bass) and Alex Morris (guitar). However, by the advent of their fourth album in 1996, Dedication, Drescher had been joined by Todd Youth (guitar), Dean Rispler (bass) and Eric Arce (drums). Part of this change was forced - the group having lost bassist Chuck Valle in a fatal stabbing incident in 1994. The group's debut album included a cover version of Iggy Pop's 'I've Got A Right', which provided ample evidence of their influences. Subsequent efforts emphasized a predilection for what the group called 'party lyrics', in preference to the more dour and earnest hardcore groups. However, with Dedication, Valle's death proved to be a significant impact on Drescher's songwriting, resulting in songs such as 'Dysfunctional Family', 'Don't Bother Me' and 'Bitter'.

- ALBUMS: Murphy's Law (Rock Hotel 1986)★★★, Back With A Bong! (Rock Hotel 1989)★★, Best Of Times (Relativity 1991)★★★, Dedication (Profile 1995)★★★, Dedicated (Another Planet 1996)★★★.

Murphy, David Lee

b. Herrin, Illinois, USA. Although it took Murphy more than 10 years to secure a major label recording contract with MCA Records, he quickly regained ground with the success of his debut album, Out With A Bang, which topped Billboard's Heatseekers chart in 1995. Murphy had first been spotted by MCA Nashville president Tony Brown while leading his country band, Blue Tick Hounds, in 1985. However, a full decade passed before Brown offered Murphy a contract, though the artist conceded that his former band was 'too edgy for country radio at the time or, at least, too edgy to get a deal'. In the intervening period Murphy worked as a professional songwriter, writing 'Red Roses Won't Work Now' for Reba McEntire's 1985 debut album and 'High Weeds And Rust' for Doug Stone. A version of that song was also included on Out With A Bang, alongside other original material such as the singles 'Fish Ain't Bitin'' and 'Just Once', which featured on the soundtrack to the 8 Seconds film. 'Every Time I Get Around You' was the hit single that previewed Gettin' Out The Good Stuff, but album sales have failed to live up to the success of his debut.

● ALBUMS: Out With A Bang (MCA 1994)★★★★, Gettin' Out The Good Stuff (MCA 1996)★★★, We Can't All Be Angels (MCA 1997)★★★.

Murphy, Delia

b. 1903, Mount Jennings, Claremorris, County Mayo, Eire, d. 1971. The daughter of wealthy farming parents, Murphy was educated at University College, Galway, and supplemented her studies by assimilating a diverse repertoire of Irish ballads. Her knowledge of the genre, both in English and Gaelic, was impressive enough to encourage the famous Irish tenor John McCormack to seek her assistance in enunciating the ballad 'Una Bhan'. Her rendition so struck a visiting A&R representative from HMV Records that she was duly signed to the label. One of her first recordings was the extraordinary 'The Spinning Wheel'. Written in 1899 by John Francis Waller, the song hauntingly evoked the courtship of young lovers measured by the inexorable winding of the spinner's wheel. Murphy's ethereal West Ireland brogue and Gaelic pronunciation was reinforced by a harp arrangement which was quite remarkable for the period. With songs such as 'If I Were A Blackbird', 'Coortin' In The Kitchen', 'Goodbye Mike And Goodbye Pat' and 'Nora Creina', Murphy established herself as a traditionalist with a tremendous sense of humour and pathos. She borrowed freely, not merely from standard Irish ballads, but from obscure songs that had their origin in tinker folklore. Other material such as 'The Moonshiner' and 'Boston Burglar' were American adaptations, expertly gaelicized by Murphy's distinctive brogue and unique diction. Her marriage to the Ambassador Dr. Thomas Kiernan (author of British War Finances And Their Consequences) took her to the Vatican in 1941, where she spent the War years. While there she translated her version of 'Three Lovely Lassies' into Italian. After touring the world with her ambassador husband, she retired to Eire's Liffey Valley, where she died at the age of 68.

● COMPILATIONS: The Legendary Delia Murphy (1977)★★★.

Murphy, Lyle 'Spud'

b. 19 August 1908, Salt Lake City, Utah, USA. During his schooldays Murphy became proficient on several brass and reed instruments. He played saxophones and clarinet in several dance bands, along the way teaching himself arranging. By the late 20s he was secure enough to graduate from playing in territory bands to work in playing and arranging capacities in several leading dance bands including those of Jan Garber, Mal Hallett and Joe Haymes. He then became a staff arranger for Benny Goodman during the mid-30s, a period when he was also active writing charts for the Casa Loma Orchestra and for the Tommy Dorsey band. Specializing in driving, up-tempo charts, Murphy's contribution to the early success of Goodman and Dorsey was considerable. Late in the decade, he formed his own band, writing for it and playing alto saxophone. In the 40s Murphy's interest was sparked by new developments in jazz, and his writing, and the playing of occasionally formed bands, showed an acute awareness of the musical advances being made. In later years, Murphy's experimented in third-stream music.

● COMPILATIONS: as arranger Benny Goodman On The Air (Sunbeam 1935)★★★★, as arranger The Chronological Tommy Dorsey (Classics 1935)★★★★.

Murphy, Mark

b. 14 March 1932, Syracuse, New York, USA. Murphy began singing as a child and in his mid-teens was performing with a band led by his brother. He worked in many parts of the USA, and had built a small reputation for himself in New York when the appearance of several albums in the late 50s announced that the jazz world had a new and important singer in its midst. During the 60s he continued to tour, visiting Europe and making more fine records with Al Cohn (That's How I Love The Blues) and a group drawn from the Clarke-Boland Big Band (Midnight Mood). In the middle of the decade he decided to settle in Europe and worked extensively on the Continent, with occasional visits to the UK. In the early 70s he returned to the USA, where he recorded with Michael and Randy Brecker on Bridging A Gap and the later Satisfaction Guaranteed, and continued to attract new audiences. Murphy's repertoire is extensive and draws upon sources as diverse as Big Joe Turner and Jon Hendricks. An accomplished stylist who sings with panache, good humour and great vocal dexterity, Murphy has remained dedicated to jazz. This commitment has been unswayed by the fact that his warm voice and highly personable stage presentation would almost certainly have guaranteed him a successful and much more lucrative career in other areas of popular music. In the early 90s Murphy was still on tour, still pleasing his old audience, and still, remarkably, pulling in newcomers.

● ALBUMS: Meet Mark Murphy (Decca 1957)★★★★, Let Yourself Go (Decca 1958)★★★, Sessions, Live (*c.*1958)★★, This Could be The Start Of Something (Capitol 1959)★★★, Hit Parade (Capitol 1960)★★★, Playing The Field (Capitol 1960)★★★, Rah! (Riverside 1961)★★★★, That's How I Love The Blues! (Riverside 1962)★★★, Mark Time (Fontana 1964)★★★, A Swingin' Singin' Affair (Fontana 1965)★★★, Who Can I Turn To (Immediate 1966)★★★, Midnight Mood (1967)★★★, Bridging A Gap (1972)★★★, Mark II (1973)★★★, Red Clay: Mark Murphy Sings (1975)★★, Mark Murphy Sings Dorothy Fields And Cy Coleman (1977)★★, Stolen Moments (1978)★★★, Satisfaction Guaranteed (1979)★★★, Bop For Kerouac (1981)★★★, Mark Murphy Sings The Nat 'King' Cole Songbook, Volumes 1 & 2 (1983)★★★, Beauty And The Beast (Muse 1986)★★★, Night Mood (Milestone 1986)★★★, Kerouac Then And Now (Muse 1987)★★★, September Ballads (Milestone 1987)★★★, What A Way To Go (Muse 1991)★★★, Very Early (West And East 1993)★★★, I'll Close My Eyes (Muse 1994)★★★, with Sheila Jordan One For Junior (Muse 1994)★★★, Song For The Geese (RCA Victor 1997)★★★.

Murphy, Matt

b. 27 December 1929, Sunflower, Mississippi, USA. Murphy moved to Memphis as a child and learned guitar in the 40s. He joined Tuff Green's band before becoming lead guitarist with Junior Parker's Blue Flames, playing on recording sessions with Parker and Bobby Bland. Murphy's brother Floyd replaced him with Parker's band when Matt moved to Chicago in 1952. There he spent seven years in Memphis Slim's band, also recording as the Sparks with Sam Chatman (bass, vocals) and John Calvin (saxophone). He toured Europe in 1963 with the Folk Blues package, recording with Sonny Boy 'Rice Miller' Williamson in Denmark. Murphy found a wider audience through his role in the film The Blues Brothers as Aretha Franklin's husband and his subsequent tours with the Blues Brothers package. Floyd Murphy joined him for his first solo album, recorded for Antone's in 1990.

● ALBUMS: Way Down South (Antone's 1990)★★★, The Blues Don't Bother Me (Roesch 1996)★★★.

● FILM: The Blues Brothers (1980).

Murphy, Noel

b. 27 November 1943, Killerney, County Kerry, Eire. Singer, guitar player, and storyteller, Murphy first visited London in 1962 and decided to stay. He went to a wide number of folk clubs, then springing up under the banner of the folk revival. Shortly afterwards, Murphy started out doing the obligatory 'floor spots' in the clubs, and was rewarded with offers of bookings. The residency of the famous London club Les Cousins in Soho followed. He then began playing a large number of folk festivals, including Norwich, Cambridge and Trowbridge. In 1965, Murphy released an EP, Noel Murphy, for EMI. Subsequent releases turned up on a variety of labels, including Fontana, and RCA. Murphy had by now been working abroad a great deal, in places as diverse as Saudi Arabia, Bermuda, Kenya, and Hungary. However, in 1983, his throat was damaged when he choked on a piece of glass which was found in his drink. His full-time singing career now over, he left the scene for four years. During this time he developed his abilities as an after dinner speaker. As a result, he is now much in demand in his capacity as a storyteller at golf and rugby functions. In 1987, he released the single 'Murphy And The Bricks' aka 'Why Paddy's Not At Work Today', recounting the amusing excuse given for someone not turning up for work on the building site. Murphy's career spans over 25 years, and includes numerous radio and television appearances, with many in Eric Sykes' television shows and films. Murphy now does very few folk club bookings since he began touring with his one man show - An Evening With Noel Murphy.

● ALBUMS: Nyaah! (Fontana 1967)★★★, A Touch Of The Blarney (MFP 1968)★★★★, Another Round (Fontana 1969)★★★, Murf (The Village Thing 1972)★★★, Noel Murphy Performs (Plant Life 1975)★★★, Caught In The Act (RCA 1978)★★★, Homework (Murphy 1988)★★★.

Murphy, Pete

b. Northampton, Northamptonshire, England. The former Bauhaus vocalist set out on his solo career after a brief period as half of Dali's Car, with former Japan member Mick Karn (one album: The Waking Hour). Murphy was already famous in his own right for appearing in a television advertisement for audio tapes. His first solo output was a cover version of Magazine's 'The Light Pours Out Of Me', for the Beggars Banquet Records sampler album The State Of Things. This was also included on his debut album, which boasted a massive credit list including Daniel Ash, his former songwriting partner in Bauhaus, John McGeogh (who played on the original version of 'The Light Pours Out Of Me') and Howard Hughes. The debut set a precedent for critical antipathy (in the UK at least; he enjoys cult popularity in the USA) which has accompanied all subsequent recordings. Love Hysteria included a cover version of Iggy Pop's 'Fun Time', among other typically dramatic gestures. By the advent of his third collection a regular band had been formed (the 100 Men), consisting of Peter Bonas (guitar), Terl Bryant (drums), Eddie Branch (bass) and Paul Statham (keyboards, guitar). All four had played on the previous album, Branch and Bonas on the first as well. One of the better songs from Deep, 'Cuts You Deep', won the Top Modern Rock Track category in the 1990 Billboard Year In Music Awards. However, following the world tour to promote Holy Smoke in 1992 Murphy elected to dissolve the 100 Men, and moved from England to Turkey; to all intents and purposes he had finished with the music business. However, within a year he was preparing new demos for what would become his fifth solo album, Cascade. This was co-written with Paul Statham and produced by EMF and Inspiral Carpets producer Pascal Gabriel, with guest guitar-playing by Michael Brook. The promotional single, 'The Scarlet Thing In You' (a typically grandiose Murphy title), was inspired by 13th century Turkish mystic Jeladdin Rumi, expanding the singer's already varied reference points.

● ALBUMS: Should The World Fail To Fall Apart (Beggars Banquet 1986)★★, Love Hysteria (Beggars Banquet 1987)★★, Deep (Beggars Banquet 1989)★★★, Holy Smoke (Beggars Banquet 1992)★★, Cascade (Beggars Banquet 1995)★★★.

Murphy, Ralph

b. 1944, Wallaceburg, Ontario, Canada. Murphey wanted to be a songwriter from an early age and, receiving little encouragement in Canada, tried both Los Angeles and Liverpool, even landing a recording contract as part of the Guardsmen in the UK in 1964. His first hit song was 'Call My Name' for James Royal. Moving back to Canada, Murphy formed Double M Records and produced April Wine and Roadhouse. His first US country hit was with 'Good Enough To Be Your Wife' (Jeannie C. Riley). Going into partnership with Roger Cook, they wrote 'Talking In Your Sleep' and 'Half The Way' (both Crystal Gayle), 'He Got You' (Ronnie Milsap) and '18 Wheels And A Dozen Roses' (Kathy Mattea). He re-established himself in Canada with 'Bad Day For Trains' for Patricia Conroy. In the 90s Little Texas had success with 'Inside'. Murphy is currently Director of Artists Relations for ASCAP in Nashville and believes that much of his work lies in helping songwriters learn their craft. His advice is 'Listen to the best because that is your real competition. Don't try and be as good as the guy playing down the street in the bar.' Another piece of advice might be to take Murphy's place when he cannot make a gig: when he could not appear at the Bluebird one night, Garth Brooks stepped in and was offered his Capitol recording contract!

Murphy, Rose

b. 1913, Xenia, Ohio, USA, d. 16 November 1989, Queens, New York, USA. Murphy was a singer and pianist with a high-pitched squeaky voice, a bubbly, infectious personality and a keyboard style that fully complemented her singing. She also provided her own percussion by stamping her feet on the floor. When she moved upmarket to venues that were carpeted, she used a wooden board on which to pound out her foot stomps. Murphy established a considerable reputation on the New York club circuit in the mid/late 40s, entering the US Top 20 with a version of 'I Can't Give You Anything But Love' in 1947. Known as the 'Chee Chee' girl, due to her use of that particular expression, and several other chirrups and twitterings to punctuate her vocals, she became popular in the UK during 1948 after frequent playings of her single 'Busy Line' by then-disc jockey Richard Attenborough. This record introduced the telephone signal, 'Brruup, Brruup', as yet another of her sound effects. Other UK hits included 'Me And My Shadow' and 'Girls Were Made To Take Care Of Boys'. In 1950 she played the London Palladium and thereafter continued to tour Europe occasionally through to the 80s. During the 60s she performed regularly at the Cookery in New York. She died in 1989 but received further press attention the following year when UK mobile telephone company Cellnet used 'Busy Line' as a television commercial theme, prompting RCA to reissue Murphy's original recording.

● ALBUMS: Not Cha-Cha, But Chi-Chi (1955)★★★, Jazz, Joy and Happiness (1956)★★★.

Murphy, Turk

b. Melvin Murphy, 16 December 1915, Palermo, California, USA, d. 30 May 1987. Murphy's early career was as a trombonist in popular dancebands such as that led by Mal Hallett, but in the late 30s he joined the revivalist band led by Lu Watters and remained there for most of the next decade. After leaving Watters he formed his own band, gaining just as much fame and popularity as Watters had, and a similarly high level of critical disdain. Murphy opened his own club, Earthquake McGoon's, in San Francisco and continued to lead his band there and around the world until shortly before his death in 1987. An earthy, sometimes raucous but always entertaining player, Murphy was one of the key figures in retaining public interest in traditional jazz during a period, and in a place (the west coast) that saw most critical attention directed to other styles of music.

● ALBUMS: Turk Murphy's Jazz Band Favourites (Good Time Jazz, 1949-51 recordings)★★★, The Music Of Jelly Roll Morton (1953)★★★★, Music For Losers (1957)★★★, Turk Murphy At The Newport Jazz Festival 1957 (1957)★★★, Turk Murphy In Concert Vols 1 & 2 (1972)★★, Southern Stomps (1980-86)★★★, San Francisco Memories (1986)★★★, Concert In The Park (Merry Makers 1986)★★★, with Jim Cullum Turk At Carnegie Hall (1987)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: San Francisco Jazz, Volume 1 (1949-50 recordings)★★★+, San Francisco Jazz, Volume 2 (1950-52 recordings)★★★★, Live At Easy Street Volumes 1-3 (Dawn Club 1979)★★, The Best Of Turk Murphy (Merry Makers 1993)★★★.

Murphy, Walter

b. 1952, New York City, New York, USA. Murphy was responsible for one of the biggest and most bizarre early disco hits, 'A Fifth Of Beethoven'. As its title suggests, the number 1 single was based on Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Murphy was schooled in music as a child and worked for the Tonight show in the USA as a musical arranger after graduating from the Manhattan School of Music. He then worked as a jingle writer, scoring for television films. His first foray into the new disco sound was in 1975 with dance-oriented Christmas singles, which were not successful. Murphy came up with the idea for 'A Fifth Of Beethoven' in early 1976 and recorded his arrangement, playing nearly all of the instruments himself (despite billing the record as being by Walter Murphy And The Big Apple Band). It was released on Private Stock Records and by the autumn had risen to number 1 in the US. An album of similar material reached number 15 during the same period. A follow-up single, 'Flight '76', based on Rimsky-Korsakov's 'Flight Of The Bumble Bee', hit number 44 in late 1976, and an album, Rhapsody In Blue, including Murphy's reworking of the George Gershwin title song, made the lower rungs of that chart. Murphy was out of the charts for six years, resurfacing in 1982 with 'Theme From E.T. (The Extra-Terrestrial)', from the hit film.

● ALBUMS: A Fifth Of Beethoven (1976)★★★★, Rhapsody In Blue (1977)★★★, Themes From E.T. (1982)★★.

Murray, Anne

b. 20 June 1946, Springhill, Nova Scotia, Canada. Sometimes known as 'The Singing Sweetheart Of Canada', Murray graduated from the University of New Brunswick with a degree in physical education, and then spent a year as a teacher. After singing simply for pleasure for a time, in 1964 she was persuaded to audition for Sing Along Jubilee, a regional television show, but was selected instead for the same network's Let's Go, hosted by Bill Langstroth (her future husband). Income from a residency on the programme and solo concerts was sufficient for Murray to begin entertaining professionally in a vaguely folk/country rock style, though she could also acquit herself admirably with both R&B and mainstream pop material. Like Linda Ronstadt - seen by some as her US opposite number - she was mainly an interpreter of songs written by others. Issued by Arc Records, What About Me (1968) created sufficient impact to interest Capitol Records, who signed her to a long-term contract. Two years later, her version of Gene MacLellan's remarkable 'Snowbird', taken from the album This Was My Way, soared into Billboard's Top 10. Despite regular appearances on Glen Campbell's Goodtime Hour television series, subsequent releases - including the title track to Talk It Over In The Morning - sold only moderately until 1973 when she scored another smash hit with 'Danny's Song', composed by Kenny Loggins (with whom she duetted 11 years later on 'Nobody Loves Me Like You Do', a country chart-topper). She was rated Billboard's second most successful female artist in 1976, but family commitments necessitated a brief period of domesticity before 'You Needed Me' won her a Grammy award for best female pop vocal performance in 1978. While revivals of Bobby Darin's 'Things' and the Monkees' 'Daydream Believer' were aimed directly at the pop market, it was with the country audience that she proved most popular. 'He Thinks I Still Care' (originally a b-side) became her first country number 1. However, along with 'Just Another Woman In Love', 'Could I Have This Dance' (from the film Urban Cowboy), the bold 'A Little Good News' (1983) and other country hits, she had also recorded a collection of children's ditties (Hippo In My Tub), commensurate with her executive involvement with Canada's Save The Children Fund. In 1989 Springhill's Anne Murray Center was opened in recognition of her tireless work for this charity. Three years later she played Las Vegas, with a show that amply demonstrated her excellent delivery and superior choice of songs. These strengths were consistently reflected in her recorded output during the 90s.

● ALBUMS: What About Me (Arc 1968)★★, This Was My Way (Capitol 1970)★★★, Snowbird (Capitol 1970)★★★★, Anne Murray (Capitol 1971)★★★★, Talk It Over In The Morning (Capitol 1971)★★★, Anne Murray/Glen Campbell (Capitol 1971)★★★, Annie (Capitol 1972)★★★, Danny's Song (Capitol 1973)★★★★, Love Song (Capitol 1974)★★★, Country (Capitol 1974)★★★★, Highly Prized Possession (Capitol 1974)★★★, Together (Capitol 1975)★★★, Love Song (Capitol 1975)★★★, Keeping In Touch (Capitol 1976)★★★, Let's Keep It That Way (Capitol 1977)★★★★, Hippo In My Tub (Capitol 1979)★★★, New Kind Of Feeling (Capitol 1979)★★★★, I'll Always Love You (Capitol 1980)★★★★, Somebody's Waiting (Capitol 1980)★★★, Where Do You Go To When You Dream (Capitol 1981)★★★, Christmas Wishes (Capitol 1981)★★★, The Hottest Night Of The Year (Capitol 1982)★★★, A Little Good News (Capitol 1983)★★★, Heart Over Mind (Capitol 1985)★★★, Something To Talk About (Capitol 1986)★★★, Talk It Over In The Morning (Capitol 1986)★★★, Christmas Wishes (Capitol 1986)★★★, Songs Of The Heart (Capitol 1987)★★★, As I Am (Capitol 1988)★★★, Harmony (Capitol 1989)★★★, You Will (Capitol 1990)★★★, Yes I Do (Capitol 1991)★★★, Croonin' (Capitol 1993)★★★, Anne Murray (Capitol 1996)★★★, An Intimate Evening With Anne Murray, Live (Capitol 1998)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: A Country Collection (1980)★★★, Greatest Hits (Capitol 1980)★★★★, The Very Best Of Anne Murray (Capitol 1981)★★★★, Country Hits (Capitol 1987)★★★, Greatest Hits, Vol. 2 (Capitol 1989)★★★★, 15 Of The Best (Capitol 1992)★★★, The Best ... So Far (EMI 1994)★★★★, Now And Forever 3-CD box set (EMI 1994)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Snowbird: The Story Of Anne Murray, Barry Grills.

Murray, David

b. 19 February 1955, Oakland, California, USA. Murray is regarded by many critics as the most important tenor saxophonist of his generation. While he was still an infant his family moved from the Oakland ghetto to integrated Berkeley. He learnt music from his mother, a church pianist, and took up the tenor saxophone at the age of nine years old, learning the fingering from his clarinet-playing older brother. Three years later he was leading R&B bands. On the day that Martin Luther King was assassinated he was asked, as president of the student body at his junior high school, to address his fellow students. He led the soul revue, the Notations Of Soul, in a two-hour session which helped avert violence in response to Dr. King's murder. He continued formal study at Pomona College, Los Angeles, where he was taught by Stanley Crouch and Margaret Kohn. He and Crouch later worked together as part of Black Music Infinity and in Murray's 1975 Trio. It was with this unit that Murray re-located to New York, becoming involved with the loft circuit of experimental musicians. He linked up with three of these (Hamiet Bluiett, Oliver Lake, and Julius Hemphill) to form the World Saxophone Quartet in 1977. In the early 80s he joined the comparable Clarinet Summit, led by John Carter. He also worked with Curtis Clarke, Billy Bang, Fred Hopkins, Phil Wilson, Sunny Murray, Jack DeJohnette (in duo and in the drummer's group Special Edition) and James 'Blood' Ulmer (with whom he also played in Music Revelation Ensemble), and, while still in California, he had played with Bobby Bradford, James Newton, Arthur Blythe and Butch Morris, the latter still supplying him with many of the tunes he records. In 1978 he established a big band, out of which distilled the more economically and logistically viable Octet.

Throughout the 80s he led a quartet as well as the octet and, when feasible, the big band. Each of these units has been highly-praised throughout the world. Murray's bands offer well-crafted, distinctive writing and adventurous, though equally well-crafted, solos. His own playing on tenor, soprano, bass-clarinet and flute welds traces of his R&B and gospel background, the freedom of Albert Ayler (one of his early heroes) and the classic quality of players like Paul Gonsalves into an individualist whole. He told Francis Davis: 'When I first came to New York I was playing more melodically, almost the way I play now. If you listen to my records chronologically you'll hear me gradually laying off the overblown notes, but I still use energy techniques as a kind of capper to my solos.' He is both a polished and a passionate improviser, whose other influences include Coleman Hawkins, Ben Webster and Duke Ellington. To date, the best of his work can be found among the many albums he recorded for Black Saint during the 80s (notably Ming, Morning Song, Children, The Hill and I Want To Talk About You) together with Ming's Samba on the Portrait label, and the set of four 1988 quartet records released by DIW: Deep River, Lovers, Spirituals and Ballads. His 90s output is (so far) considerable and to a high standard. Highly recommended are Death Of A Sideman, Fast Life, Real Deal and Tenors. Quite how many more albums he will have put out by the end of the century is mind expanding.

● ALBUMS: with others Wild Flowers 4 (1976)★★, Flowers For Albert (West Wind 1976)★★, Low Class Conspiracy (1976)★★★, with Synthesis Sentiments (1976)★★, with James Newton Solomon's Sons (1977)★★, And Low Class Conspiracy Volume 1: Penthouse Jazz (1977)★★, And Low Class Conspiracy Volume 2: Holy Siege On Intrigue (1977)★★, Live At The Lower Manhattan Ocean Club Vols 1 & 2 (India Navigation 1978)★★, Last Of The Hipmen (1978)★★★, Let The Music Take You (1978)★★★, Sur-Real Saxophone (1978)★★, Conceptual Saxophone (1978)★★★, Organic Saxophone (1978)★★★, Interboogieology (Black Saint 1978)★★★, The London Concert (1979)★★, 3D Family (Hat Art 1979)★★, Sweet Lovely (Black Saint 1980)★★★, Solo Live Vols 1 & 2 (1980)★★★, with Music Revelation Ensemble No Wave (1980)★★★, Ming (Black Saint 1980)★★★★, Home (Black Saint 1982)★★★, Murray's Steps (Black Saint 1983)★★★, with Wilber Morris Wilber Force (1983)★★★, Morning Song (Black Saint 1984)★★★★, with Clarinet Summit Concert At The Public Theater 1982 recording (1984)★★★, Live At Sweet Basil Volume 1 (Black Saint 1985)★★, Children (Black Saint 1985)★★★★, with Clarinet Summit Concert At The Public Theater Volume 2 1982 recording (1985)★★★, Live At Sweet Basil Volume 2 (Black Saint 1986)★★★, David Murray (1986)★★★★, with Jack DeJohnette In Our Style (DIW 1986)★★★, New Life (1987)★★★, with Randy Weston The Healers (Black Saint 1987)★★, The Hill 1986 recording (Black Saint 1988),★★★★ with McCoy Tyner and others Blues For Coltrane (1988)★★★, Lovers (1988)★★★★, with Clarinet Summit Southern Belles (1988)★★★, Music Revelation Ensemble (1988)★★★, The People's Choice (1988)★★★, I Want To Talk About You 1986 recording (Black Saint 1989)★★★★, Deep River (DIW 1989)★★★★, Ming's Samba (1989)★★, with Kahil El' Zabar Golden Sea (1989)★★★, with others Lucky Four (Tutu 1990)★★★, Ballads 1988 recording (DIW 1990)★★★★, Spirituals 1988 recording (DIW 1990)★★★★, with Music Revelation Ensemble Elec. Jazz (1990)★★★, Hope Scope 1987 recording (Black Saint 1991)★★, Special Quartet (1991)★★★, Live At The Peace Church 1976 recording (1991)★★, Remembrances (DIW 1992)★★★, Shakill's Warrior (DIW 1992)★★★, Big Band (DIW 1992)★★★, A Sanctuary Within (Black Saint 1992)★★★, with Music Revelation Ensemble After Dark (1992)★★★, with Dave Burrell In Concert (1992)★★★, Fast Life (DIW 1993)★★★★, with Milford Graves Real Deal 1991 recording (DIW 1993)★★★★, Death Of A Sideman 1991 recording (DIW 1993)★★★★, The Jazzpar Prize (Enja 1993), Tea For Two 1990 recording (Fresh Sound 1993)★★, Black And Red (Red Baron 1993)★★★, Ballads For Bass Clarinet (DIW 1993)★★★, Live '93 Acoustic Octfunk (Sound Hills 1994)★★★, Tenors (DIW 1994)★★★★, Picasso (DIW 1994)★★★, Body And Soul (Black Saint 1994)★★★, Saxman (Red Baron 1994)★★★, Jazzosaurus Rex (Red Baron 1994)★★★, Dark Star (The Music Of The Grateful Dead) (Astor Place 1996)★★★★.

Murray, Keith

b. USA. Rapper Keith Murray made an immediate impact with his debut for Jive Records, 1994's The Most Beautifullest Thing In The World. As well as his trademark tongue-twisting delivery, a throwback to old-school hip-hop which won him many fans, many critics were impressed by the similar dexterity employed in his writing style. However, despite good early press and sales, its final turnover figure of just over 300,000 was a major disappointment both to the artist and his record label. It left Murray to concede: 'People were telling me they couldn't understand what I was saying, so I had to slow it up a bit.' Despite this, he continued to enjoy a high media-profile by appearing on a Coca-Cola advertisement and guesting on remixes of Mary J. Blige's 'Be Happy', Total's 'Can't You See' and LL Cool J.'s 'I Shot Ya'. For 1996's Enigma, Murray once again employed Eric Sermon's hard-edged funk, but this time much of it drew riffs from the work of Maze/Frankie Beverly rather than the G-funk staples, Parliament and George Clinton.

● ALBUMS: The Most Beautifullest Thing In The World (Jive 1994),★★★★ Enigma (Jive 1996)★★★★.

Murray, Pauline, And The Invisible Girls

Following the demise of Penetration, Murray (b. 8 March 1958, Durham, England) departed, with bass guitarist Robert Blamire, to form a new group. Producers Martin Hannett and Steve Hopkins were claimed to be the 'Invisible' members, while the actual line-up consisted of John Maher (ex-Buzzcocks), Dave Rowbotham and Dave Hassell. The Invisible Girls would also act as studio and road band for John Cooper Clarke, and included among its ranks Pete Shelley, Karl Burns (the Fall), Bill Nelson, Vini Reilly (Durutti Column) and numerous others. A self-titled album and single, 'Dream Sequence', announced the arrival of Pauline Murray And The Invisible Girls, and gained strong critical support. The album featured guest appearances from Wayne Hussey (ex-Dead Or Alive, Sisters Of Mercy, the Mission) in addition to the previously mentioned Invisible luminaries. Despite this fine collection, the band split after two subsequent single releases from it: 'Searching For Heaven' and 'Mr. X'. Blamire went into production work while Murray took two years away from the music industry: 'I just . . . retreated from music really, just backed right out and decided what I wanted to do. Which took about a year to two years . . . I think Penetration to the Invisible Girls was such a vast leap that it lost everyone. It lost us as well'. Blamire and Murray reunited in the similarly short-lived Pauline Murray And The Storm.

● ALBUMS: Pauline Murray And The Invisible Girls (Illusive 1981)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Storm Clouds (Cat And Mouse 1989)★★★.

Murray, Ruby

b. 29 March 1935, Belfast, Northern Ireland, d. 17 December 1996. One of the most popular singers in the UK during the 50s, Murray toured Ulster as a child singer in various variety shows, and, after being spotted by producer Richard Afton, made her television debut at the age of 12. Stringent Irish laws regarding child performers held her back for two years, and she returned to school in Belfast until she was 14. In 1954 she travelled to London in comedian Tommy Morgan's touring revue, Mrs. Mulligan's Hotel, and was again seen by Afton, at the famous Metropolitan Theatre, Edgware Road. He offered her a position as resident singer on BBC Television's Quite Contrary, replacing Joan Regan who was about to leave. Signed to UK Columbia by recording manager and musical director Ray Martin, Murray's first release, 'Heartbeat', made the UK Top 5 in 1954, and was followed by 'Softly, Softly'. The latter reached number 1 in 1955, and became an ideal theme song, reflecting her shy image. In the early part of 1955 Murray had five singles in the Top 20 at the same time, an extraordinary record that lasted until the emergence of Madonna in the 80s. Murray's hits included 'Happy Days And Lonely Nights', 'Let Me Go Lover', 'If Anyone Finds This, I Love You' (with Anne Warren), 'Evermore', 'I'll Come When You Call', 'Real Love', 'Goodbye Jimmy, Goodbye' and 'You Are My First Love'. She sang the last number over the opening titles of the film musical It's Great To Be Young. Murray's own film appearances included the comedy, A Touch Of The Sun, with Frankie Howerd and Dennis Price. During a hectic period in the mid-50s, she had her own television show, starred at the London Palladium in Painting The Town with Norman Wisdom, appeared in a Royal Command Performance, and toured the USA, Malta and North Africa. In 1957, while appearing in a summer season at Blackpool, she met Bernie Burgess, a member of the vocal group the Jones Boys. They married in secret 10 days later. Burgess became her personal manager and, during the early 60s, they toured as a double act. In 1970 Murray had some success with 'Change Your Mind', and released an album with the same title, which included contemporary songs such as 'Raindrops Keep Falling On My Head', and revamped some of her hits. In 1989 Ruby Murray's EMI Years included other songs regularly featured in her act such as 'Mr. Wonderful', 'Scarlet Ribbons' and 'It's The Irish In Me'. In the 90s, based in Torquay, Devon, with her second husband, impresario Ray Lamar, she was still performing in cabaret and in nostalgia shows with other stars of the 50s right up to her death in 1996.

● ALBUMS: When Irish Eyes Are Smiling (Columbia 1955)★★★, Endearing Young Charms (Columbia 1958)★★★, Ruby (Columbia 1960)★★★, Ruby Murray Successes (1962)★★★, Irish-And Proud Of It (1962)★★★, with various artists St. Patrick's Day (1964)★★★, Your Favourite Colleen (1965)★★★, The Spinning Wheel (1967)★★★, This Is Ireland (1968)★★★, Change Your Mind (1970)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Ruby Murray (EMI 1975)★★★, Very Best Of Ruby Murray (MFP 1984)★★★, Ruby Murray's EMI Years (EMI 1989)★★★.

Murray, Sunny

b. James Marcellus Arthur Murray, 21 September 1937, Idabel, Oklahoma, USA. Murray is probably the most influential and certainly the most controversial drummer to emerge from the 60s new wave. He began to teach himself drums at the age of nine, subsequently flirting briefly with trumpet and trombone. In 1956 he moved to New York and worked with figures as diverse as Henry 'Red' Allen, Willie 'The Lion' Smith, Jackie McLean, Rocky Boyd, Ted Curson and Cecil Taylor. In 1963 he went with Taylor and Jimmy Lyons to Europe, where he joined Albert Ayler in the legendary trio that produced Ghosts and Spiritual Unity. He later played on several more Ayler albums, including New York Eye

And Ear Control, Bells and Spirits Rejoice, while Ayler guested on Murray's debut, Sunny's Time Now. He lived in France from 1968-71, then moved to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA, where he worked with an equally influential drummer from the hard bop era, Philly Joe Jones. In the 70s and 80s Murray remained extremely active, co-leading the Untouchable Factor, running a trio (that included tenor tyro David Murray - no relation) and recording with pianists Don Pullen (Applecores) and Alex Von Schlippenbach (on the duo Smoke) as well as renewing his old association with Cecil Taylor (It Is In The Brewing Luminous) and Jimmy Lyons. A player with an abstract and oblique approach to the beat, paying at least as much attention to the cymbals as the drums, Murray nevertheless creates a strong feeling of pulse for the music. He has played with most of the major figures of avant garde jazz, including Archie Shepp, Ornette Coleman, Don Cherry, John Coltrane, John Tchicai, Roswell Rudd, and Grachan Moncur III.

● ALBUMS: Sunny's Time Now (1966)★★★, Sunny Murray Quintet (1966)★★★, Sunny Murray (ESP 1969)★★★, Big Chief (1969)★★, Homage To Africa (1969)★★★, Sunshine (1969)★★, An Even Break (Never Gives A Sucker) (Affinity 1970)★★★, New American Music Vol. 1 (1973)★★★, with others Wildflowers Vols. 1 & 5 (1977)★★, with Untouchable Factor Charred Earth (1977)★★, Applecores (Philly Jazz 1978), Live At Moers Festival (Moers Music 1979), African Magic (1979)★★★, with Jimmy Lyons Jump Up/What To Do About (1981)★★★, Indelicacy (West Wind 1987)★★★, with Alex Von Schlippenbach Smoke (1990)★★★★.

Mursal, Maryam

b. 1 January 1950, Mogadishu, Somalia. Mursal began singing professionally at 16, performing the mix of blues, soul African and Arabic influences known locally as Somali jazz. Her warm, deep voice initially drew comparisons with American singers such as Etta James. As well as solo performances, she also sang with Waaberi, the 300-strong music and dance troupe associated with the Somalian National Theatre. However, growing political unrest in Somalia led many of the members of Waaberi into exile in different parts of the world. Mursal herself was forced to work as a taxi driver following a national ban on her music, resulting from a song she had written criticizing the government. With the break-out of full-scale civil war, Mursal, fearing for the safety of her family, fled the country with her five young children. Having walked for an incredible seven months, they eventually arrived in Djibouti, where they were given asylum by the Danish Embassy. In Denmark Mursal was reunited with members of Waaberi, who had already settled there, and with whom she recorded New Dawn. It featured Mursal and other vocalists backed by percussion and oud (Arabic lute), performing a mixture of Somalian folk songs and modern material, some of it written by Mursal. The group toured throughout Europe to promote the album in 1997, including a support slot for Nina Simone at London's Barbican Theatre. The Journey, Mursal's international solo debut, was released a year later. A collection of songs relating to her seven-month trek across the Horn of Africa, it featured backing vocals from Peter Gabriel and was produced by Simon Emerson. On the record, the latter developed the fusion of progressive dance music and traditional influences he had previously explored in his work with Baaba Maal and the Afro-Celt Sound System, while at the same time retaining the essential personality of Mursal's music.

● ALBUMS: with Waaberi New Dawn (Real World 1997)★★★, The Journey (Real World 1998)★★★★.

Murtceps

This Australian outfit (aka the Indelible Murtceps) were the alter-ego of the Melbourne group Spectrum, one of Australia's most innovative, experimental bands. Formed in 1971, it allowed the members of Spectrum to sufficiently finance the mother group by performing as a dance band. This 'prostitution of their art' spawned the singles 'We Are Indelible' and 'Indelible Shuffle', and an album on the Harvest label. These uptempo, lighter songs were all original Mike Rudd material. The bands co-existed for 12 months before both were disbanded.

● ALBUMS: Warts Up Your Nose (1973)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Spectrum Testimonial (1973).★★★

Murvin, Junior

b. *c.*1949, Port Antonio, Jamaica, West Indies. Murvin first recorded for producers Sonia Pottinger and Derrick Harriott in the early 70s as Junior Soul (not to be confused with the New York-based reggae singer of the same name). 'Solomon', a traditional Jamaican air, sold fairly well in 1972, but shortly afterwards, Murvin vanished from the public eye. In 1976 he appeared, guitar in hand, at Lee Perry's Black Ark studio in Kingston, with a song on which he had been working for some time. No-one was aware that this singer, now calling himself Junior Murvin, had ever recorded before, but Perry liked what he heard, and within weeks, 'Police And Thieves' was the biggest-selling Jamaican record of the year. Its popularity crossed the Atlantic to the UK and, released on Island Records, it became the anthem for that year's violence-troubled Notting Hill Carnival. Perry recorded another couple of versions of the rhythm before issuing a strong album of the same title in 1977. The single was finally a UK chart hit in 1978. Murvin's Curtis Mayfield-styled falsetto (he covered Mayfield's 'People Get Ready' and 'Closer Together') worked well with Perry's silky, complex arrangements, but the pair never put together another album; Perry was on the verge of a nervous breakdown and subsequently demolished his studio. Murvin moved on to work with Joe Gibbs, Mikey Dread, Henry 'Junjo' Lawes and Prince Jammy, but he has never managed to recapture the spirit of 'Police And Thieves'. Murvin's influence spilled over into rock, however, with the song's right-on, rude-boy image suiting the Clash's first album.

- ALBUMS: Police And Thieves (Island 1977)★★★★, Bad Man Posse (Dread At The Controls 1982)★★★, Muggers In The Street (Greensleeves 1984)★★★★, Apartheid (1986)★★★, Signs And Wonders (Live & Love 1989)★★★.

Muscle Beach Party

This 1964 entry to the American International Pictures production line of 'beach' movies starred genre stalwarts Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello. The path of true love is threatened when the former becomes attracted to a wealthy socialite - much to the chagrin of her body-building beau, Mr. Galaxy - but Avalon returns to Funicello in time for the closing reel. Rising Tamla/Motown star 'Little' Stevie Wonder provides a welcome cameo, performing 'Happy Street', while surf guitar maestro Dick Dale plays the title tune and 'My First Love'. Brian Wilson of the Beach Boys and then-partner Gary Usher composed much of the soundtrack material, including Donna Loren's superbly rumbustuous 'Muscle Bustle'. Annette subsequently re-recorded several songs from the film for a solo outing, Muscle Beach Party, issued on the Disney outlet, Buena Vista.

Muscle Shoals

Situated in Alabama between the focal centres of Nashville and Memphis, Muscle Shoals was the natural melting pot for southern country soul. During the 50s the Fairlanes, who included Rick Hall (b. 31 January 1932, Franklin County, Mississippi, USA) and Billy Sherrill in the line-up, were one of many groups performing in the area. In 1958 the two musicians formed a partnership with Tom Stafford, who ran a basic recording studio in a room above his father's drugstore. Entitled 'Fame: Florence Alabama Music Enterprises', the rudimentary company fell apart two years later, but the terms of the split left Hall with the name while Sherrill travelled to Nashville where he became a successful producer. Hall then purchased a tobacco warehouse in Muscle Shoals and transformed it into a four-track studio. He assembled a house band with David Briggs (piano), Terry Thompson (guitar), Norbert Putnam (bass) and Jerry Carrigan (drums) - and gained a hit with Arthur Alexander's 'You Better Move On'. Having sold the master to Dot Records, Hall moved to larger premises at 603 East Avalon Avenue, where the studio remains situated. Over the next few years Hall established Fame as both a record label and recording centre. Hits for the Tams and Joe Tex cemented its reputation, although the departure to Nashville of Briggs, Putnam and Carrigan was a serious blow. A second classic house band was forged around Jimmy Johnson (guitar), Jimmy Lowe (bass), Spooner Oldham (piano) and Roger Hawkins (drums). Jerry Wexler took Wilson Pickett to Fame in 1966, inaugurating a fruitful period for his Atlantic label and the studio. Many superb sessions followed, including those for Aretha Franklin, King Curtis and Arthur Conley, while newer musicians - Roger Hood (bass) and Duane Allman (guitar) - were drawn into the circle. However, Hall's autocratic approach resulted in a second defection, when Hawkins, Beckett, Johnson and Hood left en masse to found their own set-up, Muscle Shoals Sound, in 1969. Hall continued undeterred but by the 70s, the studio was being increasingly used for pop and country productions. He closed down the Fame label in 1974, and, tired of losing rhythm sections, latterly worked as an executive producer for his song publishing empire. The rival Muscle Shoals Sound was situated at 3614 Jackson Highway in nearby Florence. The new studio initially acquired many of Atlantic's R&B contracts, but diversified into other areas when the label directed its work to Criteria in Miami. Paul Simon, Rod Stewart, the Rolling Stones and Bob Seger were among the many acts to record successfully at Muscle Shoals, enabling the studio to move to a larger site on the banks of the Tennessee River.

Muse

Based in Miami, Florida, USA, Muse comprise Paul Isaac (vocals), Gerson (guitar), Ari (bass) and Brett Thorngren (drums). Formed in 1992, they initially worked in isolation from the local music scene, before establishing an audience with alternative audiences via support slots to touring national bands. Their self-titled debut album was released in May 1995, recorded live in the studio with the final mix overseen by Thorngren's father, Eric Thorngren, a collaborator with Talking Heads, Squeeze and Eurythmics. He described his son's band thus; 'They definitely have their own thing. Creative songs and a real quality of lyrics. It's vulnerable but accessible; it tells a great story.' Released on Miami independent Velocity Records, the album attracted widespread interest among America's major record labels.

- ALBUMS: Muse (Velocity 1995)★★★.

Mushroom Records

Mushroom Records was founded in Australia by Michael Gudinski. The eventual co-owner Gary Ashley joined in 1973, originally as a 'gofer'. Together they built a roster of domestic artists unequalled by any other Antipodean label, but their rise to international prominence only came in the 80s when Kylie Minogue and Jason Donovan, actor/singers drawn from the cast of popular Australian soap opera Neighbours, found huge commercial success in England. Through a licensing arrangement with Pete Waterman's PWL Records, Mushroom achieved 23 Top 30 UK singles and seven Top 10 albums between 1989 and 1992. Added revenues came from a vast back catalogue supplying music for all the major Australian television companies, which were also enjoying a renaissance. However, when they decided to expand into the UK in 1993, they sought partners not with the established outlets, but with News Corporation's highly controversial financial magnate and publisher Rupert Murdoch. News Corporation finalised a 50% stake in Mushroom in July 1994. This allowed an expansion in Mushroom's roster of labels (which includes Infectious and Flying Nun Records - the much revered Australian 'independent', 75% of which was purchased by Mushroom in 1993), and its A&R policy. New signings included Americans Garbage and on Infectious the UK's Ash - artists who brought immediate commercial rewards as well as a strong critical reaction. In the meantime the label maintained its links with such established Australian rock stars as Jimmy Barnes.

Music Box Revue

Irving Berlin and producer Sam H. Harris built their brand new Music Box Theatre on New York's West 45th Street as a showcase for Berlin's prolific output of songs. The composer had contributed many of his early numbers, such as 'A Pretty Girl Is Like A Melody' and 'You'd Be Surprised', to Florenz Ziegfeld's elegant productions, and this lavish revue, a stylish mixture of comedy and songs, was the first of four annual editions to play at his own cosy 1,010-seater Music Box. It opened on 22 September 1921, with a cast that included William Collier, Wilda Bennett, Paul Frawley, Ivy Sawyer, Joseph Santley, Sam Bernard, and the Brox Sisters. Berlin himself, made a brief appearance in a scene with Miriam Hopkins, an actress who went on to a successful Hollywood career in the 30s, in films such as Dr Jekyll And Mr Hyde, Trouble In Paradise, and Becky Sharp. 'Say It With Music' was the show's outstanding number, sung by Bennett and Frawley, and it became a recurring theme during the rest of the series. The other songs included 'Everybody Step', 'The Schoolhouse Blues', 'In A Cozy Kitchenette Apartment', 'My Little Book Of Poetry', 'They Call It Dancing', and 'The Legend Of The Pearls'. Hassard Short, who was just starting out on a career during which he would be acclaimed for his imaginative design and staging, was responsible for this show, and the next two, giving way to John Murray Anderson for the final edition. Short's innovative work was recognized as a major factor in the Music Box Revue's impressive run of 440 performances. The 1922 production marked the Broadway debut of several future Broadway favourites, including the actor and singer William Gaxton, who later made a habit of appearing in musicals with one of America's most cherished clowns, Victor Moore, and the comedy team of ex-vaudevillians Bobby Clark and Paul McCullough. Comedienne Charlotte Greenwood, another artist who subsequently spent much of her time in Hollyood and will be remembered particularly for her portrayal of Aunt Eller in the film of Oklahoma!, was also in the cast, along with Grace La Rue, Margaret and Dorothy McCarthy, and the Fairbanks Twins. The songs included 'I'm Looking For A Daddy Long Legs', 'Crinoline Days', 'Will She Come From The East?', 'Pack Up Your Sins And Go To The Devil', and 'Lady Of The Evening', and the show ran for 330 performances. The Music Box Revue of 1923 - Mark III - had some sketches by George S. Kaufman and Robert Benchley, who also personally introduced his famous 'Treasurer's Report'. Among the rest of the cast were Frank Tinney, Joseph Santley, and Ivy Sawyer. Grace Moore, who sang with the Metropolitan Opera in the late 20s, had the charming 'Tell Me A Bedtime Story', and 'The Waltz Of Long Ago', and she duettted with John Steel on 'An Orange Grove In California' and the plaintive 'What'll I Do?'. The latter song, one of Berlin's all-time standards, was interpolated during the run of the show. Audiences for these revues were gradully declining - the 1923 version ran for 273 performances, and the final, 1924 edition, only lasted for 184. For that one, Moore was back again, as were Clarke and McCullough, along with Claire Luce, Carl Randall, and Ula Sharon. The star was funny girl Fanny Brice, who sang 'Don't Send Me Back To Petrograd' and 'I Want To Be A Ballet Dancer'. Moore had the lovely 'Tell Her In Springtime' and 'Rockabye Baby', and, with Oscar Shaw, she also introduced the wistful 'All Alone'. The 1923 edition also played at the Palace Theatre in London, where it starred Jessie Matthews, Fred Duprez, and Joseph Santley. This series of shows served as a launching pad for Irving Berlin's long and illustrious career which peaked with Annie Get Your Gun in 1946, but endured for much longer than that.

Music Explosion

Formed in Ohio, USA. Jamie Lyons (lead vocals), Don (Tudor) Atkins (lead guitar), Rick Nesta (rhythm guitar), Butch Stahl (bass guitar/organ) and Bob Avery (harmonia) sprang to fame in 1967 with 'Little Bit O' Soul' which reached number 2 in the US chart. This driving, irresistible song was written by UK songwriting duo John Carter and Ken Lewis and had originally been recorded, unsuccessfully, by the Little Darlings. The Music Explosion secured another minor hit with 'Sunshine Games', but were unable to sustain a permanent career and the group was subsequently absorbed into the Kasenetz/Katz 'bubblegum' circus. Singer Lyons later emerged in the Capitol City Rockets, an early 70s anglophile pop band whose lone album was critically acclaimed.

● ALBUMS: Little Bit O' Soul (1967)★★★★.

Music For A New Society - John Cale

Music For A New Society remains an uneasy listening experience 16 years after it was first released, a compelling aural snapshot of John Cale's chaotic state of mind in 1982. Harking back to his training in the avant garde, Cale used improvisational methods of composition learned from John Cage and LaMonte Young to provide a sparse musical backdrop to the emotional nihilism of his lyrics. On tracks such as 'Thoughtless Kind', 'If You Were Still Around', 'Damn Life' and 'Sanities', Cale fashioned some of modern music's most desperately passionate postcards from the edge. True to form, he followed it with the vacuous Caribbean Sunset.

- Tracks: Taking Your Life In Your Hands; Thoughtless Kind; Sanities; If You Were Still Around; (I Keep) A Close Watch; Broken Bird; Chinese Envoy; Changes Made; Damn Life; Risé, Sam And Rimsky-Korsakov.
- First released 1982
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Music For the Jilted Generation - Prodigy

The band who stand to give the much maligned English county of Essex a 'good' reputation, Prodigy succeed where Ian Dury And The Blockheads and Brian Poole And The Tremeloes failed, i.e., achieving worldwide acceptance and success. Braintree worked where Billericay and Dagenham failed. Their aggressive, original and extraordinarily exciting style of dance music has created a thousand imitators. Although this record has since been overshadowed by the international success of The Fat Of The Land, it is still a vital record for students of 90s techno/dance. Prodigy lead their pack by a mile.

- Tracks: Intro; Break & Enter; Their Law; Full Throttle; Voodoo People; Speedway; The Heat (The Energy); Poison; No Good (Start The Dance); One Love: The Narcotic Suite; 3 Kilos; Skylines; Claustrophobic Sting.
- First released 1994
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Music for The Masses - Depeche Mode

One of the bands that not only dominated the charts for most of the 80s, but they also typified the type of music that will be looked back on as 'the sound of the 80s'. Their Germanic electronic pop became softer on this album. They were becoming more of a band, and they were 'rockin', just a little. keyboards still dominated but the melody seemed less regimented. Vocalist Dave Gahan excelled, as his voice grew in power. In a year or two they would become stadium rock stars, and change forever. The reissued CD has a number of excellent bonus tracks including some interesting remixed material.

- Tracks: Never Let Me Down Again; The Things You Said; Strangelove; Sacred; Little 15; Behind The Wheel; I Want You Now; To Have And To Hold; Nothing; Pimpf; Agent Orange; Never Let Me Down Again (Aggro Mix); To Have And To Hold (Spanish Taster); Pleasure Little Treasure (Glitter Mix).
- First released 1987
- UK peak chart position: 10
- USA peak chart position: 35

Music From Big Pink - The Band

The Band emerged from months of seclusion with this enthralling debut album. It followed a lengthy spell accompanying Bob Dylan, which culminated in sessions known as The Basement Tapes. Three songs herein were revived from those recordings, and the remainder showed a similar pastoral spirit. Where contemporaries sought expression in progressive music, the Band were largely reflective, creating atmosphere from traditional forms and distilling the results in an economic style. Their ensemble playing and rural voices were best captured on 'The Weight', an elliptical composition which displayed their craft to perfection. Americana of every hue can be gleaned from this collection, the depth of which left a marked impression on audiences and musicians alike.

- Tracks: Tears Of Rage; To Kingdom Come; In A Station; Caledonia Mission; The Weight; We Can Talk; Long Black Veil; Chest Fever; Lonesome Suzie; Wheels On Fire; I Shall Be Released.
- First released 1968
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 30

Music In A Doll's House - Family

From the opening Jim King falsetto on 'The Chase' to the quirky 'God Save The Queen' ending, Music From A Doll's House never flags. In 1968 King's saxophone and Ric Grech's violin were imaginative additions to the standard band profile, and their playing was skin-tight. With the strangled vibrato of Roger Chapman's vocals - still one of rock's most astonishing performers - Family created a power that has rarely been matched. 'Old Songs New Songs' is a great rocker in anyone's book (why fade it in mid-flight?), and 'Voyage' presents a classic slice of psychedelia. Over-produced (by Dave Mason) it may be, but as a debut album there are few equals of its time.

- Tracks: The Chase; Mellowing Grey; Never Like This; Me My Friend; 'Variation On A Theme Of Hey Mr Policeman; Winter; Old Songs New Songs; 'Variation On A Theme Of The Breeze; Hey Mr. Policeman; See Through Windows; 'Variation On A Theme Of Me My Friend; Peace Of Mind; Voyage; Breeze; 3 X Time.
- First Released 1968
- UK peak chart position: 35
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Music In The Air

This delightful musical comedy, with just a hint of operetta, and a score by Jerome Kern and Oscar Hammerstein, opened at the Alvin Theatre in New York on 8 November 1932. With America staggering to its feet following the terrible Depression, Hammerstein chose to set the story in modern-day Bavaria. Music teacher Dr. Walter Lessing (Al Shean) travels from his home in Edenhorf to the the big city of Munich, in an effort to impress an old colleague with his new composition, 'I've Told Ev'ry Little Star'. He is accompanied by his daughter, Sieglinde (Katherine Carrington), who loves to perform her father's compositions, and her friend, Karl (Walter Slezak). They are all introduced to the fiery actress and singer, Frieda Hatzfeld (Natalie Hall), who is rehearsing a musical show which has been written by her long-time lover, Bruno Mahler (Tullio Carminati). When Frieda flounces out just before the opening night, Bruno, who is quite partial to the young Sieglinde, tells her to 'go out there and come back a star'. Unfortunately, the young girl is totally lacking in star quality, and she and her father realise this, and decide to return to their quiet life in the country. The score is regarded as one of Kern's finest, with the songs skifully and sympathetically integrated into the plot. They included 'The Song Is You', 'There's A Hill Beyond A Hill', 'One More Dance', 'In Egern On The Tegern Sea', 'And Love Was Born', 'I'm Alone', 'I Am So Eager', 'We Belong Together', 'When Spring Is In The Air', and, of course, 'I've Told Ev'ry Little Star', which was introduced by Walter Slezak. Music In The Air's Broadway run of 342 performances was followed by a further 275 in London, where Mary Ellis took the role of Frieda. The show returned to New York, with a revised book, for a brief spell in 1951. The 1934 film version starred Gloria Swanson, John Boles and Al Shean.

Music Machine

Formed in 1965 as the Ragamuffins by Sean Bonniwell (b. 1940, San Jose, California, USA; vocals/guitar), Keith Olsen (bass) and Ron Edgar (drums), the group became the Music Machine on the addition of Mark Landon (guitar) and Doug Rhodes (organ). The quintet is best recalled for a magnificent 1966 release, 'Talk Talk', one of the most exciting singles to emerge from America's garage-band genre. Several further excellent releases followed, all of which were penned by Bonniwell. Mismanagement prevented the group from achieving the success of contemporaries the Seeds, the Doors or Love, and the original members began to drift away. Holly McKinley (organ), Joe Bludd (guitar), Fred Thomas (bass) and Jerry Thomas (drums), augmented Sean for the Music Machine's later releases and the group's second album, Bonniwell Music Machine, featured material from both line-ups. Bonniwell subsequently abandoned the name and released a solo album, T.S. Bonniwell, in 1970. Following years of inactivity, the singer became a born-again Christian, and relaunched his career at the end of the 80s. Of the original line-up, Keith Olsen later became a successful producer for Fleetwood Mac and the Grateful Dead, while Edgar and Rhodes worked with several Los Angeles-based studio groups, including Sagittarius and the Millenium.

- ALBUMS: (Turn On) The Music Machine (Original Sound 1966)★★★, The Bonniwell Music Machine (Warners 1968)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The Music Machine (Rhino 1985)★★★.

Music Man, The (film musical)

Despite studio chief Jack Warner's efforts to get a male superstar such as Cary Grant to play the lead, Robert Preston was eventually invited to recreate his magnificent Broadway performance for this enjoyable screen version which was released in 1962. So, film-goers the world over were able to enjoy the sight of Professor Harold Hill (Preston), a con-man of the highest order, who descends on the town Iowa with the intention of selling (non-existent) musical instruments to the parents of the parish in order that their children can form a brass band - which he will lead. Such is his charm, that, after overcoming the initial resistance of Marion Paroo (Shirley Jones), the Balzac-loving librarian, they not only fall in love, but he is absolved of all charges of deception after deciding not to make a run for it after all. There were some lovely performances in the supporting roles, such as the Professor's assistant and look-out man (Buddy Hackett), the always-blustering mayor (Paul Ford) and his lady wife (Hermione Gingold), and Marion's mother-with-the-blarney (Pert Kelton). Other parts were played by Ronnie Howard, Timmy Everett, Susan Luckey, Mary Wickes, and the harmonising Buffalo Bills. Meredith Willson's songs were all gems in their way, and included 'Rock Island', 'Iowa Stubborn', 'Piano Lesson', 'If You Don't Mind Me Saying So', 'Goodnight My Someone', 'Sincere', 'The Sadder But Wiser Girl', 'Pick-A-Little, Talk-A-Little', 'Marion The Librarian', 'Being In Love', 'Gary, Indiana', 'The Wells Fargo Wagon', 'Lida Rose', 'Will I Ever Tell You?', 'Shipoopi', and 'Till There Was You'. Preston's musical highspot came with 'Ya Got Trouble', in which he warned the population about the perils of having a pool table in their midst, and, in the film's exuberant finalé, he was at the head of the procession during the rousing 'Seventy Six Trombones'. Onna White was the choreographer, and musical director Ray Heindorf won an Oscar for his scoring. Marion Hargrove's screenplay was adapted from Meredith Willson's stage libretto. The producer-director was Morton DaCosta, and the film was shot in Technicolor and Technirama. There was some dismay at the time that Barbara Cook, who created the role of Marion on stage, was not asked to repeat her role on the screen. As it transpired, Shirley Jones was fine - and Robert Preston sensational.

Music Man, The (stage musical)

This musical came to the Majestic Theatre in New York on 19 December 1957 after experiencing a good many difficulties out of town. With book, music and lyrics by Meredith Willson, the show had undergone several rewrites but the author's persistence paid off, and on the opening night the audience was caught up in the revivalist enthusiasm of the show's characters. The story concerns Harold Hill, an itinerant con man who persuades the citizens of River City, Iowa, that what they need is a boys' band. He offers to teach them to play - and even to supply the instruments. Naturally, not even a penny whistle materializes. The Music Man was filled with engaging old-fashioned charm with songs ranging from the soulful 'Goodnight, My Someone' and 'Till There Was You' to the rousing 'Seventy-Six Trombones', by way of 'Marian The Librarian', 'Shipoopi', 'My White Knight', 'The Sadder-But-Wiser Girl', 'Pick-A-Little, Talk-A-Little', 'Gary, Indiana', 'Wells Fargo Wagon', 'Sincere' ('How can there be any sin in sincere?/Where is the good in goodbye'), 'Piano Lesson' and 'Lida Rose'/'Will I Ever Tell You'. In casting film actor Robert Preston, who had never before danced or sung, in the central role of Harold Hill, the producers took a big chance, as many of Willson's songs were far more complex than they appeared on the surface. As it turned out, it was inspired casting, with Preston ably charming his way through a minefield of counter-melodies, rhythmic dialogue and strutting dance routines to earn rapturous applause and critical praise. He had a tour de force with 'Trouble', a grim warning regarding the moral danger of introducing a pool table into the community ('That game with the fifteen numbered balls is the Devil's tool'). Co-starring with Preston was Barbara Cook as Marion Paroo; other cast members included David Burns, Iggie Wolfington, Helen Raymond, Pert Kelton, and The Buffalo Bills. The show enjoyed success, and won Tony Awards for best musical, actor (Preston), featured actress (Cook), featured actor (Burns) and musical director (Herbert Green). Several companies toured the USA, and the show was also staged in Europe; the 1961 London production, which ran for 395 performances, starred Hollywood heart-throb Van Johnson. Revivals were presented on Broadway in 1965, 1980 and 1993. A film version was released in 1962 with Shirley Jones as Marian and, thankfully, Robert Preston, thus allowing millions to appreciate the exuberance of his magnificent, larger-than-life performance as Professor Harold Hill.

Musical Youth

Formed at Duddeston Manor School, Birmingham, England, this pop/reggae-influenced group featured two sets of brothers, Kelvin and Michael Grant and Junior and Patrick Waite (b. *c.*1969, d. 18 February 1993). The latter pair's father, Frederick Waite, was a former member of Jamaican group the Techniques, and sang lead with Junior at the start of the group's career in the late 70s. Although schoolboys, the group managed to secure gigs at certain Birmingham pubs and released a single, 'Political'/'Generals', on local label 021 Records. An appearance on BBC disc jockey John Peel's evening show brought further attention to the group and they were signed to MCA Records. By that time, founding father Frederick Waite had backed down to be replaced by Dennis Seaton as lead singer. During the winter of 1982, the group issued one of the fastest-selling singles of the year in 'Pass The Dutchie'. Based on the Mighty Diamonds' 'Pass The Kouchie' (a song about marijuana), the title had been subtly altered to feature the patois 'dutchie' (literally a 'cooking pot'). The infectious enthusiasm of the group's performance captured the public's imagination and propelled the record to number 1 in the UK charts. A US Top 10 hit also followed. The catchy follow-up, 'Youth Of Today', also reached the UK Top 20 and early in 1983 'Never Gonna Give You Up' climbed to number 6. Minor successes with 'Heartbreaker' and 'Tell Me Why' were succeeded by a surprise collaboration with Donna Summer on the UK Top 20 hit 'Unconditional Love'. A revival of Desmond Dekker's '007' saw them back in the Top 30, but after one final hit with 'Sixteen', they fell from commercial grace and subsequently split up in 1985 when Seaton left the band. Plans to re-form were scotched when Patrick Waite, who had gone on to a career of juvenile crime, died of natural causes while awaiting a court appearance on drug charges. The Grant brothers remain involved in music, while Seaton released a solo set in 1989 before going on to form his own band, XMY.

● ALBUMS: The Youth Of Today (MCA 1982)★★★, Different Style (MCA 1983)★★.

Solo: Dennis Seaton Imagine That (Bellaphon 1989)★★.

● FURTHER READING: Musical Youth: Their Own Story, no editor listed.

Musicraft Records

The company began recording jazz in the mid-40s. Guided by Albert Marx, Musicraft reissued much of the Guild catalogue of early bop recordings. Musicraft's mainstream roster was impressive, including Artie Shaw, Duke Ellington, Sarah Vaughan and Georgie Auld, while bop was represented by Dizzie Gillespie and others. In the early 50s, Musicraft was sold to Pickwick and its fortunes declined. In the late 70s, Marx reissued some of Musicraft's most important material on his Trend and Discovery labels.

Musselwhite, Charlie

b. 31 January 1944, Mississippi, USA. Musselwhite grew up in Memphis where he was inspired to learn harmonica by hearing Sonny Terry on the radio. In 1962, Musselwhite moved to Chicago, performing with Johnny Young, Big Joe Williams and J.B. Hutto. He also linked up with another white blues musician, Mike Bloomfield, before the latter went on to join Paul Butterfield's group. Musselwhite then emigrated to California, making his first solo recordings for Vanguard. From 1974-75 he made two albums for Chris Strachwitz's Arhoolie label and later cut an instructional record for Stefan Grossman's Kickin' Mule. A growing reputation made Musselwhite a favourite on the festival circuits in the USA and Europe. Mellow Dee was recorded during a German tour while Cambridge Blues was recorded live at Britain's leading folk festival for Mike Vernon's Blue Horizon label. In 1990, Musselwhite joined Alligator, where John Lee Hooker guested on his 1991 album. Although heavily influenced by Little Walter, Louis Myers and Junior Wells, Musselwhite has made his own niche and is probably today's most popular white blues harmonica player.

● ALBUMS: Stand Back, Here Comes Charlie Musselwhite (Vanguard 1967)★★★, Charlie Musselwhite (Vanguard 1968)★★★★, Stone Blues (Vanguard 1968)★★★, Tennessee Woman (Vanguard 1969)★★★, Memphis, Tennessee

(Vanguard 1969)★★★, Taking My Time (Arhoolie 1974)★★★, Going Back Down South (Arhoolie 1975)★★★, The Harmonica According To Charlie Musselwhite (Kickin' Mule 1979)★★★, Curtain Call (Red Lightnin' 1982)★★★, Memphis, Tennessee (Crosscut 1984)★★★, Mellow Dee (Crosscut 1986)★★, Cambridge Blues (Blue Horizon 1988)★★, Tell Me Where Have All The Good Times Gone (Blue Rock-It 1988)★★★, Ace Of Harps (Alligator 1990)★★★★, Signature (Alligator 1991)★★★, Memphis Charlie (Alligator 1993)★★★★, In My Time ... (Alligator 1994)★★★, Rough News (Pointblank 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Blues Never Die (Vanguard 1994)★★★.

Musso, Vido

b. 13 January 1913, Carrini, Sicily, d. 9 January 1982. Musso's family emigrated to the USA in 1920, settling in Detroit, where he began playing clarinet. Relocating to Los Angeles in 1930, he became friendly with Stan Kenton and the two men worked together in various bands, including one led by Musso and one they co-led. In the mid-30s Musso, by now playing tenor saxophone, joined Benny Goodman and thereafter played in the big bands of Gene Krupa, Harry James, Tommy Dorsey and others, rejoining Kenton in 1946. He stayed only a year and then formed another band of his own, continuing to lead jazz-orientated dancebands until the mid-50s. An entirely untutored musician, Musso's powerful, buzzing sound and aggressive solo style inclined him to the more extrovert areas of jazz and big band music. Untouched by the changes which took place in jazz in the 40s, Musso became something of an anachronism and for the rest of his career he played in relatively obscure settings, often in Las Vegas show bands.

● ALBUMS: Vido Musso And His Orchestra i (1954)★★★, Vido Musso And His Orchestra ii (c.1955)★★★, One Night Stand With Vido Musso (Savoy 1982, 1947 recording)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Indispensable Benny Goodman Vols 3/4 (RCA 1936-37 recordings)★★★★, Stan Kenton's Greatest Hits (1943-51 recordings)★★★★, Vido Musso's All Stars (1946 recordings), Loaded (Savoy 1993)★★★.

Mussolini, Romano

b. Full Mussolini, 26 September 1927, Carpena, Forli, Italy. The son of the fascist dictator Benito Mussolini, who was executed by partisans at the end of World War II, he played piano under a pseudonym in his early years. By the early 50s he was becoming known outside Italy thanks to festival appearances and his work as an accompanist to visiting jazzmen. Among the visitors were Lars Gullin and Chet Baker (reportedly, Baker, worried over how to handle his first meeting with Mussolini, stuck out his hand and blurted out, 'Sorry to hear about your Dad!'). Mussolini regularly led his own small groups, usually playing in a boppish mode; he also developed a technically accomplished solo style.

● ALBUMS: Topsy (RCA 1957)★★★.

Mustafov, Ferus

Mustafov is the leading exponent of gypsy wedding music in Macedonia, a style of music which is propelled by electric bass and guitar, drums, keyboards and accordion, all competing to reach ever more dizzying speeds. A saxophonist and clarinettist, Mustafov, based in Sutka, the gypsy suburb of Macedonian capital Skopje (population approximately 50,000) comes from a traditional gypsy music family. Indeed his father, the celebrated Ilimi Jasarov, was the first to introduce saxophone to the wedding music format. Since the early 70s he has released a substantial body of work documented by a vast (generally cassette only) discography. Ora i Coceci is one of the best examples, pairing the artist with simple accordion and bass guitar backing as he embarks on a series of taksmis, or improvisations. Each of these releases regularly sells over 100,000 copies, but Mustafov is distinct from much of the rest of the gypsy community by dint of his advocacy of unstinting application (he is practically unique in abstaining from alcohol) and divergence from established approaches. In the late 80s he built his own six-track studio in his bedroom, using it to record a compilation of gypsy artists from the area titled Ferus Mustafov & His Guests: 1 + 4 - a best-selling album featuring Kurtis Jasarov, Medo Cun and Demir Agusev in addition to himself and his father. Though still only available on cassette, it achieved domestic sales equivalent to a platinum award. He started his own label, FM Records, in 1992, purchasing improved studio equipment and relocating his studio. This allowed him to record the excellent Najgolemi Hitovi (The Biggest Hits) in 1993, where his recent experiments in delay, sustain and echo were married to contemplative clarinet passages influenced by Turkish/Muslim clarinettist Mustafa Kanirali. Mustafov also works as the musical editor for the gypsy programming at TV Macedonia, though his selection of artists has earned scorn from the more puritanical members of the Macedonian gypsy community, who consider Bulgarian and Turkish influences in his music and personal tastes to be dilution of his heritage. Despite this, and the fact that many critics reserve judgement on his output since the mid-80s, he is undoubtedly the music's most famed and important protagonist.

● ALBUMS: Ora i Coceci (Horas And Belly Dance Music) (RTB 1984)★★★, with various artists Ferus Mustafov & His Guests: 1 + 4 (Diskos 1989)★★★★, Najgolemi Hitovi (The Biggest Hits) (FM 1993)★★★★, King Ferus (Globestyle 1995)★★★.

Musto And Bones

A highly successful, albeit brief, liaison between Tommy Musto and Frankie Bones, which resulted in success with singles such as 'Dangerous On The Dance Floor' and 'All I Want Is To Get Away'. In retrospect 'Dangerous' might well have achieved more signifcant crossover success had it been more fully backed by the duo's record company, with a long time delay between its UK and domestic release. The partnership eventually dissolved after a solitary album as Bones spent more of his time DJing, while Musto remained in New York to oversee their company and studio projects: 'Basically, we also grew apart musically' is how Musto remembers this period. He would go on to become a hugely successful remixer to the stars, while his former partner persevered on the live circuit. The duo were still contracted to Beggars Banquet for another album, however, and subtle, but amicable, litigation proceeded until Bones could be removed from the contract, Musto offering instead his collaboration with Victor Simonelli, Colourblind.

● ALBUMS: The Future Is Ours (Citybeat 1990)★★★.

Musto, Tommy

b. c.1963, New York, USA. Formerly recognised for his hit singles as part of Musto And Bones, under his own steam Musto has grown to become one of dance music's prime remixing talents, with close to half a century of projects under his belt. These include many major artists attempting to dip a toe into the world of dance (Michael Jackson, Gloria Estefan, Cyndi Lauper, Erasure). Musto grew up on a diet of Philly soul, before going on to present his own mix show on WAKT alongside the then-underground talents of Shep Pettibone and Tony Humphries on Kiss FM. He began remixing for other artists, the first example of which was Junior Byron's 'Woman' for Vanguard Records, and also taught himself keyboard skills. His first major label commission was S'Express' 'Nothing To Lose' in the early 90s. His biggest commercial break, however, was the opportunity to remix Michael Jackson's 'In The Closet', which went gold. In 1994 he formed Colourblind with Victor Simonelli, partially to satisfy a contract that was still extant between his former Musto And Bones partnership and Beggars Banquet. After removing Bones from the contract, he teamed with Simonelli and added first Barbara Tucker then Dina Roche. They initially provided a single, written and produced by Musto, 'He's So Fine', before an album scheduled for late 1994. He also runs the Northcott Productions empire, home to Experimental Records.

Mutabaruka

b. Allan Hope, Jamaica, West Indies. Hope is a dub poet who combines social commentary with scathing personal analysis and endearing humour. Having published several volumes of poetry and having written for Swing magazine, Mutabaruka (his stage name is a Rwandan term for 'one who is always victorious') reserves his performances for his most effective tirades against hypocrisy, injustice, or more particularly, stupidity. His favoured means of denouncing his enemies rests strongly with the latter, vilifying them and the contradictions of their positions by means of a languid, inviting slur. His debut album for Earl 'Chinna' Smith's High Times label was a genre classic. Muta tore through a set that railed against oppression on all fronts, aided and abetted by Smith's imaginative rhythms and arrangements. 'Everytime A Ear De Soun', from the album, was also a hit as a single. In the interim he has ensured his position as Jamaica's most popular radical poet, with a series of inspiring albums. Despite such militancy, he retains his day job - running a health food store in Jamaica and broadcasting on Jamaica's Irie FM radio station The Cutting Edge. He also appeared in the film Sankofa.

● ALBUMS: Check It (High Times 1982)★★★★, The Mystery Unfolds (Shanachie 1986)★★★, Out Cry (Shanachie 1987)★★★, Any Which Way (Greensleeves 1989)★★★, Blakk Wi Black ... Kkk (Shanachie 1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Ultimate Collection (Shanachie 1996)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live At Reggae Sumfest (Shanachie 1996).

Mute Records

Daniel Miller's brainchild was originally set up for a single under the guise of the Normal. 'T.V.O.D.'/'Warm Leatherette' became the first Mute single in early 1978, a pioneering utilization of electronics that paved the way for Mute's alignment with synthesized and hi-tech sounds. Several hundred albums later, Mute's singular artistic identity and experimental approach still cut a distinctive chord through an apathetic music industry. Along with Factory and Rough Trade Records, Mute has demonstrated an ability to combine aesthetic autonomy with survival. Among the label's early group roster were Fad Gadget, DAF and Depeche Mode. It was the success of the latter that convinced many that a post-punk independent label could succeed in producing a consistent chart act. Despite the offers made to the group from major labels, Depeche Mode resisted any temptation to move - a tribute to Miller's business acumen and his faith in Depeche Mode's artistic growth. The label has also been greatly assisted by ex-Depeche Mode member Vince Clark's series of projects from Yazoo through to Erasure. Owing to Depeche Mode and Erasure's continuing international success, Mute has been able to finance less commercial acts such as Laibach, Crime And The City Solution, Diamanda Galas and Nitzer Ebb. The label's acquisition of the back catalogues of Cabaret Voltaire, Can and Throbbing Gristle also ensured the continued availability of these seminal artists' output. In the 90s a subsidiary operation dealing with dance and techno, Novamute, was established, dealing with forerunning experimental artists such as Moby. On a more conventional front the parent label also signed the Inspiral Carpets, but the long-standing artist to best combine critical and commercial approbation has undoubtedly been Nick Cave.

● COMPILATIONS: International (Mute 1991)★★★.

Mutiny!

It started with a concept album, this musical adaptation of Mutiny On The Bounty - a marketing ploy which had been used successfully by several authors and composers in the 70s, notably Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice. This time it was the British actor and singer David Essex who was behind the release of the 1983 recording of Mutiny!, which spawned his Top 10 hit 'Tahiti'. Essex wrote the music and collaborated with librettist Richard Crane on the lyrics for the stage production which eventually sailed into the Piccadilly Theatre in London on 18 July 1985. The distinguished actor Frank Finlay played Captain Bligh, with Essex as Fletcher Christian, but the main character was a fully rigged HMS Bounty which was mounted on an hydraulic system and spectacularly recreated the high seas by rocking and rolling the entire stage to and fro. The score turned out to be 'a sequence of pastiche modal folk songs, shanties, ominous marches, and one effectively syncopated hornpipe', and included 'New World', 'Friends', 'Failed Cape Horn', 'Saucy Sal', 'Will You Come Back?', 'Falling Angels Riding', 'I'll Go No More A-Roving', and, of course, 'Tahiti'. First night reviews such as 'Bounty in blunderland . . . caught in the doldrums . . . a very leaky showboat' should really have heralded the end of the voyage, but Mutiny! rode the storm for a considerable time. Just as it was about to be recast with the American pop singer David Cassidy taking over from Essex, the show floundered and closed in September 1986 after a run of 526 performances without recovering its investment.

Mutton Birds

Comprising Alan Gregg (bass), Ross Burge (guitar), Don McGlashan (vocals, guitar) and David Long (drums), New Zealand's Mutton Birds were formed when vocalist McGlashan pieced together the band from colleagues with whom he had worked in various local Auckland groups. One of his many previous outfits, Blam Blam Blam, had supported Split Enz in their early days, and the connection with the Finn brothers would later serve them well. In-between those early bands and Mutton Birds he had also worked extensively in film and theatre. The group released its debut album in 1992, building on McGlashan's 60s influences of the Beatles, Kinks, Byrds and early Pink Floyd. Its pastoral, understated pop motif encouraged comparisons with R.E.M. and won them two 1993 New Zealand Music Industry Awards for Best Group and Best Album. The subsequent Salty again saw Crowded House's Neil Finn co-produce. Drawn from it, 'Anchor Me' secured a major domestic songwriting award as well as enthusiastic local press. Its success led to an international contract with Virgin Records, who issued a compilation of the best of both albums titled Nature, and prompted a move to England to pursue their career. McGlashan remained philosophical about the merits of New Zealand's domestic music scene: 'You'll never get rich being a musician in New Zealand, so there's no incentive to follow fashion. As a result, you form a band and you play the music you care most about, with no commercial pressure to do anything else.'

● ALBUMS: The Mutton Birds (1992)★★★, Salty (1993)★★★, Envy Of Angels (Virgin 1997)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Nature (Virgin 1995)★★★.

Mutukudzi, Oliver

b. 1952, Harare, Zimbabwe. Along with Thomas Mapfumo, 'Tuku' Mtukudzi, and his band the Black Spirits, has played one of the most prominent roles in the modernization of traditional Zimbabwean music, mixing African-American soul with mbira and other traditional beats. He recorded his first single, 'Pezuna', in 1976, after which he joined the Wagon Wheels Band, and recorded his first major hit, 'Dzandimometera'. The band was steeped in Zairean rumba, then hugely popular in Zimbabwe, and in 1977 Mtukudzi, keen to reflect more of Zimbabwe's culture in his music, left to form the Black Spirits. The band released their first album, Ndipeyiozano, in 1978. In 1979, when the wartime curfew and travel restrictions were lifted, Mtukudzi took the Black Spirits on the road and built up substantial followings in Zambia, Botswana and Malawi. Recent albums have offered a mixture of reggae, soul and deeper Zimbabwean sounds like the mbakumba and katekwe, helping to maintain Mtukudzi's position as one of Zimbabwe's great innovators. Although Mapfumo earns most of the international plaudits, Mtukudzi regularly outsells that artist at home in Zimbabwe, where he is the undisputed king (earning over 35 gold discs for domestic sales by 1990).

● ALBUMS: Africa (BL 1980)★★★★, Pfambi (BL 1981),★★★ Wawona (ZC 1982)★★★, Hwena Handirase (BL 1984)★★★, Sugar Pie (CSA 1989)★★★, Pass Pass Hello (CSA 1990)★★★, Shoko (Pirahna 1992)★★★★, Kuvaira (1993)★★★★, Ziwere MuKobenhavn (Shava 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (BL 1983)★★★★.

μ-Ziq

Based in South London, England, μ-Ziq is effectively studio musician Mike Paradinas, though he has also worked in tandem with Francis Naughton. Both were students when they first met the Aphex Twin, Richard James, who invited them to join his new Rephlex Records imprint. Unlike the aforementioned ambient guru, neither were technocrats, preferring an organic, untutored approach to the creation of cerebral dance music. Their debut double album was recorded using only synthesizers, a beatbox, and a four-track mixer. Within a few months of studio time μ-Ziq claimed to have over 300 completed tracks sitting on the shelf, an output that threatened to eclipse even their mentor's notorious profligacy. By 1995's In Pine Effect, the first result of a new distribution deal for Paradinas' own label within the Virgin Records empire, he was effectively a solo artist. He had also found time to record as Gary Moscheles And The Badass Motherfunkers (in a jazz funk vein) and Jake Slazenger (for the underground dance label Clear Records).

● ALBUMS: Tango N' Vectif (Rephlex 1994)★★★, In Pine Effect (Planet μ/Virgin 1995)★★.

Muzsikás

This Hungarian group features Márta Sebestyén (vocals/recorder), Sándor Csoóri (bagpipes/hurdy-gurdy/viola/vocals), Mihaly Sipos (violin/zither/vocals), Péter Eri (bouzouki/turkish horn/cello/viola/vocals) and Dániel Hamar (bass/hurdy-gurdy/vocals). The ensemble specializes in traditional music from the Transylvania region of their country. Prior to 1987 Sebestyén had performed in the UK with a band called Mosaic. While still young, Sebestyén had heard her mother singing folk songs, so the interest in folk music passed on. Having won a competition at the age of 13, she was awarded a record player, which enabled her to listen to a wider sphere of music. The style of music Muzsikás play is often patronizingly called 'gypsy music', but it is far more than just a tourist attraction. Changing from a high-speed dance one minute, to a slow and melancholy air, the music covers a whole range of emotions and tempos. Péter Eri had previously played with a group called Sebo, where he learned much about the background to folk music. The original Muzsikás was a trio consisting of Sipos, Hamar and Csoóri. Eri joined them in 1978 after leaving Sebo. They recorded Muzsikas Ketto in Holland, but were not satisfied with the singer who had joined on lead vocals, so they asked Sebestyén to join them in 1979. A number of earlier recordings, from 1976-82, for the state-run label Hungaroton, are no longer available, but with the growing interest in Eastern European folk music, the possibility of re-releases seems likely. Sebestyén is also a celebrated solo artist.

● ALBUMS: Living Hungarian Folk Music Volume1 (1978)★★★★, Kettö (1979)★★★, The Prisoner's Song (1986)★★★, Nem Arról Hajnallik, Amerről Hajnallot (1986)★★★, Márta Sebestyén With Muzsikas (1987)★★★★, Blues For Transylvania (1990)★★★, Maramaros - The Lost Jewish Music Of Transylvania (1993)★★, Morning Star (Hannibal 1998)★★★.

MX-80 Sound

Bruce Anderson (guitar), Rich Stim (guitar, keyboards, vocals, saxophone), Dave Sophiea (bass), Dave Mahoney (drums) and Jeff Armour, later replaced by Kevin Teare (drums). From Bloomington, Indiana, USA, MX-80 began as a trio of Anderson, Sophiea and Armour. In late 1975 they were joined by Stim and Mahoney. A single and EP on a local label were followed by their debut Hard Attack for Island Records. By this time they were based in San Francisco. Hard Attack achieved considerable attention; the avowed experimentation of the group (Captain Beefheart and Frank Zappa were often cited by critics) was matched by a lyrical subject matter that fitted into the 'new wave' ethos of the period. The sound quality was also suitably murky. Signed to Ralph, the label run by the Residents, they produced two more albums and appeared on several compilations, but their career tailed off in the early 80s. Stim entered law school and nothing further was heard except for Anderson's appearance in the Henry Kaiser Band. A clutch of tapes under a variety of names (Gizzards, Half-Life, O-Type) have appeared since 1987, apparently the work of Sophiea and Anderson, on the former's Quadruped label. These two, plus Stim and drummer Marc Weinstein, appear to constitute an MX for the 90s.

● ALBUMS: Hard Attack (Island 1977)★★★, Out Of The Tunnel (Ralph 1980)★★★, Crowd Control (Ralph 1981)★★★. As MX-80 Existential Lover cassette only (Quadruped 1987)★★, Das Love Boat (A&R 1990)★★.

Solo: Bruce Anderson Brutality I ... America/Iran (Quadruped 1987)★★, Brutality II ... Israel/ Palestine (Quadruped 1988)★★.

My Aim Is True - Elvis Costello

'Oh I used to be disgusted, and now I try to be amused', sang a youngish Elvis Costello in 1977, as he opened what for many is his best album. The pent-up frustration of the first album was mixed with melancholy. 'Alison' is a beautiful song that could and should be covered by Tony Bennett and Barbra Streisand, and deserves to become a universal standard like Paul McCartney's 'Yesterday'. Elsewhere, the wonderful Attractions (Steve Nieve, Bruce Thomas, Pete Thomas) supported fine songs such as 'Mystery Dance', '(The Angels Wanna Wear My) Red Shoes' and the paradoxical 'I'm Not Angry'. I wonder whether Costello knew how significant both he and this album would eventually become?

● Tracks: Welcome To The Working Week; Miracle Man; No Dancing; Blame It On Cain; Alison; Sneaky Feelings; (The Angels Wanna Wear My) Red Shoes; Less Than Zero; Mystery Dance; Pay It Back; I'm Not Angry; Waiting For The End Of The World.

● First released 1977

● UK peak chart position: 14

● USA peak chart position: 32

My Bloody Valentine

It took several years for My Bloody Valentine to capture their groundbreaking hybrid of ethereal melodies and studio-orientated, discordant sounds that proved so influential on the independent scene of the late 80s. Their roots lay in Dublin, where singer/guitarist Kevin Shields joined drummer Colm O'Ciosoig in the short-lived Complex. Forming My Bloody Valentine in 1984, the pair moved to Berlin, joined by vocalist Dave Conway (vocals) and Tina (keyboards). A mini-album, This Is Your Bloody Valentine, on the obscure German Tycoon label in 1984, made little impression (although it was later reissued in the UK), so the band returned to London and recruited bassist Debbie Googe. The 12-inch EP Geek! (and the accompanying, 'No Place To Go') emerged on Fever in mid-1986, and, like their debut, was strongly influenced by the Cramps and the Birthday Party. Later that year, the band signed with Joe Foster's fledgling Kaleidoscope Sound label for The New Record By My Bloody Valentine EP, which revealed a new influence, the Jesus And Mary Chain. A switch to the Primitives' label Lazy, produced 'Sunny Sundae Smile' (1987), which meshed bubblegum pop with buzzsaw guitars, a formula that dominated both the mini-album, Ecstasy, and 'Strawberry Wine', released later that year. The departure of Conway signalled a change in musical direction, reinforced by the arrival of vocalist Belinda Butcher.

A further move to Creation Records allowed for a drastic reappraisal in recording techniques, first apparent on the formidable You Made Me Realise EP in 1988. Enticing melodic structures contrasted with the snarling, almost unworldly collage of noise, developed more fully that year on My Bloody Valentine's pivotal Isn't Anything, from which was drawn the barrage of guitars, 'Feed Me With Your Kiss'. At last, the group had unearthed a completely new sound. Since then, their status has mushroomed. The release of an EP, Glider (1990), alongside a remix from the in-demand DJ Andy Weatherall, flirted with both dance music and the charts while 'Tremelo' (1991) must rank as arguably the most extreme piece of music to reach the Top 30. To quote the band, it 'sounded like it was being played through a transistor radio'. My Bloody Valentine's increasing maturity saw the meticulously produced Loveless album reinforce their reputation as one of the prime influences on the late 80s UK independent scene - one to which groups such as Slowdive, Lush and Chapterhouse owe a great deal. However, the massive studio bills run up during that time saw My Bloody Valentine leave Creation, moving instead to Island Records. At this point, another agonising gestation period was embarked upon, allegedly due to difficulty installing equipment in their own purpose-built studio in south London. Shields, meanwhile, contributed to the 1996 Experimental Audio Research album Beyond The Pale.

● ALBUMS: This Is Your Bloody Valentine mini-album (Tycoon 1984)★★, Ecstasy mini-album (Lazy 1987)★★, Isn't Anything (Creation 1988)★★★★, Loveless (Creation 1991)★★★.

My Dear Watson

Formed in Buckie, Banffshire, Scotland in December 1962, My Dear Watson were originally known as Johnny And The Copycats. As such they made their recording debut in 1963 with an effervescent version of the Coasters' 'I'm A Hog For You'. Under the guidance of local impresario Albert Bonici, the Beatles' agent in Scotland, the Copy Cats - as they were later known - became a leading attraction along the Moray Firth coast. Eschewing residencies in either Glasgow or Edinburgh, the group moved to London in 1967. They changed their name to My Dear Watson and came under the wing of George Young and Harry Vanda of the Easybeats. The pair produced two My Dear Watson singles for Parlophone Records. The first, 'The Shame Just Drained', was a Vanda/Young original, whereas the second, 'Stop! Stop! There I'll Be', was written by My Dear Watson leader Johnny Stewart in the style of the Easybeats. This pulsating release was an artistic triumph but commercial flop. My Dear Watson contributed to the Easybeats' Vigil (1968) before leaving the UK to work in Europe. They resumed recording in 1970 with 'Have You Seen Your Saviour?', a beautiful song in the country rock vein of the Flying Burrito Brothers. It was not a success and My Dear Watson split up soon after its release.

My Dying Bride

From Bradford, Yorkshire, England, My Dying Bride proffer an intriguing blend of full-blooded doom metal, with more poise than most and a rare experimental streak. Vocalist Aaron's lyrics also depart somewhat from the herd - although he often concerns himself with biblical and religious matters, his stance is neither that of Christian or Satanist: 'The Bible is a fantastic story...There's no heaven or hell as far as I'm concerned, it's just a nice story and I like to write about it because it affects so many people's lives.' After formation in 1990 they secured a contract with French label Listenable, through whom they provided their first official release, the 'God Is Alone' single. This was enough to interest UK label Peaceville, who released their debut EP, Symphonaire Infernus Et Spera Empyrium.

Their 1992 album, As The Flower Withers, followed shortly afterwards, featuring artwork by popular cult artist Dave McKean. My Dying Bride were already making a name for themselves as innovators in the doom genre, with a sound that combined the morbid grind of death metal with orchestral flourishes and haunting refrains. The resultant effect was one of grandiose tragedy. After recording another EP, The Thrash Of Naked Limbs, they took on their session violinist and pianist, Martin Powell, as a full member of the band, confirming their dedication to a path that combined classical and contemporary influences. A second album, Let Loose The Swans, saw Aaron singing, rather than growling in the traditional death metal style, and is their most distinctive and accomplished work to date. The vitality and colour of the band was enshrined in their 1994 release, the I Am The Bloody Earth EP, with the a-side featuring guest vocals from Ghost (of G.G.F.H.), while the b-side, 'Transcending (Into The Exquisite)', featured a challenging remix from local dance gurus Drug Free America. November 1994 saw the release of a box set containing their previous EPs, which sold out almost immediately, reflecting My Dying Bride's growing popularity. The Angel And The Dark River offered only six songs spanning 52 minutes, but it sacrificed immediacy for a deep-rooted evocation of sadness and loss. It revealed a band unafraid of exploring the boundaries of doom metal, although not all reviews were favourable. Alternative Press said that the band 'exaggerate their Jesus-in-spandex theatrics to laughable extremes'.

● ALBUMS: As The Flower Withers (Peaceville 1992)★★★, Let Loose The Swans (Peaceville 1993)★★★, The Angel And The Dark River (Peaceville 1995)★★, Trinity (Fierce/Futurist 1995)★★★, Like Gods Of The Sun (Music For Nations 1996)★★.

My Fair Lady (film musical)

Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's Broadway masterpiece came to the screen in 1964 complete with a controversial choice of leading lady. Julie Andrews, who created the part of Eliza Doolittle on stage, had only just made her film debut in Mary Poppins, and Audrey Hepburn (whose singing was dubbed by Marni Nixon) won the coveted role. Thankfully, after some bizarre alternative casting suggestions, Rex Harrison was once again the irascible confirmed bachelor, Professor Henry Higgins, who bets his companion, Colonel Pickering (Wilfred Hyde-White), that he can take an ordinary cockney flower girl and pass her off in high society just by teaching her to 'speak like a lady'. This he does in triumphant fashion, but only after much hard work and frustration, and some delicate negotiations with the girl's philosophical dustman father, Alfred P. Doolittle, who is superbly played by Stanley Holloway reprising his stage performance. Gladys Cooper as Higgins's mother (who sides with Eliza in all disputes) and Jeremy Brett as the toff who worships the pavements that Eliza walks on, were among the supporting cast which also included Mona Washbourne, Theodore Bikel, Isobel Elsom, Charles Fredericks, and John Holland. Not surprising with Lerner writing the screenplay, all the songs from the stage production were retained. The by-now classic overture preceded this extraordinary score: 'Why Can't The English?', 'Wouldn't It Be Loverly?', 'With A Little Bit Of Luck', 'I'm An Ordinary Man', 'Just You Wait', 'The Rain In Spain', 'I Could Have Danced All Night', 'Ascot Gavotte', 'On the Street Where You Live', 'Embassy Waltz', 'You Did It', 'Show Me', 'Get Me To The Church On Time', 'A Hymn To Him', 'Without You', and the sublime 'I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face'. That last number was part of an ending to the story contrary to the one in Bernard Shaw's Pygmalion on which the stage and film musicals were based. Shaw refused to have a happy resolution to Higgins's relationship with Eliza, but in My Fair Lady, the famous curtain line, 'Where the devil are my slippers?,' does seem to indicate that the teacher and his prize pupil are destined to stay together. Jack L. Warner produced the film for Warner Brothers and the choreographer was Hermes Pan. It was photographed in Technicolor and Super Panavision 70 and won eight Academy Awards including best picture, actor (Harrison), director (George Cukor), scoring (André Previn), and costumes and sets (Cecil Beaton). The latter's work, especially in such scenes as the marvellous 'Ascot Gavotte', was a major factor in the film's success - even without Julie Andrews. Some 30 years after its release, My Fair Lady, which had deteriorated to a great extent in the vaults, was brilliantly restored - visually and aurally - by experts Robert A. Harris and James C. Katz, and reissued in a letterbox format. On the new print Marni Nixon's voice on 'Wouldn't It Be Loverly?' was replaced by Audrey Hepburn's. The actress had apparently recorded several tracks for the film which were never used.

My Fair Lady (stage musical)

One of the most successful shows in the history of the American musical theatre, My Fair Lady opened to rave reviews at the Mark Hellinger Theatre in New York on 15 March 1956. The book, by Alan Jay Lerner, was based on George Bernard Shaw's play Pygmalion, and told of the attempts by Professor Henry Higgins (Rex Harrison) to transform a Cockney flower girl, Eliza Doolittle (Julie Andrews), into a society lady simply by teaching her to speak correctly. In the course of the story Higgins and Eliza fall in love and all ends happily, if a little differently from the way Shaw ended his play. Alan J. Lerner and Frederick Loewe's score was full of marvellous songs, including 'Wouldn't It Be Loverly?', 'I Could Have Danced All Night', 'On The Street Where You Live', 'Get Me To The Church On Time', 'With A Little Bit Of Luck', 'Show Me', 'I'm An Ordinary Man', 'Without You', 'Just You Wait', 'A Hymn To Him', 'Why Can't The English?' 'Ascot Gavotte' and 'I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face'. Harrison and Andrews were both superb. Their delight and joy when they realize that Eliza has finally 'got it', celebrating their triumph with 'The Rain In Spain', remains a memorable and endearing moment. A strong supporting cast included Stanley Holloway (Alfred P. Doolittle, Eliza's father), Robert Coote (Colonel Pickering), Michael King (Freddy Eynsford-Hill) and Cathleen Nesbitt (Mrs. Higgins). My Fair Lady ran on Broadway for six-and-a-half years, a total of 2,717 performances, and won Tony Awards for best musical, actor (Harrison), director (Moss Hart), musical director (Franz Allers), and for Oliver Smith (scenic design) and Cecil Beaton (costumes), both of whom made outstanding contributions to the lavish and spectacular production. Numerous road companies toured the show across the USA and it was subsequently presented in many other countries. Four of the principals, Harrison, Andrews, Holloway and Coote, recreated their roles for the London production, which stayed at the Drury Lane Theatre Royal for five and a half years. The Broadway cast album spent over 300 weeks in the US chart, many of them at number 1. The 1981 US revival with the 73-year-old Harrison and Catherine Nesbitt, who by then was 92, toured the USA before spending some time in New York. By all accounts it attempted to stay true to the original version, which is more than can be said for some later efforts. A 1991 UK provincial production, with a cast headed by Edward Fox, was described by its director Simon Callow, as 'a politically correct' version, and the 1993 Broadway revival, directed by Howard Davies, with Richard Chamberlain as Higgins and Stanley Holloway's son, Julian, as Doolittle, was 'stripped almost entirely of its romanticism and honed to a provocative post-modern edge', according to the Variety theatre critic. He went on: 'The famous "Ascot Gavotte" scene is recreated as a living Magritte canvas, the actors in colourful finery descending from the flies to hover above the action against a field of brilliant blue'. The 1964 film version was reasonably faithful to the original stage show though, and starred Harrison, Holloway, and - somewhat controversially - Audrey Hepburn as Eliza. In recent times, the American musical historian David Ewen suggested that one way or another My Fair Lady has generated approximately $800 million.

My Fair Lady - Original Broadway Cast

By the early 90s this superb album of what some still consider to be the most perfect stage musical ever, had spent a record-breaking 292 weeks in the US Top 40 - 15 of them at number 1. It also stayed in the upper reaches of the UK chart for 129 weeks. The album was recorded in mono, and Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's wonderful score, and a cast headed by Rex Harrison, Julie Andrews and Stanley Holloway, were not nearly so effective in the subsequent stereo version. Just 10 years after its initial release sales were estimated to be well over six million, and the album was inducted into the NARAS Hall of Fame in 1977.

- Tracks: Overture; Why Can't The English; Wouldn't It Be Loverly?; With A Little Bit Of Luck; I'm An Ordinary Man; Just You Wait; The Rain In Spain; I Could Have Danced All Night; Ascot Gavotte; On The Street Where You Live; You Did It; Show Me; Get Me To The Church On Time; Hymn To Him; Without You; I've Grown Accustomed To Her Face.
- First released 1956
- UK peak chart position: 2
- USA peak chart position: 1

My Favorite Things - John Coltrane

One of John Coltrane's (many) extraordinary talents was his ability to drastically transcend the material he chose to play, and often infuse the trivial or frivolous with something altogether very profound. Under the spell of the quartet (with pianist McCoy Tyner, temporary bassist Steve Davis and drummer Elvin Jones), 'My Favorite Things' becomes an almost religious celebration of life, brought to a series of ecstatic climaxes by Coltrane's nasal, Eastern-sounding soprano saxophone and Jones's propulsive, 6/8 clatter. This popular album also contains 'But Not For Me', a breakneck version of 'Summertime' and a beautiful 'Every Time We Say Goodbye'.

- Tracks: My Favorite Things; Every Time We Say Goodbye; Summertime; But Not For Me.
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

My Favorite Year

Following on from the disaster of Nick And Nora almost exactly a year earlier, My Favorite Year was yet another attempt to adapt a successful movie for the musical stage. The 1982 film of the same name starred the charismatic Peter O'Toole, a fact that made this project all the more vulnerable. A Lincoln Center production, it opened at New York's Vivian Beaumont Theatre on 10 December 1992. Stephen Flaherty (music) and Lynn Ahrens (lyrics) wrote the score, and Joseph Dougherty's book, based on Norman Steinberg and Dennis Palumbo's original screenplay and Palumbo's story, was set in 1954 Manhattan, when television was a live, dangerous, and exciting medium. Fading movie star Alan Swann (Tim Curry in the O'Toole role), whose hell-raising days are just a distant (and hazy) memory, is invited to guest on the small screen's King Kaiser Comedy Cavalcade. Fledgling sketch writer Benjy Stone (Evan Pappas), who happens to be a big fan of the movies and Swann in particular (they help compensate for his father's rather sudden departure when Benjy was just a child), is elected to be Swann's minder with orders to keep him and the bottle apart in the days prior to the Cavalcade's transmission, Early on in the show Benjy describes his celluloid influences in the joyous 'Larger Than Life', and in Act 2 has another of the best numbers, 'Shut Up And Dance', in a duet with his girlfriend, K.C. Dowling (Lannyl Stephens). Swann's songs are not so strong, but Curry's performance as the well-oiled smoothie now well past his sell-by date, trying to deal with the guilt of his abandoned daughter, was convincing and won him a Tony Award nomination. Also nominated were Lainie Kazan, who reprised her film role as Belle Steinberg Carroca, Benjy's extremely vulgar but kind hearted mother, and Andrea Martin, the winner of the supporting actress Tony for her hilarious portrayal of Alice Miller, the sole female presence among King Kaiser's (Tom Mardirosian) gang of writers. Amongst the rest of the cast were Josh Mostel, Ethan Phillips, Paul Stolarsky, Thomas Ikeda, Katie Finnerman, David Lipman, and Mary Stout. Flaherty and Ahrens's score, which began in great style with '20 Million People' and finished on a high note with 'My Favorite Year', contained some clever numbers in amongst 'The Musketeer Sketch', 'Waldorf Suite', ''Rookie In The Ring', 'Manhattan', 'Naked In Bethesda Fountain', 'The Gospel According To King', 'Funny/The Duck Joke', 'Welcome To Brooklyn', 'If The World Were Like The Movies', 'Exits', 'Professional Show Business Comedy', 'The Lights Come Up', and 'Maxford House'. Critical reaction was tepid, with the thin book, Thommie Walsh's musical staging, and Ron Lagomarsino's direction taking much of the blame. Overall, partly perhaps because of the inevitable amount of shtick involved, My Favorite Year was written off as an old-fashioned musical - reminiscent of some 50s and 60s shows. It closed after a run of just over a month - and a period of four-and-a half years in the melting pot. Subsequent productions included one staged by the drama department of London's Guildhall School of Music in 1994, when, along with various other changes, the chorus number 'Pop! Fizz! Happy!' was restored to Act 2.

My Funny Valentine - Miles Davis

One of the finest live albums in the history of jazz, My Funny Valentine presents the Miles Davis Quintet live at the Lincoln Centre's Philharmonic Hall in 1964. Surrounded by the vibrant and youthful rhythm section of Herbie Hancock (piano), Ron Carter (bass) and Tony Williams (drums), Davis was enjoying a strong new surge of creativity, and played with a stunning level of invention and passion throughout. The resonance of the long title track - one of those flawless performances that happens only very occasionally - dominates the record. Front-line partner George Coleman (tenor saxophone) chose a good evening to play some of the most beautiful solos of his life.

- Tracks: My Funny Valentine; All Of You; Stella By Starlight; All Blues; I Thought About You.
- First released 1964
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 138

My Gal Sal

Another screen biography that played fast and loose with the true facts about its subject - in this case the late 19th century songwriter Paul Dresser. The screenplay, by Seton I. Miller, Darrell Ware and Karl Tunberg, was loosely based on Theodore Dreiser's book My Brother Paul, and purported to trace the rise of Dresser (he changed his name from Dreiser early in his career) from his time as a performer in medicine shows and as a blackface comedian in vaudeville, to fame and fortune as a great songwriter. In fact, Dresser was never a commercial success and he wrote his best-known song 'My Gal Sal' in 1905 just a year before he died of heart failure. Victor Mature, an actor guaranteed to make the hearts of female members of the audiences go all-a-flutter, played the composer, and Rita Hayworth was the musical comedy star he fell for in a big way. No wonder, because Hayworth (whose vocals were dubbed by Nan Wynn), looked beautiful and gave one of the best and most joyful performances of her illustrious career. Other roles were played by Carole Landis, John Sutton, James Gleason, Phil Silvers, Walter Catlett, Andrew Tombes, Curt Bois, and Mona Maris. Hermes Pan also made an appearance, and he and Val Raset staged the delightful dance sequences. Several of Dresser's own numbers were featured, including 'On The Banks Of The Wabash', 'Come Tell Me What's Your Answer', 'Liza Jane', 'The Convict And The Bird', 'Mr. Volunteer', 'If You Want Me', and, of course, 'My Gal Sal'. These were supplemented by others, by Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, such as 'Me And My Fella', 'On The Gay White Way', 'Oh! The Pity Of It All', and 'Midnight At The Masquerade'. It all added up to a colourful and entertaining period piece, which was photographed in Technicolor by Ernest Palmer and produced by Robert Bassler for 20th Century-Fox in 1942. The director was Irving Cummings.

My Heart Goes Crazy

(see London Town)

My Kind Of Blues - B.B. King

By 1960, B.B. King was one of the most popular and prolific blues stars. Much of the time, he recorded with a full band, but this album features him in a quartet made up of himself, pianist Lloyd Glenn, bassist Ralph Hamilton and drummer Jesse Sailes. For the session, King drew on his deep appreciation of Doctor Clayton and recorded 'Walking Dr Bill' and 'Hold That Train'. The session was a relaxed affair but the level of musicianship was uniformly high. The accent was on traditional themes such as 'Catfish Blues', 'Driving Wheel' and 'Someday Baby', all of which may have been sung more dramatically elsewhere, but seldom performed with the ease and expertise on display here. King was in good voice and his guitar playing, in sharper focus in these surroundings, had never been better.

- Tracks: You Done Lost Your Good Thing Now; Walking Dr Bill; Catfish Blues; Hold That Train; Understand; Someday Baby; Mr Pawnbroker; Driving Wheel; My Own Fault Baby; Please Set A Date.
- First released 1961
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

My Life Story

My Life Story is effectively just one man, the multi-talented but idiosyncratic 'pop composer' Jake Shillingford (b. Southend-on-Sea, Essex, England). Formed at the turn of the 90s, Shillingford has used the group to develop a songwriting style in keeping with the ambitious soundtrack work of John Barry. However, he is suspicious both of the 'easy listening' description, and the fact that his 'assumed Cockney' delivery has seen My Life Story compared to Blur and the Britpop movement. Before he launched the group, Shillingford had run an 'indie' club in London at the end of the 80s. Various band members have been involved since the group's inception, though Shillingford's main collaborator is Aaron Cahill, who does not perform with the band. Though critically acclaimed, their 1995 debut album, Mornington Crescent, failed to provide a breakthrough, and Shillingford found himself on the hunt for a new recording contract. Eventually he moved to Parlophone Records, achieving an immediate breakthrough when his debut for the label, '12 Reasons', became his first UK chart hit. Plans for a second album were announced, while Shillingford kept himself busy arranging songs written by Marc Almond for P.J. Proby's comeback album. The Golden Mile was a suitably lush and glamorous affair. The band were subsequently dropped by Parlophone.

- ALBUMS: Mornington Crescent (1995)★★★, The Golden Mile (Parlophone 1997)★★★.

My One And Only

This production was similar in many ways to Crazy For You, which came along nine years later. Both productions were based on vintage shows with scores by George and Ira Gershwin: in Crazy For You, the producers went back to Girl Crazy (1930), and for My One And Only, which opened at the St. James Theatre in New York on 1 May 1983, librettists Peter Stone and Timothy S. Mayer reached back even further, and used the 1927 Fred Astaire hit, Funny Face, as their role model. My My One And Only starred Tommy Tune, Broadway's contemporary equivalent of Astaire, and he also shared the choreography chores with Thommie Walsh, so the accent was very definitely on the dance. Tune's co-star was Twiggy, the English 60s fashion model, who had appeared in Ken Russell's film of The Boy Friend in 1971. Tune and Charles 'Honi' Coles stopped the show each night with their terpsichorean treatment of the title song, and some other numbers were retained from the original Funny Face, including 'He Loves And She Loves', ''S Wonderful', and 'Funny Face'. The rest of the score was culled from other Gershwin shows including 'I Can't Be Bothered Now', 'How Long Has This Been Going On?', and 'Nice Work If You Can Get It'. The story, such as it was, had Twiggy as a record-breaking swimmer and Tune as an intrepid pilot, getting mixed up with some Prohibition-busting bootleggers in the late 20s world of Charles Lindbergh and non-stop flights to various capital cities of the world. Tommy Tune won the 1983 Tony Award for best actor, and shared the prize for choreography with Thommie Walsh. The elegant tap dancer, Charles 'Honi' Coles, an ex-vaudevillian who dropped out of the performing business for a while in the 60s and 70s, made a triumphant Broadway comeback in this show at the age of 73, and won the Tony for best supporting actor in a musical. He died in 1992, shortly after receiving the National Medal of the Arts from President Bush. My One And Only continued to sing and dance to that gorgeous Gershwin music for a total of 767 performances.

My World - Eddy Arnold

Country balladeer Eddy Arnold was recording prior to Hank Williams and was once managed by Colonel Parker. By 1965, he had a steady routine of three albums a year and regular touring. Jim Reeves' style was immensely popular, and Arnold had a worldwide hit in a similar vein with 'Make The World Go Away'. This album looks like a concept album of 'world' songs but there is only one other, 'What's He Doin' In My World?' Apart from that, there are warm-voiced, intimate interpretations of 'Too Many Rivers', 'It Comes And Goes' and 'As Usual'. The album also contains the distinctive title - 'Mary Claire Melvina Rebecca Jane'.

- Tracks: What's He Doin' In My World?; Too Many Rivers; It Comes And Goes; Make The World Go Away; The Days Gone By; Mary Claire Melvina Rebecca Jane; I'm Letting You Go; As Usual; I'm Walking Behind You; If You Were Mine; Taking Chances; You Still Got A Hold On Me.
- First released 1965
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 7

Myddle Class

Formed in 1965 in New Jersey, USA, the Myddle Class consisted of Dave Palmer, Charles Larkey, Mike Rosa, Danny Mansolino and Rob Phillip. They played at many of New York's leading clubs, including the Night Owl and Cafe Au Go Go, and the group was signed to songwriters Carole King and Gerry Goffin's label, Tomorrow Records. The first Myddle Class release appeared in December 1965. 'Free As The Wind' was a sumptuous hybrid of Goffin/King's commercial instincts and garage-styled folk rock, but despite positive reviews, it failed to sell. 'Don't Let Me Sleep Too Long' - a song later popularised by the Blues Project - was issued in 1966. This driving single reflected the Myddle Class's live sound, but once again it was not a success. It was backed by the haunting 'I Happen To Love', subsequently covered by the Electric Prunes. Fourteen months passed before the final Myddle Class single was released. 'Don't Look Back' was originally recorded by the Temptations, but the group managed to instil their own personality into their rendition. Sadly, by this point (1967) their collective will to continue was ebbing, and the Myddle Class split up soon after its release. However, a previously unissued master, 'Lovin' Season', appeared on a 1970 compilation Rock And Roll With Buddah. Mike Rosa became a house producer for Elektra Records, while Dave Palmer joined Steely Dan. Charles Larkey was later a member of the Fugs, City and Jo Mama and, during the 70s, was married to Carole King.

Myers, Amina Claudine

b. 21 March 1942, Blackwell, Arkansas, USA. As a young woman, Myers played piano and sang in church. In the mid-60s she moved to Chicago, became a member of the AACM and over the next 10 years or so worked frequently with fellow-members such as Kalaparush Maurice McIntyre (Humility In The Light Of The Creator), Muhal Richard Abrams, Henry Threadgill and Lester Bowie (African Children, The 5th Power). In the early 70s she also played with Gene Ammons, Sonny Stitt and Little Milton as well as leading her own trio. She moved to New York in the mid-70s and spent some time in Europe in the early 80s, recording there with Frank Lowe (Exotic Heartbreak) and with Martha and Fontella Bass and David Peason on the highly-praised gospel set, From The Root To The Source. Her first recording as leader, for London's Leo Records featured her on piano, organ and vocals, and were powerful, even stark, evocations of her blues and gospel roots. Inexplicably, later recordings - particularly an ill-judged couple of fusion-based albums for Novus - largely failed to capture the outstanding talents that have won her a high standing among her peers. From the mid-80s she has been playing with Charlie Haden's Liberation Music Orchestra, recording with them on Dream Keeper.

● ALBUMS: Song For Mother E (Leo 1980)★★★, Salutes Bessie Smith (Leo 1980)★★★★, Poems For Piano: The Music Of Marion Brown (1980)★★, with Muhal Richard Abrams Duet (Black Saint 1981)★★, The Circle Of Time (1983)★★★, Jumping In The Sugar Bowl (Minor 1984)★★★, Country Girl (Minor 1986)★★, Amina (Novus 1988)★★★, In Touch (Novus 1989)★★★, Jumping In The Sugar Bowl (Digital Stereo 1995)★★★.

Myers, Bumps

b. Hubert Maxwell Myers, 22 August 1912, Clarksburg, West Virginia, USA, d. 9 April 1968. While still a small boy, Myers moved to the west coast and when he began playing tenor saxophone it was there that he made his debut. Among early engagements were spells with Curtis Mosby, Charlie Echols and Buck Clayton, all of whom led bands in Los Angeles. With Clayton, he travelled to China, playing a residency at Shanghai's Canidrome Ballroom. Back in Los Angeles, he played with bands led by Lionel Hampton and Les Hite, then joined a small group co-led by Lee and Lester Young. He visited New York, playing with Jimmie Lunceford, the Youngs, then returned to the west coast, served in the US Army, and subsequently resumed his round of short spells in various bands, including those led by Benny Carter, Lunceford and 'Big' Sid Catlett. He spent the 50s and early 60s freelancing on the west coast, sometimes working with Carter, and he was also with Horace Henderson's band. Myers played with conviction, soloing with imagination and flair and providing sterling backing to the artists with whom he worked. His later years were largely inactive due to poor health.

● COMPILATIONS: Benny Carter And His Orchestra (Joyce 1945)★★★★, Mel Powell Quintet (Pausa 1947)★★★, Russell Jacquet And His Bopper Band (King 1949)★★★.

Myers, Dave

b. 30 October 1926, Byhalia, Mississippi, USA. d. 1997. The older brother of Louis Myers, Dave bought a guitar after the family moved to Chicago in 1941. During 1951 he became a member of the Aces, leaving in 1955, a year after Louis. In the late 50s and early 60s he was part of a rock 'n' roll band with Louis, and when the Aces re-formed at the end of the 60s, he had the opportunity to record with them and as accompanist to artists including Carey Bell, Howlin' Wolf, Robert Lockwood, Jimmy Rogers, Homesick, James Williamson and Hubert Sumlin.

● ALBUMS: You Can't Do That (Black Top 1998)★★★★.

Myers, Louis

b. 18 September 1929, Byhalis, Mississippi, USA, d. 18 September 1994. Growing up in a musical family, Myers began playing harmonica at the age of eight, and guitar two years later. He moved to Chicago in 1941 and played with Big Boy Spires for three years. With his brother Dave Myers, Junior Wells and later, drummer Fred Below, he formed the Aces and in the 50s became known for his light, jazzy and swinging guitar blues artists (including some years with the re-formed Aces); his own material appeared on the Abco, Advent, and JSP labels. Although he was primarily known for his fluent guitar work, Myers was also an impressive harmonica player in the modern amplified style.

● ALBUMS: I'm A Southern Man (Testament 1978)★★★, Wailin' The Blues (JSP 1983)★★★.

Myers, Sammy

b. 19 February 1936, Laurel, Mississippi, USA. Originally one of Elmore James' Broomdusters working the Chicago circuit, Sammy Myers' early fame rests on a song he recorded for Johnny Vincent's Jackson, Mississippi-based Ace label. 'Sleeping In The Ground', with its Jimmy Reed-like lope supplied by The King Mose Royal Rockers, is one of the classic post-war harmonica blues. It was recorded in Jackson in 1957 and the partially blind singer/harmonica player, who also plays drums, went on to produce further singles for the Fury and Soft labels (the latter credited to Little John Myers) before moving back to make his livelihood in the clubs. He recorded for Vincent again, seeing the results issued as part of an album in 1981. Later he formed an unlikely partnership with the much younger, Texan guitarist Anson Funderburgh, performing with much success as featured artist with Funderburgh's group the Rockets. This partnership celebrated ten years together with an extended UK tour in 1997.

● ALBUMS: Kings Of The Blues, Volume 2 (1979)★★★, Genuine Mississippi Blues (1981)★★★. With Anson Funderburgh My Love Is Here To Stay (Black Top 1986)★★★, Sins (Black Top 1987)★★★, Rack 'Em Up (Black Top 1989)★★★, What's What They Want (Black Top 1997)★★★.

Myers, Stanley

b. 6 October 1930, London, England, d. 9 November 1993, London, England. A composer, arranger and musical director for films and television from 1966. In the 50s Myers worked in the theatre, and contributed music to several London West End shows including A Girl Called Jo and served as musical director for the Julian More-James Gilbert hit musical Grab Me A Gondola (1956). In 1966 he scored his first film, a comedy entitled Kaleidoscope, which teamed Warren Beatty with English actress Susannah York. Two other early projects included Ulysses and Tropic Of Cancer for the US director, John Strick. Throughout a career spanning over 60 feature films, Myers worked in several countries besides the UK, including the USA, Canada, Australia, and in Europe, particularly France and Germany. In the 70s his credits included The Walking Stick, Age Of Consent, A Severed Head, Long Ago Tomorrow (The Raging Moon), Summer Lightning, X, Y And Z, Little Malcolm And His Struggle Against The Eunuchs, The Apprenticeship Of Dudley Kravitz, The Wilby Conspiracy, Absolution and Yesterday's Hero (1979). In 1978 Myers won his first Ivor Novello Award for the theme from the five times Oscar-winner The Deer Hunter. It was a UK Top 20 entry for classical guitarist John Williams, and was also successful for the Welsh singer Iris Williams under the title of 'He Was Beautiful', with a lyric by Cleo Laine. In the 80s, Myers collaborated on the music for several films with Hans Zimmer. Together they scored Jerzy Skolimowski's highly-acclaimed Moonlighting, starring Jeremy Irons, Success Is The Best Revenge, Eureka, Insignificance, Taffin, The Nature Of The Beast and Paperhouse, amongst others. Myers' solo scores during the 80s included The Watcher In The Woods, Blind Date (Bruce Willis's big screen success), The Chain, The Lightship, Conduct Unbecoming, Dreamchild, Castaway, Sammy And Rosie Get Laid, Wish You Were Here, The Boost and Scenes From The Class Struggle In Beverly Hills (1989). In 1987 Myers received an award for 'the best artistic contribution' at Cannes for his music to Prick Up Your Ears, Steven Frear's 'realistic and evocative look' at the life of playwright Joe Orton, which included the song 'Dancing Hearts' (written with Richard Myhill).

Two years later, Myers won his second Ivor Novello Award for his score for The Witches, director Nicholas Roeg's treatment of a story by Roald Dahl. In the early 90s Myers' credits included Rosencrantz And Guildenstern Are Dead, Iron Maze, Claude, Sarafina!, and the French-German production Voyager. Myers also worked extensively in television, on UK programmes such as All Gas And Gaiters, Never A Cross Word, Robin Hood, Dirty Money, Widows I And II, Diana, Nancy Astor, Wreath Of Roses, Scoop, Here To Stay, The Russian Soldier, The Most Dangerous Man In The World, My Beautiful Laundrette, Christabel and many more. For US network television he composed music for Summer Of My German Soldier, The Gentleman Bandit, The Martian Chronicles, Florence Nightingale, Monte Carlo, Tidy Endings among others.

In the early 90s Myers was working with the saxophonist John Harle. They had just finished recording Myers' specially written piece, 'Concerto For Soprano Saxophone', when he died of cancer in November 1993. In the same year Myers won another Ivor Novello Award for his Stalag Luft television theme, and in 1995 there was a posthumous BAFTA Award and yet another 'Ivor' for his original television music (written with Christopher Gunning) for the highly popular Middlemarch series.

Myles, Alannah

Toronto-based vocalist Myles spent much of her early career unsuccessfully shopping for a recording contract in her native Canada, but when she and writing partner Christopher Ward changed tack, targeting an American deal with a David Tyson-produced demo and a video for 'Just One Kiss', they met with almost instant success. Tyson produced Alannah Myles, an excellent commercial hard-rock debut on which the vocalist turned her deep, soulful voice to a variety of material, from gentle acoustic guitar-based ballads to raunchy rock 'n' roll. After the years of struggle, the debut ironically took off rapidly in Canada, with 'Love Is' helping Myles to achieve major status in just three months, but the slow, steamy raunch of 'Black Velvet' brought much wider success. She suddenly found herself topping the US singles chart and hitting the Top 3 in the UK as 'Black Velvet' became a worldwide hit. Alannah Myles subsequently became the most successful debut in Canadian music history, selling more than five million copies globally. Myles subsequently proved that she was no mere studio songbird, taking her band out on the road. Her most recent albums, Alannah and Arrival, failed to find favour beyond her cult following.

● ALBUMS: Alannah Myles (Atlantic 1989)★★★★, Rockinghorse (Atlantic 1992)★★★, Alannah (Atlantic 1995)★★, Arrival (El Dorado 1997)★★★.

Myles, Heather

b. 31 July 1962, Riverside, California, USA. Myles was raised on a horse ranch in Texas and her brother was a rodeo rider. Heavily influenced by Merle Haggard, Patsy Cline, Tammy Wynette, Doris Day, Judy Garland and Buck Owens, she spent several years playing the honkytonk circuit. Dwight Yoakam's fiddler, Brantley Kearns, also plays for Myles. She made her recording debut on HighTone's Western Beat sampler, Points West, with her songs 'Lovin' The Bottle' and 'Rum And Rodeo', which was written about old-time rodeo rider Casey Tibbs. An excellent country writer, her debut album caused a stir, not so much because of the songs, but because she looked like Princess Diana on the cover. She tours with her band the Cadillac Cowboys. 'Call me a bitch, but you've got to be a bitch to make it in this business' is one of her theories, the other as relayed to Country Music People is: 'I'm in it for the long haul, sink or swim, come hell or high water, I'll make it in this business or I'll die trying'.

● ALBUMS: Just Like Old Times (HighTone 1992)★★★, Rum And Rodeo (HighTone 1994)★★★, Untamed (Demon 1995)★★★, Sweet Little Dangerous: Heather Myles Live At The Bottom Line (Demon 1996)★★.

Myofist

A Canadian quartet of Ron Chenier (guitar/vocals), Ed Egan (keyboards), Jeff Nystrom (bass) and John Chenier (drums), Fist, as they were known in the USA and Canada, were forced to embellish their name due to the existence of an existing group called Fist in the UK. They formed in the late 70s and made their debut with Round One, a Canada only release, which was dominated by Egan's keyboards. By the time the group signed an international recording contract with A&M Records in 1980, they had altered their approach considerably. Instead of the complexity of old, Myofist now specialised in unfettered, rampaging rock riffs delivered with a real sense of authenticity. The best of their three sets for A&M was undoubtedly 1981's Thunder In Rock, by which time Bob Patterson (drums) had replaced John Chenier and Ivan Tessier (keyboards) had taken over from Egan. Considered by many to be one of the great overlooked rock collections of the early 80s, it nevertheless failed to lift the band into the mainstream. One further album for A&M and another for an independent also flopped, and by the mid-80s the band had broken up.

- ALBUMS: Round One (TCD 1979)★★, Hot Spikes (A&M 1980)★★★, Thunder In Rock (A&M 1981)★★★★, In The Red (A&M 1983)★★★, Danger Zone (Cobra 1985)★★.

Myrow, Joseph

b. 28 February 1910, Russia, d. 24 December 1987, Los Angeles, California, USA. A popular composer from the 40s to the late 50s, mostly for movies, Myrow was educated at the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia Conservatory of Music and the Curtis Institute of Music. He graduated as an accomplished pianist, and served as a guest soloist with several symphony orchestras, including those of Cleveland and Philadelphia. After working as musical director for some Philadelphia radio stations, Myrow started composing for nightclub revues in cities on the east coast. His early songs in the late 30s included 'Haunting Me', 'Overheard In A Cocktail Lounge', 'The Fable Of The Rose' and 'I Love To Watch The Moonlight'. In the early 40s he wrote 'Autumn Nocturne' (a big hit for Claude Thornhill) and 'Velvet Moon'. In 1946, he and Eddie De Lange contributed several songs to the movie If I'm Lucky. In the same year, Myrow began what was to be a 10-year association with lyricist Mack Gordon. Together they wrote eight songs for Three Little Girls In Blue, including 'Somewhere In The Night', 'Always A Lady', 'On The Boardwalk In Atlantic City' and 'You Make Me Feel So Young'; the latter eventually became indelibly linked with Frank Sinatra. From 1947-50 the team provided the songs for four movies starring Betty Grable, including Mother Wore Tights ('Kokomo, Indiana', 'There's Nothing Like A Song' and 'You Do', which was nominated for an Academy Award, and became a hit for Dinah Shore and Vaughn Monroe), When My Baby Smiles At Me ('By The Way' and 'What Did I Do?'), The Beautiful Blonde From Bashville Bend ('Every Time I Meet You') and Wabash Avenue ('Baby Won't You Say You Love Me' and 'Wilhelmina', which was also nominated for an Oscar). Myrow and Gordon continued into the 50s with The I-Don't-Care Girl ('This Is My Favorite City'); I Love Melvin starring Donald O'Connor and Debbie Reynolds ('A Lady Loves', 'Where Did You Learn To Dance?' and 'There You Are'); and Bundle Of Joy, in which Reynolds appeared with husband Eddie Fisher. Myrow also contributed several numbers to The French Line, with Ralph Blane ('Comment Allez-Vous?', 'What Is This I Feel?', 'Well, I'll Be Switched' and 'Wait Till You See Paris'). His other compositions included 'Five O'Clock Whistle' (a hit for Glenn Miller, Erskine Hawkins and Ella Fitzgerald); 'It Happens Every Spring' (movie title song), 'Endless Love', 'Love Is Eternal', 'Five Four Blues', 'Soft And Warm', 'Three Quarter Blues' and 'Someday Soon'. His other collaborators included Kim Gannon, Jean Stone and Bickley Reichner. Josef Myrow died of Parkinson's disease in 1987.

Mystery Girl - Roy Orbison

Who could have known that the much-loved Roy Orbison would record his best album at this late stage in his career; furthermore, that he would be dead only a few months later. The success of his role in the Traveling Wilburys gave him a much-deserved boost. Orbison had the great voice of pop and after many years of indifferent material he finally hit gold with great songs such as 'You Got It' (written with Jeff Lynne and Tom Petty), 'Careless Heart' (written with Diane Warren) and 'A Love So Beautiful' (written with Lynne). Orbison's tragic dedication to the listener when he finished this album was 'don't give up before the miracle happens'.

- Tracks: You Got It; In The Real World; Dream You; A Love So Beautiful; California Blue; She's A Mystery To Me; The Comedians; The Only One; Windsurfer; Careless Heart.
- First released 1989
- UK peak chart position: 2
- USA peak chart position: 5

Mystery Of Edwin Drood, The

In this innovative musical which was 'suggested by the unfinished novel of the same name by Charles Dickens', a newcomer to Broadway, the author and songwriter Rupert Holmes, invited the audience themselves to vote for what they thought should be the outcome at the end of the evening - and it proved to be a popular notion. The show opened at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 2 December 1985, and the story was told as if it was being performed as a play within a play at a London music hall in the late 19th century. The traditional figure of the emporium's Chairman was played by George Rose, and the rest of the cast was led by Betty Buckley, who played Drood, Cleo Laine as Princess Puffer the keeper of an infamous opium den, and Howard McGillin. Holmes's imaginative and relevant songs included 'Perfect Strangers', 'The Wages Of Sin', 'Moonfall', 'Don't Quit While You're Ahead', 'Both Sides Of The Coin', 'Ceylon', 'Off To The Races', and 'No Good Can Come From Bad'. The show had an excellent run of 608 performances, and, in a very poor season for new musicals, scooped the Tony Awards, winning for best musical, book, score, actor (Rose), and director (Wilford Leach). The short-lived London production starred Julia Hills, the pop singer Lulu, and Ernie Wise, the surviving partner of one Britian's best-loved comedy double acts, Morecambe And Wise.

Mystery Trend

An early but minor group in the San Francisco scene of the 60s, the Mystery Trend took its name after misunderstanding a line in Bob Dylan's 'Like A Rolling Stone' which referred to a 'mystery tramp'. The group consisted of Ron Nagle (vocals), Bob Cuff (guitar), Larry Bennett (bass), Larry West (lead guitar) and John Luby (drums). They performed many concerts in the San Francisco ballrooms of the era, but released only one single, 'Johnny Was A Good Boy'/'A House On The Hill' on Verve, in early 1967, at which time West departed. Cuff left the band in the summer of 1967 and was replaced by John Gregory, who went on to join Seatrain. The Mystery Trend split up in 1968. Nagle recorded a solo album, Bad Rice, in 1970 and produced albums by Paul Kantner (of Jefferson Airplane) and John Hiatt. Nagle also formed a unit called Durocs during the 70s.

Mystic Revealers

The Mystic Revealers performed for most of their career on the fringe of the Jamaican music industry, in and around the Bull Bay area. Led by the enigmatic Billy Mystic (b. Anthony Wilmott), and featuring Nicky Henry (drums), Chris Burth (percussion), Leroy Edwards (bass), Paul Smith (keyboards) and Dexton Davis (guitar), the band initially released Young Revolutionaries, which was met with critical acclaim but failed to attract Jamaican reggae fans. The group's righteous stance established a significant US following, which led to an association with the Washington-based entrepreneur Dr. Dread. In 1995 the band appeared alongside Robert Ffrench who was promoting his compilation With Heavy D And Friends, following an exhaustive European tour. Live performances brought the band further praise, and their promotional videos featured cameos from leading Jamaican entertainers, including Carl Bradshaw and Judy Mowatt. The ensemble released a number of singles, notably 'Religion', 'Space And Time', 'Remember Romeo' and the celebratory, 60s-styled 'I Believe In Love'. Many of the singles featured on the band's third and final album with Dr. Dread, which also included the classic 'Righteous Man'. The Mystic Revealers maintained their profile through to the mid-90s, continuing with their brand of conscientious lyricism. The band subsequently changed label and released a successful single, 'I'm Gonna Tell You', with Anthony B. In addition to his recording commitments, Wilmott concurrently pursued an acting career playing CC, the lead singer of a band, in the Jamaican soap opera Royal Palms Estate. The Mystic Revealers also featured in the series when they performed 'There's Got To Be A Better Way', appearing as CC's backing band.

● ALBUMS: Young Revolutionaries (Ras 1994)★★★, Jah Works (Ras 1995)★★★, Space And Time (Ras 1996)★★★, Space And Dub (Ras 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Portrait (Ras 1997)★★, with Anthony B. This One's For Jah (Mesa 1997)★★★★.

Mystics

This rock 'n' roll vocal ensemble came from Brooklyn, New York, USA. The members were brothers Phil (lead) and Albee Cracolici (baritone), Bob Ferrante (first tenor), George Galfo (second tenor), and Allie Contrera (bass). The Mystics helped popularize the Italian-American doo-wop sound that came out of New York City in the early 60s, but like many such groups they did it with only one hit, 'Hushabye' (US pop Top 20, 1959). The song was written by the great songwriting team of Doc Pomus and Mort Shuman and has become a staple of US oldie stations. A follow-up, 'Don't Take The Stars', scraped the bottom of the charts later in 1959. Failing to get another hit record, the Mystics broke up in the early 60s. They reunited in the 80s to perform at oldies shows and that led to a critically well-received album for a revival label, Ambient Sound, in 1982. By this time, however, the audience for doo-wop was limited to a passionate few on the Eastern seaboard and the album remained obscure.

● COMPILATIONS: with the Passions The Mystics And The Passions (1979)★★★, Crazy For You (1982), The Complete Mystics (1985), Golden Classics (1987), with the Jarmels The Mystics Meet The Jarmels (Ace 1990)★★★.

Mythra

Judas Priest-influenced band from the north-east of England who came together in 1979 at the height of the New Wave Of British Heavy Metal and released one of the most outstanding records of the era. Yet the band - Vince High (vocals), Mick Rundel (guitar), Barry Hopper (drums), Maurice Bates (rhythm guitar) and Pete Melsom (bass) - never achieved the greatness a band that sells 15,000 singles in 20 days deserves. The EP, Death And Destiny, first released on Guardian Records, was quickly reissued on Street Beat Records to coincide with their appearance at the Bingley Hall festival with Motörhead. It, too, sold well and their battle cry of 'Death And Destiny' was sung by a thousand voices at the aforementioned gig. However, by 1981 their name was absent from the live listings, leaving the EP to command a high collectors' value and cult reputation. Metallica fans should track it down to see how much Kill 'Em All owes to this band.

N

N'Dour, Youssou

b. 1959, Dakar, Senegal. Born in the Medina, or 'old town', district of Dakar, N'Dour is the son of Ndeye Sokhna Mboup, herself a well-known traditional musician, who gave him his grounding in the traditional music of the Wolof people. His first public performances came with two local music and drama groups, including Sine Dramatic, which he joined in 1972. The following year he made his first public appearance with a modern band, singing with Orchestre Diamono. In 1975, he toured the Gambia with the band, returning after his parents complained he was too young to start a life on the road. In 1976 N'Dour took the first steps in a career which would establish him as one of Senegal's greatest musical pioneers, joining the Star Band, who were the houseband at Dakar's leading nightspot, the Miami Club. With them N'Dour began to forge the fusion of western electric instrumentation and traditional Wolof rhythms and lyrics that became known as mbalax - a route that was simultaneously being explored by fellow Dakar bands Orchestre Baobab and Orchestre Le Sahel. In 1979 N'Dour left the Star Band, and set up Etoile De Dakar, which in 1982 he re-formed as Super Etoile De Dakar. The mature mbalax style emerged at this time, as N'Dour added a variety of western instrumentation to the tough, multi-rhythmic Wolof folk songs that he was reinterpreting: a base of rolling, flamenco-like guitars, fuzz-box guitar solos and stabbing, Stax-like horns. Slowly, the sound developed. Ten cassette releases, starting with Tabaski in 1981, displayed an increasing fullness and power of arrangement. The lyrical subject matter ranged from folk tales to celebrations of life in Dakar, and the problems faced by migrants to the cities. In Senegal, N'Dour's reputation increased. His prowess as a praise singer attracted rich and famous patrons, all of them keen to be immortalized in his songs and willing to pay large sums of money for the privilege. Poorer people, particularly the urban youth, identified with his pride in his Wolof roots while also enjoying the rock and soul edges his instrumentation and arrangements brought to the music. Outside Senegal his music received wider attention with the western release of two classic albums, Immigres (1985) and Nelson Mandela (1986), which attracted sustained critical praise and significant sales in the USA, UK and France. In 1987 N'Dour was invited to support Peter Gabriel on a lengthy USA tour, returning to Dakar with an Akai sampler with which to record and further explore the traditional sounds of Senegal. The results were to be heard on The Lion and its 1990 follow-up Set. Both were realized via a new contract with Virgin Records, though he was later unceremoniously 'released' from the contract. For purists in the west, the albums showed rather too much western influence. His Senegalese audience, however, received them with huge enthusiasm. Books and videos on N'Dour followed, cementing his position as the pre-eminent African musical export of the 90s. While Eyes Open, despite several enchanting songs, led some to believe N'Dour had lost his edge, The Guide pronounced his talent undiminished. Collaborating with Jacob Desvarieux, Branford Marsalis and others, it was the first album to be conceived, recorded and produced in Senegal. Taken from it, '7 Seconds', a duet with Neneh Cherry, reached number 3 in the UK charts in 1994, only furthering N'Dour's status as a genuine crossover artist.

● ALBUMS: Show A Abidjan (ED 1983)★★, Diongoma (MP 1983)★★★, Immigrés (Celluloid/Earthworks 1984)★★★★, Nelson Mandela (ERT 1985)★★★★, The Lion (Virgin 1989)★★★, Set (Virgin 1990)★★, Eyes Open (40 Acres 1992)★★, Wommat: The Guide (Columbia 1994)★★★★, with Yandé Codou Sène Gainde - Voices From The Heart Of Africa (World Network 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Hey You! The Best Of (Music Club 1993)★★★, Live - Bir Sorano Juin '93, Vols. 1 & 2 (Studio 1993)★★★. Etoile De Darkar Featuring Youssou N'Dour Thaipathioly (Stern's 1994)★★★.

N-Joi

This group consists of the Essex, England-born 'brothers of hardness' Mark Franklin and Nigel Champion, who were originally joined by the singer Saffron. Their five minutes of fame came in 1991 with 'Adrenalin' (on DeConstruction Records), an overwrought affair much admired by Liam Howlett of Prodigy. This was quickly followed by the UK Top 10 success of the re-released 'Anthem'. They released a recording of their stage set, Live In Manchester, for the same label in February 1992, which lasted over 28 minutes and included over a dozen separate tunes in the mix. They followed up with a more conventional EP that included a Moby remix of their 'Mindflux' single for RCA Records in the USA. Saffron attempted a solo career with garage singles such as 'One Love' for WEA Records in 1992.

● ALBUMS: Inside Out (DeConstruction 1995)★★★.

N-Tense

The raps of this 90s New York, USA hip-hop duo are conducted against the surprising and rather fetching backdrop of an off-the-wall, ecologist philosophy. Dion Blue (aka Woodbanga) and his partner Taylor Schofield (aka Big Rallo) use the physical and metaphysical qualities of trees and forests to inform their sound: 'What we represent is the backwoods of the industry, the deep, dark section.' They began their career with the single 'Raise The Levels Of The Boom', on which lyrical references to woodsmen and trees abounded, aided by a video clip filmed in the woods of Central Islip, Long Island, New York. On its b-side, 'Wash His Back', the theme was stretched to indicate a sense of community between young black men, somewhat akin to the relationship of 'a copse of trees growing together'. It certainly made a change from the outrageous boasts normally associated with gangsta rap. The album from which the two songs were drawn, If Trees Could Talk, continued to address a similar theme.

● ALBUMS: If Trees Could Talk (Tree 1994)★★★.

N-Troop

Touted as the new protégés of Soul II Soul and Jazzie B, London, England band N-Troop comprises DJ Dessie D, Yvonne (vocals; Dessie D's sister) and Stuart OV (rapper). They met Jazzie B when they were recording in the studio next door in the early 90s, and the renowned producer was so enamoured with N-Troop's 'Matter Of Fakt' that he had a contract drawn up for them the next day. The song extolled the names and achievements of a roster of black people and artists. The brother and sister team grew up singing in the gospel churches of the West Midlands, while Stuart OV's delivery was informed by the reggae sound systems of south London, where he grew up. As a dancehall DJ (equating to MC in rap terms) he had begun recording in 1985 for Smiley Culture's Happening label, making his debut with 'Save Me Your Love'. As N-Troop there was a conscious effort to reflect rap from a black British perspective, rather than American. Rather than drive-by shootings, lyrics touched on the 'joy-riding' craze and the murder of James Bolger. 'Matter Of Fakt' was released as only the second single on Jazzie B's newly inaugurated Funki Dred Records, but the band's career was disrupted when the label suffered problems caused by the withdrawal of its backers' funding.

N.R.T.

Formerly No Right Turn, N.R.T. are a hard working folk band from Derby, England, band who have an excellent repertoire of acidic roots rock. The focal point, Jayne Marsden, has a distinctive voice, put to effective use on a series of pacy releases which leave their folk prologues far behind. One of the best unsigned bands on the UK club circuit in the early 90s ● ALBUMS: New Rising Tide (1992)★★★.

N.W.O.B.H.M. (see New Wave Of British Heavy Metal)

N2-Deep

A white rap trio based in Vallejo, Calfornia, USA. They were formed by their DJ and producer, Johnny 'Z' Zunino, who introduced MCs Jay 'Tee' Trujillo and TL Lyon. The title track of their debut gave them a substantial crossover hit (reaching US number 14), though their legitimacy as an act within the hardcore Profile fraternity was confirmed with cuts like 'What The Fuck Is Going On?'.

● ALBUMS: Back To The Hotel (Profile 1992)★★.

Na Fili

A band from Cork, playing straight Irish traditional music with depth and dedication. The name translates from old Irish as 'poets'. Certainly, it is music with a rhythm and a rhyme.

● ALBUMS: Na Fili 3 (1973)★★★.

Nada Surf

After making their initial impact with the single, 'Popular', this Los Angeles, California, USA-based alternative rock band then struggled to shake off accusations that they were a 'novelty band'. The single - a teenage guide to winning popularity - was actually only partially representative of the group's songwriting, and was seen by some as an answer record to Radiohead's 'Creep'. Its lyrics - 'I'm a quarterback/I'm popular/I've got my own car/I'm a football star' - were written by singer/guitarist Matthew Caws in tribute to his own high school alienation. Prior to forming Nada Surf with Daniel Lorca (bass) and Ira Elliot (drums), he had been a member of a number of unsuccessful independent groups. He had also worked as a journalist, taking a post as associate editor on the musicians' magazine Guitar World. 'Popular' was followed by the release of an EP, Karmic, for No. 6 Records (run by Terry Tolkin as a subsidiary of Elektra Records) and their full album debut for the parent label, High/Low.

● ALBUMS: High/Low (Elektra 1996)★★★.

Nagel, Freddy

b. USA. Nagel formed his first dance band, a combo geared towards high society parties and plush ballrooms, in California, USA, in the mid-30s. With vocalists including Lorraine Benson, Bob Locken, Ken Jackson and Allen Overend, their style of goodtime dance music was branded 'Sophisticated Swing'. As well as hotels they found premier engagements in amusement parks including Jantzen Beach (Portland) and Natatorium Park (Spokane, Washington). By the 40s the orchestra had switched approach from 'sweet' to 'swing', touring throughout the Midwest and playing both the Aragon and Trianon Ballrooms in Chicago. However, when the number of bookings went into decline, Nagel chose to drop the music business, taking up farming on a ranch in Susanville, California.

Nagle, Ron

Nagle was a founding member in San Francisco, California, USA, in 1965 of the Terrazzo Brothers, the R&B act that soon evolved into the Mystery Trend, one of the instigators of the 'San Franciscan Sound'. With Nagle on keyboards and vocals, they were a popular live attraction, but were overtaken by others, including the Grateful Dead and Jefferson Airplane. In 1967 Nagle formed the Fast Bucks which included John Blakely, and in 1970 Nagle was invited to join Blakely in Stoneground, but he refused, opting instead to record Bad Rice, produced by Jack Nitzsche, on which members of Stoneground and Commander Cody's Lost Planet Airmen joined Ry Cooder. Nagle's songwriting talents stretch from tough rock songs to tender, sweeping ballads, each of which are enhanced by his dry wit. Over the years he extended his craft, penning scores for horror movies as well as the Tubes' song 'Don't Touch Me There'. In 1978 Nagle formed the Durocs, but this venture folded two years later. Ron Nagle is now a ceramic artist.

● ALBUMS: Bad Rice (Warners 1970)★★★.

Nail, Jimmy

b. 16 March 1954, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Tyne & Wear, England. Never the most natural pop star, the actor Jimmy Nail's efforts in front of a microphone have nevertheless brought him huge UK success. As the son of the boxer and Huddersfield Town footballer, Jimmy Bradford, Nail worked hard on misspending his youth and was expelled from school and was later jailed for football violence. After prison, though, he mended his alcoholic ways and began singing in pubs and clubs. He fronted the band King Crabs, with whom he wore a dress on stage, before embarking on his own songwriting. After a few small acting parts, he received his break when he got the part of the loveable philistine 'Oz' in the widely acclaimed ITV television series, Auf Wiedersehen, Pet! Subsequent acting roles have played upon a gritty, rough-edged demeanour. His musical career took off when his version of Rose Royce's 'Love Don't Live Here Anymore' reached number 3 in the UK chart. However the follow-up single 'That's The Way Love Is' and his debut album flopped, and so he concentrated on his acting career , especially the detective series Spender, which ran for the next seven years. This drama, which Nail co-wrote with Ian LaFrenais, had a musical background. When Nail returned to music it was with the UK number 1 single 'Ain't No Doubt'. However, its follow-up, 'Laura', failed to breach the Top 50. Nail pressed on with a new television series, Crocodile Shoes, which followed the career of a down-at-heel pub-rocker on his way to Nashville and stardom. The album that accompanied it became the biggest-selling UK release of 1994, and featured guest writer Prefab Sprout's Paddy McAloon. The title track and 'Cowboy Dreams' (whose UK's Top Of The Pops television transmission featured an appearance by fellow Newcastle native Sting) also made the UK Top 10. Big River featured Nail's version of a 60s beat group chestnut with the Merseybeats' 'I Think Of You'.

● ALBUMS: Take It Or Leave It (Virgin 1992)★★, Growing Up In Public (East West 1992)★★★★, Crocodile Shoes (East West 1994)★★★★, Big River (East West 1995)★★, Crocodile Shoes II (East West 1996)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Nail File - The Best Of Jimmy Nail (East West 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Somewhere In Time, Somewhere On Tour (Warner Music Vision 1995), Cowboy Dreams (1995).

Nailbomb

A side-project for Sepultura vocalist/guitarist Max Cavalera (b. Belo Horizonte, 4 August 1969) and Fudge Tunnel singer/guitarist Alex Newport, both residents of Phoenix, Arizona. Nailbomb arrived with the public thus: 'It was right after the last show on the Ministry tour. It was in San Diego and we were having a party. Me and Alex were talking 'cause the tour was over, the rest of the guys in Sepultura were going to Brazil, and I wasn't going because it was close to the time my son (Zyon) would be born. But I didn't want to stay and just do nothing in Phoenix...So I told Alex, "why don't we get together and do some songs, just for the hell of it". We didn't even think of recording anything'. Originally titled Hate Project, then Sickman, they eventually settled on Nailbomb because both partners wanted something 'real shocking'. A tape of the duo's demos reached Monte Conner at Roadrunner. He secured a larger budget, and the result was Point Blank, which improved on the quality of the original demos but maintained the punk sound (a cross between Big Black and Discharge) that they had developed together. Contributions came from Sepultura's lead guitarist Andreas Kisser and drummer Igor Cavalera, together with an appearance by Fear Factory's Dino Cazares on '24 Hour Bullshit'. A second album was essentially a live recording, although Cavalera's vocals begin to grate painfully by the end of the set.

● ALBUMS: Point Blank (Roadrunner 1994)★★★, Proud To Commit Commercial Suicide (Roadrunner 1995)★★.

Najma

b. Najma Akhtar, 18 September 1962, Chelmsford, Essex, England. Akhtar began singing in 1984 having recently qualified as a chemical engineer. Winner of the Asian Song Contest held in Birmingham, England, in that year, she recorded an album in India in 1986 before releasing Qareeb, her international debut, a year later. Recorded in England, this album featured a selection of Ghazals (traditional eastern lyric love poems) put to melodies written by Akhtar and accompanied by a combination of traditional Asian and modern western musicians, including saxophonist Ray Carless. Qareeb was widely acclaimed and introduced western listeners to Akhtar's pure, soaring voice. Songs from the album were used for an international fashion show and in the film Sammy And Rosie Get Laid. Over the next two years Akhtar sang throughout the world, including performances as part of the WOMAD 1989 tour. In that year, Atish (meaning 'fire') was released. It drew on a broader range of influences (everything from Indian film music to C&W), and although Najma's vocals were of her customary high standard and percussionist Talvin Singh was featured to good effect, it was an only partially successful mix. 1992's Pukar - Calling You was notable for the reggae-influenced 'Mousum Sahana' and a track based around her vocal improvisations. Throughout her musical career Akhtar's voice has also been used to add passion and colour to albums by a variety of artists ,including Andy Summers, Jah Wobble, Steve Coleman and Robert Plant/Jimmy Page. Forbidden Kiss was a modern adaptation of the film music of Indian composer Sachin Dev Burman.

● ALBUMS: Qareeb (Triple Earth 1987)★★★★, Atish (Triple Earth 1989)★★★, Pukar - Calling You (Last Minute Productions 1992)★★★, Forbidden Kiss - The Music Of S.D. Burman (Shanachie 1996)★★★.

Nakajima, Miyuki

b. 23 February 1952, Hokkaidô, Japan. After winning various amateur minor talent contests, singer-songwriter Nakajima was signed to Canyon Records when she won the 1975 national Japanese Yamaha Popular Music Contest. Her debut release for the label was the competition winner, 'Azamijono Lullaby' ('Miss Azami's Lullaby'). Her second single, 'Jidai' ('The Time') won a Grand Prix at the World Popular Song Festival in November 1975, making her one of the twin stars of Japanese 'new music', along with Yumi Mattôya. Nakajima's introspective songs, including such hits as 'Wakare Uta' ('Farewell Song') (1977) and 'Akujo' ('A Bad Woman') (1981), have since been appreciated by variety of audiences, including readers of modern poetry, and some half-a-dozen books have been written about Nakajima and her songs.

● ALBUMS: Watashino Koega Kikoemasuka (Do You Hear My Voice?) (1976)★★★★, Min'na Satteshimatta (Everybody Has Gone) (1976)★★★, A-ri-ga-tô (Thank You) (1977)★★★, Aishiteiruto Ittekure (Please Say 'I Love You') (1978)★★★, Shin'ainaru Monoe (To My Dear) (1979)★★★, Okaerinasai (Welcome Home) (1979)★★★, Ikiteitemo Iidesuka (Is It Alright For Me To Be Alive?) (1980)★★★, Ringetsu (Near Her Time) (1981)★★★, Kansuigyo (Cold-Water Fish) (1982)★★, Yokan (Presentiment) (1983)★★, Hajimemashite (How Do You Do?) (1984)★★★, Oironaoshi (The Bride's Change Of Dresses) (1985)★★, Miss M. (1985)★★★★, 36.5 C (1987)★★★, Nakajima Miyuki (1988)★★★, Goodbye Girl (1988)★★★★, Utadeshika Ienai (You Can Only Say In Songs) (1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Miyuki Nakajima (1986)★★★★, Singles (1987)★★★, CD Box 10 (1988)★★★★, Presents Best Selection 16 (1989)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Nakajima Miyukiwo Motomete (Looking For Miyuki Nakajima), Taijirô Amasawa. Kataomi (One-side Love), Miyuki Nakajima.

Naked City

Formed in 1990, this radical act revolves around alto saxophonist/composer John Zorn (b. 2 September 1953, New York City, New York, USA.) A leading figurehead of the 'downtown' avant garde enclave, centred on New York's Lower East Side, Zorn drew increasing parallels between free jazz and sonic extremists Napalm Death, whom he consistently championed. His radical versions of Ornette Coleman compositions unveiled on Spy Vs Spy (1989) bore the legend "Fucking hardcore rules" and set the tone for the founding of Naked City. Fred Frith (bass), formerly of Henry Cow, Bill Frisell (guitar), Wayne Horvitz (keyboards) and Joey Baron (drums) joined Zorn for the group's self-titled album debut. Jazz, surf and noise gelled perfectly on this impressive collection, which merged original compositions with 'The James Bond Theme' and sundry film music, each of which was viciously deconstructed. Guest vocalist Yamatsuka Eye, from Japanese hardcore act the Boredoms (Soul Discharge, 1991), was billed as special guest, although he later became a full-time member. The sense of adventure on Naked City maintained on the equally compulsive Torture Garden, after which Zorn undertook an offshoot project, Painkiller (The Guts Of A Virgin, 1991), with Frisell and Napalm Death drummer Mick Harris. A film soundtrack, Heretic Jeux Des Dames Cruelles, released on the Japanese Avant label, maintained Naked City's uncompromising stance; track titles including 'Copraphagist Rituals' merely heightened the controversy. A second Avant disc, Grand Guignol, proved even more challenging, combining Debussy's 'La Cathedrale Engloutie' and Charles Ives' 'The Cage' with 32 virulent blasts of freeform noise, only three of which lasted more than one minute. Zorn and Naked City remain at the cutting edge of adventurous music.

● ALBUMS: Naked City (Nonesuch 1990)★★★★, Torture Garden (1990)★★★★, Heretic - Jeux Des Dames Cruelles (Avant 1992)★★★, Grand Guignol (Avant 1993)★★★, Radio (Avant 1993)★★, Absinthe (Avant 1994)★★, Avenue Blue (Bluemoon 1995)★★★.

Naked Eyes

A duo of Peter Byrne (vocals) and Rob Fisher (keyboards), UK group Naked Eyes enjoyed considerable US success with a simple but effective version of Burt Bacharach and Hal David's 'Always Something There To Remind Me'. Released in 1983, it reached number 8 (the song's highest American placing in its many versions) and preceded the release of three further minor US hits. Despite this success, the group broke up in 1984 after the comparatively disappointing performance of Fuel For The Fire. Fisher subsequently joined with Simon Climie to form Climie Fisher - a group who enjoyed UK chart success in the late 80s.

● ALBUMS: Naked Eyes (EMI 1983)★★★, Fuel For The Fire (EMI 1984)★★.

Naked Prey

This US group was founded in 1981 in Tucson, Arizona, by Van Christian (guitar, vocals), formerly of the Serfers. David Seger (guitar, vocals), Richard Badenious (bass) and Sam Blake (drums) completed the line-up featured on the unit's mini-album debut. The set was produced by ex-Serfer Dan Stuart, guitarist in Green On Red, but although comparisons were naturally drawn between the two, Naked Prey offered a louder, heavier sound. This was more clearly heard on Under The Blue Marlin, on which Blake had been replaced by Tom Larkins. 40 Miles From Nowhere, which featured the Rolling Stones' 'Silver Train' and Glen Campbell's 'Wichita Lineman', was regarded as a disappointment, and the group's musical momentum noticeably faltered. Van Christian nonetheless continues to front his creation, although it now seems doomed to cult status. Kill The Messenger was recorded live in Tucson in 1988.

● ALBUMS: Naked Prey mini-album (Down There 1984)★★★, Under The Blue Marlin (Frontier 1986)★★★, 40 Miles From Nowhere (Frontier 1987)★★, Kill The Messenger (Fundamental 1990)★★.

Naked Raygun

Formerly Negro Commander, a band whose life span extended to a single show, Chicago, Illinois, USA's Naked Raygun were their city's premier hardcore band of the early 80s. Despite appearances to the contrary, their name was chosen prior to the election of US President Ronald Reagan. Dropping bass player Marco Pezzati for Camilo Gonzalez of the Wayouts at the same time as they lost their original name, the rest of the band comprised Jeff Pezzati (vocals) and Santiago Durango (guitar). No drummer featured in the original line-up until Jim Colao was recruited. Santiago then moved on to Big Black and Arsenal, and was replaced by John Haggerty who had already played saxophone at early shows. Their recording career had begun with the documentary 1981 Chicago live compilation, Busted At Oz, released on Autumn Records (it also featured the Effigies and Strike Under, from whom later members would come). New drummer Eric Spicer (ex-DVA) was drafted in 1983 as the group began to take shape. 'The old line-up didn't have a common, long-term goal. We just had practices, we just played some songs we had in our heads . . . We never talked about records, we played any show in Chicago we could get . . .' They played their first New York date at Gildersleeves later that year. It had taken the band three years to complete their first tour, after which they announced two further tours in 1984. Their first record release had been 1983's cacophonous Basement Screams EP on Ruthless Records (run by Big Black and the Effigies, and entirely different to the label of the same name operated by rapper Eazy E). However, their debut album was a vastly superior artefact in showcasing their talents, with individual songs of great quality including 'Surf Combat' and 'Gear', while 'Metastasis' benefited from Pezatti's trademark malevolent vocal inflections. The jazzy intonations of 'Libido', meanwhile, served as an early indication of a willingness to change their mode of address. In 1986 Pierre Kezdy deputized for Camillo on bass, and their All Rise album of that year proved to be their finest moment. The group moved from Homestead Records to set up their own Sandpunder label, before another shift to Caroline Records. Their admiration for the work of the Buzzcocks was compounded when they were joined onstage by a drunken Steve Diggle on their 1989 UK tour to promote Understand?. After an emotional final gig at Chicago's Maxwell's venue Haggerty left (to join Pegboy) to be replaced by Bill Stephens (ex-Product 19). However, his contribution to 1990's Raygun ... Naked Raygun failed to fill the gap adequately, and Naked Raygun subsequently ground to a halt.

● ALBUMS: Throb Throb (Homestead 1985)★★★, All Rise (Homestead 1986)★★★★, Jettison (Caroline 1988)★★★, Understand? (Caroline 1989)★★★, Raygun ... Naked Raygun (Caroline 1990)★★.

Naked Truth

This Atlanta, Georgia-based quartet originated in the local hardcore scene in 1988, although the individual band members arrived from far afield: vocalist Doug Watts came from Detroit, bassist Jeff from Harlem, New York, and drummer Bernard Dawson from Los Angeles, while Jimmie Westley was the only Georgia native, from Savannah. Life was initially tough for a black metal band in Georgia, but the dreadlocked group attracted the interest of former Clash manager Bernie Rhodes, and he helped the band sign to Sony and relocate to London. Green With Rage introduced Naked Truth's raw, aggressive sound, which was given an individual slant by jazz and funk influences, but the homesick Jeff departed, and was replaced by London-born Kwame Boaten for the Read Between The Lines EP. The band were fortunate to secure a UK tour with Little Angels after a Motörhead support slot was lost owing to a tour cancellation, and despite the obviously different styles, Naked Truth were well received. The band built up a varied following, boosted by a series of London residencies, before Fight appeared. The album demonstrated the band's ability to mix styles as diverse as jazz and death metal seamlessly and convincingly, while Watts supplied varied vocals, from rap to all-out hardcore rage, and intelligent lyrics. The band were impressive when they supported Living Colour around the UK, but they decided on a name change to Watts before releasing their second full album.

● ALBUMS: Green With Rage mini-album (Sony 1991)★★★, Fight (Sony 1993)★★★.

Namlook, Peter

German born Namlook is comfortably the most prolific and arguably the best of the new wave of ambient/house artists of the early 90s. Before his immersion in the world of dance, he had experimented with the sitar and new age jazz. His early solo EPs were shrouded in mystery, the labels distinguished solely by the contact number Fax +49-69/454064 - which later transpired to be the title of the label. Since then his output has been fantastic, in both the literal and accepted senses of the word. From his base in Frankfurt, Germany, two or three collaborations emerge every week on 12-inch, via a stable of co-conspirators who include Dr Atmo, Craig Peck, DJ Hubee, DJ Brainwave, DJ Criss, Pascal FEOS and Mixmaster Morris (the latter also recording with Namlook as Dreamfish on the Faxworld subsidiary). Releases are colour-coded to differentiate between the types of music - yellow for trance, black for hardcore, green for house and blue for ambient - the most popular genre in terms of sales reaction. Each is also recorded in a cycle of eight - one each with each collaborator, always beginning with DJ Criss (as Deltraxx). Only five or six hundred copies of any given release ever emerge, quickly selling out, before the 'cycle' is reissued on a compilation CD. As if that were not enough, Namlook also records ambient 'solo' records as Air, Sin or Silence (with Dr Atmo). These recordings are symptomatic of the 'chill-out' factor that hit European clubs in the early 90s. On several of the tracks it can take up to ten mintues for a distinctive beat for rhythm to appear, spending time building its atmospheric, neo-filmic musical soundscapes. Namlook has also found time for the Sequential project. Released in the UK via Rising High, this allows him to work with any of his roster, ironically, out of sequence. Namlook is now perceived to be at the forefront of what has been termed the 'ethno-trance' movement. Rather than riding the ambient bandwagon, he has an overview of this new music's place and purpose: 'I think it's very important to enhance the notion of a global ambient movement, and to realise that a lot of music which we didn't expect to be ambient is in fact very, very ambient. When you examine other cultures you discover that what we recognise as a very new movement is in fact incredibly ancient'.

● ALBUMS: with Dr Atmo Silence (Rising High 1993)★★★, Air 2 (Fax 1994)★★★★, with Bill Laswell Psychonavigation (Fax 1994)★★★★, with Laswell, Klaus Schulze Dark Side Of The Moog IV (Fax 1996)★★★.

Namyslowski, Zbigniew

b. 9 September 1939, Warsaw, Poland. Namyslowski's Lola, recorded during his visit to the UK in 1964, caused quite a stir, since few people in the West were aware of the state of the jazz art in Soviet bloc countries (formerly). However, it was not simply the surprise of Eastern European musicians playing modern, post-bop jazz at all that impressed: Namyslowski was very good indeed, with a hard, emotional tone and considerable facility on the alto saxophone. He had begun his musical studies on piano at the age of six, switching to the cello at 12. He also plays soprano saxophone, flute and trombone. He studied music theory at the Warsaw High School of Music and began his career playing trombone with a trad band and 'cello with a modern group. Concentrating on alto, he set up his quartet in 1963 and toured Europe, Asia and Australasia as well as the USSR. He plays with the kind of intensely personal passion one associates with Jackie McLean and Mike Osborne, weaving in strong strands of Polish folk music in both his writing and improvising. In the late 70s and early 80s he moved away from the more avant garde side of his style and, without losing his individuality, used rock-fusion elements. There was also an adventurous album, Zbigniew Namyslowski, for orchestra and large jazz group. By the late 80s, he was back in the hard-bop mainstream, sounding a little less dangerous than in his early days, but just as sincere and inventive. He has also worked with Krzysztof Komeda and Air Condition, the fine Polish fusion band that he led in the early 80s.

● ALBUMS: Lola (1965)★★★, Zbigniew Namyslowski Quartet (1966)★★, with Krzysztof Komeda Astigmation (1967)★★★★, Winobranie (1973)★★★, All Stars After Hours (1974)★★★, Kujaviek Goes Funky (1975)★★★, with Michael J. Smith Geomusic III (1975)★★★, Namyslowski (1977)★★★, Zbigniew Namyslowski (1980)★★★★, with Air Condition Follow Your Kite (1980)★★★, Air Condition (Affinity 1982)★★★, Polish Jazz Vol 4: (Polskie Nagrania, 1966-87 recordings)★★★★, Open (1988)★★★, The Last Concert (Polonia 1992)★★★.

Nanaco

b. Nanaco Sota, Japan. Nanaco first entered the music industry by chance. As a university student in Japan she was approached by friends from the campus music club about an upcoming audition for a record company which was looking for female singer-songwriters. With her brother's encouragement and a friend's accompanying guitar playing she appeared singing her own composition, and won both the contest and a recording contract. She subsequently recorded five albums in Japan in the late 70s - four solo and one with a band - in a style she later described as 'soft punk'. However, having been brought up on the 60s music of Bob Dylan and Joni Mitchell she decided this was not her favoured style and by chance fell into a career as a photographer. By the mid-90s she was well-known internationally for her fashion shoots, having also photographed several famed actors (including Harvey Keitel) and musicians (Leonard Cohen, Yoko Ono). In 1995 she decided to relaunch her musical career via a contract with the American label Hyper Disc Records. Love Is A Drug featured contemporary recordings that recalled the work of Garbage and Björk, though the ethos was still very much that of the 60s - a fact proved by the inclusion of a cover version of 'Woodstock'.

● ALBUMS: Love Is A Drug (Hyper Disc 1996)★★★★.

Nance, Ray

b. Willis Nance, 10 December 1913, Chicago, Illinois, USA, d. 28 January 1976. A gifted multi-instrumentalist, Nance studied formally for several years and played in various small bands, mostly in the Chicago area. By the early 30s he was a popular local entertainer, leading his own bands and playing several instruments, including trumpet and violin, as well as singing, dancing and performing engaging comedy routines. The 30s also saw him playing in the Chicago big bands led by Earl 'Fatha' Hines and Horace Henderson. He joined Duke Ellington in 1940 and quickly became an integral, valued and much-loved part of the organization. He left Ellington for a short spell in the mid-40s to lead his own band, but returned at the end of 1945; this time he remained virtually without a break, until 1963. From 1964 until his death he led his own small bands but returned regularly to guest with the Ellington band. Whether playing trumpet - later cornet - or violin, Nance's contributions to the Ellington band's recordings are many and marvellous. His violin playing on 'Moon Mist' and his trumpet solo on the 1941 version of 'Take the 'A' Train' are particularly fine examples of his work. Outside the Ellington band he made some excellent recordings with ex-Ellingtonians Paul Gonsalves and Johnny Hodges, while a 1971 Jimmy Rushing recording includes a moving violin solo on 'When I Grow Too Old To Dream'.

● ALBUMS: Duke Ellington Presents (1956)★★★, with Johnny Hodges Duke's In Bed (1956)★★★, with Duke Ellington Black, Brown And Beige (1958)★★★★, Body And Soul (1969)★★★★, with Paul Gonsalves Just A-Sittin' And A-Rockin' (1970)★★★, with Jimmy Rushing The You And Me That Used To Be (1971)★★★, Huffin' 'N' Puffin' (1971)★★★, Ray Nance Quartet And Sextet (Unique 1986)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Ellington The Blanton-Webster Years (1940-42) (Bluebird 1987)★★★★.

Nanton, Joe 'Tricky Sam'

b. Joseph N. Irish, 1 February 1904, New York City, New York, USA, d. 20 July 1946. After playing trombone with a number of small bands in the early and mid-20s, including two stints with Cliff Jackson, Nanton joined Elmer Snowden and by 1926 was in the re-formed band led by Duke Ellington. Along with Bubber Miley, Nanton was a major force in creating the distinctive 'jungle' sound of Ellington's early work. Although occasionally beset by illness, Nanton remained with Ellington until he suffered a stroke in 1945. An inventive soloist capable of producing fascinating excursions within a narrow range, and with a marked penchant for creating sounds that closely resembled the human voice, Nanton helped to establish a role for the trombone in the Ellington band which, thereafter, had to be followed, more or less faithfully, by most of his successors.

● COMPILATIONS: The Indispensable Duke Ellington Vols. 1/2, 3/4, 5/6 (1927-40) (RCA 1983)★★★★, with Duke Ellington The Blanton-Webster Years (1940-42) (Bluebird 1986)★★★★.

Napalm Death

This quintet from Birmingham, England, was formed in 1981. Dispensing with their original style by the mid-80s, they then absorbed punk and thrash metal influences to create the new subgenre of grindcore, arguably the most extreme of all musical forms. Side one of their debut album featured Justin Broadrick (guitar), Mick Harris (drums) and Nick Bullen (bass, vocals), but by side two this had switched to Bill Steer (guitar), Jim Whitely (bass) and Lee Dorrian (vocals), later replaced by Barney Greenway, with Harris the only survivor from that first inception (though that, too, had been subject to numerous changes). Broadrick went on to join Head Of David and Godflesh. Scum largely comprised sub-two-minute blasts of metallic white noise, overridden by Dorrian's unintelligible vocal tirade. The lyrics dealt with social and political injustices, but actually sounded like somebody coughing up blood. Their main advocate was Radio 1 disc jockey John Peel, who had first picked up on Scum, playing the 0.75 second-long track 'You Suffer' three times before inviting them to record a session for the programme in September 1987. This came to be acknowledged as one of the 'Classic Sessions' in Ken Garner's 1993 book on the subject, and introduced new bass player Shane Embury (also Unseen Terror, who split after one album in 1988). Elsewhere, Napalm Death were the subject of derision and total miscomprehension. They were, however, the true pioneers of the 'blast-snare' technique - whereby the tempo of a given beat is sustained at the maximum physical human tolerance level. They went on to attract a small but loyal cult following on the underground heavy metal scene. From Enslavement To Obliteration, consisting of no less than 54 tracks on the CD, was a state-of-the-artless offering that easily bypassed previous extremes in music. However, following a Japanese tour in 1989 both Dorrian and Steer elected to leave the band, the former putting together Cathedral, the latter Carcass. Despite the gravity of the split, replacements were found in vocalist Mark 'Barny' Greenway (ex-Benediction) and US guitarist Jesse Pintado (ex-Terrorizer). To maintain their profile the band embarked on the European Grindcrusher tour (in their wake, grindcore had developed considerably and found mass acceptance among the rank and file of the metal world) with Bolt Thrower, Carcass and Morbid Angel, before playing their first US dates in New York. A second guitarist, Mitch Harris (ex-Righteous Pigs), was added in time for Harmony Corruption, which, along with the 12-inch 'Suffer The Children', saw Napalm Death retreat to a more pure death metal sound. During worldwide touring in 1992, sole surviving original member Mick Harris became disillusioned with the band and vacated the drum-stool for Danny Herrara, a friend of Pintado's from Los Angeles. A fourth album, Utopia Banished, celebrated the band's remarkable survival instincts, while the heady touring schedule continued unabated. By 1993 the band had played in Russia, Israel, Canada and South Africa in addition to the more familiar European and US treks. A cover version of the Dead Kennedys' 'Nazi Punks Fuck Off', issued as a single, reinstated their political motives. As Fear, Emptiness, Despair confirmed, however, they remain the antithesis of style, melody and taste - the punk concept taken to its ultimate extreme, and a great band for all the difficulty of listening to them. Greenway was sacked in October 1996 and replaced a few months later by Phil Vane, but both Diatribes and Inside The Torn Apart represented business as usual.

● ALBUMS: Scum (Earache 1987)★★, From Enslavement To Obliteration (Earache 1988)★★★, The Peel Sessions (Strange Fruit 1989)★★★, Harmony Corruption (Earache 1990)★, Live Corruption (Earache 1990)★, Utopia Banished (Earache 1992)★★, Fear, Emptiness, Despair (Earache 1994)★★, Greed Killing mini-album (Earache 1995)★★, Diatribes (Earache 1996)★★, Inside The Torn Apart (Earache 1997)★★, Breed To Breathe mini-album (Earache 1997)★★, Bootlegged In Japan (Earache 1998)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Death By Manipulation (Earache 1992)★★.

● VIDEOS: Live Corruption (Fotodisk 1990).

Napier, Bill

b. William Napier, 17 December 1935, near Grundy, Wize County, Virginia, USA. A love of the Stanley Brothers' music saw him learn to play mandolin, and in 1954, after relocating to Detroit to find factory work, he played in the evenings with a local band, Curly Dan And Wilma Ann With The Danville Mountain Boys. He began to play lead guitar, and in 1957, he became a member of the Stanley Brothers' Clinch Mountain Boys. He recorded his own 'Daybreak In Dixie' with them and introduced acoustic lead guitar work to the Stanleys' recordings. In 1960, he left the Stanleys and he and Charlie Moore formed the Dixie Partners. They worked together with their band until 1967, during which time they recorded nine albums for King, the last being released after they split. During this time, Napier played lead guitar or banjo (which he used for the first time) and rarely played his mandolin. They appeared regularly on radio and television shows in South Carolina and Florida and made countless festival appearances in various states. After he and Moore parted, Napier, who maintained his home in the Detroit area, became semi-retired. He made appearances from time to time, and in the 70s, he again played with Curly Dan And Wilma Ann. He made some recordings with them, and in 1978, seven with Charlie Moore. In 1984, he recorded his only solo album with a group called the Mountain Music Clan for Old Homestead, before he began to work and record with Larry Taylor and his Waterloo Bluegrass Boys.

● ALBUMS: Hillbilly Fever (Old Homestead 1984)★★★, with Larry Taylor We Salute The Stanley Brothers (Old Homestead 1987)★★★, with Taylor Country Boy's Life (Old Homestead 1987)★★★. As Charlie Moore And Bill Napier Folk 'N' Hill (King 1963)★★★, Country Hymnal (King 1964)★★★, City Folk Back On The Farm (King 1964)★★★, Country Music Goes To Vietnam (King 1966)★★★, Songs For All Lonesome Truck Drivers (King 1966)★★, Brand New Vocal Country & Western Songs (King 1967)★★★, Gospel & Sacred Songs (King 1967)★★★, Spectacular Instrumentals (King 1967)★★, Truckin' On (Gusto 1979)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Moore & Napier (King 1963)★★★, Best Of Charlie Moore & Bill Napier (Starday 1975)★★★, Charlie Moore & Bill Napier Collector's Classics (Old Homestead 1978)★★★.

Napier-Bell, Simon

b. 1939. Napier-Bell emerged from the fringes of British pop when he co-wrote the English lyric to Dusty Springfield's UK number 1, 'You Don't Have To Say You Love Me'. He tentatively entered pop management with the soul duo Diane Scott and Nicki Ferraz, before accepting an invitation to handle the Yardbirds. Napier-Bell produced the group's last major hit, 'Over Under Sideways Down', and secured their role in Blow Up, Michelangelo Antonioni's film of 'swinging London', but their association was not particularly happy. He subsequently managed John's Children and Marc Bolan, talents he briefly combined in 1967, but this particular liaison ended when the latter left to form Tyrannosaurus Rex, later T. Rex. When his other charges split up at the end of that year, Napier-Bell formed a partnership with songwriter Ray Singer. Together they touted schemes to pliant record companies, and having secured an advance, employed aspiring musicians to record the now-requisite album for as little cost as possible. Many of these projects were intentionally unsuccessful, thus permitting the duo to retain the remaining cash balance, but Fresh's Fresh - Out Of Borstal and the self-titled Forevermore, both on RCA, featuring future members of Glencoe and the Average White Band (respectively), generated some interest. Napier-Bell retired from music during the early 70s, but resumed management in 1975 with Japan. During the punk boom he signed the short-lived London, but later achieved notoriety with Wham!. Having extricated the duo from a punitive recording contract, he carefully cultivated their 'buddy' image and as a result helped establish one of the leading pop sensations of the 80s. Their relationship ended acrimoniously over an impending business deal which caused George Michael to announce a solo career. Napier-Bell attempted to fill the gap with Blue Mercedes and his new label, Music UK.

● FURTHER READING: You Don't Have To Say You Love Me, Simon Napier-Bell. Starmakers And Svengalis: The History Of British Pop Management, Johnny Rogan.

Napoleon XIV

The pseudonym of songwriter, performer and recording engineer Jerry Samuels, Napoleon XIV burst into the US/UK Top 10 in the summer of 1966 with the bizarre 'They're Coming To Take Me Away, Ha-Haaa!'. Although clearly a novelty song, its subject matter, mental illness (brought on by the loss of the singer's dog), prompted a ban on many American radio stations. An attempted follow-up, 'I'm In Love With My Little Red Tricycle' failed to capture the public's imagination and Napoleon's credibility was further dented when it was revealed that the performer undertaking personal appearances to promote the record was not Samuels but a certain Richard Stern. The presence of Napoleon imitator Kim Fowley hardly helped matters. An album based round the hit with lyrics by comedy writer Jim Lehrer was rushed out but in spite of such amusing titles as 'Photogenic, Schizophrenic You', 'The Nuts In My Family Tree' and 'Bats In My Belfry', it failed to sell in vast quantities. Its final track was not even by Napoleon but instead featured the strains of Josephine XV warbling the acerbic 'I'm Happy They Took You Away, Ha-Haaa!'. In 1990, Napoleon's finest moment was given a fresh airing courtesy of former Dead Kennedys vocalist Jello Biafra, whose new group Lard recorded a startling version of the hit.

● ALBUMS: They're Coming To Take Me Away, Ha-Haaa! (1966)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Second Coming (Rhino 1996)★★.

Napoleon, Marty

b. 2 June 1921, New York City, New York, USA. A member of a musical family (his father was a professional musician, as were several uncles of whom the most famous is Phil Napoleon), Marty played piano in several second-string big bands of the 40s, including those led by Lee Castle and Joe Venuti. Later, he joined Charlie Barnet and also spent a brief spell with Gene Krupa. In the 50s, Napoleon began playing with his uncle Phil's revived Original Memphis Five and then showed his versatility by becoming a member of Charlie Ventura's Big Four. He next spent periods with Louis Armstrong's All Stars, as well as bands led by his brother Teddy (who was also a professional musician), Coleman Hawkins, Ruby Braff and others. Since the beginning of the 60s he has worked mostly as a solo artist, but has made occasional appearances with small groups, which have included Red Allen, and also played return stints with Armstrong and Krupa. Napoleon's wide stylistic range, which has taken him from dixieland to the edges of bop, has tended to limit appreciation of his talent among those members of the jazz public who like to label musicians.

● ALBUMS: Trio (1955)★★★, with Ruby Braff Little Big Horn (1955)★★★★, with Red Allen Ride, Red, Ride In Hi-Fi (1957)★★★, with Louis Armstrong Louis (1966)★★★.

Napoleon, Phil

b. 2 September 1901, Boston, Massachusetts, d. 30 September 1990. A child prodigy, Napoleon came from a very musical family, two of his nephews being Marty and Teddy Napoleon. He played trumpet in public at the age of five and made his first records 10 years later. In 1922 he was a founder-member of the Original Memphis Five, an exceptionally good dixieland band that made numerous records, many of which sold very well. By the end of the 20s, however, Napoleon had folded the band and gone into studio work where he remained for a decade or more. At the end of the 30s, after an unsuccessful attempt to run a big band, he stopped playing for some years. In the early 50s he returned to the music scene, reviving the Memphis Five and thereafter leading a succession of dixieland bands. He continued to play well into the 80s, often at his own club, Napoleon's Retreat, in Miami, Florida. A fiery player with an attacking style, Napoleon was never on a par with such near-contemporaries as Bix Beiderbecke, although he claimed to have been influential on Beiderbecke and Red Nichols. Nevertheless, his many records show him to have been a distinctive and clear-toned trumpeter. These records, together with his remarkably long playing career, made him an important figure in the spread of jazz throughout the world.

● ALBUMS: Phil Napoleon And His Memphis Five (1959) ★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Red Nichols New York Horns (1924-29)★★★, Bailey's Lucky Seven (Queendisc 1983)★★, Red Nichols And Phil Napoleon (Zeta 1991)★★★.

Napoleon, Teddy

b. 23 June 1914, New York City, New York, USA, d. 5 July 1964. Older brother of Marty Napoleon and nephew of Phil Napoleon, Teddy played piano in a band led by Lee Castle in the early 30s. After touring extensively with minor bands he arrived in New York at the end of that decade. He played in yet more minor dancebands but then, in 1944, joined Gene Krupa. Featured not only in the big band but also in Krupa's band-within-a-band, a trio which was often rounded out by Charlie Ventura, Napoleon continued this association even after Krupa had folded the big band. He toured the world with Krupa's trio in the 50s, making concert, club and festival appearances and several records. He also played and sometimes recorded with Flip Phillips, Bill Harris and his brother Marty.

● ALBUMS: with Gene Krupa The Rocking Mr Krupa (1953)★★★★, with Krupa Krupa Rocks (1957)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Drummin' Man Vol. 2 (1945-49) (1987)★★★★.

Naptali, Raymond

b. Raymond McCook, 1961, Jamaica, West Indies. Naptali spent his formative years in Jamaica, where he witnessed the phenomenal rise of Dennis Al Capone, Big Youth, I. Roy and U-Roy. By the early 70s, he and his family had settled in the UK, where, inspired by the sound systems, he gradually built up his reputation as a DJ with Fatman Hi Fi. In 1980 the duo of Raymond And Roy recorded the classic 'Late Night Blues' with the Instigators, and Naptali embarked on a prolific recording career, including Anthony 'Sir George' Brightly's production of 'Dirty Rat' and 'ABC', and with Clive Stanhope, the popular 'Mr Talkative' and 'Automatic Boom'. Fatman produced the reggae Top 10 hit 'Love Trap/No Chat To Credel', which also featured backing by the Instigators, with vocals from Cornell Campbell. Although his recorded output tapered off, he made a dramatic reappearance in 1996 when he performed at the Bunny Wailer Unity Showcase, alongside Chaka Demus And Pliers, Spanner Banner and Prince Lincoln. In 1997 Naptali continued to appear with the renowned Fatman, performing at London's illustrious Dub Club as Fatman And Sons At The Controls With Raymond Naptali.

● ALBUMS: Trouble Posse (CSA 1982)★★, with Roy Ranking Late Night Session (KG 1982)★★★.

Narell, Andy

b. 1954, New York City, New York, USA. A white, Jewish musician from New York, Narell has defied his geographical and cultural heritage to become one of the most prominent figures in steel drum music in the Caribbean. That is not his only accomplishment in music - he is also an in-house producer for Windham Hill Records for artists such as Billy Childs - but it is certainly his most noteworthy. He claims his career route to be almost totally accidental. 'My dad was working at these settlement houses in Manhattan in the early 60s. There was a guy from Antigua who needed a job and said he knew how to make and play steel drums. My father got an idea. Why not get these gang kids from the Lower East Side and Harlem to play steel drums?' As a result Narell started his own steel band group in Queens, a group that appeared regularly at New York festivals and celebrations. In 1966 he travelled to the Caribbean for the first time as a 12 year old boy. The Trinidadians were startled by his ability and technique. From then on he has recorded widely and successfully, though he has experienced a strong degree of resentment from some of the more puritanical islanders, who naturally enough see him as an unwanted interloper. In the 1990 Panorama Steel Drum Festival, one group, the Our Boys Steel Orchestra, were banned simply for playing a Narell composition ('We Kinda Music'). As the most visible exponent of his instrument outside of the Caribbean, Narell has featured widely on the work of other artists - including Aretha Franklin and Manhattan Transfer. His soundtrack work, meanwhile, includes contributions to the films Ghostbusters and 48 Hrs. A succession of albums have proved themselves fixtures on the Billboard Contemporary Jazz charts - an uneasy categorisation of his music but broadly the most effective one. While most steel bands delight in massed ranks of drummers, he continues to work primarily as a soloist, these days against the backdrop of an internationally-flavoured group featuring Steve Erquiaga (b. USA; guitar), Keith Jones (b. Jamaica; bass), Paul van Wageningen (b. The Netherlands; drums) and Luis Conte (b. Cuba; percussion). Typical of his work is 1996's The Long Time Band, which drew inspiration for its rhythms from traditions as diverse as African zouk, Caribbean soca, Trinidadian calypso, Brazilian salsa and samba and American jazz. Closer to the original sound of the steel orchestra, however, was 1992's Down The Road, which included a touching dedication to the pioneering work of his father, who had died a year previously, in 'One Last Goodbye'.

● ALBUMS: The Hammer (Windham Hill 1985)★★★, Little Secrets (Windham Hill 1991)★★, Down The Road (Windham Hill 1992)★★★, The Long Time Band (Windham Hill 1996)★★★.

Nas

b. Nasir Jones, c.1974, Long Island, New York, USA. From the tough Queensbridge housing projects which brought the world Marley Marl, MC Shan and Intelligent Hoodlum, Nas is a highly skilled hip-hop artist whose music is crafted with a degree of subtlety and forethought often absent from the genre. He was heavily influenced by his jazz-playing father, and started rapping at the age of nine, graduating to a crew entitled the Devastatin' Seven in the mid-80s. He met Main Source producer Large Professor in 1989, in the course of recording his first demo tape. The producer introduced him to the group itself, and he would see his debut on Main Source's 1990 album Breaking Atoms, guesting on the cut 'Live At The BBQ', where he was part of a skilled chorus line, alongside Large Professor and Akinyele. However, though he was widely applauded for his contribution he failed to build on the impact, drifting through life and becoming disillusioned by the death of his best friend Will, and the shooting of his brother. He may well have stayed on the outside of the hip-hop game had not MC Serch (Nas had guested on his 'Back To The Grill') searched him out, to provide a solo track for the Zebra Head film. 'Half Time', again recorded with the Large Professor, was the result. A debut album followed, with contributions from the cream of New York's producers: Premier (Gang Starr), Pete Rock and Q-Tip (A Tribe Called Quest). A hefty unit for which Columbia were happy to pay the bill, judging Nas to be their priority rap act for 1994. Nas, who had by now dropped his 'Nasty' prefix, honed a rapping style that was at once flamboyant, but with a lyrical armoury that far surpassed the expected humdrum 'bitches and ho's' routines. Serch, now A&R head of Wild Pitch, once declared Nas: 'Pound for pound, note for note, word for word, the best MC I ever heard in my life'. There was now evidence to suggest he may have been correct. It Was Written debuted at number 1 on the Billboard album chart in July 1996. In 1997 Nas collaborated with Foxy Brown, AZ and Dr Dre as The Firm.

- ALBUMS: Illmatic (Columbia 1994)★★★★, It Was Written (Columbia 1996)★★★.

Nascimento, Milton

b. 26 October 1942, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Singer-songwriter Nascimento draws much of his inspiration from Brazil's Portuguese heritage, where even the jolliest tune can be counted on to contain more than a frisson of melancholy. His biggest successes, both at home and abroad, came in the 70s with Milagre Dos Peixes (1973, re-released in the UK in 1990) and Milton (1977), the latter featuring contributions from Herbie Hancock, Wayne Shorter, Airto Moreira, Roberto Silva and Laudir De Oliviera. First teaming with Shorter on his 1975 album Native Dancer, Nascimento was widely taken up by the Los Angeles music fraternity over the next few years, most notably guesting on albums by Flora Purim, Deodato and Charlie Rouse.

- ALBUMS: Milagre Dos Peixes (1973)★★★, with Flora Purim 500 Miles High (1976)★★★, Milton (1977)★★★★, Travessia (Sign 1986)★★★, Meetings And Farewells (Polydor 1986)★★★, Ship Of Lovers (Verve 1987)★★★★, Yauarete (CBS 1988)★★★, Txai (Columbia 1991)★★★, Planeta Blue Estrada Do Sol (1992)★★★, Noticias Do Brasil (Tropical 1993)★★★, Angelus (Warners 1994)★★, Nascimento (Warners 1997)★★★★.

Nash, Graham

b. 2 February 1942, Blackpool, Lancashire, England. Guitarist/vocalist Nash embraced music during the skiffle boom. He formed the Two Teens with classmate Allan Clarke in 1955, but by the following decade the duo, now known as Ricky And Dane, had joined local revue Kirk Stephens And The Deltas. In 1961 they broke away to found the Hollies, which evolved from provincial status into one of Britain's most popular 60s attractions, with Nash's shrill voice cutting through their glorious harmony vocals. Although their early hits were drawn from outside sources, Nash, Clarke and guitarist Tony Hicks subsequently forged a prolific songwriting team. However, Nash's growing introspection, as demonstrated by 'King Midas In Reverse' (1967), was at odds with his partners' pop-based preferences and the following year he left to join 'supergroup' Crosby, Stills And Nash. Nash's distinctive nasal tenor instilled a sense of identity to the trio's harmonies, and although his compositional talent was viewed as lightweight by many commentators, 'Marrakesh Express' (originally written for the Hollies), 'Teach Your Children' and 'Just A Song Before I Go', were all highly successful when issued as singles. Songs For Beginners confirmed the artist's unpretentious, if naïve style with material weaving political statements, notably 'Chicago', to personal confessions. Stellar support from his girlfriend Rita Coolidge, plus Jerry Garcia and Dave Mason brought precision to a set which silenced many of Nash's critics. However, the stark and dour Wild Tales, recorded following the murder of Nash's girlfriend Amy Gosage, proved less successful and not unnaturally lacked the buoyancy of its predecessor; nevertheless it contained some strong material, including 'Prison Song' and 'Another Sleep Song'. Graham then spent the remainder of the decade as half of Crosby And Nash, or participating in the parent group's innumerable reunions. He devoted considerable time and effort to charitable and political projects, including No Nukes and M.U.S.E., but a regenerated solo career was undermined by the poor reception afforded Earth And Sky. Having completed a brief spell in a rejuvenated Hollies (1983), Nash resumed his on-off commitments to Crosby, Stills, Nash And Young and to date has only released one further solo effort. The perplexing Innocent Eyes matched Nash with modern technology: a surfeit of programmed drum machines. The record sounded synthesized and overproduced and was rejected by the critics and public. Nash's first love has always been CS&N, and history has shown that his best post-Hollies work has been unselfishly saved for group rather than solo activities. Nash's own stability has enabled him to help his colleagues through numerous problems; he takes much of the credit for David Crosby's recovery from drug addiction.

- ALBUMS: Songs For Beginners (Atlantic 1971)★★★, Wild Tales (Atlantic 1974)★★★, Earth And Sky (Capitol 1980)★★★, Innocent Eyes (Atlantic 1986)★★.
- FURTHER READING: Crosby, Stills And Nash, Dave Zimmer.

Nash, Johnny

b. 9 August 1940, Houston, Texas, USA. The story of Nash's association with Bob Marley has been well documented. His background is similar to that of many Jamaican performers in that he first started singing in a church choir. By his early teens he performed cover versions of popular R&B hits of the 50s on a television show called Matinee. He enjoyed his first US chart entry in 1957 with a cover version of Doris Day's 'A Very Special Love'. ABC Records decided to market the young singer as another Johnny Mathis, which did little to enhance his career. Disillusioned with the label, he concentrated on a career in films. In 1958 he starred in Take A Giant Step, and in 1960 he appeared alongside Dennis Hopper in Key Witness, which was critically acclaimed in Europe. Returning to the recording studio he persevered with middle-of-the-road material but was unable to generate a hit. A number of label and style changes did not improve his chart potential. By 1965 he finally achieved a Top 5 hit in the R&B chart with the ballad 'Lets Move And Groove Together'. He was unable to maintain the winning formula, but in 1967 his R&B hit was enjoying chart success in Jamaica. The good fortunes in Jamaica led Nash to the island to promote his hit. It was here that he was exposed to ska and arranged a return visit to the island to record at Federal Studios. Accompanied by Byron Lee And The Dragonaires, the sessions resulted in 'Cupid', 'Hold Me Tight' and 'You Got Soul'. When he released 'Hold Me Tight', the song became an international hit, achieving Top 5 success in the UK as well as a return to the Jamaican chart. He formed a partnership with Danny Simms, and a label, JAD (Johnny and Danny), releasing recordings by Bob Marley, Byron Lee, Lloyd Price and Kim Weston as well as his own material until the label folded in the early 70s. He returned to recording in Jamaica at Harry J.'s studio where he met Marley, who wrote 'Stir It Up', which revived Nash's career by peaking at number 13 on the UK chart in June 1972. He continued to enjoy popularity with 'I Can See Clearly Now', a UK Top 5 hit that was successfully covered by Jimmy Cliff in 1994 for the film Cool Runnings. Other hits followed, including 'Ooh What A Feeling' and 'There Are More Questions Than Answers', but the further he drifted from reggae, the less successful the single. He covered other Bob Marley compositions, including 'Nice Time' and 'Guava Jelly', but they were not picked up for single release, although the latter was on the b-side to 'There Are More Questions Than Answers'. His career subsequently took another downward turn but was revived yet again when he returned to Jamaica to record an Ernie Smith composition, 'Tears On My Pillow', which reached number 1 in the UK Top 10 in June 1975. He also reached the UK chart with 'Let's Be Friends' and '(What) A Wonderful World' before choosing to devote more energy to films and his West Indian recording complex.

● ALBUMS: A Teenager Sings The Blues (ABC 1957)★★★, I Got Rhythm (ABC 1959)★★★, Hold Me Tight (JAD 1968)★★★, Let's Go Dancing (Columbia 1969)★★★, I Can See Clearly Now (Columbia 1972)★★★, My Merry Go Round (Columbia 1973)★★, Celebrate Life (Columbia 1974)★★★, Tears On My Pillow (Columbia 1975)★★★, What A Wonderful World (Columbia 1977)★★, Johnny Nash Album (Columbia 1980)★★★, Stir It Up (Hallmark 1981)★★, Here Again (London 1986)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Columbia 1975)★★★, The Johnny Nash Collection (Epic 1977)★★★, The Best Of (Columbia 1996)★★★.

Nashville Bluegrass Band

NBB are without doubt one of the best of the modern bluegrass bands. They were founded in 1984 by Alan O'Bryant (b. 26 December 1955, Reidsville, North Carolina, USA; banjo, vocals), Pat Enright (b. *c.*1939, Huntington, Indiana, USA; guitar, vocals), Mike Compton (b. Meridian, Mississippi, USA; mandolin, vocals) and Mark Hembree (b. Appleton, Wisconsin, USA; acoustic bass, vocals). O'Bryant, who began his bluegrass career as a teenager, and Enright, who had already had success fronting his own band on the west coast, met and began playing together in 1974, when they both relocated to Nashville. In 1976, they linked up with Compton and the three played local venues. Hembree played with Tony Trischka in Monroe Doctrine in 1977, before moving to Nashville in 1979 to spend almost five years with Bill Monroe. He subsequently became acquainted with Enright and the four recorded My Native Home, on which they were joined by fiddler Blaine Sprouse, for Rounder Records in 1985. Stuart Duncan (b. 14 April 1964, Quantico, Virginia, USA; fiddle,mandolin), who had worked with Larry Sparks before becoming a popular session musician, also joined the band. In 1986, the NBB had the distinction of becoming the first bluegrass band to perform in China. In 1987, they recorded two further albums for Rounder before moving to Sugar Hill Records. In July 1988, after a successful tour of several Middle Eastern countries, their bus was involved in a very serious road accident near Roanoke, Virginia. Hembree suffered such serious injuries that he left the group and was followed soon afterwards by Compton. Nick Haney (sadly a leukaemia victim) briefly played bass for the band until Gene Libbea (b. Southern California, USA; acoustic bass, ukulele, vocals) took over later that year. The band was also boosted by the arrival of ex-Kentucky Colonel and Country Gazette member Roland White (b. 23 April 1938, Lewiston, Maine, USA; mandolin, banjo, vocals), who also had great experience from his days playing with Flatt And Scruggs and Bill and James Monroe. In 1988, the NBB played with Peter Rowan on his noted New Moon Rising. In 1990, they made a very successful tour of several European countries, including England. Their Waitin' For The Hard Times To Go won them a well-deserved Grammy for Best Bluegrass Album in 1993. Duncan, who has won many awards for his fiddle prowess, released his solo Stuart Duncan on Sugar Hill in 1992. O'Bryant has written many fine songs, which have proved successful for the band and in some cases for other artists. His song 'Those Memories Of You' became a Top 5 hit for Dolly Parton, Emmylou Harris And Linda Ronstadt recording as Trio in 1987. Enright is also a competent writer. The members' high standard of musicianship and brilliant harmony vocal work make the NBB great favourites throughout the world of bluegrass music.

● ALBUMS: My Native Home (Rounder 1985)★★★★, Idle Time (Rounder 1987)★★★★, To Be His Child (Rounder 1987)★★★, The Boys Are Back In Town (Sugar Hill 1990)★★★, Home Of The Blues (Sugar Hill 1991)★★★, Waitin' For The Hard Times To Go (Sugar Hill 1993)★★★, Still Unplugged (Sugar Hill 1995)★★, Unleashed (Sugar Hill 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Nashville Bluegrass Band (Rounder 1987)★★★.

Nashville Skyline - Bob Dylan

It is hard to recall now how deeply unfashionable country music was in 1969 - Dylan's label, Columbia, dismayed at his apparent retrogression, begged him to remove the word 'Nashville' from the album's title. However, as usual, he proved ahead of the game; his embrace of country ushered in Gram Parsons, the Flying Burrito Brothers and scores of subsequent artists under the Americana banner. Prescient too was his nod to Johnny Cash, with whom he duets on the gorgeous 'Girl From The North Country'. Most tracks are pleasant and enduring; the chart hit 'Lay Lady Lay' remains the Dylan song of choice for non-fans.

- Tracks: Girl From The North Country; Nashville Skyline Rag; To Be Alone With You; I Threw It All Away; Peggy Day; Lay Lady Lay; One More Night; Tell Me That It Isn't True; Country Pie; Tonight I'll Be Staying Here With You.
- First Released 1969
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 3

Nashville Teens

Formed in Weybridge, Surrey, England, in 1962, the Nashville Teens initially comprised vocalists Arthur 'Art' Sharp (b. 26 May 1941, Woking, Surrey, England) and Ray Phillips (b. Ramon John Phillips, 16 January 1944, Tiger Bay, Cardiff, Wales), Michael Dunford (guitar), John Hawken (b. 9 May 1940, Bournemouth, Dorset, England; piano), Pete Shannon (b. Peter Shannon Harris, 23 August 1941, Antrim, Northern Ireland; bass) and Roger Groom (drums). Dunford and Groom left the line-up the following year and the group was completed by John Allen (b. John Samuel Allen, 23 April, 1945, St. Albans, Hertfordshire, England; guitar), Barry Jenkins (b. 22 December 1944, Leicester, England; drums) and third vocalist Terry Crow for a protracted tenure in Hamburg, Germany. This period is chronicled on Jerry Lee Lewis; Live At The Star Club on which the septet backed the veteran rock 'n' roll star. In 1964, and with Crow now absent, the Teens were aligned with producer Mickie Most for a pounding version of 'Tobacco Road', which deservedly climbed to number 6 in the UK. The similarly styled 'Google Eye' also proved popular, reaching the Top 10, but a split with Most ended this brief ascendancy. Collaborations with Andrew Loog Oldham ('This Little Bird') and Shel Talmy ('The Hard Way') were minor hits, but at the expense of the unit's undeniable grasp of R&B. Groom rejoined the line-up in 1966 when Jenkins left for the Animals, but despite excellent versions of Randy Newman's 'The Biggest Night Of Her Life' and Bob Dylan's 'All Along The Watchtower', the Nashville Teens were unable to rekindle former success. A spate of defections - John Hawken later found fame with Renaissance - left Phillips the sole remaining original member. He continues to front this act and concurrently performs with the British Invasion All-Stars, which features musicians drawn from the Downliners Sect, Creation and the Pretty Things.

- ALBUMS: The Nashville Teens (New World 1975)★★, Live At The Red House (1984)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (1993)★★★.
- FILMS: Be My Guest (1965).

Nashville West

A short-lived but pivotal California-based country group, Nashville West included a former member of the Kentucky Colonels, Clarence White (b. 6 June 1944, Lewiston, Maine, USA, d. July 1973; guitar), and three ex-members of the Castaways - Wayne Moore (guitar, bass, vocals), Gene Parsons (b. 14 September 1944, Los Angeles, California, USA; drums, vocals) and Gib Guilbeau (fiddle, vocals). Popular in Bakersfield and El Monte's Nashville West club, the quartet's archive recordings reveal a mixture of contemporary hits ('By The Time I Get To Phoenix', 'Ode To Billy Joe') and country favourites ('Send Me Back Home', 'Sweet Mental Revenge'). The group split up in August 1968 when Parsons and White joined the Byrds. However, the duo paid homage to their former ensemble by including the instrumental 'Nashville West' on Dr. Byrds And Mr. Hyde.

- ALBUMS: Nashville West (Sierra 1978)★★★.

Nasty Idols

This Swedish glam-metal quintet was formed in 1988 by vocalist Andy Pierce and guitarist Jonnie Wee, with Dick Qwarfort (bass), George Swanson (drums) and Roger White (keyboards) completing the line-up. They pursued a commercial hard rock direction in the style of Bon Jovi and Whitesnake, debuting with Gigolos On Parole to widespread indifference. Wee was soon replaced by Peter Espinoza on guitar, and his arrival marked a move towards a more glam-metal image, with Mötley Crüe and Hanoi Rocks influences taking over. Cruel Intention was the result, released in 1991. A marked improvement, it nevertheless failed to emulate this new set of influences in terms of commercial reward.

- ALBUMS: Gigolos On Parole (Black Mark 1989)★★, Cruel Intention (Black Mark 1991)★★★★.

Nasty Savage

This heavy metal/thrash quintet was formed in Brandigan, Florida, USA, in 1983 by vocalist and professional wrestler Nasty Ronnie and guitarist Ben Meyer. Assisted by David Austin (guitar), Fred Dregischan (bass) and Curtis Beeson (drums), they made their debut via demo tracks that subsequently appeared on the Metal Massacre IV and Iron Tyrants compilations in 1984. This led to a contract with Metal Blade Records, producing four albums over the ensuing five years. From an initial hard rock base of Iron Maiden and Judas Priest styles, they gradually incorporated thrash elements into their music, drawing inspiration and ideas from Metallica, Anthrax and Slayer. They employed four bass players in as many years, with guitarist Richard Bateman assuming bass duties in 1988. Rob Proctor replaced Beeson on drums the following year. When they eventually sundered at the close of the decade, they were chiefly lamented for their spectacular live show, which featured their wild vocalist smashing television sets on stage and performing crude gymnastics.

● ALBUMS: Nasty Savage (Metal Blade 1985)★★★, Indulgence (Metal Blade 1987)★★★★, Abstract Reality (Metal Blade 1988)★★★, Penetration Point (Metal Blade 1989)★★.

Natal, Nanette

b. 6 October 1945, New York City, New York, USA. She began performing in her mid-teens, acting and playing classical music. In the 60s she became a singer, working with rock and blues bands and also playing guitar and writing songs. During this period Natal worked extensively in New York's Greenwich village music scene, performed on radio and television and also toured the university campus circuit. In 1968 she was signed by Vanguard Records which brought her a lot of exposure and promotion. In the late 70s she began singing jazz, developing as an improviser, performing mostly in New York and headlining at The Tin Palace for over a year. In 1980 she formed her own production company and jazz record label, Benyo Music. Around this same time Natal also began teaching, eventually building a thriving private practice. In the early 90s she was contributing a regular feature on singing technique to the magazine The Music Paper. In addition to her performing and teaching roles, Natal is also a gifted composer having written many of the songs she performs and was expecting to premiere and record her own jazz opera, Street Opera, in 1997. Simultaneously, she was working on a theatrical production, a one-woman show, Too Much Jazz. Natal's inventiveness as composer and performer is reflected in her recordings which are lively, polished and vibrant with enthusiasm. Her singing style is poised and rhythmic and she displays elegant control in all that she does. Her vast knowledge of technique, which she ably imparts to her students, both in lessons and magazine articles, is never allowed to come between her and the songs she sings. Instead, she employs her skills, over which she has superb command, to enable her to give insightful interpretations of her wide-ranging repertoire.

● ALBUMS: Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow (Vanguard 1969)★★★, The Beginning (Evolution 1972)★★★, My Song Of Something (Benyo 1986)★★, Stairway To The Stars (Benyo 1992)★★★.

Nathan, Sydney

b. 1904, Cincinnati, Ohio, USA, d. 1968. Nathan learned to play drums and piano in his childhood with the help of local black musicians, but entered the record-selling business in the 30s, although he still became a successful songwriter under the pseudonym of 'Lois Mann'. In November 1943 his King Records was launched with releases by local hillbilly acts. These initial releases failed to sell owing to the poor pressings; Nathan then decided to learn how to press his own records. As a result, King Records became known as an outlet for hillbilly music, and had success early on with hits by the Delmore Brothers and Cowboy Copas. One year later, Nathan started his Queen Records subsidiary as a showcase for jazz and R&B acts, making particular use of his friend Lucky Millinder's Orchestra, with releases by Bullmoose Jackson, Annisteen Allen, David 'Panama' Francis and Sam Taylor - all Millinder alumni. In 1946 Queen Records began recording, issuing some fine gospel music by such artists as Swan's Silvertone Singers and Wings Over Jordan Choir. Nathan's name became synonymous with peerless gospel and exciting R&B thereafter. By August 1947 the Queen label was discontinued and all output - new and old - was issued or reissued on King Records. This switch brought about a change of luck for Nathan; success came almost immediately with three big hits in Bullmoose Jackson's 'I Love You, Yes I Do', Lonnie Johnson's 'Tomorrow Night' and Wynonie Harris' version of 'Good Rockin' Tonight', and at about the same time, Nathan began leasing or acquiring masters from smaller independents such as DeLuxe, Miracle and Gotham. During the 50s and early 60s, King Records went from strength to strength with top-selling R&B artists such as Tiny Bradshaw, Earl Bostic, Bill Doggett, Sonny Thompson, Little Willie John and James Brown, and on the new subsidiary label Federal with the Dominoes, Freddie King and others, but by 1964 Nathan's search for innovative recording talent was virtually at an end. King settled down to focus on James Brown's career and to repackage much of its back-catalogue on album. In 1968 Nathan merged with Don Pierce's Starday record company. After Nathan's death, Starday/King and all its offshoots were sold to Gusto Records of Nashville, Tennessee.

Nati

b. José Natividad Martínez, 25 December 1959, Caracas, Venezuela. Nati played various instruments, including mandolin, piano and saxophone, before settling for the flute and percussion. He started performing professionally at the age of 10 with Grupo Fiebre and Acosta y sus Tremendos. He joined Grupo Nueva Gente in 1975. This was followed by a stint as director of La Magnifica, a charanga (flute, strings, rhythm section and voices band) formed by conga player Elio Pacheco, an ex-founder member of Dimensión Latina. He assisted Tabaco (b. Carlos Quintana, 15 September 1943, Venezuela; singer/bandleader) in enlarging his sextet to a brass-led orquesta (band), giving it more power and swing. Nati became an accompanist with La Amistad (the Friendship), a band organized by another two ex-members of Dimensión Latina: singer Rodrigo Mendoza and pianist Jesús 'Chuíto' Narváez. La Amistad's co-lead vocalist was Puerto Rican Tito Gómez, who had worked with Sonora Ponceña (see Papo Lucca), La Terrifica, Ray Barretto, Tito Valentín, Grupo Niche and as a solo artist. Nati formed his own charanga and teamed up with Panamanian singer Carlos 'El Grande' to record A Base De Salsa in 1982 on the Velvet label. El Grande, who was formerly with La Salsa Mayor, went solo and recorded Sonero Con Clase (1982) with the band of percussionist and vocalist José Mangual Jnr.; he later worked with pianist, bandleader and arranger Alfredo Valdés Jnr. and Louie Ramírez. Meanwhile, Nati signed to Ralph Cartagena's Combo Records label. His 1985 release, Yo No Soy Guapo combined charanga instrumentation (violins, flute) with a brass-led orquesta. Nati composed half the tracks and handled arranging and production. He dropped the flute and violins on Para Usted (1986) and wrote all the arrangements for a trombone/trumpet frontline. In addition to producing the album, he composed over half the songs, including the two outstanding tracks 'Que Hablen' and 'La Engañada'. Nati faded from the scene after his next release. However, he reappeared in 1989 with the aptly-titled Regresó (Return) on CBS.

● ALBUMS: with Tabaco Tabaco y sus Metales (1978)★★★, with La Amistad Presente y Pasado (1979)★★★★, El Poder De . . . La Amistad (1980)★★★, with Carlos 'El Grande' A Base De Salsa (1982)★★★★, solo Nati y su Charanga (1983)★★★★, Yo No Soy Guapo (1985)★★★, Para Usted (1986)★★★, Tiene Razón Señora (1986)★★★, Regresó (1989)★★★★.

Nation Records

This label was formed by Kath Canoville and Aki Nawaz (Propa-Ghandi from Fun-Da-Mental) in 1988 when they had had trouble convincing major labels there was a place for their concept of multiracial 'world-dance' fusion. One of the strongest, most distinguished independent labels, Nation Records has since promoted such artists as Asian Dub Foundation, Natasha Atlas, Fun-Da-Mental, Loop Guru, TJ Rhemi and Transglobal Underground. Its first release, the compilation Fuse (1989) introduced artists including Mahatma T (Talvin Singh), Pulse 8 (including Jah Wobble) and !Loca! (featuring Natasha Atlas) whose cross-cultural mix blended bhangra and Latin with house and techno. Aided by the success of the bigger acts (especially Transglobal's 'Temple Head'), Nation has attracted more artists with sympathetic tendencies, maintaining the 'creative, innovative, uncompromising' philosophy of their logo. 'We hear something great and we want other people to hear it as well. That's our main driving force rather than wanting to sell bucketloads of records'. Brushes with the dance fraternity have included the Global Sweatbox compilation (1993) which contained mixes of Nation's back catalogue by Youth, Drum Club, Sabres Of Paradise and Fabio among others. In the event of the rise in popularity of the Asian scene in the mid-90s it might have tempting to concentrate on that area, but Canoville and Nawaz are more concerned with true cross-cultural fertilization and its power to bring people from different backgrounds together. Like Planet Dog Records, Nation have stuck to their concept rather than trying to promote a particular sound, with the result that their music is really quite varied, from the political hip-hop of Fun-Da-Mental and ADF to Loop Guru's chilled 'ethno-techno', Transglobal's rich blend of dub, house and techno to TJ Rhemi's more focused drum 'n' bass style. Since its foundation they have organized a number of clubs and showcases for their artists, sometimes under the name Global Sweatbox.

National Barn Dance, The

Many radio stations broadcast 'barn dance' programmes, with WBAP Fort Worth probably the first in 1923. One of the longest-running and the one to gain the most nationwide acceptance was the National Barn Dance broadcast by WLS Chicago. WLS (World's Largest Store), owned by Sears-Roebuck Company, first broadcast in April 1924. The first barn dance programme was broadcast from the Sherman Hotel and featured the local Isham Jones dance band and a group of country musicians, who probably included fiddler Tommy Dandurand and banjo player Jesse Doolittle. The listeners enjoyed the programme and the development of the National Barn Dance began. It featured a mixture of popular numbers and folk/country songs and the show gradually began to produce its first stars. One of the best-loved was singer Grace Wilson (b. 10 April 1890, Owesso, Michigan, USA), who sang on the show from 1924 until she retired in 1960. After 1925, the show took on a more hillbilly format, with the arrival of performers such as Bradley Kincaid and Chubby Parker. In the early days, the show's development owed much to its announcer, George D. Hay (the Solemn Old Judge), a journalist from Memphis. With regular blasts of his steamboat whistle to emphasize his words, he popularized the show, before heading for WSM Nashville, where in November 1925, he launched a barn dance programme that soon became the Grand Ole Opry. Sears-Roebuck sold WLS to the Prairie Farmer newspaper in 1928, by which time the programme was well established and continued to produce stars such as Luther Ossenbrink, who, as Arkie The Woodchopper, arrived in 1929 and stayed until WLS ended the programme in 1960. During the 30s, the show's popularity increased, owing to performers such as Lulu Belle And Scotty, the Cumberland Ridge Runners, Karl And Harty, Red Foley and Gene Autry. In 1932, WLS moved the show to the Eighth Street Theatre, where it remained until the late 50s. In 1933, an hour-long Saturday evening section of the programme was sponsored by Alka-Seltzer and networked by NBC (it remained a networked NBC programme until 1946). This publicity led to tours being made by the show's performers and other radio stations broadcasting their own barn dance programmes. In 1944, Paramount Pictures released The National Barn Dance film, which described the programme as 'America's Favorite Radio Show'. It featured Lulu Belle And Scotty, Dinning Sisters, Hoosier Hotshots, Arkie and many others. The Kentucky Ramblers, who joined in 1933, remained a popular act until 1948. Bob Atcher achieved major success during his days on the show and in later years, Rex Allen, Johnny Bond and even Bill Haley were members. The show finally lost out to the much larger Opry. WLS dropped the programme in 1960 but it was broadcast by WGN Chicago until 1968, when the National Barn Dance, country music's first jamboree, finally played the last waltz.

National Health

This group was formed in August 1975 by Phil Miller (guitar) and Dave Stewart (organ), former members of Hatfield And The North. Amanda Parsons (vocals), Alan Gowen (synthesizer), Mont Campbell (ex-Egg; bass) and Bill Bruford (ex-Yes and King Crimson; drums) completed the group's original line-up, but the following year Neil Murray joined in place of Campbell who had opted for session work. National Health continued the quintessential English progressive rock style forged by Soft Machine, Caravan and Matching Mole, but despite judicious live appearances, failed to reap the same commercial rewards. Pip Pyle replaced Bruford prior to the recording of National Health, but further changes in the unit's line-up preceded Of Queues And Cures. Such instability doomed the group's commercial progress, although they remained a popular live attraction until the end of the decade. Stewart subsequently enjoyed a successful solo career recreating classic 60s singles with singers Colin Blunstone and Barbara Gaskin, in turn confirming the demise of National Health as a serious proposition. Despite continued interest from the Continent, the group was then disbanded.

● ALBUMS: National Health (Affinity 1978)★★★, Of Queues And Cures (Cahrle 1978)★★, D.S. Al Coda (1982)★★.

National Jazz Ensemble

(see Israels, Chuck)

National Youth Jazz Orchestra

In 1965 Bill Ashton, a teacher at a London school, formed the London Schools Jazz Orchestra. This was an organization in which youngsters could pursue musical ambitions in a setting that related to music which interested them, rather than forms imposed upon them by the educational hierarchy. Thanks to Ashton's persistence in the face of establishment hostility the orchestra survived, later becoming known as the London Youth Jazz Orchestra and, eventually, the National Youth Jazz Orchestra. In 1974 NYJO became a fully professional organization and remains the UK's only full-time professional big band playing jazz. Although Ashton's conception was to create an atmosphere in which young musicians could develop their craft, NYJO has long since passed the stage of being either a training ground or even a 'youth' orchestra. The extraordinarily high standard of musicianship demanded by the band means that newcomers to its ranks must have already achieved a very high standard of technical competence before auditioning. Ashton's leadership is a mixture of democracy and benign autocracy. The band's members choose the music, which varies from the brand new to charts originally played by editions of NYJO that were on the road when present members were barely walking, and Ashton organizes the musicians' choices into an entertaining programme. Although the nature of the orchestra means that it is in an almost constant state of flux, NYJO has developed an identifiable sound. Much of the music that is played by the band is original, often written by members, and everything is especially arranged. While many arrangements are 'in-house', others come from outside. Among the arrangers are Paul Higgs, David Lindup, Brian Priestley, Chris Smith, Terry Catharine, Bill Charleson, Neil Ardley, Alec Gould and Ashton. Many exceptional talents have passed through NYJO's ranks over the years, including Steve and Julian Argüelles, Chris Hunter, Lance Ellington, Paul Hart, David O'Higgins, Phil Todd, Mark and Andy Nightingale, Stan Sulzmann, Chris Laurence, Richard Symons, Gerard Presencer and Guy Barker. Ashton's interest in songwriting has ensured a succession of good singers with the band, including Carol Kenyon, Helen Sorrell and Litsa Davies. Over the years NYJO has travelled extensively, appearing in various European countries and also visiting the USA. The band's many albums have proved successful and help spread the sound of a remarkable orchestra that, although effectively the creation of one man, has come to represent the best in big band jazz and consistently denies its name by being both international and fully mature.

● ALBUMS: Return Trip (1976)★★★, Eleven Plus: Live At LWT (1976)★★★, In Camra (1977)★★★★, The Sherwood Forest Suite (1977)★★★★, To Russia With Jazz (1977)★★★, Mary Rose (1979)★★, Down Under (1980)★★, Why Don't They Write Songs Like This Any More? (1982)★★★, Playing Turkey (1983)★★★, Born Again (1983)★★★, Full Score (1985)★★★, Concrete Cows (1986)★★★, With An Open Mind (1986)★★★, Shades Of Blue And Green (1987)★★★★, Big Band Christmas (1989)★★, Maltese Cross (NYJO 1989)★★★, Rememberance (NYJO 1990)★★★, Cookin' With Gas (NYJO 1990)★★★, Looking Forward Looking Back (NYJO 1992)★★★, These Are The Jokes (1992)★★★, Merry Christmas And A Happy New Year (NYJO 1993)★★.

Native Hipsters

This London-based duo comprised William Wilding (b. 18 May 1953, Romford, Essex, England) and Blatt (b. Nanette Greenblatt, 9 March 1952, Cape Town, South Africa). Prior to 1980 they had worked under names such as the Wildings, then later as the Patterns with Robert Cubitt and Tom Fawcett. In that guise, they released the challenging but largely incoherent 'The B'Shop Is In The Fridge'. They next emerged as (And The) Native Hipsters, again with Cubitt and Fawcett. It was as the latter that Wilding and Blatt achieved national recognition with their 1980 release 'There Goes Concorde Again'. Blatt's repetitive, childlike enthusiasm at the sighting of the famed 'silverbird' captured the attention of UK Radio 1 disc jockey John Peel, resulting in the single peaking at number 5 in the UK independent charts. Wilding turned down an offer from producer Tony Visconti to re-record the single for national consumption, preferring total artistic control. Their next release in 1982, a four-track EP, Tenderly Hurt Me, won them respect from the music press who had previously condemned them as quirky oddballs. The Hipsters' inventive and bizarre mixture of surreal poetry, diverse musical styles, original and sampled sounds, plus a vast array of musical instruments of whatever came to hand, managed to establish a cult following. Variously assisted by friends such as Lester Square (guitar, from the Monochrome Set), Annie Whitehead (trombone), Chris Cornetto (cornet), Liduina Van Der Sman (saxophone) and Simon Davison (piano), Wilding and Blatt have over the years recorded countless sessions, live and in the studio, which were later compiled to form Blatt On The Landscape. During the early 90s Wilding performed on the London cabaret circuit as the iconoclastic Woody Bop Muddy, an act that consisted of his passing savage judgement on whatever and whoever's records he acquired, by way of smashing them with a hammer.

● ALBUMS: as the Wildings Why Did I Buy Those Blue Pyjamas (1979)★★★, Blatt On The Landscape cassette only (1988)★★★.

Native Tongues Posse

An informal gathering in the late 80s of artists based in New York, USA, which set about to confirm and celebrate the history of black women and men. Intrinsic to the rise of 'Afrocentricity' in rap music, the coalition included the Jungle Brothers, De La Soul, A Tribe Called Quest, Queen Latifah and Monie Love. A critical backlash ensued in due course, with some of the proponents, or at least some of their adherents, criticised for their obsession with 'Afrocentric trinkets'. However, the movement as a whole was one imbued with positivity and intelligence, and the Native Tongues Posse played no small part in shifting rap's agenda from the self to the social.

Natty Dread - Bob Marley

Out on his own following the defection of Bunny Wailer and Peter Tosh, this album saw Marley utilizing the talents of the I-Threes for the first time. There was still a nod to his past in the inclusion of a cover version of a Wailers tune, 'Lively Up Yourself', but elsewhere he revelled in his new found freedom, on 'Revolution' and most particularly, 'No Woman, No Cry', which has practically become a Jamaican national anthem since its release. If that song had an instantly universal appeal, Rasta themes were also brilliantly conveyed via 'Them Belly Full (But We Hungry)' and 'Rebel Music (Three O'Clock Roadblock)'. Marley had announced himself as one of the greats of modern music.

● Tracks: Lively Up Yourself; No Woman No Cry; Them Belly Full (But We Hungry); Rebel Music (3 O'Clock Roadblock); So Jah Seh; Natty Dread; Bend Down Low; Talkin' Blues; Revolution.

● First released 1975

● UK peak chart position: 75

● USA peak chart position: 28

Natural Acoustic Band

This trio was formed in 1969, in Milngavie, Glasgow, Scotland. There were a number of personnel changes but the essential line-up was Tom Hoy (b. 5 February 1950, Glasgow, Scotland; guitar, vocals), Robin Thyne (b. 1 November 1950, Newcastle Upon Tyne, England; guitar, vocals), and Krysia Kocjan, pronounced Kotsyan (b. 10 August 1953, Craigendoran, Scotland; vocals). Krysia had a Polish father and a Flemish mother. The group played their first gig on 5 November 1969, at Alloa Working Men's Club. Eventually, the press picked up on Kocjan's vocal talent, and they were increasingly billed as the Natural Acoustic Band, featuring Krysia Kocjan. Occasionally, the group were augmented by a Chinese drummer and an Australian bass player, a truly international line-up. The two albums for RCA, were both released in 1972; Learning To Live in May, and Branching In in October. Krysia left in late 1972, and Robin and Tom continued to work with Joanna Carlin. She then left to pursue a solo career, and is now better known as Melanie Harrold. Robin and Tom continued as a duo, until Tom joined Magna Carta in 1975. Initially this was as a sound engineer, but eventually as a full-time member of the group. Robin also joined the Magna Carta, in 1977. In 1979, both Hoy and Thyne left and formed Nova Carta, recording the sole album, Roadworks, for CBS, in Holland. Kocjan released a solo album in 1974, and has since worked with Al Stewart, Ray Davies, Robin Williamson, Mike Heron, and Glenn Yarborough. Now living in the USA, Kocjan is still busy with session work, and voice teaching, and has plans to record again. Robin continues to work in a solo capacity, while Tom works in a duo with his wife Geraldine as Tom And Gerry.

● ALBUMS: Learning To Live (RCA 1972)★★★, Branching In (RCA 1972)★★★.

Natural Four

The Natural Four, who had a series of moderate-sized hits during the soul era, recorded a soft style of soul in two configurations, both led by Chris James. The original members, from Oakland, California, USA, were Chris James, Allen Richardson, John January and Al

Bowden. This group first recorded in 1968 on a small local label called Boola-Boola. From there they went to ABC Records, and reached the national charts in 1969 with 'Why Should We Stop Now' (number 31 R&B). The group was unable to repeat their success. Before breaking up in 1971, they recorded an unnoticed single for Bay Area producer Ron Carson that was released on Chess Records. James organized a new group - Darryl Canady, Steve Striplin and Delmos Whitney - and signed with Curtis Mayfield's Curtom label in 1972, and the following year had a sizable hit with 'Can This Be Real' (number 10 R&B, number 31 pop), written by Leroy Hutson. Subsequent records were not nearly so engaging and the group faded. Their last chart record was in 1976.

● ALBUMS: Natural Four (ABC 1970)★★★, Natural Four (Curtom 1974)★★★, Heaven Right Here On Earth (Curtom 1975)★★, Nightchaser (Curtom 1976)★★.

Naturals

Formed in Harlow, Essex, the Naturals - Ricki Potter (b. 1945, England; vocals), Curt Cresswell (b. 1948, England; lead guitar), Bob O'Neale (b. 1942, England; harmonica), Mike Wakelin (b. 1942, England; bass), Douglas Ellis (b. 1942, England; guitar) and Roy Heather (Hoath) (b. 1947, England; drums) - were originally known as the Blue Beats and had recorded several singles under this early appellation. The quintet made their debut as the Naturals in 1964, scoring their only hit in the UK singles chart that same year with a version of the Beatles' song, 'I Should Have Known Better'. Suspicions that the song had been the success, rather than the performers, was confirmed when subsequent, inferior singles failed to make an impression.

Nature Of A Sista' - Queen Latifah

Another unimpeachable set from the Queen of East Orange, and a second long-playing treatise on enlightened female perspective. This saw soul and ragga tunes dominate, taking over from the rawer hip-hop tones of her debut. This results in a dilution of impact, although this is partially compensated for by classy, dancefloor-aimed tracks such as 'Give Me Your Love' and 'How Do I Love Thee?'. It is a lesser album, indeed, but one that should not be overlooked, as it still blows the majority of Latifah's competition out of the water.

● Tracks: Latifah's Had It Up 2 Here; Nuff Of The Ruff Stuff; One Mo' Time; Give Me Your Love; Love Again; Bad As A Mutha; Fly Girl; Sexy Fancy; Nature Of A Sister; That's The Way We Flow; If You Don't Know; How Do I Love Thee?.

● First released 1991

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 117

Naturists

Seven-piece UK techno group (yes, really), led by Wilmott Doonican, who claims to be a relative of Val Doonican, and Sid Raven Following the release of a mini-album (which despite the 'Gimmick' was well-received in the press), they released an appropriate cover version in Blue Pearl's 'Naked In The Rain', in mid 1994. 'We were all into naturism before we started making records', they claim, 'in fact we all met at a small naturist reserve near Reading'. Their lack of clothing apparently acts as a key ingredient in the recording process too: 'When we went into the studio and recorded naked we found that the sound was much better because the top end frequencies weren't absorbed by out clothes'.

● ALBUMS: Friendly Islands mini-album (1993)★★★.

Naughton, David

b. 13 February 1951, Hartford, Connecticut, USA. Naughton is best known for his 1979 US Top 5 hit 'Makin' It'. After studying English literature and acting, Naughton appeared in a series of Dr. Pepper soda commercials, singing and dancing. He was then hired to act in the US television series Makin' It, based on the film Saturday Night Fever. Naughton recorded the title song from the film, and it scaled the charts. The television programme lasted only two months, however, and Naughton did not record again. His one hit was used that same year in a comedy film titled Meatballs.

Naughty By Nature

From New Jersey, New York, USA, the trio of Treach (b. Anthony Criss, 27 December 1970, East Orange, New Jersey, USA), Vinnie (b. Vincent Brown, 17 September 1970, East Orange, New Jersey, USA) and DJ Kay Gee (b. Keir Gist, 15 September 1969, East Orange, New Jersey, USA) are a rap troupe utilizing the funkier rather than darker aspects of gangsta hip hop. Heavily influenced by the patronage of Queen Latifah, the language was blue but not always in the overtly sexual sense. 'Ghetto Bastard', for example, was a master stroke, pickled in the atmosphere of the street and exact in its execution of ghetto vernacular. Unlike many other hardcore outfits, Naughty By Nature were not afraid of injecting a touch of soul into the mix (once more, à la Queen Latifah), which makes the best of their work all the more endearing. They gave Tommy Boy their biggest ever hit with the 12-inch 'OPP', the largest-grossing authentic rap single in the USA in 1990, selling over a million copies ('OPP' stands for 'Other People's Pussy', incidentally, though that did not prevent several generations enthusiastically singing along to 'I'm down with OPP', making the record an American equivalent to the Shamen's 'Ebeneezer Goode'). A second album upped the sleaze factor with some lyrics, but still maintained the group's best traditions elswhere. The single lifted from 19 Naughty III, 'Hip Hip Hooray', became another monster hit, helped in no small part by a Spike Lee-filmed video. Treach himself was to be found in Houston acting in the film Jason's Lyric, though he had appeared previously in the widely ridiculed Meteor Man. He has written his own film treatments, in-between bungie jumping sessions in Daytona with close friend Pepa (Salt 'N' Pepa). He also launched the Naughty Gear clothing line. Kay Gee, meanwhile, earned a production deal with Motown, intial fruit from which was characterized by Zhane's debut album and hit single, 'Hey Mr. Deejay'.

● ALBUMS: Naughty By Nature (Tommy Boy 1991)★★★, 19 Naughty III (Tommy Boy 1993)★★★★, Poverty's Paradise (Tommy Boy 1995)★★★.

Naughty Marietta (film musical)

Jeanette MacDonald, who had enjoyed much success with Maurice Chevalier in early musicals such as The Love Parade, One Hour With You, and Love Me Tonight, co-starred in this film with a new partner with whom she would always be indelibly associated - Nelson Eddy. In the screenplay, by John Lee Mahin, Frances Goodrich, and Albert Hackett, which was based on the 1910 stage operetta of the same name, Macdonald plays a French princess who avoids an arranged marriage by boarding a ship bound for the Colonies. The brave Capt. Warrington (Eddy) saves her from a fate worse than death, and the couple find sanctuary in New Orleans before eventually settling down together 'Neath The Southern Moon'. That was just one of the numbers in Victor Herbert's sumptuous score which included such delights as 'Ah! Sweet Mystery Of Life', 'Italian Street Song', 'I'm Falling In Love With Someone', and 'Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!' (all with lyrics by Rida Johnson Young), and 'Chansonette' (lyric by Gus Kahn). Veteran character actor Frank Morgan lead the supporting cast, which also included Elsa Lanchester, Joseph Cawthorn, Akim Tamiroff, Douglas Dumbrille, Edward Brophy, and Walter Kingsford. This first episode in the Macdonald-Eddy series, during which they became the screen's favourite romantic singing duo, was produced by Hunt Stromberg for MGM and directed by W.S. Van Dyke. The MGM studios were awarded an Oscar for the sound recording.

Naughty Marietta (stage musical)

A comic operetta with music by Victor Herbert and a book and lyrics by Rida Johnson Young. It opened on 7 November 1910 at the New York theatre with a story set in New Orleans in 1870, where Naples-born Marietta d'Altena (Emma Trentini) has travelled in search of a husband. She finds the man of her dreams (in more ways than one) when the upstanding Captain Dick Warrington (Orville Harrold) finds that he too has been dreaming of the same song, 'Ah! Sweet Mystery Of Life'. It was only one of several numbers that endured from the attractive and tuneful score. The remainder included 'Tramp! Tramp! Tramp!', 'I'm Falling In Love With Someone', ''Neath The Southern Moon', 'Italian Street Song', 'Naughty Marietta', and 'Live For Today'. Even with the magnificent Trentini, Naughty Marietta folded after only 136 performances, but was revived on Broadway in 1912. Since then it has been frequently performed throughout the world, and is a part of the repertoire of the New York City Opera. The 1935 film version starred Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy.

Naura, Michael

b. 19 August 1934, Memel, Lithuania. Naura is a self-taught pianist and flautist who studied philosophy, sociology and graphic arts in Berlin. In the 50s he and Wolfgang Schluter (vibes) started a band that sought to mix blues, bebop and European avant garde and which became one of the leading German bands of the 60s. Since 1971, he has worked as the Head of the Norddeutscher Rundfunk Jazz Department. He continues occasional work with bands and regularly accompanies Peter Ruhmkorf in poetry-jazz recitals. He is also president of Performers and Artists for Nuclear Disarmament (PANDA) in Germany.

● ALBUMS: with Peter Ruhmkorf Kein Apolloprogramm Fur Lyrik (1976)★★★, Country Children (1977)★★★.

Navarre, Ludovic

b. *c.*1967, Saint-Germaine-En-Laye, France. French techno/ambient artist who records as Modus Vivendi, Deepside, Hexagone, Soofle, LN's, Deep Contest, DS and Saint-Germaine-En-Laye (titled after his hometown). A mainstay of Laurent Garnier's FNAC and F imprints of the early 90s, Navarre has contributed to over 90% of both labels' output as a musician/technician. Each of the names he has employed for his own recordings see him adopt a different house style, from techno to electronic jazz. Among his more impressive outings have been his work as Saint-Germaine-En-Laye ('Alabama Blues', 'My Momma Said', 'Walk So Lonely'), Modus VIvendi ('Modus Vivendi') and DS (Volume 1, Volume 2).

Navarro, Fats

b. Theodore Navarro, 24 September 1923, Key West, Florida, USA, d. 7 July 1950. After starting to learn the tenor saxophone and piano, Navarro opted for trumpet and by his mid-teens was playing professionally. In 1943 he joined the Andy Kirk band, working alongside Howard McGhee, and two years later was in the trumpet section of Billy Eckstine's bebop-oriented big band. He later settled in New York, where he played with leading beboppers such as Kenny Clarke, Ernie Henry, Howard McGhee, Tadd Dameron, Bud Powell, Charlie Parker, Leo Parker, Sonny Rollins and Dizzy Gillespie, the last of whom he had replaced in the Eckstine band. Navarro also played with mainstreamers like Coleman Hawkins and Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis. Most of these musical associations resulted in a legacy of fine recordings, with the Dameron sessions proving to be especially fruitful. During his short life Navarro displayed a precocious talent, his rich full tone contrasting with the thin sound adopted by many of the other young bebop trumpeters of the day. In this respect his sound resembled that of an earlier generation of trumpeters who were a little out of fashion by the late 40s. His last years were dogged by ill-health, exacerbated by an addiction to heroin, and he died in 1950. Despite his brief life, Navarro proved to be one of the most accessible of the early bop trumpeters and was an influence on another similarly short-lived talent, Clifford Brown.

● ALBUMS: with Billy Eckstine Together! (1947)★★★★, with Charlie Parker One Night In Birdland (1950)★★★★, The Tadd Dameron Band 1948, Vols. 1 & 2 (1948) (1976)★★★★, The Fabulous Fats Navarro Vols. 1 & 2 (1947-49) (Blue Note 1983)★★★★, Fat Girl - The Savoy Sessions (1947) (1985)★★★★, Memorial (Savoy 1992)★★★★.

Navras Records

Founded in 1992, English record label Navras was established in Sherwood Road, north London. The intention was to make accessible selected recordings of high quality live concert performances of traditional and classical music from the Indian Sub-continent. The name literally translates as 'nine emotions' or 'nine sentiments', which refers to the Indian concept of nine different human emotions captured in the performing arts. The formation of Navras allowed western audiences to hear at first hand the 'raga' concept of melodic form, with its indelible cycles of time and season. By 1996 the label had released over 50 titles, displaying the work of leading artists in the field of wind and string instruments, vocal music and the main classical schools. Vocal artists included Pandit Bhimsen Joshi, Ajoy Chakrabarty, Rashid Khan, Pandit Mallikarjun Mansur, Lakshmi Shankar and Pandit C.R. Vyas. World-renowned instrumentalists such as sarod player Ustad Amjad Ali Khan and sitarist Ustad Vilayat Khan also featured on the label. However, arguably the most interesting series was one of duet (or jugal-bandhi) recordings made by such as Ustad Bismillah Khan and Ustad Bilayat Khan, Mariprasad Chaurasia and Kishori Amonkar and Ustad Vilayat Khan and Shujaat Khan. Other categories of release included Classical Dhrupad (Uday Bhawalkar), Classical Devotional (Anup Jalota), Sufi Qawwalis (Nusrat Fateh Ali Khan), Classical Percussion (Pandit Kishan Maharaj), Classical Dance (Pandit Birju Maharaj), Classical Ghazals (Mehdi Hassan) and Folk Music (the compilation, Folk Music Of Rajasthan).

Naylor, Jerry

b. Jerry Naylor Jackson, 6 March 1939, Stephenville, Texas, USA. Naylor sang country music from an early age; when aged only 14, he appeared on Louisiana Hayride. While in the US Army, he broke his back, an injury that has continued to plague him since then. He befriended Glen Campbell in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and in 1961 moved with him to Hollywood. He found work as a disc jockey and a single, 'You're Thirteen', was released in the UK. He and Campbell joined the Crickets in 1962 and he was featured on 'Don't Ever Change', 'My Little Girl' and 'Teardrops Fall Like Rain'. In 1964 he had a heart attack, brought about, he says, 'by the stress of being Buddy Holly's replacement'. He played the leading role in a concept album, a country opera entitled The Legend Of Johnny Brown, in 1966. He returned to the Crickets for their 1971 album Rockin' 50s Rock And Roll, but mostly he has followed a solo career, making numerous singles for US labels including Motown's country division. His best-known record is 'Is That All There Is To A Honky Tonk?' in 1975. He now works as a disc jockey in Angoura, California, and he is known to Buddy Holly fans for his outrageous claims to have been a Cricket throughout their hitmaking years.

● ALBUMS: Happy Birthday USA (1976)★★, Love Away Her Memory (1977)★★, Once Again (1978)★★.

Nazareth

Formed in 1968 in Dunfermline, Fife, Scotland, Nazareth evolved out of local attractions the Shadettes. Dan McCafferty (vocals), Manny Charlton (guitar), Pete Agnew (bass) and Darrell Sweet (drums) took their new name from the opening line in 'The Weight', a contemporary hit for the Band. After completing a gruelling Scottish tour, Nazareth opted to move to London. Nazareth and Exercises showed undoubted promise, while a third set, Razamanaz, spawned two UK Top 10 singles in 'Broken Down Angel' and 'Bad Bad Boy' (both 1973). New producer Roger Glover helped to focus the quartet's brand of melodic hard rock, and such skills were equally prevalent on Loud 'N' Proud. An unlikely rendition of Joni Mitchell's 'This Flight Tonight' gave the group another major chart entry, while the Charlton-produced Hair Of The Dog confirmed Nazareth as an international attraction. Another cover version, this time of Tomorrow's 'My White Bicycle', was a Top 20 entry and although Rampant did not yield a single, the custom-recorded 'Love Hurts', originally a hit for the Everly Brothers, proved highly successful in the USA and Canada. Nazareth's popularity remained undiminished throughout the 70s but, having tired of a four-piece line-up, they added guitarist Zal Cleminson, formerly of the Sensational Alex Harvey Band, for No Mean City. Still desirous for change, the group invited Jeff 'Skunk' Baxter, late of Steely Dan and the Doobie Brothers, to produce Malice In Wonderland. While stylistically different from previous albums, the result was artistically satisfying. Contrasting ambitions then led to Cleminson's amicable departure, but the line-up was subsequently augmented by former Spirit keyboard player John Locke. Baxter also produced the experimental The Fool Circle, while the group's desire to capture their in-concert fire resulted in 'Snaz. Glasgow guitarist Billy Rankin had now joined the group, but dissatisfaction with touring led to Locke's departure following 2XS. Rankin then switched to keyboards, but although Nazareth continued to enjoy popularity in the USA and Europe, their stature in the UK was receding. Bereft of a major recording contract, Nazareth suspended their career during the late 80s, leaving McCafferty free to pursue solo ambitions (he had already released a solo album in 1975). No Jive was an impressive comeback album in 1992, but Nazareth unfortunately failed to capitalize on its success.

● ALBUMS: Nazareth (Mooncrest 1971)★★★, Exercises (Mooncrest 1972)★★★, Razamanaz (Mooncrest 1973)★★★★, Loud 'N' Proud (Mooncrest 1974)★★★, Rampant (Mooncrest 1974)★★★, Hair Of The Dog (Mooncrest 1975)★★★★, Close Enough For Rock 'N' Roll (Mountain 1976)★★★, Play 'N' The Game (Mountain 1976)★★, Expect No Mercy (Mountain 1977)★★, No Mean City (Mountain 1978)★★, Malice In Wonderland (Mountain 1980)★★, The Fool Circle (NEMS 1981)★★, 'Snaz (NEMS 1981)★★, 2XS (NEMS 1982)★★, Sound Elixir (Vertigo 1983)★★, The Catch (Vertigo 1984)★★, Cinema (Vertigo 1986)★★, Snakes & Ladders (Vertigo 1990)★★, No Jive (Mainstream 1992)★★, Nazareth At The Beeb (Reef 1998)★★★.

Solo: Dan McCafferty Dan McCafferty (1975)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Mountain 1975)★★★, 20 Greatest Hits: Nazareth (Sahara 1985)★★★, Anthology: Nazareth (Raw Power 1988)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Razamanaz (Hendring 1990).

Nazz

Formed in Philadelphia, USA in 1967, the Nazz comprised of Todd Rundgren (guitar, vocals), Carson Van Osten (bass, vocals), both ex-members of bar-band Woody's Truck Stop, Stewkey (lead vocals, keyboards) and Thom Mooney (drums). Although the quartet made its live debut supporting the Doors, manager John Kurland deliberately cultivated an air of exclusivity which ultimately hampered progress. A lucrative recording deal with publishers Screen Gems resulted in Nazz, a synthesis of British and US pop invoking the Who, Jimi Hendrix, Buffalo Springfield and Small Faces. However, the unit's anglophilia and mod affectations proved unfashionable in the face of acid-rock which, when coupled with growing internal disharmony, sowed the seeds of their demise. Nazz Nazz emphasized the positive elements of its predecessor and although the same influences were still apparent, a sense of individuality was also present. Rundgren's departure for a solo career in 1970 brought the Nazz to an end, and Nazz III, compiled from material from the Nazz Nazz sessions, was issued posthumously. Stewkey and Mooney were later joined by Rick Neilsen and Tom Petersson (later of Cheap Trick) in a group that took a variety of names, but only Rundgren achieved lasting success outside the Nazz. Despite negligible commercial gain, his former group's work was later lauded as the precursor to a generation of British-influenced US bands, notably the Raspberries, Stories and Sparks.

● ALBUMS: Nazz (SGC 1968)★★★, Nazz Nazz (SGC 1969)★★★, Nazz III (SGC 1970)★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of The Nazz (1983)★★★.

Ndegé Ocello, Me'Shell

b. 1969, Berlin, West Germany. Introduced by her PR machine as a female equivalent to Prince, Me'Shell Ndegé Ocello has embarked on a solo career that embraces both the hip-hop and R&B markets. Like Prince, she is a multi-instrumentalist, and writes, produces and plays on all her songs. Her name is Swahili, meaning 'Free Like A Bird'. After a nomadic life as the child of a US forces man, her first love was art rather than the jazz skills of her father and brother. Much of her youth was spent in Washington's 'go-go' scene, where at one point she was actually shot at while on stage with Little Bennie and the Masters, at the Cherry Atlantic Skating Rink. Her interest in music blossomed when her brother started playing guitar in a local band; when the bass player left his instrument lying around after rehearsal, Me'Shell was a quick convert. At the age of 19, she left for New York 'with my baby and my bass'. There she joined Living Colour's Black Rock Coalition, and recorded sessions for artists of the calibre of Caron Wheeler and Steve Coleman. She was the musical director for Arrested Development's Saturday Night Live appearance, though her own demos attracted little response. Madonna subsequently stepped in, inviting her to become one of the first artists signed to her Maverick empire. A palpable maturity was revealed on her debut, with a combination of acid jazz and R&B rhythms backing her beat poetry. She gained a breakthrough hit with 'If That's Your Boyfriend (He Wasn't Last Night)', a provocative post-feminist statement. Despite the sexual overtones of her packaging, she was not averse to strong political statements, with material such as 'Step Into The Projects' retaining a strong cutting edge, and lines such as 'The white man shall forever sleep with one eye open' (from 'Shoot'n Up And Gett'n High') suggesting overtones of Public Enemy. The album was produced by A Tribe Called Quest's Bob Power, alongside guests including DJ Premier (Gang Starr) and Geri Allen (Blue Note). Although she attracted some criticism for espousing the corporate rebellion angle, her connections with Maverick hardly passing unobserved, there was substance and fire in the best of her work. In 1994 she had a US Top 3 hit with 'Wild Night' a duet with John Mellencamp. Peace Beyond Passion reverted to 70s-style retro-funk.

● ALBUMS: Plantation Lullabies (Maverick/Reprise 1993)★★★★, Peace Beyond Passion (Maverick 1996)★★★.

Neagle, Anna

b. Marjorie Robertson, 20 October 1904, Forest Gate, London, England, d. 3 June 1986, Surrey, England. One of the most beloved and durable artists in the history of British showbusiness, Neagle was an actress, dancer and singer in West End musicals and British films, with a career spanning more than 60 years. She took dancing lessons as a child, and appeared in the chorus of Charlot's Revue and a similar production, Tricks, in 1925. In the late 20s she undertook more chorus work in Rose Marie, The Charlot Show Of 1926, The Desert Song and two London Pavilion revues as one of 'Mr Cochran's Young Ladies'. Up until then she had been primarily a dancer, but she developed further in 1931 when she took the ingenue lead opposite Jack Buchanan in the hit musical comedy Stand Up And Sing, duetting with him on the lovely 'There's Always Tomorrow'. Herbert Wilcox produced and directed her first film musical, Goodnight Vienna, in 1932, and most of her subsequent pictures, and the two were married in 1943. As well as making a number of acclaimed dramatic films during the 30s, Anna Neagle continued to appear in screen musicals such as The Little Damozel, Bitter Sweet, The Queen's Affair, Limelight and London Melody (1939). From 1940-41 she and Wilcox were in America to make films such as Irene (in which she sang and danced to the delightful 'Alice Blue Gown'), No, No, Nanette and Sunny. They returned to England to make a series of light and frothy romantic comedies, with the occasional musical number, which included Spring In Park Lane, The Courtneys Of Curzon Street and Maytime In Mayfair (1949). Anna Neagle's leading man was Michael Wilding, and this magical partnership ensured that the films were among the British cinema's top box office attractions of the time. In the 50s Anna Neagle returned to the stage for The Glorious Days (1953), co-starred with Errol Flynn (of all people) in the film version of that show, Lilacs In The Spring; and also appeared in the screen adaptation of King's Rhapsody. She then kicked up her heels with popular singer Frankie Vaughan in The Lady Is A Square (1958). That was her last appearance on screen, although she did produce three more of Vaughan's films, These Dangerous Years, Wonderful Things! and Heart Of A Man. In the early 60s Wilcox went bankrupt when his film company and several of the couple's other business ventures failed. Part of their salvation came in the form of David Heneker's smash hit musical Charlie Girl (1965). Neagle stayed with the show - apart from the occasional holiday - for the duration of its run of over 2,000 performances and subsequent tours. On the day it was announced that she was to be made a Dame of the British Empire, the cast of Charlie Girl surprised her by singing 'There Is Nothing Like A Dame' at the end of the evening's performance. In 1973 the new Broadway production of No, No, Nanette arrived in London, and Anna Neagle played the role that had been taken by Ruby Keeler in New York. Four years later Herbert Wilcox died, but Anna Neagle continued to work. In 1977 she was back in the West End with the musical Maggie; in 1978 she toured as Henry Higgins' mother in a revival of My Fair Lady, and in 1982 she played in the pantomime Cinderella at the Richmond Theatre. It was as the Fairy Godmother in Cinderella that she made her final stage bow at the London Palladium at Christmas 1986. A few weeks after it closed she went into a Surrey nursing home to rest, and died there in June.

● FURTHER READING: It's Been Fun, Anna Neagle. There's Always Tomorrow, Anna Neagle.

Neal, Kenny

b. 14 October 1957, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. The oldest son in Baton Rouge's most famous musical family, six of whom are professional musicians, Neal has been groomed throughout the 90s for blues stardom, but in a time of transition it remains an aim rather than an achievement. He accompanied his father to gigs from an early age, was given his first harmonica by Slim Harpo at the age of three, played piano onstage three years later, and at 13 stepped into the breach when Raful Neal needed a bass player. In 1976, he played bass in Buddy Guy's band. Four years later, he moved to Toronto and brought his brothers north to work as the Neal Brothers Blues Band. Later, he joined the Downchild Blues Band, then Canada's top blues band. In 1984, he moved back to Baton Rouge to assemble another band. When he accompanied his father on the Louisiana Legend album, King Snake owner Bob Greenlee signed him to a solo contract. Bio On The Bayou created a stir on its release in 1987; Alligator boss Bruce Iglauer leased the album, remixed it and changed its title, and acquired Neal's contract. In 1991, he took a role in the Broadway production of Mule Bone, a musical version of a play written by poet Langston Hughes and folklorist Zora Neale Hurston. He won that year's Theatre World Award for the most outstanding new talent appearing in a Broadway play. Walking On Fire features two songs, 'Morning After' and 'Bad Luck Card', on which he set Hughes' poems to music. Bayou Blood dispensed with the horn sections normally present on his records, updating the 60s Excello sound. Hoodoo Moon reflected the increasing maturity of his several talents and the promise of his eventual success.

● ALBUMS: Bio On The Bayou aka Big News From Baton Rouge (King Snake/Alligator 1987/8)★★★★, Devil Child (Alligator 1989)★★★, Walking On Fire (Alligator 1991)★★★, Bayou Blood (Alligator 1993)★★★, Hoodoo Moon (Alligator 1994)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Deluxe Edition (Alligator 1997)★★★★.

Neal, Raful

b. 6 June 1936, Baton Rouge, Louisiana, USA. That rare thing in the blues, a late developer, Neal was not interested in music until seeing Little Walter play at the Temple Room in Baton Rouge in 1958. Buying a harmonica the next day, he was helped by a friend, Ike Brown, to learn its rudiments. Some time later, he was engaged to join the road band of guitarist Little Eddie Lang. His own first group was called the Clouds, and featured Buddy Guy and drummer Murdock Stillwood. When Guy left, Lazy Lester was one of his replacements. The band toured Louisiana and east Texas, finding its first residency at the Streamline Club in Port Allen, where Neal took up residence. He recorded 'Sunny Side Of Love' for Peacock in 1968 with little success, and was then refused by Crowley producer Jay Miller. 'Change My Way Of Living', recorded for La Louisiana in 1969, fared better, and was followed by two records on Whit. During the 70s, he brought his teenage son, Kenny Neal, into his band and, as time went by, other sons, Noel, Raful Jnr., Larry and Darnell, were also recruited. With Kenny now a star in his own right, Raful continues to play in the Baton Rouge area, with forays further afield to play festivals and to record.

- ALBUMS: Lousiana Legend (Blue Horizon 1987)★★★, I Been Mistreated (Ichiban 1991)★★★.

Near, Holly

b. 6 June 1949, Ukiah, California, USA. For Near's first 10 years, her family lived on a farm but her adolescence was spent in urban Ukiah where she matured from a child television actor to a performer with the confidence to accept a role in a Broadway run of Hair. She also participated in Jane Fonda's controversial Free The Army revue that toured Vietnam with a message demanding US withdrawal. However, Near was to leave the 70s as an artist in direct descent from the early 60s protest singers. Indeed, it was Ronnie Gilbert of the Weavers who helped encourage interest in her on the US folk club and campus circuit. As a yardstick of the respect that became hers in this sphere, Gilbert, Pete Seeger and Arlo Guthrie were guests on Lifelines which, like all of her country-tinged body of mostly self-composed material, was issued on her and Jeff Langley's own Ukiah-based Redwood label. Largely by word of mouth, Near's first four albums sold a collective 155,000 by 1979 when Imagine My Surprise was voted Album Of The Year by the National Association of Independent Record Distributors. That spring found her in a Los Angeles theatre on the same bill as the premiere of the Labor movement film, With Babies And Banners. She also played a Women Against Violence Against Women benefit concert that shamed Warner Brothers into banning the use of brutal images on record sleeves.

- ALBUMS: Hang In There (1973)★★★, Live (1974)★★, You Can Know All I Am (1976)★★★★ Imagine My Surprise (1979)★★★★, Fire In The Rain (1982)★★★, Speed Of Light (1983)★★★, Journeys (1984)★★★, Watch Out (1985)★★★, Lifelines (1986)★★, Don't Hold Back (1987)★★★.

Nebraska - Bruce Springsteen

Dispensing with his famous E Street Band, Springsteen sat with only his guitar and a tape recorder (albeit a pretty good one). He recorded a series of barren songs, adding only a spooky harmonica and some reverb. This was the most atmospheric and naked album of the decade, and may have inspired the unplugged phenomenon of the 90s. He sounds like an 80s version of Johnny Cash, both in sound and in theme/content, although 'Used Cars' reveals his great weakness. It is impossible for the Boss to get through any album without making a reference to cars.

- Tracks: Nebraska; Atlantic City; Mansion On The Hill; Johnny 99; Highway Patrolman; State Trooper; Used Cars; Open All Night; My Father's House; Reason To Believe.
- First released 1982
- UK peak chart position: 3
- USA peak chart position: 3

Necros

With a fluid line-up headed by Barry Henssler (vocals), with, at various times, Todd Swalla (drums), Andy (guitar), Brian Pollack (guitar), and at least four different bass players, this early 80s hardcore act from Maumee, Ohio, USA, released a number of records that continue to sell for high sums among modern collectors (they should not be confused with the Washington, DC band of the same name and musical genre). They are also one of the few Midwest outfits of their type who did not split up within a few years of their formation, essentially due to the strong friendships that existed within the band. Henssler, a minor legend in the alternative rock community, who once partied with Pink Floyd when they played the university at which his father was a professor, was always the band's focus. Much emphasis was placed on education in the Henssler family, and he continued to attend college throughout the band's career. Corey Rusk, one of their bass players from a slightly earlier period, later moved to Chicago, Illinois, and took over the running of the prestigious Touch And Go Records label. The humour of the Necros was always central to their appeal in a music scene noted for its puritanical world view; the b-side of 'Conquest For Death' featured a song about the rights of the disabled ('Take Em Up'), but actually turned out to be a swipe at the privileges awarded disabled drivers. Musically, they mixed thrash with unusual chord sequences, later moving over to a more straightforward hard rock sound. The further they progressed in their career, the more quickly they closed the dividing line between punk and metal, though the crisper production on Tangled Up made it the most accessible Necros record to date. Happily, before such compromise eclipsed their own style, Henssler left the band to form Big Chief.

- ALBUMS: Conquest For Death (Touch & Go 1983)★★★, Tangled Up (Restless 1987)★★★, Live Or Else (Medusa 1989)★★.

Nectarine No.9

Formed in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1993, Nectarine No.9 revolves around guitarist and vocalist Davey Henderson, an ex-member of both the Fire Engines and Win. Alan Horne, founder of Postcard Records, took great interest in both groups and Henderson's newest venture was one of his first signings on reactivating the label. The Nectarine No.9 reinstated Henderson's love of abrasive pop and quirky rhythms, inhabiting a musical world that was part-T. Rex and part-Fall. However, it lacked the focus of Henderson's previous work and critical reaction was muted. Guitar Thieves, which collected various BBC Radio 1 sessions, included versions of Captain Beefheart's 'Frownland' and the Velvet Underground's 'Inside Of Your Heart', as well as an original song, 'Pull My Daisy', the title of which was drawn from a film featuring Allen Ginsberg and Jack Kerouac. In 1997 they backed former Clash associate Jock Scott on his spoken-word release, My Personal Culloden.

● ALBUMS: The Nectarine No.9 (Postcard 1993)★★, Guitar Thieves (Nightracks/Postcard 1994)★★★, Saint Jack (Postcard 1995)★★★.

Ned's Atomic Dustbin

Formed in the West Midlands in 1988 by local characters Jonn Penney (b. 17 September 1968; lead vocals), Rat (b. 8 November 1970; guitar), Matt Cheslin (b. 28 November 1970; bass), Alex Griffin (b. 29 August 1971; bass) and Dan Warton (b. 28 July 1972; drums). After dubious gothic beginnings, Ned's Atomic Dustbin began to find their feet in 1989 when a series of tour supports, notably with regional contemporaries the Wonderstuff, attracted a strong following. Notable for having two bassists, uniformly crimped hair and an unequivocally daft name (taken from BBC Radio's The Goon Show), the Neds' urgent, aggressive sub-hardcore sound still managed to offset any gimmicky connotations, turning a potential freak show into a challenging pop act. Armed with a multitude of original merchandising ideas - within three years the band produced 86 different T-shirt designs - their 'Kill Your Television' single entered the Top 50 of the UK chart and resulted in a major contract with Sony Music (formerly CBS). With the financial wherewithal to back their imagination, Ned's Atomic Dustbin soon translated their ideas into a phenomenal commercial success, peaking when God Fodder entered the UK charts at number four in 1991. The rest of the year was filled by hectic touring commitments, with America followed by Japan, a prestigious spot at the British Reading Festival, a UK number 21 hit with 'Trust', back to America (with Jesus Jones) and then a British tour which resulted in singer Jonn Penney collapsing from exhaustion on the last night. Are You Normal?, with production by Nirvana-collaborator Andy Wallace, was a disappointing album. Following a lengthy period out of the spotlight, the band returned with their best album to date, Brainbloodvolume, but its lack of success in a vastly changed music scene led to their demise in August 1995.

● ALBUMS: God Fodder (Sony 1991)★★★, Are You Normal? (Sony 1992)★★, Brainbloodvolume (Furtive/Sony 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Bite (RTD 1991)★★★, 0.522 (Furtive/Sony 1995)★★.

● VIDEOS: Nothing Is Cool (Sony Music Video 1991), Lunatic Magnets (1993).

Nefertiti

b. *c.*1973, Chicago, Illinois, USA, but raised in Los Angeles. Hardcore Islamic rapper, who as a baby was held in the arms of none other than Elijah Muhammed himself. Both her grandparents were employed by the founder of the Nation Of Islam, and their views have found a new conduit in Nefertiti. She began rapping at the age of 14, but this is just one of the means of expression and communication employed by her. She also works alongside Californian activist Jim Brown on the Amer-I-Can programme, to stabilize inter-gang violence and maintain truces in Los Angeles. She also lectures widely on self-awareness and improvement. Her first recorded messages came as guest appearances on records by Professor Griff and King Tee, and from an early age she was warming up crowds before Public Enemy and Louis Farrakhan shows. Although she signed to a major label, she insisted on a far-sighted contract stipulation: that Mercury pay to put her through college. The first results of this was the LIFE set, standing for Living In Fear Of Extinction. This included controversial calls for repatriation to Africa, never mind an Islamic State. She was joined on the record by MC Lyte, with whom comparisons have most frequently been made. She is not to be confused with the UK rapper of similar name.

● ALBUMS: LIFE (Mercury 1994)★★★.

Nefilim

The Nefilim's 1996 album, Zoon, announced the rebirth of former Fields Of The Nephilim singer Carl McCoy. By the advent of that group's final album, 1990's Elizium, McCoy was on the verge of despair, finding the old material he was playing 'tedious'. The critical revulsion McCoy has faced during his career, plus the various machinations concerning the end of his commercially successful former band (who renamed themselves Rubicon), doubtless informed some of the vitriol on Zoon. However, McCoy also took the opportunity to push his occultist and pagan influences to the fore (previous Fields Of The Nephilim material had thinly veiled references to literary works by H.P. Lovecraft as well as less clearly defined Sumerian mythologies). The product of four years' writing and experimentation, the album featured a variety of guest musicians and producers, none of whom were prominent mainstream names, as McCoy sought to establish the Nefilim as his own project. The album took its title from the Greek word for 'beast' or 'animal', but failed to find an audience outside of the pagan rock fraternity and die-hard Nephilim fans.

● ALBUMS: Zoon (Beggars Banquet 1996)★★.

Negativland

Negativland, a group of self-professed musical/cultural terrorists, enjoyed fleeting but disabling celebrity in 1990 when they became embroiled in a legal tussle with U2 and US television presenter, Casey Kasem. Their U2 EP featured a parody of that band's 'I Still Haven't Found What I'm Looking For', and came in packaging that the band's agents claimed looked 'deceptively like a U2 record'. One of the mixes also included an unfortunate but real studio out-take from Kasem ('The four-man band features Adam Clayton on bass, Larry Mullen on drums, Dave Evans - nicknamed the Edge on . . . This is bullshit. Nobody cares. These guys are from England and who gives a shit'). U2's label and publisher relentlessly pursued the band, as did Kasem, leading to the near collapse of SST Records, the group's long-standing record label. Many castigated U2 for their passive role in attacking artistic expression, criticisms that reached a crescendo with their Zooropa tour - a multimedia cut-and-paste exercise that had distinct similarities to the previous work of Negativland. Negativland had grown out of a meeting of like minds in San Francisco, California, USA, taking their influence primarily from the machinations of the music industry but also other associated outlets of consumerism, sampling widely from television and radio. They christened their approach culture 'jamming', in so doing invoking both the musical and airwave interference definitions of the word. The core group members, Mark Hosler, Richard Lyons and David Willis, were joined by Don Joyce of the KPFA Berkeley community radio station for the release of their third album, A Big 10-8 Place, in 1983. Joyce brought the group a catalogue of radio sound effects and jingles that perfectly complemented the existing trio's irreverence. Much of Negativland's prolific output can thus be analogized in terms of comic sequences and sketches rather than music as such, but it did build a strong audience within rock's counterculture. The mainstream, too, was taking note, Marky Mark included a sample from Escape From Noise on his debut album. The same record's 'Christianity Is Stupid' caused a media scare when the band circulated a press release stating that it had instigated a teenager's axe murder of his family. Taken at face value, the news furore that followed was then widely sampled on the subsequent Helter Stupid collection. The first volume of the group's Over The Edge compilations - edited versions of their work at KPFA radio, was released in 1984. Funnier and less gratuitously nasty than the work of the more widely exposed Jerky Boys, the series is highly recommended to anyone who finds the concept of serious rock music pompous. The U2 fracas failed to limit their activity or deflect their attitude. The incident was fully documented in the book Fair Use: The Story Of The Letter U And The Numeral 2. Rather than appease litigators, the accompanying CD deliberately used samples drawn from several high-profile musicians, including U2 and Black Flag (whose former guitarist Greg Ginn runs SST Records but allegedly did not support Negativland as fully as they had expected). None of the copyrights were cleared. An act of supreme defiance, its 'come and get us' subtext served as a testament to the integrity of Negativland's vision.

● ALBUMS: Negativland (Seeland 1980)★★★, Points (Seeland 1981)★★, A Big 10-8 Place (Seeland 1983)★★★, Over The Edge Volume 1: Jamcon '84 (Seeland 1984)★★, Escape From Noise (SST 1987)★★★★, Helter Stupid (SST 1989)★★★, Over The Edge Volume 2: Pastor Dick cassette only (SST 1989)★★, Over The Edge Volume 3: The Weatherman cassette only (SST 1989)★★★, Over The Edge Volume 4: Dick Vaughan cassette only (SST 1990)★★★, Free (Seeland 1993)★★★, Over The Edge Volume 5: Crosley Bendix (Seeland 1993)★★★, Over The Edge Volume 6: The Willsaphone Stupid Show (Seeland 1994)★★, Over The Edge: Volume 7: Time Zones Exchange Project (Seeland 1994)★★, Over The Edge Volume 1/1/2: The Starting Line (Seeland 1995)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Fair Use: The Story Of The Letter U And The Numeral 2.

Negrocan

Andres Lafone (b. 14 March 1954, Montevideo, Uruguay; bass, vocals), Liliana Chachion (b. 18 April 1964, Soa Paulo, Brazil; vocals), Davide Giovaninni (b. 19 May 1968, Trieste, Italy; drums, vocals), Neil Angilly (b. 28 April 1967, Redruth, Cornwall, England; keyboards) and Carlos Fuentes (b. 13 December 1955, Chile; percussion). Formed in London in 1991 by Lapone, Negrocan mix Uruguay's 'candombe' rhythm with Brazilian, funk and jazz influences. Popular on the UK's Latin and jazz dance scenes (their debut, Medio Mundo, was released on salsa DJ Gerry Lyseight's Deep South label). They have also appeared at festivals throughout Europe.

● ALBUMS: Media Mundo (Deep South 1996)★★★.

Negron, Chuck

b. 8 June 1942, B uffalo, New York, USA. The former lead singer of Three Dog Night released an album in the mid-90s that could not release him from the shackles of his former band. The album failed to create much interest other than the impressive publicity blurb which informed the public that he had (Three Dog Night) sold over 90 million albums worldwide. This record added little to the sales total.

● ALBUMS: Am I Still In Yout Heart (Viceroy 1995)★★.

Neidlinger, Buell

b. 2 March 1936, Westport, Connecticut, USA. After studying piano, trumpet and bass, Neidlinger concentrated on teaching himself the last instrument more extensively. He led bands in high school, then attended Yale for a year, winding up as a disc jockey. In 1955 he relocated to New York, where he gigged with Coleman Hawkins, Tony Scott and Zoot Sims. He made his name with Cecil Taylor, negotiating the pianist's difficult compositions with astonishing aptitude; he was part of Taylor's famous residency at the Five Spot in 1957 and played with him in a 1960 staging of The Connection. Always one for a surprising career move, Neidlinger then worked in singer Tony Bennett's band for six months. Subsequent work included stints with Gil Evans and Steve Lacy. He studied music at Buffalo State University (1964-66), played with the Budapest Quartet at Tanglewood in 1965 and gave several recitals of works for solo bass by Sylvano Bussotti and Mauricio Kagel. In the late 60s he became a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In 1970 Neidlinger played bass on Frank Zappa's suite for violinist Jean-Luc Ponty, 'Music For Electric Violin And Low Budget Orchestra', brought in, according to Zappa, 'because he's the only man I could think of who could play the bass part'. In 1971 he became professor of music at the California Institute of the Arts and was also busy in the Hollywood recording studios. Neidlinger's ability to relate to different kinds of music is only equalled by his interest in them: at various times he has played with Willie 'The Lion' Smith, Roy Orbison, Barbra Streisand and Archie Shepp. He has several bands; Buellgrass provides a unique blend of country and jazz: an updated western swing; Thelonious plays Thelonious Monk tunes exclusively; String Jazz interprets Duke Ellington and Monk on saxophone, drums and various string instruments. Most of his releases are on the K2B2 label, which he co-runs with tenor saxophonist Marty Krystall, a playing associate of his for over 20 years. A caustic interviewee, Neidlinger has continually involved himself with the cutting edge of jazz and has an inimitable sound on his instrument.

● ALBUMS: with Cecil Taylor New York City R&B (1961)★★★★, reissued as Cell Walk For Celeste), Cecil Taylor All Stars Featuring Buell Neidlinger (1961)★★★★, reissued as Jumpin' Punkins), Ready For The 90s (1980)★★★, Our Night Together (1981)★★★, Big Day At Ojai (1982)★★, with Thelonious Monk Thelonious (1987)★★★, with String Jazz Locomotive (Soul Note 1988)★★★, Big Drum (KB Records 1991)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Complete Candid Recordings Of Cecil Taylor And Buell Neidlinger 1960-1961 recordings 6-Album box set (1989), Rear View Mirror (KB Records 1991, rec. 1979-86)★★★★, Blue Chopsticks: A Portrait Of Herbie Nichols KB Records 1995)★★★.

Neighbors, Paul

b. 1918, USA, d. 26 August 1983, Houston, Texas, USA. Formed in Los Angeles, California, USA, in 1948, Paul Neighbors And His Orchestra took their first engagement at the Mapes Hotel in Reno, Nevada, shortly afterwards. From there the band, fronted by Neighbors' own vocals and occasionally those of Ralph Anthony, toured many west coast locations. Their regular engagements included frequent visits to the Claremont in Berkeley. In the early 50s the group relocated to Houston, Texas, from where they toured the Midwest extensively, taking in such renowned nightspots as the Peabody, the Chase, Milwaukee's Schroeder Hotel and the Dallas Shamrock Hilton. There were also excursions to the Roseland Ballroom and Pennsylvania Hotel in New York, while the group appeared regularly on a radio broadcast from New Orleans sponsored by Ford Motors. However, the group's first home remained the Shamrock, where they returned between tours for regular six-month engagements. A recording contract with Capitol Records made songs such as 'Love Thy Neighbor', their theme tune, available to a wider public, but their last contract at the Shamrock ended in 1956. Neighbors continued to play low-key engagements around Texas until his death in 1983.

Neil, Fred

b. 1937, St. Petersburg, Florida, USA. An important figure in America's folk renaissance, Neil's talent first emerged in 1956 when he co-wrote an early Buddy Holly single, 'Modern Don Juan'. By the following decade he was a fixture of the Greenwich Village circuit, both as a solo act and in partnership with fellow singer Vince Martin. The duo embarked on separate careers following the release of Tear Down The Walls. Neil's subsequent solo Bleecker And MacDougal was an influential collection and contained the original version of 'The Other Side Of This Life', later covered by the Youngbloods, Lovin' Spoonful and the Jefferson Airplane. The singer's deep, resonant voice was equally effective, inspiring the languid tones of Tim Buckley and Tim Hardin. A reticent individual, Neil waited two years before completing Fred Neil, a compulsive selection that featured two of the artist's most famous compositions, 'The Dolphins' and 'Everybody's Talkin''. The latter was adopted as the theme song to Midnight Cowboy, a highly successful film, although it was a version by Harry Nilsson that became the hit single. Such temporary trappings were of little note to Neil, who preferred the anonymity of his secluded Florida base, from where he rarely ventured. An appearance at the Los Angeles club, the Bitter End, provided the material for The Other Side Of This Life, Neil's last album to date and an effective resume of his career. This informal performance also contained other favoured material, including 'You Don't Miss Your Water', which featured assistance from country singer Gram Parsons. A major, if self-effacing talent, Fred Neil has virtually withdrawn from music altogether. He refuses to record or be interviewed and rare live appearances are constrained to benefit events for his charity, Dolphin Project, which he established with marine biologist Richard O'Berry in 1970.

● ALBUMS: Hootenanny Live At The Bitter End (1964)★★★, World Of Folk Music (1964)★★★, with Vince Martin Tear Down The Walls (1964)★★★, Bleecker And MacDougal aka Little Bit Of Rain (Elektra 1965)★★★★, Fred Neil aka Everybody's Talkin' (Capitol 1966)★★★★, Sessions (Capitol 1968)★★★, The Other Side Of This Life (1971)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Very Best Of Fred Neil (1986)★★★★.

Neil, Vince, Band

Following his surprise sacking from Mötley Crüe, frontman Vince Neil (b. Vincent Neil Wharton, 8 February 1961, Hollywood, California, USA) wasted no time in establishing a solo career, contributing 'You're Invited But Your Friend Can't Come' (co-written with Damn Yankees duo Jack Blades and Tommy Shaw) to the Encino Man (California Man outside the USA) soundtrack. After this, he assembled a band with ex-Billy Idol guitarist Steve Stevens, ex-Fiona guitarist Dave Marshall, ex-Enuff Z'Nuff drummer Vikki Foxx, and bassist Robbie Crane, who had switched from rhythm guitar after original bassist Phil Soussan's departure. The Ron Nevison-produced X-Posed brought Neil a good deal of respect, demonstrating his songwriting ability on good-time arena metal that followed the direction in which he felt Mötley Crüe should have moved. The Vince Neil Band secured a high-profile opening slot with Van Halen, but throat problems for Neil held up subsequent live work, and Stevens departed, with Brent Woods replacing him. Rumours abounded of a Mötley Crüe reunion while Neil and his band worked towards a second album, but the acrimony surrounding the split made this unlikely. This was confirmed by the arrival of a second Vince Neil album, Carved In Stone, in July 1995. As well as introducing new guitarist Woods, it was produced by the Dust Brothers, the American production team more usually identified with the world of hip-hop.

● ALBUMS: X-Posed (Warners 1993)★★★, Carved In Stone (Warners 1995)★★★.

Nelson

The twin sons of early rock 'n' roll star Rick Nelson and wife Kris, Matthew and Gunnar Nelson were born on 20 September 1967, Los Angeles, California, USA. Musically inclined as children, the boys learned to play bass and drums as well as singng. Their father booked studio time for them on their 12th birthday, and they recorded a self-penned song with vocal backing by the Pointer Sisters. By the early 80s the twins had joined a heavy metal band called Strange Agents, which later changed its name to the Nelsons. In 1990, now simply called Nelson, the twins, both sporting waist-length blond hair (which saw them nicknamed the 'Timotei Twins'), signed with David Geffen's new DGC record label and recorded a self-titled pop-rock album. The first single release, '(Can't Live Without Your) Love And Affection', reached number 1 in the US charts, while the album made the US Top 20. Afterwards, however, press reaction remained hostile towards any return.

● ALBUMS: Nelson (DGC 1990)★★★, Because They Can (Geffen 1995)★★.

Nelson Brothers

English roots rock band the Nelson Brothers comprise Steve Nelson (lead vocals, acoustic guitar), Simon Nelson (acoustic and electric guitars, dulcimer, keyboards and sitar), Ben Nicholls (bass) and Andrew Tween (drums, marimba). Their music combines the ethnic traditions of New Orleans Cajun, Celtic folk and Afro-Caribbean rhythms, accompanied by the brothers' lucid songwriting. The Nelsons grew up in Stafford, West Midlands, England, where they were members of various local bands as teenagers. Culling influences from the albums of Johnny Cash, Paul Simon, Hank Williams, Woody Guthrie and Bob Dylan, as well as jazz and rock, they began to write their own songs together while still teenagers. Their first group was entitled Alias, whose live repertoire included songs drawn from the songbooks of the Byrds and Rolling Stones as well as originals. Alias won both the 'new talent' and 'songwriting' categories of a national competition sponsored by Pye Records, but split due to musical differences before recording. The brothers then journeyed to Amsterdam, Netherlands, together as the first stage in a round-the-world trek, taking in Europe, North Africa, America and finally Bermuda (becoming residents at the Bermuda Folk Club). Upon returning to England they took up college courses (Steve reaching gold medal standard at the London Academy Of Music and Dramatic Art while Simon studied jazz guitar and composition). In 1983 Simon spent a year in Australia, working with acts such as the Arizona Smoke Revue, before he returned to England in the following year to team up with Steve again, fresh from another stint in Bermuda. The late 80s saw them back at college, both achieving Bachelor and Masters degrees, and in 1990 they built their own demo/jingle studio. They also set about forging a proper band together, with the aforementioned line-up the eventual result. Their debut album arrived in November 1993, with studio guests including Abdul Tee Jay (from Sierra Leone), Geraint Watkins (accordion) and Sugar Hajischacalli (bouzouki). The title track, 'Hometown', was written in collaboration with Steve Booker.

● ALBUMS: Hometown (Round Tower 1993)★★★.

Nelson, 'Big Eye' Louis

b. 28 January *c.*1885, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 20 August 1949. Nelson settled on playing the clarinet after trying out a wide range of instruments. Throughout his career he rarely played outside his home town, choosing to work in the emerging jazz bands and the traditional New Orleans marching and brass bands. Nelson is reputed to have played in Buddy Bolden's band, on bass, and he also worked with leading New Orleans jazzmen such as John Robichaux, Joe 'King' Oliver and Jelly Roll Morton. Nelson made few records - a handful of tracks with Kid Rena in 1940, and a few more in 1949 with 'Wooden' Joe Nicholas and as leader, using the name Louis DeLisle, under which he sometimes worked. From these recordings it is possible to understand the high regard in which Nelson was held by musicians such as Baby Dodds and Sidney Bechet, whom Nelson tutored for a while. He played with a full sound and employed a facile technique. His records with Rena provide interesting testimony to the skill and stylistic devices of the earliest New Orleans jazz musicians.

● ALBUMS: with Wooden Joe Nicholas Wooden Joe's New Orleans Band (1945-49)★★★, Louis Delisle's Band (1949)★★★.

Nelson, Bill

b. William Nelson, 18 December 1948, Wakefield, West Yorkshire, England. Although noted chiefly for his innovative guitarwork with Be-Bop Deluxe, his solo releases actually form more than four-fifths of his total output. Smile was a dreamy, acoustic debut after he had played throughout his home county with pre-progressive rock outfits such as the Teenagers, Global Village and Gentle Revolution. He fronted Be-Bop Deluxe for most of the 70s before responding to punk and techno-rock forces by assembling Bill Nelson's Red Noise. Sound On Sound, released in 1979, was an agitated but confused debut from Red Noise and afterwards Nelson returned to solo work. The single 'Do You Dream In Colour?' provided his highest UK solo chart placing at number 52. It was released on his own label, Cocteau Records. Following a short-lived contract with Mercury Records he continued to release introspective, chiefly home-recorded albums. He was in demand as a producer and worked on sessions with many new wave bands including the Skids and A Flock Of Seagulls. Surprisingly, after the demise of Be-Bop Deluxe he showed little inclination to use the guitar and preferred to experiment with keyboards and sampled sounds, composing thematic pieces that have been used in films and plays. He recorded backing music for the Yorkshire Actors Company's version of both Das Kabinett and La Belle Et La Bette, issued later as albums. Many of his releases throughout the 80s were of a whimsical, self-indulgent nature and missed the input of other musicians. Numerous albums were issued via his fan club and the quality was rarely matched by the prolificacy, which twice ran to four-album boxed sets, Trial By Intimacy and Demonstrations Of Affection. In 1991 he moved markedly towards a stronger and more defined melodic style with Luminous on Manchester's independent label, Imaginary, and also spoke of returning to his first love, the guitar. He is the main figure behind Channel Light Vessel. His 1996 release, After The Satellite Sings, received excellent reviews.

● ALBUMS: Northern Dream (Smile 1971)★★, as Bill Nelson's Red Noise Sound On Sound (Harvest 1979)★★, Quit Dreaming And Get On The Beam (Mercury 1981)★★★★, Sounding The Ritual Echo (Mercury 1981)★★★, Das Kabinett (The Cabinet Of Dr. Caligari) (Cocteau 1981)★★, The Love That Whirls (Diary Of A Thinking Heart) (PVC 1982)★★★, La Belle Et La Bete (PVC 1982)★★★, Chimera mini-album (Mercury 1983)★★★, Savage Gestures For Charms Sake (Cocteau 1983)★★★, Vistamix expanded re-release of Chimera (Portrait 1984)★★★, A Catalogue Of Obsessions (Cocteau 1984)★★★, The Summer Of God's Piano (Cocteau 1984)★★★, as Bill Nelson's Orchestra Arcana Iconography (Cocteau 1986)★★, Getting The Holy Ghost Across aka as On A Blue Wing (Portrait 1986)★★★, Chamber Of Dreams (Cocteau 1986)★★★, Map Of Dreams (Cocteau 1987)★★★, Chance Encounters In The Garden Of Light (Cocteau 1987/88)★★★, Optimism (Cocteau 1988)★★, Pavillions Of The Heart And Soul (Cocteau 1989)★★★, Simplex (Cocteau 1989)★★★, Demonstrations Of Affection (Cocteau 1989)★★★, Luminous (Imaginary 1991)★★★, Blue Moons And Laughing Guitars (1992)★★★, After The Satellite Sings (Resurgence 1996)★★★, with Culturemix Culturemix With Bill Nelson (Resurgence 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Trial By Intimacy (The Book Of Splendours) boxed set (Cocteau 1984)★★★, The Two Fold Aspect Of Everything (Cocteau 1984)★★★, The Strangest Things Sampler (Cocteau 1989)★★★, Duplex: The Best Of Bill Nelson (Cocteau 1989)★★★.

Nelson, Gene

b. Leander Berg, 24 March 1920, Seattle, Washington, USA, d. 16 September 1996, Woodland Hills, California, USA. An actor, director and athletic dancer in the Gene Kelly style who was in several popular musicals of the 50s. Nelson grew up in Los Angeles and attended the renowned Fanchon and Marco dancing school there. After graduating from high school when he was 18, he took up ice-skating and joined Sonja Henie's touring company and appeared in two of her films, Second Fiddle and Everything Happens At Night. After enlisting in the US Signals Corps early in World War II, he became a member of the cast of Irving Berlin's celebrated wartime musical This Is The Army, which opened on Broadway in 1942 and was then filmed before touring the UK and US military bases throughout the world. Following his discharge, Nelson went to Hollywood in 1947 and made the musical, I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now, with June Haver. Ironically, it was while he was starring in the hit Broadway revue Lend An Ear (1949), that Nelson was noticed by a representative of Warner Brothers Pictures. After playing a minor role in The Daughter Of Rosie O'Grady, he was signed to a long-term contract and given the third-lead to Doris Day and Gordon MacRae in Tea For Two (1950). From then on, he appeared in a string of musicals for the studio, including The West Point Story, Lullaby Of Broadway (his first starring role, opposite Doris Day), Painting The Clouds With Sunshine, She's Working Her Way Through College, She's Back On Broadway, Three Sailors And A Girl, So This Is Paris, and Oklahoma! (1955). In the latter film he had the best role of his career - and two great numbers, 'Kansas City' and 'All Er Nothin'' (with Gloria Grahame as Ado Annie). In the late 50s Nelson appeared on television until he suffered a horse-riding accident that put an end to his dancing - at least for a while. He turned to directing, and in the 60s worked on some melodramas, and two musical films starring Elvis Presley, Kissin' Cousins (which he also co-wrote) and Harum Scarum. He also directed Your Cheatin' Heart, a film biography of country singer Hank Williams. In 1971 he was back on Broadway with other veteran entertainers such as Yvonne De Carlo and Alexis Smith in Stephen Sondheim's Follies. Nelson played Buddy Plummer and performed one of the show's outstanding numbers, the rapid-fire 'Buddy's Blues'. He continued to direct in the 70s and 80s, mostly for television, and worked on the top-rated series Washington Behind Closed Doors. In 1993 his projects included staging a US provincial production of Richard Harris's popular comedy Stepping Out.

● FILMS: I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now (1947), Apartment For Peggy (1948), Tea For Two (1950), The West Point Story (1950), The Daughter Of Rosie O'Grady (1950), Painting The Clouds With Sunshine (1951), Lullaby Of Broadway (1951), She's Back On Broadway (1952), She's Working Her Way Through College (1952), Three Sailors And A Girl (1953), Crime Wave (1954), The Way Out UK title Dial 999 (1955), The Atomic Man UK title*Timeslip* (1955), Oklahoma! (1955), So This Is Paris (1955), 20,000 Eyes (1961), The Purple Hills (1961), as director Hand Of Death (1962), as director Hootenanny Hoot (1963), Thunder Island (1963), as director Your Cheatin' Heart (1964), as director Kissin' Cousins (1964), as director*Harum Scarum* (1965), as director The Cool Ones (1967), S.O.B. (1981).

Nelson, Jimmy 'T-99'

b. 7 April 1928, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA. Nelson joined his brother (who later became famous as a singer with the Johnny Otis Orchestra under the stage-name Redd Lyte) on the west coast in the mid-40s, and began shouting the blues after seeing Big Joe Turner. While singing with the Peter Rabbit Trio in 1951, Nelson was signed to Modern's RPM subsidiary, with whom he had big R&B hits with 'T-99 Blues' and 'Meet Me With Your Black Dress On'. In 1955 Nelson moved to Houston, Texas, where he recorded for Chess and a host of small Texas and California independent labels. From the mid-60s he worked outside the music business until he was recorded with Arnett Cobb's band by Roy Ames in 1971 for Home Cooking Records. In recent years he has resumed performing and has toured Europe.

● COMPILATIONS: Jimmy 'Mr T-99' Nelson (Ace 1981)★★★, Watch That Action! (Ace 1987)★★★, with Arnett Cobb And His Mobb Sweet Sugar Daddy (1990)★★★.

Nelson, Louis

b. 17 September 1902, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 5 April 1990. Nelson grew up in a cultured family; his mother was a graduate of the Boston Conservatory of Music, his father was a physician. After starting out on alto horn, he switched to trombone in the 20s. Working mostly with bands in and around New Orleans, including those led by Oscar 'Papa' Celestin and Kid Rena, he built a sound reputation during the 30s. During this period he also frequently worked with the popular big band led by Sidney Desvigne. In the early 40s he joined Kid Thomas and in the 50s was a regular member of the band led by George Lewis, with whom he toured extensively. In the 60s Nelson also worked with the New Orleans Joymakers, the Legends Of Jazz, Kid Thomas, Peter Bocage, Sammy Rimington and other leading New Orleans-style musicians. For many years he was a frequent performer at Preservation Hall in his home town. Although best known for his New Orleans playing, Nelson's style incorporated many elements foreign to the form - an attribute that is due, most observers believe, to the time spent with Desvigne. This gave him a somewhat different approach to music than that followed by stalwarts of the tradition, such as Jim Robinson. Indeed, many keen followers of Nelson's work consider his sophisticated trombone playing to be more akin to that of Tommy Dorsey rather than that of the earthier New Orleanians. Nelson could still be heard at Preservation Hall in the late 80s and into early 1990, when, in April, he was the victim of a hit-and-run accident. He continued working for a few days, but one night on the bandstand he complained of feeling unwell and collapsed. He died the following day.

● ALBUMS: Kid Thomas At Moulin Rouge (1955)★★★, George Lewis And His New Orleans All Stars (1963)★★★★, Peter Bocage At San Jacinto Hall (1964)★★★, Louis Nelson's Big Four Vols 1 & 2 (1964)★★★★, Skater's Waltz (1966)★★★, Louis Nelson's New Orleans Band (1970)★★★, New Orleans Tradition (1971)★★★, with Kid Thomas Preservation Of Jazz Vol. 2 (1973)★★★, Everybody's Talkin' Bout The (GHB 1986)★★★, Louis Nelson All Stars Live In Japan (1987)★★, April In New Orleans (GHB 1989)★★★, New Orleans Portraits Vol 3 (Storyville 1990)★★★.

Nelson, Oliver

b. 4 June 1932, St. Louis, Missouri, USA, d. 28 October 1975. After studying piano and alto saxophone, he settled on playing the latter instrument, paying his dues in various territory bands. In the late 40s he was with the popular Jeter-Pillars Orchestra as well as that led by Nat Towles. Early in the 50s he was briefly with Louis Jordan but then resumed his studies at universities in Washington, DC, and Missouri, also taking lessons from the respected composer Elliott Carter. In New York in the late 50s, he worked in bands led by Erskine Hawkins and Louie Bellson, then moved on to the bands of Duke Ellington and Quincy Jones. He was writing extensively at this time, both as arranger and composer, and made several records under his own name, the best-known with a small group that often featured leading jazz soloists such as Eric Dolphy and Freddie Hubbard. He later turned more to big band work, recording with numerous soloists who included

Johnny Hodges and Pee Wee Russell. By the mid-60s Nelson was in great demand as a teacher and arranger and he was also called upon to write scores for films and television. His classy arrangements with Jimmy Smith during this period were particularly fertile, and included orchestrations of Bashin' and The Dymanic Duo (with Wes Montgomery). He played much less frequently in these years but did lead a small band from time to time and also formed all-star big bands for festival appearances. Nelson's work ranged widely, covering R&B and modal jazz, and he also composed pieces in the classical form. Much of his writing suggests considerable facility, though at times slipping a little into being merely facile. Nevertheless his recordings as a performer, especially the majestic The Blues And The Abstract Truth, on which he is joined by Dolphy and Hubbard, are extremely rewarding, while many of those he made as composer-leader such as the excellent Sound Pieces are interesting for their unstinting professionalism. He died from a heart attack in 1975.

● ALBUMS: Meet Oliver Nelson (New Jazz 1959)★★★★, Takin' Care Of Business (New Jazz 1960)★★★, Screamin' The Blues (New Jazz 1960)★★★★, Soul Battle (New Jazz 1960)★★★, Nocturne (Moodsville 1960)★★★, Straight Ahead (New Jazz 1961)★★★, The Blues And The Abstract Truth (Impulse 1961)★★★★★, Main Stem (Prestige 1961)★★★, Taking Care Of Business (New Jazz 1961)★★★, Afro-American Sketches (Prestige 1962)★★★, Main Stem (Prestige 1962)★★★, Impressions Of Phaedra (United Artists 1962)★★★, with Jimmy Forrest Soul Battle (Prestige 1962)★★★, Full Nelson (Verve 1963)★★★, Fantabulous (Argo 1964)★★★, More Blues And The Abstract Truth (Impulse 1965)★★, Michelle (Prestige 1966)★★, Sound Pieces (Impulse 1966)★★★★, Live From Los Angeles (Prestige 1967)★★★, Happenings (Impulse 1967)★★★, The Kennedy Dream (Impulse 1967)★★, The Spirit Of '67 (Impulse 1967)★★★, Soulful Brass (Impulse 1968)★★★, Leonard Feather Presents The Sound Of Feeling And The Sound Of Oliver Nelson (Verve 1968)★★★, Black, Brown And Beautiful (RCA 1970)★★★, Berlin Dialogue For Orchestra (1970)★★★, Swiss Suite (1971)★★★, Oliver Nelson With Oily Rags (1974)★★, Stolen Moments (1975)★★★.

Nelson, Ozzie

b. 20 March 1906, Jersey City, New Jersey, USA, d. 3 June 1975. While studying for a career in the legal profession, Nelson ran a dance band as a hobby, but it was so successful that he abandoned law for music. He played many of the east coast's more prestigious venues, including Glen Island Casino and the New Yorker Hotel. Nelson's extremely relaxed singing style proved remarkably popular, as did the work of the band's female singer, Harriet Hilliard (b. 1909, d. 1994). Ozzie and Harriet married in 1935 and their romantic duets, coupled with their real-life romance, gave fans something to coo over. In the early 40s Nelson and the band appeared in a number of films, and he made a great impact with a US radio series, The Adventures Of Ozzie And Harriet, which began in 1944. In 1952, the show transferred to television and ran until 1966. Nelson's interests expanded into other areas of showbusiness; he worked on the stage and also produced and directed on television. Also in the cast of the television show, when they were old enough, were Ozzie and Harriet's sons, David and Ricky Nelson. After the show's run finished, Ozzie Nelson continued to work in many different facets of showbusiness.

● COMPILATIONS: Young America's Favorite (Aircheck 1986)★★★, Ozzie Nelson (1940-42) (Hindsight 1988)★★★, Ozzie Nelson 1937 (Circle 1988)★★★, Satan Takes A Holiday 1936-41 (Bandstand 1988)★★★, with Harriet The Nelson Touch (ASV 1996)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Ozzie, Ozzie Nelson.

Nelson, Ricky

b. Eric Hilliard Nelson, 8 May 1940, Teaneck, New Jersey, USA, d. 31 December 1985, De Kalb, Texas, USA. Nelson came from a showbusiness family and his parents had sung in bands during the 30s and 40s. They had their own US radio show, The Adventures Of Ozzie And Harriet, soon transferred to television, in which Ricky and his brother David appeared. By 1957 Nelson embarked on a recording career, with the million-selling, double-sided 'I'm Walkin''/'A Teenager's Romance'. A third hit soon followed with 'You're My One And Only Love'. A switch from the label Verve to Imperial saw Nelson enjoy further success with the rockabilly 'Be-Bop Baby'. In 1958 Nelson formed a full-time group for live work and recordings, which included James Burton (guitar), James Kirkland (later replaced by Joe Osborn) (bass), Gene Garf (piano) and Richie Frost (drums). Early that year Nelson enjoyed his first transatlantic hit with 'Stood Up' and registered his first US chart-topper with 'Poor Little Fool'. His early broadcasting experience was put to useful effect when he starred in the Howard Hawks movie western Rio Bravo (1959), alongside John Wayne and Dean Martin. Nelson's singles continued to chart regularly and it says much for the quality of his work that the b-sides were often as well known as the a-sides. Songs such as 'Believe What You Say', 'Never Be Anyone Else But You', 'It's Late', 'Sweeter Than You', 'Just A Little Too Much' and 'I Wanna Be Loved' proved that Nelson was equally adept at singing ballads and up-tempo material. One of his greatest moments as a pop singer occurred in the spring of 1961 when he issued the million-selling 'Travelin' Man', backed with the exuberant Gene Pitney composition, 'Hello Mary Lou'. Shortly after the single topped the US charts, Nelson celebrated his 21st birthday and announced that he was changing his performing name from Ricky to Rick. Several more pop hits followed, most notably 'Young World', 'Teenage Idol', 'It's Up To You', 'String Along' (his first for his new label, Decca), 'Fools Rush In' and 'For You'. With the emergence of the beat boom, Nelson's clean-cut pop was less in demand and in 1966 he switched to country music. His early albums in this vein featured compositions from such artists as Willie Nelson, Glen Campbell, Tim Hardin, Harry Nilsson and Randy Newman. In 1969 Nelson formed a new outfit, the Stone Canyon Band, featuring former Poco member Randy Meisner (bass), Allen Kemp (guitar), Tom Brumley (steel guitar) and Pat Shanahan (drums). A version of Bob Dylan's 'She Belongs To Me' brought Nelson back into the US charts, and a series of strong, often underrated, albums followed. A performance at Madison Square Garden in late 1971 underlined Nelson's difficulties at the time. Although he had recently issued the accomplished Rick Sings Nelson, on which he wrote every track, the audience were clearly more interested in hearing his early 60s hits. Nelson responded by composing the sarcastic 'Garden Party', which reaffirmed his determination to go his own way. The single, ironically, went on to sell a million and was his last hit record. After parting with the Stone Canyon Band in 1974, Nelson's recorded output declined, but he continued to tour extensively. On 31 December 1985, a chartered plane carrying him to a concert date in Dallas caught fire and crashed near De Kalb, Texas. Nelson's work deserves a place in rock history, as he was one of the few 'good-looking kids' from the early 60s who had a strong voice which, coupled with exemplary material, remains durable.

● ALBUMS: with various artists Teen Time (Verve 1957)★★, Ricky (Imperial 1957)★★, Ricky Nelson (Imperial 1958)★★, Ricky Sings Again (Imperial 1959)★★, Songs By Ricky (Imperial 1959)★★★, More Songs By Ricky (Imperial 1960)★★, Rick Is 21 (Imperial 1961)★★, Album Seven By Rick (Imperial 1962)★★, Best Sellers By Rick Nelson (Imperial 1962)★★, It's Up To You (Imperial 1962)★★★, A Long Vacation (Imperial 1963)★★, Million Sellers By Rick Nelson (Imperial 1963)★★★★, For Your Sweet Love (Decca 1963)★★, Rick Nelson Sings For You (Decca 1963)★★★, Rick Nelson Sings 'For You' (Decca 1963)★★★, The Very Thought Of You (Decca 1964)★★, Spotlight On Rick (Decca 1964)★★★, Best Always (Decca 1965)★★, Love And Kisses (Decca 1965)★★, Bright Lights And Country Music (Decca 1966)★★, On The Flip-Side film soundtrack (Decca 1966)★, Country Fever (Decca 1967)★★, Another Side Of Rick (Decca 1968)★★, Perspective (Decca 1968)★★, Ricky Nelson In Concert (Decca 1970)★★★, Rick Sings Nelson (Decca 1970)★★★, Rudy The Fifth (Decca 1971)★★★, Garden Party (Decca 1972)★★★★, Windfall (1974)★★, Intakes (Epic 1977)★★, Playing To Win (Capitol 1981)★★★, Memphis Sessions (Epic 1986)★★★, Live 1983-1985 (Rhino 1989)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Very Best Of Rick Nelson (Decca 1970)★★★★, Legendary Masters (United Artists 1971)★★★★, The Singles Album 1963-1976 (United Artists 1977)★★★★, The Singles Album 1957-63 (United Artists 1977)★★★★, Greatest Hits (Rhino 1984)★★★, Rockin' With Ricky (Ace 1984)★★★★, String Along With Rick (Charly 1984)★★★, All My Best (MCA 1985)★★★★, Best Of 1963-1975 (MCA 1990)★★★★, Best Of Rick Nelson, Volume 2 (Capitol 1991)★★★★, 1969-1976 (Edsel 1995)★★★, Anthology (Charly 1998)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Ricky Nelson: Idol For A Generation, Joel Selvin. The Ricky Nelson Story, John Stafford and Iain Young. Ricky Nelson: Teenage Idol, Travelin' Man, Philip Bashe.

Nelson, Romeo

b. Iromeio Nelson, 12 March 1902, Springfield, Tennessee, USA, d. 17 May 1974, Chicago, Illinois, USA. A Chicago resident from the age of six (apart from a 1915-19 interlude in East St. Louis, where he learned piano), Nelson played rent parties and clubs until the early 40s, otherwise supporting himself by gambling. In 1929 he recorded four titles for Vocalion, among them 'Head Rag Hop' and 'Gettin' Dirty Just Shakin' That Thing', which are two of the finest rent party showpieces on record. Both are complex, endlessly inventive and full of puckish humour, the former track (based on Pinetop Perkins' 'Pinetop's Boogie Woogie') being taken at breakneck speed. When interviewed in the 60s, Nelson had retired from music altogether.

● COMPILATIONS: The Piano Blues Vol. 3 Vocalion (1977)★★★.

Nelson, Sandy

b. Sander L. Nelson, 1 December 1938, Santa Monica, California, USA. Drummer Nelson began his career as a member of the Kip Tyler Band. Appearances in live rock 'n' roll shows led to his becoming an in-demand session musician, where he joined an ad hoc group of young aspirants including Bruce Johnston and Phil Spector. Nelson played on 'To Know Him Is To Love Him', a million-selling single written and produced by the latter for his vocal group, the Teddy Bears. Johnston, meanwhile, assisted the drummer on an early demo of 'Teen Beat', a powerful instrumental which achieved gold status in 1959 on reaching the Top 10 in both the US and UK. Two years later, Nelson secured another gold disc for 'Let There Be Drums', co-composed with Richie Podolor, who became a successful producer with Three Dog Night and Steppenwolf. The pattern was now set for a bevvy of releases on Imperial, each of which combined a simple guitar melody with Nelson's explosive percussion breaks, a style echoing that of the concurrent surf craze. Its appeal quickly waned and 'Teen Beat '65' (1964) - recorded in the artist's garage studio - was his last chart entry. Guitarists Glen Campbell and Jerry McGee, later of the Ventures, as well as bassist Carol Kaye were among the musicians contributing to his sessions, but these lessened dramatically towards the end of the decade. During the 70s Nelson was featured in one of impresario Richard Nader's Rock 'N' Roll Revival shows, but he retired following the disappointing disco-influenced Bang Bang Rhythm. Despite being tempted into occasional, informal recordings, Nelson has remained largely inactive in professional music since 1978, although instrumental aficionados still marvel at the drummer's extensive catalogue.

- ALBUMS: Teen Beat (Imperial 1960)★★★, He's A Drummer Boy aka Happy Drums (Imperial 1960)★★★, Let There Be Drums (Imperial 1961)★★★, Drums Are My Beat! (Imperial 1962)★★★, Drummin' Up A Storm (Imperial 1962)★★★, Golden Hits (retitled Sandy Nelson Plays Fats Domino) (Imperial 1962)★★, On The Wild Side aka Country Style (Imperial 1962)★★, Compelling Percussion aka And Then There Were Drums (Imperial/London 1962)★★★, Teenage House Party (Imperial 1963)★★★, The Best Of The Beats (1963)★★, Be True To Your School (1963)★★, Live! In Las Vegas (1964)★★, Teen Beat '65 (1965)★★★, Drum Discotheque (1965)★★, Drums A Go-Go (1965)★★, Boss Beat (1966)★★, 'In' Beat (1966)★★, Superdrums (Liberty 1966)★★, Beat That #!!& Drum* (1966)★★, Cheetah Beat (1967)★★, The Beat Goes On (Liberty 1967)★★, Souldrums (Liberty 1968)★★, Boogaloo Beat (Liberty 1968)★★, Rock 'N' Roll Revival (Liberty 1968)★★, Golden Pops (1968)★★, Rebirth Of The Beat (1969)★★, Manhattan Spiritual (1969)★★, Groovy! (Liberty 1969)★★, Rock Drum Golden Disc (1972)★★, Keep On Rockin' (1972)★★, Roll Over Beethoven aka Hocus Pocus (1973)★★, Let The Good Times Rock (1974)★★, Bang Bang Rhythm (1975)★.
- COMPILATIONS: Beat That Drum (1963)★★★, Sandy Nelson Plays (1963)★★★, The Very Best Of Sandy Nelson (1978)★★★, 20 Rock 'N' Roll Hits: Sandy Nelson (1983)★★★, King Of Drums: His Greatest Hits (See For Miles 1995)★★★, Golden Hits/Best Of The Beats (See For Miles 1997)★★★.

Nelson, Shara

b. London, England. Nelson, formerly vocalist for Massive Attack, began her solo career with 'Down That Road' on Cooltempo Records in July 1993 after returning to London from Bristol. Both Paul Oakenfold and Steve Osbourne were involved in remixing the single, which marketed her as the 'new Aretha Franklin'. She readily admitted to her Motown influences, and the arrangements on her debut album were sumptuous affairs, with heaped strings and gushing choruses. However, she did not desert her dance/hip-hop roots entirely, with co-writing credits for Prince B of PM Dawn ('Down That Road'), Adrian Sherwood (the title track) and Saint Etienne ('One Goodbye In Ten') offering a good balance. The latter track was the second single to be taken from the album, bringing her first major hit. What Silence Knows' commercial performance was something of a breakthrough for British R&B, and it was among the nominations for 1994's Mercury Music Prize and two categories in the BRIT Awards. In 1995 Friendly Fire firmly established her as an international soul artist, a fact at least partly attributable to Nelson's ability to write lyrics of much greater depth than is generally associated with the genre. The production assistance of Tim Simenon (Bomb The Bass) and Mike Peden (ex-Chimes) and musicianship of Skip McDonald (Sugarhill Gang, etc.), Pressure Drop, Ashley Beadle and the ubiquitous Jah Wobble also contributed greatly to an exemplary collection of cool, resonant soul songs.

- ALBUMS: What Silence Knows (Cooltempo 1993)★★★, Friendly Fire (Cooltempo 1995)★★★★.

Nelson, Skip

A popular and versatile band singer in the 40s, Nelson sang with Teddy Powell before taking over from Ray Eberle with the Glenn Miller civilian band in late 1942. Nelson sang on such Miller hits as 'Dearly Beloved', 'Moonlight Becomes You', 'Moonlight Mood' and 'That Old Black Magic'. In the mid-40s he joined Guy Lombardo's Orchestra, and featured on their big 1944 hit, 'It's Love-Love-Love'.

Nelson, Tracy

b. 27 December 1944, Madison, Wisconsin, USA. Tutored on both piano and guitar as a child, Nelson began a singing career while studying at Wisconsin University. She was a member of two bands, including the Imitations, prior to recording her solo debut, Deep Are The Roots, in 1965. Charlie Musselwhite (harmonica) and Peter Wolfe (guitar) added support to a set drawing much of its inspiration from blues singers Ma Rainey and Bessie Smith. In 1966 Nelson became a founder-member of Mother Earth, an excellent country/blues attraction which she later came to dominate as the original members pursued other projects. By 1973, when they were recording regularly in Nashville, the group had become known as Tracy Nelson/Mother Earth, and that year's Poor Man's Paradise was, effectively, a solo album. The singer's independent career was officially launched the following year with Tracy Nelson, which included a powerful version of Bob Dylan's 'It Takes A Lot To Laugh, It Takes A Train To Cry'. Ensuing recordings revealed a mature, self-confident vocalist working in an eclectic style redolent of Bonnie Raitt. Recording opportunities decreased during the 80s, although Nelson continues to perform live.

- ALBUMS: Deep Are The Roots (Prestige 1965)★★★, Tracy Nelson (1974)★★★, Poor Man's Paradise (Columbia 1975)★★★★, Sweet Soul Music (MCA 1975)★★★★, Time Is On My Side (MCA 1976)★★★, Home Made Songs (Flying Fish 1978)★★★, Come See About Me (1980)★★★, Doin' It My Way (Adelphi 1981)★★★, In The Here And Now (Rounder 1993)★★★, I Feel So Good (Rounder 1995)★★★, Move On (Rounder 1996)★★★, with Irma Thomas and Marcia Ball Sing It! (Rounder 1998)★★.

Nelson, Willie

b. Willie Hugh Nelson, 30 April 1933, Abbott, Texas, USA. Following their mother's desertion and the death of their father, Nelson and his sister Bobbie were raised by their grandparents. Bobbie was encouraged to play the piano and Willie the guitar. By the age of 7 he was writing cheating-heart-style songs. 'Maybe I got 'em from soap operas on the radio,' he said, 'but I've always seemed to see the sad side of things.' Bobbie married the fiddle player Bud Fletcher, and they both played in his band. When Fletcher booked western swing star Bob Wills, the 13-year-old Willie Nelson joined him for a duet. After graduation he enlisted in the US Air Force, but was invalided out with a bad back, which has continued to plague his career to the present day. In 1953 Nelson began a traumatic marriage in Waco, Texas. 'Martha was a full-blooded Cherokee Indian,' says Nelson, 'and every night was like Custer's last stand.' When they moved to Fort Worth, Texas, Nelson was criticized for playing beer-joints and inappropriately evangelizing - he fortunately gave up the latter. A Salvation Army drummer, Paul English, has been his drummer ever since, and is referred to in 'Me And Paul' and 'Devil In A Sleepin' Bag'. Nelson's first record, 'Lumberjack', was recorded in Vancouver, Washington, in 1956 and was written by Leon Payne. Payne, then a radio disc jockey, advertised the records for sale on the air. For $1, the listener received the record and an autographed 8 x 10 inch photo of Nelson; 3,000 copies were sold by this method. In Houston he sold 'Family Bible' to a guitar scholar for $50 and when it became a country hit for Claude Gray in 1960, Nelson's name was not on the label. He also sold 'Night Life' for $150 to the director of the same school; Ray Price made it a country hit and there have now been over 70 other recordings. Nelson moved to Nashville where his offbeat, nasal phrasing and dislike of rhinestone trimmings made him radically different from other country musicians. He recorded demos in 1961, which he later rescued from a fire. The demos were spread over three collections, Face Of A Fighter, Diamonds In The Rough and Slow Down Old World, but they are often repackaged in an attempt to pass off old material as new. These one-paced collections feature little to attract new fans, as the songs are either bleak, very bleak or unbearably bleak. From time to time, Nelson has re-recorded these songs for other albums.

In 1961 three of Nelson's country songs crossed over to the US pop charts: Patsy Cline's 'Crazy', Faron Young's 'Hello Walls' and Jimmy Elledge's 'Funny How Time Slips Away'. Ray Price employed Nelson to play bass with his band, the Cherokee Cowboys, not knowing that he had never previously played the instrument. Nelson bought a bass, practised all night and showed up the next day as a bass player. Touring put further pressures on his marriage and he was divorced in 1962. The following year Nelson had his first country hits as a performer, first in a duet with Shirley Collie, 'Willingly', and then on his own with 'Touch Me'. His 40 tracks recorded for Liberty Records were top-heavy on strings, but they included the poignant 'Half A Man' and the whimsical 'River Boy'. He also wrote a witty single for Joe Carson, 'I Gotta Get Drunk (And I Sure Do Dread It)'. When Liberty dropped their country performers, Nelson moved to Monument. He gave Roy Orbison 'Pretty Paper', which made the UK Top 10 in 1964 and became Nelson's most successful composition in the UK. Some Monument tracks were revamped for The Winning Hand, which gave the misleading impression that Nelson had joined forces with Kris Kristofferson, Brenda Lee and Dolly Parton for a double album. In 1965 Nelson married Shirley Collie and took up pig-farming in Ridgetop, Tennessee. During the same year Ray Price refused to record any more of Nelson's songs after an accident when Nelson shot his fighting rooster. However, they eventually joined forces for an album. Chet Atkins produced some fine albums for Nelson on RCA Records, including a tribute to his home state, Texas In My Soul. Nelson was only allowed to record with his own musicians on the live Country Music Concert album, which included an emotional 'Yesterday' and a jazzy 'I Never Cared For You'. He recorded around 200 tracks for the label, including well-known songs of the day such as 'Both Sides Now', 'Help Me Make It Through The Night' and, bizarrely, the UK comedy team Morecambe And Wise's theme song, 'Bring Me Sunshine'. Yesterday's Wine remains his finest RCA album, although it begins somewhat embarrassingly, with Nelson talking to God. Nelson wrote seven of the songs in one night, under the influence of alcohol and drugs; 'What Can You Do To Me Now?', in particular, acutely indicated his anguish and instability.

During 1970 his showbusiness lawyer, Neil Rushen, thought Nelson should record for Atlantic Records in New York. The singer used his own band, supplemented by Doug Sahm and Larry Gatlin. Atlantic did not feel that The Troublemaker was right for the label and it only surfaced after he had moved to Columbia. Shotgun Willie was closer to rock music and included Leon Russell's 'A Song For You' and the reflective 'Sad Songs And Waltzes'. Phases And Stages (1974), made in Muscle Shoals, Alabama, examined the break-up of a marriage from both sides - the woman's ('Washing The Dishes') and the man's ('It's Not Supposed To Be That Way'). Nelson also recorded a successful duet with Tracy Nelson (no relation) of 'After The Fire Is Gone'. He toured extensively and his bookings at a rock venue, the Armadillo World Headquarters in Austin, showed that he might attract a new audience. Furthermore, Waylon Jennings' hit with 'Ladies Love Outlaws' indicated a market for 'outlaw country' music. The term separated them from more conventional country artists, and, with his pigtail and straggly beard, Nelson no longer looked like a country performer. Ironically, they were emphasizing the very thing from which country music was trying to escape - the cowboy image. In 1975 Nelson signed with Columbia and wanted to record a lengthy, old ballad, 'Red Headed Stranger'. His wife suggested that he split the song into sections and fit other songs around it. This led to an album about an old-time preacher and his love for an unfaithful woman. The album consisted of Willie's voice and guitar and Bobbie's piano. Columbia thought it was too low-key, too religious and needed strings. They were eventually persuaded to release it as it was and Red Headed Stranger (1975) has since become a country classic. Nelson's gentle performance of the country standard 'Blue Eyes Crying In The Rain' was a number 1 country hit and also made number 21 on the US pop charts in 1975. With brilliant marketing, RCA then compiled Wanted! The Outlaws with Jennings, Nelson, Jessi Colter and Tompall Glaser. It became the first country album to go platinum and included a hit single, 'Good Hearted Woman', in which Jennings' thumping beat and Nelson's sensitivity were combined beautifully (the 1996 Anniversary reissue added nine tracks, plus the brand new Steve Earle song 'Nowhere Road', sung by Nelson and Jennings). The first Waylon And Willie (1978) album included Ed Bruce's witty look at outlaw country, 'Mammas, Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up To Be Cowboys', and two beautifully restrained Nelson performances, 'If You Can Touch Her At All' and 'A Couple More Years'. Their two subsequent albums contained unsuitable or weak material and perfunctory arrangements, although the humorous Clean Shirt (1991) was a welcome return to form. Since then, they have added Johnny Cash and Kris Kristofferson for tours and albums as the Highwaymen. Nelson has also recorded two albums with Merle Haggard, including the highly successful 'Poncho And Lefty', as well as several albums with country stars of the 50s and 60s. His numerous guest appearances include 'Seven Spanish Angels' (Ray Charles), 'The Last Cowboy Song' (Ed Bruce), 'Are There Any More Real Cowboys?' (Neil Young), 'One Paper Kid' (Emmylou Harris), 'I Gotta Get Drunk' (George Jones), 'Waltz Across Texas' (Ernest Tubb), 'They All Went To Mexico' (Carlos Santana) and 'Something To Brag About' (Mary Kay Place). Utilizing modern technology, he sang with Hank Williams on 'I Told A Lie To My Heart'. He invited Julio Iglesias to join him at the Country Music Awards and their duet of Albert Hammond's 'To All The Girls I've Known Before' was an international success.

Nelson has recorded numerous country songs, including a tribute album to Lefty Frizzell, but more significant has been his love of standards. He had always recorded songs like 'Am I Blue?' and 'That Lucky Old Sun', but Stardust (1978), which was produced by Booker T. Jones of the MGs, took country fans by surprise. The weather-beaten, top-hatted character on the sleeve was Willie Nelson but the contents resembled a Bing Crosby album. Nelson sang ten standards, mostly slowly, to a small rhythm section and strings. The effect was devastating as he breathed new life into 'Georgia On My Mind' and 'Someone To Watch Over Me', and the album remained on the US country charts for nearly 10 years. Nelson recorded 103 songs in a week with Leon Russell but their performance of standards falls far short of Stardust. Nelson tried to recapture the magic of Stardust on the lethargic Without A Song, which contained the first Nelson/Iglesias duet, 'As Time Goes By'. In terms of both performance and arrangement, his Christmas album, Pretty Paper (1979), sounds like a mediocre act at a social club, but the jaunty Somewhere Over The Rainbow (the Harold Arlen/E.Y. 'Yip' Harburg classic) is much better. In 1982 Johnny Christopher showed Nelson a song he had written, 'Always On My Mind'. Nelson had originally wanted to record the song with Merle Haggard, but Haggard did not care for it; Nelson recorded an emotional and convincing version on his own, and it went to number 5 in the US charts. It was some time before Nelson learnt that Elvis Presley had previously recorded the song. The resulting album, which included 'Let It Be Me' and 'A Whiter Shade Of Pale', showed his mastery of the popular song. Other modern songs to which he has added his magic include 'City Of New Orleans', 'Wind Beneath My Wings' and 'Please Come To Boston'. He sang another Presley hit, 'Love Me Tender', on the soundtrack of Porky's Revenge. When Robert Redford met Nelson at a party, he invited him to join the cast of The Electric Horseman. Willie had an entertaining role as Redford's manager, and he made a major contribution to the soundtrack with 'My Heroes Have Always Been Cowboys'. Redford wanted to star in the film of Red Headed Stranger (1987) but it was eventually cast with Nelson in the title role. His other films include Barbarosa (in which he played an old gunfighter), a remake of Stagecoach with his outlaw friends, and the cliché-ridden Songwriter with Kris Kristofferson. He is more suited to cameo roles and has the makings of a latter-day Gabby Hayes.

Nelson's record label, Lone Star, which he started in 1978 with Steven Fromholz and the Geezinslaw Brothers, was not a commercial success, but he later developed his own recording studio and golf course at Pedernales, Texas; he produced Timi Yuro - Today there in 1982. He took over the Dripping Springs Festival and turned it into a festival of contemporary country music: Willie Nelson's Fourth of July Picnic. He has organized several Farm Aid benefits, and he and Kenny Rogers represented country music on the number 1 USA For Africa single, 'We Are The World'. With all this activity, it is hardly surprising that his songwriting has suffered and he rarely records new compositions. He wrote 'On The Road Again' for the country music film in which he starred, Honeysuckle Rose, and he also wrote a suite of songs about the old west and reincarnation, Tougher Than Leather, when he was in hospital with a collapsed lung. Among the many songs that have been written about Willie Nelson are 'Willy The Wandering Gypsy And Me' (Billy Joe Shaver), 'Willie, Won't You Sing A Song With Me' (George Burns), 'Crazy Old Soldier' (Lacy J. Dalton), 'Willon And Waylee' (Don Bowman), 'The Willie And Waylon Machine' (Marvin Rainwater), 'Willie' (Hank Cochran and Merle Haggard) and 'It's Our Turn To Sing With Ol' Willie' (Carlton Moody And The Moody Brothers). Nelson's touring band, Family, is a very tight unit featuring musicians who have been with him for many years. Audiences love his image as an old salt, looking rough and playing a battered guitar, and his headbands have become souvenirs in the same way as Elvis's scarves. His greatest testimony comes from President Jimmy Carter, who joined him onstage and said, 'I, my wife, my daughter, my sons and my mother all think he's the greatest'. Unfortunately, the USA's Internal Revenue Service took a different view, and in an effort to obtain $16 million in back-taxes, they had Nelson make an acoustic album, which was sold by mail order. His collaboration with artists such as Bob Dylan and Paul Simon on Across The Borderline brought him back into the commercial mainstream for the first time in several years. In 1991 Nelson married Annie D'Angelo and they now have a young family. Albums have flowed fast and furiously as Nelson brings himself back into the black financially, and Just One Love was the high point of his prolific 90s period. Nelson is a true outlaw and probably the greatest legend and performer in country music since Hank Williams.

● ALBUMS: ... And Then I Wrote (Liberty 1962)★★★, Here's Willie Nelson (Liberty 1963)★★★, Country Willie - His Own Songs (RCA Victor 1965)★★★, Country Favorites - Willie Nelson Style (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Country Music Concert (Live At Panther Hall) (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Make Way For Willie Nelson (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, The Party's Over (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Texas In My Soul (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, Good Times (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, My Own Peculiar Way (RCA Victor 1969)★★★, Both Sides Now (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, Laying My Burdens Down (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, Willie Nelson And Family (RCA Victor 1971)★★★, Yesterday's Wine (RCA Victor 1971)★★★, The Words Don't Fit The Picture (RCA Victor 1972)★★★, The Willie Way (RCA Victor 1972)★★★, Shotgun Willie (Atlantic 1973)★★★, Phases And Stages (Atlantic 1974)★★★, What Can You Do To Me Now (RCA 1975)★★, Red Headed Stranger (Columbia 1975)★★★★★, with Waylon Jennings, Jessi Colter, Tompall Glaser Wanted! The Outlaws (RCA 1976)★★★★, The Sound In Your Mind (Columbia 1976)★★★★, Phases And Stages 1964 recording (Atlantic 1976)★★, Willie Nelson - Live (RCA 1976)★★, The Troublemaker (Columbia 1976)★★★, Before His Time (RCA 1977)★★, To Lefty From Willie (Columbia 1977)★★★, Stardust (Columbia 1978)★★★★, Face Of A Fighter 1961 recording (Lone Star 1978)★★★, Willie And Family Live (Columbia 1978)★★★, with Jennings Waylon And Willie (RCA 1978)★★★★, with Leon Russell One For The Road (Columbia 1978)★★★★, The Electric Horseman (Columbia 1979)★★★★, Willie Nelson Sings Kristofferson (Columbia 1979)★★, Pretty Paper (Columbia 1979)★, Sweet Memories (RCA 1979)★★★, Danny Davis And Willie Nelson With The Nashville Brass (RCA 1980)★★★, with Ray Price San Antonio Rose (Columbia 1980)★★★, Honeysuckle Rose (Columbia 1980)★★★★, Family Bible (MCA Songbird 1980)★★★, Somewhere Over The Rainbow (Columbia 1981)★★★, Minstrel Man (RCA 1981)★★, with Roger Miller Old Friends (Columbia 1982)★★★, Diamonds In The Rough (1982)★★, with Johnny Bush Together Again (1982)★★★, Always On My Mind (Columbia 1982)★★★★, with Jennings WWII (RCA 1982)★★★★, with Webb Pierce In The Jailhouse Now (Columbia 1982)★★★, with Kris Kristofferson, Brenda Lee, Dolly Parton The Winning Hand (Monument 1982)★★★, with Merle Haggard Poncho And Lefty (Epic 1983)★★★, Without A Song (Columbia 1983)★★, Tougher Than Leather (Columbia 1983)★★★, My Own Way (RCA 1983)★★★, with Jennings Take It To The Limit (Columbia 1983)★★★, with Jackie King Angel Eyes (Columbia 1984)★★, Slow Down Old World (1984)★★★★, City Of New Orleans (Columbia 1984)★★, with Kristofferson Music From Songwriter film soundtrack (Columbia 1984)★★★, with Faron Young Funny How Time Slips Away (Columbia 1984)★★★, with Johnny Cash, Jennings, Kristofferson Highwayman (Columbia 1985)★★★★, with Hank Snow Brand On My Heart (Columbia 1985)★★★, Me And Paul (Columbia 1985)★★★, Half Nelson (Columbia 1985)★★, The Promiseland (Columbia 1986)★★, Partners (Columbia 1986)★★★, Island In The Sea (Columbia 1987)★★★, with Haggard Seashores Of Old Mexico (Epic 1987)★★★, with J.R. Chatwell Jammin' With J.R. And Friends (1988)★★★, What A Wonderful World (Columbia 1988)★★★, A Horse Called Music (Columbia 1989)★★★, with Cash, Jennings, Kristofferson Highwayman 2 (Columbia 1990)★★★, Born For Trouble (Columbia 1990)★★★, with Jennings Clean Shirt (Epic 1991)★★, Who'll Buy My Memories - The IRS Tapes (Columbia 1991)★★★, with Willie Nelson Together Again (1982)★★★, Across The Borderline (Columbia 1993)★★★★, Healing Hands Of Time (Liberty 1994)★★★, Moonlight Becomes You (Justice 1994)★★, with Curtis Porter Six Hours At Pedernales (Step One 1994)★★, with Don Cherry Augusta (Coast To Coast 1995)★★, with Cash, Jennings, Kristofferson The Road Goes On Forever (Liberty 1995)★★, Just One Love (Transatlantic 1995)★★★, Spirit (Island 1996)★★★, with Waylon Jennings, Jessi Colter, Tompall Glaser Wanted! The Outlaws (1976-1996, 20th Anniversary) (RCA 1996)★★★★, with Bobbie Nelson How Great Thou Art (Finer Arts 1996)★★, with Bobbie Nelson Hill Country Christmas (Finer Arts 1997)★★, with Johnny Cash VH1 Storytellers (American 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Willie Nelson (United Artists 1973)★★★, Willie Nelson's Greatest Hits (And Some That Will Be) (Columbia 1981)★★★, 20 Of The Best (RCA 1982)★★★, Country Willie (Capitol 1987)★★★, The Collection (Castle 1988)★★★, Across The Tracks - The Best Of Willie Nelson (1988)★★★, Nite Life: Greatest Hits And Rare Tracks, 1959-1971 (Rhino 1990)★★★★, King Of The Outlaws (1993)★★★, Heartaches (1993)★★★, 45 Original Tracks (EMI 1993)★★★, The Early Years (Scotti Bros 1994)★★★, The Early Years: The Complete Liberty Recordings Plus More 2-CD set (Liberty 1994)★★★, Super Hits (Columbia 1994)★★★, A Classic And Unreleased Collection 3-CD box set (Rhino 1995)★★★, Revolutions Of Time: The Journey 1975-1993 (Columbia/Legacy 1995)★★★★, The Essential Willie Nelson (RCA 1995)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Honeysuckle Rose, First Time Together (with Ray Charles), My Life - Biography, Willie Nelson And Family In Concert (CBS-Fox 1988), The Best Of (Vestron Video 1990), The Original Outlaw/On The Road Again (Hughes Leisure 1994), Nashville Superstar (Magnum Music 1997).

● FURTHER READING: Willie Nelson Family Album, Lana Nelson Fowler (ed.). Willie Nelson - Country Outlaw, Lola Socbey. Willie, Michael Bane. I Didn't Come Here And I Ain't Leavin', Willie Nelson with Bud Shrake. Heartworn Memories - A Daughter's Personal Biography Of Willie Nelson, Susie Nelson. Willie: An Autobiography, Willie Nelson and Bud Shrake.

Nemesis

This rap trio are from Dallas, Texas, comprising The Snake, Big Al and MC Azim. Their first single, 'Oak Cliff', appeared in 1987, but it would be four years down the line before their debut long-player, To Hell And Back. It was promoted by the single 'I Want Your Sex'. As their spokesman Azim was happy to point out, 'To be young gifted and black is a blessing that has been treated as a sin'. Undoubtedly this has played a part in holding back their career, as too has prejudice against Texan rappers generally.

● ALBUMS: To Hell And Back (Profile 1990)★★★★, Munchies For Your Bass (Profile 1991)★★★.

Nenes

Nenes are a quartet from Okinawa, near Japan, formed when Sadao China, an elder statesmen of traditional music on the island, decided he wished to promote an all-female group in 1990. Part of the plan was for the selected women to sing Okinawan minyo music (effectively island folk), but using Western instruments to appeal to the youth of the island. The first recruit was band leader Misako Koja (b. *c.*1956, Okinawa), already a widely recognised figure in the local music scene through singing and playing the sanshin (three-stringed lute) since an early age. She made her first solo recording at the age of 10, before studying under Sadao China and joining the Okinawan Chans, a chorus group who accompanied Ryuichi Sakamoto on tour. The second member to join Nenes was Yasuko Miyazato, another veteran student of China. The quartet was completed by the addition of Yuino Hiyane, like Yasuko Miyazato a former winner of the Ryukyu Minyo Preservation Society national music competition, and finally Namiko Miyazato. In the studio, China acted as their executive producer and composer, supporting his charges' elegant choruses and harmonies with his own sanshin playing, adding keyboards from Spiritual Unity leader Sahara Kazuya. The resultant Ikawu became a massive hit, selling out of its first pressing within two weeks, and eventually becoming the most successful Okinawan release in mainland Japan in 1991. Its success prompted what subsequently became known as the 'Okinawan wave' in Japanese music. Signing to major label Ki/oon Sony the following year, Yunta saw Kazuya and China concoct a new brand of shima uta (island songs) pop with the addition of Brazilian musicians, as Nenes embarked on a sell out tour of Japan with Spiritual Unity. Yet all the time they continued to play more relaxed shows at the Okinawan Shima Uta nightclub which is their base, singing as necessary with the arrival of customers. A third album, Ashibi, featured a cover version of Bob Marley's 'No Woman No Cry', in addition to the mainly China-penned originals, including a version of his own Japanese pop hit from 1977, 'Bye Bye Okinawa'.

● ALBUMS: Ikawu (Let's Go!) (Disc Akabana 1991)★★★★, Yunta (Working Songs) (Ki/oon Sony 1992)★★★, Ashibi (Ki/oon Sony 1993)★★★.

Neon Cross

This Californian 'white metal' quartet was formed in 1984 by David Raymond Reeves (lead vocals) and Don Webster (guitar). Enlisting the services of Ed Ott (bass) and Michael Betts (drums), it took another four years before the band made their debut with a track on 1988's California Metal compilation. A contract with Regency Records ensued and their self-titled debut album emerged as a competent amalgam of Stryper, Barren Cross and Bloodgood. It was, however, discredited somewhat by Reeves' limited vocal ability.

● ALBUMS: Neon Cross (Regency 1988)★★.

Neon Philharmonic

Neon Philharmonic was essentially the work of two musicians, the Nashville, Tennessee-based singer-songwriter Don Gant (b. 1942, d. 6 March 1987) and the arranger, conductor and composer Tuppy Saussy. Gant's career included writing songs with Roy Orbison and singing solo and background for country artists such as Don Gibson and John D. Loudermilk. He produced records for many artists, including Bobby Bland, Jimmy Buffett and Lefty Frizzell. Gant also ran ABC-Dunhill Records and was president of the Nashville branch of the National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (NARAS). Gant teamed with Saussy in 1969 and recorded the latter's 'Morning Girl' for Warner Brothers Records with a chamber group comprised of members of the Nashville Symphony Orchestra. The record made the US Top 20 and one follow-up single also reached the charts. The 'group' released two albums and five further singles, but the novelty had diminished.

● ALBUMS: Moth Confesses (Warners 1969)★★, Neon Philharmonic (Warners 1969)★★.

Neon Rose

This progressive rock group was formed in Sweden in 1973 by vocalist Roger Holegard and guitarist Gunnar Hallin. Augmented by Piero Mengarelli (guitar), Beno Mengarelli (bass, vocals) and Thomas Wilkund (drums), they signed to Vertigo the following year. Inspired by Iron Butterfly, Emerson, Lake And Palmer and Deep Purple, Neon Rose were an experimental quintet that indulged in long, esoteric and frequently blues-based workouts. They debuted with A Dream Of Glory And Pride in 1974, which showcased the band's instrumental capabilities, but also highlighted their vocal shortcomings. Two further albums were released, but the quality of material declined significantly. They disappeared from the scene in 1976.

- ALBUMS: A Dream Of Glory And Pride (Vertigo 1974)★★★, Neon Rose Two (Vertigo 1974)★★, Reload (Vertigo 1975)★★.

Neptune's Daughter

Following their successful portrayal of a pair of twins in the bullfighting musical Fiesta (1947), MGM reunited Esther Williams and Ricardo Montalban two years later for this Jack Cummings Technicolor production which proved to be one of the top screen musicals of the decade, grossing $3.5 million in North America alone. Williams plays an up-market swimsuit designer who falls for millionaire Montalban, a member of a visiting South American polo team. The two stars nearly had the film stolen away from them via an hilarious sub-plot that involved Betty Garrett and comedian Red Skelton. He is a simple polo club masseur, but she is convinced that he is the wealthy Montalban, and wants to play her own kind of games with him. Joining in the fun were Keenan Wynn, Mel Blanc, Ted De Corsia, Mike Mazurki, and Xavier Cugat And His Orchestra. Jack Donahue staged the dance sequences and the obligatory underwater ballet. Frank Loesser's songs included 'My Heart Beats Faster', 'I Love Those Men', and the enduring 'Baby, It's Cold Outside', which was introduced by Williams and Montalban, and went on to win an Oscar. Dorothy Kingsley, who wrote the witty screenplay, later worked on major musicals such as Kiss Me Kate, Seven Brides For Seven Brothers, and Pal Joey. This bright and entertaining film was directed by Edward Buzzell.

Nero And The Gladiators

This short-lived UK instrumental pop group was formed by guitarist Mike O'Neill who, having been informed that he resembled a Roman emperor, dubbed himself Nero and took to wearing a toga. His group, which also included Colin Green (guitar) and Rod 'Boots' Slade (bass), completed three rousing singles, including 'Entry Of The Gladiators' and Prokofiev's 'In The Hall Of The Mountain King', the latter of which incurred a BBC radio ban when Boots' spoken introduction was deemed disrespectful to a classical piece of music. The unit was disbanded in 1962 when Slade and Green opted to join Georgie Fame And The Blue Flames. Slade later surfaced in the Alan Price Set.

Nero, Peter

b. 22 May 1934, Brooklyn, New York, USA. A stylish pianist, composer, and conductor, throughout his long career Nero has switched, apparently effortlessly, between classical, jazz and popular music. Early on, he trained as a classical musician, and became interested in jazz at the age of 19 after hearing the legendary Art Tatum. In the late 50s, he spent four years playing jazz clubs such as the Village Gate, Village Vanguard, the Blue Angel, and the Tropicana lounge in Las Vegas, before being discovered by RCA Records in 1960. They were looking for a 'pop' pianist, and auditioned more than 100 before choosing Nero. During the next eight years, he recorded some 24 albums, including the Grammy-winning The Colorful Peter Nero, which reached the UK chart in 1963. Two years previously, Nero had won the Grammy for Best New Artist. His other US Top 40 entries in the early 60s included Piano Forte, New Piano In Town, Young And Warm And Wonderful, For The Nero-Minded, Hail The Conquering Nero (number 5, his most successful album to date), Peter Nero In Person, and Reflections. In 1963 he wrote the music score and the title number (with Carroll Coates) for the sophisticated film comedy Sunday In New York, which starred Jane Fonda and Cliff Robertson. Mel Tormé sang the song over the movie's credits, and included it on an Atlantic Records album that paid tribute to New York. Shortly after he moved from RCA to Columbia, in 1971 Nero had his solitary US singles hit with 'Theme From "Summer Of '42"', and made the US Top 30 with an album of the same title. In the mid-70s Nero turned once more to jazz, touring and recording with his own trio. Since then, he has continued to appear on the concert platform as a pianist and conductor, often with top US symphony orchestras, still blending the classical with the popular.

- ALBUMS: New Piano In Town (RCA Victor 1961)★★★★, Piano Forte (RCA Victor 1961)★★★★, The Piano Of... (RCA Victor 1961)★★★★, Young And Warm And Wonderful (RCA Victor 1962)★★★, For The Nero-Minded (RCA Victor 1962)★★★, Hail The Conquering Nero (RCA Victor 1963)★★★, The Colorful (RCA Victor 1963)★★★, In Person (RCA Victor 1963)★★, Reflections (RCA Victor 1964)★★★, Sunday In New York (RCA Victor 1964)★★, Songs You Won't Forget (RCA Victor 1964)★★, On Tour (RCA Victor 1966)★★, Screen Scene (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Up Close (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Born Free (Camden 1967)★★★, Salute To Herb Alpert (RCA Victor 1967)★★, Xochimilco (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Zero-ing In (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra Nero Goes 'Pops' (RCA Victor c.60s)★★★★, I've Gotta Be Me (Columbia 1970)★★★, Summer Of '42 (Columbia 1971)★★★, The First Time Ever (1973),★★★ Peter Nero Now (70s)★★★, Solid Gold Piano (1984)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Best Of Peter Nero (RCA Victor 1965)★★★★, Best Of Peter Nero (1973)★★★.

Nerves

Although formed in San Francisco, California, USA, in 1976, power-pop group the Nerves established their reputation in Los Angeles. They consisted of Jack Lee (guitar, vocals), Peter Case (bass, vocals) and Paul Collins (drums), who completed a promising EP on their own label the following year. The lead track, 'Hangin' On The Telephone', was subsequently covered by Blondie, who also recorded Jack Lee's 'Will Anything Happen?'. By this point the Nerves had split up, the group proving too restrictive for the members' individual talents. Peter Case formed the Plimsouls before rejoining Collins in the (US) Beat. Case left this group for a solo career. In 1985 a French label, Fence, released the Nerves' EP along with six demo recordings.

● ALBUMS: The Nerves (Fence 1985)★★★.

Solo: Jack Lee Jack Lee's Greatest Hits Vol. 1 (Maiden America 1981)★★★.

Nervous Norvus

b. Jimmy Drake, 1912, d. 1968. The California-based ex-truck driver's first record was the country ballad 'Gambling Fury', which he recorded as Singing Jimmy Drake on the Indiana label Claudra. He joined Dot Records in 1956 and had two of the biggest novelty hits of that year. His first hit, 'Transfusion', concerned the thoughts of a drink-driver who is in need of a blood transfusion after a car crash. Despite the sick subject matter, it was hilarious, though the British public were spared it when London Records refused its release. The follow-up to this US Top 10 hit was 'Ape Call', a tale about cavemen recorded in hip language, with jungle calls courtesy of Red Blanchard. After his few months in the spotlight he returned to obscurity, despite later unsuccessful recordings on Big Ben and Embee.

● COMPILATIONS: Transfusion (1985)★★.

Nervous Records

New York-based record label almost as familiar to its adherents via a range of clothing merchandise emblazoned with its distinctive cartoon logo, as it is for its bouncing house tunes. Nervous came into being in the summer of 1990, through the efforts of Michael Weiss and Gladys Pizarro (who would subsequently split to form Strictly Rhythm). The label was launched on to New York's club underground via three specially selected releases - Niceguy Soulman's 'Feel It' (Roger 'S' Sanchez), Swing Kids' 'Good Feeling' (Kenny 'Dope' Gonzalez) and Latin Kings' 'I Want To Know (Quiero Saber)' (Todd Terry). Since then the label, and its merchandising arm, has been run on the basis of continuous throughput. New music is recorded and released week after week, and clothes lines are changed on a similar timescale. The philosophy is that this is the one way in which the label can maintain its link to the street, although it doubtless also increases profit margins. Trinidad's 'Philly'/'The Blunt' was produced on either side by Frankie Feliciano and Todd Terry, while Just Us's 'You Got It' was created by Frankie Cutlass and Andy Marvel, typifying the depth in talent employed by the label. Garage mainstay Paul Scott also chipped in with Sandy B's 'Feel Like Singing'. Some of the label's better-known later cuts include Nu Yorican Soul's output and Loni Clark's 'Rushin'' and 'You'. However, Nervous' ambitions do not end at merely providing high-quality dance material from established stars. There are already three subsidiary labels, Wreck, Sorted, Weeded and Strapped. Wreck covers hip hop, scoring immediately with the signing of Black Moon (whose 'Who Got The Props' single moved over 200,000 units). Sorted documents more trance- and ambient-focused material, while Weeded hosts underground reggae and dub artists. The newest offshoot is Strapped, which is more funk-orientated. Despite a number of instant successes, the Nervous empire continues to maintain its commitment to its original vision: 'When we put out a record, it's from the street level, if it crosses over, that's just a plus, we don't tailor a record to become a crossover hit. We want to keep our roots in the street'.

Nesbitt, John

b. *c.*1900, Norfolk, West Virginia, USA, d. 1935. In the early 20s Nesbitt played trumpet with various bands before joining the band led by Bill McKinney, which eventually evolved into McKinney's Cotton Pickers. He stayed with the band for several years, playing and writing arrangements. In the early 30s he was resident in New York, playing in the bands of Fletcher Henderson and Luis Russell, before returning to territory bands, including those of Zack Whyte and Speed Webb.

● COMPILATIONS: McKinney's Cotton Pickers (1928-29) (1983).

● FURTHER READING: McKinney's Music: A Bio-discography Of McKinney's Cotton Pickers, John Chilton.

Nesmith, Michael

b. Robert Michael Nesmith, 30 December 1942, Houston, Texas, USA. Although best known as a member of the Monkees, Nesmith enjoyed a prolific career in music prior to this group's inception. During the mid-60s folk boom he performed with bassist John London as Mike and John, but later pursued work as a solo act. Two singles, credited to Michael Blessing, were completed under the aegis of New Christy Minstrels mastermind Randy Sparks, while Nesmith's compositions, 'Different Drum' and 'Mary Mary', were recorded, respectively, by the Stone Poneys and Paul Butterfield. Such experience gave the artist confidence to demand the right to determine the Monkees' musical policy and his sterling country-rock performances represented the highlight of the group's varied catalogue. In 1968 he recorded The Witchita Train Whistle Sings, an instrumental set, but his independent aspirations did not fully flourish until 1970 when he formed the First National Band. Former colleague London joined Orville 'Red' Rhodes (pedal steel) and John Ware (drums) in a group completing three exceptional albums that initially combined Nashville-styled country with the leader's acerbic pop, (Magnetic South), but later grew to encompass a grander, even eccentric interpretation of the genre (Nevada Fighter). The band disintegrated during the latter's recording and a Second National Band, on which Nesmith and Rhodes were accompanied by Johnny Meeks (bass; ex-Gene Vincent and Merle Haggard) and Jack Panelli (drums), completed the less impressive Tantamount To Treason. The group was disbanded entirely for the sarcastically titled And The Hits Just Keep On Comin', a haunting, largely acoustic, set regarded by many as the artist's finest work. In 1972 he founded the Countryside label under the aegis of Elektra Records, but despite critically acclaimed sets by Iain Matthews, Garland Frady and the ever-present Rhodes, the project was axed in the wake of boardroom politics. The excellent Pretty Much Your Standard Ranch Stash ended the artist's tenure with RCA, following which he founded a second label, Pacific Arts. The Prison, an allegorical narrative that came replete with a book, was highly criticized upon release, although recent opinion has lauded its ambition. Nesmith reasserted his commercial status in 1977 when 'Rio', culled from From A Radio Engine To The Photon Wing, reached the UK Top 30. The attendant video signalled a growing interest in the visual arts that flourished following Infinite Rider On The Big Dogma, his biggest-selling US release. In 1982 Elephant Parts won the first ever Grammy for a video, while considerable acclaim was engendered by a subsequent series, Michael Nesmith In Television Parts, and the film Repo Man, which the artist financed. Having refused entreaties to join the Monkees' 20th Anniversary Tour, this articulate entrepreneur continues to pursue his various diverse interests, including a highly successful video production company (Pacific Arts).

● ALBUMS: Mike Nesmith Presents The Wichita Train Whistle Sings (Dot 1968)★★, Magnetic South (RCA 1970)★★★, Loose Salute (RCA 1971)★★★★, Nevada Fighter (RCA 1971)★★★★, Tantamount To Treason (RCA 1972)★★, And The Hits Just Keep On Comin' (RCA 1972)★★★, Pretty Much Your Standard Ranch Stash (RCA 1973)★★★, The Prison (Pacific Arts 1975)★★, From A Radio Engine To The Photon Wing (Pacific Arts 1977)★★★, Live At The Palais (Pacific Arts 1978)★★, Infinite Rider On The Big Dogma (Pacific Arts 1979)★★★, Tropical Campfires (Pacific Arts 1992)★★★, The Garden (Rio Royal 1994)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Mike Nesmith (RCA 1977)★★★, The Newer Stuff (Awareness 1989)★★★, The Older Stuff (Rhino 1992)★★★★, Complete (Pacific Arts 1993)★★★, Listen To The Band (Camden 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Elephant Parts (Awareness 1992).

● FILMS: Head (1968).

Nestico, Sam

b. 6 February 1924, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA. Nestico studied music after completing military service, although by this time he had already gained experience playing trombone in a radio orchestra. During the 50s and 60s he worked as staff arranger for various military bands. In the late 60s he began writing for Count Basie and subsequently wrote for films and television. He is also a teacher and many of his arrangements have been written with college and university bands in mind. He is a cousin of the arranger Sal Nistico.

● ALBUMS: Swingphonic (With Time Out For Seven) (70s)★★, by Count Basie Basie Big Band (1975)★★★★, by Basie Warm Breeze (1981)★★★, Dark Orchid (1982)★★★, Night Flight (1985)★★★★.

Network

London-based duo of Tim Laws and Ryan Lee, who were friends from the age of 12, and formed their first band at the age of 13. Two years passed before they became Two Extremes, playing the London rock circuit. Afterwards Laws set up a fully equipped 16-track studio in his parent's garden shed. He is also an accomplished guitarist, having contributed to five of the songs on the debut Undercover album. Lee, meanwhile, concentrated on his vocals, seeking guidance from Elton John/Annie Lennox coach Glynn Jones. The duo formed Network while playing together in a covers band the Max Wall Experience. Immediately they broke the charts with 'Broken Wings', following up with the 1993 release, 'Get Real'.

Network Records

Brimingham dance label that originally grew out of the underground success of Kool Kat Records. Kool Kat was formed in 1988 by the partnership of Neil Rushton and Dave Barker. Rushton was a well-known northern soul DJ in the 70s and a journalist for Echoes and other periodicals, and in the 80s managed the Inferno record label which re-released northern soul records and material by psychedelic soul group Dream Factory. He stumbled on Detroit techno through his northern soul connections in the USA, and met leading lights Derrick May then Kevin Saunderson, in time becoming the latter's manager. He subsequently compiled an album of Detroit techno for Virgin (the first in the UK, later packaging similar collections like the Retro Techno/Detroit Definitive sets for Network). His partner Dave Barker's background was as a jazz-funk DJ in the Midlands. Kool Kat began with a number of underground records (experimental techno, psychedelic techno and Chicago house). The policy from the outset was to combine the cream of US releases with plenty of upfront British material. They consequently took on board several local groups, the best-known early example of which were Nexus 21/Altern 8. Proclaimed as one of the hip record labels of the day, funds still remained in short supply and the label was on the verge of collapse. The team had a rethink and formed a new label, Network. From the start Network has employed its own, hard imagery and defined, generic sleeves. The musical range, however, was much broader than had been the case with Kool Kat. The first record to be released was Neal Howard's 'Indulge', while the honour of first chart appearance came with Altern 8's 'Infiltrate'. 'Activ8', by the same group, would do even better, reaching number 3. Network's money problems were easing, and with the advent of KWS and 'Please Don't Go' they disappeared altogether. Neil Rushton had heard the track in a Birmingham club and saw the potential in making a pop record out of it. He approached ZYX who held the rights to the Double You? version of the KC & The Sunshine Band song, only available in Europe, but was turned down unceremoniously. Rushton arranged for KWS, then recording for Network as B-Line, to re-record it. It stayed at number 1 for five weeks. The follow-up, another KC cover, 'Rock Your Baby', was also hugely successful, and soon a lawsuit from ZYX, still unresolved years later, was underway. After KWS the label delivered Altern 8's debut, which effectively summarized the high watermark of the rave generation, with Network personnel taking a full hand in the various pranks and schemes that became synonymous with the group. However, they ran into trouble in June 1992 over Manchester rave band Rhythm Quest's The Dreams EP, which used expletives to criticize police procedures in closing down raves. The police expressed their fears to Network that the record, which featured ex-boxer Mark Hadfield, could incite violence, and it was subsequently reissued in a 'cleaned up version', just missing the Top 40.

By the end of 1992 the label had grown unhappy with their distribution set-up with Pinnacle, and at great expense bought themselves out with two years of the contract to run. They initially contacted Sony with a view to distribution only, but in the end the notion of a bigger tie-in was mooted. After eight months of negotiations Sony bought 49% of the shares in the company in August 1993, and Network officially became (on the headed notepaper rather than record labels) Best Beat Dance Limited. It immediately allowed the company far greater freedom. Disenchanted with the reputation given to Network by KWS, they launched SiX6 (most commonly referred to as Six By Six) for street level house. Again a strong generic look was invoked with different colours to distinguish releases. The first product for the imprint was 'Hell's Party' by Glam, an immediate success, which secured the more underground vibe and credibility which Six By Six had been searching for. The Sony deal had also given the company the power to distribute records themselves, and thus help out younger labels by offering them distribution (as long as they pass the Network taste barometer). Some of these 'third party'-distributed labels include Bostin' (which is owned by a band called Mother, whose main man is DJ Lee Fisher), Other Records, the 'Journeys By DJ' series, Good Boy, DiY/Strictly 4 Groovers, Sure Is Pure's Gem, the Ritmo Rival's Planet Four, Hott Records from London and Manchester's UFG and Silver City. In addition there are several labels that Network actually owns. In 1990 the company opened an office in New York, and the First Choice garage/disco label (also a recording studio based in Greenwich Village) grew out of that set-up. Baseroom Productions is similar to First Choice in that it grew out of a recording studio, based in Stoke On Trent. Artists like Sure Is Pure, Bizarre Inc, Altern 8 and MC Lethal had been recording there, and with the name cropping up so frequently Network investigated. They eventually bought out the Baseroom as part of their deal with Sony, and launched a label around the studio, specializing in techno and experimental ambient/non-vocal material. The label's principal artists include Aquarel and the System, and Laurent Garnier has also collaborated on projects emanating from there. As if that were not enough, there are additionally three or four labels with whom deals have been done where Network handle all the rights for releases in the UK. KMS UK was inaugurated via Rushton's management of Saunderson, which made the move inevitable. The label specializes in strong vocal house while spin-off label Eclipse offers the non-vocal techno for which Saunderson is famous. Another Detroit label is Serious Grooves, an underground techno/disco imprint pioneered by Terrence Parker. It is overseen by DJ Tone (b. Antonio Echols), a well-known underground DJ and the keyboard player in Inner City's live band. Vicious Muzik in New York is a label owned and run by Johnny Vicious, one of the most exciting new arrivals on the dance scene of the 90s. Other labels under the Network umbrella include Vinyl Addiction (underground house, and the outlet for the highly regarded Stereogen), Stafford South (named after the motorway junction, where Mark Archer, who A&Rs the label, lives - the label logo being a photograph of that sign), Stafford North (a more hardcore sister label), Eu4ea (for trance releases), Hidden Agenda and One After D. Not bad for a company with a staff team of seven. Intriguingly, bearing in mind the label's early sponsorship of modern techno, the team work in Birmingham's oldest building (a 'haunted Elizabethan house').

● ALBUMS: Various: Retro Techno/Detroit Definitive (Network 1991)★★★. Altern 8: Full On...Mask Hysteria (Network 1992)★★★.

Neu

This pioneering 'prog' group, based in Dusseldorf, Germany, originally comprised Klaus Dinger (guitar, deliguitar, bass, vocals) and Michael Rother (guitar, Japanese banjo, percussion, vocals). Formerly of Kraftwerk, they broke away from this seminal act to form Neu in August 1971. A third ex-member, Eberhard Krahemann, joined them for live appearances. Neu established the duo's compulsive style in which metronomic rhythms and spartan melodies created a hypnotic effect. Respected producer Conny Plank helped to define the group's sound on a release that established Neu as one of Germany's most popular attractions, alongside Can and Amon Duul II. The promise of this impressive debut was undermined by Neu 2, one side of which was devoted to several versions two songs, already issued as a single, played at different speeds. This deflected attention from the remaining selections, which proved as captivating as the previous recording. Neu 75 affirmed their imaginativeness and the duo's work inspired, among others, David Bowie, in particular Station To Station and Low. Both individuals also enjoyed acclaim outside the group; Rother completed several fascinating solo albums, while Dinger formed the innovative La Dusseldorf. Subsequent Neu releases, while worthwhile, lacked the incision of early work.

● ALBUMS: Neu (Brain 1972)★★★★, Neu 2 (Brain 1973)★★, Neu 75 (Brain 1975)★★★, Hallogallo (Brain 1980)★★, Black Forest Gateau (Cherry Red 1982)★★.

Neuro Project

UK born Simon Sprince, Dave Nicoll and Stewart Quinn originally introduced themselves on R&S Records with the sublime techno hit, 'Mama' in the early 90s. Their 90-minute long-playing debut arrived shortly afterwards on 3 Beat Music, but retained the promise of their first release, offering a wide array of styles and structures.

● ALBUMS: The Electric Mothers Of Invention (3 Beat Music 1994)★★★.

Neuropolitique

Detroit-influenced mannah often credited as 'organic techno'. This, the work of Matt Cogger, was first premiered by two limited edition EPs for London label Irdial. By the time a full-length album emerged its creator was still engaged in the ceaseless exporation of percussion patterns, though never to the detriment of a strong tune. His work was thus compared to that of Carl Craig.

● ALBUMS: Menage A Trois (Irdial 1994)★★★, Beyond The Pinch (New Electronica 1997)★★★.

Neurosis

A multi-dimensional aural protest group from Oakland, California, USA, attached to the Alternative Tentacles Records label, Neurosis comprise Steve Von Till (vocals, guitar), Dave Edwardson (guitar, vocals), Jason Roeder (drums), Scott Terry (guitar, vocals) and Simon (keyboards). They began their career as a trio in 1986, before evolving musically and also expanding their personnel. They are highly regarded for their use of video, film and artwork in a live setting, with their performances invoking several mediums to articulate their deeply held suspicions about a modern consumerist society: 'It takes art and images to describe our concept. The words are just one part, it takes pictures and moving pictures and sound to create the whole, basically.' They made their debut in 1992 with Souls At Zero, a typically stark, uncomfortable recording that eschewed melody in favour of musical belligerence. Appropriately, it featured a still from the film The Wicker Man on its cover. As Lime Lizard journalist Nick Terry remarked, 'Nature imagery abounds in both lyrics and music, evoking a pagan fascination with fire, cold, earth, poison, blood and the natural cycle of decay.' Subsequent releases have maintained the band's restless fascination with social ills and sonic experimentalism, though on occasion their radicalism could alienate listeners - the grinding pace of Enemy Of The Sun failing to match the impact of their debut. 1995's Pain Of Mind marked a significant return to form, with the emphasis placed once more on spiritual and pagan themes, a fascination that continued with Through Silver In Blood. Rather than protest at what the band has long judged to be an impending apocalypse, this album struck a detectable note of resignation. The group also formed its own art collective at this time, the Tribes Of Neurot, who among their other activities have released albums of ambient experiments conducted in studio down-time.

● ALBUMS: Souls At Zero (Alternative Tentacles 1992)★★★★, Enemy Of The Sun (Alternative Tentacles 1994)★★, Pain Of Mind (Alternative Tentacles 1995)★★★★, Through Silver In Blood (ICR 1996)★★★.

Nevada Slim

b. Dallas Turner, 27 November 1927, Walla Walla, Washington, USA. Given away by his mother and then by a nurse, who was supposedly looking after him, he was finally adopted by the Turners, who raised him on their ranch in Elko, Nevada. He listened intently to the cowboy singers that he heard on Border Radio, being particularly influenced by Cowboy Slim Rinehart. In the mid-40s, after learning to play guitar, he hoboed to the Border stations, where Rinehart befriended him. They became great friends and it was Turner who put a tombstone on Rinehart's unmarked grave, after he was killed in a car crash in 1948 (Cowboy Slim Rinehart's Folio Of Country Song Hits was published by Dallas Turner in Reno, Nevada in 1983). Turner appeared on various programmes on XERF, XELO and XEG, sometimes singing under his own name but usually under an alias such as Nevada Slim or Yodellin' Slim Dallas. He proved popular with sponsors of the programmes, since he was a most competent 'pitchman' for their products. He also sold his own songbooks by mail order and remained a favourite on Border Radio for around 30 years, at times even being involved with the running of stations. He played few US stations, probably due to differences of opinion over marketing his wares, but in the 60s, he recorded transcription programmes that were broadcast by several important US stations including WWVA Wheeling and WCKY Cincinnati. In the mid-60s, he recorded several albums for Rural Rhythm, which he also sold by mail order. After seven years, he succeeded in curing a drink problem, brought on after his son died in a fire. He related how, lonely and sad in a motel room, he had held a gun to his head and was about to pull the trigger, when he heard a gospel song, 'God Put A Rainbow In The Clouds', playing on his bedside radio. He put down the gun, picked up the Gideon bible on the table and from that day, he found religion. He later became a minister and presented evangelistic programmes, as well as recording a gospel album. He became acknowledged as an noted historian of Western material and Border Radio. He has also sung authentic cowboy material in documentaries and appeared at the annual Elko Cowboy Poetry Gathering, instigated by Waddie Mitchell. A great deal of information about this most interesting and authoritative character may be found in the 1987 book Border Radio by Gene Fowler and Bill Crawford.

● ALBUMS: Songs Of The Wild West Volumes 1,2,3 and 4 (Rural Rhythm 1964)★★★, Nevada Slim Sings A Heart Song (Rural Rhythm 1965)★★★, Reverend Dallas Turner Sings Pentecostal Revival Songs (Rural Rhythm 1967)★★★, Old Time Country Favorites (Rural Rhythm 1968)★★★.

Never Loved Elvis - The Wonder Stuff

The Wonder Stuff played at being pop stars with this record and carried the whole thing off with some panache. Their folkier roots were encapsulated grandly in their bittersweet, and often flourishing, pop. They almost created the perfect single with 'The Size Of A Cow', caught somewhere between 70s trash pop and real grown-up material, while their weightier learnings were not forsaken with the sublime eloquence of '38 Line Poem', or 'Caught In My Shadow'. Elsewhere, 'Welcome To The Cheap Seats' unearthed a wantonly frivolous moment that still somehow worked, much like the Wonder Stuff, at a variety of levels.

● Tracks: Mission Drive; Play; False Start; Welcome To The Cheap Seats; The Size Of A Cow; Sleep Alone; Donation; Inertia; Maybe; Grotesque; Here Comes Everyone; Caught In My Shadow; 38 Line Poem.

● First released 1991

● UK peak chart position: 3

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Never Mind The Bollocks Here's The Sex Pistols - Sex Pistols

In the same way that Sgt Pepper... and Revolver are cast in stone at the top of the pop/rock genre, so this milestone stands above any other punk record of its kind. Seen by some snobs at the time as musical illiterates, the Pistols legend continues as strong as ever. The music was in such stark contrast to what we had previously been enjoying that a backlash was inevitable. This will stay as a classic because it will not date. The power of tracks such as 'Pretty Vacant' or 'No Feelings' is as strong as in 1977. This pivotal record has not mellowed with age, thankfully.

● Tracks: Holidays In The Sun; Bodies; Liar; No Feelings; God Save The Queen; Problems; Seventeen; Anarchy In The UK; Submission; Pretty Vacant; New York; EMI.

● First released 1977

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 106

Nevermind - Nirvana

Historically, America's north-west coast has produced edgy, rebellious music, of which grunge was one manifestation. An offspring of punk, speed metal and the 'slacker' lifestyle, it found an apotheosis in Nirvana, who combined such elements with a faultless grasp of hooklines. On Nevermind, group leader Kurt Cobain unleashed frustrated alienation, his ravaged rasp and bone-crunching guitar soaring through a tight, intensive sound, courtesy of former hardcore producer Butch Vig. Cobain's solipsism proved tragically prophetic and his suicide elevated him to cultural icon status. This should not obscure the singer's empathy for the mechanics of classic rock, reworked and infused with new life on this emphatic statement.

● Tracks: Smells Like Teen Spirit; In Bloom; Come As You Are; Breed; Lithium; Polly; Territorial Pissings; Drain You; Lounge Act; Stay Away; On A Plain; Something In The Way; Endless Nameless.

● First released 1991

● UK peak chart position: 33

● USA peak chart position: 1

Neville Brothers

The Nevilles represented the essence of 40 years of New Orleans music distilled within one family unit. The Nevilles comprised Art (b. Arthur Lanon Neville, 17 December 1937, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA; keyboards, vocals), Charles (b. 28 December 1938, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA; saxophone, flute), Aaron (b. 24 January 1941, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA; vocals, keyboards) and Cyril (b. 10 January 1948, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA; vocals). Each member was also a capable percussionist. They have, individually and collectively, been making an impression on R&B, rock 'n' roll, soul, funk and jazz since the early 50s. Art was the leader of the Hawkettes, whose 1954 Chess Records hit 'Mardi Gras Mambo' has become a New Orleans standard, reissued every year at Mardi Gras time. From 1957 he released solo singles on Specialty Records, and in the early 60s, both he and Aaron worked (separately) for the legendary producer Allen Toussaint. Aaron had emerged from vocal group the Avalons, and although he had a minor R&B hit in 1960 with Toussaint's 'Over You', it was not until 1967 that he achieved fame with the soul ballad 'Tell It Like It Is', a million-seller that reached number 2 in the charts. Charles Neville, meanwhile, had been working - on the road and back home as part of the Dew Drop Inn's house band - with many legendary names: B.B. King, Bobby Bland and Ray Charles, among them. In 1968 Art formed the Meters, one of the Crescent City's most innovative and respected outfits. Featuring Leo Nocentelli (guitar), George Porter (bass), Joseph Modeliste (drums) and, later, Cyril Neville (percussion), they were New Orleans' answer to Booker T. And The MGs, and besides their own albums, they could be heard on early 70s releases by Paul McCartney, Robert Palmer, LaBelle and Dr. John. The Wild Tchoupitoulas was a transitional album, featuring the Meters' rhythm section and all four Neville Brothers; by 1978 they were officially a group. Despite a considerable 'cult' following, particularly among fellow musicians, it took them until 1989 and the release of the Daniel Lanois-produced Yellow Moon, to find a wider audience. A single, 'With God On Our Side', was extracted and became a minor hit; Aaron, duetting with Linda Ronstadt, achieved his greatest chart success since 'Tell It Like It Is', when 'Don't Know Much' reached US and UK number 2 and won them the first of two Grammy awards. In 1990, as a band, they released Brother's Keeper and appeared on the soundtrack of the film Bird On A Wire. Family Groove was a more pedestrian offering, but was followed by a compelling live set that played to the group's strengths. Mitakuye Oyasin Oyasin was a new studio album that featured Aaron's strong cover of Bill Withers' 'Ain't No Sunshine'.

● ALBUMS: as the Wild Tchoupitoulas The Wild Tchoupitoulas (Antilles 1976)★★★, The Neville Brothers (Capitol 1978)★★★, Fiyo On The Bayou (A&M 1981)★★★★, Neville-ization (Black Top 1984)★★★★, Live At Tipitina's (Spindletop 1985)★★★, Neville-ization II (1987)★★★, Uptown (EMI America 1987)★★, Live At Tipitina's Volume 2 (Demon 1988)★★★, Yellow Moon (A&M 1989)★★★★, Brother's Keeper (A&M 1990)★★★★, Family Groove (A&M 1992)★★★, Live On Planet Earth (A&M 1994)★★★, Mitakuye Oyasin Oyasin/All My Relations (A&M 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Treacherous: A History Of The Neville Brothers 1955-1985 (Rhino 1987)★★★★, Legacy: A History Of The Nevilles (Charly 1990)★★★★, Treacherous Too! (Rhino 1991)★★★, With God On Our Side 2-CD set (A&M 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Tell It Like It Is (BMG Video 1990).

Neville, Aaron

b. 24 January 1941, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. Neville began performing in the Hawkettes, a group that also featured his brother Art. Aaron was signed to Minit Records as a solo artist, but despite a minor hit with 'Over You' (1960), he remained largely unknown until the release of 'Tell It Like It Is' (1966). This simple, haunting ballad showcased the singer's delicate delivery while the song's slogan-like title echoed the sentiments of the rising Black Power movement. Sadly, the single's outlet, Par-Lo, went bankrupt, and despite subsequent strong releases, Neville was unable to repeat its commercial success. In 1978, following the break-up of the Meters, Aaron joined Art, Cyril and Charles in the Neville Family Band, later renamed the Neville Brothers. He continued a parallel solo career and in 1989 enjoyed an international hit with 'Don't Know Much', a duet with Linda Ronstadt. Warm Your Heart was a strong collection, but subsequent albums have failed to do justice to Neville's astonishing voice.

● ALBUMS: Tell It Like It Is (Par-Lo 1967)★★, Orchid In The Storm mini-album (Demon 1986)★★★, Warm Your Heart (A&M 1991)★★★, The Grand Tour (A&M 1993)★★, Soulful Christmas (A&M 1993)★★, The Tattooed Heart (A&M 1995)★★, ... To Make Me Who I Am (A&M 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Like It 'Tis (Minit 1967)★★, Humdinger (Stateside 1986)★★, Make Me Strong (Charly 1986)★★★, Show Me The Way (Charly 1989)★★★, Greatest Hits (Curb 1990)★★★, My Greatest Gift a collection of late 60s/early 70s recordings (Rounder 1990)★★★.

Neville, Art

b. Arthur Lanon Neville, 17 December 1937, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. Neville first attracted attention as a member of the Hawkettes, a Crescent City act that achieved notable local success in 1954 with 'Mardi Gras Mambo'. Although ostensibly a keyboard player - he appeared as session pianist on Jerry Byrne's 'Lights Out' - Neville also undertook a singing career and, having signed with the renowned Specialty Records, enjoyed a regional hit with his debut single, 'Cha Dooky-Doo'. This progress was interrupted by a spell in the US armed forces, but upon being discharged, he completed a series of low-key singles for the Minit/Instant label. Neville later achieved considerable acclaim as a member of the Meters, which in turn evolved into the equally compulsive Neville Brothers, where Art was joined by siblings Cyril, Charles and Aaron Neville.

● COMPILATIONS: Mardi Gras Rock 'N' Roll (Ace 1986)★★★, Rock 'N' Roll Hootenanny (Charly 1988)★★★.

Neville, Ivan

b. New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. The son of singer Aaron Neville, Ivan made his debut in 1988 with If My Ancestors Could See Me Now, recorded with Fabulous Thunderbirds and Billy Joel producer Danny Kortchmar and featuring Jeff Porcaro on drums. Despite garnering a strong critical reaction as a contemporaneous R&B/soul album, Neville left Polydor Records shortly after its release, citing managerial changes at the label as the reason for the debut's lack of commercial success. Certainly, it contained two high-quality singles in 'Falling Out Of Love' (a duet with Bonnie Raitt) and 'Not Just Another Girl'. Afterwards, Neville concentrated on touring and recording with the Neville Brothers, also working with Rufus (Chaka Khan), the Rolling Stones (singing backing vocals on Voodoo Lounge) and with Keith Richards' Expensive Winos group. His second album, Thanks, followed in 1995 for the independent Iguana Records (who also licensed his debut for reissue). It featured 'After All This Time', a duet with father Aaron.

● ALBUMS: If My Ancestors Could See Me Now (Polydor 1988)★★★, Thanks (Iguana 1995)★★★.

Nevins, Jason

A top New York producer/remixer of the 90s, whose first involvement with music was at his college radio station at Arizona State University, where his sets were primarily composed of techno. He went on to release product as Plastick Project, Crazee Tunes, the Experience and Jason Nevins Movement. 'The Viper Rooms', licensed to Loaded Records, a UK record label in Brighton, Sussex, England, was typical of his output, being completely unabashed in its use of samples. He has since recorded with Nervous, Logic, Strictly Rhythm and Tribal. He has also remixed Ann Consuelo for Champion, and signed to MCA as Analogue. His 1998 remix of Run DMC's 'It's Like That' provided the rap trio with an unexpected international hit.

New Adventures In Hi-Fi - R.E.M.

The deeper you dig in a goldmine, the better the quality of the gold. This is R.E.M.'s secret gem, an album of rich songs that has been overlooked by the record-buying public at large. Low-key production, gentle themes and Michael Stipe's crystal-clear vocals grace great compositions such as 'E-Bow The Letter', 'Electrolite', 'So Fast, So Numb' and the simple but glorious 'Be Mine'. Like so much of the band's work, there was virtually nothing to fault, even if, equally, there was nothing that was truly innovative. The latter, irrelevant concern has arguably prejudiced critics against this album, which it is hoped will gain credibility as its true greatness is discovered.

- Tracks: How The West Was Won And Where It Got Us; The Wake-Up Bomb; New Test Leper; Undertow; E-Bow The Letter; Leave; Departure; Bittersweet Me; Be Mine; Binky The Doormat; Zither; So Fast, So Numb; Low Desert; Electrolite.
- First released 1996
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 2

New Birth Brass Band

A New Orleans, Louisiana, USA-based sextet, the New Birth Brass Band have done much to revive the city's marching brass band jazz tradition. Led by trumpeter and lead vocalist James Andrews, the group does not, however, intend simply to imitate that tradition. 'The old cats used to play a lot of sacred dirges and church hymns and traditional standards, and we just got a new spin with our new music and a new beat,' Andrews told Billboard magazine at the time of the release of their debut album. The rest of the group is comprised of Derrick Shezbie (trumpet), Kerwin James (tuba), Kerry Hunter (snare drum), Cayetano Hingle (bass drums) and Reginald Steward (trombone). It is Andrews' trumpet-playing which has been the main focus of attention in jazz circles - leading to him being saddled with a 'Satchmo of the Ghetto' nom de plume. By the time he assembled the New Birth Brass Band, Andrews was already a veteran of groups such as the Danny Barker Band, the Junior Olympia Brass Band, the All Star Brass Band, and the Treme Brass Band. It was for the latter that he composed 'Gimme My Money Back', already considered a Mardi Gras classic. Andrews has also toured alongside artists including Michelle Shocked, Wynton Marsalis, Quincy Jones and Dizzy Gillespie. Traditional material on D-Boy, the group's 1997 debut, included the marching standards 'Whoopin' Blues', 'Jesus On The Main Line' and 'Li'l Liza Jane', alongside Andrews originals such as the title track.

- ALBUMS: D-Boy (NYNO 1997)★★★.

New Bomb Turks

A loud but melodious US alternative rock band, New Bomb Turks' manifesto was to rid their genre of its more dour concerns, re-establishing the sheer adrenaline rush and hedonism of the music. They met while studying at Ohio State University, where each of them - Eric Davidson (vocals), Jim Weber (guitar), Matt Reber (bass) and Bill Brandt (drums) - read English. They first worked together as disc jockeys on campus radio station WSOR, gradually pulling together as a band and making their debut through a series of limited-issue 7-inch singles. It was with their debut album, however, that their arrival was recognized, with Maximum Rock 'n' Roll magazine calling it the 'album of the year, maybe of the last five years'. In its wake, New Bomb Turks sagged under the expectations of such hysterical praise, taking their time before preparing a follow-up set, then blasting through the recording sessions to produce Information Highway Revisited in just sixty hours. It was a recording that retained their spontaneity and established them as qualitative peers of Green Day and the Offspring, even if its sales profile was dwarfed by the success of those bands. Pissing Out The Poison reminded fans of their early days, being a double album comprising singles for labels including Sympathy For The Record Industry, eMpTy, Get Hip, Demo Derby, Bag Of Hammers and Damaged Goods, plus cover versions of material by the New York Dolls and Hawkwind. Subsequent albums, Scared Straight and At Rope's End, revealed the band to be back to their devastatingly noisy best.

- ALBUMS: !!Destroy-Oh-Boy!! (Crypt 1992)★★★, Information Highway Revisited (Crypt 1994)★★★, Scared Straight (Epitaph 1996)★★★★, At Rope's End (Epitaph 1998)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Pissing Out The Poison (Crypt 1995)★★★.

New Boots And Panties!! - Ian Dury And The Blockheads

Ian Dury's one great album, so good that it overtakes major stars and million-selling supergroups. Dury portrayed the Essex man before Essex man was conceived, and brilliantly satirized it in 'Billericay Dickie' and 'Clevor Trever'. It is hard to imagine Dury the romantic, but there is a romantic in 'Wake Up And Make Love To Me' and 'I'm Partial To Your Abracadabra'; there is also sadness and regret in the beautiful 'My Old Man'. He should be remembered for his dynamite band the Blockheads and this necessary album - not his gold radio station albatross 'Hit Me With Your Rhythm Stick'.

- Tracks: Sweet Gene Vincent; Wake Up And Make Love To Me; I'm Partial To Your Abracadabra; My Old Man; Billericay Dickie; Clevor Trever; If I Was With A Woman; Plaistow Patricia; Blockheads; Blackmail Man.
- First released 1977
- UK peak chart position: 5
- USA peak chart position: 168

New Celeste

This lively folk rock outfit from Scotland was formed by Iain Fergus, who originally wanted the group to be a 'Caledonian big band'. They have worked extensively on the continent, and employed some significant Scots musicians, including future members of Hue And Cry and Runrig. The highly regarded On The Line, contained a good deal of Fergus's witty material, and a batch of atmospheric electric folk numbers. During the 80s New Celeste only worked occasionally, but, by 1990, Fergus had completely reorganized the personnel for The Celtic Connection, a collection of old and new songs. The band also made a highly impressive appearance at the Cambridge Festival in 1991. It's A New Day featured Fergus, Steve Reid and Rod Dorothy.

- ALBUMS: High Sands And The Liquid Lake (1978)★★, On The Line (1979)★★★★, Live (1980)★★, The Celtic Connection (1990)★★★, It's A New Day (Iona 1996)★★★.

New Christy Minstrels

Randy Sparks (b. 29 July 1933, Leavenworth, Kansas, USA), formed this commercialized folk group in 1961. Determined to create a unit that was 'a compromise between the Norman Luboff Choir and the Kingston Trio', he added a popular Oregon quartet, the Fairmount Singers, to his own Randy Sparks Three. A third unit, the Inn Group, which featured Jerry Yester, was absorbed into the line-up, while other Los Angeles-based performers embellished these core acts. Fourteen singers made up the original New Christy Minstrels but although the ensemble was viewed as supplementary to the participants' other careers, interest in the group's debut Presenting The New Christy Minstrels, led to it becoming a full-time venture. Most of these early recruits, including the entire Inn Group, abandoned Sparks' creation at this point, creating the need for further, wholescale changes. New recruits, including Barry McGuire, Barry Kane and Larry Ramos, joined the Minstrels whose next release, In Person, documented a successful appearance at the famed Troubador club. The following year (1963) the group secured its first hit single with 'Green Green' which established the ensemble as a leading popular attraction. The group, however, remained volatile as members continued to come and go. Gene Clark disbanded his Kansas-based trio, the Surf Riders, in order to join the Minstrels, but left after a matter of months, frustrated at the rather conservative material the ensemble recorded. He later formed the Byrds with (Jim) Roger McGuinn and David Crosby. Randy Sparks ended his relationship with the Minstrels in the summer of 1964. Maligned for creating their MOR image, his departure did not result in the more daring direction several members wished to pursue. McGuire, who was increasingly unhappy with such material as 'Three Wheels On My Wagon' and 'Chim Chim Cheree', left the group after seeing several British groups perform during the Minstrels European tour that year. His gravelly rasp was soon heard on his solo international protest hit, 'Eve Of Destruction'. In 1966 Larry Ramos accepted an invitation to join the Association and although several excellent new vocalists, including Kim Carnes and Kenny Rogers, had been absorbed into the Minstrels, their influential days were over. Longstanding members Mike Settle and Terry Williams left when their new ideas were constantly rejected. They formed the First Edition with the equally ambitious Rodgers, and subsequently enjoyed the kind of success the parent group previously experienced. Although the New Christy Minstrels continued to exist in some form into the 80s, singing early hits, show tunes and standards, their halcyon days ended during the mid-60s.

- ALBUMS: Presenting The New Christy Minstrels (1962)★★, The New Christy Minstrels In Person (Columbia 1962)★★★, The New Christy Minstrels Tell Tall Tales, Legends And Nonsense (Columbia 1963)★★★, Ramblin' (Featuring Green, Green) (Columbia 1963)★★★★, Merry Christmas! (1963)★★★, Today (1964)★★★, Land Of Giants (1964)★★★, The Quiet Side Of The New Christy Minstrels (1964)★★★, The New Christy Minstrels Sing And Play Cowboys And Indians (Columbia 1965)★★★, The Academy Award Winner - Chim Chim Cheree (1965)★★, The Wandering Minstrels (1965)★★, In Italy...In Italian (1966)★★, New Kick! (1966)★★, Christmas With The Christies (1966)★★, On Tour Through Motortown (Columbia 1968)★★, Big Hits From Chitty Chitty Bang Bang (1968)★★, You Need Someone To Love (1970)★★, The Great Soap Opera Themes (1976)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Columbia 1966)★★★.

New Colony Six

Formed in Chicago, Illinois, USA, the New Colony Six were one of the first of the city's teenage groups to secure a national hit when 'I Confess' reached the US Hot 100 in February 1966. The sextet then moved to Los Angeles where they shared a house with Paul Revere And The Raiders, adopting the same 'Revolutionary War'-styled garb favoured by the latter act. The New Colony Six - Patrick McBride (vocals, harmonica), Ray Graffia (tambourine, vocals), Jerry Kollenburgh (lead guitar), Carug Kemp (organ), Wally Kemp (bass) and Chic James (drums) - initially pursued a hard, British-influenced sound, but a subsequent switch to a soft-rock style was rewarded in 1968 with two US Top 30 entries, 'I Will Always Think About You' and 'Things I'd Like To Say'. Newcomer Ronnie Rice was largely responsible for this particular direction, writing the bulk of the group's material and taking lead vocals, but although the unit continued to enjoy minor hits into the 70s, it was unable to rekindle the urgency of early recordings.

- ALBUMS: Breakthrough (Sentar 1966)★★★, Colonization (Mercury 1967)★★★★, Revelations (Mercury 1968)★★★, Attacking A Straw Man (Mercury 1969)★★.

New Concepts Of Artistry In Rhythm - Stan Kenton

When west coast big band leader Stan Kenton recorded this 1952 masterpiece, his powerful and versatile 21-piece featured bebop trumpet virtuoso and high note specialist Maynard Ferguson, trombonists Frank Rosolino and Bill Russo, the brilliant and advanced alto saxophonist Lee Konitz, Sal Salvador on guitar and the subtle swing of drummer Stan Levey. It is a typically dramatic production – dissonant and experimental, and thunderous in a similar way to the Hollywood film music of the time. Highlights include a fascinating introduction ('This Is An Orchestra') featuring Kenton as narrator and, among the CD's extra tracks, a brilliantly 'out' rearrangement of 'You Go To My Head'.

- Tracks: Prologue (This Is An Orchestra!); Portrait Of A Count; Young Blood; Frank Seaking; 23 Degrees North - 82 Degrees West; Taboo; Lonesome Train; Invention For Guitar And Trumpet; My Lady; Swing House; Improvisation; You Go To My Head.
- First released 1952
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

New Cranes

Formed in Derby, Derbyshire, England, and frequently compared to the Levellers, this band were never especially fond of their press tag of 'crusty rock'. Although relying on the half-acoustic, half-electric songwriting pioneered by the Levellers and other contemporary folk-rock groups such as Men They Couldn't Hang, the music of the New Cranes was additionally flavoured by a strong Slavic influence. This was informed principally by Wally (vocals), who has a Ukrainian background and had previously worked as a performing Cossack dancer. He had released his own, self-financed debut collection, The Wally Album, in 1989. In the early 90s he recruited fellow Derby residents Mark (guitar), Bobby (bass), Mickey (accordion) and Chris (drums) to form the New Cranes. They signed with French label Musidisc Records and subsequently supported Stiff Little Fingers on their UK tour of 1993. Their 'Don't Drag My Body Down' single was released on Vinyl Urinal Records in the same year after leaving Musidisc, and was followed by an album that attracted only minimal interest.

- ALBUMS: The New Cranes (Vinyl Urinal 1993)★★.

New Edition

Upbeat US teenage pop stars New Edition were formed by Maurice Starr, who modelled them on the Jackson 5. He recruited five handsome young men, Bobby Brown (b. 5 February 1969, Roxbury, Massachusetts, USA), Ralph Tresvant (b. 16 May 1968, Boston, Massachusetts, USA), Michael Bivins (b. 10 August 1968, Boston, Massachusetts, USA), Ricky Bell (b. 18 September 1967, Boston, Massachusetts, USA), and Ronnie DeVoe (b. 17 November 1967, Boston, Massachusetts, USA), who originally performed high-quality mainstream pop with soul overtones. As their careers progressed, however, they began to incorporate the sound and style of hip-hop, inadvertently becoming forerunners for the New Jack Swing (aka swingbeat) hybrid that Teddy Riley then developed. Following the success of Candy Girl, New Edition fired Starr, who then repeated the trick and earned a good deal of money by masterminding the career of New Kids On The Block. The first rap exchanges occurred on New Edition, their MCA Records debut, where the quintet proved particularly effective on tracks such as 'School'. Shortly afterwards, Brown left for a hugely successful solo career that still embraced hip-hop as well as harmonic soul ballads. New Edition continued with an idiosyncratic album of doo-wop cover versions, before the arrival of Johnny Gill for Heart Break, which was produced by Jimmy Jam And Terry Lewis. With sales and interest slumping, the remaining members set out on more successful solo projects. Bell Biv DeVoe comprised the adventures of the three named founder-members, while both Gill and Tresvant followed the solo trail. A total reverse in their fortunes occurred in 1996, when their first album in many years entered the Billboard album chart at number 1, a remarkable comeback.

- ALBUMS: Candy Girl (Streetwise 1983)★★, New Edition (MCA 1984)★★★, All For Love (MCA 1985)★★★, Christmas All Over The World (MCA 1985)★★, Under The Blue Moon (MCA 1986)★★, Heart Break (MCA 1988)★★★, Home Again (MCA 1996)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: New Edition's Greatest Hits (MCA 1991)★★★★.

New England (UK)

This British hard rock quartet was formed in Deptford, London, in 1990 by original Atom Seed member Chris Huxter (bass). Enlisting the services of Paul McKenna (lead vocals), Dave Cook and Ian Winters (drums), they secured a contract with the independent Street Link label. You Can't Keep Living This Way emerged in 1991 and confused the critics; the music was awkward to tie down and not easily pigeonholed, fusing influences as diverse as Led Zeppelin, Faith No More, the Doors and Van Halen, with the attitude of punk not lagging far behind. However, this was not enough to gain them a place in metal's first division, and they collapsed soon afterwards.

- ALBUMS: You Can't Keep Living This Way (Street Link 1991)★★★.

New England (USA)

This American quartet comprised John Fannon (guitar, vocals), Jimmy Waldo (keyboards), Gary Shea (bass) and Hirsh Gardener (drums). Taken under the wing of Kiss's manager, Bill Aucoin, they purveyed sophisticated, melodic rock in a vein similar to Styx and Journey. In 1979 they were given the chance to impress on a major stage, landing the support slot on the American leg of the Kiss tour. Although competent, their music lacked individuality and the band themselves had a nondescript image. After a third album, produced by Todd Rundgren, the band disintegrated in 1981, with Waldo and Shea eventually going on to join Alcatrazz.

- ALBUMS: New England (Infinity 1979)★★★, Explorer Suite (Elektra 1980)★★, Walking Wild (Elektra 1981)★★.

New Fast Automatic Daffodils

Manchester, UK-based indie band whose arrival in 1989 coincided with their city's descent into 'rave' culture and an upswing in the fortunes of 'baggy' bands such as the Stone Roses and Happy Mondays. From their debut at the Manchester Polytechnic Poetry Society in 1988, they were described in one quarter as resembling 'a team of sex psychologists at a mass orgy'. The band, Andy Spearpoint (vocals), Justin Crawford (bass), Dolan Hewison (guitar), Perry Saunders (drums) and Icarus Wilson-Wright (percussion) signed to Belgian label Play It Again Sam in 1989. Among their early singles, the caustic but wry 'Music Is Shit' gained most prominence. 'Get Better' was remixed by Joy Division producer Martin Hannett, before a second album, Body Exit Mind, was recorded with Craig Leon (Blondie, Ramones, Fall) at the helm. Their literate exposition of post-punk pop won them many friends in the media, though record sales failed to translate into chart placings outside the 'independent' sector. By the time of 1995's Love It All they had begun to lose this critical support, but by all accounts the band remained unperturbed by this fickleness.

- ALBUMS: Pigeon Hole (Play It Again Sam 1990)★★★, The Peel Sessions (Strange Fruit/Dutch East India Trading 1991)★★, Body Exit Mind (Play It Again Sam 1992)★★★, Love It All (Play It Again Sam 1995)★★★.
- VIDEOS: Wake Up And Make Love Before 8:30 In The Morning (1993).

New Frontier

This melodic US pop-rock group was formed in 1988 by ex-Billy Satellite vocalist Monty Byron and ex-Gamma bassist Glen Letsch. Adding David Neuhauser (keyboards) and Marc Nelson (drums), they successfully negotiated a contract with the newly formed Mika label. Their debut album was produced by Ritchie Zito (of Heart and Cheap Trick fame) and featured a collection of high-tech AOR numbers that were targeted at the Billboard charts. Failing to generate media interest, the band disintegrated shortly after the album's release. Letsch went on to play with Robin Trower.

- ALBUMS: New Frontier (Mika 1988)★★★.

New Girl In Town

Bob Merrill, previously known for writing novelty songs such as 'Sparrow In The Treetop', 'Feet Up (Pat Him On the Po-Po)', 'If I Knew You Were Comin' I'd've Baked A Cake' and '(How Much Is That) Doggie In The Window?', some of which became hits for Guy Mitchell, made his Broadway debut with this show, which opened at the 46th Street Theatre in New York on 14 May 1957. George Abbott's book, which was based on Eugene O'Neill's 1921 play, Anna Christie, was set in New York at the turn of the century and told of a prostitute, Anna (Gwen Verdon), who returns to live with her bargee father (Chris Christopherson). He is unaware of her occupation, but is soon informed by his unsavoury ladyfriend, Marthy (Thelma Ritter). Matt Burke (George Wallace), a sailor with whom Anna falls in love, leaves her when he, too, discovers the truth about her lifestyle, but he eventually returns in the hope that they can enjoy a more conventional life together. The lively score included 'It's Good To Be Alive', 'Sunshine Girl', 'Did You Close Your Eyes?', 'If That Was Love', 'You're My Friend Ain'tcha?', 'Look At 'Er', 'At the Check Apron Ball', 'Roll Yer Socks Up' and 'There Ain't No Flies On Me'. The engaging and reflective 'Flings' ('Are meant to be flung' . . . 'As a girl, you start seethin'/Over guys just finished teethin'/Now if they're alive and breathin'/That's enough!') was given an amusing treatment on record from Carol Burnett and Martha Raye. When she starred in this piece, Gwen Verdon, one of the American musical theatre's favourite gypsies (dancers), was in the middle of a purple patch with shows such as Can-Can, Damn Yankees and Redhead - with Sweet Charity and Chicago in the future. She shared the 1958 Tony Award for best actress with Thelma Ritter. New Girl In Town ran for 431 performances - an encouraging start for Merrill, who followed it in 1959 with Take Me Along, another adaptation of an O'Neill play, Ah, Wilderness.

New Gold Dream (81, 82, 83, 84) - Simple Minds

Simple Minds began their career indebted to Roxy Music, David Bowie and Magazine, but over successive releases emerged as a distinctive act. On New Gold Dream the group's ambitions came to full fruition, the awkward dissonance of early recordings replaced by a warm, textured sound. The content ranged from brash stadium rock to melodic ballad, but a singleness of purpose ensured such contrasts enhanced the set's overall cohesion. The quintet had never sounded so confident or assured and the resultant lush textures launched them into the international arena, fulfilling their undoubted promise. 'On Promised You A Miracle' did Kerr really sing 'guinea pigs are guinea pigs'?

- Tracks: Someone, Somewhere In Summertime; Colours Fly And Catherine Wheel; Promised You A Miracle; Big Sleep; Somebody Up There Likes You; New Gold Dream; Glittering Prize; Hunter And The Hunted; King Is White And In The Crowd.
- First released 1982
- UK peak chart position: 3
- USA peak chart position: 69

New Grass Revival

The New Grass Revival evolved around the fiddle talents of Sam Bush, who also plays guitar, mandolin and sings. Another long-standing member is bass player John Cowan, who, somewhat surprisingly, contributed soaring R&B-styled vocals to an acoustic band. The other founding members were Courtney Johnson (b. 20 December 1939, d. 7 June 1996) and Ebo Walker. The four-piece band had some success with the Leon Russell song 'Prince Of Peace'. They toured with Russell and cut a live album and video together at Perkins' Palace in Pasadena. In 1984 the band moved to Sugar Hill Records and their albums, while essentially bluegrass, also feature elements of jazz, reggae and soul. Amongst the later members of the Revival is the highly respected banjo player Bela Fleck. In 1991 Emmylou Harris formed an acoustic band, the Nash Ramblers, to accompany her, the leader of the group being Sam Bush. Bush's involvement with Harris seems to have curtailed any future activities, but the New Grass Revival's legacy is as the most significant acoustic country band in the USA.

- ALBUMS: Arrival Of The New Grass Revival (Starday 1972)★★★, Fly Through The Country (Flying Fish 1975)★★★★, Commonwealth (Flying Fish 1976)★★★, When The Storm Is Over (Flying Fish 1977)★★★, Too Late To Turn Back Now (Flying Fish 1978)★★★, Barren Country (Flying Fish 1979)★★★, Leon Russell And The New Grass Revival (1981)★★★, Live (Sugar Hill 1984)★★★, On The Boulevard (Sugar Hill 1984)★★★, New Grass Revival (EMI 1986)★★★, Hold On To A Dream (Capitol 1987)★★★, Friday Night In America (Capitol 1989)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: New Grass Anthology (Capitol 1990)★★★, Best Of New Grass Revival (Liberty 1994)★★★★.

New Idol Son

Formed in the artistic hothouse of the Bay Area of San Francisco during 1991, New Idol Son immediately saw the press compare them to a '90s rebirth of MC5 meets Black Sabbath'. Vocalist/guitarist Matt Hizendragzer first met drummer Brent Hagin at a Mookie Blaylock (who later transmuted into Pearl Jam) show. Eventually, Rich Carr (bass) and Mike Davis (guitar) were recruited via adverts in BAM magazine, with the band titled Difference Engine. Playing shows along the west coast as support to Downset, Fear Factory and others, they built a strong reputation among local press outlets until Pavement Music moved in for their signatures in 1994. However, at this point it was discovered that another band already held the rights to the name Difference Engine, and New Idol Son was born when Hizendragzer saw the legend on the back of a book in a second-hand store. Their debut album, Reach, offered crafted musical composition with emotive lyrics, sometimes imbued with quasi-religious overtones.

- ALBUMS: Reach (Bulletproof 1994)★★★.

New Jazz Orchestra

The New Jazz Orchestra was founded in 1963 by Clive Burrows and resurrected and directed by Neil Ardley between 1964 and 1968. It provided the up-and-coming generation of British jazz musicians with the experience of working with a large jazz orchestra, its personnel including Harry Beckett, Henry Lowther and Ian Carr (trumpets), Paul Rutherford and Mike Gibbs (trombones), Don Rendell, Trevor Watts, Dick Heckstall-Smith and Barbara Thompson (saxophones), Michael Garrick (piano), Jack Bruce (bass) and Jon Hiseman (drums). It is not surprising that with such high-quality musicians The Times critic, Miles Kington, would write that the NJO 'makes most big bands sound like trained elephants with two tricks'. It was not the only purpose of the NJO to provide such invaluable big band experience for these musicians; it also fostered a workshop atmosphere to provide its arrangers with a chance to try out scores. Among those who wrote for the orchestra were Ardley, Alan Cohen, Gibbs, Rutherford, Garrick and Mike Taylor. 'I learnt by my mistakes,' Ardley said later and by the time he had become the leader he was producing major scores like 'Shades Of Blue' from the first album and 'Dejeuner Sur L'Herbe' from the second. All the material in the latter is derived from two/four-bar motifs in the main theme. There are no repeated chord sequences or scales; rather, the piece grows organically in the manner of classical music. This is not merely a third stream piece but an attempt to write jazz in new way. It was the kind of experiment the NJO was formed to encourage and a score Ardley would have been lucky to get performed anywhere else. The NJO gave some concerts in London and at festivals. They also had a fruitful pairing with Colosseum. Despite what a contemporary described as its 'fiercely swinging rhythm, first class solos and brilliant ensemble' it gained no recognition abroad though in time many of its members have become very well known on the continent.

- ALBUMS: Western Reunion (1965)★★★, Le Dejeuner Sur L'Herbe (1969)★★★★.

New Kids On The Block

Formed in 1985, this pop group from Boston, Massachusetts, USA, featured Joe McIntyre (b. 31 December 1972, Needham, Massachusetts, USA), Jordan Knight (b. 15 May 1970, Worcester, Massachusetts, USA), Jonathan Knight (b. 29 November 1968, Worcester, Massachusetts, USA), Daniel Wood (b. 14 May 1969, Boston, Massachusetts, USA) and Donald Wahlberg (b. 17 August 1969, Boston, Massachusetts, USA). They were discovered by producer/writer Maurice Starr, who had previously moulded the career of New Edition. It was Starr who presented his protégés with a rap song titled 'New Kids On The Block' from which they took their name. Their self-titled album, released in 1986, fused rap and pop and brought them popularity among a predominantly white teenage audience. However, it was not until 1988 that they broke through to the US charts with 'Please Don't Go Girl'. In 1989, they became the biggest-selling group in America, enjoying sizeable hits with 'You Got It (The Right Stuff)', 'I'll Be Loving You (Forever)', 'Cover Girl' and 'Didn't I'. A reissue of 'You Got It (The Right Stuff)' climbed to number 1 in the UK, thereby establishing the quintet as an act of international teen appeal.

● ALBUMS: New Kids On The Block (Columbia 1986)★★, Hangin' Tough (Columbia 1988)★★, Merry Merry Christmas (Columbia 1989)★, Step By Step (Columbia 1990)★★, No More Games/Remix Album (Columbia 1991)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: H.I.T.S (Columbia 1991)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: New Kids On The Block: The Whole Story By Their Friends, Robin McGibbon. New Kids On The Block, Lynn Goldsmith.

New Kingdom

Hardcore hip-hop duo from Brooklyn, New York, comprising rapper Nosaj (his real name Jason, backwards) and DJ Sebastian. Their debut single was 'Good Times', a rock hip-hop crossover effort on Gee Street Records which used a sample of Joe Walsh (of James Gang)'s guitar playing and looped it. Their major influence is Curtis Mayfield, and their output reflects a good deal of his social vision. 'Good Times', for example, was written about their desire not to lose their appetite for life as they grow older. They take a full band on tour with them and have live skateboarding at their events, much in the mode of hardcore punk bands. There is certainly a 'cartoon' element to the band, their lyrics generally being abstract, non-linear collages. Their beats, however, are more restrained, as pointed out in the self-explanatory lyric: 'Pouring no lies, no suits, no ties, No need to rush, we love to fuck time'. A genuine return to the old school aural values, their debut album was produced by the band in conjunction with Scott Harding of the Lumberjacks.

● ALBUMS: Heavy Load (Gee Street 1993)★★, Paradise Don't Come Cheap (Island 1996)★★★.

New Lost City Ramblers

Mike Seeger (b. 15 August 1933, New York City, New York, USA; brother of folk-singer Pete Seeger), John Cohen (b. 1932, New York, USA) and Tom Paley (b. 19 March 1928, New York, USA) formed this influential old-time string band in 1958. Rather than ape their immediate predecessors who popularized the style, the trio preferred to invoke the music's original proponents, including Gid Tanner And His Skillet Lickers and the Carolina Tar Heels. Seeger undertook numerous field recordings to preserve authenticity and while their adherence to traditional values made commercial acceptance difficult, the group enjoyed the admiration of their peers and was crucial in the development of the urban folk revival.

The original line-up remained together until 1962, when Paley left to resume his teaching career. Replacement Tracy Schwarz (b. 1938, New York, USA) primarily played fiddle, but his arrival coincided with a broadening of the Ramblers' repertoire. They began to incorporate unaccompanied ballads and modern bluegrass music but although the trio remained a popular attraction on the college and coffee-house circuit, they began to drift apart during the latter half of the 60s. Remembrance Of Things To Come included British traditional, riverboat songs and even some early bluegrass. American Moonshine And Prohibition was more lighthearted, but certainly not lightweight in its criticism of the government legislation on prohibition. Cohen initially pursued his interest in photography before producing a series of excellent documentary films. Schwartz and Seeger, meanwhile, performed with different musicians and together formed the short-lived Strange Creek Singers. John Cohen, Mike Seeger and Tracy Schwarz reunited in 1997 for There Ain't No Way Out.

● ALBUMS: New Lost City Ramblers (Folkways 1958)★★★★, New Lost City Ramblers Vol. 2 (Folkways 1959)★★★, Songs From The Depression (Folkways 1959)★★★★, Old Timey Songs For Children (Folkways 1959)★, New Lost City Ramblers Vol. 3 (Folkways 1961)★★★, New Lost City Ramblers Vol. 4 (Folkways 1961)★★, American Moonshine And Prohibition (Folkways 1962)★★★★, New Lost City Ramblers Vol. 5 (Folkways 1963)★★★, Gone To The Country (Folkways 1963)★★★, String Band Instrumentals (Folkways 1964)★★★, Old Timey Music (1964)★★, Rural Delivery No. 1 (Folkways 1965)★★★, Remembrance Of Things To Come (Folkways 1966)★★★★, Modern Times-Rural Songs From An Industrial Society (Folkways 1968)★★★, On The Great Divide (Folkways 1973)★★★, 20 Years-Concert Performances 1958-1977 (Flying Fish 1978)★★, 20th Anniversary Concert, Carnegie Hall (Flying Fish 1978)★★, There Ain't No Way Out (Smithsonian Recordings 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Tom Paley, John Cohen And Mike Seeger Sing Songs Of The New Lost City Ramblers (Folkways 1961)★★★, Twenty Years (1979)★★★, The Early Years 1958-62 (1991)★★★★.

New Miserable Experience - Gin Blossoms

This album stands as a sad memorial to Doug Hopkins' ability to craft winning songs out of the abject misery of his own life. Hopkins had been thrown out of the band he formed before New Miserable Experience was released, and by the time 'Hey Jealousy' and 'Found About You', two of his most engaging and self-deprecatory songs, had broken the band in America, he had taken his own life in a fit of depression. The album is not entirely about Hopkins (Jesse Valenzuela's 'Mrs Rita' and Robin Wilson's 'Allison Road' are also strong contenders), but it is his songs that remain longest in the memory.

- Tracks: Lost Horizons; Hey Jealousy; Mrs Rita; Until I Fall Away; Hold Me Down; Cajun Song; Hands Are Tied; Found About You; Allison Road; 29; Pieces Of The Night; Cheatin'.
- First released 1992
- UK peak chart position: 53
- USA peak chart position: 30

New Model Army

With their roots embedded in the punk era, New Model Army were formed in Bradford, Yorkshire, in 1980, and immediately outlined their manifesto by naming themselves after the Sir Thomas Fairfax/Oliver Cromwell revolutionary army. The group was and is led by Justin 'Slade The Leveller' Sullivan (b. 1956, Buckinghamshire, England; guitar, vocals), a former platform sweeper and Mars bar production-line worker, with the help of Jason 'Moose' Harris (b. 1968; bass, guitar) and Robb Heaton (b. 1962, Cheshire, England; drums, guitar). Their brand of punk folk/rock attracted a loyal cult following, much of which shared the band's grievances towards the Tory government policies of the 80s. This was best executed on their debut album, which combined militant themes such as 'Spirit Of The Falklands' and 'Vengeance' (a vitriolic anthem about getting even with one's trespassers) with the haunting lament for childhood, 'A Liberal Education'. The group's championing of traditional working-class ethics saw an unexpected boost for a dying art and trade - that of the clog. New Model Army made their first public appearance at Scamps Disco in Bradford in October 1980. After releasing singles on Abstract Records, enjoying a number 2 UK independent chart hit with 'The Price' in 1984, they formed an unlikely alliance with the multinational EMI Records, which saw the band acquire a higher profile and a significantly increased recording budget. They eventually broke through to a wider audience with 'No Rest', which peaked at number 28 on the UK singles chart in 1985 - a position they were never to beat in an impressive run of 12 UK chart singles between 1985 and 1991. With often inflammatory lyrics, the band have never compromised their beliefs for commercial gain. They ran into trouble with BBC Television's Top Of The Pops show for donning T-shirts with the (albeit laudable) slogan, 'Only Stupid Bastards Use Heroin'. This attracted some derision from 'anarcho-punk' traditionalists Conflict, who replied with their own motif: 'Only Stupid Bastards Help EMI'. They subsequently continued to release high-quality albums, with considerable crossover potential, always maintaining credibility with their original fanbase. In December 1991 the group left EMI, eventually finding a new home on Epic Records. Their first single for the label revealed few concessions to the mainstream: 'Here Comes The War' featured a picture of a charred body, and a pull-out poster instructing the user in how to prepare a nuclear bomb. In 1994, a dance remix of 'Vengeance' was released as a protest against the Criminal Justice Bill. After a lengthy absence the band reconvened for 1998's Strange Brotherhood.

- ALBUMS: Vengeance (Abstract 1984)★★★, No Rest For The Wicked (EMI 1985)★★★, The Ghost Of Cain (EMI 1986)★★, New Model Army mini-album (EMI 1987)★★, Radio Sessions 83 - 84 (Abstract 1988)★★, Thunder And Consolation (EMI 1989)★★★, Impurity (EMI 1990)★★★, Raw Melody Men (EMI 1990)★★★, The Love Of Hopeless Causes (Epic 1993)★★★, BBC Radio One - Live In Concert (Windsong 1994)★★, Strange Brotherhood (EMI 1998)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Independent Story (Abstract 1987)★★★, History (EMI 1992)★★★, B-Sides & Abandoned Tracks (EMI 1998)★★★.
- VIDEOS: History: The Videos 85-90 (PMI 1993).

New Moon, The

After a poor out-of-town tryout, The New Moon underwent drastic revisions before opening at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 19 September 1928. The story traced the adventures of Robert Mission, a French aristocrat in New Orleans in the late 18th Century. With music by Sigmund Romberg lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II, and a book by Hammerstein, Frank Mandel and Lawrence Schwab, the lavish and spectacular production was a great success and ran for 509 performances. Amongst the songs were 'Lover, Come Back To Me', 'One Kiss', 'Softly, As In A Morning Sunrise', 'Wanting You', 'Love Is Quite A Simple Thing', and 'Stouthearted Men'. The two lovers, Robert and Marianne, were played by Robert Halliday and Evelyn Herbert. The 1929 London production, starring Evelyn Laye and Howett Worster, ran for 148 performances. The New Moon was revived in New York in 1942, 1944 and 1986. A film version, which changed the plot but retained most of the music, was released in 1930 with Grace Moore and Lawrence Tibbett, and the popular singing duo of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy were in the 1940 remake.

New Musical Express

Founded in March 1952 from the danceband newssheet Musical Express, this most influential of UK music papers had an inauspicious start, with sales as low as 20,000 per week. Within months, the paper was bought out by leading agent Maurice Kinn for £1,000 and soon thrived. On 14 November 1952, the paper launched Britain's first singles chart in Britain, an innovation that was soon followed by the famous NME Poll Winners' concert, in which the leading stars of the day would participate. NME found its niche as a youth-orientated organ and by 1962 was boasting sales in excess of 200,000, 'the world's largest circulation of any music paper'. The Merseybeat explosion of the following year boosted sales still further to a record 275,000. Such was the paper's prestige that it was able to stage one of the most remarkable concert line-ups of all time at the Wembley Empire Pool NME Poll Winners concert, on Sunday 11 April 1965. The remarkable cavalcade of stars that year comprised the Beatles, Rolling Stones, Cliff Richard, Shadows, Kinks, Animals, Moody Blues, Searchers, Them, Freddie And The Dreamers, Gerry And The Pacemakers, Rockin' Berries, Bachelors, Cilla Black, Dusty Springfield, Georgie Fame, Twinkle and Sounds Orchestral. An additional selling appeal of the NME during the 60s was its innovative use of a chart points table to document and dramatize the fortunes of the major pop artists of the day. With an authoritative breakdown by Derek Johnson, the tables provided an intriguing insight into chart consistency, while also displaying the remarkable divergence in musical taste throughout this period. The NME brilliantly reflected this most democratic era of pop, interviewing all the major artists of the day from the Beatles and the Rolling Stones to Ken Dodd and Val Doonican. Although this was not the era of the celebrity journalist, the NME had its own major infiltrator into the lives of the stars in Keith Altham, who managed to secure regular and exclusive interviews with such gods as the Stones and Walker Brothers. Significantly, when Altham finally left the paper, he formed his own PR company with a roster that included some of the biggest UK acts of the day. Derek Johnson was also a major figure in NME mythology, best known as their perennial singles reviewer from the early 60s until the end of the decade.

It was only towards the late 60s that the NME began to lose ground on its nearest rivals. The divergence of 'pop' and 'rock', the emergence of an underground culture and the increasing interest in 'progressive' music saw readers moving away to rival titles. The NME incorporated progressive music, but only in that area that had managed to translate into the mainstream. The idea of a non-chart act or cult performer was still anathema, and even album reviews tended to be short and superficial. Nevertheless, as the 60s closed, the NME offered a precarious pot-pourri of pop and rock, still intent on the democratizing process that managed to embrace acts as stylistically diverse as the Lulu and Jethro Tull. What was actually a bold policy failed to work in the marketplace as other papers, most notably the Melody Maker, were effectively abandoning pop in favour of serious reporting on progressive music. By the early 70s, the NME took on its rivals by changing its musical and editorial policy almost overnight. With a format and logo that echoed rivals Melody Maker, the NME 'went heavy' with an abruptness that was vaguely disconcerting. So stringent was its revisionism that some of its finest features were abandoned in the process, most notably the Alley Cat gossip column, the poll concerts, the sense of pop history provided by chart points analysis and the severe loss of Derek Johnson's singles page. Thereafter, no reviewer would ever command such power or maintain such continuity, as the singles page was rotated among the staff.

By 1973 the NME had assimilated several leading writers from the underground press, including Nick Kent and Charles Shaar Murray. Under the talented editorship of Ian Macdonald, this trio was responsible for some of the most analytical writing of the era and NME quickly moved ahead in terms of style and content. Perhaps learning from its past circulation errors, it did not sit on the fence during the musical changes of 1976-77 but plunged headlong into punk, even advertising for 'two young gunslingers' who emerged in the form of iconoclastic writers Tony Parsons and Julie Burchill. Stylistically hip, they nevertheless lacked the musical knowledge or critical clout of Kent and Macdonald and later moved into other lucrative areas of the media. Post-punk NME lived off its tradition as the most stylish and irreverent rock weekly and continued the cult of the personality rock writer, most notably through the quirky prose of Paul Morley and obdurate incoherence of Ian Penman. The upsurge of glossy titles, such as Smash Hits, saw the NME lose much of its influential power during the early 80s and the fostered myth of its independence was placed in a more realistic light by the intervention of owners IPC at various moments of circulation crisis. Still reflecting its time, the NME now partly serves as a training ground for its more established writers, many of whom have moved into the comparative anonymity of the quality popular press. Although there was much talk of the redundancy of the serious music press at the beginning of the 80s, the NME has enjoyed a resurgence of sales, which by the mid-90s stood at a solid 106,000. It remains the biggest-selling rock weekly, although now overtaken by the monthly magazines such as Q and Select. A revamp in 1997 introduced colour and it became more of a large-format magazine than a newspaper.

New Musik

This UK pop group comprised Tony Mansfield (guitar, keyboards, vocals), Tony Hibbert (bass), Phil Towner (drums) and Clive Gates (keyboards). They came to prominence after a minor hit in 1979 with 'Straight Lines', and three pop/synthesizer hits during 1980 on the GTO label, 'Living By Numbers', 'The World Of Water' and 'Sanctuary'. Mansfield regarded their debut From A To B as rudimentary, but the succeeding Anywhere fared less well, despite its evident maturity.

The change in style also took its toll on the band, with the departures of Hibbert and Towner soon after its release. They were replaced by electronic percussionist Cliff Venner for the band's final and rather uninspired Warp. Full of empty electronic dance tracks it was notable for a daring attempt at the Beatles' All You Need Is Love. However, sales were very poor and they soon disbanded. Mansfield went on to produce hits for Captain Sensible, Mari Wilson, Naked Eyes and worked on A-Ha's debut album, Hunting High And Low.

● ALBUMS: From A To B (GTO 1980)★★★, Anywhere (GTO 1981)★★★, Warp (GTO 1982)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Sanctuary (Epic 1981)★★★.

New Order

When Joy Division's Ian Curtis committed suicide in May 1980 the three remaining members, Bernard Sumner (b. Bernard Dicken, 4 January 1956, Salford, Manchester, England; guitar, vocals), Peter Hook (b. 13 February 1956, Manchester, England; bass) and Stephen Morris (b. 28 October 1957, Macclesfield, Cheshire, England; drums) continued under the name New Order. Sumner took over vocal duties and the trio embarked on a low-key tour of the USA, intent on continuing as an entity independent of the massive reputation Joy Division had achieved shortly before their demise. Later that same year they recruited Morris's girlfriend, Gillian Gilbert (b. 27 January 1961, Manchester, England; keyboards, guitar), and wrote and rehearsed their debut, Movement, which was released the following year. Their first single, 'Ceremony', penned by Joy Division, was a UK Top 40 hit in the spring of 1981, and extended the legacy of their previous band. Hook's deep, resonant bass line and Morris's crisp, incessant drumming were both Joy Division trademarks. The vocals, however, were weak, Sumner clearly at this stage feeling uncomfortable as frontman. Much was made, in 1983, of the band 'rising from the ashes' of Joy Division in the music press, when Power, Corruption And Lies was released. Their experimentation with electronic gadgetry was fully realized and the album contained many surprises and memorable songs. The catchy bass riff and quirky lyrics of 'Age Of Consent' made it an instant classic, while the sign-off line on the otherwise elegiac 'Your Silent Face', 'You've caught me at a bad time/So why don't you piss off', showed that Sumner no longer felt under any pressure to match the poetic, introspective lyricism of Ian Curtis. As well as redefining their sound they clearly now relished the role of 'most miserable sods in pop'. 'Blue Monday', released at this time in 12-inch format only, went on to become the biggest-selling 12-inch single of all time in the UK. In 1983 'disco' was a dirty word in the independent fraternity and 'Blue Monday', which combined an infectious dance beat with a calm, aloof vocal, was a brave step into uncharted territory. As well as influencing a legion of UK bands, it would be retrospectively regarded as a crucial link between the disco of the 70s and the dance/house music wave at the end of the 80s. New Order had now clearly established themselves, and throughout the 80s and into the 90s they remained the top independent band in the UK, staying loyal to Manchester's Factory Records. Their subsequent collaboration with 'hot' New York hip-hop producer Arthur Baker spawned the anti-climactic 'Confusion' (1983) and 'Thieves Like Us' (1984). Both singles continued their preference for the 12-inch format, stretching in excess of six minutes, and stressing their lack of concern for the exposure gained by recording with mainstream radio in mind. Low Life appeared in 1985 and is perhaps their most consistently appealing album to date. While the 12-inch version of Low Life's 'Perfect Kiss' was a magnificent single, showing the band at their most inspired and innovative, the collaboration with producer John Robie on the single version of 'Subculture' indicated that their tendency to experiment and 'play around' could also spell disaster. Their next album, 1986's Brotherhood, although containing strong tracks such as 'Bizarre Love Triangle', offered nothing unexpected. It was not until the UK Top 5 single 'True Faith' in 1987, produced and co-written by Stephen Hague hot on the heels of his success with the Pet Shop Boys, and accompanied by an award-winning Phillipe Decouffle video, that New Order found themselves satisfying long-term fans and general public alike. The following year Quincy Jones's remix of 'Blue Monday' provided the group with another Top 5 hit.

If the recycling of old songs and proposed 'personal' projects fuelled rumours of a split then 1989's Technique promptly dispelled them. The album, recorded in Ibiza, contained upbeat bass- and drums-dominated tracks that characterized the best of their early output. Its most striking feature, however, was their flirtation with the popular Balearic style, as in the hit single 'Fine Time', which contained lines such as 'I've met a lot of cool chicks, But I've never met a girl with all her own teeth', delivered in a voice that parodied Barry White's notoriously sexist, gravelly vocals of the 70s. Meanwhile, the band had changed significantly as a live act. Their reputation for inconsistency and apathy, as well as their staunch refusal to play encores, was by now replaced with confident, crowd-pleasing hour-long sets. In the summer of 1990 they reached the UK number 1 position with 'World In Motion', accompanied by the England World Cup Squad, with a song that earned the questionable accolade of best football record of all time, and caused a band member to observe, 'this is probably the last straw for Joy Division fans'. Rather than exploiting their recent successes with endless tours, the group unexpectedly branched out into various spin-off ventures. Hook formed the hard-rocking Revenge, Sumner joined former Smiths guitarist Johnny Marr in Electronic and Morris/Gilbert recorded an album under the self-effacing title the Other Two. The extra-curricular work prompted persistent rumours that New Order had irrevocably split, but no official announcement or press admission was forthcoming. In the summer of 1991 the group announced that they had reconvened for a new album, which was eventually released in 1993. Republic consequently met with mixed reviews reflecting critical confusion about their status and direction. While retaining the mix of rock and dance music successfully honed on Technique, the tone was decidedly more downbeat, even sombre. Sadly, it arrived too late to help the doomed Factory label, and afterwards the band's membership would return to varied solo projects. Hook formed Monaco in 1996.

● ALBUMS: Movement (Factory 1981)★★★, Power, Corruption And Lies (Factory 1983)★★★, Low Life (Factory 1985)★★★★, Brotherhood (Factory 1986)★★★★, Technique (Factory 1989)★★★, Republic (London 1993)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Substance (Factory 1987)★★★★, The Peel Sessions (Strange Fruit 1990)★★★, Live In Concert (Windsong 1992)★★★, (The Best Of) New Order (London 1995)★★★★, (The Rest Of) New Order (London 1995)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Taras Schevenko (Factory 1984), Pumped Full Of Drugs (Ikon Video 1988), Substance 1989 (Virgin Vision 1989), Brixton Academy April 1987 (Palace Video 1989), Neworderstory (1993), The Best Of New Order (1995).

● FURTHER READING: New Order & Joy Division: Pleasures And Wayward Distractions, Brian Edge. New Order & Joy Division: Dreams Never End, Claude Flowers.

New Orleans

Jazz fans watching this US feature film, made in 1947, are torn between embarrassment (at the corny jazz vs. classics storyline) and frustration at the waste of the talent available to the film's makers. Billie Holiday and Louis Armstrong have acting roles (as servants - what else in 1947?) and also perform on screen. Alongside them are musicians such as Barney Bigard, Meade 'Lux' Lewis, Kid Ory, Zutty Singleton, Lucky Thompson and Woody Herman And His Orchestra. Billie Holiday had longed to act in films and when she was cast for this part she expressed her disappointment: 'I fought my whole life to keep from being somebody's damn maid. It was a real drag . . . to end up as a make-believe maid.'

New Orleans Rhythm Kings

After the hugely popular Original Dixieland Jazz Band created a storm of interest in Chicago in the early 20s other musicians decided to try their luck at the new jazz music. Amongst them were Georg Brunis, Jack Pettis, Arnold Loyacano, Louis Black, Elmer Schoebel and Frank Snyder. They formed a band they named the New Orleans Rhythm Kings for an engagement at the Friars Inn. With the ODJB safely on their way to international fame in New York and London, the NORK became Chicago's top jazz band. They recorded in 1922 and looked set to become one of the mainstays of the suddenly vital white jazz scene. With a few personnel changes the band was strengthened, but by 1925 they had folded, leaving behind a handful of records and a lasting impression upon the next generation of musicians who would form the basis of Chicago-style jazz.

● COMPILATIONS: The New Orleans Rhythm Kings 1922-23 (Swaggie 1988)★★★, The New Orleans Rhythm Kings 1923 (Swaggie 1988)★★★, The New Orleans Rhythm Kings Vol 1 (King Jazz 1992)★★★, The New Orleans Rhythm Kings Vol 2 (Village Jazz 1992)★★★.

New Riders Of The Purple Sage

Formed in 1969, the New Riders was initially envisaged as a part-time spin-off from the Grateful Dead. Group members Jerry Garcia (pedal steel guitar), Phil Lesh (bass) and Mickey Hart (drums) joined John Dawson (b. 1945, San Francisco, California, USA; guitar, vocals) and David Nelson (b. San Francisco, California, USA; guitar), mutual associates from San Francisco's once-thriving traditional music circuit. Although early live appearances were viewed as an informal warm-up to the main attraction, the New Riders quickly established an independent identity through the strength of Dawson's original songs. They secured a recording contract in 1971, by which time Dave Torbert had replaced Lesh, and Spencer Dryden (b. 7 April 1938, New York City, New York, USA), formerly of Jefferson Airplane, was installed as the group's permanent drummer. New Riders Of The Purple Sage blended country rock with hippie idealism, yet emerged as a worthy companion to the parent act's lauded American Beauty. Sporting one of the era's finest covers (from the renowned Kelley/Mouse studio), the stand-out track was 'Dirty Business'. This lengthy 'acid country' opus featured some memorable guitar feedback. The final link with the Dead was severed when an over-committed Garcia made way for newcomer Buddy Cage (b. Canada). Powerglide introduced the punchier, more assertive sound the group now pursued, which brought commercial rewards with the highly popular The Adventures Of Panama Red. Torbert left the line-up following Home, Home On The Road and was replaced by Skip Battin (b. Clyde Battin, 2 February 1934, Galipolis, Ohio, USA), formerly of the Byrds. In 1978 Dryden relinquished his drumstool in order to manage the band; while sundry musicians then joined and left, Dawson and Nelson remained at the helm until 1981. The New Riders were dissolved following the disastrous Feelin' Alright, although the latter musician subsequently resurrected the name with Gary Vogenson (guitar) and Rusty Gautier (bass). Nelson, meanwhile, resumed his association with the Dead in the Jerry Garcia Acoustic Band, and supervised several archive New Riders sets for the specialist Relix label.

● ALBUMS: New Riders Of The Purple Sage (Columbia 1971)★★★★, Powerglide (Columbia 1972)★★★, Gypsy Cowboy (Columbia 1972)★★, The Adventures Of Panama Red (Columbia 1973)★★★, Home, Home On The Road (Columbia

1974)★★, Brujo (Columbia 1974)★★, Oh, What A Mighty Time (Columbia 1975)★★, New Riders (MCA 1976)★★, Who Are These Guys (MCA 1977)★★, Marin County Line (MCA 1978)★, Feelin' Alright (A&M 1981)★, Friend Of The Devil (1991)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The New Riders Of The Purple Sage (Columbia 1976)★★★, Before Time Began (Relix 1976)★★, Vintage NRPS (Relix 1988)★★.

New Romanticism

New romanticism emerged in the UK music scene in the early 80s as a direct backlash against the austerity of the punk movement. At various times it became a catch-all term for quite disparate bands working within the pop world, and consequently works better as a description of a specific time rather than sound or style. Where punk railed against life on England's council estates, the new romantics celebrated glamour, ostentatious clothes and hedonism. The coming of age of the video as a promotional tool was important to the development of new romanticism, as were the outlandish haircuts (A Flock Of Seagulls), the frilled shirts (Duran Duran, Spandau Ballet) and the fact that men could be seen wearing mascara (practically everyone involved). Guitars, though present, were subordinate to synthesizers. The movement's early fulcrum was Stevo (Steven Pearse), whose Some Bizzare Album compilation in 1980 introduced such artists as Classix Nouveaux, Blancmange, Depeche Mode and Soft Cell. Centred on London clubs such as Blitz, this new gaggle of groups was at first termed 'futuristic'. The Human League had been active for some time in Sheffield but in a new incarnation perfectly amalgamated simple song ideas with basic keyboard skills to define the essential new romantic blueprint. Adam And The Ants were historically linked with punk, as were, more obliquely, Culture Club, though both found a place on the fringe of the movement as a platform for major chart success. If the most obvious historical ancestor of new romanticism was David Bowie, then Japan were his closest living relatives, aping even his fascination with the Orient. The two biggest stars were undoubtedly Duran Duran and Spandau Ballet. The former wrote classic pop hooks with casual ease for much of the period, though Spandau Ballet were always more visually than aurally appealing, despite the occasional winning single (the melodrama of 'Gold' was resonant enough for PM Dawn to make it rap's first new romantic sample). Of less enduring fame or substance were Classix Nouveaux, Visage and A Flock Of Seagulls, despite the latter breaking through in the American market. Nevertheless, several exceptional singles were left behind that effectively defined the times, and it was to no great surprise that the movement was revisited in 1995 with the development of the 'Romo' scene.

● FURTHER READING: Like Punk Never Happened - Culture Club And The New Pop, Dave Rimmer.

New Seekers

The original New Seekers comprised ex-Nocturnes Eve Graham (b. 19 April 1943, Perth, Scotland; vocals), Sally Graham (vocals), Chris Barrington (bass, vocals), Laurie Heath (guitar, vocals), and Marty Kristian (b. 27 May 1947, Leipzig, Germany - a Latvian who had been raised in Australia; guitar, vocals). This line-up recorded only one album, The New Seekers, before Heath, Barrington and Sally Graham were replaced by Lyn Paul (b. 16 February 1949, Manchester, England; ex-Nocturnes), Peter Doyle (b. 28 July 1949, Melbourne, Australia), and Paul Layton (b. 4 August 1947, Beaconsfield, England). Ex-Seeker Keith Potger was originally a member of the group, but retreated to the less public role of manager. The male contingent played guitars in concert, but the act's main strengths were its interweaving vocal harmonies and a clean, winsome image. Their entertainments also embraced dance and comedy routines. Initially they appealed to US consumers who thrust a cover of Melanie's 'Look What They've Done To My Song, Ma' and 'Beautiful People' - all unsuccessful in Britain - high up the Billboard Hot 100. A UK breakthrough came with 'Never Ending Song Of Love' which reached number 2, and, even better, a re-write of a Coca-Cola commercial, 'I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing', topping foreign charts too, and overtaking the Hillside Singers' original version in the USA. Their Eurovision Song Contest entry, 'Beg Steal Or Borrow' and the title track of 1972's Circles were also hits, but revivals of the Fleetwoods' 'Come Softly To Me' and Eclection's 'Nevertheless' were among 1973 singles whose modest Top 40 placings were hard-won, though the year ended well with another UK number 1 in 'You Won't Find Another Fool Like Me'. By 1974, Doyle had left the group and had been replaced by Peter Oliver (b. 15 January 1952, Southampton, England; guitar, vocals). He appeared on Together and Farewell Album. The next single 'I Get A Little Sentimental Over You' hurtled up the charts in spring 1974, but the five disbanded with a farewell tour of Britain. However, two years later the lure of a CBS contract brought about a re-formation - minus Lyn Paul who had had a minor solo hit in 1975 with 'It Oughta Sell A Million'. Oliver had now been replaced by Danny Finn, but subsequent releases 'It's So Nice (To Have You Home)', 'I Wanna Go Back' and 'Anthem (One Day In Every Week)' failed to re-establish the group as a major chart attraction, and they disbanded once more in 1978. After an initially successful solo career, Lyn Paul endured numerous personal and professional problems, and in 1994 declared herself bankrupt. A year later she was making a comeback, paired in cabaret at London's Café Royal with another former British pop star, Mike Berry. In October 1997, Paul's rehabilitation moved another significant step forward when she took over the leading role of Mrs. Johnstone in the West End production of Willy Russell's long-running musical, Blood Brothers.

- ALBUMS: The New Seekers (Phillips 1969)★★★, Keith Potger & The New Seekers (Phillips 1970)★★, New Colours (Polydor 1971)★★★, Beautiful People (Phillips 1971)★★, We'd Like To Teach The World To Sing (Polydor 1972)★★, Live At The Royal Albert Hall (Polydor 1972)★★, Never Ending Song Of Love (Polydor 1972)★★, Circles (Polydor 1972)★★, Now (Polydor 1973)★★, Pinball Wizards (Polydor 1973)★★, Together (Polydor 1974)★★, Farewell Album (Polydor 1974)★★, Together Again (Columbia 1976)★★.

By Marty Kristian, Paul Layton And Peter Oliver Peter Paul & Marty (1973)★★.

- COMPILATIONS: Look What They've Done To My Song, Ma (Contour 1972)★★, 15 Great Hits (Orbit 1983)★★, The Best Of The New Seekers (Contour 1985)★★★, Greatest Hits (Object 1987)★★, The Very Best Of The New Seekers (Spectrum 1998)★★★.

New Strangers

This folk/blues duo comprised of Danny Kalb (guitar, vocals) and Samuel Charters (guitar, vocals). Both were former members of the True Endeavor Jug Band and Dave Van Ronk's Ragtime Jug Stompers. The New Strangers were active in the folk clubs of the US east coast between 1964 and 1965 drawing inspiration from pre-war musicians Tampa Red and Georgia Tom. Meet The New Strangers, recorded with the aid of session bassist Leonard Gaskin, was released on Prestige/Folklore Records, for which Charters served as a producer. It includes a rendition of the traditional song 'Alberta', a showcase for Kalb's exceptional guitar picking. He later formed the much-respected Blues Project before pursuing a solo career. Charters subsequently moved to California where he produced Country Joe And The Fish and wrote several books on blues music.

- ALBUMS: Meet The New Strangers (Prestige/Folklore 1964)★★★.

New Tijuana Moods - Charles Mingus

The original sessions for this album were held in 1957 and released as Tijuana Moods; the bonus of the CD age gives us additional alternate versions that benefit from digital remastering. It is glorious fare, with Mingus leading strong musicians on his personal favourite recording. Mingus acts like a kindly father allowing his offspring to shine, without taking over or showing off; this alone is a sure sign of his greatness as a musician and band leader.

- Tracks: Dizzy Moods; Ysabel's Table Dance; Tijuana Gift Shop; Los Mariachis; Flamingo; Dizzy Moods; Tijuana Gift Shop; Los Mariachis II; Flamingo.
- First released 1986
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

New Tweedy Brothers

Formed in Portland, Oregon, USA, the New Tweedy Brothers found momentary notoriety in San Francisco, California, USA, during the mid-60s. They were featured on several bills of the nascent ballroom scene, supporting the emergent Grateful Dead and Quicksilver Messenger Service. In 1966 the New Tweedy Brothers completed 'Good Time Car'/'Terms Of, You Love Me' for Dot Records before returning to their home base. A line-up comprising of Fred Lackaff, Dan Lackaff, Steven Eckman and Dave McClure completed The New Tweedy Brothers, issued on the group's own Ridon Records, and housed in an imaginative, but impractical, hexagonal sleeve. Although marred by poor production, the music within was an imaginative blend of folk/rock and acid rock styles. Sadly, limited distribution doomed the set to obscurity and the New Tweedy Brothers split up at the end of the 60s.

- ALBUMS: The New Tweedy Brothers (Ridon 1968)★★.

New Vaudeville Band

This parodic ensemble initially comprised studio musicians gathered to record a Geoff Stephens composition, 'Winchester Cathedral', a tale of lost love in deepest Hampshire, England, sung in the style of a Bertie Wooster character complete with megaphone vocals. Stephens could not sing and therefore his place was taken by songwriter John Carter. Carter and Stephens worked together on numerous catchy pop songs in the 60s, including the magnificent 'My World Fell Down' recorded by Sagittarius. The need for a permanent line-up arose when in 1966 this contagious single became an international success, to the bizarre extent of winning a Grammy for 'Best Rock And Roll Record'. Having failed to tempt the nascent Bonzo Dog Doo-Dah Band into accepting the role, a group was assembled late in 1966 around Alan Klein aka Tristram, Seventh Earl of Cricklewood (b. 29 June 1942; vocals), Henri Harrison (b. 6 June 1943, Watford, Hertfordshire, England; drums), Stan Haywood (b. 23 August 1947, Dagenham, Essex, England; keyboards), Neil Korner (b. 6 August 1942, Ashford, Kent, England; bass), Mick Wilsher (b. 21 December 1945, Sutton, Surrey, England; guitar), Hugh 'Shuggy' Watts (b. 25 July 1941, Watford, Hertfordshire, England; trombone), Chris Eddy (b. 4 March 1942; bass), and the line-up was completed by Bob Kerr (b. 14 February 1943, London, England; trombone, saxophone), a refugee from the aforementioned Bonzos. The septet continued the 20s style of that debut release and had a second UK Top 10 hit with 'Peek-A-Boo' in 1967. That same year, 'Finchley Central' and 'Green Street Green' also charted in the Top 40, but very soon their novelty appeal waned and the group underwent a gradual process of disintegration while playing out their days on the Las Vegas and English cabaret circuit. Kerr pursued the madcap angle with his new unit, Bob Kerr's Whoopee Band.

- ALBUMS: Winchester Cathedral (Fontana 1966)★★★, Finchley Central (Fontana 1967)★★.

New Victory Band

A highly talented group of UK country dance musicians, New Victory Band comprises: Pete (melodeon) and Chris Coe (hammer dulcimer, duet concertina), Roger (tuba, banjo, mouth organ) and Helen Watson (keyboards, whistles), John (trombone, fiddle, melodeon, tenor banjo, snare drum, harmonica) and Suzie Adams (banjo), Ian (percussion) and Linda Wordsworth (tap dance). They are one of those legendary bands that did much to loosen the woolly pully and tweed skirts image of English dance.

● ALBUMS: One More Dance And Then (1978)★★★★.

New Wave

The development of punk in the late 70s brought about a massive cultural change in music, and few bands in the UK were unconscious of the fact. However, the musical limitations it imposed were not for everyone. Hence, a hybrid solution that became known as new wave - a euphemism for more commercially orientated pop music that retained some of punk's trappings, if not the original spirit. The Police were probably its best representatives - seasoned musicians who had not enjoyed significant success in previous incarnations, swept along by the industry's embrace of anything remotely alternative. Elvis Costello offered the most palatable compromise, attacking the very broadcast institutions that latched onto new wave in 'Radio, Radio' and keeping a dignified distance from the mainstream, while appealing to a broader cross-section of record buyers than most punk bands could achieve. In the USA the ground conditions were different. While a group such as the Go-Go's were many Americans' idea of punk, new wave was personified by the comparatively tame pop of the Knack. Others saw the compromise and reacted accordingly. Despite being the supreme pop rock band of their generation, the Undertones found the new wave description an abomination. To mainstream musicians such as Billy Joel, however, new wave and other derivations were 'still rock 'n' roll to me'. To suggest that new wave music was artistically conservative and unappealing is nevertheless nonsense. The Pretenders, Blondie, Ian Dury and Talking Heads, to name but a few of the artists who, willingly or not, flew its banner, made genuinely resonant records that were emblematic of their time and context. None could be labelled punk, yet each offered something unconventional in their approach.

New Wave Of British Heavy Metal

The names speak for themselves - Iron Maiden, Def Leppard, Saxon, Samson, Venom, Diamond Head, Girlschool and Praying Mantis. These represented only a handful of the bands who found success during the period 1979 to 1981. The phrase was first coined by Geoff Barton at Sounds, but much credit is also owing to DJ Neal Kay, whose help in giving bands such as Iron Maiden and Praying Mantis (as well as many others) their first break was crucial. EMI Records were quick off the mark and with Kay's help, they produced the compilation album Metal For Muthas, which put many bands on the road to fame, and others, including Toad The Wet Sprockett, on the road to obscurity. Well over 200 bands emerged during this period and many released records on their own labels - even more never made it past the rehearsal stage, while others remained strictly 'bedroom' bands. This enthusiasm also helped to revitalize older bands and some, including Gillan and Motörhead, became spearheads for the movement. However, by 1981 the corporate machine began to eat up the talent and American influences crept in, destroying the movement's identity. If, as has often been stated, the movement started with Iron Maiden's Soundhouse Tapes EP in 1979, then it would be equally true to suggest that the final nail in its coffin came in September 1981, when Paul Di'Anno left that band. Just like punk in 1977, the ideas and attitude fell victim to clean living and commerciality.

● COMPILATIONS: Metal For Muthas Volume 1 (EMI 1980)★★★, Metal For Muthas Volume 2 Cut Loud (EMI 1980)★★, Brute Force (MCA 1980)★★, New Electric Warriors (Logo 1980)★★★, The NWOBHM '79 Revisited (Vertigo 1990)★★.

New World

US heavy metal band New World were formed in February 1992 by guitarist Mike Polak, who completed the line-up with the addition of seasoned musicians Martin Koprax (vocals), Bernd Fuxa (bass) and Thomas Fend (drums). Polak had been featured on Mike Varney's 'Guitar On The Edge' series and taught at the American Institute Of Music, Europe's biggest rock school, from where Fend was also drawn. An eight-track demo, The World We Created, sold out quickly on the underground rock network, and as a consequence, New World landed a contract with Rock The Nation Records. Their influences, ranging from jazz and classical to more conventional rock sources, saw comparisons to Dream Theater when their debut album was released in 1994.

● ALBUMS: Changing Times (RTN 1994)★★★★.

New York - Lou Reed

In the world of contemporary Rock 'n' Roll, nobody has ever been able to sing about New York the way Reed can. Right from the decadent New York of the 60s with the Velvet Underground, Reed has had his finger on the nipple of what made it tick. He writes about the city as he views it from a dustbin. 'Romeo Had Juliette' has a great line, 'Manhattan's sinking like a rock into the filthy Hudson' and 'Halloween Parade' captures the downside of the glossy procession that takes place in Greenwich Village every year. It is no surprise that this album fared better outside the state of New York.

● Tracks: Romeo Had Juliette; Halloween Parade; Dirty Blvd; Endless Cycle; There Is No Time; Last Great American Whale;

Beginning Of A Great Adventure; Busload Of Faith; Sick Of You; Hold On; Good Evening Mr. Waldheim; Xmas In February; Strawman; Dime Store Mystery.

- First released 1989
- UK peak chart position: 14
- USA peak chart position: 40

New York City

New York City (from the city of the same name) were one of the finest representatives of the renaissance of vocal harmony groups and the explosion of the Philadelphia recording scene during the early 70s. The group members were Tim McQueen, John Brown (earlier a member of the Five Satins), Ed Shell and Claude Johnson. The group first recorded for Buddah as Triboro Exchange, but it was not until their name change in 1972 and their signing to Chelsea Records that the group became successful. Under the aegis of Philadelphia producer/arranger Thom Bell, the group flourished on the charts with such hits as 'I'm Doin' Fine Now' (number 14 R&B, number 17 pop), 'Quick, Fast, In A Hurry' (number 19 R&B, number 79 pop) and 'Happiness Is' (number 20 R&B). Their last chart record was in 1975, a time when stand-up vocal groups were becoming less of a factor in R&B. Their legacy was recalled in 1992 when in the UK the Pasadenas had a number 1 hit with 'I'm Doing Fine Now'.

- ALBUMS: I'm Doing Fine Now (Chelsea 1973)★★★, Soulful Road (Chelsea 1974)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Best Of New York City (Chelsea 1976)★★★, I'm Doing Fine Now (Collectables 1993)★★★.

New York Dolls

One of the most influential rock bands of the last 20 years, the New York Dolls predated the punk and sleaze metal movements that followed and offered a crash course in rebellion with style. Formed in 1972, the line-up stabilized with David Johansen (b. 9 January 1950, Staten Island, New York, USA; vocals), Johnny Thunders (b. John Anthony Genzale Jnr., 15 July 1952, New York City, New York, USA, d. 23 April 1991, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA; guitar), Arthur Harold Kane (bass), Sylvain Sylvain (guitar, piano) and Jerry Nolan (d. 14 January 1992; drums), the last two having replaced Rick Rivets and Billy Murcia (d. 6 November 1972). The band revelled in an outrageous glam-rock image: lipstick, high heels and tacky leather outfits providing their visual currency. Underneath they were a first-rate rock 'n' roll band, dragged up on the music of the Stooges, Rolling Stones and MC5. Their self-titled debut, released in 1973, was a major landmark in rock history, oozing attitude, vitality and controversy from every note. It met with widespread critical acclaim, but this never transferred to commercial success. The follow-up, Too Much Too Soon, was an appropriate title - and indicated that alcohol and drugs were beginning to take their toll. The album remains a charismatic collection of punk/glam-rock anthems, typically delivered with 'wasted' cool. Given a unanimous thumbs-down from the music press, the band began to implode shortly afterwards. Johansen embarked on a solo career and Thunders formed the Heartbreakers. The Dolls continued for a short time before eventually grinding to a halt in 1975, despite the auspices of new manager Malcolm McLaren. The link to the Sex Pistols and the UK punk movement is stronger than that fact alone, with the Dolls remaining a constant reference point for teen rebels the world over. Sadly for the band, their rewards were fleeting. Jerry Nolan died as a result of a stroke on 14 January 1992 while undergoing treatment for pneumonia and meningitis. Thunders had departed from an overdose, in mysterious circumstances, less than a year earlier. Red Patent Leather is a poor-quality and posthumously released live recording from May 1975 - Rock 'N' Roll offers a much more representative collection.

- ALBUMS: New York Dolls (Mercury 1973)★★★★, Too Much Too Soon (Mercury 1974)★★★, Red Patent Leather (New Rose 1984)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Lipstick Killers (ROIR 1981)★★★, Best Of The New York Dolls (Mercury 1985)★★★, Night Of The Living Dolls (Mercury 1986)★★★, Rock 'N' Roll (Mercury 1994)★★★★.
- FURTHER READING: New York Dolls, Steven Morrissey.

New York Dolls - New York Dolls

It's hard in retrospect, with all the alternative rock water that's passed under the bridge, to articulate the impact the New York Dolls' incendiary debut had on its release. The Stooges apart (and they were a different kettle of garage band entirely, in content as much as style), there simply hadn't been anything quite as confrontational, cocky and in-your-face as the New York Dolls before. From the classic Thunders/Johansen opener 'Personality Crisis' onwards, the Dolls revealed themselves as the new rock outsiders. The album's pungent undertones of low-life street hassle and edgy drug deals and sharply observed narcissism set them apart. And every subsequent punk rock icon, from Joey Ramone to Johnny Rotten, took note.

- Tracks: Personality Crisis; Looking For A Kiss; Vietnamese Baby; Lonely Planet Boy; Frankenstein (Orig); Trash; Bad Girl; Subway Train; Pills; Private World; Jet Boy
- First released 1973
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

New York Jazz Repertory Orchestra

(see Hyman, Dick)

New York Skyy

This eight-piece soul/funk band were formed in New York. Known as Skyy in America, they were led by Randy Muller. The other members were Anibal Anthony (guitar), Gerald Le Bon (bass), Tommy McConnel (drums), Larry Greenberg (keyboards), Denise Dunning-Crawford (vocals), Delores Dunning-Milligan (vocals) and Bonnie Dunning (vocals). They gained an underground cult following and reached the lower regions of the UK chart in 1982 with the exuberant 'Let's Celebrate'. Always a favourite on the dance/soul charts, they found crossing over to mainstream singles and albums a hard task and only achieved limited success. Very similar to Earth, Wind And Fire, they were primarily a visual act, who released a number of albums containing some rather mediocre tracks.

- ALBUMS: Skyy (Salsoul 1979)★★, Skyway (Salsoul 1979)★★, Skyyport (Salsoul 1980)★★, Skyline (Salsoul 1981)★★, Skyyjammers (Salsoul 1982)★★, Skyylight (Salsoul 1983)★★, Inner City (Salsoul 1984)★★, From The Left Side (Capitol 1986)★★, Start Of A Romance (Atlantic 1988)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (DM Streetsounds 1987)★★★.

New York Tendaberry - Laura Nyro

Laura Nyro, who died in 1997, found fame when her compositions were covered by other artists, including Blood, Sweat And Tears, Barbra Streisand and the Fifth Dimension. Drawing inspiration from Broadway's Tin Pan Alley, R&B and Brill Building acolytes Carole King and Ellie Greenwich, she wrote material echoing these elements without ever sounding derivative. New York Tendaberry shows her skills to full effect, combining brassy, up-tempo pop with plaintive, introspective musings. Nyro's emotional voice swoops and dives at will, emphasizing the intensity of her songwriting. Uncompromising and challenging, this album showcases the art of a painfully underrated performer.

- Tracks: You Don't Love Me When I Cry; Captain For Dark Mornings; Tom Cat Goodby; Mercy On Broadway; Save The Country; Gibsom Street; Time And Love; Sweet Lovin Baby; Capatain Saint Lucifer; New York Tendaberry.
- First released 1969
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 32

New York, New York

Although greeted with mixed reviews at the time of its release in 1977, Martin Scorcese's vibrantly directed film has two major virtues: Robert De Niro is extremely convincing as a big band tenor saxophonist who wants to play bop, and the simulation of the musical ethos of the era (the late 40s) which is remarkably accurate. Otherwise, much of the criticism might be thought fair, the film is too long and the leading roles (the other is Liza Minnelli as a band singer-turned-superstar) are rather unsympathetic. Georgie Auld dubbed for De Niro and the film's musical director was Ralph Burns.

New Yorkers, The

This early Cole Porter show is probably best remembered for the inclusion of the notorious 'Love For Sale'. With a lyric containing such lines as 'Appetizing young love for sale.' . . . 'If you want to buy my wares/Follow me and climb the stairs.', this 'threnody in which a frightened vocalist, Miss Kathryn Crawford, impersonates a lily of the gutters, vending her charms in trembling accents, accompanied by a trio of melancholy female crooners', was banned for some years by radio stations on both sides of the Atlantic. Subtitled 'A Sociological Musical Satire', The New Yorkers opened at the Broadway Theatre on 8 December 1930. Herbert Fields's book, based on an idea of cartoonist Peter Arno's, propelled characters, swanky and seedy, around various Manhattan locations, both up-town and down. High society lady, Alice (Hope Williams), loves bootlegger and hoodlum, Al (Charles King), and they have 'Where Have You Been' and one of the score's best numbers, the supremely optimistic 'Let's Fly Away' ('And find a land that's so provincial/We'll never hear what Walter Winchell/Might be forced to say.'). The cast also included Frances Williams, who sang 'The Great Indoors' and 'Take Me Back To Manhattan'; and Barrie Oliver and Ann Pennington, who joined Frances Williams and Charles King for the witty 'I'm Getting Myself Ready For You'. The much-loved clown, Jimmy Durante, together with his vaudeville partners, Eddie Jackson and Lou Clayton, played three hoods. Durante stopped the show most nights with one of his own songs, an item called 'Wood', during which he littered the stage with a wide range of wood products. The clean-cut vocal instrumental group, Fred Waring And His Pennsylvanians, who had been discovered by the show's producer, Ray Goetz, while playing in Los Angeles, also used some of their own material, but, musically, the show belonged to Porter. Shortly after it opened, he interpolated a hymn to the 'Big Apple', 'I Happen To Like New York' ('I like the sight and the sound and even the stink of it.'), which was sung by Oscar 'Rags' Ragland. The New Yorkers ran for 168 performances, and despite being banned from airplay, 'Love For Sale' was a hit for Libby Holman, Fred Waring, and later, Hal Kemp. It also became widely heard in a version by Ella Fitzgerald on one of her Cole Porter Songbooks.

New, Howard

b. *c.*1966, Washington, DC, USA. Signed by Parlophone Records in the mid-90s, New was heavily promoted as a new artist specializing in traditional R&B. The youngest of four siblings, New picked up his musical influences from his brothers' record collections. A diet of Led Zeppelin and Free was augmented by the soul of Atlantic, Stax and Motown Records, before he became a huge fan of the Jam in the 80s. By contrast, one of the most acclaimed songs in his own live set was an interpretation of Nick Cave's 'Straight To You'. New was eventually signed to Parlophone after A&R director Keith Wozencroft saw him play in a working men's club in Warrington, Lancashire, England. He spent 18 months in 'development' with the artist, before he made his debut in the autumn of 1996 with the single, 'Battlefield'.

Newbeats

This distinctive pop trio featured falsetto Larry Henley (b. 30 June 1941, Arp, Texas, USA) with brothers Marcus 'Marc' Mathis (b. 9 February 1942; bass) and Lewis 'Dean' Mathis (b. 17 March 1939, Hahira, Georgia, USA). Dean had joined Paul Howard's Western Swing Band in 1956 as a pianist and later moved to Dale Hopkin's Band, with Marc joining shortly afterwards. The Mathis brothers then performed and recorded as Dean And Marc; their version of 'Tell Him No' narrowly missed the US Top 40 in 1959. Henley briefly joined the act before they went their separate ways. After recording as the Brothers on Checker and Argo they also had releases on Check Mate and May before joining Hickory Records, where Henley had been recording fruitlessly as a soloist. Since neither act was successful they decided to record together as the Newbeats. Their first single, 'Bread And Butter', became their biggest hit, shooting to number 2 in the US charts and into the UK Top 20 in 1964. In the USA the shrill-sounding trio kept the Top 40 hits rolling with 'Everything's Alright' in 1964, 'Break Away (From That Boy)' and 'Run Baby Run' (a belated UK Top 10 hit in 1971), the last two in 1965. After a decade on Hickory the trio went to Buddah Records in 1973 and then in 1974 to Playboy. The trio split up that year, with Henley then recording without chart success for Capricorn and later for Atco and Epic. He then turned his attention to songwriting, and has been very successful since. His best-known song was Bette Midler's version of a 1983 country hit, 'Wind Beneath My Wings'.

● ALBUMS: Bread & Butter (Hickory 1964)★★★, Big Beat Sounds By The Newbeats (Hickory 1965)★★, Run Baby Run (Hickory 1966)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (1992)★★★.

Newbern, 'Hambone' Willie

b. *c.*1899, USA, d. *c.*1947, USA. Sleepy John Estes, who was taught guitar by Newbern, met him while working on medicine shows in Mississippi. Songs such as 'She Could Toodle-Oo' and 'Way Down In Arkansas', made at his sole recording session in 1929, come from his medicine-show repertoire, but Newbern was also a master of the personal blues, composing a remarkable account of his arrest at Marked Tree, Arkansas. His surest claim to fame, however, rests in being the first to record 'Roll And Tumble Blues'. Estes later reported the rumour that Newbern's death was the result of an assault in prison.

● COMPILATIONS: The Greatest Songsters (1990)★★★.

Newberry, Booker, III

b. 19 January 1956, Youngstown, Ohio, USA. This rotund soul singer started performing in his local group, Mystic Nights, in 1971. He moved to nearby Philadelphia to find fame and in the mid-70s formed and fronted the quintet Sweet Thunder. They had a Top 40 R&B hit in 1978 with 'Baby, I Need Your Love Today' which they recorded for WMOT Records and which was picked up by Fantasy Records. The group recorded three albums for WMOT: Above The Clouds (1976), Sweet Thunder (1978), which made the US Top 200, and Horizons (1979). The group split in 1979 and for a time Newberry worked with the group Impact. In 1983 he signed with Boardwalk Records and his recording of 'Love Town', though only a minor US R&B hit, shot into the UK Top 20 in its first week of release, peaking at number 6. His follow-up, 'Teddy Bear', narrowly missed the UK Top 40 and he then quickly faded from the public eye. He recorded on Malaco in 1984 and returned to the spotlight, albeit briefly, in 1986, when 'Take A Piece Of Me' on Omni put his name back on the US R&B chart.

● ALBUMS: Love Town (Boardwalk 1984)★★.

Newborn, Phineas, Jnr.

b. 14 December 1931, Whiteville, Tennessee, USA, d. 26 May 1989. In the late 40s and early 50s Newborn, a gifted multi-instrumentalist who had studied extensively, played piano in a number of R&B and blues bands in and around Memphis, Tennessee. He had two brief spells with Lionel Hampton before military service interrupted his career. Subsequently, he led his own small group in New York, played with Charles Mingus, Oscar Pettiford and Kenny Clarke among others, made several records and appeared in the John Cassavetes film Shadows (1960). Relocated in Los Angeles in the 60s, he continued to record with artists such as Howard McGhee, Teddy Edwards, Ray Brown and Elvin Jones. His career then faltered, largely through a nervous breakdown and an injury to his hands, but the mid-70s saw his return to public performances. Newborn's early records were marked by displays of his phenomenal technique, while those made later suggested a growing maturity. Unfortunately, the interruptions to his career did not allow his potential full rein, and further illness prevented him from working for most of the 80s. Doctors discovered a lung tumour in 1988; he died the following year. The last years of his life are movingly recounted in a chapter of Stanley Booth's book on Memphis musicians, Rhythm Oil.

● ALBUMS: Here Is Phineas (1956)★★★, Phineas Rainbow (1956)★★★, Phineas Newborn With Dennis Farnon Orchestra (1957)★★, Phineas Newborn And His Orchestra (1957)★★★, Fabulous Phineas (1958)★★, We Three (1958)★★★, Stockholm Jam Session Vol 1 and 2 (Steeplechase 1958 recording)★★★★, Phineas Newborn Plays Again (1959)★★★, Piano Portraits (1959)★★, Newborn Piano (1959)★★★, A World Of Piano (Original Jazz Classics 1961)★★★★, The Great Jazz Piano Of Phineas Newborn (Original Jazz Classics 1962)★★★★, The Newborn Touch (Original Jazz Classics 1964)★★★★, Please Send Me Someone To Love (JVC 1969)★★★, Harlem Blues (Original Jazz Classics 1969)★★★★, Solo Piano (Atlantic 1974)★★★, Solo (1975)★★★, Look Out...Phineas Is Back (Pablo 1976)★★★, Phineas Is Genius (1977)★★★.

Newbury, Mickey

b. Milton J. Newbury Jnr., 19 May 1940, Houston, Texas, USA. Newbury began by singing tenor in a harmony group, the Embers, who recorded for Mercury Records. He worked as an air traffic controller in the US Air Force and was stationed in England. He later wrote 'Swiss Cottage Place', which was recorded by Roger Miller. In 1963 he worked on shrimp boats in Galveston, Texas and started songwriting in earnest. In 1964 he was signed to Acuff-Rose Music in Nashville. Among his early compositions are 'Here Comes The Rain, Baby' (Eddy Arnold and Roy Orbison), 'Funny Familiar Forgotten Feelings' (Don Gibson and Tom Jones), 'How I Love Them Old Songs' (Carl Smith) and 'Sweet Memories' (Willie Nelson). In 1968 Kenny Rogers And The First Edition had a US pop hit with the psychedelic 'Just Dropped In (To See What Condition My Condition Was In)'. Newbury recorded low-key albums of his own but his voice was so mournful that even his happier songs sounded sad. After two albums for RCA, he moved to Mercury and wrote and recorded such sombre songs as 'She Even Woke Me Up To Say Goodbye' (later recorded by Jerry Lee Lewis), 'San Francisco Mabel Joy' (recorded by John Denver, Joan Baez, David Allan Coe and Kenny Rogers) and 'I Don't Think About Her (Him) No More', which has been recorded by Don Williams and Tammy Wynette, and also by Bobby Bare, under the title of 'Poison Red Berries'. Newbury, who by now lived on a houseboat, was intrigued by the way his wind chimes mingled with the rain, thus leading to the sound effects he used to link tracks. His gentle and evocative 'American Trilogy' - in actuality a medley of three Civil War songs ('Dixie', 'The Battle Hymn Of The Republic' and 'All My Trials') - was a hit in a full-blooded version by Elvis Presley in 1972. Says Newbury, 'It was more a detriment than a help because it was not indicative of what I could do.' Nevertheless, his Rusty Tracks also features reworkings of American folk songs. Amongst his successful compositions are 'Makes Me Wonder If I Ever Said Goodbye' (Johnny Rodriguez) and 'Blue Sky Shinin'' (Marie Osmond). He has scarcely made a mark as a performer in the US country charts (his highest position is number 53 for 'Sunshine'), but he was elected to the Nashville Songwriters' International Hall of Fame in 1980. Ironically, he has released few new songs since and his 'new age' album in 1988 featured re-recordings of old material. His 1996 album, Lulled By The Moonlight, was dedicated to first American pop songwriter Stephen Foster.

● ALBUMS: Harlequin Melodies (RCA Victor 1968)★★, Mickey Newbury Sings His Own (RCA 1968)★★★, Looks Like Rain (Mercury 1969)★★★, 'Frisco Mabel Joy (Elektra 1971)★★★★, Heaven Help The Child (Elektra 1973)★★★, Live At Montezuma also issued as a double album with Looks Like Rain (Elektra 1973)★★★, I Came To Hear The Music (Elektra 1974)★★★, Lovers (Elektra 1975)★★★, Rusty Tracks (Hickory 1977)★★, His Eye Is On The Sparrow (Hickory 1978)★★★, The Sailor (Hickory 1979)★★★, After All These Years (Mercury 1981)★★★, In A New Age (Airborne 1988)★★★, Nights When I Am Sane (Winter Harvest 1994)★★★, Lulled By The Moonlight (Mountain Retreat 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Sweet Memories (MCA 1986)★★★, The Best Of Mickey Newbury (Curb 1991)★★.

Newley, Anthony

b. 24 September 1931, London, England. A highly successful songwriter, actor and singer, Newley attended the Italia Conti Stage School in London before working as a child actor in several films, including The Little Ballerina, Vice Versa, and David Lean's acclaimed version of Oliver Twist (1948) in which he played the Artful Dodger. He made his London theatrical debut in John Cranko's revue, Cranks in 1955, and had character parts in well over 20 films before he was cast as rock 'n' roll star Jeep Jackson in Idle On Parade in 1959. Newley's four-track vocal EP, and his version of the film's hit ballad, Jerry Lordan's 'I've Waited So Long', started a three-year UK chart run that included 'Personality', 'If She Should Come To You', 'And The Heavens Cried', the novelty numbers 'Pop Goes The Weasel' and 'Strawberry Fair' and two UK number 1 hits, 'Why' and Lionel Bart's 'Do You Mind'. Newley also made the album charts in 1960 with his set of standards, Love Is A Now And Then Thing. He made further appearances in the charts with Tony (1961), and the comedy album Fool Britannia (1963), on which he was joined by his wife, Joan Collins, and Peter Sellers. In 1961 Newley collaborated with Leslie Bricusse on the book, music and lyrics for the offbeat stage musical, Stop The World - I Want To Get Off. Newley also directed, and played the central role of Littlechap. The show, which stayed in the West End for 16 months, ran for over 500 performances on Broadway, and was filmed in 1966. It produced several hit songs, including 'What Kind Of Fool Am I?', 'Once In A Lifetime' and 'Gonna Build A Mountain'.

In 1964 Bricusse and Newley wrote the lyric to John Barry's music for Shirley Bassey to sing over the titles of the James Bond movie, Goldfinger. The team's next musical show in 1965, The Roar Of The Greasepaint - The Smell Of The Crowd, with comedian Norman Wisdom in the lead, toured the north of England but did not make the West End. When it went to Broadway Newley took over (co-starring with Cyril Ritchard), but was not able to match the success of Stop The World, despite an impressive score that contained such numbers as 'Who Can I Turn To?', 'A Wonderful Day Like Today', 'The Joker', 'Look At That Face' and 'This Dream'. In 1967 Newley appeared with Rex Harrison and Richard Attenborough in the film musical Doctor Dolittle, with script and songs by Bricusse. Despite winning an Oscar for 'Talk To The Animals', the film was considered an expensive flop, as was Newley's own movie project in 1969, a pseudo-autobiographical sex-fantasy entitled Can Heironymus Merkin Ever Forget Mercy Humppe And Find True Happiness? Far more successful, in 1971, was Willy Wonka And The Chocolate Factory, a Roald Dahl story with music and lyrics by Bricusse and Newley. Sammy Davis Jnr. had a million-selling record with one of the songs, 'The Candy Man'. Bricusse and Newley also wrote several numbers for the 1971 NBC television musical adaptation of Peter Pan, starring Mia Farrow and Danny Kaye. The team's last authentic stage musical to date, The Good Old Bad Old Days, opened in London in 1972 and had a decent run of 309 performances. Newley sang some of the songs, including 'The People Tree', on his 1972 album, Ain't It Funny. In 1989, a London revival of Stop The World - I Want To Get Off, directed by Newley, and in which he also appeared, closed after five weeks, and, in the same year, he was inducted into the Songwriters' Hall Of Fame, along with Leslie Bricusse. In 1991, Newley appeared on UK television with his ex-wife, Joan Collins, in Noël Coward's Tonight At 8.30, with its famous 'Red Peppers' segment. In the following year, having lived in California for some years, Newley announced that he was returning to Britain, and bought a house there to share with his 90-year-old mother. In the early 90s he presented Once Upon A Song, an anthology of his own material, at the King's Head Theatre in London, and occasionally played the title role in regional productions of the musical Scrooge, which Leslie Bricusse had adapted for the stage from his 1970 film. In 1994, Newley presented his accomplished cabaret act (in which he continually, and amusingly, bemoans the fact that he has not had a hit with one of his own songs) at London's Café Royal. In the same year, Tara Newley, the daughter of Newley and Joan Collins, released her first record entitled 'Save Me From Myself'.

● ALBUMS: Love Is A Now And Then Thing (Decca 1960)★★★, Tony (Decca 1961)★★★, the London Cast Stop The World - I Want To Get Off (1962)★★★★, with Peter Sellers, Joan Collins Fool Britannia (1963)★★★, In My Solitude (Decca 1964)★★★, Newley Delivered (Decca 1965)★★★, the Broadway Cast The Roar Of The Greasepaint - The Smell Of The Crowd (1965)★★★★, Who Can I Turn To (RCA Victor 1965)★★★★, Newley Recorded (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Ain't It Funny (1972)★★★, The Singer And His Songs (1978)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Romantic World Of Anthony Newley (Decca 1970)★★★, The Lonely World Of Anthony Newley (Decca 1972)★★★, Anthony Newley: Mr. Personality (1985)★★★, Greatest Hits (Deram 1990)★★★★, Once In A Lifetime: The Anthony Newley Collection (Razor And Tie 1997)★★★★.

● FILMS: Oliver Twist (1948), Vice Versa (1948), Those People Next Door (1953), Cockleshell Heroes (1956), X The Unknown (1957), High Flight (1957), No Time To Die (1958), Idle On Parade (1959), In The Nick (1961), The Small World Of Sammy Lee (1963), Doctor Dolittle (1967), Sweet November (1968), Can Heironymous Merkin Ever Forget Mercy Humpe And Find True Happiness? (1969).

Newman, Alfred

b. 17 March 1901, New Haven, Connecticut, USA, d. 17 February 1970, Hollywood, California, USA. An important figure in the history of film music, Newman was a composer, conductor, arranger and musical director. A child prodigy on the piano, he went to New York before he was 10 years old, to study piano and harmony. At the age of 13 he was playing in several vaudeville shows a day, while also fitting in appearances as a soloist with various classical orchestras. In the 20s he conducted for the Broadway Theatre, and contributed the occasional song to shows such as Jack And Jill ('Voodoo Man', 1923). In 1930 he moved to Hollywood shortly after the movies had started to talk, and worked as an arranger and then a composer for United Artists, on films such as The Devil To Pay, Indiscreet, The Unholy Garden and Arrowsmith. His 'immortal' melancholy title theme for Street Scene (1931), echoed through the years in many a later film depicting urban decay. His scores for other 30s films included I Cover The Waterfront (1933), Nana (1934), The Count Of Monte Cristo (1934), Clive Of India (1935), Les Miserables (1935), Dodsworth (1936), The Prisoner Of Zenda (1937), The Goldwyn Follies (1938), The Cowbay And The Lady (1938), Trade Winds (1938), Gunga Din (1939), Wuthering Heights (1939), Young Mr. Lincoln (1939) and Beau Geste (1939). He also served as musical director for Sam Goldwyn (1933-39), and won Academy Awards for his work on Alexander's Ragtime Band (1938), Tin Pan Alley (1940), Mother Wore Tights (1947), With A Song In My Heart (1952), Call Me Madam (1953), The King And I (1956, with co-writer Ken Darby), Camelot (1967, again with Darby) and Hello, Dolly! (1969, with Lennie Hayton).

He gained further Oscars for his complete background scores to The Song Of Bernadette (1943) and Love Is A Many Splendored Thing (1955). His film credits during the 40s included The Grapes Of Wrath (1940), The Blue Bird (1940), Lillian Russell (1940), How Green Was My Valley (1941), Charley's Aunt (1941), Life Begins At Eight Thirty (1942), The Black Swan (1942), Heaven Can Wait (1943), Claudia (1943), The Keys Of The Kingdom (1944), Wilson (1944), Leave Her To Heaven (1945), A Tree Grows In Brooklyn (1945), The Razor's Edge (1946), Captain From Castille (1947), Centennial Summer (1946), Unfaithfully Yours (1948), The Snake Pit (1948), A Letter To Three Wives (1949), Yellow Sky (1948), Twelve O'Clock High and Pinky (1949). During the 40s Newman spent several years as musical director for 20th Century Fox with his brothers, Lionel and Emil, working for him. In 1950 while still at Fox, Newman wrote the score for 'the wittiest, most devastating, adult and literate motion picture ever made', All About Eve, starring Bette Davis and George Sanders. The remainder of his 50s music was of a superb standard, too, for films such as Panic In The Streets (1950), David And Bathsheba (1951), What Price Glory? (1952), The Snows Of Kilimanjaro (1952), The Robe (1953), The Seven Year Itch (1955), Anastasia (1956), Bus Stop (1956, with Cyril Mockridge), A Certain Smile (1958), The Diary Of Anne Frank (1959) and The Best Of Everything (1959). The latter film's title song (lyric by Sammy Cahn) became popular for Johnny Mathis, and several other earlier pieces of Newman's film music had lives of their own apart from the soundtracks. These included 'Moon of Manakoora' (lyric by Frank Loesser), sung by Dorothy Lamour in The Hurricane, and popularized by her fellow 'Road' traveller, Bing Crosby; 'Through A Long And Sleepless Night' (lyric by Mack Gordon), from Come To The Stable; and the title songs from How Green Was My Valley, Anastasia and The Best Of Everything. In the 60s his rousing scores for How The West Was Won and The Greatest Story Ever Told spawned best-selling albums. His music for the melodramatic Airport (1970), which featured the popular theme, was the last of Newman's works for the big screen. His son, David Newman (b. 1954), composed a number of television and feature film scores in the 80s and 90s, including The Kindred, The Brave Little Toaster, Throw Momma From The Train, My Demon Lover, The Big Picture, Prince Of Pennsylvania, Heathers, Bill And Ted's Excellent Adventure, The War Of The Roses, Madhouse, The Freshman, Meet The Applegates, The Marrying Man, Bill And Ted's Bogus Journey, Don't Tell Momma The Babysitter's Dead, Paradise, Honeymoon In Las Vegas, The Mighty Ducks, That Night, Hoffa, Champions, The Sandlot, Undercover Blues, My Father, The Hero, The Air Up There, The Flintstones, The Sandlot Kids, I Love Trouble, and Boys On the Side (1995).

Newman, Chris

b. 30 October 1952, Stevenage, Hertfordshire, England. This highly accomplished guitarist gave his first public performance at the age of five, and spent time as a teenager playing with Diz Disley. In 1974 Chris joined the Pigsty Hill Light Orchestra, but left within a couple of years. Newman became a sought-after session player during the 70s, and was also a very capable producer and arranger. This was demonstrated in 1981 when he co-wrote, produced and arranged 'The Oldest Swinger In Town' by Fred Wedlock. The single reached number 4 in the UK charts, and topped a number of overseas charts, including Ireland and Israel. Chris received a silver disc for the production. He was then commissioned to write music for a variety of television and radio shows. At the same time, he was pursuing a career as a performer, touring Europe, the USA, Australia and the Middle East, both in a solo capacity and with other artists. Newman later teamed up with virtuoso harpist Máire Ní Chathasaigh, and together they have played worldwide to great acclaim. They performed in Australia in 1988 as part of Ireland's contribution to the Bicentennial celebrations, and again the following year, to take part in the Guinness Celebration of Irish Music. The Living Wood was voted Folk Album of the Year by the Daily Telegraph, and among the newspaper's top four albums of the decade. The album was used as background music and became a signature tune for the regional UK television series Off The Hook. Their recordings all exude refinement and explain why they are extremely popular as a live act.

● ALBUMS:Chris Newman (1981)★★, Chris Newman Two (1983)★★★; as Chris And Máire: The Living Wood (1988)★★★★, The Carolan Album (1991)★★★, Out Of Court (Old Bridge Music 1991)★★★.

Newman, Colin

A founder-member of Wire, guitarist/vocalist Newman began a solo career upon the group's demise in 1980. The engaging A-Z unsurprisingly furthered the tenor of his former act's work - much of it was intended for a provisional fourth Wire album - and ex-colleagues Mike Thorne (keyboards, production) and Robert Gotobed (drums) were on hand to further the sense of continuity. The set ably showcased Newman's grasp of dissonant pop and an ability to subvert the form while engaging with its rules. Provisionally Entitled The Singing Fish was a purely instrumental set produced by the artist and to which he contributed an array of different instruments. Newman's discipline and dark humour was nonetheless still evident. Within months he issued Not To, which echoed the style of his debut. Significantly Thorne had dropped from the picture, and the absence of his sometimes overstated keyboards allowed space for guitarist Desmond Simmons to develop. Simon Gillham (bass) and the ever-faithful Gotobed added punch to a collection blending new material with Wire and A-Z leftovers. Challenging, minimalist and sometimes splintered rhythmically, Not To captures Newman at his best. Paradoxically, he then withdrew from music for a period but, having obtained a grant, journeyed to India to undertake a series of recordings. His return in 1984 sparked the seeds of Wire's reunion two years later. Newman remained committed to the group, later dubbed Wir on Gotobed's departure, but continued his solo career with Commercial Suicide. Aided by Malka Spiegel and Sean Bonnar/Samy Birnach of Minimal Impact - whose 1985 album, Raging Souls, was produced by Newman - the singer herein offered a quieter, more introspective style than on previous recordings. It Seems featured the same core trio, while the additional use of horn and reed players added depth, but in 1994 he formed Oracle with Birnbach and Spiegel (now Newman's wife). The sumptuous Tree followed, issued on the collective's Swim label. The album, recorded over a five-year period, contained a haunting version of the Lovin' Spoonful's 'Coconut Grove' and confirmed Newman's valued position on the periphery of modern music.

- ALBUMS: A-Z (Beggars Banquet 1980)★★★, Provisionally Entitled The Singing Fish (4AD 1981)★★★, Not To (4AD 1982)★★★, Commercial Suicide (Crammed Discs 1986)★★★, It Seems (Crammed Discs 1988)★★★, Bastard (Swim 1997)★★★.

Newman, David

(see Newman, Alfred)

Newman, David 'Fathead'

b. 24 February 1933, Dallas, Texas, USA. Newman is a tenor/baritone/soprano saxophone player and flautist, whose work contains elements of both jazz and R&B. In the early 50s he toured with Texan blues guitarist 'T-Bone' Walker and recorded the classic 'Reconsider Baby' with Lowell Fulson in 1954. For the next 10 years Newman was part of Ray Charles's orchestra, appearing on landmark recordings such as 'I Got A Woman', 'What'd I Say' and 'Lonely Avenue'. Other tenures have included the saxophone position in Herbie Mann's Family Of Mann (1972-74). He has recorded some two dozen albums as a leader since 1958, most tending towards mainstream and post-bop jazz with a funk edge, and has worked extensively as an accompanist in the blues, rock and jazz fields. He worked on Natalie Cole's bestselling Unforgettable (1990), and enjoyed much acclaim for his involvement in the Bluesiana Triangle benefit projects in aid of the homeless. Blue Greens And Beans was a collection of bop standards also featuring another Texan player, Marchel Ivery.

- ALBUMS: as leader Lonely Avenue (1971)★★★, Mr. Fathead (1976)★★★, Fire! Live At the Village Vanguard (Atlantic 1989)★★★, Blue Greens And Beans (Timeless 1991)★★★, Blue Head (Candid 1991)★★★, with Art Blakey, Dr. John Bluesiana Triangle (1990)★★★, Return To The Wide Open Spaces (Meteor 1993)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Back To Basics (1990)★★★.

Newman, Jimmy C.

b. Jimmy Yves Newman, 27 August 1927, Big Mamou, Louisiana, USA. Since he was of French origin, speaking both English and French, and grew up in the heart of the Cajun area of the state, it is no surprise that he went on to become one of the main artists to bring that genre of music into the field of country music. He left school prematurely when his father died to help support his eight siblings. Newman first became interested in country music through hearing his brother Walter play guitar and sing Jimmie Rodgers songs. In the mid-40s he played in a local Cajun band and made his first recording in French in 1946. Later, he formed his own band, played local radio and small venues around the state, and eventually presented his own programme on KPLC-TV in Lake Charles, where his mixture of Cajun and country music quickly proved popular. In 1949 he recorded the original version of the Webb Pierce hit 'Wondering'. The release failed to chart but, determined to find a hit song, he wrote and recorded 'Cry Cry Darling'. Listeners to his early recordings will note a prominent hiss on his pronunciation of the letter 'S', caused by a badly fitted gold tooth. Fred Rose tried to eliminate the problem by changing lyrics, such as in 'Cry Cry Darling', where 'sunshine' became 'moonlight' (a little later a partial denture replaced the offending tooth and permanently cured the problem). Also through the auspices of Fred Rose, Newman joined Dot Records. In 1954 a new recording of 'Cry Cry Darling' reached number 4 on the US country charts and led to his joining the Louisiana Hayride. Between 1955 and 1957 he had five more Top 10 country hits, the biggest being his recording of Ned Miller's 'A Fallen Star', which became a number 2 country and number 23 pop hit. Newman acquired the 'C' in his name when the drummer on the recording of the song, T. Tommy Cutrer, labelled him Jimmy 'Cajun' Newman and the initial stuck. He did not like rockabilly or novelty songs, but did record 'Bop-A-Hula' and the Jim Reeves song 'Step Aside Shallow Waters'. In 1958 he moved to MGM, where Top 10 country hits included 'You're Making A Fool Out Of Me' and 'A Lovely Work Of Art'. In 1961 he left MGM because he felt he was losing his Cajun roots. He joined Decca and in the next nine years charted 16 country hits including such popular recordings as 'DJ For A Day' and 'Artificial Rose', and Cajun numbers including 'Alligator Man', 'Bayou Talk' and 'Louisiana Saturday Night'. His last chart hit came in 1970 with a song called 'I'm Holding Your Memory'. He later recorded for several minor labels including Plantation. From the mid-50s through the 70s he toured extensively throughout the USA, played some overseas concerts and has also appeared on all major network radio and television shows. He became a member of the Grand Ole Opry in 1956 and still maintains his regular appearances, often hosting one of the show's segments. Newman's plaintive tenor vocals and traditional fiddle and steel guitar backing were ideally suited to the country music of the 50s and 60s and at times, except for his Cajun numbers, his vocal work was comparable with that of Webb Pierce. He has always proved a great favourite with UK audiences on the occasions when he has appeared at the Wembley Festival, and he continues to tour with veteran Cajun musicians, including fiddle player Rufus Thibodeaux.

- ALBUMS: This Is Jimmy Newman (MGM 1959)★★★, Songs By Jimmy Newman (MGM 1962)★★★, Folk Songs Of The Bayou Country (Decca 1963)★★★, Artificial Rose (Decca 1966)★★★, Country Crossroads (Dot 1966)★★★, A Fallen Star (Dot 1966)★★★, Jimmy Newman Sings Country Songs (Decca 1966)★★★, The World Of Country Music (Decca 1967)★★★, The Jimmy Newman Way (Decca 1967)★★★, Born To Love You (Decca 1968)★★★, The Jimmy Newman

Style (Decca 1969)★★★, Country Time (Decca 1970)★★, Progressive C.C (Charly 1977)★★★, with Hank Locklin, Rita Remington Carol Channing & Her Country Friends (1977)★★, The Cajun Cowboy (Plantation 1978)★★★, The Happy Cajun (Plantation 1979)★★★, Cajun Country (RCA 1982)★★★, Wild 'N' Cajun (RCA 1984)★★★, Cajun & Country Too (Swallow 1987)★★★, Lache Pas La Patate (La Louisiane 1987)★★★, Louisiana Saturday Night (Charly 1987)★★★, The Alligator Man (Rounder 1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits Volume 1 (1981)★★★, Jimmy Newman & Al Terry - Earliest Recordings 1949-1952 (1981)★★★, Cajun Country Classics (Charly 1986)★★★, Bop A Hula compiles Dot material (Bear Family 1990)★★★★.

Newman, Joe

b. 7 September 1922, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 4 July 1992, New York, USA. After playing with and leading a college band, trumpeter Newman joined Lionel Hampton in 1941. Two years later he joined Count Basie at the start of a long association. In the late 40s and early 50s he spent some time in bands led by Illinois Jacquet and J.C. Heard and also led his own bands for club and record dates. By 1952 he was back in the Basie fold and he remained with the band, handling most of the trumpet solos, until 1961. Subsequently, he toured world-wide, usually as a solo act, but occasionally in specially formed bands such as those led by Benny Goodman and Hampton. He also became active in jazz education. This pattern of work continued throughout the 80s and into the early 90s. A powerful player with a wide repertoire, Newman's style acknowledged latter-day developments in jazz trumpet while remaining rooted in the concepts of his great idol, Louis Armstrong.

● ALBUMS: Joe Newman And His Band (1954)★★★, Joe Newman And The Boys In The Band (1954)★★★, The Joe Newman Sextet (1954)★★★, All I Wanna Do Is Swing (1955)★★, The Count's Men (Fresh Sound 1955 recording)★★★★, I'm Still Swinging (1955)★★★, I Feel Like A Newman (Black Lion 1955-56)★★★, Salute To Satch (1956)★★, The Joe Newman-Frank Wess Septet (1956)★★★, Jazz For Playboys (Savoy 1957)★★★, The Happy Cats (Jasmine 1957)★★★, The Joe Newman-Zoot Sims Quartet (1957)★★★, Soft Swingin' Jazz (1958)★★★, Joe Newman And His Orchestra (1958)★★★, Joe Newman And Count Basie's All Stars (1958)★★★★, Jive At Five (Original Jazz Classics 1960)★★★★, Good 'N' Groovy (1961)★★★, Joe's Hap'nin's (1961)★★★★, The Joe Newman-Oliver Nelson Quintet (1961)★★★★, In A Mellow Mood (1962)★★★, Shiny Stockings (1965)★★★★, Way Down Blues (1965)★★★, with Lionel Hampton Newport Uproar! (1967)★★★, I Love My Baby (1978)★★★, Joe Newman-Jimmy Rowles Duets (1979)★★★, Similar Souls (Vogue 1983)★★★, with Joe Wilder Hangin' Out (1984)★★★.

Newman, Lionel

b. 4 January 1916, New Haven, Connecticut, USA, d. 3 February 1989, California, USA. A distinguished composer, musical director, conductor and arranger for movies for more than 30 years, Newman was a talented pianist as a child, and while in his teens started as a rehearsal pianist for Earl Carroll's Vanities, graduating to the position of musical director. He toured with other shows, played piano for Mae West for a while, and performed the same function at 20th Century-Fox when he joined them in 1943. Earlier in 1938, he had composed the title song (lyric by Arthur Quenzer) for the movie The Cowboy And The Lady, which had a score by his elder brother, Alfred Newman. In the late 40s Newman's songs included 'As If I Didn't Have Enough On My Mind' (with Harry James), sung by Dick Haymes in Do You Love Me?, as well as 'The Morning Glory Road', 'Ramblin' Around' and 'Sentimental Souvenirs'. He had a smash hit in 1948 with the romantic ballad 'Again' (lyric by Dorcas Cochrane), from the film Road House. It was successful at the time for Doris Day, Gordon Jenkins and Vic Damone, among others. Another of his numbers, Never (lyric by Eliot Daniel), sung by Dennis Day in Golden Girl (1951), was nominated for an Oscar. In his career as a musical director, Newman worked on such films as Cheaper By The Dozen (1950), Mother Didn't Tell Me (1950), I'll Get By (1950), Dangerous Crossing (1953), Love Me Tender (1956, Elvis Presley's first film), The Best Things In Life Are Free (1956), Mardi Gras (1958), Doctor Dolittle (1967), The Great White Hope (1970) and The Saltzburg Connection (1972). He supervised all Marilyn Monroe's movies for 20th Century-Fox, such as Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (1953), River Of No Return (1954) and There's No Business Like Show Business (1954). As the studio's general music director, and senior vice-president in 1982, he was a powerful influence on the Fox output. His original music scores included Don't Bother To Knock (1952), The Proud Ones (1956), A Kiss Before Dying (1956), Compulsion (1959), North To Alaska (1960), Move Over Darling (1963), The Pleasure Seekers (1964, with Alexander Courage) and Do Not Disturb (1965). He was nominated for 11 Academy Awards, and won the Oscar, with Lennie Hayton, in 1969 for his adaptation of Jerry Herman's score for the film version of Hello, Dolly!. During the early 80s he conducted the Boston Pops Orchestra in the USA, and performed at London's Royal Albert Hall. He retired in 1985, but was persuaded by MGM to return to the business in 1987. He died two years later.

Newman, Randy

b. 28 November 1943, Los Angeles, California, USA. One of the great middle American songwriters, Newman is William Faulkner, Garrison Keillor, Edward Hopper and Norman Rockwell, all set to music. Newman's songs are uncompromising and humorous but are often misconceived as being cruel and trite. His early compositions were recorded by other people, as Newman was paid $50 a month as a staff songwriter for Liberty Records housed in the famous Brill Building, New York. Early hit songs included 'Nobody Needs Your Love' and 'Just One Smile' by Gene Pitney, 'I Don't Want To Hear It Anymore' recorded by Dusty Springfield and P.J. Proby, 'I Think It's Going To Rain Today', by Judy Collins, UB40 and again by Dusty, as was the superb 'I've Been Wrong Before' which was also a hit for Cilla Black. Alan Price found favour with 'Simon Smith And His Amazing Dancing Bear' and 'Tickle Me', Peggy Lee succeeded with 'Love Story', and Three Dog Night and Eric Burdon did well with 'Mama Told Me Not To Come'. In addition, Newman's songs have been recorded by dozens of artists including Manfred Mann, Harpers Bizarre, Irma Thomas, Billy Fury, O'Jays, Petula Clark, Melissa Manchester, Frankie Laine, the Walker Brothers, the Nashville Teens, Lulu, Eric Burdon, Van Dyke Parks, Sheena Easton, Blood Sweat And Tears, Jackie DeShannon, Nina Simone, H.P. Lovecraft, Liza Minelli, Vic Dana, Rick Nelson, Ian Matthews, Fleetwoods, Bryan Hyland, Ringo Starr and Ray Charles. Newman's debut album came as late as 1968 and was the subject of bizarre advertising from Reprise Records. In February 1969 they announced through a hefty campaign that the record was not selling; they changed the cover and added a lyric sheet. This bold but defeatist ploy failed to increase the meagre sales. In 1970 he contributed to the Performance soundtrack and that same year his work was celebrated by having Harry Nilsson record an album of his songs. His introspective lyrics are never self-indulgent; he writes in a morose way but it all merely reflects the human condition. Songs like 'Old Kentucky Home' and 'Baltimore' have hidden warmth. 'Rednecks' and 'Short People' are genuine observations, but on these songs Newman's humour was too subtle for the general public and he received indignant protests and threats. In 1979's 'Story Of A Rock 'N' Roll Band' he castigated both Kiss and ELO. One of the first examples of his film music came in 1971, with Cold Turkey, and he was nominated for an Oscar in 1982 for his score to Ragtime, and again, in 1984, for The Natural. In 1983, his 'I Love Love L.A.' was used to promote the Los Angeles Olympic Games of the following year. In 1986 he wrote 'Blue Shadows', the theme for The Three Amigos!, which was performed in the hit movie by Steve Martin and Chevy Chase. More film scores followed, such as Awakenings, Parenthood (including the song, 'I Love To See You Smile'), Avalon (the last two films were nominated for Academy Awards), The Paper, and Maverick (1994). Among his most recent studio work was Land Of Dreams, ironically co-produced by one of the victims of his acerbic wit, Jeff Lynne. Faust was an ambitious project that enlisted Elton John, James Taylor, Bonnie Raitt and Don Henley among a gamut of west coast superstars. He scored the music for the Disney film Toy Story in 1995. Newman continues to brilliantly observe, infuriate and mock while his croaky voice turns out more masterpieces commenting on American society.

● ALBUMS: Randy Newman (Reprise 1968)★★★, 12 Songs (Reprise 1970)★★★★, Randy Newman/Live (Reprise 1971)★★★, Sail Away (Reprise 1972)★★★★, Good Old Boys (Reprise 1974)★★★★, Little Criminals (Warners 1977)★★★★, Born Again (Warners 1979)★★★, Ragtime film soundtrack (1982)★★, Trouble In Paradise (Warners 1983)★★, The Natural film soundtrack (1984)★★, Land Of Dreams (Reprise 1988)★★★, Parenthood film soundtrack (1990)★★, Awakenings film soundtrack (Warners 1991)★★, The Paper film soundtrack (Reprise 1994)★★, Faust (Reprise 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Randy Newman Retrospect (Warners 1983)★★★, Lonely At The Top - The Best Of Randy Newman (Warners 1987)★★★★.

Newman, Roy

b. *c.*1900, Dallas, Texas, USA, d. 23 February 1981, Dallas, Texas, USA. Nothing is known now of Newman's childhood or of his teenage years but he grew up to become one of the pioneers of western swing music. By his mid-20s, he played piano, piano accordion and guitar and worked as a staff musician at WRR Dallas. In 1926, apart from his studio duties, he began to play piano as one half of the Mystery Duo, with John Thorvald (guitar). In 1931, he played guitar as part of a quartet known as the Wanderers, where he became associated with guitarist Jim Boyd. The group moved to WFAA in 1932, but Newman and Boyd with different musicians returned to WRR, as Roy Newman And His Boys, the following year. Also at WRR at that time was Bill Boyd, who played and recorded with musicians known as the Cowboy Ramblers. In reality, some of the musicians who played and recorded with Newman also played on Boyd's recordings, but each band managed an individual sound and both played on WRR's popular Noon Hour Varieties. Newman And His Boys (who sometimes numbered 10 musicians) recorded 72 sides between 1934 and 1939, and established a considerable reputation through their broadcasts and appearances in the Dallas and Fort Worth areas. Although never afforded the publicity gained by Bob Wills or Milton Brown, Newman, who probably played more jazz than his contemporaries, played his part in popularizing western swing music, before he disbanded in 1940. Important group members over the years were fiddlers Art Davis and Thurman Neal and Holly Horton (clarinet). Newman continued to work as a staff musician at WRR and/or WFAA until his retirement. He died at his home in 1981, the same year that an album of his early work was released. Recordings have also appeared on Rambler compilation albums.

● COMPILATIONS: Roy Newman And His Boys 1934-1938 (Original Jazz Library 1981)★★★.

Newport Jazz Festival

Newport, Rhode Island, USA is not the kind of venue normally associated with music that began as lowlife entertainment, but the jazz festival, begun in 1954, blended comfortably into Newport's somewhat refined surroundings with considerable ease. The nature of the event, which was founded by two of Newport's top set, Louis and Elaine Lorillard and directed by George Wein, was exposed to the world at large thanks to a marvellous, if occasionally visually overwrought, evocation of the 1958 festival filmed by Bert Stern and released in 1960 under the title, Jazz On A Summer's Day. The artists at Newport that year included Louis Armstrong, Gerry Mulligan, Dinah Washington, Thelonious Monk, gospel singer Mahalia Jackson and, perhaps the most visually arresting sight of the festival, Anita O'Day in hip-hugging dress, gloves and cartwheel hat. Following crowd trouble in 1960, the 1961 festival was cancelled, but it was back the following year. However, more unsavoury events in 1971 caused it be moved permanently to New York City. Still under Wein's benignly autocratic direction, the festival gained in strength and has never lost is early importance. New York is where it remains, with events taking place over 10 days in June in venues ranging from Carnegie Hall to small intimate clubs, and even onto the streets of the city. Over the years the festival's name has changed slightly to accommodate different sponsors but most recently, in deference to the Japanese Victor Corporation, it has been known as the JVC Jazz Festival New York. Since 1984 Newport has once again had its own festival, with George Wein presenting a two-day show in August at Fort Adams State Park, again under the patronage of JVC.

Newton, David

b. 2 February 1958, Glasgow, Scotland. As a child he took lessons on piano, clarinet and bassoon, but while studying at the Leeds College of Music he decided to concentrate on piano. After playing in various bands as a semi-pro, he secured his first professional engagement leading a trio at a restaurant in Bradford, Yorkshire, in 1978. Around this time he also played in numerous other bands, ranging musically from traditional jazz to funk, from strict-tempo dancebands to classical. In the early 80s he worked extensively in the theatre, especially with Scarborough-based playwright Alan Ayckbourn. Newton then returned to Scotland, and from a base in Edinburgh quickly established himself as a rising star of the jazz world. He played in backing groups for many visiting jazzmen, including Art Farmer, Bud Shank, Shorty Rogers and Nat Adderley. He also recorded with Buddy De Franco. By the late 80s he had settled in London, recording with Alan Barnes, the Jazz Renegades, Martin Taylor, with whom he toured India, and also playing club dates with Andy Cleyndert, Don Weller, Spike Robinson and others. At the end of the decade he became accompanist and musical director to Carol Kidd, recording with her and making numerous concert appearances. An outstanding talent, Newton's wide-ranging experience has ensured that he is at home in most musical settings. Despite his eclecticism he has developed a distinctive and distinguished personal style. As he matures he appears likely to become one of Europe's leading jazz musicians, well-equipped to take the music into the 21st century.

● ALBUMS: with Alan Barnes Affiliation (1987)★★★, Given Time (GFM 1988)★★★, Victim Of Circumstance (Linn 1991)★★★★, Eye Witness (Linn 1991)★★★, Return Journey (Linn 1993)★★★, with Barnes Like Minds (Fret 1993)★★★, 12th Of The 12th (Candid 1997)★★★.

Newton, Frankie

b. 4 January 1906, Emory, Virginia, USA, d. 11 March 1954. In the late 20s and early 30s Newton played trumpet in a number of leading New York bands, including those led by Charlie 'Fess' Johnson, Sam Wooding and Chick Webb. He later joined Charlie Barnet and was briefly with Andy Kirk. The 40s saw him playing in various bands on the verge of the big time, including those led by Lucky Millinder and Pete Brown. Apparently without direction, his career drifted and he worked mostly in clubs in New York and Boston, sometimes in company with James P. Johnson, 'Big' Sid Catlett and Edmond Hall. By the 50s he was playing only rarely. A gifted player with a full, burnished sound, Newton was especially attuned to the needs of singers and played on a number of memorable vocal recordings, including Bessie Smith's last date, plus Maxine Sullivan's 'Loch Lomond', and Billie Holiday's 'Strange Fruit' session. Newton's briefly shining talent promised much, but his lack of ambition steadfastly countered any chance of popular success. However, the easy-going life he led was perhaps what he really wanted.

● COMPILATIONS: At The Onyx Club 1937-1939 (Tax 1987)★★★, Frankie's Jump (Affinity 1993)★★★★.

Newton, James

b. 1 May 1953, Los Angeles, California, USA. Already playing a host of reed instruments, Newton took up the flute when he was 17 years old. After three years in Stanley Crouch's Black Music Infinity (1972-75), Newton move to New York in 1978. By now working only on flute, he led groups with Anthony Davis, an important association which continues. As well as experimenting with unusual flute techniques found in modern classical music, Newton has developed the art of humming and playing simultaneously to the degree of producing contrapuntal lines. He has recorded consistently.

● ALBUMS: Hidden Voices (1979)★★★, Binu (1979)★★★, Axum (ECM 1981)★★★★, James Newton (Gramavision 1983)★★★, Luella (Gramavision 1984)★★★★, African Flower (1986)★★★, Water Mystery (Gramavision 1985)★★★, Echo Canyon (1987)★★★, Romance And Revolution (1987)★★★, In Venice (1988)★★, Suite For Frida Kahlo (Audioquest 1995)★★★.

Newton, Juice

b. Judy Kaye Cohen, 18 February 1952, Lakehurst, New Jersey, USA. This singing daughter from a military family spent most of her childhood in Virginia. While completing a formal education in California, she fronted Dixie Peach, a country rock combo that was renamed Silver Spur for their RCA albums in the mid-70s. Despite assistance from top Los Angeles session musicians, immediate solo success was dogged by Bonnie Tyler's version of 'It's A Heartache' eclipsing Newton's own, though she gained a US country hit by proxy when the Carpenters covered her self-composed 'Sweet Sweet Smile' in 1978. Two years later, she arrived in Billboard's Top 5 with a revival of Chip Taylor's 'Angel Of The Morning' (her only UK hit) and then 'Queen Of Hearts' (also a hit for Dave Edmunds), while the Juice album containing both peaked at number 22. She enjoyed more hits in the pop charts with 'Love's Been A Little Hard On Me', Quiet Lies and a 1983 overhaul of the Zombies' 'Tell Her No', but it was the country market that came to provide the bulk of her success. After an encouraging response when she performed 'The Sweetest Thing I've Ever Known' at 1981's annual Country Radio Seminar, this old Silver Spur track was remixed for a single to become a country number 1 the following year. Other genre successes included a reworking of Brenda Lee's 'Break It To Me Gently', Dave Loggins' 'You Make Me Want To Make You Mine', 'Hurt' and a duet with Eddie Rabbitt, 'Born To Each Other'. She later married polo star Tom Goodspeed and concentrated on the nightclub circuit.

● ALBUMS: with Silver Spur Juice Newton And Silver Spur (RCA 1975)★★★, with Silver Spur After The Dust Settles (RCA 1977)★★★, with Silver Spur Come To Me (Capitol 1977)★★, Well Kept Secret (Capitol 1978)★★★, Take A Heart (Capitol 1979)★★★, Juice (Capitol 1981)★★★★, Quiet Lies (Capitol 1982)★★★, Dirty Looks (Capitol 1983)★★★, Can't Wait All Night (RCA 1984)★★★, Old Flame (RCA 1986)★★★, Emotion (RCA 1987)★★★, Ain't Gonna Cry (RCA 1989)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Collection (EMI 1983)★★★, Greatest Hits (Capitol 1984)★★★★, Greatest Country Hits (Curb 1990)★★★.

Newton, Wayne

b. 3 April 1942, Roanoke, Virginia, USA. Newton began his singing career as a child and later became the most popular and highest-paid star on the Las Vegas nightclub circuit. Inspired by a visit to the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Newton's first professional singing engagement came at the age of six, when he was paid $5 for a performance. His family relocated to Phoenix, Arizona a few years later, where he learnt to play several instruments, including guitar and piano. He and his brother, Jerry, became a duo and by his early teens Wayne had landed his own television programme on station KOOL in Phoenix. At the age of 16, when the brothers were offered a five-year booking in Las Vegas, the family moved there. The Newton Brothers recorded one single for Capitol Records in 1959, 'The Real Thing'/'I Spy', before recording several singles for the small George Records. In 1962 they were heard by television star Jackie Gleason, who booked them on his programme in September. Wayne was clearly emerging as the star of the act, and brother Jerry dropped out in 1963. By this time he had signed a music publishing contract with Bobby Darin's TM Music and returned to Capitol Records; Darin also oversaw the production of most of Newton's early Capitol recordings. Singing in a Las Vegas-lounge-lizard style, with minor traces of 'safe' rock, Newton's first single to chart was 'Heart (I Hear You Beating)', in 1963. 'Danke Schoen', co-written by Bert Kaempfert, followed and became a Newton trademark which he performed throughout his entire career. Newton's first album, sharing the single's title, was released in the autumn of 1963 and reached number 55. One notable early single was 1965's 'Comin' On Too Strong', co-written by Gary Usher, who had written some music for the Beach Boys. The song included Bruce Johnston on backing vocals (along with arranger Terry Melcher). Newton continued to record for Capitol until 1967, when he briefly switched to MGM Records before returning to Capitol one last time in 1970. He then proceeded to Chelsea Records, for which he recorded his biggest hit, the number 4 single 'Daddy Don't You Walk So Fast', in 1972. He also charted twice, in 1979 and 1980, on the Aries II label. His total number of chart singles was 17, and 10 albums charted as well, but it became apparent by the 70s that Newton's strength was in his concert performances in Las Vegas. He not only commanded higher fees for those concerts than any other performer - reportedly $1 million per month - but invested in hotels in that city, becoming wealthy in the process. Newton has also made some nominal film appearances, including the 1990 The Adventures Of Ford Fairlane.

● ALBUMS: Danke Schoen (Capitol 1963)★★, Sings Hit Songs (Capitol 1964)★★, In Person (Capitol 1964)★★, Red Roses For A Blue Lady (Capitol 1965)★★★, Summer Wind (Capitol 1965)★★, Wayne Newton - Now! (Capitol 1966)★★, Old Rugged Cross (Capitol 1966)★★, It's Only The Good Times (Capitol 1967)★★, Walking On New Grass (MGM 1968)★★, One More Time (MGM 1968)★★, Daddy Don't You Walk So Fast (Chelsea 1972)★★, Can't You Hear The Song (Chelsea 1972)★★, While We're Still Young (1973)★★, The Best Of Wayne Newton - Live (1989)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Wayne Newton (Capitol 1967)★★.

Newton-John, Olivia

b. 26 September 1948, Cambridge, England. Her showbusiness career began when she won a local contest to find 'the girl who looked most like Hayley Mills' in 1960 after the Newton-Johns had emigrated to Australia. Later she formed the Sol Four with schoolfriends. Though this vocal group disbanded, the encouragement of customers who heard her sing solo in a cafe led her to enter - and win - a television talent show. The prize was a 1966 holiday in London during which she recorded her debut single, Jackie DeShannon's 'Till You Say You'll Be Mine' after a stint in a duo with Pat Carroll. Staying on in England, Olivia became part of Toomorrow, a group created by bubblegum-pop potentate Don Kirshner, to fill the gap in the market left by the disbanded Monkees (not to be confused with Tomorrow). As well as a science-fiction movie and its soundtrack, Toomorrow was also responsible for 'I Could Never Live Without Your Love,' a 1970 single, produced by the Shadows' Bruce Welch - with whom Olivia was romantically linked. Although Toomorrow petered out, Newton-John's link with Cliff Richard and the Shadows was a source of enduring professional benefit. A role in a Richard movie, tours as special guest in The Cliff Richard Show, and a residency - as a comedienne as well as singer - on BBC Television's It's Cliff! guaranteed steady sales of her first album, and the start of a patchy British chart career with a Top 10 arrangement of Bob Dylan's 'If Not For You' in 1971. More typical of her output were singles such as 'Take Me Home Country Roads', penned by John Denver, 'Banks Of The Ohio' and, from the late John Rostill of the Shadows, 1973's 'Let Me Be There'. This last release was sparked off by an appearance on the USA's The Dean Martin Show and crossed from the US country charts to the Hot 100, winning her a controversial Grammy for Best Female Country Vocal. After an uneasy performance in 1974's Eurovision Song Contest, Newton-John became omnipresent in North America, first as its most popular country artist, though her standing in pop improved considerably after a chart-topper with 'I Honestly Love You,' produced by John Farrar, another latter-day Shadow (and husband of the earlier-mentioned Pat Carroll), who had assumed the task after the estrangement of Olivia and Bruce. Newton-John also became renowned for her duets with other artists, notably in the movie of the musical Grease in which she and co-star John Travolta performed 'You're The One That I Want'. This irresistibly effervescent song became one of the most successful UK hit singles in pop history, topping the charts for a stupendous nine weeks. The follow-up, 'Summer Nights' was also a UK number 1 in 1978. 'Xanadu', with the Electric Light Orchestra, the title song of a film in which she starred, was another global number 1. However, not such a money-spinner was a further cinema venture with Travolta (1983's 'Two Of A Kind'). Neither was 'After Dark', a single with the late Andy Gibb in 1980, nor Now Voyager, a 1984 album with his brother Barry. With singles such as 'Physical' (1981) and the 1986 album Soul Kiss on Mercury Records she adopted a more raunchy image in place of her original perky wholesomeness. During the late 80s/early 90s much of her time was spent, along with Pat (Carroll) Farrar, running her Australian-styled clothing business, Blue Koala. Following The Rumour, Newton-John signed to Geffen for the release of a collection of children's songs and rhymes, Warm And Tender. The award of an OBE preceded her marriage to actor and dancer Matt Lattanzi. She remains a showbusiness evergreen, although her life was clouded in 1992 when her fashion empire crashed, and it was announced that she was undergoing treatment for cancer. She subsequently revealed that she had won her battle with the disease, and in 1994 released an album that she had written, produced and paid for herself. At the same time, it was estimated that in a career spanning nearly 30 years, she has sold more than 50 million records worldwide. After a lengthy gap she returned to recording in 1998 with a country album, Back With A Heart.

● ALBUMS: If Not For You (Pye 1971)★★★, Let Me Be There (MCA 1973)★★★, Olivia Newton-John (1973)★★, If You Love Me Let Me Know (MCA 1974)★★★, Music Makes My Day (Pye 1974)★★, Long Live Love (1974)★★, Have You Never Been Mellow? (MCA 1975)★★★, Clearly Love (MCA 1975)★★, Come On Over (MCA 1976)★★, Don't Stop Believin' (MCA 1976)★★, Making A Good Thing Better (MCA 1977)★★, with various artists Grease film soundtrack (1978)★★★★, Totally Hot (MCA 1978)★★★, with Electric Light Orchestra Xanadu film soundtrack (MCA 1980)★★, Physical (MCA 1981)★★★, with various artists Two Of A Kind film soundtrack (1983)★★, Soul Kiss (MCA 1986)★★, The Rumour (MCA 1988)★★, Warm And Tender (Geffen 1990)★★, Gaia: One Woman's Journey (1994)★★, Back With A Heart (MCA 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Olivia Newton-John's Greatest Hits (MCA 1977)★★★, Greatest Hits i, (EMI 1978)★★★, Olivia's Greatest Hits, Volume 2 (MCA 1982)★★, Greatest Hits ii, (EMI 1982)★★, Back To Basics: The Essential Collection 1971-1992 (Phonogram 1992)★★★, Country Girl (EMI 1998)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Physical (PMI 1984), Live: Olivia Newton-John (Channel 5 1986), Down Under (Channel 5 1989), Soul Kiss (Spectrum 1989).

● FURTHER READING: Olivia Newton-John: Sunshine Supergirl, Linda Jacobs. Olivia Newton-John, Peter Ruff.

● FILMS: Grease (1978), Xanadu (1980), Two Of A Kind (1983).

Newtown Neurotics

Formed in the English post-war 'new town' of Harlow, Essex, the Newtown Neurotics produced a fine blend of pop and punk rock with a strong left-wing political slant. Formed in the spring of 1978, the group comprised Steve Drewett (vocals, guitars), Colin Dredd (bass, vocals) and Tiggy Barber (drums). 'Hypocrite' (1979) and 'When The Oil Runs Out' (1980) appeared on their own No Wonder label, after which Barber was replaced by Simon Lomond. The Neurotics became increasingly involved in the agit-pop and ranting poetry scenes throughout the 80s, regularly playing at benefit concerts and festivals with the likes of Attila The Stockbroker. The strong socialist rhetoric was apparent on their third single on the short-lived but impressive CNT label, 'Kick Out The Tories', in May 1982, followed in December by an attack on Britain's 'Licensing Hours'. When CNT folded, the Newtown Neurotics moved to Razor Records for their debut album. Beggars Can Be Choosers was an entertaining yet pertinent mix of scathing observation and new wave power and was promoted on single by a cover version of the Ramones' 'Blitzkrieg Bop'. In November 1984 the band moved back to their No Wonder label for 'Suzie Is A Heartbreaker' (again hinting at a Ramones connection), before the Neurotics dropped the 'Newtown' from their name, signing to Jungle Records in the process. The first fruits of this contract emerged as Repercussions in 1985, showcasing a group that had lost none of its musical vigour or political evangelism. 'Living With Unemployment' followed in 1986 (with the help of ranting comedian Porky The Poet and the rumbustious Attila), preceding Kickstarting A Backfiring Nation. The Neurotics turned up occasionally during the late 80s (with Is Your Washroom Breeding Bolsheviks?) while the new decade was celebrated with 45 Revolutions Per Minute, a singles compilation of the band's 'twelve blazing rock anthems' from 1979-84. The band had actually broken up in October 1988 when bassist Colin Dredd contracted pleurisy, going on to play a series of astonishing farewell shows in Harlow with a stand-in bass player. Drewett and Mac went on to form the Unstoppable Beat.

● ALBUMS: Beggars Can Be Choosers (Razor 1983)★★★. As the Neurotics Repercussions (Jungle 1985)★★★, Kickstarting A Backfiring Nation (Jungle 1986)★★★, Is Your Washroom Breeding Bolsheviks? (Jungle 1988)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 45 Revolutions Per Minute: Singles 1979 - 1984 (Jungle 1990)★★★.

Next Step Up

Formed in 1991 in Baltimore, Maryland, USA, by Mike Ayres (guitar) and Aaron Martinek (bass, ex-Corrupted), Next Step Up experimented with numerous musicians before eventually settling on a line-up of Damon Stowell (drums, ex-Premonition), J.R. Glass (vocals) and Jon Sampson (bass). Sampson joined after Martinek had vacated his position immediately following sessions for their Fall From Grace album. Their gruff, intense combination of doom metal and hardcore had previously been documented on several compilations, an EP, Intent To Kill, and their debut album, Heavy. However, neither this nor the subsequent Fall From Grace offered anything of significant musical vitality, despite the production assistance of Drew Mazurek (Corrosion Of Conformity).

● ALBUMS: Heavy (Shadow 1993)★★, Fall From Grace (Gain Ground 1995)★★.

Nexus 21

Namely, Mark Archer and Chris Peat, more famous (in some quarters) for their work as Altern 8. They began their career as Nexus 21 - their 'core' project - with the 'Still Life' 12-inch for Blue Cat in September 1989, following it a few months later with 'Rhythm Of Life', this time for Blue Chip. After a 12-inch promo, 'Self-Hypnosis', they delivered Logical Progression in October 1990 on R&S, a second EP, Progressive Logic, following two months later. The duo have also released two singles ('Another Night' and 'Flutes') under the name C&M Connection. Archer has also recorded solo for the Stafford North Imprint as DJ Nex (The DJ Nex and Poundstretcher EPs) and Xen Mantra (The Midas EP). In 1994 he formed Slo-Moshun with Danny Taurus, scoring immediately with the Top 30 'Bells Of New York' cut.

NG La Banda

Their name standing for 'new generation - the band', this Cuban group, who have helped move the island's music away from its traditional grounding in salsa, were founded by musical director José Luis 'Chico' Cortés in 1988. A composer, singer and flautist, in the 70s he was previously a member of premier Cuban dance band Los Van Van, subsequently forming Irakere. Most of NG's members were also experienced musicians, Cortés stating that 'new generation' referred to their intended audience: 'I'd say our music is fusion, we're not a salsa band proper, and the amazing thing is that even though our arrangements are really complicated, it's the young kids who most love our music.' The group numbers between 13 and 17 when on stage, including two keyboard players, five horns, bass and three singers, plus various percussionists. Dressed in bright colours and featuring explosive, choreographed dance routines, they communicate directly with their audience by incorporating a series of slang terms and sayings adopted from the barrios. Their championing of the 'outsider' has brought them into theoretical conflict with the state, even though the group members all support the aims of the Communist revolution. They have become hugely popular in the process, with their January 1993 album, Echale Limón, rocketing to the top of the Cuban charts and remaining there for several months. Its title translates strictly as 'Put lemon on it', but in this context it is a Cuban slang euphemism for 'What the hell'. It was recorded in Japan, while further evidence of their international appeal came from Mexico, where a nightclub in Cancun was named after one of their songs.

● ALBUMS: En La Calle (Qbadisc 1991)★★★★, Echale Limón (1993)★★★★.

Ngonda, Wally

Formerly the guitarist (and latter-day leader) of Zairean rumba group Anti-Choc, Wally Ngonda released his first solo album in 1995. This returned to the roots of African rumba, though its modern recording and presentation gave the songs a more reflective air. Featuring additional guitar playing from Azulino and guest vocals from Sam Mangwana on the title track, elsewhere Ngonda himself dominated proceedings. The rhythms remained as infectious as they had been with Anti-Choc, but the sombre delivery and space within the recordings greatly enhanced its impact.

● ALBUMS: Mody (Stern's 1995)★★★.

Ní Chathasaigh, Máire

b. Eire. Ní Chathasaigh is one of the British Isles' leading harp players. She learned the instrument during the 70s and also learnt to play piano, tin-whistle and fiddle. She later graduated from University College, Cork with a BA Honours degree in Celtic studies. She followed this by winning the All-Ireland and Pan-Celtic Harp Competitions on a number of occasions. She then gave concert performances, as well as masterclasses, in Europe, the USA and Australia, and turned professional in 1981. In 1985 Máire became the first harpist to produce an album comprised mainly of Irish traditional dance music, The New Strung Harp. Teaming up with guitarist Chris Newman has added a new dimension to the playing, and taken it out of the purely folk tag, by including elements of rock, jazz, and bluegrass. As its title implies, The Carolan Album is devoted to the work of the blind Irish harpist and composer, Turlough O'Carolan. Newman and Ní Chathasaigh are joined on the album by musicians of the calibre of Danny Thompson, and Liam O'Flynn. Having recorded three albums with Newman, and secured an international reputation for concert performances, Ní Chathasaigh produced The Irish Harper, a book of her own arrangements, in 1991. In 1993 she represented Ireland at the World Harp Congress held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

● ALBUMS: The New Strung Harp (1985)★★★★. Máire and Chris: The Living Wood (1988)★★★, The Carolan Album (1991)★★★★, Out Of Court (1991)★★★, with Joe Burke The Tailor's Choice (1993)★★★, Live In The Highlands (Old Bridge Music 1995)★★.

● FURTHER READING: The Irish Harper, Máire Ní Chathasaigh.

Niagara

This melodic rock group was formed in Madrid, Spain, during 1987 by Angel Arias (bass) and V. M. Arias (guitar). The line-up was completed with the addition of Tony Cuevas (lead vocals), Joey Martos (drums) and Ricky Castaneda (keyboards). Using English lyrics and concentrating on a style that embodied elements of Europe and Whitesnake, they built up a sizeable following on the European heavy rock scene. Produced by Baron Rojo guitarist Carlos de Castro, Now Or Never was an impressive debut that featured abrasive guitarwork, coupled with razor-sharp arrangements.

● ALBUMS: Now Or Never (Avispa 1988)★★★★.

Nice

Originally the back-up band to soul singer P.P. Arnold, the Nice became one of the true originators of what has variously been described as pomp-rock, art-rock and classical-rock. The band comprised Keith Emerson (b. 1 November 1944, Todmorden, Yorkshire, England; keyboards), Brian 'Blinky' Davison (b. 25 May 1942, Leicester, England; drums), Lee Jackson (b. 8 January 1943, Newcastle-Upon-Tyne, England; bass, vocals) and David O'List (b. 13 December 1948, Chiswick, London, England; guitar). After leaving Arnold in October 1967 the Nice quickly built a reputation as one of the most visually exciting bands. Emerson's stage act involved, in true circus style, throwing knives into his Hammond Organ, which would emit outrageous sounds, much to the delight of the audience. Their debut, The Thoughts Of Emerlist Davjack, while competent, came nowhere near reproducing their exciting live sound. By the time of the release of its follow-up, Ars Longa Vita Brevis, O'List had departed, being unable to compete with Emerson's showmanship and subsequently joined Roxy Music. The album contained their notorious single, 'America', from West Side Story. During one performance at London's Royal Albert Hall, they burnt the American flag on stage and were severely lambasted, not only by the Albert Hall authorities, but also by the song's composer, Leonard Bernstein. The band continued their remaining life as a trio, producing their most satisfying and successful work. Both Nice and Five Bridges Suite narrowly missed the top of the UK charts, although they were unable to break through in the USA. The former contained an excellent reading of Tim Hardin's 'Hang On To A Dream', with exquisite piano from Emerson. The latter was a bold semi-orchestral suite about working-class life in Newcastle-upon-Tyne. One of their other showpieces was an elongated version of Bob Dylan's 'She Belongs To Me'. Five Bridges also contained versions of 'Intermezzo From The Karelia Suite' by Sibelius and Tchaikovsky's 'Pathetique'. Their brave attempt at fusing classical music and rock together with the Sinfonia of London was admirable, and much of what Emerson later achieved with the huge success of Emerson, Lake And Palmer should be credited to the brief but valuable career of the Nice. With Emerson's departure, Jackson floundered with Jackson Heights, while Davison was unsuccessful with his own band, Every Which Way. Jackson and Davison teamed up again in 1974 to form the ill-fated Refugee.

● ALBUMS: The Thoughts Of Emerlist Davjack (Immediate 1967)★★★, Ars Longa Vita Brevis (Immediate 1968)★★★, Nice (Immediate 1969)★★★★, Five Bridges (Charisma 1970)★★★★, Elegy (Charisma 1971)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Autumn 76 - Spring 68 (1972)★★★, 20th Anniversary Release (1987)★★★, The Best Of the Nice (Essential 1998)★★★★.

Nice 'n' Easy - Frank Sinatra

The perfect Sinatra album, which bridged both swing and gentle ballads, and yet another successful collaboration with Nelson Riddle and producer David Cavanaugh at Capitol Records. It is remarkable that ol' Blue Eyes continued to find exquisite songs to fill an album and not have to resort to any fillers that might have occurred when deadlines loomed. The title track sets the mood and he tackles 'Fools Rush In', 'Try A Little Tenderness' and Johnny Mercer's 'Dream'. Many of these songs were previously recorded when Sinatra was with Columbia as he prepared to depart for his own company Reprise.

- Tracks: Nice 'n' Easy; That Old Feeling; How Deep Is The Ocean; I've Got A Crush On You; You Go To My Head; Fools Rush In; Nevertheless (I'm In Love With You); She's Funny That Way; Try A Little Tenderness; Embraceable You; Mam'selle; Dream.
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: 1

Nice And Nasty Three

As hip-hop began to enter the mainstream in the early 80s, there were many businessmen from the black community, whose previous association with music had been in R&B and soul, prepared to take advantage. One such was Danny Robinson, just as had his brother Bobby at Enjoy Records. He reopened his Holiday label to record the Nice And Nasty Three's 'Ultimate Rap' in 1980. He had previously enjoyed success on the imprint with the Bop Chords and others. The Nice And Nasty single, however, proved to be one of the rap's earliest aesthetic victories, though it was never followed-up.

Nice And Smooth

Based in New York City, Gregg Nice (b. Greg Mays) and Smooth Bee (b. Daryl Barnes) emerged in the late 80s with an album for independent concern Fresh Records, a matter of weeks before the label closed its doors. Their self-titled album did emerge, however, as did the two singles it yielded, 'More & More Hits' and 'Funky For You'. They switched to Def Jam for an album and hit single, 'Sometimes I Rhyme Slow', which made US number 44. Album tracks like 'Hip Hop Junkies' suggested they were authentic converts to the history of the movement, and indeed they spanned several of its styles and lyrical concerns. For their second collection they enlisted the help of some of rap and dance music's biggest heavyweights: Bobby Brown ('Return Of The Hip Hop Freaks'), Slick Rick ('Let's All Get Down'), Everlast ('Save The Children') and Jo Jo Hailey of Jodeci ('Cheri'). The duo had been trying to arrange a collaboration with Brown for some time, Barnes having previously written lyrics for his King Of Stage album, singing back-up vocals on tours by the latter and New Edition. Despite the supporting cast it was a set that maintained Nice And Smooth's traditions of deep funk and lyrical pyrotechnics.

- ALBUMS: Nice & Smooth (Fresh 1989)★★★, Ain't A Damn Thing Changed (Def Jam 1991)★★★★, The Jewel Of The Nile (Def Jam 1994)★★★.

Nice Enough To . . . Join In - Various

The Rock Machine, released by CBS in 1968, redefined the notion of the pop sampler. Part primer, part manifesto, several such collections assumed a significance outside commercial expediency thanks to the excellence of its content. Two further samplers are now combined on CD as Nice Enough To . . . Join In , drawn from the Island label's roster, including Jethro Tull, Free, and Spooky Tooth. It spans progressive rock, folk, blues and pop, contrasting elements held together by the high quality of the acts on offer. Established names were set beside new signings and successful samplers naturally promoted further purchases of the artists on display. This particular set fulfilled that purpose, but the care lavished upon its content also provides an aesthetic enjoyment. (Nice Enough To Eat and You Can All Join In.)

- Tracks: A Song For Jeffrey; Sunshine Help Me; I'm A Mover; What's That Sound; Pearly Queen; You Can All Join In; Meet On The Ledge; Rainbow Chaser; Dusty; I;ll Go Girl; Somebody Help Me; Gasoline Alley; Sing A Song That I Know; Forty Thousand Headmen; Time Has Told Me; Gunganai; Strangely Strange But Oddly Normal; At The Crossroads; Better By You Better Than Me; Woman; I Keep Singing That Same Old Song.
- First released 1992
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Nice Jazz Festival

The first jazz festival held in Nice, in the south of France, took place in 1948, when it was headlined by Louis Armstrong. Although it was in some ways the touch-paper that lit the fire of enthusiasm for jazz festivals, it was not until 1974 that the Nice Jazz Festival became a regular and important event on the international jazz calendar. Today the Grande Parade du Jazz, held in July at the Jardins des Arénes de Cimiez, and presented by George Wein, is a major event attracting audiences approaching 75,000. It also draws leading artists from the USA, UK and the rest of the world.

Niche, Grupo

Emanating from Cali, Colombia, Grupo Niche are led by Jairo Varela, whose many roles include: composer, arranger, musical director, vocalist and percussionist. They made their recording debut in 1981 with Querer Es Poder. Tomek (the UK salsa broadcaster) reviewed the impact of the band's first decade: 'Who would have said barely 10 years ago that there would be half a dozen salsa bands in Colombia challenging the very best from Puerto Rico and New York? If one man can be responsible, it is Jairo Varela, whose body of work with Niche is the single most impressive songwriting and arranging achievement in salsa during the 80s. A musical illiterate, he has developed his own, inimitable sound by sheer talent. Others have had to transcribe his brilliant ideas. Many of the original Niche were related to the musicians in and took inspiration from Combo Vacana, the seminal Colombian coastal band of the 60s. Fittingly Niche's own achievements have fuelled the current salsa boom in Colombia'. For their albums between 1981 and 1986, Niche's salsa orquesta instrumentation included a front-line of saxophone, flute, two or three trumpets and one or two trombones, a rhythm section (timbales, conga, bongo, güiro, maracas, bass, piano) and voices (lead and chorus). On the first two albums, Varela and trombonist Alexis Lozano shared musical direction and arranging chores. Querer Es Poder featured a trio of lead singers: Alvaro del Castillo, Homer 'Tuto' Jiménez and La Coco Lozano (Alexis's sister). Tuto and La Coco departed. Oscar Alberto Abueta shared lead vocals with del Castillo on the 1982 follow-up Preparate...Grupo Niche Vol.2. Abueta left and relocated to Miami (see Alberto 'El Conejo' Barros). Tuto returned to replace him on 1983's Niche (aka Directo Desde New York). Tres, a Cuban six or nine-string guitar, was added to the band. Varela became the sole musical director on Niche and remained so on the following six albums released between 1984 and 1988. Lozano played trombone and co-arranged (with Varela) on the record; he departed to found and lead Orquesta Guayacán, whose releases include: Llego La Hora De La Verdad (1986), Que La Sangre Alborota (1987), Guayacán Es La Orquesta (1988), La Mas Bella (1990), 5 Años: Aferrados Al Sabor (1991). After Niche, del Castillo left to record as a solo artist, releasing Al Puerto (1985), Llegamos! (1986), Bueno Y Más! (1987), Que Se Aguante El Mundo (1991). Tuto also departed and appeared on the 1987 and 1988 albums by La Cali Charanga. Moncho Santana sang lead vocals on No Hay Quinto Malo (1984) and Se Pasó! (1985, aka Triunfo); the former contained Niche's anthem 'Cali Pachanguero' (Partying Cali). Varela's arrangements were transcribed by pianist and founder member, Nicolás Cristancho 'Macabí', on both albums. Alberto Barros played trombone and shared the task of transcription with Macabí on Se Pasó! and Me Huele A Matrimonio (1986). Santana left after Se Pasó! and recorded with Grupo Star and Manuel Bravo y su Orquesta Palenque (Salsa Felina, 1988), before making his solo debut with Aqui Estoy! in 1990. Puerto Rican Tito Gómez (see Papo Lucca, Ray Barretto and Nati) joined Niche as co-lead singer on Me Huele A Matrimonio. Niche and Gómez's voice, with its melancholic catch, blended splendidly. Macabí left after 1986's Grupo Niche Con Cuerdas to become a regular accompanist with Alberto Barros's Los Titanes as well as a busy session musician. He was replaced by Alvaro Cabarcas 'Pelusa' on the double Historia Musical in 1987, which contained re-recordings and re-arrangements of songs from Niche's previous albums. Sadly, Varela dropped saxophone and flute from the line-up on this and further albums. Venezuelan César Monge, former musical director, arranger and trombonist with Dimensión Latina, was hired to play and transcribe for the rejigged Niche, which sported a front-line of two trombones and two trumpets only. Most of the band split from Varela after Historia Musical and adopted the name Orquesta Internacional Los Niches, with trumpeter Fabio Espinoza Jnr. as their musical director. They made their UK debut in 1988 with Moncho Santana on lead vocals. Young pianist, arranger and composer Danilo 'Danny' Rosales handled Tocando Madera's production, and contributed arrangements and songs; he worked on albums by other bands, including Grupo Contraste, Hermes Manyoma y su Orquesta La Ley, La Gran Banda Caleña, Formula 8 and La Octava Dimensión. Rosales leads Grupo Changó, for which he and his bassist/arranger/composer brother, Ricardo, share the role of musical director; the band's releases include: Con Todo! (1988) and Sensaciones En Salsa (1990). In 1990 Los Niches issued Salsa Por Siempre. Varela continued with the name Grupo Niche and substantially new personnel. Gómez, Monge and Cabarcas were the only pre-split members who remained with him on 1988's Tapando El Hueco, which was up to Varela's usual high creative and imaginative standard. The Miami recorded album featured veteran Cuban bassist Israel 'Cachao' López and Colombians Diego Galé, percussion, and trombonist Morist Jiménez, who played alongside Monge in the horn section of three trombones and one trumpet. Tres was dropped from the line-up. Multi-talented Galé sessions extensively; he acted as musical director on Grupo Caneo's debut Ella (1989), and now leads his own band, Grupo Galé, whose releases include: Frivolo (1989) and Nuestra Salsa (1990). Jiménez shared direction with Varela and played all three parts in the trombone only front-line on the slightly disappointing Sutil Y Contundente in 1989. Javier Vásquez (not to be confused with the veteran Cuban bandleader, pianist and arranger Javier Vázquez) joined Gómez and Varela as a lead singer on the album. Varela and Grupo Niche, featuring Gómez and Jiménez, made their UK debut in October 1989. Jiménez departed; he sessions widely and released the solo Espectacular in 1989. Gómez left and Vásquez was joined by co-lead vocalists Charlie Cardona and Ricardo Valdez (who doubled on synthesizer) on 1990's Cielo De Tambores, recorded in Varela's own Niche Professional Studios in Cali.y confirmed Varela's status. Trombonist/bassist/arranger/vocalist Andrés Viáfara, who played on Historia Musical and was amongst those who defected to Los Niches, came back to co-arrange and co-direct with Varela. Viáfara, who also worked in Alvaro del Castillo's Orquesta La Calentura and with José Harbey Caicedo, played alongside Monge in the brass section of three trombones and two trumpets. Varela delegated the writing of two arrangements to New York arranger, producer and keyboardist Sergio George. Tito Gómez returned to Puerto Rico where he recorded the solo Un Nuevo Horizonte (1991). The album was a Top 10 hit in the Billboard tropical/salsa chart and contained the Puerto Rican number 1 hit single 'Dejala', on which Gómez sang a duet with salsa romántica star Tito Rojas. By way of belated recognition of Colombian salsa's growing popularity by the traditionally New York and Puerto Rico-dominated US salsa industry, Niche, along with their compatriot Joe Arroyo, were included on the bill of the 14th annual New York Salsa Festival in 1989, 1990 and 1991.

● ALBUMS: Querer Es Poder (1981)★★★, Preparate...Grupo Niche Vol.2 (1982)★★★, Niche (1983)★★★★, aka Directo Desde New York), No Hay Quinto Malo (1984)★★★, Se Pasó! (1985)★★★, aka Triunfo), Me Huele A Matrimonio (1986)★★★, Grupo Niche Con Cuerdas (1986)★★★, Historia Musical (1987)★★★, Tapando El Hueco (1988)★★★★, Sutil Y Contundente (1989)★★★, Cielo De Tambores (1990)★★★. Numerous compilations are available.

Nicholas Brothers

Fayard Nicholas (b. *c.*1918) and Harold Nicholas (b. *c.*1924), constituted what was, without a doubt, the most talented and spectacular power tap-dancing duo in the history of showbusiness. They grew up in Philadelphia where their parents played in the orchestra at the Standard Theatre, a vaudeville house for blacks. The brothers were soon in vaudeville themselves, billed initially as the Nicholas Kids. By 1932 they had graduated to the renowned Cotton Club in Harlem, where, for the next two years they delighted the all-white audiences and rubbed shoulders with great black entertainers such as Ethel Waters, Duke Ellington, and Cab Calloway. In 1936 the Nicholas Brothers made their Broadway debut with Bob Hope and Fanny Brice in Ziegfeld Follies, and also appeared in London in Lew Leslie's revue Blackbirds Of 1936. A year later they were back on Broadway in the Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart hit musical Babes In Arms. Their film career had begun in 1932 with two short films, Black Network and Pie Pie Blackbird (featuring Eubie Blake And His Band), and it continued via Calling All Stars (1936), and the Don Ameche-Betty Grable musical Down Argentine Way (1940), in which the brothers did a breathtaking dance to the lively number 'Down Argentina Way'. The sequence was choreographed by Nick Castle who worked with the duo on most of their subsequent pictures, and gained them a five year contract with 20th Century-Fox. During the rest of the 40s the Nicholas Brothers contributed some electrifying and superbly acrobatic dances to films such as Tin Pan Alley, The Great American Broadcast, Sun Valley Serenade, Orchestra Wives, Stormy Weather, and The Pirate (1948). In 1946 they both starred in the Broadway musical St. Louis Woman in which Harold introduced Harold Arlen and Johnny Mercer's appealing 'Ridin' On The Moon' and (with Ruby Hill) the all-time standard, 'Come Rain Or Come Shine'. Of course, as blacks, in films they were only allowed to be a speciality act and were never considered for leading roles. This is apparently one of the main reasons why, in the 50s, they worked in Europe for several years where audiences and managements were more racially tolerant. When Fayard decided to return to the USA, Harold stayed in France and carved out a solo career for himself there. After seven years they were reunited in America and played in nightclubs and on television until Fayard contracted arthritis and underwent two hip-replacement operations. Harold continued as a solo performer and was top-billed in the musical Back In The Big Time (1986). Fayard was still active in non-performing areas of the business and won a Tony Award when he co-choreographed the 1989 Broadway musical Black And Blue, with Cholly Atkins, Henry LeTang and Frank Manning. In 1991 the Nicholas Brothers received Kennedy Center Honours for their outstanding work over a period of more than 60 years. A year later, a documentary film We Sing & We Dance, celebrated their wonderful careers and included tributes from Mikhail Baryshnikov, Gregory Hines, M.C. Hammer, and Clarke Peters. In 1994, members of the cast of Hot Shoe Shuffle, London's 'New Tap Musical', also paid tribute to their 'inspiration' - the Nicholas Brothers.

Nicholas, 'Wooden' Joe

b. 23 September 1883, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 17 November 1957. A well-known figure in his native city, Nicholas started out on clarinet but took up the cornet under the influence of Buddy Bolden and Joe 'King' Oliver. He worked in marching bands, forming his own, the Camelia Band, in 1918. A powerful player with an earthy, basic style, Nicholas embodied the traditions of the music but never managed to achieve the panache of his idols and mentors. His nephew was the distinguished clarinettist Albert Nicholas.

● ALBUMS: with others Echoes From New Orleans (1945) (1988)★★★, Echoes From New Orleans Vol. 2 (1949-51) (1988)★★★.

Nicholas, Albert

b. 27 May 1900, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 3 September 1973. After taking lessons from Lorenzo Tio, the young Nicholas, a nephew of 'Wooden' Joe Nicholas, played the clarinet in bands led by several of his home town's leading musicians, who included Buddy Petit, Joe 'King' Oliver and Manuel Perez. Service in the US Navy during World War I interrupted his career, but after the war he returned to working in various New Orleans-based bands, some of which he led. Late in 1924 he joined Oliver in Chicago, leaving again in the autumn of 1926 to work in Shanghai, China. On the way back home he played in Cairo, Egypt, and Paris, France. Back in the USA at the end of 1928 he joined Luis Russell for a five-year stint. He then played with Chick Webb, Sam Wooding, John Kirby, Louis Armstrong, Zutty Singleton and others, mostly in and around New York. In the early 40s he dropped out of music, but returned in mid-decade to work with Bunk Johnson, Kid Ory and others who were benefiting from the resurgence of interest in traditional jazz. In the early 50s he toured Europe, settling in France for the rest of his life, making occasional trips to the USA. One of the best of the New Orleans clarinettists, Nicholas played with a rich, full sound, favouring the chalumeau end of the instrument's range and liberally imbuing his solos with a strong feeling for the blues.

● ALBUMS: Albert Nicholas Quartet (1959)★★★, Tribute To Jelly Roll Morton (60s)★★, Memorial (60s)★★★, Albert Nicholas And The John Defferary Jazztet (60s)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Joe 'King' Oliver Snag It Vol. 1 (1926-27)★★★★, The Luis Russell Story (1929-30)★★★, with Jelly Roll Morton Last Band Dates (1940)★★★, with Baby Dodds Jazz A La Creole (1946)★★★.

Nicholas, Big Nick

b. George Walker Nicholas, 2 August 1922, Lansing, Michigan, USA, d. 29 October 1997. Nicholas took up the tenor saxophone during his teenage years, having earlier studied piano and clarinet. Among his teenage colleagues were Hank and Thad Jones. In the early 40s Nicholas worked in some well-known and important bands, including those led by Earl Hines and Tiny Bradshaw. He was also active in the early experimental days of bop, playing at Mintons. In the late 40s he played in the bands of Sabby Lewis and Lucky Millinder, and was a member of Dizzy Gillespie's big band, with which he recorded in 1947, soloing on 'Manteca'. In the 50s Nicholas played regularly in New York, often as leader of small groups, but by the end of the decade his career was in the doldrums, a situation that persisted through to the end of the 60s. In the early 70s he began attracting more attention both as a performer and teacher, and later began touring internationally, although it would be 1983 before he made his first album under his own name. Nicholas's later years were spent largely in and around New York, playing club engagements. Nicholas played with a warm, rich sound in which could be heard echoes of his admiration for Coleman Hawkins. He also composed, his best-known work being 'Big Nick', a tune recorded by John Coltrane on a 1962 album with Duke Ellington. Nicholas's few albums as leader, allied to occasional solo spots on records with Millinder, Gillespie, Oran 'Hot Lips' Page, with whom he had a long professional association in the late 40s and early 50s, show him to have been a player worthy of much greater prominence than was accorded him during his lifetime.

● ALBUMS: Big And Warm (India Navigation 1983)★★★, Big Nick (India Navigation 1984)★★★.

Nicholas, Paul

b. 3 December 1945, London, England. Actor/singer Nicholas served a musical apprenticeship as pianist with Screaming Lord Sutch And The Savages. Then known as Paul Dean, he embarked on a singing career in 1964, but later changed his name to Oscar when this venture proved unsuccessful. Despite access to exclusive songs by Pete Townshend ('Join My Gang') and David Bowie ('Over The Wall We Go' - a comment on a contemporary rash of prison outbreaks), this second appellation brought no commercial comfort. However, it was during this period that the artist began his long association with manager Robert Stigwood, and he developed a career in pop musicals, appearing in some of the best onstage productions of the era. His debut in the love/rock musical Hair was followed by Jesus Christ Superstar. He has appeared in several films, including Ken Russell's Lisztomania, and had a major role in the film Stardust (1974), starring David Essex. During the 80s and early 90s his stage appearances have included Cats, Blondel, Charlie Girl (1986 revival), Barnum, The Pirates Of Penzance, Jesus Christ Superstar (20th anniversary concert tour) and Singin' In The Rain (1995). Prior to all that Nicholas finally achieved pop single success with several disco-style numbers for Stigwood's RSO label. 'Dancing With The Captain' and 'Grandma's Party' reached the UK Top 10 in 1976, but his musical career increasingly took a subordinate role to thespian ambitions. Nicholas has since become a highly popular actor on television, performing light comedy and dramatic roles with confidence. One of his most fondly remembered performances was in the top-rated television series Just Good Friends, in which he co-starred with Jan Francis. In more recent years Nicholas has turned successfully to production, and he co-presented the smash hit West End revival of the musical Grease, which opened in 1993.

● ALBUMS: Paul Nicholas (1977)★★★, Just Good Friends (1986)★★★, That's Entertainment (1993)★★, Colours Of My Life (First Night 1994)★★★.

Nicholls, Horatio

(see Wright, Lawrence)

Nicholls, Sue

b. Susan Frances Harmar Nicholls, 23 November 1943, Walsall, West Midlands, England. The daughter of a former Conservative Member of Parliament, she is one of the rare people to star in two top-rated television soap operas. With much stage work under her belt, she joined the cast of UK television's Crossroads in 1965 playing waitress Marilyn Gates. She became so popular that a song she performed in the show, 'Where Will You Be', which was written and produced by Tony Hatch, climbed into the UK Top 20 in 1968. The success of the record inspired her to quit Crossroads and to go on the road as a singer. However, when the follow-up 'All The Way To Heaven' failed, she returned to acting. She later appeared in many other television programmes including popular situation comedies The Rise And Fall Of Reginald Perrin (as Mr. Perrin's secretary, Miss Jones) and Up The Elephant And Round The Castle. She joined the cast of Coronation Street in 1979 and has been a regular member of the top-rated soap opera since 1985, playing the role of (now) Councillor Audrey Roberts.

Nichols, Cowboy Sam

b. 31 August 1918, Eula, Texas, USA. With the encouragement of his grandfather, he started singing cowboy songs and playing guitar as a child. In the early 30s, he played regularly on KNEL Brady but by 1937, he was performing, as Sam Nichols The Roaming Cowboy, on the powerful XEPN Border Radio station at Eagle Pass. Here, like contemporaries Slim Rinehart and Nevada Slim, he dressed the part, sold his songbooks and proved a popular artist. He remained at XEPN until he joined the US Navy during World War II. After his discharge, he relocated to California, where he worked the clubs, made a few brief film appearances and toured with Gene Autry and Spade Cooley. He recorded for Memo in 1946, before being signed by MGM Records, and he recorded for that label with session musicians, led by Porky Freeman, dubbed for the recordings the Melody Rangers. He wrote several songs that were also recorded by others, especially 'That Wild And Wicked Look In Your Eye', which in 1948 became a Top 10 hit for Ernest Tubb, and 'I'm Telling You', which proved popular for Nichols but suffered at the hands of an Audrey Williams recording. He left the music business in 1972 and settled on a ranch near Sonora, Texas.

● COMPILATIONS: Sam Nichols With The Melody Rangers (Cattle 1987)★★★.

Nichols, Herbie

b. 3 December 1919, New York City, New York, USA, d. 12 April 1963. In the late 30s and early 40s Nichols played piano with numerous bands in a wide variety of styles. The bands included those of Herman Autrey, Illinois Jacquet, Lucky Thompson, Edgar Sampson and Arnett Cobb, while the styles ranged across small-group swing, dixieland and R&B. A remarkably original and talented musician, Nichols developed a personal music that owed a debt to bebop, particularly to its more idiosyncratic practitioners such as Thelonious Monk, but for much of his life the only gigs he could get were playing Dixieland music, which he came to dislike intensely. In the early 60s, he was able to work occasionally with modern musicians closer to his advanced thinking, among them Roswell Rudd and Archie Shepp, but by then he was terminally ill with leukaemia (though Rudd also blamed 'a broken heart' brought on by 'years of frustration, neglect and disillusionment'). In recent years Nichols's reputation has grown rapidly and there have been several tribute albums that feature his compositions, notably two on the Soul Note label and one by Holland's Instant Composers Pool Orchestra. Nichols's own recorded legacy, though small, is of outstanding quality: two Blue Note trio sessions, reissued as the double album The Third World, feature sympathetic support from Art Blakey and Max Roach. A later trio set for Bethlehem has George Duvivier and Dannie Richmond. These records mostly feature his own distinctive and delightful compositions, some of which - '2300 Skiddoo', 'Shuffle Montgomery', 'House Party Starting', 'Hangover Triangle' - look like becoming established standards in the 90s. 'There is charm and interest all around you', Rudd wrote of Nichols's music, 'from bright ripples on down to heavy undercurrents. What a beautiful sense of space! What incredible lyricism! What soulfullness! What grace! What an expansive palette of sonorities!. Wit, taste, discretion, subtleties, nuances . . . and all so personal and individual.'

● ALBUMS: The Herbie Nichols Quartet (1952)★★★, M+N N (1952)★★★, The Prophetic Herbie Nichols Volumess 1 & 2/The Third World (1955)★★★★, The Herbie Nichols Trio (Blue Note 1955)★★★, Out Of The Shadows (Affinity 1957)★★★★, The Bethlehem Sessions (Affinity 1957)★★★, Love, Gloom, Cash, Love (1957)★★★, Love, Gloom, Cash, Love (Bethlehem 1995)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Complete Blue Note Recordings 3-CD set (Blue Note 1998)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Four Lives In The Bebop Business, A.B. Spellman.

Nichols, Keith

b. 13 February 1945, Ilford, Essex, England. Although he was playing the trombone and leading the band at school Nichols also became All-Britain junior accordion champion. He can now play most of the instruments in the bands he leads but excels on piano and trombone. He played with Dick Sudhalter's Anglo-American Alliance (1969) before leading bands of his own like the New Sedalia in the early 70s. He led the Ragtime Orchestra which played scholarly versions of the repertoire, before going to the USA to record with the New Paul Whiteman Orchestra. He wrote arrangements for the New York Jazz Repertory Company, for Dick Hyman and for the Pasadena Roof Orchestra. By 1978 he was well equipped to found the Midnite Follies Orchestra with Alan Cohen. Their aim was to play the music of the 20s and 30s and original pieces in a similar vein. Nichols is an authority on ragtime and earlier styles of jazz, and he works ceaselessly to keep them being performed. In the mid-80s he played with Harry Gold (bass saxophone) and led the Paramount Theatre Orchestra. He now leads his own Cotton Club Band.

● ALBUMS: Ragtime Rules OK? (1976)★★★, Hotter Than Hades (1978)★★★, Jungle Nights In Harlem (1981)★★★, Shakin' The Blues Away (Stomp Off 1988)★★★, Doctors Jazz (Stomp Off 1988)★★, Chitterlin' Strut (Stomp Off 1989)★★★, Syncopated Jamboree (Stomp Off 1992)★★★, Keith Nichols (Stomp Off 1992)★★★, I Like To Do Things For You (Stomp Off 1993)★★★.

Nichols, Penny

Folk-singer Penny Nichols was raised in Southern California, USA, and by the mid-60s was performing regularly at the Paradox Club in Orange County alongside other aspirants Tim Buckley, Jackson Browne and Steve Noonan. She made an impressive appearance at the 1966 Big Sur Folk Festival in San Francisco, accompanied by Jim Fielder (bass) and Sandy Konikoff (drums), later of Buffalo Springfield and Gentle Soul respectively. Penny's Arcade probably runs a little too heavily on flower-power for most tastes, but it does contain the remarkable 'Look Around Rock', one of the era's most atmospheric recordings. Nichols enjoyed critical acclaim for shows at New York's Village Vanguard and completed a UK tour supporting Captain Beefheart And His Magic Band. However, she had dropped out of music by the end of the decade.

● ALBUMS: Penny's Arcade (Buddah 1968)★★.

Nichols, Red

b. Ernest Loring Nichols, 8 May 1905, Ogden, Utah, USA, d. 28 June 1965. Taught by his father, cornetist Nichols quickly became a highly accomplished performer. Strongly influenced by early white jazz bands, and in particular by Bix Beiderbecke, he moved to New York in the early 20s and was soon one of the busiest musicians in town. He recorded hundreds of tracks, using a bewildering array of names for his bands, but favouring the Five Pennies, a group which was usually eight pieces or more in size. In these bands Nichols used the cream of the white jazzmen of the day, including one of his closest friends, Miff Mole plus Jimmy Dorsey, Joe Venuti, Eddie Lang, Pee Wee Russell, Benny Goodman and Jack Teagarden. Although his sharp business sense and desire for formality and respect alienated him from hard-living contemporaries such as Eddie Condon, Nichols remained enormously successful, continuing to lead bands and record until the outbreak of World War II. After a brief spell outside music Nichols returned to performing with a short stint with Glen Gray, and then resumed his bandleading career from his new base in California. A sentimental Hollywood biopic, The Five Pennies (1959), starring Danny Kaye, gave his career a boost and during the last few years of his life he was as busy as he had ever been in the 20s. A polished player with a silvery tone and a bold, attacking style which reflected his admiration for Beiderbecke, Nichols at his best came close to matching his idol. As a bandleader he left an important recorded legacy of the best of 20s' white jazz.

● ALBUMS: Syncopated Chamber Music (1953)★★★, Hot Pennies (1957)★★★★, with the Charleston Chasers Thesaurus Of Classic Jazz, Vol. 3 (1961)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Class Of '39 - Radio Transcriptions (1979)★★★, with Miff Mole Red And Miff, 1925-31 (Village 1982)★★★★, Rhythm Of The Day (ASV 1983)★★★, Feelin' No Pain (1920s-30s) (Affinity 1987)★★★★, Great Original Performances 1925-30 (1988)★★★, Red Nichols And Other Radio Transcriptions (Meritt 1988)★★★★, Red Nichols And The Five Pennies Vols 1-5 (Swaggie 1989)★★★★.

Nicholson, J.D.

b. James David Nicholson, 12 April 1917, Monroe, Louisiana, USA, d. 27 July 1991, Los Angeles, California, USA. Nicholson learned to play the piano in church from the age of five. He later emigrated to the west coast where, influenced by the popular black recording artists of the day, he built up a solo act and travelled and performed all over California. In the mid-40s he teamed up with Jimmy McCracklin and they made their first recordings together; Nicholson played, McCracklin sang and both their styles were very much in the mould of Walter Davis. Over the next decade, Nicholson accompanied a number of well-known artists, such as Lowell Fulson and Ray Agee, and also made some records under his own name. Later in the 50s, he joined Jimmy Reed's band, and also played with Little Walter. He made a few more records in the 60s.

● COMPILATIONS: Mr. Fullbright's Blues Vol. 2 (1990)★★★.

Nick And Nora

This show was based on Dashiell Hammett's witty 30s comedy-drama movie, The Thin Man, which starred William Powell and Myrna Loy, and spawned several sequels. Its transfer from Hollywood to Broadway provided yet another insight into the agonizing trials and tribulations endured by the creators - and, some would say, the audiences - concerned with a contemporary musical production. After several postponements, the show actually started its previews at the Marquis Theatre in New York on 8 October 1991. These continued for 71 performances - an unprecedented nine weeks - while the highly experienced team of Arthur Laurents (director and librettist), Charles Strouse (music) and Richard Maltby Jnr., strove to get the show ready. After numerous changes to the cast, score and book, Nick And Nora finally faced the critics on December 8. The story, still set in the film world of the 30s, has Nora Charles (Joanna Gleason) doing a favour for her old girlfriend, the actress Tracy Gardner (Christine Baranski), by trying to find the murderer of studio book keeper, Lorraine Bixby (Faith Prince). Eventually, she gives way to husband Nick (Barry Bostwick), who comes out of retirement to solve the case himself. Not a show to appeal to feminists. There were high hopes for the score. Richard Maltby Jnr. was co-lyricist on Miss Saigon, and his collaborations with David Shire, such as Baby and Starting Here, Starting Now, had been duly noted. Charles Strouse had composed the music for several big Broadway hits, but his record revealed six flops in a row since Annie in 1977. Their songs met with a mixed reception. They included 'Is There Anything Better Than Dancing?', 'Everybody Wants To Do A Musical', 'Swell', 'Not Me', 'As Long As You're Happy', 'Look Whose Alone Now', and 'Let's Go Home', which some unkind critics took literally. The number that attracted the most attention was 'Men', which was sung by Faith Prince, and that too, with its lyric, 'I was nuts . . . dropped my pants like a putz', was regarded as 'astonishingly coarse' by one critic, and 'absolute dynamite' by another. There was an air of doom surrounding the production, anyway, and it folded after only nine performances (not forgetting the 71 previews) with estimated losses in excess of $2.5 million.

Nick Of Time - Bonnie Raitt

Although famed primarily for her interpretation of compositions by the likes of Joni Mitchell, John Hiatt, James Taylor and Paul Brady, Nick Of Time includes two fine Raitt-penned songs. 'The Road's My Middle Name' is an up-tempo blues number, harking back to her early career performing alongside Son House and Mississippi Fred McDowell. The title track is one of her best, a sensitive examination of the traumas of ageing. Throughout the album her voice is haunting and controlled, bringing new meaning and depth to a varied range of material. Bonnie turned 40 gracefully with this album and it gave her unexpected massive success just in the nick of time.

- Tracks: Nick Of Time; A Thing Called Love; Love Letters; Cry On My Shoulder; Real Man; Nobody's Girl; Have A Heart; Too Soon To Tell; I Will Not Be Denied; I Ain't Gonna Let You Break My Heart Again; The Road's My Middle Name.
- First released 1989
- UK peak chart position: 51
- USA peak chart position: 1

Nicks, Stevie

b. Stephanie Nicks, 26 May 1948, Phoenix, Arizona, USA. When Stevie Nicks joined Fleetwood Mac in January 1975, she not only introduced her talents as a singer and songwriter, but provided a defined focal point during the group's live appearances. A former vocalist with Fritz, a struggling San Francisco band, Nicks moved to Los Angeles with her boyfriend and fellow ex-member Lindsey Buckingham. Together they recorded Buckingham-Nicks, a promising but largely neglected album, at the Second City Studio in Van Nuys. The collection was subsequently used to demonstrate the facilities to Mick Fleetwood. By coincidence both Nicks and Buckingham were in a nearby room and were introduced to the Fleetwood Mac drummer when he showed interest in their work. Within weeks the duo were invited to join his group to replace the departing Bob Welch. Their arrival brought a change in Fleetwood Mac's commercial fortunes. Nicks provided many of the group's best-known and successful songs, including the atmospheric 'Rhiannon' and the haunting 'Dreams'. The latter was one of several excellent compositions that graced the multi-million-selling Rumours, although the album itself signalled the collapse of two in-house relationships, including that of Buckingham and Nicks. In 1980, following the release of Fleetwood Mac's much-maligned Tusk, the singer began recording a solo album. Bella Donna, released the following year, achieved platinum sales and remained on the Billboard album chart for over two years. It also spawned two US Top 10 singles in 'Stop Dragging My Heart Around', a duet with Tom Petty and 'Leather And Lace', which featured former Eagles drummer, Don Henley. A second selection, The Wild Heart, followed in 1983 and this bestseller also produced two major hits in 'Stand Back' and 'Nightbird'. Her third album, Rock A Little, was less successful, artistically and commercially, and following its release Nicks entered the Betty Ford Clinic to be treated for drug dependency. She then rejoined Fleetwood Mac for Tango In The Night, which marked the departure of Lindsey Buckingham. Although his absence has created more space within the band's framework, a revitalized Nicks continued her solo activities, as exemplified in 1989's The Other Side Of The Mirror. She rejoined Buckingham in Fleetwood Mac when the Rumours line-up reconvened in 1997.

- ALBUMS: with Lindsey Buckingham Buckingham-Nicks (Polydor 1973)★★, Bella Donna (Warners 1981)★★★★, The Wild Heart (Warners 1983)★★★, Rock A Little (Modern 1985)★★, The Other Side Of The Mirror (EMI 1989)★★★, Street Angel (EMI 1994)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Timespace: The Best Of Stevie Nicks (EMI 1991)★★★, The Enchanted Works Of Stevie Nicks 3-CD box set (Atlantic 1998)★★★.

Nico

b. Christa Paffgen (Pavolsky), 16 October 1938, Cologne, Germany, d. 18 July 1988. Introduced to a European social set that included film director Federico Fellini, Nico began an acting career with a memorable appearance in La Dolce Vita. Briefly based in London, she became acquainted with Rolling Stones guitarist Brian Jones, and made her recording debut with the folk-tinged 'I'm Not Saying'. Nico then moved to New York, where she was introduced to Andy Warhol. She starred in the director's controversial cinema-verité epic, Chelsea Girls, before joining his new-found protégés, the Velvet Underground. Nico made telling contributions to this seminal group's debut album, but her desire to sing lead on all of the songs brought a swift rebuttal. She resumed a solo career in 1967 with Chelsea Girl which included three compositions by a young Jackson Browne, who accompanied Nico on live performances, and 'I'll Keep It With Mine', which Bob Dylan reportedly wrote with her in mind. Lou Reed and John Cale, former colleagues in the Velvet Underground, also provided memorable contributions, while the latter retained his association with the singer by producing her subsequent three albums. Here Nico's baleful, gothic intonation was given free rein, and the haunting, often sparse use of harmonium accentuated her impressionistic songs. In 1974 she appeared in a brief tour of the UK in the company of Kevin Ayers, John Cale and Brian Eno, collectively known as ACNE. A live album of the concert at the Rainbow Theatre in London was subsequently released. That same year, following the release of The End, the singer ceased recording, but re-emerged in the immediate post-punk era. Her Teutonic emphasis inspired several figures, including Siouxsie Sioux of Siouxsie And The Banshees, but Nico's own 80s' releases were plagued by inconsistency. Signs of an artistic revival followed treatment for drug addiction, but this unique artist died in Ibiza on 18 July 1988, after suffering a cerebral haemorrhage while cycling in intense heat.

● ALBUMS: Chelsea Girl (Verve 1967)★★, The Marble Index (Elektra 1969)★★★★, Desertshore (Reprise 1971)★★★, with Kevin Ayers, John Cale, Brian Eno June 1 1974 (Island 1974)★★, The End (Island 1974)★★★, Drama Of Exile (Aura 1981)★★★, Do Or Die! Nico In Europe, 1982 Diary (Reach Out 1983)★★★, Camera Obscura (Beggars Banquet 1985)★★, The Blue Angel (Aura 1986)★★, Behind The Iron Curtain (Dojo 1986)★★, Live In Tokyo (Dojo 1987)★★, Live In Denmark (Vu 1987)★★, En Personne En Europe (One Over Two 1988)★★★, Live Heroes (Performance 1989)★★, Hanging Gardens (Emergo 1990)★★, Icon (Cleopatra 1996)★★, Janitor Of Lunacy (Cherry Red 1996)★★, Nico's Last Concert: Fato Morgana (SPV 1996)★★★.

● VIDEOS: An Underground Experience (Wide Angle/Visionary 1993), Nico - Heroine (1994).

● FURTHER READING: The Life And Lies Of An Icon, Richard Witts. Songs They Never Play On The Radio: Nico, The Last Bohemian, James Young.

Nico Junior

b. 1975, Jones Town, Jamaica, West Indies. Nico moved to the UK with his family in 1989 and became involved in the local dancehall scene. His initial experience at the microphone was on the south London-based Papa Love sound system. He performed on a variety of sounds alongside many of the UK's top performers, including Mike Anthony, Top Cat and the star of We The Raggamuffin, Bucky Ranks. In 1993 he recorded his debut, 'Can't Butterfly', a well-received comment on the then current dance craze. His successful debut led to a duet with Jack Radics, 'Woman You Safe And Secure', and the braggadocio 'Yo Yo Baby'. Following his initial run of hits, he joined the Fashion Records posse, where he recorded the emotional 'Garnett Silk Tribute', alongside 'Salute' and 'Defend The Money'. His success through Fashion led to sessions with a number of producers in the UK, including Lloyd 'Musclehead' Francis and Dennis Rowe for the stylish 'Dapper', while with Top Cat he scored with 'Cantona', and with Daddy Noddy, 'Born Lucky'. The hits, including the favoured 'Heartbeat', continued, but it was the Delroy Clarke and Paul 'Commander B' Blake-produced 'Cartoon Party', in 1998, that led to wider recognition. The success of the tune led to the popular DJ Glamma Kid (who was also recording with the prolific duo of Clarkie And Blakie) claiming that Junior had gone 'Loonie Tunie', maintaining the popular rivalry that has elevated the careers of many DJs. Junior maintained his profile when he recorded with the UK-based singer and producer, Slim Batson, for his interpretation of 'No No No'.

Nico, Dr.

b. Nicholas Kasanda Wa Mikalay, 1939, Luluaborg, Zaire, d. 1985, Kinshasa, Zaire. A member of Joseph Kalle's African Jazz in the early 60s, expert guitarist and composer Nico went on to be a founder-member, with Rochereau, of African Fiesta, one of the most popular and influential Zairean bands of the mid and late 60s. He was born into a musical family, but later attended the Leopold II Institute, graduating as a technical teacher in 1957. Despite the qualification, he concentrated on music from then on, inspired by his accordion-playing father and guitarist brother (Mwamba Dechaud). Kasanda soon became a virtuoso guitar player himself, leading to his induction into African Jazz. His reputation among Congolese guitarists was second to none, and during African Jazz's performance at the 1960 Zairean independence celebrations he was given his nickname, Dr. Nico. After joining African Fiesta in 1963 he maintained his popularity and gift for invention, recording hundreds of singles, many of which were local and pan-African hits. He then retired from the music scene in the early 70s, infuriated by the collapse of African Fiesta's Belgian record company, feeling financially cheated. He played only a handful of shows over several quiet years before returning in 1983 with a new recording contract for Togo's Africa New Sound label. Several albums were recorded, usually alongside his brother and with the backing of Les Redoubtables de Abeti. His first American albums followed for the African Music Gallery in Washington. However, this brief period of intense activity was ended by his sudden death (suspected to be alcohol-related) in 1985. His influence on African guitar playing, acknowledged by several experts as the most pivotal of all such innovations, lives on.

● ALBUMS: Eternal Dr Nico 1963 - 1965 (1963)★★★★, re-released by Sonodisc 1985, Toute L'Afrique Danse (Safari Ambience 1974)★★★, Sanza Zomi Na Mibale (Safari Ambience 1975)★★★, Afrique Tayokana (Safari Ambience 1981)★★★★, Kassanda Wa Mikalaya (LKMR 1984)★★★, Dieu De La Guitare (Africa New Sound 1985)★★★★, Aux USA (Africa New Sound 1985)★★★.

Nicodemus

b. Cecil Willington, 1957, Jamaica, West Indies, d. 1996. Nicodemus came to notoriety as a DJ in the late 70s/early 80s performing on the Socialist Roots sound system alongside selector Danny Dread. In 1978 King Jammy (then Prince Jammy) gave his name to the Tapetown sound, which flourished when Nicodemus joined the crew. He delivered his chantings in a style similar to Prince Far I and Prince Jazzbo. He recorded a number of hits, including memorable work with the Roots Radics and notable sessions at Channel One Studio. In 1980 Nicodemus released a combination tune with Ranking Trevor, 'Jamaican Rockers Hop', announcing his arrival. He enjoyed a string of hits in 1981, including the adjoining hits 'Gunman Connection' and 'Bone Connection'. The DJ Clash, with Ranking Toyan, which was issued with a voting card, featured the exceptional 'Hail Nico Dread', 'Bubble Nicodemus Bubble' and 'Tubby's Daddy'. Nicodemus was the featured DJ on Bingi Bunny's 'Him A Natty Dread', which introduced his idiosyncratic style to a wider audience. His reputation was further enhanced by the equally popular combination hits with Linval Thompson ('Holding On To My Girlfriend') and Leroy Sibbles ('Rock Steady Party'), while his solo 'Natty Sell A Million' was credited to the Top Ranking Deejay Nicadeamus (sic). Nicodemus's popularity inspired the up-and-coming John Taylor, who called himself Nicodemus Junior as a mark of respect to the DJ responsible for motivating his career. Taylor's fortune changed when he changed his stage name to Chaka Demus and joined with Pliers. Sporadic hits continued through to the late 80s when Nicodemus linked up with Early B's protégé Supercat. His career prospered and he enjoyed a revival, recording for Don Dada's Wild Apache label. His combination venture in 1988 with Supercat, 'Cabin Stabbin', resulted in an all-important US hit, generating new interest in his past repertoire. The veteran DJs recorded two successful albums with their protégés Junior Demus and Junior Cat, joining forces as the Wild Apache crew. The four DJs also featured in a promotional video for the release of 'Scalp Dem' which was considered unorthodox in opting for a Western theme. Nicodemus succumbed to complications from diabetes and died in 1996.

● ALBUMS: Gunman Connection (Cha Cha 1981)★★★, Dancehall Style (Black Joy 1982)★★★, with Ranking Toyan DJ Clash (Greensleeves 1983)★★★★, with Wild Apache Crew The Good The Bad The Ugly And The Crazy (Wild Apache 1994)★★★, with Wild Apache Crew Cabin Stabbin' (Wild Apache 1994)★★★, with Flabba Holt King Tubby On The Mix Volume One (Ernie B 1996)★★★.

Nicol, Simon

b. 13 October 1950, Muswell Hill, London, England. Vocalist/guitarist Nicol was the sole surviving member of the original Fairport Convention line-up. He has toured and recorded with Dave Swarbrick, and been involved in session work on a number of albums. He has also recorded and toured with, among others, Art Garfunkel, Beth Nielson Chapman, Al Stewart, John Martyn, Julie Covington and the Albion Country Band. Many felt that Simon was overshadowed as a guitarist by former Fairport Convention member Richard Thompson. It was not until 1986 that Nicol's long-overdue solo Before Your Time was released, although the well-received record did not achieve the commercial success that it deserved. In 1990 Simon provided the music for a video Singing Games For Children and, the same year, was recruited for the recording of the debut album by Beverley Craven. Despite these other commitments, his recording and touring work with Fairport Convention continues. Although his solo career looks sparse Nicol remains one of the most experienced performers in the UK, playing sessions and touring with countless artists. His heart and soul will always belong to the Fairports and his singing on 1995's Jewel In The Crown is excellent. Nicol is now also a full-time member of the Albion Band and featured on Acousticity (1993) and Albion Heart (1995).

● ALBUMS: with Dave Swarbrick Live At The White Bear (1982)★★★, with Swarbrick In The Club (1983)★★★, with Swarbrick Close To The Wind (1984)★★★, Before Your Time (1987)★★★, Consonant Please Carol (1992)★★★.

Nicolette

b. Nicolette Okoh, *c.*1964, Glasgow, Scotland. Though born in Scotland, Nicolette was raised in Nigeria, France, Switzerland and Wales. She originally rose to prominence as singer on the sampled-based house hits of Shut Up And Dance in the early 90s. Their first female signing, her approach to singing was more blues-based and less shrill than many of the 'garage' divas. She also wrote her own songs, demonstrating a keen talent on singles such as 'Wicked Mathematics'. Other collaborations with the Shut Up And Dance duo, such as 'I'd Like To Wake You Up' and 'Dove Song', are regarded by many as forerunning of the jungle and drum 'n' bass sound. Later she toured with Massive Attack, featuring on their Protection album, before signing a solo deal with Talkin' Loud Records. She was keen to affirm that 'I really do see myself as a dance act', despite her second album featuring more political material such as 'No Government', released as a single. On Nicolette she was joined by some of the cream of the UK production teams, including 4 Hero, Plaid (ex-Black Dog Productions) and Felix Da Housecat.

● ALBUMS: Now Is Early (Shut Up And Dance 1992)★★★, Nicolette (Talkin' Loud 1996)★★★★, Let No-one Live Rent Free In Your Head (Talkin' Loud 1996)★★★.

Nicols, Maggie

b. 24 February 1948, Edinburgh, Scotland. Nicols is a renowned vocalist in UK jazz and has worked at the roots of experimental jazz since the mid-60s. She started her career in song and dance as a child by enrolling at the Italia Conti Stage School in London's Soho. By the age of 15 she was dancing and singing at the Windmill Theatre and at 16 was singing in cabaret in a Manchester, subsequently appearing at the Moulin Rouge in Paris after undergoing a dancing tour of Europe. By the mid-60s Maggie had turned her attention to jazz and had become a member of the Spontaneous Music Ensemble; she was also involved in inaugurating a free-jazz workshop in south London which included therapy work with mental patients, using jazz vocal expression as an emotional outlet. She was responsible for the instigation of several groups including the quartet, Voice, which featured Julie Tippetts and Phil Minton and which utilized Nicols' own experimental 'scat' language. Her involvement with the Feminist Improvising Group (and its European counterpart, the EWIG) found her working with the avant garde bassist Joëlle Léandre and the former Henry Cow multi-instrumentalist Lindsay Cooper, as well as the free-jazz pianist Irène Schweizer. In 1982 she collaborated with Léandre and Cooper to record the completely improvised Live At The Bastille. That same year, Nicols collaborated with Tippetts again on Sweet And S'ours. On this set there featured an example of the duo's idiosyncratic technique, with the use of vacuum-cleaner tubes (on 'Whailing'). 1985's joint effort with Peter Nu was released on Leo Records and was funded by the London Arts Council. Nicols has since continued to work in fringe theatre and various groups on the UK jazz scene.

● ALBUMS: with Voice Voice (1977)★★★, with Julie Tippetts Sweet And S'ours (1982)★★, with Joëlle Léandre, Lindsay Cooper Live At The Bastille 1982 recording (1984)★★, with Peter Nu Nicols 'N' Nu (1985)★★★, with Irène Schweizer, Paul Lovens, Léandre, Cooper Live At Taklos (1986)★★★, with Keith Tippett, Julie Tippetts Mr. Invisible And The Drunken Sheilas 1987 recording (1989)★★★.

Niehaus, Lennie

b. 11 June 1929, St. Louis, Missouri, USA. After completing his studies at university in California, to where his family had moved when he was seven years old, alto saxophonist Niehaus joined Jerry Wald and then Stan Kenton in 1951. Apart from a spell away in the army, he remained with the Kenton band until 1960. During this period Niehaus also recorded under his own name and played and recorded with other small groups, including that led by Shorty Rogers. From the 60s onwards Niehaus was active in film and television studios, writing scores for a number of films including two, City Heat (1984) and Pale Rider (1985), that starred Clint Eastwood. When Eastwood came to make his film about Charlie Parker, Bird (1988), he invited Niehaus to handle the complex musical problems, which included writing the score and 'engineering' Parker's solos so that they could be re-recorded with new accompaniments. The skill and integrity with which Niehaus accomplished this difficult task represent one of the highlights of the film. A brilliant technician, playing with a hard-edged sound, Niehaus sometimes fails to engage the emotions of his listeners, but for the most part overcomes this failing through his extraordinary rush of exciting ideas.

● ALBUMS: Lennie Niehaus Vol. 1: The Quintet (1954-56)★★★, Lennie Niehaus Vol. 2: The Octet/Zounds! (1954-56)★★★, Lennie Niehaus Vol. 3 (1955)★★, The Lennie Niehaus Quintet With Strings (1955)★★, The Lennie Niehaus Sextet (1956)★★★, Lennie Niehaus (1957)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Patterns (Fresh Sounds 1990)★★★★.

Nielsen-Chapman, Beth

b. Harlington, Texas, USA. Nielsen-Chapman sang harmony on Tanya Tucker's 1988 US number 1 country single 'Strong Enough To Bend', which she wrote with Don Schlitz. She also sang harmony and wrote Willie Nelson's 1989 US country number 1, 'Nothing I Can Do It About It Now'. Her debut album for Reprise Records failed to secure her career as a singer, however, although it included her version of 'Down On My Knees' (covered by Trisha Yearwood). The 1993 follow-up was an equally strong set, moving further away from country into adult-orientated pop music. Following the sudden death of her husband, Nielsen-Chapman wrote and recorded Sand & Water, a touchingly restrained meditation on grief and loss.

● ALBUMS: Beth Nielsen-Chapman (Reprise 1990)★★★, You Hold The Key (Reprise 1993)★★★, Sand & Water (Warners 1997)★★★★.

Niemack, Judy

b. USA. A deep and richly textured singing voice allows Niemack to bring warmth and understanding to ballads and modern jazz standards alike. Her interpretations of songs indicate her awareness of the intentions of composers and lyricists and her performances always display originality and freshness of thought and approach. On Heart's Desire she worked with Kenny Barron in what was clearly a meeting of minds.

● ALBUMS: Heart's Desire (Stash 1992)★★★★.

Nieves, Tito

b. Humberto Nieves, 4 June c.1958, Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico. One of salsa's hit-makers in the late 80s and early 90s, Nieves's family migrated to Brooklyn, New York when he was two years old. The fact that his father played guitar with various trios and that his uncle was a renowned composer, singer and guitarist, created a family climate conducive to music, within which the young Tito studied bass, guitar and drums. Nieves began his professional career in 1975 as a vocalist with Orquesta Cimarrón, which was co-led by the band's lead singer Rafael de Jesús. This was followed by a stint with Héctor Lavoe. Tito made his recording debut as a lead vocalist in 1978 when the prominent Puerto Rican composer Johnny Ortiz hired him for Johnny Ortiz y Taibori. In 1979 he was invited by composer/producer Ramón Rodríguez to perform lead vocals on the first album by Julio Castro and his Orquesta La Masacre. The same year he became a founder-member of Clásico, Conjunto with Rodríguez and executive producer/chorus singer/percussionist Raymond Castro, and appeared on eight of the band's albums before departing in the mid-80s. Nieves signed with Ralph Mercado's RMM Records and made his solo debut on The Classic in 1988. The album went gold and contained the hit 'Sonanbulo'. The single 'I'll Always Love You', from his 1989 follow-up Yo Quiero Cantar, achieved the distinction of being the first English language salsa tune to reach number 1 in the Puerto Rican hit parade and, with help from WBLS disc jockey Frankie Crocker, was a crossover success on some New York R&B radio stations. Crocker introduced Nieves at the 1990 New York Salsa Festival in Madison Square Garden. with The album won him another gold disc. In February 1990, Tito's stepson died while being arrested. Nieves and Alexandra (a female vocalist with the meringue group the New York Band) duetted on the New York chart-topping English lyrics single 'How Do You Keep The Music Playing', which was included on his 1991 release Déjame Vivir and the compilation Put Your Heart On Salsa In English.

- ALBUMS: with Johnny Ortiz Johnny Ortiz y Taibori (1978)★★★★, with Julio Castro New Generation Presenta Julio Castro & Orquesta La Masacre (1979)★★★★, with Conjunto Clásico Los Rodríguez (1979)★★★★, Felicitaciones (1980)★★★★, Si No Bailan Con Ellos, No Bailan Con Nadie (1981)★★★, Clásicas de Clásico (1982)★★★, Las Puertas Abiertas (1983)★★★, El Panadero (1985)★★★, Llego La Ley (1985)★★★, Asi Es Mi Pueblo (1986)★★★, The Classic (1988)★★★★, Yo Quiero Cantar (1989)★★★★, Déjame Vivir (1991)★★★, Rompecabeza (The Puzzle) (1994)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Ray Castro Presenta...Lo Mejor de Conjunto Clásico con Tito Nieves (1990)★★★★.

Night And Day

Benny Green, the British author and critic, has often commented that if only the screenwriters of these lavish Hollywood film biographies had told the subject's real life story instead of writing the usual insipid puff, some fascinating pictures would have resulted. This theory could have been especially true in the case of Night And Day which was released by Warner Brothers in 1946. It was supposed to be a celebration of the smart and sophisticated songwriter Cole Porter, but hardly any of the important incidents in his life - apart from his tragic accident - were touched upon. The inclusion of a good many of his magnificent songs more than made up for the omissions, though, and these included 'I've Got You Under My Skin', 'Night And Day', 'Miss Otis Regrets', 'In The Still Of The Night', 'Begin The Beguine', 'What Is This Thing Called Love?', 'Just One Of Those Things', 'I Get A Kick Out Of You', 'Easy To Love', 'You Do Something To Me', 'Let's Do It', 'Old Fashioned Garden', 'Love For Sale', 'You've Got That Thing', and 'Anything Goes'. Mary Martin reprised 'My Heart Belongs To Daddy' which she originally introduced to rapturous acclaim in Leave It To Me! back in 1938, and several of the other numbers were sung by Ginny Simms and Jane Wyman. Cary Grant played Porter, and it was interesting, if unsatisfying, to hear his version of 'You're The Top', one of the composer's all-time great 'list' songs. Alexis Smith was Mrs. Porter, and also cast were Monty Woolley (as himself), Eve Arden, Alan Hale, Victor Francen, Dorothy Malone, Selena Royle, Donald Woods, Henry Stephenson, Sig Rumann, and Carlos Ramirez. Charles Hoffman, Leo Townsend and William Bowers were responsible for the screenplay, and the dances were staged by Leroy Prinz. Arthur Schwartz, a legendary songwriter himself, was the producer and Michael Curtiz provided the lacklustre direction. It was photographed in Technicolor by J. Peverell Marley and William Skall. In spite of their obvious drawbacks, these kind of films were always crowd-pullers, and Night And Day proved to be no exception, grossing $4 million in North America alone.

Night And Day - Joe Jackson

Jackson's great New York album, full of atmosphere, high-quality musicianship and mature arrangements, put him way beyond the pop of his first two albums. The cosmopolitan flavour is captured on the Latin-styled 'Cancer', Jackson's romantic nature is exposed on the beautiful 'Would You Be My Number Two' and the album's headliner is the modern classic 'Steppin' Out', with its unforgettable bass and piano intro. This album should have been a platform to make Jackson an international artist, but for some reason his career faltered and he was eventually dropped by his record company. Repeated radio play of 'Steppin' Out' should keep this album in print.

- Tracks: Another World; Chinatown; TV Age; Target; Would You Be My Number Two; Steppin' Out; Breaking Us In Two; Cancer; Real Men; Slow Song.
- First released 1982
- UK peak chart position: 3
- USA peak chart position: 4

Night Owl - Gerry Rafferty

Ex-Humblebum Rafferty took a while to find success, especially after the managerial problems of his previous band, Stealers Wheel. It all came good with City To City and 'Baker Street', and this album came shortly after that success. His songwriting was at a peak with easily flowing songs such as 'Get It Right Next Time' and 'Take The Money And Run'. Much of the rancour of his previous band spills over into these lyrics, and of the way he was trying to hold his relationship together. This, therefore, is an honest album from a time in his life that he had difficulty putting behind him. Trauma does produce good songs.

- Tracks: Days Gone Down; Night Owl; The Way That You Do It; Why Won't You Talk To Me; Get It Right Next Time; Take The Money And Run; Family Tree; Already Gone; The Tourist; It's Gonna Be A Long Night.
- First released 1979
- UK peak chart position: 9
- USA peak chart position: 29

Night Ranger

This talented and sophisticated American pomp-rock group released a string of first-class albums between 1982 and 1988. Featuring Jack Blades (vocals, bass), Brad Gillis (guitar, ex-Ozzy Osbourne), Alan Fitzgerald (keyboards, ex-Montrose), Kelly Keagy (drums) and Jeff Watson (guitar), they gigged in and around their home-town of San Francisco as an extension of Gillis's club band, Ranger. They soon attracted the attention of promoter Bill Graham, who secured them support slots to Santana, Judas Priest and the Doobie Brothers. They also signed with Neil Bogart's short-lived Boardwalk label, though this decision had a major impact on their later career when Boardwalk was swallowed up by MCA, who had little sympathy for the band's rock roots. However, Night Ranger's first four albums made the Billboard Top 40 charts, with Seven Wishes reaching the Top 10 in June 1985. They also enjoyed two Top 10 single hits in the USA with 'Sister Christian' and 'Sentimental Street', peaking at numbers 5 and 8, respectively. Man In Motion saw the departure of Fitzgerald as the band adopted a rockier direction. Produced by Keith Olsen, the album was their first commercial failure. The band split shortly afterwards, with Live In Japan, featuring one of their 1988 concerts, emerging two years later. Jack Blades joined Damn Yankees with Ted Nugent, Tommy Shaw and Michael Cartellone. The name was resurrected in 1992 by Gillis and drummer/vocalist Kelly Keagy with new members, much to the disgust of Blades and Watson. It seemed unlikely that the new formation would add much to the existing Nightranger legacy of solid US AOR.

- ALBUMS: Dawn Patrol (Boardwalk 1982)★★★★, Midnight Madness (MCA 1983)★★★★, Seven Wishes (MCA 1985)★★★★, Big Life (MCA 1987)★★★, Man In Motion (MCA 1988)★★★, Live In Japan (MCA 1990)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (MCA 1989)★★★.

Nightcrawlers

The Nightcrawlers are a cover organization for the activities of house producer John Reid (b. Glasgow, Scotland). As he summarizes it, 'I see us as a collective of people and I'm the mouthpiece and the driving force behind it.' The Nightcrawlers' first single was 'Living Inside A Dream', but that failed to ignite significant interest. Much more successful was the subsequent effort, 'Push The Feeling On'. This became a major club success but only reached the UK charts when re-released for the third time. Originally issued in 1993, it finally reached the UK Top 30 in October 1994. Previously Reid had been involved in several successful musical projects. After being dropped from his original contract with Island Records, Reid had been contacted by producer/writer Ian Levine and asked whether he would be prepared to write songs for him. The results included 'Whenever You Need Me' for Bad Boys Inc., his first major hit, and material for Eternal, Gemini and Optimystic. The Nightcrawlers' follow-up to 'Push The Feeling On', a repetition of the formula entitled 'Don't Let The Feeling Go', was marginally less successful but became another club hit.

- ALBUMS: The 12' Remixes (Arista 1996)★★★.

Nighthawk, Robert

b. Robert McCollum, 30 November 1909, Helena, Arkansas, USA, d. 5 November 1967. Having left home in his early teens, McCollum initially supported himself financially by playing harmonica, but by the 30s had switched to guitar under the tutelage of Houston Stackhouse. The two musicians, together with Robert's brother Percy, formed a string band that was a popular attraction at local parties and gatherings. Robert left the south during the middle of the decade, allegedly after a shooting incident, and settled in St. Louis. He took the name Robert McCoy, after his mother's maiden name, and made contact with several Mississippi-born bluesmen, including Big Joe Williams and John Lee 'Sonny Boy' Williamson. McCoy accompanied both on sessions for the Bluebird label, who then recorded the skilled guitarist in his own right. His releases included 'Tough Luck' and the evocative 'Prowlin' Nighthawk', which in turn engendered the artist's best-known professional surname. Nighthawk then discovered the electric guitar which, when combined with his already dexterous slide technique, created a sound that allegedly influenced Earl Hooker, Elmore James and Muddy Waters. The latter musician was instrumental in introducing Nighthawk to the Aristocrat (later Chess) label. It was here that the artist completed his most accomplished work, in particular two 1949 masters, 'Sweet Black Angel' and 'Anna Lee Blues'. Both songs were procured from Tampa Red, whose dazzling, clear tone bore an affinity to jazz and was an inspiration for Nighthawk's approach. However, his disciple was unable or unwilling to consolidate the success these recordings secured, and although he continued to record in Chicago, Nighthawk often returned to Helena where he performed with his son, Sam Carr. The guitarist's last substantial session was in 1964 when he completed two tracks, 'Sorry My Angel' and 'Someday', with a backing band that included Buddy Guy and Walter 'Shakey' Horton. Robert Nighthawk died in his home-town on 5 November 1967, leaving behind a small but pivotal body of work.

- COMPILATIONS: Bricks In My Pillow (1977)★★★, with Elmore James Blues In D Natural (1979)★★★★, Complete Recordings, Vol. 1 1937 (1985)★★★★, Complete Recordings, Vol. 2 1938-40 (1985)★★★★, Live On Maxwell Street (Rounder 1988)★★★, Black Angel Blues (Chess 1989)★★★, Houston Stackhouse (Testament 1995)★★★, with the Wampus Cats Toastin' The Blues (Inside Memphis 1996)★★★.

Nighthawks

(see Thackery, Jimmy)

Nightingale, Annie

b. *c.*1947, England. Although most readily associated with the BBC Radio schedules of the 70s and for her presentation of television programme The Old Grey Whistle Test, Nightingale has remained active within broadcasting through to the present. She began her career in newspaper journalism, writing as a columnist for the Daily Express among other publications, before spending 12 years hosting The Request Show on BBC Radio 1. Though her profile diminished in the intervening years, in the mid-90s she was still hosting a Sunday morning programme between 2 and 4 am. However, rather than the rock and new wave sounds with which she was formerly identified, her current playlist on The Chill Out Zone is dedicated to the 'after club' crowd - and features selections from techno, ambient and jungle artists. In 1996 samples from the programme were packaged together by Heavenly Records for release as a various artist's album entitled Annie On One. In 1997, during a visit to Haiti, Nightingale was attacked by a mugger and seriously injured.

● ALBUMS: various Annie On One (Heavenly 1996)★★★★.

Nightingale, Maxine

b. 2 November 1952, Wembley, London, England. Although Nightingale made her recording debut in 1968, early acclaim was garnered from a series of roles in the stage productions of Hair, Jesus Christ Superstar and Godspell. She resumed a solo career during the 70s, achieving an international hit with the compulsive 'Right Back Where We Started From'. This infectious performance, featured heavily in Paul Newman's cult movie Slapshot, reached number 8 in the UK and number 2 in the USA, but although 'Love Hit Me' also reached the UK Top 20, the singer was unable to sustain consistent success. 'Lead Me On', a flop at home, climbed to number 5 in the USA in 1979, but proved to be her last substantial release.

● ALBUMS: Right Back Where We Started From (United Artists 1976)★★★, Love Hit Me (United Artists 1977)★★★, Night Life (United Artists 1977)★★, Love Lines (United Artists 1978)★★, Lead Me On (United Artists 1979)★★, Bittersweet (Liberty 1981)★★, It's A Beautiful Thing (Highrise 1982)★★.

Nightingales

After a series of low-key UK school bands, Robert Lloyd (b. 1959, Cannock, Staffordshire, England) formed the Prefects - one of the earliest punk bands - who toured with the Clash. They split up in 1979 and Lloyd assembled the Nightingales using the best of the musicians who had passed through the ranks of the Prefects. The first of many subsequent Nightingales line-ups were Alan and Paul Apperley, Joe Crow, Eamonn Duffy and Lloyd himself. They were ably championed by BBC disc jockey John Peel, for whom Lloyd has recorded more sessions under various guises than any other artist. Peel himself said of them: '(their performances) will serve to confirm their excellence when we are far enough distanced from the 1980s to look at the period rationally, and other, infinitely better known bands stand revealed as charlatans'. The Nightingales' debut single, 'Idiot Strength', was released in 1981 on the band's own Vindaloo label in association with Rough Trade Records. Joe Crow then departed and his replacements, Nick Beales and Andy Lloyd, two of 15 personnel who would pass through the ranks, brought a totally different sound to the band. Cherry Red Records picked them up and the band's career began in earnest. Lloyd soon established himself as one of the more interesting lyricists of the independent chart. Most of his tirades were draped in humour: 'I'm too tired to do anything today, but tomorrow I'll start my diet, and answer some of my fan mail ('Elvis: The Last Ten Days'). Alternatively: 'I worked in a bakery . . . the jokes were handed down like diseases, I only worked there for the bread.' The lack of success of subsequent releases led Lloyd and friends to the new Red Flame label started by Dave Kitson, the promoter of the Moonlight Club in London's Hampstead. Still unhappy with the way record companies were handling his band's career, Lloyd decided to reactivate the Vindaloo label. Ironically, this led to the demise of the Nightingales as Lloyd needed to spend more time as songwriter, producer and label boss for his relatively successful roster of artists such as We've Got A Fuzzbox And We're Gonna Use It and comedian Ted Chippington. When Fuzzbox toured America, taking the Nightingales' keyboard player with them, Lloyd dissolved the group and concentrated on a solo career. The Nightingales' legacy was wrapped up in 1991 with a compilation album for Mau Mau Records with sleeve-notes written by a still devoted John Peel.

● ALBUMS: Pigs On Purpose (Cherry Red 1982)★★★, Hysterics (Red Flame 1983)★★★, In The Good Old Country Ways (Vindaloo 1986)★★★, The Peel Sessions EP (Strange Fruit 1988)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Just A Job (Vindaloo 1983)★★★, What A Scream (Mau Mau 1991)★★★.

Nightman

Swedish pop group the Nightman comprises three musicians - Pär Brumark (vocals), Magnus Velgas (guitar) and Stry Kanarie (guitar). They formed in 1992 and were soon offered a contract with the CNR Records label. Their image was immediately distinctive - the group dressing like extras from 60s b-movies and horror films. Brumark's appearance, in particular, was unusual - he usually appeared bedecked in a top hat and tails for press photographs. The group's principal writer, he brought a history of successful songwriting to the group, having worked with Grammy award-winner Jean-Pierre Millars in France (together the enjoyed a major hit with the song 'Let Me Be Your No. 1'). Velgas has previously worked as a session guitarist and engineer in London, Sydney and Los Angeles, while Kanarie was previously a founder-member of the Swedish cult bands Ebba Grön and Rymdimperiet. Nightman's debut single, 'News', announced their style - a mix of pop/dance with strong rock guitar undercurrents. The subsequent album, Divided Colours Of The Nightman (a pun on Benetton's advertising), included several guest artists and remixers such as Treble And Bass.

● ALBUMS: Divided Colours Of The Nightman (CNR 1994)★★★.

Nightmares On Wax

Based in Leeds, England, they began as a duo of George Evelyn (DJ EASE) and Kevin Harper. In the early 80s Evelyn spent time breakdancing with the Soul City Rockers, alongside future members of Unique 3, and as Nightmares On Wax he began DJing with Harper at parties and then clubs in the mid-80s. At they same time they recorded three tracks, 'Let It Roll', 'Stating A Fact' and 'Dextrous', which they consequently sent out as a demo to various record companies in the UK and New York. Having been turned down, they released 'Let It Roll' on their own Positive Records which went on to sell 2,000 copies. In the meantime, they had met Steve Beckett who asked them to join Warp Records, who made 'Dextrous' their second release in 1989. Together with the work of such groups as LFO, Unique 3 and the Forgemasters, this track and 'Aftermath' (a UK Top 40 hit in 1990) helped to create the sound known as bleep. 'Aftermath' was unique in that its rhythms, although built on a solid four-on-the-floor foundation, sound like an embryonic drum 'n' bass track. Their next release, 'A Case Of Funk' (1991), was a successful club hit. According to many, the group's first album A Word Of Science (1991) created a blueprint for the trip-hop movement of the 90s as it merged funk and hip-hop rhythms with stark electronics, but at the time of its release it seemed to confuse those who had eagerly consumed NOW's straight dance singles. Subsequent releases, including 'Set Me Free' and 'Happiness', continued to gain critical applause. In 1992 Harper left to concentrate on his career as a DJ. Evelyn spent several years collecting samples, recording demos and co-running the club Headz in Leeds and released a few jazzy house tracks on the Warp subsidiary Nucleus. He eventually made his comeback as NOW in 1995 with the album Smoker's Delight, on which he worked with a guitarist, bassist, keyboard-player, rapper and singer. This low-tempoed abstract hip-hop album takes in a broad range of influences, including funk, soul, jazz and dub, and even touches on C&W. The following year Evelyn released 'Still Smokin'' and in 1997 remixed Omar's 'Sayin' Nothin''.

● ALBUMS: A Word Of Science (Warp 1991)★★★★, Smoker's Delight (Warp 1995)★★★★.

Nightnoise

Nightnoise are a Celtic/new age group inaugurated in Portland, Oregon, USA, by former Bothy Band member Michael O'Domhnaill and USA native Bill Oskay. O'Domhnaill spent 12 years playing guitar in the Bothy Band then four as a duo playing with Kevin Burke. Nightnoise presented him with an opportunity to escape traditional Irish jigs and reels. Though like Burke new partner Bill Oskay was also a fiddler, his style was entirely different - rooted in the classical tradition. The 'free-flowing pieces' they came up with during improvisations encouraged them to believe there was potential in forming a long-term partnership, with O'Domhnail playing piano and harmonium in addition to guitar. Two pieces they recorded at Oskay's four-track studio in Portland were tentatively mailed out to industry contacts. William Ackerman of Windham Hill Records offered them the chance to record a full album in the same vein. The results of this invitation were then released as Nightnoise, credited to O'Domhnaill and Oskay. The reaction was positive and sales were sufficient to make Nightnoise, as they now billed themselves, a permanent vehicle. Despite O'Domhnaill's reluctance to tour after 16 years on the road, Nightnoise also played their first shows, with the addition of O'Domhnaill's sister, Triona (also a former member of the Bothy Band) on piano and harmonium and flute/whistle player Brian Dunning. In 1995 Dunning returned to his full-time job as a studio producer and arranger, and was replaced by Johnny Cunningham (ex-Silly Wizard, Relativity). By now Nightnoise had acquired a significant reputation for their music, though they continued to have difficulty with their placing in a 'new age' category.

● ALBUMS: Michael O'Domhnaill And Bill Oskay Nightnoise (Windham Hill 1991)★★★, as Nightnoise Parting Tide (Windham Hill 1990)★★★, A Different Shore (Windham Hill 1995)★★★★, The White Horse Sessions (Windham Hill 1997)★★.

Nightwing

After the demise of UK band Strife in 1978, bassist/vocalist Gordon Rowley formed Nightwing, with Alec Johnson (guitar), Eric Percival (guitar), Kenny Newton (keyboards) and Steve Bartley (drums). They debuted in 1980 with Something In The Air, a grandiose AOR album in the style of Styx, Kansas or Journey. Percival quit shortly after its release, and the band continued as a four-piece to record Black Summer. This moved towards a more metallic style, in keeping with the New Wave Of British Heavy Metal, which was in full swing at the time. The band expanded once more to a five-piece with the arrival of vocalist Max Bacon for the rawer Stand Up And Be Counted. Bacon's stay was short-lived as he moved on to Bronz, with Johnson also breaking ranks soon afterwards. Dave Evans and Glynn Porrino were swiftly recruited to fill in on vocals and guitar, but their compositional abilities failed to match those of Johnson. Consequently, My Kingdom Come represented the nadir of the band's creative capabilities. Nightwing were clearly in their death throes and finally resigned hope after the disappointing Night Of Mystery, Alive!, Alive!

● ALBUMS: Something In The Air (Ovation 1980)★★★, Black Summer (Gull 1982)★★★★, Stand Up And Be Counted

(Gull 1983)★★★, My Kingdom Come (Gull 1984)★★, Night Of Mystery, Alive!, Alive! (Gull 1985)★★, Natural Survivors 80s recordings (Neat 1996)★★★.

Nilsson

b. Harry Edward Nelson III, 15 June 1941, Brooklyn, New York, USA, d. 15 January 1994, Los Angeles, California, USA. Nelson moved to Los Angeles as an adolescent and later undertook a range of different jobs before accepting a supervisor's position at the Security First National Bank. He nonetheless pursued a concurrent interest in music, recording demos of his early compositions which were then touted around the city's publishing houses. Producer Phil Spector drew on this cache of material, recording 'Paradise' and 'Here I Sit' with the Ronettes and 'This Could Be The Night' with the Modern Folk Quartet. None of these songs was released contemporaneously, but such interest inspired the artist's own releases for the Tower label. These singles - credited to 'Nilsson' - included 'You Can't Take Your Love Away From Me' and 'Good Times' (both 1966). The following year the Yardbirds recorded his 'Ten Little Indians', and Nilsson finally gave up his bank job upon hearing the Monkees' version of another composition, 'Cuddly Toy', on the radio. He secured a contract with RCA Records and made his album debut with the impressive Pandemonium Shadow Show. The selection was not only notable for Nilsson's remarkable three-octave voice, it also featured 'You Can't Do That', an enthralling montage of Beatles songs that drew considerable praise from John Lennon and inspired their subsequent friendship. The artist's own compositions continued to find favour with other acts; the Turtles recorded 'The Story Of Rock 'N' Roll', Herb Alpert and Blood, Sweat And Tears covered 'Without Her', while Three Dog Night enjoyed a US chart-topper and gold disc with 'One'. Nilsson's own version of the last-named song appeared on Ariel Ballet - a title derived from his grandparents' circus act - which also included the singer's rendition of Fred Neil's 'Everybody's Talking'. This haunting recording was later adopted as the theme to the film Midnight Cowboy and gave Nilsson his first US Top 10 hit. Harry included 'The Puppy Song', later a smash for David Cassidy, while Nilsson Sings Newman comprised solely Randy Newman material and featured the songwriter on piano. This project was followed by The Point, the soundtrack to a full-length animated television feature, but Nilsson's greatest success came with Nilsson Schmilsson and its attendant single, 'Without You'. His emotional rendition of this Badfinger-composed song sold in excess of 1 million copies, topping both the US and UK charts and garnering a 1972 Grammy for Best Male Pop and Rock Vocal Performance. Having completed the similarly-styled Son Of Schmilsson, this idiosyncratic performer confounded expectations with A Little Touch Of Schmilsson In The Night, which comprised beautifully orchestrated standards including 'Makin' Whoopee' and 'As Time Goes By'. Nilsson's subsequent career was blighted by well-publicized drinking with acquaintances John Lennon, Keith Moon and Ringo Starr. Lennon produced Nilsson's Pussy Cats (1974), an anarchic set fuelled by self-indulgence, which comprised largely pop classics, including 'Subterranean Homesick Blues', 'Save The Last Dance For Me' and 'Rock Around The Clock'. Starr, meanwhile, assisted the artist on his film soundtrack, Son Of Dracula. Ensuing releases proved inconsistent, although a 1976 adaptation of The Point, staged at London's Mermaid Theatre, was highly successful, and marked the reunion of former Monkees Davy Jones and Mickey Dolenz. By the 80s Nilsson had largely retired from music altogether, preferring to pursue business interests, the most notable of which was a film distribution company based in California's Studio City. However, in 1988 RCA released A Touch More Schmilsson In The Night which, in common with its 1973 predecessor, offered the singer's affectionate renditions of popular favourites, including two of E.Y. 'Yip' Harburg's classics, 'It's Only a Paper Moon' and 'Over The Rainbow'. The unyielding paradox of Nilsson's career is that despite achieving recognition as a superior songwriter, his best-known and most successful records were penned by other acts.

● ALBUMS: Pandemonium Shadow Show (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, Ariel Ballet (RCA 1968)★★★, Harry (RCA 1969)★★★, Skidoo film soundtrack (RCA 1969)★★, Nilsson Sings Newman (RCA 1970)★★★★, The Point (RCA 1971)★★★, Nilsson Schmilsson (RCA 1971)★★★★, Son Of Schmilsson (RCA 1972)★★, A Little Touch Of Schmilsson In The Night (RCA 1973)★★★★, Son Of Dracula (Rapple 1974)★★, Pussy Cats (RCA 1974)★★★, Duit On Mon Dei (RCA 1975)★★, The Sandman (RCA 1975)★★, That's The Way It Is (RCA 1976)★★★, Knillssonn (RCA 1977)★★, Night After Night (1979)★★, Flash Harry (Mercury 1980)★★, A Touch More Schmilsson In The Night (RCA 1988)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Early Years (One Up 1972)★★, Ariel Pandemonium Ballet (RCA 1973)★★★, Early Tymes (DJM 1977)★, Nilsson's Greatest Music (RCA 1978)★★★, Harry And ... (1979)★★, Diamond Series: Nilsson (Diamond Series 1988)★★, Nilsson '62 - The Debut Sessions (Retro 1996)★★, As Time Goes By ... The Complete Schmilsson In The Night (Camden 1997)★★★.

Nina And Frederick

This Danish singing duo was popular in the late 50s and early 60s. Nina Möller had married the wealthy Danish aristocrat Baron Frederik Jan Gustav Floris van Pallandt (b. 14 May 1934, Copenhagen, Denmark, d. 15 May 1994, Puerto Talera, Philippines) in 1954, and teamed up with her husband to record a string of duo hits, including 'Mary's Boy Child' (1959), 'Little Donkey' (1960) and 'Sucu Sucu' (1961). After having three children, they separated in 1969 largely because he wanted to retire and she did not (the marriage was dissolved in 1976). The Baron, a descendant of a Dutch ambassador to Denmark, became a virtual recluse on a farm in Ibiza (briefly purchasing the publishing rights to Burke's Peerage), then Mindoro in the Phillipines. Nina, meanwhile, ventured into cabaret and acting, making her film debut in Robert Altman's The Long Goodbye in 1973, co-starring with Elliot Gould. She was later implicated in a minor scandal in the early 70s when she went on holiday with Clifford Irving, the fraudulent biographer of Howard Hughes, who was later jailed. In 1980 she appeared briefly in American Gigolo, later adding a second Altman movie to her resumé. Although they were divorced in 1976, Nina flew out to the Philippines to bring Frederick's body back to Europe after he became the victim of a 'mysterious professional killing', along with his girlfriend Susannah, in 1994.

● ALBUMS: Nina And Frederick i (Pye 1960)★★★, Nina And Frederick ii (Pye 1961)★★★, An Evening With Nina And Frederick At The Royal Albert Hall (Pye 1966)★★★, Dawn (1967)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Nina Möller*Golden Hour Presents Nina* (1978)★★.

Nine

This musical adaptation of Federico Fellini's 1963 movie Eight And A Half, had a book by Arthur Kopit, and music and lyrics by the Broadway newcomer Maury Yeston. It opened on 9 May 1982 at the 46th Street Theatre in New York. The story follows film director Guido Contini (Raul Julia) to Europe in his quest to recharge his physical and emotional batteries, and revitalize his personal life and career. This applies particularly to his continually changing relationships with the women in his life, such as his wife (Karen Akers), his first love, Saraghina (Kathi Moss), his mother (Taina Elg), his close friend and professional colleague, Liliane LaFleur (Liliane Montevecchi), his latest discovery, (Shelley Burch), and his current mistress, Carla (Anita Morris). Yeston's innovative and tuneful score was greeted with enthusiasm, and contained songs such as 'Be Italian', 'My Husband Makes Movies', 'Only With You', 'Be On Your Own', 'Folies Bergéres', 'A Call From The Vatican', 'Nine', 'Unusual Way', 'Simple', 'Getting Tall', and 'The Grand Canal'. Tommy Tune and Thommie Walsh were responsible for the choreography and reprised their collaboration a year later for My One And Only. Tune also directed the piece, and his extraordinary staging of a production that only included one adult male, four boys, and 21 women, was generally acclaimed. He won a Tony Award for his work, and Nine gained further Tonys for best musical, score, and featured actress (Liliane Montevecchi). The show surprised many critics, and ran for 732 performances. Productions were mounted in other countries, including Australia, where it starred John Diedrich. A concert version was presented at London's Festival Hall in 1992, with Liliane Montevecchi and Jonathan Pryce, the versatile actor who came to prominence as the Engineer in Miss Saigon. The resulting two-CD set featured Ann Crumb, Elaine Paige, and a chorus of over 100, and is regarded as the most complete recorded version of Yeston's score. In 1996 London audiences saw a Donmar Warehouse production, with Larry Lamb as Guido, heading an impressive cast which included Sara Kestelman, Susannah Fellows, Jenny Galloway, Clare Burt, Eleanor David, Dilys Laye, Kiran Hocking, and Ria Jones.

Nine Below Zero

A powerful and exciting UK R&B band of the late 70s, the group took its name from a song by Sonny Boy 'Rice Miller' Williamson and was led by guitarist/singer Dennis Greaves and virtuoso harmonica player Mark Feltham. With Peter Clark (bass, vocals) and Kenny Bradley (drums), Feltham recorded the EP Packed Fair And Square (1979). This led to a recording contract with A&M Records and a live recording at London's Marquee Club where Nine Below Zero had a residency. The producer was Glyn Johns. With Stix Burkey replacing Bradley, the second album included some original songs while Third Degree was a minor UK hit. The band dissolved in the mid-80s as Feltham concentrated on session work and Greaves went on to a solo career and became a member of the Truth. However, Feltham revived Nine Below Zero at the end of the decade, signing a new recording contract with the China label. By the mid-90s they were recording with the mighty A&M when roots blues was experiencing a small rebirth.

● ALBUMS: Live At The Marquee (A&M 1980)★★★★, Don't Point Your Finger (A&M 1981)★★★, Third Degree (A&M 1982)★★★★, Live At The Venue (China 1990)★★★, Off The Hook (China 1992)★★★, Live In London (Indigo 1995)★★★, Ice Station Zebro (A&M 1996)★★, Covers (Zed 1997)★★.

Nine Inch Nails

Trent Reznor (b. 17 May 1965, Mercer, Pennsylvania, USA), the multi-instrumentalist, vocalist, and creative force behind Nine Inch Nails, trained as a classical pianist during his small-town Pennsylvania childhood, but his discovery of rock and early industrial groups, despite his dislike of the 'industrial' tag, changed his musical direction completely. Following a period working in a Cleveland recording studio and playing in local bands, Reznor began recording as Nine Inch Nails in 1988. The dark, atmospheric Pretty Hate Machine, written, played and co-produced by Reznor, was largely synthesizer-based, but the material was transformed onstage by a ferocious wall of guitars, and show-stealing Lollapalooza performances in 1991. Coupled with a major US hit with 'Head Like A Hole', it brought platinum status. Inspired by the live band, Reznor added an abrasive guitar barrage to the Nine Inch Nails sound for Broken (a subsequent remix set was titled Fixed), which hit the US Top 10, winning a Grammy for 'Wish'.

'Happiness In Slavery', however, courted controversy with an almost universally banned video, where performance artist Bob Flanagan gave himself up to be torn apart as slave to a machine, acting out the theme of control common to Reznor's lyrics. Reznor also filmed an unreleased full-length Broken video, which he said 'makes "Happiness In Slavery" look like a Disney movie'. By this time, Reznor had relocated to Los Angeles, building a studio in a rented house at 10050 Cielo Drive, which he later discovered was the scene of the Tate murders by the Manson family (much to his disgust, due to eternal interview questions thereafter about the contribution of the house's atmosphere to The Downward Spiral). Occupying the middle ground between the styles of previous releases, The Downward Spiral's multi-layered blend of synthesizer textures and guitar fury provides a fascinating soundscape for Reznor's exploration of human degradation through sex, drugs, violence, depression and suicide, closing with personal emotional pain on 'Hurt': 'I hurt myself today, To see if I still feel, I focus on the pain, The only thing that's real'. The Downward Spiral made its US debut at number 2, and a return to live work with Robin Finck (guitar), Danny Lohneer (bass, guitar), James Woolley (keyboards) and Reznor's long-time friend and drummer Chris Vrenna drew floods of praise, with Nine Inch Nails being one of the most talked-about acts at the Woodstock anniversary show. The first non-Nine Inch Nails releases on Reznor's Nothing label appeared in 1994, and the band also found time to construct an acclaimed soundtrack for Oliver Stone's film Natural Born Killers. In the following year Reznor announced plans to record an album with circus 'freak show' specialist Jim Rose, stating with typical bombast: 'the record will confront just about every issue that upsets people. It will be non-PC in every way imaginable'. In 1996/7 Reznor worked with film director David Lynch on the music score for Lost Highway.

- ALBUMS: Pretty Hate Machine (TVT 1989)★★★, Broken mini-album (Nothing 1992)★★, Fixed mini-album (Nothing 1992)★★, The Downward Spiral (Nothing 1994)★★★★, Further Down The Spiral remix mini-album (Island 1995)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Nine Inch Nails, Martin Huxley.

9 Lazy 9

(see Funki Porcini)

Nine Lives - Aerosmith

Just like the Doctor Seuss-styled top hat that Steven Tyler pops out of on stage, Aerosmith conjured up an unexpectedly great album. Sounding rejuvenated, there are enough strong new songs to add permanently to their (still) magnetic stage show. Standard Aerosmith rock comes in the shape of the excellent title track, and the album's first hit single, 'Falling In Love'. Equally good, but more interesting, are the mantic-styled 'Taste Of India' and the cheeky sexual innuendo in the many shades of 'Pink'. Lyrics such as 'pink as the bing on your cherry' show that Tyler still has a sense of humour.

- Tracks: Nine Lives; Falling In Love; Hole In My Soul; Taste Of India; Full Circle; Something's Gotta Give; Ain't That A Bitch; The Farm; Crash; 10; Pink; Falling Off; Attitude Adjustment; Fallen Angels.
- First released 1997
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: 1

999

This London-based, UK punk band was formed in May 1977. Dispensing with earlier names such as the Dials, 48 Hours and the Fanatics, Nick Cash (b. Keith Lucas, 6 May 1950, Gosport, Hampshire, England; guitar, vocals) was a former Kilburn And The High Roads guitarist and studied at Canterbury College Of Art under Ian Dury. Cash teamed up with Guy Days (guitar), Jon Watson (bass) and Pablo LaBrittain (drums) who set out to establish themselves on the thriving live scene in the capital. After releasing the fiery 'I'm Alive' on their own LaBrittain Records, United Artists signed them and quickly reissued it. Two further singles, 'Nasty Nasty' and 'Emergency', were equally memorable for their energetic melodies, though 1978's debut album featured several weaker tracks. Separates was stronger, with compelling numbers such as the single 'Homicide' resorting to muscular choruses instead of simple speed. However, LaBrittain was the subject of a motoring accident on the band's return from Scandinavia, and was replaced by friend Ed Case. With high sales of all their product in the USA, the band undertook a series of lucrative tours across the Atlantic, which earned them a degree of resentment from domestic supporters. Following the return of LaBrittain to the fold, the group signed a new contract with Radarscope Records, eventually transferring to Polydor Records. The Biggest Prize In Sport and Concrete represented their most accomplished work, although two follow-up cover version singles were evidence that inspiration was in short supply. This observation is certainly true of 1983's 13th Floor Madness, though their last studio album Face To Face was more convincing. By the end of 1985 Watson had left and was replaced by Danny Palmer, with the band once more concentrating on touring in Europe and America. In the 90s they have been the subject of a welter of compilations and live albums in the wake of renewed interest in punk nostalgia, but the better elements of their back-catalogue argue strongly against the 'dregs of punk' tag that has hung around their necks in recent times.

- ALBUMS: 999 (United Artists 1978)★★★, Separates (United Artists 1978)★★★, High Energy Plan US version of Separates with different track-listing (PVC 1979)★★★, The Biggest Prize In Sport (Polydor 1980)★★★, The Biggest Tour In Sport live mini-album (Polydor 1980)★★★, Concrete (Polydor 1981)★★★, 13th Floor Madness (Albion 1983)★★, Face To Face (Labrittain 1985)★★★, You Us It (1994)★★.

●COMPILATIONS: The Singles Album (United Artists 1980)★★★, Greatest Hits (Albion 1984)★★, In Case Of Emergency (Dojo 1986)★★, Lust Power And Money (ABC 1987)★★, Live And Loud!! (Link 1989)★★, The Cellblock Tapes (Link 1990)★★, The Early Stuff - The UA Years (EMI 1992)★★★.
●VIDEOS: Feelin' Alright With The Crew (Jettisoundz 1987).

1910 Fruitgum Company

The aptly named Fruitgum Company were at the forefront of a brief wave of bubblegum-pop in the late 60s. Bubblegum was a form that offered solid dance beats, infantile lyrics and catchy choruses built around instantly hummable melody lines. The Super K production team of Jeff Katz and Jerry Kasenetz were masters of the form and specialized in studio in-house creations such as the Fruitgum Company. Writer Joey Levine was the voice behind the hits which began with the nursery game anthem 'Simon Says' in 1968 and continued with '1, 2, 3, Red Light', 'Goody Goody Gumdrops', 'Indian Giver' and 'Special Delivery'. A touring troupe headed by Levine was hastily assembled and kept this manufactured group alive until they became expendable at the end of the decade.
●ALBUMS: Simon Says (1968)★★, 1, 2, 3, Red Light (1968)★★, Indian Giver (1969)★★, 1910 Fruitgum Company And Ohio Express (1969)★★★.

1962-66 - The Beatles

From the famous pair of red and blue, this one was always the poor relative, being one or two positions behind in the charts and selling one or two million fewer copies. Quite why will never be known, as the singles contained on this were bigger hits, and make for a better greatest hits package. You cannot tamper with the general opinion of the record buying public. What would be easier is that the every government throughout the world give every child a complete set of Beatles albums when they start school. They will always be the greatest popular 'beat combo' in the world.

- Tracks: Love Me Do; Please Please Me; From Me To You; She Loves You; I Want To Hold Your Hand; All My Loving; Can't Buy Me Love; A Hard Day's Night; And I Love Her; Eight Days A Week; I Feel Fine; Ticket To Ride; Yesterday; Help; You've Got To Hide Your Love Away; We Can Work It Out; Day Tripper; Drive My Car; Norwegian Wood; Nowhere Man; Michelle; In My Life; Girl; Paperback Writer; Eleanor Rigby; Yellow Submarine.
- First released 1973
- UK peak chart position: 3
- USA peak chart position: 3

1967-70 - The Beatles

The famous red and blue double albums were finally released on CD in 1994 to a public outcry, with complaints that the price was too high. The record company argued that it was the high royalty negotiated with the artists that hiked up the price of a double CD. It made no difference whatsoever: both albums zoomed into the charts as everybody forked out £20 for the pleasure of buying tracks they already owned in some other shape or form - such is the power of the greatest pop group that ever was and will ever be. No discussion of the tracks is necessary - they are already part of our national heritage, and should be sung in morning assembly in every school in every part of the world.

- Tracks: Strawberry Fields Forever; Penny Lane; Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band; With A Little Help From My Friends; Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds; A Day In The Life; All You Need Is Love; I Am The Walrus; Hello Goodbye; The Fool On The Hill; Magical Mystery Tour; Lady Madonna; Hey Jude; Revolution; Back In The USSR; While My Guitar Gently Weeps; Ob La Di Ob La Da; Get Back; Don't Let Me Down; Ballad Of John And Yoko; Old Brown Shoe; Here Comes The Sun; Come Together; Something; Octopus's Garden; Let It Be; Across The Universe; The Long And Winding Road.
- First released 1973
- UK peak chart position: 2
- USA peak chart position: 1

1984 - Van Halen

Vocalist David Lee Roth's final record for the band and as such, the album stands as a testament of worth somewhere between high camp and high class. Eddie Van Halen's venerable, rolling guitar pulled immaculately into place, while his new-found love of the keyboard gave them their first international smash with 'Jump'. However, it is the quite demented rush of 'Panama', and the hilarious 'Hot For Teacher', with Roth exuding a droll litany of school-yard fantasies over a thunderous Alex Van Halen backbeat, that gives ultimate credence to the rock 'n' roll party that was the Roth/Van Halen partnership.

- Tracks: Jump; Panama; Top Jimmy; Drop Dead Legs; Hot For Teacher; I'll Wait; Girl Gone Bad; House Of Pain.
- First released 1984
- UK peak chart position: 15
- USA peak chart position: 2

1994

This US melodic-rock quartet was formed in 1977 by ex-L.A. Jets duo Karen Lawrence (vocals) and John Desautels (drums). With the addition of Steve Schiff (guitar) and Bill Rhodes (bass), they signed to A&M Records and released a self-titled debut the following year. This was characterized by Lawrence's powerful vocals and a style that incorporated elements of Heart, Aerosmith and Foreigner. Guitarist Steve Schiff was replaced by Rick Armand on Please Stand By, which lacked the rough edges of their debut, and saw them move towards mainstream AOR. Success eluded the band and Lawrence left in 1980. After a decade of less than successful projects, which have included collaborations with Cheap Trick, Jeff Beck and Rod Stewart, it was rumoured that Lawrence might re-form 1994. However, the only firm evidence of any such move was the guest appearance of Steve Schiff on her 1986 solo album.

● ALBUMS: 1994 (A&M 1978), Please Stand By (A&M 1979). Solo: Karen Lawrence Rip & Tear (FM Revolver 1986).

19naughtyIII - Naughty By Nature

New Jersey residents Treach, Vinnie and DJ Kay Gee were initially heavily influenced by the patronage of Queen Latifah, with their rhymes drenched in the atmosphere of the street and ghetto vernacular. Unlike other hardcore outfits, however, they were not afraid of injecting a touch of soul into the mix, which makes the best of their work all the more endearing. Their debut set had provided the huge crossover hit, 'OPP', the largest-grossing authentic rap single in the USA in 1990. This, their second album, was preceded by another big single, 'Hip Hop Hooray' (with a Spike Lee-filmed video), and is a more seamless collection.

●Tracks: 19 Naughty III; Hip Hop Hooray; Take It To Ya Face; Daddy Was A Street Corner; The Hood Comes First; The Only Ones; It's On; Cruddy Clique; Knock 'Em Out Da Box; Hot Potato; Sleepin; On Jersey; Written On Ya Kitten; Sleepwalkin' II; Shout Outs.

●First released 1993

●UK peak chart position: 40

●USA peak chart position: did not chart

95 South

From the Chill Deal Boys (who recorded albums for Quality Records) stable, and part of Toy Productions, 95 South were credited with starting a mini-revival in electro hip hop with their huge 1993 hit, 'Whoot! There It Is'. Sampling Afrika Bambaataa's epic 'Planet Rock', the single returned to goodtime, basic beat-box tunes, with lyrics concentrating on the party angle, underpinned by the mighty Florida/Miami Bass sound. It was released in competition with Tag Team's similarly themed record. and was followed by an album that, good as it was in its own right, offered more of exactly the same. The group comprises Bootyman, Church's, Black and DJ Marcus. Together they created a monster in 'Whoot!' that refused to die; after high-profile appearances on programmes like The Arsenio Hall Show it was adopted by both the New Orleans' Saints and Philadelphia Fillies as their theme tune. All of this was lapped up by the protagonists: 'We are a group with a simple message. We are positive, not political or controversial. We make fun music that anyone can get into'.

● ALBUMS: Quad City Knock (Wrap 1993)★★★.

Ninja Tune Records

This London-based label was conceived in 1990 by Coldcut's Jonathan Moore and Matt Black after they had found it increasingly difficult to deal with major record companies whose vision extended only to the formulae of house and techno. With its roots in their DJing philosophy they set out to provide a vehicle for their own experimentation, taking pride in an eclectic DIY approach that drew from every kind of source, quite literally including the kitchen sink. With its mixture of breakbeats, hip-hop, jazz, funk, ambience and amusing samples, Ninja Tune has established itself as producing self-consciously interesting, humorous music. Their first releases included Bogus Order's Zen Brakes (1991), the DJ Food Jazz Brakes series, and albums by Hex and 9 Lazy 9. With the rise of the Bristol scene they were unfortunately branded with the trip-hop tag by the press which did nothing to express the real diversity and eccentricity behind the label: 'We regard ourselves as scientists of sound . . . getting back to that sense of wonder you feel as a child when everything seems incredibly weird . . . Complex systems and non-linear behaviour are actually about the real world, as opposed to Newtonian simplifications of the real world'. They have since released most varied music by Amon Tobin, Kid Koala, Chocolate Weasel, Coldcut, the London Funk Allstars, Funki Porcini and the Herbaliser among others. Ninja Tune continue to produce an impressive range of compilations, notably Funkjazztickle Tricknology (1995), Flexistentialism (1996) and Funkungfusion (1998). Various related projects have included Coldcut's Solid Steel show on Kiss FM, the club nights Stealth (at the Blue Note) and later Kung Fusion (Turnmill's and 333) and Hex Media DJ and VJ activities. The subsidiary label N-Tone was created to cater for artists with a more of an electronic sound including Journeyman, Neotropic and Override, while Big Dada concentrated on a more pure hip-hop sound.

Ninjaman

b. Desmond Ballantine, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Notorious from his long history of fearless controversy on record, stage show and sound system, Ninjaman's popularity in the Jamaican dancehalls has been unrivalled. He began DJing when he was 12, progressing to the Black Culture sound system and then Killimanjaro, where from 1984 onwards he was apprentice to Supercat and Early B, known as Double Ugly. When another DJ appeared with the same name, he became Uglyman, recording his debut for the Soul Carib label. That name, too, was short-lived; a second Uglyman arrived and, determined to forge an identity of his own, 'Ugly' quickly became Ninja. His first hit, 'Protection', was self-produced, and voiced alongside Courtney Melody in 1987. The following year Lloyd Dennis teamed him with Tinga Stewart for a notable string of hits including 'Cover Me' and then 'Zig It Up', duetted with Flourgon. His early producers included King Jammy, Witty, Redman and Ini Kamoze, but it was with the advent of the Gulf War in 1990 that he became transformed into the archetypal outlaw, brandishing the title of 'Original Front Tooth, Gold Tooth, Gun Pon Tooth Don Gorgon', and recording a bounty of apocalyptic 'burial' tunes interspersed with the most uncompromising 'reality' lyrics heard from any DJ of the ragga era. His sense of melodrama and stuttering verbal walkabouts were unique; he spread his fiery invective over many fine sides for Bobby Digital ('Permit To Bury', 'Fulfilment'), King Jammy ('Border Clash'/'Reality Yuh Want'), Mr. Doo ('Murder Weapon'), Gussie Clarke ('Above The Law'), Steely And Clevie ('Murder Dem') and Exterminator throughout 1991-92. Among his many targets has been Shabba Ranks, who has had to endure an incessant stream of taunts over the years. By the end of 1992, after surviving a bout of Christianity, an arrest on gun charges and a flood of imitators, his talents had become overexposed, though he remained one of the few genuinely original DJs to remain without a major record contract. Instead, he made unremarkable albums for Henry 'Junjo' Lawes and then Junior Reid, still waiting for a much-deserved wider audience.

● ALBUMS: Super Star (Witty 1989)★★★, with Courtney Melody Protection (1989)★★★, Kill Them & Done (Tassa 1990)★★★, Out Pon Bail (Exterminator 1990)★★★★, Move From Here (1990)★★★, Run Come Test (RAS 1990)★★★, with Capleton And Tony Rebel Real Rough (1990)★★★, with Johnny P And Japanese Rough, Mean & Deadly - Ninja Man With Johnny P (Pickout 1990)★★, Reggae Sunsplash (Pickout 1991)★★, Warning You Now (Jammys 1991)★★★, Nobody's Business But My Own (Shanachie 1991)★★, My Weapon (Mr Doo 1991)★★★, Bounty Hunter (Blue Mountain 1991)★★★★, Target Practice (Jammys 1992)★★★, Original Front Tooth, Gold Tooth, Gun Pon Tooth Don Gorgon (Greensleeves 1992)★★★★, Sing-A-Ling-A-Ling School Pickney Sing Ting (Greensleeves 1992)★★★, Hardcore Killing (Greensleeves 1993)★★★, Booyakka! Booyakka! (Greensleeves 1994)★★.

● VIDEOS: with Shabba Ranks Reggae Sting Volume 1 (1992).

Nino And The Ebb Tides

Formed in the Bronx, New York, USA, the Ebb Tides (as they were originally called) featured classmates Antonio 'Nino' Aiello (lead), Tony Delesio (baritone), Vinnie Drago (bass) and Rudy (tenor). Their recording debut, 'Franny Franny', came after meeting talent scout Murray Jacobs in 1957. By the end of the year they had extended their title to Nino And The Ebb Tides and transferred to Recorte Records. Their second single, 'Puppy Love', saw Delesio and Rudy replaced by Tony Imbimbo (baritone) and Ralph Bracco (tenor). This sold well in the New York area, but, like its successors, 'I'm Confessin'' and 'Don't Look Around', it failed to make any national headway. In 1960 Tony DiBari replaced Bracco and the group moved to Marco Records. This resulted in only one single, 'Someday', before they joined Madison Records. Their first effort for Madison was a version of 'Those Oldies But Goodies Remind Me Of You', but its impact was dulled by a competing version by Little Caesar And The Romans. The Ebb Tides followed up with another nostalgic doo-wop record, 'Juke Box Saturday Night'. This at last brought them mainstream success. Like its predecessor, it used snatches of familiar doo-wop classics in the background, and peaked at number 57 in the US charts. Despite the breakthrough, Madison was suffering financial difficulties and the Ebb Tides moved on again, this time to Mr Peacock Records. However, 'Happy Guy' failed to chart, though more damaging was the group's decision to pass on a song written by Ernie Maresca, 'The Wanderer', which became a massive seller for Del-Satins. The Ebb Tides folded in 1965 after a handful of singles for ever more obscure labels. They did reunite in 1971, however, and again in the 80s for a series of 50s revival shows.

Nirvana (UK)

Songwriters Patrick Campbell-Lyons (b. Dublin, Eire) and George Alex Spyropoulus (b. Athens, Greece) met in La Gioconda, a legendary coffee bar in Denmark Street, London. Prior to that Campbell-Lyons had been a member of the Teenbeats and had covered the familiar territory of seedy clubs in Holland and Germany. Spyropoulus was working at Kassners music publishers, also in Denmark Street. Having established an instant rapport, the duo formed a group, adding Ray Singer (guitar), Brian Henderson (bass), Michael Coe (viola, french horn) and Sylvia Schuster (cello). The quintet, dubbed Nirvana, secured a recording deal with Island Records after impressing producer Jimmy Miller who in turn influenced Chris Blackwell. They made their official debut in 1967, supporting Traffic, Jackie Edwards and Spooky Tooth at the Saville Theatre, London (owned at that time by Brian Epstein). Their exotic debut, The Story Of Simon Simopath, was an episodic fairy tale. It emerged in a startlingly colourful cover, featuring a winged child and miniature goddess and centaur, surrounded by stars, planets and three-dimensional block typography. A kitsch concept album that billed itself as a 'science-fiction pantomime', the mock libretto told of the hero's journey from a six-dimensional city to a nirvana filled with sirens. Although the songs generally lacked the weight of their epochal singles, there were some charming moments. It contained the haunting 'Pentecost Hotel', a fragile, orchestrated ballad that brought the group critical approval and was a hit in Europe. The classical gentle mood was perfect for the times.

The Alan Bown Set covered the singalong 'We Can Help You', which received considerable airplay, but narrowly failed to chart. Nirvana themselves were plugged by several discriminating disc jockeys but in spite of the innovative qualities of their singles, the group fell tantalizingly short of a major breakthrough. Campbell-Lyons and Spyropoulus then disbanded the group format and completed a second set as a duo. This melodic collection featured several of Nirvana's finest songs, including 'Tiny Goddess' and 'Rainbow Chaser'. The latter was a powerhouse phased-production, typical of Nirvana's grandiose majesty, and became a minor UK hit in 1968. That same year a strong album followed with All Of Us, but soon after the group left Island and their following albums, Black Flower and To Markos III were considerably low-key. The group's career had already begun to falter when their label rejected To Markos III. The selection was placed with an American company which then went into liquidation. Spyropoulus dropped out of the partnership and moved into film work, leaving his colleague with the rights to the Nirvana trademark. Having completed a fourth album, Local Anaesthetic, Campbell-Lyons became a producer with the Vertigo label, while recording Songs Of Love And Praise, a compendium of new songs and re-recorded Nirvana favourites. This release was the last to bear the group's name. Campbell-Lyons subsequently issued two solo albums before reuniting with Spyropoulus for a projected musical, Blood. In the 90s the band are very much a cult item, their original vinyl albums fetch high prices and the CDs have been reissued by Edsel with fascinating sleeve notes from Campbell-Lyons, which are largely drawn from his forthcoming autobiography.

● ALBUMS: The Story Of Simon Simopath (Island 1967)★★★, All Of Us (Island 1968)★★, To Markos 3 (Pye 1969)★★, Local Anaesthetic (Vertigo 1971)★★★, Songs Of Love And Praise (Philips 1972)★★. Solo: Patrick Campbell Lyons Me And My Friend (1973)★★, The Electric Plough (1981)★★, The Hero I Might Have Been (1982)★★.
Compilations Black Flower (1987)★★★, Secret Theatre (Edsel 1987)★★★, Orange And Blue (Demon 1996)★★★.

Nirvana (USA)

Formed in Aberdeen, Washington, USA, in 1988, the Nirvana that the MTV generation came to love comprised Kurt Cobain (b. Kurt Donald Cobain, 20 February 1967, Hoquiam, Seattle, USA, d. 5 April 1994, Seattle, Washington, USA; guitar, vocals), Krist Novoselic (b. 16 May 1965, Croatia, Yugoslavia; bass) and Dave Grohl (b. 14 January 1969, Warren, Ohio, USA; drums). Grohl was 'something like our sixth drummer', explained Cobain, and had been recruited from east coast band Dave Brammage, having previously played with Scream, who recorded for Minor Threat's influential Dischord Records label. Their original drummer was Chad Channing; at one point Dinosaur Jr's J. Mascis had been touted as a permanent fixture, along with Dan Peters from Mudhoney. Having been signed by the Seattle-based Sub Pop Records, the trio completed their debut single, 'Love Buzz'/'Big Cheese', the former a song written and first recorded by 60s Dutch group Shocking Blue. Second guitarist Jason Everman was then added prior to Bleach, which cost a meagre $600 to record. Though he was pictured on the cover, he played no part in the actual recording (going on to join Mindfunk, via Soundgarden and Skunk). The set confirmed Nirvana's ability to match heavy riffs with melody and it quickly attracted a cult following. However, Channing left the group following a European tour, and as a likely replacement proved hard to find, Dan Peters from labelmates Mudhoney stepped in on a temporary basis. He was featured on the single 'Sliver', Nirvana's sole 1990 release. New drummer David Grohl reaffirmed a sense of stability. The revamped trio secured a prestigious contract with Geffen Records, whose faith was rewarded with Nevermind, which broke the band worldwide. This was a startling collection of songs that transcended structural boundaries, notably the distinctive slow verse/fast chorus format, and almost single-handedly brought the 'grunge' subculture overground. It topped the US charts early in 1992, eclipsing much-vaunted competition from Michael Jackson and Dire Straits and topped many Album Of The Year polls. The opening track, 'Smells Like Teen Spirit', reached the UK Top 10, further confirmation that Nirvana now combined critical and popular acclaim. In early 1992 the romance of Cobain and Courtney Love of Hole was sealed when the couple married (Love giving birth to a daughter, Frances Bean). It was already obvious, however, that Cobain was struggling with his new role as 'spokesman for a generation'. The first big story to break concerned an article in Vanity Fayre that alleged Love had taken heroin while pregnant; this saw the state intercede on the child's behalf by not allowing the Cobains alone with the child during its first month. Press interviews ruminated on the difficulties experienced in recording a follow-up album, and also revealed Cobain's use of a variety of drugs in order to stem the pain arising from a stomach complaint. The recording of In Utero, produced by Big Black/Rapeman alumnus Steve Albini, was not without difficulties. Rumours circulated concerning confrontations with both Albini and record company Geffen over the 'low-fi' production. When the record was finally released, the effect was not as immediate as Nevermind, although Cobain's songwriting remained inspired on 'Penny Royal Tea', 'All Apologies' and the evocative 'Rape Me'. His descent into self-destruction accelerated in 1994, however, as he went into a coma during dates in Italy (it was later confirmed that this had all the markings of a failed suicide attempt), before returning to Seattle to shoot himself on 5 April 1994. The man who had long protested that Nirvana were 'merely' a punk band had finally been destroyed by the success that overtook him and them. The wake conducted in the press was matched by public demonstrations of affection and loss, which included suspected copycat suicides. The release of MTV Unplugged In New York offered some small comfort for Cobain's fans, with the singer's understated, aching delivery on a variety of cover versions and Nirvana standards enduring as one of the most emotive sights and sounds of the 90s. Grohl formed the excellent Foo Fighters, alongside ex-Germs guitarist Pat Smear (who had added second guitar to previous touring engagements and the band's MTV Unplugged appearance), following press rumours that Grohl would be working with Pearl Jam (much to Courtney Love's chagrin) or Tom Petty. Novoselic formed Sweet 75 early in 1997.

● ALBUMS: Bleach (Sub Pop 1989)★★★★, Nevermind (Geffen 1991)★★★★★, In Utero (Geffen 1993)★★★★, MTV Unplugged In New York (Geffen 1994)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Incesticide (Geffen 1992)★★★, Singles (Geffen 1995)★★★★, From The Muddy Banks Of The Wishkah (Geffen 1996)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live! Tonight! Sold Out!! (Geffen 1994), Teen Spirit: The Tribute To Kurt Cobain (Labyrinth 1996).

● FURTHER READING: Route 666: On The Road To Nirvana, Gina Arnold. Nirvana And The Sound Of Seattle, Brad Morrell. Come As You Are, Michael Azerrad. Nirvana: An Illustrated Biography, Suzi Black. Nirvana: Tribute, Suzi Black. Never Fade Away, Dave Thompson. Kurt Cobain, Christopher Sandford. Nirvana: Nevermind, Susan Wilson.

● FILMS: Kurt And Courtney (1998).

Nistico, Sal

b. Salvatore Nistico, 12 April 1940, Syracuse, New York, USA, d. 3 March 1991. Nistico started out on alto saxophone, later switching to tenor and joining an R&B band. In the late 50s he joined the Jazz Brothers, a band led by Gap and Chuck Mangione. In 1962 he became a member of the Woody Herman band, to which he returned frequently during the next two decades. Also in the 60s he spent some time in the band of Count Basie and early in the 70s he was with Don Ellis. In the next few years he worked with Buddy Rich and Slide Hampton, with whom he visited Europe. Eventually he settled in Europe, working there through the 80s. A bristling, aggressive player in the post-bop tradition, Nistico's live and recorded performances are filled with excitement and a vitality that made his sudden death in 1991 all the more tragic.

● ALBUMS: with Chuck Mangione Hey Baby! (1961)★★★, Heavyweights (1961)★★★, Comin' On Up (1962)★★★, Woody Herman, 1963 (1963)★★★★, Encore (1963)★★★, with Herman Woody's Winners (1965)★★★, The Buddy Rich Septet (1974)★★★★, Just For Fun (1976)★★, East Of Isar (1978)★★★, Neo/Nistico (1978)★★★.

Nitty Gritty

b. Glen Augustus Holness, 1957, August Town, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies, d. 24 June 1991, Brooklyn, New York, USA. Nitty Gritty rose to prominence as computerized rhythms took hold in Jamaica, alongside Tenor Saw, King Kong and Anthony Red Rose, all of whom shared a similar vocal style. Gritty's was a deep-throated, gospel-tinged wail distinguished by improvised catchphrases. He was born the second eldest of 11 children in a church-going family, and he trained as an electrician before founding a local group called the Soulites. In 1973 he sang 'Let The Power Fall On I' with Dennis Brown, George Nooks and the Mighty Diamonds for Joe Gibbs, but his first solo release, 'Every Man Is A Seller', did not arrive for another decade, being voiced for Sugar Minott's Youth Promotion label. After a spell on the Zodiac sound system with Danny Dread he cut several sides at Channel One, and two for Eric 'Bubbles' Howard of the African Brothers, before moving on to George Phang in 1984. By the following April he had joined forces with King Jammy and their first release together, 'Hog In A Minty', was an instant success, with its haunting vocal refrain and shuffling 'tempo' rhythm track. It was promptly followed by 'Good Morning Teacher', 'Sweet Reggae Music', 'Run Down The World' and 'Gimme Some Of Your Something', all of them sizeable hits. His debut album, Turbo Charged, arrived in 1986 as did Musical Confrontation, on which credits were shared with King Kong. Soon afterwards, he moved to London and then to New York, his output becoming more varied but lacking the impact of his work with Jammys. Singles appeared for Uptempo, Black Solidarity and Skengdon. He returned to form with General Penitentiary, recorded with the Studio One Band in 1987, which was far more like the Nitty Gritty of old. By 1989 an album for Blacker Dread had arrived with material dating back to his first visit to England in 1986, after which he became relatively inactive. At the age of 34 he was shot dead outside Super Power record shop in Brooklyn, New York.

● ALBUMS: Turbo Charged (Greensleeves 1986)★★★, with King Kong Musical Confrontation (Jammys 1986)★★★, General Penitentiary (Black Victory 1987)★★★★, Nitty Gritty (Witty 1988)★★★, Jah In The Family (Blacker Dread/SCOM 1989)★★, with Tenor Saw Powerhouse Presents (Powerhouse 1989)★★★.

Nitty Gritty Dirt Band

Formed in Long Beach, California, in 1965, this enduring attraction evolved from the region's traditional circuit. Founder-members Jeff Hanna (b. 11 July 1947; guitar, vocals) and Bruce Kunkel (guitar, vocals) had worked together as the New Coast Two, prior to joining the Illegitimate Jug Band. Glen Grosclose (drums), Dave Hanna (guitar, vocals), Ralph Barr (guitar) and Les Thompson (bass, vocals) completed the embryonic Dirt Band line-up, although Grosclose and Dave Hanna quickly made way for Jimmie Fadden (drums, guitar) and Jackson Browne (guitar, vocals). Although the last musician only remained for a matter of months - he was replaced by John McEuen - his songs remained in the group's repertoire throughout their early career. Nitty Gritty Dirt Band comprised jug-band, vaudeville and pop material, ranging from the quirky 'Candy Man' to the orchestrated folk/pop of 'Buy For Me The Rain', a minor US hit. Ricochet maintained this balance, following which Chris Darrow, formerly of Kaleidoscope (US), replaced Kunkel. The Dirt Band completed two further albums, and enjoyed a brief appearance in the film Paint Your Wagon, before disbanding in 1969. The group reconvened the following year around Jeff Hanna, John McEuen, Jimmie Fadden, Les Thompson and newcomer Jim Ibbotson. Having abandoned the jokey elements of their earlier incarnation, they pursued a career as purveyors of superior country rock. The acclaimed Uncle Charlie And His Dog Teddy included excellent versions of Mike Nesmith's 'Some Of Shelly's Blues', Kenny Loggins' 'House At Pooh Corner' and Jerry Jeff Walker's 'Mr. Bojangles', a US Top 10 hit in 1970. Will The Circle Be Unbroken, recorded in Nashville, was an expansive collaboration between the group and traditional music mentors Doc Watson, Roy Acuff, Merle Travis and Earl Scruggs. Its charming informality inspired several stellar performances and the set played an important role in breaking down mistrust between country's establishment and the emergent 'long hair' practitioners. Les Thompson left the line-up following the album's completion, but the remaining quartet, buoyed by an enhanced reputation, continued their eclectic ambitions on Stars And Stripes Forever and Dreams. In 1976 the group dropped its 'Nitty Gritty' prefix and, as the Dirt Band, undertook a pioneering USSR tour the following year. Both Hanna and Ibbotson enjoyed brief sabbaticals, during which time supplementary musicians were introduced. By 1982 the prodigals had rejoined Fadden, McEuen and newcomer Bob Carpenter (keyboards) for Let's Go. The Dirt Band were, by then, an American institution with an enduring international popularity. 'Long Hard Road (Sharecropper Dreams)' and 'Modern Day Romance' topped the country charts in 1984 and 1985, respectively, but the following year a now-weary McEuen retired from the line-up. Former Eagles guitarist Bernie Leadon augmented the group for Working Band, but left again on its completion. He was, however, featured on Will The Circle Be Unbroken Volume Two, on which the Dirt Band rekindled the style of their greatest artistic triumph with the aid of several starring names, including Emmylou Harris, Chet Atkins, Johnny Cash, Ricky Skaggs, Roger McGuinn and Chris Hillman. The set deservedly drew plaudits for a group about to enter the 90s with its enthusiasm still intact. Acoustic, released in 1994, was a credible and well-produced set.

● ALBUMS: The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band (Liberty 1967)★★★, Ricochet (Liberty 1967)★★★, Rare Junk (Liberty 1968)★★, Alive (Liberty 1969)★★, Uncle Charlie And His Dog Teddy (Liberty 1970)★★★★, All The Good Times (United Artists 1972)★★★, Will The Circle Be Unbroken triple album (United Artists 1972)★★★★, Stars And Stripes Forever (United Artists 1974)★★, Dreams (United Artists 1975)★★★. As Dirt Band Dirt Band (United Artists 1978)★★, An American Dream (United Artists 1979)★★, Make A Little Magic (United Artists 1980)★★, Jealousy (United Artists 1981)★★. As Nitty Gritty Dirt Band Let's Go (United Artists 1983)★★, Plain Dirt Fashion (Warners. 1984)★★★, Partners, Brothers And Friends (Warners 1985)★★★, Hold On (Warners 1987)★★★, Workin' Band (Warners. 1988)★★★, Will The Circle Be Unbroken Volume II (Warners. 1989)★★★★, The Rest Of The Dream (MCA 1991)★★★, Not Fade Away (Liberty 1992)★★, Acoustic (Liberty 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Pure Dirt (Liberty UK 1968)★★, Dead And Alive (Liberty UK 1969)★★, Dirt, Silver And Gold (United Artists 1976)★★★, Gold From Dirt (United Artists UK 1980)★★★, Early Dirt 1967-1970 (Decal UK 1986)★★★, Twenty Years Of Dirt (Warners 1987)★★★★, Country Store: The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band (Country Store 1987)★★, The Best Of The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band Volume 2 (Atlantic 1988)★★, More Great Dirt: The Best Of The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, Volume 2 (Warners 1989)★★.

Nitzer Ebb

The driving force behind this electronic-based band are Douglas McCarthy (b. 1 September 1966, Chelmsford, Essex, England; vocals) and Bon Harris (b. 12 August 1965, Chelmsford, Essex, England; percussion, vocals). Frustrated by their environment at school in Chelmsford, and inspired by bands such as DAF, Bauhaus and the Birthday Party, they began their first experiments with synthesizers and drum machines in 1983. They were joined in their strictly amateur pursuits by schoolmate David Gooday. They had summoned enough experience and confidence to release their first single the next year, 'Isn't It Funny How Your Body Works', on Power Of Voice Communications. They were nothing if not prolific, releasing a further five singles over the next twelve months, which led to a contract with the premier UK independent stable, Mute Records, and Geffen Records in the USA. Their first album reached the shelves in 1987, That Total Age, home to surging minimalist aggression, and the beginning of a long-term relationship with producer Flood, who would remix the single 'Join In The Chant'. On Gooday's departure Julian Beeston was enrolled. After a lengthy European trek with Depeche Mode, the band recorded Belief, and in 1989 followed up their own world tour with Showtime. Their third album revealed a swing in attitude, with music that was less confrontational and more consumer-friendly. This was particularly true in the USA, where the single 'Fun To Be Had' peaked at number 2 in the US dance charts. Their most recent albums have confirmed their popularity with fans and a previously reluctant press. As McCarthy puts it: 'With the advent of Ebbhead, I think we've managed to twist listenability around to our way of thinking'.

● ALBUMS: That Total Age (Mute 1987)★★, Belief (Mute 1988)★★, Showtime (Mute 1989)★★★, Ebbhead (Mute 1991)★★★, Big Hit (Mute 1995)★★★.

Nitzinger, John

b. Texas, USA. This energetic and highly talented guitarist/vocalist specializes in blues-based hard rock and boogie, and has worked with Bloodrock, Alice

Cooper and Carl Palmer's P.M., supplying ferocious Ted Nugent-inspired guitar chords to each. Members of Bloodrock, for whom he also wrote songs, returned the favour by appearing on his solo material. His three albums on his own account are highly varied and explore a wider range of styles than might initially be imagined. Psychedelia, jazz, rock, blues and metal nuances have been integrated within his own extrovert approach, though since the mid-70s his recording career has taken a back seat to session work.

- ALBUMS: Nitzinger (Capitol 1971)★★★, One Foot In History (Capitol 1972)★★★, Live Better...Electrically (20th Century 1976)★★.

Nitzsche, Jack

b. 22 April 1937, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Nitzsche's long career began in the late 50s when he joined a cabal of young, Los Angeles-based, aspiring entrepreneurs including Lee Hazelwood, Lou Adler and Nick Venet. He became acquainted with Sonny Bono, then head of A&R at Specialty Records, with whom he wrote 'Needles And Pins', later an international hit for the Searchers. Nitzsche established his reputation as an arranger through an association with Phil Spector. His contribution to recordings by the Crystals, Ronettes, Righteous Brothers and Ike And Tina Turner should not be under-emphasized, while a similar relationship with the Rolling Stones resulted in several of the group's classic releases, notably 'The Last Time', 'Satisfaction' and 'Get Off Of My Cloud'. Nitzsche also enjoyed success in his own right as a performer with 'The Lonely Surfer' (1963), before garnering further acclaim for his arranging/production skills for Jackie DeShannon, P.J. Proby and Bob Lind. In 1966 he co-produced 'Expecting To Fly' for Buffalo Springfield, a track essentially viewed as a solo vehicle for group guitarist Neil Young. Their relationship continued when the latter opted for a solo career and Nitzsche not only assisted with the recording of Neil Young and Harvest, but joined the on-tour backing group, Crazy Horse, contributing extensively to their debut album. Having scored the film Performance, Nitzsche won considerable approbation for similar work on The Exorcist and One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest. The artist also rekindled solo aspirations with the neo-classical St. Giles Cripplegate, before enjoying further success with arrangements for Mac Davis, Randy Newman and the Tubes. He remains an integral part of the US west coast music industry. He is married to Buffy Sainte-Marie.

- ALBUMS: The Lonely Surfer (Reprise 1963)★★★, Dance To The Hits Of The Beatles (Reprise 1964)★, Chopin '66 (Rerise 1966)★★, St. Giles Cripplegate (1972)★★.

Nix, Don

b. 27 September 1941, Memphis, Tennessee, USA. Saxophonist Nix was one of several aspiring high-school musicians forming the basis of the Mar-Keys. This renowned instrumental group enjoyed several R&B-styled bestsellers and became the house band for the Stax record company during the mid-60s, performing on sessions for Otis Redding, Rufus Thomas, Wilson Pickett and Sam And Dave. Nix moved to California in 1965 where he became acquainted with several 'southern' expatriates, notably Leon Russell and Delaney And Bonnie. Nix produced the latter's Home, then subsequently worked with Albert King and John Mayall, and completed several uneven, yet endearing, albums. In 1972 he toured with the ambitious Alabama State Troupers, an ad hoc musical carnival that also included Lonnie Mack, Jeannie Greene, Marlin Greene and Furry Lewis. Although never a well-known figure, Nix retained the respect of his contemporaries.

- ALBUMS: In God We Trust (Shelter 1971)★★★, Living By The Days (Elektra 1971)★★★, Hobos, Heroes And Street Corner Clowns (Stax 1974)★★★, Gone Too Long (1976)★★, Skyrider (1979)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Road Stories And Recipes, Don Nix.

Nix, Willie

b. 6 August 1922, Memphis, Tennessee, USA, d. 8 July 1991, Leland, Mississippi, USA. Starting as a dancer and comedian, Nix switched to drums, and worked in Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee from his Memphis base in the 40s and 50s. Recorded in 1951 by Sam Phillips as a blues-singing drummer, Nix appeared on albums for Sun, RPM and Checker. Nix moved to Chicago in 1953 where he played the clubs, and recorded four tracks for Chance/Sabre. His recordings were intense and exuberant, always powered by his propulsive, swinging drumming. Returning to Memphis, he supported himself by migrant labour and some guitar playing. He had largely retired by the end of the 60s, and spent the rest of his life notoriously telling tall tales and behaving somewhat eccentrically.

- ALBUMS: Chicago Slickers Vol. 2 (1981)★★★, Sun Records The Blues Years (1985)★★★.

Nixon, Elmore

b. 17 November 1933, Crowley, Louisiana, USA, d. June 1975, Houston, Texas, USA. Little is known of Nixon, although his piano is to be heard on many more records than he made under his own name. His family moved to Houston in 1939, where he would remain until his death. At some stage he trained to join the church, which is presumed to be where he learned to play piano. By his early teens, he was already backing Peppermint Harris on his Gold Star debut. Thereafter he recorded with many Texas artists as a member of alto saxophonist Henry Hayes' Four Kings, including Carl Campbell, Milton Willis, L.C. Williams, Hubert Robinson, Ivory Lee and Hop Wilson. His debut record, 'Foolish Love', was made in 1949 for Sittin In With with the Hayes band. His own music reflected the jump music of the time, having affinities with Little Willie Littlefield. Other sessions followed for Peacock, Mercury, Savoy and Imperial, the latter in 1955. During the mid-60s, he worked with Clifton Chenier, recording on Chenier's sessions for Arhoolie and with Lightnin' Hopkins for Jewel. At other times he led his own band, working around Texas and Louisiana. He underwent serious surgery in 1970 and was largely inactive until his death.

- ALBUMS: Shout And Rock (1986)★★.

Nixon, Hammie

b. 22 January 1908, Brownsville, Tennessee, USA, d. 17 August 1984, Brownsville, Tennessee, USA. Nixon was the leading blues harmonica player in Brownsville, and a frequent visitor to Memphis, playing in street bands on jug, kazoo and harmonica. In Brownsville he was an associate of Sleepy John Estes and James 'Yank' Rachell, contributing beautiful, mournful playing to both men's 20s and 30s recordings. He was a major early influence on John Lee 'Sonny Boy' Williamson, and later on Little Walter. When Estes was located in 1962, Nixon was also found (proving to be a cheery extrovert, despite his sorrowful harmonica sound), and came out of musical retirement to tour and record with Estes until the latter's death. Nixon continued to play concerts and festivals, and made occasional recordings, though these were often disappointing, as they often overemphasized his kazoo and his rudimentary guitar.

- ALBUMS: Hammie Nixon (1976)★★, Tappin' That Thing (1984)★★.

Nixons

Formed in Norman, Oklahoma, in 1991, US rock band the Nixons built their reputation on the back of a relentless touring schedule, playing 324 gigs in 18 months and 55 cities. Comprising Ricky Brooks (bass), John Humphrey (drums), Jesse Davis (guitar) and Zac Maloy (vocals, guitar), they found immediate success on US alternative charts with their 1994 debut, Halo. In the wake of its strong performance the band were signed by MCA Records, who had the band re-record seven of that album's songs, including regional hit 'Sister', alongside new compositions to form 1995's Foma. It was produced by Mark Dodson, who had previously helmed projects by Suicidal Tendencies and Prong. The unusual title was taken from a book, Cat's Cradle, written by Maloy's favourite author, Kurt Vonnegut, and related to 'harmless untruths intended to comfort simple souls'. The album demonstrated the band's varying influences - Maloy had grown up listening to his grandfather's country band, Buddy White And The Westerners, who played at the Grande Ole Opry, while Humphrey had joined the Kiss Army as a child.

- ALBUMS: Halo (RainMaker/MCA 1994)★★★★, Foma (MCA 1995)★★★, The Nixons (MCA 1997)★★★.

NME

(see New Musical Express)

No Doubt

Led by Gwen Stefani, this quintet from Orange County, California, USA, took America by storm in 1996 following the release of their album, Tragic Kingdom. While earlier releases had all enjoyed critical acclaim, none had sold anything near the six million copies achieved by Tragic Kingdom, which finally reached the US Billboard number 1 by the end of 1996. The group's new-found popularity had much to do with the success of the attendant single, 'Just A Girl', and a high-profile arena support tour with UK rockers Bush. Audiences soon discovered a long history behind the group's success. Formed in 1987, their original singer John Spence had taken his own life a year later. As Stefani, very much the band's focal point, confirmed to the press, their mid-90s success had taken everyone by surprise: 'I can't believe it's happened to our loser band.' Others thought the reason had more to do with the 'fun punk' of Green Day, Presidents Of The United States Of America and Rancid, which had lifted the gloom of grunge and established an audience for less 'cerebral' or 'angst-ridden' rock music. The band ended 1996 at a peak with their album spending many weeks at the top of the US album chart. In February 1997 the 'difficult' British market was breached in spectacular style. During a promotional visit to the UK the band were rewarded with the news that 'Don't Speak' had entered the UK chart at number 1.

- ALBUMS: No Doubt (Interscope 1992)★★★, Tragic Kingdom (Interscope 1995)★★★★.
- VIDEOS: Live In The Tragic Kingdom (Interscope 1998).

No Exqze

This melodic rock quartet from Holland was formed by ex-Vandenberg bassist Dick Kemper in 1987. Recruiting Geert Scheigrond (guitar), Leen Barbier (vocals) and Nico Groen (drums), they signed to Phonogram Records and debuted with Too Hard Too Handle in 1988. No Exqze allowed Kemper to indulge his writing talents, which had previously been suppressed in Vandenberg - not without good reason, it might be argued. Produced by Tony Platt, the album was dominated by Barbier's soulful vocals, which added depth and character to Kemper's rather average AOR-style compositions.

- ALBUMS: Too Hard Too Handle (Phonogram 1988)★★★.

No Face

A US rap duo purveying the ribald humour of Digital Underground or Naughty By Nature, No Face signed to CBS Records in 1990, but like so many of the hip hop crop of 1990/91, failed to make a significant impact. Their only release in the UK was the 12-inch single 'Half', while their debut album, Wake Your Daughter Up, failed to interest either the critics or record buyers.

- ALBUMS: Wake Your Daughter Up (CBS 1990)★★.

No Fences - Garth Brooks

Although he has yet to make a major impact on the British record market, Garth Brooks has been selling in Michael Jackson-style proportions in the USA. He has become the biggest-selling country artist of all time, and has outsold all of Johnny Cash's work in five years. Whether he will have the enduring stature of Cash is open to debate, as there is nothing radically new in this, his biggest-selling album. Nevertheless, No Fences is a superb collection of crossover country songs, including the concert-stopping 'Friends In Low Places' and an up-tempo revival of the Fleetwoods' 'Mr. Blue', both songs being written, 30 years apart, by Dewayne Blackwell. The concept of 'Unanswered Prayers' takes the breath away ('Some of God's greatest gifts are unanswered prayers'), not that Mr. Brooks has any prayers left to be answered. The British release of this album includes four songs from his first album, Garth Brooks.

- Tracks: If Tomorrow Never Comes; Not Counting You; Much Too Young (To Feel This Damn Old); The Dance; The Thunder Rolls; New Way To Fly; Two Of A Kind, Workin' On A Full House; Victim Of The Game; Friends In Low Places; Wild Horses; Unanswered Prayers; Same Old Story; Mr. Blue; Wolves.
- First released 1990
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 3

No FX

No FX were formed in Los Angeles, California, USA, in 1983. Immediately, it was obvious that they were one of the few bands on the hardcore scene to embrace humorous lyrical fare to genuinely amusing effect. The band, whose present line-up features 'Fat' Mike (vocals, bass), Eric Melvin (guitar, vocals), El Hefe (guitar, trumpet) and Erik Sandon (drums), set their agenda with their debut EP for Mystic Records, The PMRC Can Suck On This. Afterwards, they addressed accusations about being on this most unfashionable of labels (which was completely injudicious in releasing material by any hardcore band that came its way) with the So What If We're On Mystic EP. It was via a contract with Epitaph Records and the Ribbed album that No FX became a productive unit in terms of worldwide sales. Ribbed featured a blemishless collection of genuinely funny songs, notably the male-hygiene-bonding epic, 'Shower Day'. The full musicianship and clean production only helped to illuminate their witty, everyday intrigues, with lyrics written by 'Fat' Mike, a graduate of San Francisco University. With the breakthrough of groups such as Offspring and Rancid, No FX, significantly older than either, became a mainstream group by the mid-90s, though in truth they had not altered musical direction since their inception. Instead, each album offered increasingly savage witticisms and a disciplined but flexible musical attack, able to vary pace from anything between outright thrash and ska.

- ALBUMS: Liberal Animation (Epitaph 1988)★★, S+M Airlines (Epitaph 1990)★★, Ribbed (Epitaph 1991)★★★, White Trash, Two Heebs And A Bean (Epitaph 1992)★★★, Punk In Drublic (Epitaph 1994)★★, We Heard They Suck Live (Epitaph 1995)★★, Heavy Petting Zoo (Epitaph 1996)★★, So Long And Thanks For All The Shoes (Epitaph 1997)★★.

No Jacket Required - Phil Collins

No Jacket Required reached number 1 in more countries than you can shake a drumstick at, and shows Collins at his most mature and versatile. 'Sussudio' opens the album with the familiar death-by-drums intro, setting the pattern of strong arrangements and attacking vocals. 'Only You Know And I Know' and 'Who Said I Would' explore this territory with the vibrant assistance of the Phoenix Horns, while the massive 'One More Night' provides an elegant contrast. Surely the strongest track, however, is the elegaic 'Long Long Way To Go', which brought tears to a billion pairs of eyes as one of the highlights of Live Aid.

- Tracks: Sussudio; Only You Know And I Know; Long Long Way To Go; Don't Want To Know; One More Night; Don't Lose My Number; Who Said I Would; Doesn't Anybody Stay Together Anymore?; Inside Out; Take Me Home.
- First released 1985
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 1

No Means No

An 'artcore' trio from Victoria, British Columbia, Canada, No Means No have done much to expand the boundaries of the 'hardcore' genre, fusing funk and fuzz pop with a continually questioning lyrical stance. The first established line-up featured Andrew Kerr (guitar) and the brothers Rob Wright (bass) and John Wright (drums). Kerr joined shortly after their 1984 debut, Mama. Taking their name from the phrase commonly used in connection with the rights of rape victims, their lyrics explore the middle ground between the individual and society, often in tones of self-disgust: 'nobody knows you and nobody wants to' (from 'Body Bag'). Though some of their early efforts lose impact through their disjointed nature, by Small Parts Isolated And Destroyed the band had refined the approach into a more structured whole - despite the music veering from thrash jazz to avant garde experimentalism. 0 + 2 = 1 crystallized their determinedly resistant approach. Their rejection of the media, particularly their refusal to have press photos taken, has thus far limited their accessibility, though their extensive cult popularity in Europe provides adequate compensation. Following a collaboration with Alternative Tentacles Records head Jello Biafra (The Sky Is Falling And I Want My Mommy), in late 1991 Andy Kerr, a veteran of the band for eight years, departed to form Hissanol (with No Means No producer Scott Henderson). Many of the songs for Why Do They Call Me Mr. Happy? were written by Rob for his solo act, Mr Happy, a pseudonym that saw him toy with authoritarian images such as policeman, cleric and Mafia leader. Some of the songs, notably 'The River', were remorselessly bleak. The World Hood Of The World (As Such) was their first album to be recorded as a quartet, with guitar, keyboards and an additional drummer (whom they refused to credit, even on the liner notes, as had been the case with the guitarist they added before Sex Mad, who was replaced on this album by someone known only as Tommy). Despite such disorientating tactics and a consistent refusal to engage with the media, it was another superb instalment of fluent guitar rock and incisive, sarcastic lyrics.

● ALBUMS: Mama (No label 1984)★★★, Sex Mad (Psyche Industry/Alternative Tentacles 1986)★★★, The Day Everything Became Nothing mini-album (Alternative Tentacles 1988)★★★, Small Parts Isolated And Destroyed (Alternative Tentacles 1988)★★★, Wrong (Alternative Tentacles 1989)★★★, Live And Cuddly (Alternative Tentacles 1991)★★★, with Jello Biafra The Sky Is Falling And I Want My Mommy (Alternative Tentacles 1991)★★★, 0 + 2 = 1 (Alternative Tentacles 1991)★★★, Why Do They Call Me Mr. Happy? (Alternative Tentacles 1993)★★★, The World Hood Of The World (As Such) (Alternative Tentacles 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Day Everything Became Isolated And Destroyed (Alternative Tentacles 1988)★★★.

No More Heroes - The Stranglers

Punk's parents terribles, the Stranglers courted controversy throughout their early career. Caustic lyrics brought charges of misogyny, although the group suggested that outrage was merely part of the genre's tenet. They answered such criticism of their debut album with the even more uncompromising No More Heroes, a vengeful collection echoing the nihilism of its title. Role-playing apart, there was no denying a musical prowess compressing savage guitar, throbbing bass and swirling organ into vicious, driving sound. Hugh Cornwell's sneering intonation matched the aggression of his accompaniment, but the album also offered indications of the lighter pop style that the quartet would later follow.

● Tracks: I Feel Like A Wog; Bitching; Dead Ringer; Dagenham Dave; Bring On The Nubiles; Something Better Change; No More Heroes; Peasant In The Big Shitty; Burning Up Time; English Towns; School Mam; In The Shadows.

● First released 1977

● UK peak chart position: 2

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

No Nukes

This 1980 documentary revolved around a series of events staged in New York the previous year. Five nights of benefit concerts were held at Madison Square Gardens between 19 and 23 September 1979, which in turn were succeeded by an outdoor gathering in Battery Park, in order to raise funds for Musicians United for Safe Energy. MUSE was a charity headed by John Hall, formerly of the Ozark Mountain Daredevils, who was determined to lobby for the replacement of nuclear power by solar energy. Many well-known 70s US artists lent support to the cause, and No Nukes captured several strong performances. Bruce Springsteen contributed the title song to the as yet unreleased The River, as well as powerful readings of Gary 'U.S.' Bonds' 'A Quarter To Three' and his own 'Thunder Road'. Crosby, Stills And Nash offer 'Suite Judy Blue Eyes' while Jackson Browne completed resonant versions of 'Running On Empty' and 'Before The Deluge'. The Doobie Brothers, Bonnie Raitt, Jesse Colin Young, James Taylor and Carly Simon are among the others featured in an all-star cast brought together by a common ecological concern. Several guested on each other's sets, notably on the 60s protest anthem, 'Get Together', which featured Browne, Nash and Stills alongside Young, whose group the Youngbloods first popularized the song. No Nukes was also the subject of an expansive three-record set which, when combined with the scale of the event itself, showed commitment from all those involved in the project.

● VIDEOS: No Nukes (CBS Fox 1980).

No Other - Gene Clark

Clark's songwriting contribution to the early Byrds was a glorious asset that even they did not appreciate at the time. Many fans willed him to make this excellent album, if only to reinforce the respect and faith they had in his ability. Ill-health and booze kept him from repeating this solo effort and continuing his life as a songwriter. This paradoxical recording can be taken lightly (easy-on-the-ear songs) or as a heavy symbolic lyrical statement (deep stuff). More country rock than pop and like Astral Weeks, it has long-term hidden depths. The silk flares he wears on the cover have never been topped, by male or female.

● Tracks: Life's Greatest Fool; Silver Raven; No Other; Strength Of Strings; From A Silver Phial; Some Misunderstanding; The True One; Lady Of The North.

● First released 1974

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 144

No Sleep 'Til Hammersmith - Motörhead

Unlike many heavy metal contemporaries, Motörhead leader Lemmy possesses self-deprecating humour. Stripped of pretension, he goads the basic three-chord trick with a full-throated bellow, emphasizing his trio's vicious racket. On this live selection the group reprise the cream of their back catalogue with untrammelled venom, in the process destroying already power-packed studio counterparts. Continuing a line from the MC5 and Stooges, rather than gothic fantasy, the band understand the excitement of noise and exploit it to its full potential. Thrash metal and hardcore owe them a debt but, as this album proves, there is only one Motörhead.

● Tracks: Ace Of Spades; Stay Clean; The Metropolis Hammer;

Iron Horse; No Class; Overkill; The Road Crew; Capricorn; Motorhead.

- First released 1981
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

No Strings

When Oscar Hammerstein died in 1960, composer Richard Rodgers lost the second of only two lyricists with whom he had worked throughout his illustrious career - the first, of course, being Lorenz Hart. Shortly after Hammerstein's death, Rodgers wrote both words and music to five new songs for the second re-make of the film State Fair, and then in 1962 he undertook the complete score for No Strings which opened at the 54th Street Theatre in New York on 15 March. Rodgers also produced the piece, for which the book was written by the celebrated playwright Samuel Taylor, who had impressed the composer with his comedies such as Sabrina Fair and The Pleasure Of His Company. The black actress Diahann Carroll, who was spotted by Rodgers on US television in the Jack Paar Show, was cast as an American fashion model, Barbara Woodruff, who has moved to Paris. While there, she falls in love with the former Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist David Jordan (Richard Kiley), whose life has disintegrated to the point that he has given up writing and is just living on hand-outs. She helps in his process of rehabilitation, but they decide to go their separate ways. Rodgers himself hinted later that the reason that the characters split up is because they anticipate racial prejudice on their return to the USA, although the authors were careful not to mention it directly. The director and choreographer, Joe Layton, introduced several innovative features, such as placing the orchestra onstage instead of in the pit, and having members of the cast move the mobile sets in full view of the audiences. Another neat idea was for Kiley and Carroll to sing the show's lovely hit song, 'The Sweetest Sounds', each accompanied by their own individual instrumental soloist, and this technique was also used on some of the other numbers. Carroll excelled throughout on such as 'Loads Of Love', 'You Don't Tell Me', 'An Orthodox Fool', and joined with Kiley for 'Nobody Told Me', 'Maine', 'Look No Further', and the title song. While not in the same money-making class as The Sound Of Music and the other Rodgers and Hammerstein blockbusters, No Strings had a decent run of 580 performances. Rodgers won the Tony Award for outstanding music - but not, ironically for lyrics - and joint Tonys also went to Diahann Carroll, who shared hers with Anna Marie Alberghetti (Carnival); and Joe Layton, whose choreography was adjudged to be equally as excellent as that of Agnes de Mille's for Kwamina. In 1963, No Strings was presented at Her Majesty's Theatre in London, where it starred Hy Hazell and Art Lund, and ran for 135 performances.

No Sweat

This Dublin-based, six-piece melodic rock group comprised Paul Quinn (lead vocals), Dave Gooding (guitar), Jim Phillips (guitar), P.J. Smith (keyboards), Jon Angel (bass) and Ray Fearn (drums). Together they impressed Def Leppard vocalist Joe Elliot, who took over production on their debut album and helped them to secure a contract with London Records. The record company's public relations team subsequently launched an impressive and expensive campaign on their behalf. They supported Thunder on their 'Backstreet Symphony' tour in 1990 and were generally well received by the press. Paul Quinn's voice oozed emotion, but their material failed to stamp its own identity. Accusations of hype followed, and the band quietly dissolved a year later.

- ALBUMS: No Sweat (London 1990)★★.

No Way Sis

The 'tribute band' is an established byway of postmodern pop but No Way Sis took it almost to the limit of its endurance with their shambolic salutes to Oasis. Whereas earlier tribute bands were formed to impersonate major acts that had split up, such as the Bootleg Beatles (Beatles) and Bjorn Again (Abba) or carried on beyond their best years (e.g., the Counterfeit Stones), No Way Sis formed only a couple of years after Oasis released their debut album and achieved a bizarre relationship with their 'parent' band, with Noel Gallagher taking every opportunity to praise the Scottish quintet, a privilege denied to rival copyists such as Wonderwall and Champagne Supernova. Based, like Oasis, around a sibling duo of Joe ('Liam') and Gerry ('Noel') McKay, the other members are James McLardy ('Bonehead'), Tony McCarthy ('Guigsy') and Mick Reilly ('Alan'). The irony was compounded by the fact one of the few criticisms to stick to Oasis has been over the derivative nature of their songs; No Way Sis's debut single was a cover of the New Seekers' 'I'd Like To Teach the World To Sing', supposedly a less-than-subtle influence on Oasis's 'Shakermaker'. Despite hyped hopes of a Christmas number 1 in 1996, the joke appears to have worn thin very quickly and EMI Records quietly dropped the band early the following year before they could begin work on the first album of (supposedly) a five-album contract.

No, No, Nanette

Unusually for a Broadway musical, No, No Nanette was far more popular when it was revived than when it was first staged. With music by Vincent Youmans, lyrics by Irving Caesar and Otto Harbach, and a book by Harbach and Frank Mandel, the show included several admirable songs, including 'You Can Dance With Any Girl At All', 'Too Many Rings Around Rosie', 'The Call Of The Sea', 'Peach On the Beach', 'Take A Little One-Step', and two that became classics, 'I Want To Be Happy' and 'Tea For Two'. No, No, Nanette opened at the Palace Theatre in London on 11 March 1925, with Binnie Hale and George Grossmith in the leading roles, and ran for 665 performances. The New York production, which made its debut at the Globe Theatre on 16 September of 1925, starred Ona Munson, Donald Brian, Cecil Lean, and Jack McCauley. Although the show epitomized the happy-go-lucky all-singing, all-dancing atmosphere of the 20s, it closed after a disappointing run of 321 performances. Nearly half a century later, a strong cast, which included Ruby Keeler, Helen Gallagher and Bobby Van, appeared in the 1971 New York revival; this stayed around for over two years, and won Tony Awards for best actress (Helen Gallagher), supporting actress (Patsy Kelly), choreographer (Donald Saddler), and costumes (Raoul du Bois). Touring companies proliferated, and there was another major production at Drury Lane in London with Anna Neagle, Anne Rogers, Tony Britton, and Thora Hird. There have been two film versions: on in 1930, starring Alexander Gray and Bernice Claire, and another in 1940, starring Anna Neagle and Victor Mature.

● FURTHER READING: The Making Of No, No, Nanette, Don Dunn.

Noa

b. Achinoam Nini, Israel. Of Yemenite origin, Noa was transplanted to New York, USA, at the age of one. She subsequently studied at the High School of Performing Arts. She then abandoned her studies to return to Israel to 'establish her identity' and complete her military service, at which time she also began her professional singing career. She regularly performed on makeshift stages to troops stationed throughout Israel as a member of the entertainment corps. However, it was in France that she initially found favour. Her self-titled debut album was produced by Pat Metheny (her instructor at Boston's Berklee School Of Music) and Steve Rodby, and released on Geffen Records. It quickly earned gold certification (100,000 sales) through Noa's frequent television and radio appearances. These included her performance of 'I Don't Know' on the Europe 1 Top Live programme, and the same song on television programme Velvet Jungle (plus a rendition of 'Ave Maria' with French duo Native). A further appearance on the Taratata television programme pushed the album higher up the French charts. Her second album, Calling, was recorded alongside long-time collaborator Gil Dor (co-founder of the Rimon School of Jazz and Contemporary Music, where Noa also studied) as well as Rupert Hine, who had previously produced for Tina Turner and Kate Bush. The resulting album explored themes as diverse as war ('Mark Of Cain'), female oppression ('Camilla') and seduction ('By The Light Of The Moon').

● ALBUMS: Noa (Geffen 1995)★★★★, Calling (Geffen 1996)★★★.

Noack, Eddie

b. De Armand A. Noack Jnr., 29 April 1930, Houston, Texas, USA, d. 5 February 1978. Noack, who gained degrees in English and Journalism at the University of Houston, made his radio debut in 1947 and first recorded for Goldstar in 1949. In 1951, he cut several songs for Four Star including 'Too Hot To Handle'. Leased to the TNT label, it drew attention to his songwriting and was recorded by several artists. He joined Starday in 1953 (beginning a long association with 'Pappy' Daily), where his immediate success came as a writer when several of his songs were recorded by top artists including Hank Snow, who scored a major hit with 'These Hands' in 1956. Noack moved with Daily to his D label, where in 1958, after recording rockabilly tracks as Tommy Wood, he had a country hit with 'Have Blues Will Travel'. During the 60s, Noack quit recording to concentrate on songwriting and publishing and had many of his songs including 'Flowers For Mama', 'Barbara Joy', 'The Poor Chinee', 'A Day In The Life Of A Fool' and 'No Blues Is Good News' successfully recorded by George Jones. Noack did make some further recordings in the 70s, including arguably some of his best for his fine tribute album to Jimmie Rodgers. He moved to Nashville and in 1976, recorded an album that found release in Britain (where he had toured that year) on the Look label. He worked in publishing for Daily and in an executive role for the Nashville Songwriters Association until his death from cirrhosis in 1978. A fine performer somewhat in the style of Hank Williams, he is perhaps more appreciated today as a singer than he was in his own time.

● ALBUMS: Remembering Jimmie Rodgers (1972)★★★, Eddie Noack i (Look 1976)★★, Eddie Noack ii (Chiswick 1980)★★★, Gentlemen Prefer Blondes (1981)★★.

Noakes, Rab

A veteran of Scotland's folk circuit, Noakes' debut Do You See The Lights, although heavily produced, announced the arrival of a gifted songwriter. He then briefly joined Gerry Rafferty in the original Stealer's Wheel, appearing on the latter's solo debut, Can I Have My Money Back, but subsequently preferred to follow his own direction. Rafferty did, however, guest on Noakes' 1972 solo collection. Signed to Warner Brothers in 1974, the artist's two albums for the company showed an increasingly American slant. Red Pump Special featured the famed Memphis Horns brass section, but despite critical acclaim, Noakes was unable to secure a commercial breakthrough. Further albums also met with public indifference, and although he still pursues a performing career, this underrated singer is now a senior producer with BBC Scotland.

● ALBUMS: Do You See The Lights (Decca 1970)★★★★, Rab Noakes i (A&M 1972)★★★★, Red Pump Special (1974)★★★, Never Too Late (1975)★★, Restless (Ring O 1978)★★, Rab Noakes ii (1980)★★★, Under The Rain (1984)★★★, Standing Up (Mediart 1994)★★★.

Noble, Leighton

b. USA. Formed in New York City, New York, USA, in 1937, Leighton Noble And His Orchestra immediately secured a prestigious engagement at Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook venue. The reason may well have been Noble's previous big band connections, which included affiliations with Hal Grayson, Orville Knapp and George Olsen. After the Meadowbrook the orchestra took a booking at Philadelphia's Arcadia Ballroom as their next step on a tour of the major hotels and ballrooms of the day. Vocalists including Johnny McAfee, Edith Caldwell and Margie Lee helped to accompany Noble's own singing, as the group earned recording contracts with Vocalion and Bluebird Records. In the 40s the bandleader undertook a second career as a film actor in Hollywood, and for the rest of that decade he confined his band's engagements to California to facilitate this. By the early 60s Noble was playing the Las Vegas entertainment circuit, before becoming leader of the Harrah's Club house band in Lake Tahoe. He stayed there for eight years, before moving to Vancouver, Canada, in the 70s. He did return to the USA for occasional nostalgia performances, however, including well-received engagements at the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans.

Noble, Patsy Ann

b. 2 February 1945, Sydney, Australia. Patsy Ann Noble began her career in the late 50s as a member of the cast of Australia's Bandstand, a television pop show. She enjoyed a hit single with 'Good Looking Boy', but subsequent releases failed to chart. In 1962 Noble opted to move to London, England, where she secured a deal with Columbia Records. Her debut for the label, 'Don't You Ever Change Your Mind', was modelled on releases by Helen Shapiro, but it was not a commercial success. Noble cameoed another release, 'Accidents Will Happen', in the 1963 film Live It Up, but despite exposure on radio and television, the singer was unable to make the expected breakthrough. Noble later claimed she had never wanted to sing and it was during this period she began an acting career with roles in Danger Man, Callan and the X-rated film Death Is A Woman. In 1967 she took a new name, Trisha Noble, and closed her recording career with 'Live For Life'. Thespian interests now took precedence and Noble later moved to the USA where, having enjoyed guest appearances in television programmes Columbo, Buck Rogers and Baretta, she landed a starring role in the soap opera Executive Suite.

Noble, Ray

b. Stanley Raymond Noble, 17 December 1903, Brighton, Sussex, England, d. 2 April 1978, London, England. The son of a part-time songwriter and musician, Noble attended choir school, Dulwich College and Cambridge University before studying at the Royal College of Music. In 1926 he won a Melody Maker arranging contest and worked for music publisher Lawrence Wright and Jack Payne's BBC Dance Orchestra before becoming a staff arranger at HMV Records, eventually succeeding Carroll Gibbons as Head of Light Music. He conducted the company's New Mayfair Orchestra and New Mayfair Novelty Orchestra before forming his own sweet-swing studio band which included top musicians Freddy Gardner, Alfie Noakes, Bill Harty, Tiny Winters, Max Goldberg, Nat Gonnella, Lew Davis and the most popular vocalist of the 30s, Al Bowlly. Bowlly's vocals on songs such as 'Time On My Hands', 'Close Your Eyes', 'How Could We Be Wrong' and 'Lazy Day' are considered outstanding examples of the orchestra's substantial output, alongside the singer's interpretations of Noble's own compositions. Noble wrote his first hit song, 'Goodnight Sweetheart', in 1931, and during the early 30s, followed it with 'By The Fireside', 'I Found You', and 'What More Can I Ask'. One of his biggest successes, 'Love Is The Sweetest Thing' attracted much attention because of the similarity of its first five notes to the first five of the British national anthem, 'God Save The King'.

Ray Noble's ensemble was the first British band to become popular on records in the USA, and, having had hits there since 1931, including 'Lady Of Spain', 'Love Is The Sweetest Thing' and 'The Old Spinning Wheel', Noble went to the USA in 1934, taking with him drummer/manager Bill Harty and Al Bowlly. Glenn Miller assisted him in organizing an American orchestra which included, at various times, future leaders Claude Thornhill, Charlie Spivak, Pee Wee Irwin, Will Bradley, and soloists Bud Freeman and George Van Eps. They had hits with 'Isle Of Capri', 'Paris In The Spring', 'Let's Swing It', 'I've Got You Under My Skin' and 'Easy To Love' (with Bowlly on vocals), along with Noble's own songs, 'The Very Thought Of You', 'Love Locked Out' (lyric by Max Kester), and 'The Touch Of Your Lips'. In 1936, after the orchestra's very successful engagement at New York's Rainbow Room, Bowlly returned to England, and in the following year the band broke up, re-forming later in the 30s.

Noble subsequently went to Hollywood. He had been there in 1935 to appear in The Big Broadcast Of 1936 in which Bing Crosby and Ethel Merman sang his song, 'Why The Stars Come Out Tonight'. This time he appeared as a 'silly ass' Englishman in the Fred Astaire movie A Damsel In Distress, and later duetted with Astaire on the record version of his eccentric dance, 'The Yam', and accompanied him on songs such as 'Change Partners', 'Nice Work If You Can Get It' and 'A Foggy Day'. He also backed singer Buddy Clarke on his US number 1, 'Linda', and 'I'll Dance At Your Wedding'. Noble continued to have successful records in the US until the end of the 40s with songs such as 'I've Got My Love To Keep Me Warm', 'Alexander's Ragtime Band' and 'By The Light Of The Silvery Moon'. Recordings of his compositions 'Cherokee' (by Charlie Barnet) and 'I Hadn't Anyone Till You' were highlights of the Swing Era. After returning briefly to England in 1938 to play in variety, Noble worked consistently in America, playing musical and comedy roles on George Burns and Gracie Allen's radio show, and later through to the 50s, with ventriloquist Edgar Bergen on radio and television, sometimes playing stooge to Bergen's famous partner, Charlie McCarthy. When the latter series ended in the mid-50s Noble retired to Santa Barbara, California, subsequently spending some years in Jersey in the Channel Islands.

● COMPILATIONS: Golden Age Of British Dance Bands (1969)★★★, ... Featuring Al Bowlly, Vols. 1 & 2 (1935-36) (1976)★★★★, Ray Noble Plays Ray Noble (1976)★★★, Ray Noble/Al Bowlly, Vols. 1-4 (1979)★★★★, Ray Noble's Encores, Vols. 1-6 (1979)★★★★, Ray Noble And Joe Haymes 1935 (1979)★★★, Dinner Music (1982)★★★, with Carroll Gibbons The New Mayfair Dance Orchestra - Harmony Heaven 1928-1930 (1983)★★★, The HMV Sessions (1984)★★★, We Danced All Night (1984)★★★, Notable Noble (1985)★★★, Goodnight Sweetheart (1988)★★★.

Noble, Steve

b. 16 March 1960, Streatley, Berkshire, England. Noble studied with the Nigerian master drummer Elkan Ogunde. His first professional engagement was with the avant garde jazz-pop group, Rip Rig And Panic, touring England and Europe and playing on I'm Cold (1982) and Attitude (1983). His precision and invention as a percussionist made it natural for him to gravitate towards free improvisation. In 1985 he appeared at the Thessalonika Jazz Festival with Derek Bailey and later took part in the Company Weeks of 1987, 1989 and 1990. In 1987 he toured Holland with Tristan Honsinger. In the late 80s, he was part of the Alan Wilkinson Trio and a member of Kahondo Style. A long-standing partnership with pianist Alex Maguire produced countless gigs and Live At Oscars. Noble, along with Louis Moholo, provided percussion for Maguire's Cat O' Nine Tails in 1989. Other collaborations include Katie Duck, Group O and the Bow Gamelan Ensemble. In 1991 he provided drums both for the rock band CC Sagar and an improvising trio with tenor saxophonist Tony Bevan and bassist Paul Rogers; he also recorded an improvised duo with up-and-coming reedsman Alex Ward. Noble's lightning responses, wit and catholic taste promise a lot for the future.

● ALBUMS: with Company Once (1987)★★★, with Alex Maguire Live At Oscars (1987)★★★★, with Kahondo Style Green Tea & Crocodiles (1988)★★★, with Alex Ward Ya Boo, Reel & Rumble (1991)★★★, with Tony Bevan, Paul Rogers Bigshots (1992)★★★.

Nobles, Cliff (And Co.)

Cliff Nobles (b. 1944, Mobile, Alabama, USA) had a background as a gospel singer. In an effort to break into something more commercial, he moved to Philadelphia and won a contract with Atlantic Records. He was dropped from the label after three unsuccessful singles, 'My Love Is Getting Stronger', 'Let's Have A Good Time' and 'Your Love Is All I Need', whereupon independent producer Jesse James took him on and recorded 'The More I Do For You' on the Phil LA Of Soul label. 'The Horse' (1968), Nobles' US number 2 hit, was originally the b-side to the undistinguished 'Love Is Alright'. Ironically, the former track did not feature the artist's regular group - Bobby Tucker (guitar), Benny Williams (bass) and Tommy Soul (drums) - but, instead, the James Boys, a collection of emergent Philadelphia session musicians put together by producer Leon Huff. This unit then rushed out a complementary single, 'The Mule', which had the same version of 'The Horse' on the reverse. Despite minimal input, Nobles' name still graced such follow-up singles as 'Horse Fever', although he later secured a minor R&B success with 'Feeling Of Loneliness' (1973). The James Boys - Jesse James, Bobby Martin, Norman Harris, Roland Chambers, Nat Chambers, Ronnie Baker and Karl Young - became MFSB, the Sigma Sound studio house band.

● ALBUMS: The Horse (Phil LA Of Soul 1968)★★.

Nobody's Heroes - Stiff Little Fingers

Their brand of Irish pop punk took real flight after the hastily fanned flames of punk's initial bravura and its sometime carefully engineered hype had died down. Stiff Little Fingers presented a provocative strand of punk rock and flaming youth caught up in the day-to-day living with the troubles in Ireland. Consequently, they had the vision and wit of folk musicians in their narratives. Their punk ethos remained intact, but they still managed to suffuse their music with strong melodies and some memorable playing. Forget the comeback, this surely stands as testimony to their strength.

● Tracks: Gotta Gettaway; Wait And See; Fly The Flag; At The Edge; Nobody's Hero; Bloody Dub; No Change; Suspect Device; Tin Soldiers.

● First released 1980

● UK peak chart position: 8

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Nock, Mike

b. 27 September 1940, Christchurch, New Zealand. Nock is largely a self-taught pianist who was able to work professionally when he was only 15 years old. When he was 18 he went to Australia playing in a hard bop trio before moving on to England. He did not settle but went to the Berklee College Of Music in Boston, Massachusetts on a scholarship in 1961. In the early 60s he was the house pianist in a Boston Club before joining Yusef Lateef for three years. In 1968 he moved to San Francisco and formed the jazz-rock group, Fourth Way, which was extremely successful until disbanding in 1971. Nock became involved in electronic music and composed numerous film scores. In 1985 he returned to Australia where he spent most of his time composing, though he also taught improvisation at the New South Wales Conservatorium in Sydney.

● ALBUMS: with Yusef Lateef Live At Peps (1964)★★★, with John Handy Projections (1968)★★★, with Fourth Way The Fourth Way (1969)★★★, with Fourth Way The Sun And The Moon Have Come Together (1969)★★, with Fourth Way Werewolf (1970)★★, Magic Mansions (1977)★★★, Piano Solos (1978)★★, Talismen (1978)★★★, Ondas (ECM 1982)★★★.

Nocturnus

This innovative American death metal band was formed by drummer and vocalist Mike Browning following his departure from an early incarnation of Morbid Angel. The Key showed an original approach, mixing the frenzied yet intricate riffing of guitarists Sean McNenney and Mike Davis with the atmospheric keyboard washes of Louis Panzer. Critical acclaim abounded, but the sound proved rather too radical for much of the death crowd, and Nocturnus struggled to rise above cult status. Thresholds was recorded with new vocalist Dan Izzo, taking the pressure off Browning, with permanent bassist Emo Mowery being recruited after the sessions to replace touring bassist Jim O'Sullivan (Chris Anderson played on the album). However, with no upturn in the band's fortunes they parted company with Earache, re-emerging in 1994 with an EP for new label Moribund.

● ALBUMS: The Key (Earache 1990)★★★, Thresholds (Earache 1992)★★★.

Noel And Gertie

(see Lawrence, Gertrude)

Noise Addict

Formed by the precociously talented Ben Lee, the aptly named Australian trio Noise Addict invoked immediate comparisons with their adolescent contemporaries Silver Chair. Lee first came to the attention of both Thurston Moore of Sonic Youth and Mike D. of the Beastie Boys with his home-recorded single, 'I Wish I Was Him', a charming lo-fi tribute to Evan Dando of the Lemonheads. Mike D.'s Grand Royal label released the band's American debut, the Young & Jaded EP, which included the original version of 'I Wish I Was Him' alongside four new Lee originals and a cover version of Jonathan Richman's 'Back In Your Life'. The ramshackle Def EP10 appeared on Moore's Ecstatic Peace! label, while Noise Addict Vs Silver Chair was a reissue of the band's debut EP, The Taste In My Eyes. The band expanded to a four-piece line-up for their debut album, Meet The Real You, which provided further evidence of Lee's talent, although there was little discernible improvement in the band's instrumental abilities. Lee then concentrated on a solo career. His 1995 debut, Grandpaw Would, was stronger (and better produced) than anything he had recorded with Noise Addict, with stand-out tracks including 'Away With The Pixies' and 'Trying To Sneeze'. In contrast, Something To Remember Me By was a flawed acoustic set that saw Lee (still only in his late teens) attempting to broaden his songwriting, with mixed results.

● ALBUMS: The Taste In My Eyes EP reissued as Noise Addict Vs Silver Chair (Fellaheen 1994)★★, Young & Jaded EP (Grand Royal 1994)★★★, Def EP10 (Ecstatic Peace! 1994)★★, Meet The Real You (Fellaheen 1995)★★★.

Solo: Ben Lee Grandpaw Would (Fellaheen/Grand Royal 1995)★★★, Something To Remember Me By (Grand Royal 1997)★★★.

Noiseworks

Formed in Sydney, Australia in 1985, Noiseworks feature seasoned players culled from various groups of the New South Wales area. The line-up of Steve Balbi (bass), Stuart Fraser (guitar), Kevin Nicol (drums), Justin Stanley (vocals) and Jon Stevens (lead vocals) have attracted much attention with its clean, hard rock sound, distinctive vocals and competent playing. Stevens had gained years of experience, being a teen idol in his homeland of New Zealand, hence he obtained the attention of a young audience on television as well as radio. Noiseworks had been compared in some quarters as the natural inheritors of INXS's crown of top Australian group. Their final album was a self-financed and produced affair that was rejected by their record company. Several new tracks were added that affected the continuity and feel of the album that the band had originally created. This could have caused their break-up, as they announced a 'temporary split' in 1992. Jon Stevens joined the stage cast of a revival of the rock opera, Jesus Christ Superstar.

● ALBUMS: Noiseworks (1987)★★★, Touch (1988)★★★, Love Versus Money (1991)★★.

Nokemono

This Japanese hard rock quintet was formed in 1978. Inspired by fellow countrymen Bow Wow, Yukihiro 'Ace' Nakaya (vocals) and Shigeo 'Rolla' Nakano (guitar) decided to put together a band along similar lines. Recruiting Bunzo 'Bunchan' Satoh (guitar), Masaaki 'Cherry' Chikura (bass) and Tadashi 'Popeye' Hirota (drums), they were picked up by the local SMS label. The resultant From The Black World combined Van Halen, Deep Purple and UFO influences. It was an impressive debut, somewhat marred by an inferior production. However, the band remained virtually unknown outside their own country and the album was their solitary contribution to Japanese metal.

● ALBUMS: From The Black World (SMS 1979)★★★.

Nolan, Bob

b. Robert Clarence Nobles, 1 April 1908, Point Hatfield, New Brunswick, Canada, d. 16 June 1980. Bob Nolan was an important member of the Sons Of the Pioneers.

Although Canadian, his father joined the US Army in World War I and served in France. He suffered gas poisoning and on discharge, changed his name to Nolan and relocated to Arizona for health reasons. During his father's absence, the young Bob received some education while living with aunts in Boston, but at the age of 14, he moved to Tucson to join his father. While attending the University of Arizona, he began writing poetry, some of which became the basis for the songs that he later wrote. In 1927, a desire to travel led him to hobo his way west. The sound of the trains were the reason for his first song, 'Way Out There', and the later sequel, 'One More Ride'. In 1929, he moved to California, where he worked on beaches as a lifeguard and sang with a group, which inspired him to seek a musical career. In mid-1931, he answered an advertisement placed by Leonard Slye (later Roy Rogers) in an Los Angeles newspaper for a tenor singer/yodeller to join the Rocky Mountaineers. The pair and fiddler Bob Nichols worked for a time with the Mountaineers until Nolan, disheartened by their lack of success, left to become a caddy at Bel Air Country Club. Late in 1933, Slye and Tim Spencer persuaded Nolan to become the third member of the Pioneer Trio. The trio subsequently went on to become the Sons Of The Pioneers, with Nolan a most important part of the act, not only for his singing but also for his songwriting. Rated by many as the most poetic of all the western songwriters, Nolan was responsible for many of the group's biggest hits. These include 'At The Rainbow's End', 'The Touch Of God's Hand', 'Chant Of The Wanderer' and his two classics, 'Cool Water' and 'Tumbling Tumbleweeds'. He retired from active performing in 1949 but recorded with the group until 1957. He finally tired of the music scene and adopted a solitary existence. He was persuaded to record a solo album in 1979 which contained some of his old hits and Marty Robbins' 'Man Walks Among Us', which included an appearance from the writer. Nolan died, following a heart attack, on 16 June 1980. His last request was that his ashes should be spread on the Nevada desert.

● ALBUMS: Sound Of A Pioneer (Elektra 1979)★★★.

Nolans

This highly popular Irish family group originally consisted of brothers and sisters Tommy, Anne (b. 12 November 1950), Denise (b. 1952), Maureen (b. 14 June 1954), Brian, Linda (b. 23 February 1959), Bernadette (b. 17 October 1961) and Coleen Nolan (b. 12 March 1965, Blackpool, England). The Nolans lived in Dublin until 1962 when they emigrated to Blackpool. Parents Tommy and Maureen Nolan were singers and gradually brought their offspring into the act. In 1963 the entire family debuted as the Singing Nolans. After moving to London, the group's personnel was Anne, Denise, Linda, Bernadette, and Maureen. Their act proved very popular on UK television and variety shows. After recording their second album in 1977, and touring America with Engelbert Humperdinck, Denise left a year later in order to pursue a solo career. The sisters signed to CBS and were widely tipped to represent the UK in the Eurovision Song Contest but lost out to Black Lace. After a minor hit single with 'Spirit Body And Soul', Anne married and left the group for two years. She was replaced by the youngest sister, Coleen, and the quartet changed their name from the Nolan Sisters to the Nolans. A massive hit with the catchy 'I'm In The Mood For Dancing' brought them worldwide renown and even topped the charts in Japan. The Nolans had further UK Top 10 hits with 'Gotta Pull Myself Together' and 'Attention To Me', and, with Anne's return, became a quintet for a while until Linda married former Harmony Grass drummer Brian Hudson and retired from the group. Linda is sometimes known as the 'Naughty Nolan' because she launched her solo career by posing near-naked for publicity shots. Phenomenal success for the Nolans in Japan and Eire coincided with further minor chart appearances in the UK, as well as best-selling albums. Coleen, Bernadette and Denise have each recorded solo singles, while Linda and Coleen enjoyed a minor hit as the Young And Moody Band with 'Don't Do That'. In 1994 Coleen left to have a baby, and a year later, Anne and Maureen became a Nolans duo when Bernadette, who had been the lead singer with the group since she was 13, decided to go solo. Coleen is married to Shane Ritchie, who starred in the acclaimed 1993 London revival of the musical Grease.

● ALBUMS: The Singing Nolans (Nevis 1972)★★★, The Nolan Sisters (Hanover Grand 1977)★★★, Nolan Sisters (Epic 1979)★★★, Making Waves (Epic 1980)★★★★, Portrait (Epic 1982)★★★★, Altogether (Epic 1982)★★★, Harmony (Premier 1983)★★★, Girls Just Wanna Have Fun (Towerbell 1984)★★, Love Songs (Hallmark 1985)★★, Tenderly (1986)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 20 Giant Hits (Target 1977)★★★, Best Of The Nolan Sisters Vol. 1 (Hallmark 1979)★★★, Best Of The Nolan Sisters Vol 2 (Hallmark 1979)★★★, The Nolan Sisters Collection (Pickwick 1980)★★★, I'm In The Mood For Dancing (Hallmark 1983)★★★, Times Gone By (Spartan 1985)★★★, Best Of The Nolans (Ditto 1988)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: In The Mood For Stardom: The Nolans, Kim Treasurer.

Nolen, Jimmy

b. 3 April 1934, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, USA, d. 18 December 1983, Atlanta, Georgia, USA. The inventor of the 'Chicken Scratch' and thus the father of funk guitar, Nolen was the archetypal sideman who also had a fitful solo recording career. After learning the violin, he took up the guitar at 14, inspired by T-Bone Walker. Singer Jimmy Wilson saw him in a Tulsa club and brought him back to Los Angeles, where Nolen began his recording career backing trumpeter Monte Easter and Chuck Higgins, and under his own name for John Fullbright's Elko label. In the autumn of 1956, he recorded three sessions for Federal, from which six singles were released to little effect. During this time, he also worked with Johnny Otis, playing on many sessions for Otis's Dig label and recording some sides of his own. He remained with Otis for a couple of years and played on 'Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me' and 'Willie And The Hand Jive'. In 1959, Nolen signed with Specialty subsidiary Fidelity, from which just one single emerged. Much of the early 60s was spent backing harmonica player George Smith before joining James Brown's band, where in February 1965 his guitar licks became the defining element of 'Papa's Got A Brand New Bag'. Apart from a two-year break between 1970 and 1972, Nolen remained with Brown for the rest of his career, which ended suddenly with a fatal heart attack while the band was in Atlanta, Georgia.

● ALBUMS: with Pete 'Guitar' Lewis, Cal Green Scratchin' (Charly 1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Mr Fullbright's Blues (P-Vine 1977)★★★, Blues Guitar Blasters (Ace 1988)★★★, Dapper Cats, Groovy Tunes & Hot Guitars (Ace 1992)★★★, Elko Blues Vol. 1 (Wolf 1995)★★★.

Nomad

This band's press largely revolved around two facts. First their vocalist, Sharon Dee Clarke (b. *c.*1965), had played the role of a nurse in Dennis Potter's The Singing Detective. She was also filmed in the bed next to the character Michelle Fowler when the latter was giving birth in Eastenders. Secondly, their single, 'Devotion', comprised samples from the British Poll Tax Riots and even transferred one of Thatcher's more rabid outbursts onto tape. It was also a huge hit, reaching number 2 in the charts and becoming the biggest dance single of 1991 in the process. It was co-written and produced by future Undercover producer Steve Mac. The other personnel in the band were rapper MC Mikee Freedom (b. *c.*1969, Bristol, England) and Damon Rochefort (b. *c.*1965, Cardiff, Wales). Freedom was discovered by former law student Rochefort while rapping on a song entitled 'Love Don't Live Here Anymore' by Fresh Connection. Rochefort himself had worked with Clarke on the FPI Project's 1990 hit, 'Going Back To My Roots'. Unfortunately their debut album was thin on original songs, comprising three versions of 'Devotion', while elsewhere formulaic Euro dance pop held sway. Though the follow-up single, 'Just A Groove', made the Top 20, subsequent efforts ('Something Special' - originally recorded by Clarke solo for a compilation album, 'Your Love Is Lifting Me' and '24 Hours A Day') failed to replicate their original success. Rochefort also embarked on a side project, Serious Rope, again featuring Clarke, who scored a 1993 hit with 'Happiness', recorded as a tribute to the Flesh club in Manchester. Freedom would go on to a solo career with TEK, beginning with 'Set You Free' for Dave Pearce's Reachin' label.

● ALBUMS: Changing Cabins (Rumour 1991)★★★.

Nomi, Klaus

b. 1945, Berlin, Germany, d. 6 August 1983, New York, USA. Famed for his Mephistophelean make-up and piercing tenor voice, Nomi claimed erroneously to have worked in the 70s as both a professional opera singer and as David Bowie's dresser. By 1979 he was touring in Europe and the USA as a highly idiosyncratic cabaret act, performing barely recognizable electronic reworkings of everything from Saint Saens' 'Samson And Delilah' and Donna Summer's 'I Feel Love' to Chubby Checker's 'The Twist'. In 1980 he signed to RCA Records and released a version of Elvis Presley's 'Can't Help Falling In Love' as a single. He worked with Man Parrish, the New York electro and hi-NRG producer, on his self-titled debut album. Nomi was well received in the US, which precipitated a move to New York. He became a regular guest on Saturday Night Live and starred in the film Urgh! A Music War. In England his openness about his own homosexuality and outrageous dress sense alligned him with the New Romantic movement. He seemed to be playing upon his goofball appeal with American audiences on his second album, Simple Man, which included a version of 'Ding Dong The Witch Is Dead' from The Wizard Of Oz. The record closed with Purcell's 'Death' leading into an arrangement of John Dowland's 'If My Complaints' - an oblique and moving eulogy to the first victims of AIDS. The disease took his own life the following year - Nomi was one of the first celebrity victims of the disease. Two posthumous compilation albums have been released, and a recording of one of his early concert performances appeared in the USA.

● ALBUMS: Klaus Nomi (1981)★★★, Simple Man (1982)★, Encore (1984)★★, In Concert (1986)★★★, Collection (1990)★★★.

Nomos

Nomos were formed in Cork, Eire, by students studying traditional music and ethnomusicology at the local university. Niall Vallely (concertina, low whistles) came from Armagh, Liz Doherty (fiddle) from Buncranna, County Donegal, Frank Torpey (bodhran, bendir) from Wexford, Gerry McKee (mandocello) from County Down, while John Spillane (guitar, bass) was the only one of them who was a native of Cork. The group was formed at the turn of the 90s by Vallely and Doherty, who picked up various members during informal sessions until Spillane became the final recruit in 1993, shortly after he had left the Stargazers. Regular performances at the Lobby Bar in Union Quay introduced them to their new manager Pat Conway who got them a recording contract with Solid Records (home to Sharon Shannon and the Saw Doctors). Before this Nomos had recorded a demo cassette in 1992, introducing a style of traditional music played with great energy and verve. However, Spillane's songwriting invigorated the formula in time for 1995's I Won't Be Afraid Anymore, though several songs ('Wing Commander Donald Mackenzie', 'The Corsair', 'Morse Avenue' and 'Guns Of The Magnificent Seven') survived from the original cassette to the album.

● ALBUMS: I Won't Be Afraid Anymore (Solid 1995)★★★★.

Nookie

In 1994 Nookie (b. Gavin Chung, *c.*1971) arrived from Hitchin in Hertfordshire at the forefront of the new jungle movement sweeping through the UK's dance scene. Singles like 'Only You' (1994) and 'The Sound Of Music' (1995) attempted to add spiritual resonance to the drum and bass formula, and added keyboard, piano and vocals to crunching rhythms and breakbeats. Nookie had served a long apprenticeship in jungle and its two main antecedents, hardcore and reggae. Aged 17 he made his vinyl debut, remixing Flourgon and Ninjaman's ragga track 'Zig It Up', as a member of the hip hop crew Main Attraction. His first release under his own steam (as 2 Boasters) was 'Large Southend Donut', which revealed his stylistic hallmarks of piano melding into a rhythmic onslaught. As well as Nookie, Chung also records under the name Cloud Nine for the highly regarded hardcore stable Moving Shadow. He runs his own record shop, Parliament, in Hitchin and runs his own label, Daddy Armshouse, with partner Pedro, as well doing a lot of remixing.

● ALBUMS: The Sound Of Music (Reinforced 1995)★★★.

Nooks, George

(see Prince Mohammed)

Noonan, Steve

b. USA. The singer-songwriter Steve Noonan first performed at the Paradox Club in Orange County, California, USA, where Tim Buckley and Jackson Browne were among other acts featured. Browne was briefly a member of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band, which led to Noonan along with Greg Copeland writing their first US hit, 'Buy For Me The Rain'. Noonan then joined Buckley on Elektra Records. Steve Noonan featured several superb originals, notably 'Street Singer' which was covered by another Elektra act, Clear Light, as well as four excellent Browne compositions. Unfortunately, the set was largely ignored upon release and he failed to reap the same acclaim as his associates.

● ALBUMS: Steve Noonan (Elektra 1968)★★★★.

Noone, Jimmie

b. 23 April 1895, Cut Off, Louisiana, USA, d. 19 April 1944. One of numerous students of Lorenzo Tio, Noone turned to the clarinet after first playing guitar. In the years immediately prior to World War I he played in bands led by notable New Orleans musicians such as Freddie Keppard and Buddy Petit. In 1918 he worked with Joe 'King' Oliver in Chicago and two years later was with Doc Cooke, remaining there for five years. In 1926 Noone took his own band into Chicago's Apex Club, thus beginning a remarkable period of sustained creativity during which he became the idol of countless up-and-coming young musicians, black and white, clarinettists and all. During part of its existence, the Apex Club band included Earl 'Fatha' Hines. Noone had made records during his stints with Oliver and Cooke, but now embarked on another series of recordings, including his theme, 'Sweet Lorraine', which remain classics of their kind. In the early 40s he moved to Los Angeles where he worked with Kid Ory, led his own band and appeared as a member of the New Orleans All Stars on Orson Welles's weekly radio show, as well as playing with the Capitol Jazzmen. Noone appeared well poised to capitalize upon the upsurge of interest in traditional music heralded by the Revival movement, but he died suddenly in April 1944. One of the most important of the New Orleans clarinettists, he had a remarkable technique and exercised full control of his instrument. Playing with a deep appreciation of the blues, his records stand as significant milestones in the history of jazz. His son, Jimmie Noone Jnr. (b. James Fleming, 21 April 1938, Chicago, Illinois, USA, d. 1991), also played clarinet and from the 80s enjoyed a successful international career.

● COMPILATIONS: Jimmie Noone And His Apex Club Orchestra Vol. 1 (1979)★★★★, Jimmie Noone (1931-40) (Queendisc 1981)★★★★, King Of New Orleans (Jazz Bird 1982)★★★, With The Apex Club Orchestra 1928 (Swaggie 1992)★★★★, Collection Vol 1 (Collectors Classics 1992)★★★, The Complete Recordings Vol 1 (Affinity 1992)★★★★.

Noone, Peter

b. Peter Blair Dennis Bernard Noone, 5 November 1947, Manchester, England. After studying singing at the Manchester School of Music and Drama, the teenage Noone won a part in the television series Coronation Street. After taking up piano and guitar he talked his way into the Heartbeats, which later became Herman's Hermits. In the Herman guise, Noone scored a series of million-selling singles in the 60s before finally launching a solo career in 1970. A cover of David Bowie's 'Oh You Pretty Things' made the UK Top 10, but subsequent releases were largely ignored. By 1980 he was fronting a more contemporary-sounding group, the Tremblers, but in spite of his change of image, no hits were forthcoming. Two years later he reverted to his original career, taking an acting role in The Pirates Of Penzance. He subsequently moved to the USA where he hosts a music television show ● FILMS: Hold On (1965).

Noor Shimaal

Consisting of Vivienne Dogan-Corringham (vocals), Amel Benhassine-Miller (dance) and Dawson Benhassine-Miller (percussion), Noor Shimaal are a 90s music and dance performance group who use influences from Celtic, Mediterranean and North African traditions. Other collaborators who provide a musical backdrop for their live shows have included Welsh violinist Sianed Jones, Cris Cheek on clarinet and chaabi banjo and the guitar player Azzedine. Based in the UK, the group's vocals are nevertheless predominantly sung in Greek and Turkish, as well as occasional diversions into English. Before Noor Shimaal, Dogan-Corringham had released several solo albums, including Popular Turkish Folk Songs. This provided such an authentic reading of the Turkish music tradition that it sold well in Turkey. Two further solo releases included a CD of Greek rebetika music and a crossover album, Avant, featuring the complementary slide guitar of Mike Cooper. Her interest in Mediterranean music stemmed from her marriage into a Turkish community, with whom she spends most of her time in north London. Algerian born Amel Benhassine-Miller emigrated to Germany in her 20s and formed the Arabic dance group Banat As Sarha (Daughters Of The Sahara). After stage appearances with 3 Mustaphas 3 and Dissidenten she came to England to appear at the ICA auditorium and has made regular television appearances as a dancer. Her partner, master hand drummer Dawson Benhassine-Miller, had previously lent his percussion skills to artists including Philip Glass, Sade, Jah Wobble and the Drifters. The trio's ability to entertain both visually and musically was confirmed by live performances throughout 1994, culminating in the release of their debut album the following year. It brought them immediate approval in London's Greek community and good reviews throughout the roots music press.

● ALBUMS: Noor Shimaal (ARC 1995)★★★.

Nordenstam, Stina

b. 1969, Stockholm, Sweden. Nordenstam came to music early through the jazz records and amateur playing of her father. She took to the fiddle and piano, and precociously began writing her own classically inspired compositions. At the age of 15 she was singing modern classical music, but her next move, backed by the Flippermen, leaned towards jazz. Signed up by Swedish indie label Telegraph, she debuted with Memories Of A Colour, an ethereally evocative and occasionally disturbing journey through her psyche, setting her short-story songs or vignettes to impeccably skewed jazzy arrangements. This soared to such Scandinavian success that the next opening of the Swedish parliament was accompanied by a rare Nordenstam gig. The oft-heard comparisons with Kate Bush and Joni Mitchell, whom she admires, are misleading. Nordenstam had taken her early passions (Cannonball Adderley, Erik Satie, John Coltane and Bartok), fused them with post-feminist angst and sang the results in a spooky, Village Of The Damned little-girl whisper. And She Closed Her Eyes was more of the same but better, tending towards ambient jazz with contributions from Jon Hassell. Dynamite was more contemporary with stark, punkish overtones.

● ALBUMS: Memories Of A Colour (Telegram 1992)★★★, And She Closed Her Eyes (Telegram 1994)★★★, Dynamite (East West 1996)★★★.

Norma Jean

b. Norma Jean Beasley, 31 January 1938, near Wellston, Oklahoma, USA. Norma Jean showed an early interest in singing and after the family relocated to Oklahoma City, when she was five years old, she was given guitar tuition by an aunt. At the age of 13 she had her own thrice-weekly show on KLPR and in 1958, after working with several other artists including Leon McAuliffe, she became a regular on Red Foley's Ozark Jubilee television show, where she first dropped her surname and where her melodic singing soon attracted nationwide attention. In 1960 she moved to Nashville and became the featured vocalist with Porter Wagoner on both his network television show and also on the Grand Ole Opry. She recorded for Columbia in the early 60s but only gained her first US country chart success, 'Let's Go All The Way', in 1964, by which time she had joined RCA. (The Columbia material is contained on her only Columbia album, Country's Favorite; released in 1966 on their Harmony subsidiary - it is now highly sought after by collectors.) Further hits followed, including country Top 10s with 'Go Cat Go' and 'I Wouldn't Buy A Used Car From Him' and a Top 5 recording of 'The Game Of Triangles' with Bobby Bare and Liz Anderson. Equally at home with up-tempo songs such as 'Truck Driving Woman', country monologues such as 'Old Doc Brown' or a country weepie on the lines of 'There Won't Be Any Patches In Heaven', she built up a considerable reputation. She married in 1967 and left Wagoner's show and though she continued to record regularly into the early 70s, she abandoned most of her public appearances to concentrate on her home - a 1000-acre farm near Oklahoma City (Wagoner filled the vacancy with a young girl called Dolly Parton). She recorded in the 80s and her last chart entry was a very minor hit in 1982, with a duet recording with Claude Gray of her first hit, 'Let's Go All The Way'.

● ALBUMS: with Porter Wagoner The Porter Wagoner Show (RCA Victor 1963)★★★, with Wagoner Porter Wagoner In Person (RCA Victor 1964)★★★, Let's Go All The Way (RCA Victor 1964)★★★, Pretty Miss Norma Jean (RCA Victor 1965)★★★, Country's Favorite (Harmony 1966)★★★, with Wagoner Live - On The Road (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Norma Jean Sings A Tribute To Kitty Wells (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Please Don't Hurt Me (RCA Victor 1966)★★★, Norma Jean Sings Porter Wagoner (RCA Victor 1967)★★★★, Jackson Ain't A Very Big Town (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, with Bobby Bare, Liz Anderson The Game Of Triangles (RCA Victor 1967)★★, The Body And Mind (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, Heaven Help The Working Girl (Camden 1968)★★★, Heaven's Just A Prayer Away (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, Love's A Woman's Job (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, Country Giants (RCA Victor 1969)★★★, It's Time For Norma Jean (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, Another Man Loved Me Last Night (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, Norma Jean (Bearsville 1971)★★★, Sings Hank Cochran Songs (1971)★★★, It Wasn't God Who Made Honky Tonk Angels (1971)★★★, I Guess That Comes From Being Poor (1972)★★★, Thank You For Loving Me (1972)★★★, The Only Way To Hold Your Man (1973)★★★, Norma Jean (1978)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Norma Jean (RCA Victor 1969)★★★★, My Best To You (Roma 1996)★★★★.

Norman, Jimmy

b. 12 August 1937, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. Norman is one of many talented and ubiquitous R&B performers who have had a modest but memorable impact on the music scene. His first professional experience was as a member of the Los Angeles group the Chargers, who recorded a couple of doo-wop records for RCA during 1958-59. The Chargers broke up in 1959 and Norman began recording as a solo act under producer H.B. Barnum. In 1960 he and Barnum, in an ad hoc group called the Dyna-Sores, recorded a successful cover version of the Hollywood Argyles' song 'Alley Oop', and their version made it to number 59 on the pop charts. Norman's solo career then took off when he achieved a regional success with the haunting 'Here Comes The Night' in 1961. The following year he reached the national charts with the memorable New Orleans-styled 'I Don't Love You No More' (number 21 R&B, number 47 pop). He never again matched these achievements, but his delightful 'Love Is Wonderful' was an east coast hit in 1963. Norman had one other national chart record, 'Can You Blame Me' (number 35 R&B), in 1966. In the 70s and 80s he performed as a member of the Cornell Gunther-led Coasters group, one of several competing on the revival circuit during that time. In the early 70s Norman recorded several singles for this Coasters group on the Turntable label, and made some records as lead singer in Eddie Palmieri's Latin-R&B fusion group, the Harlem River Drive. In 1975 he returned to solo recording, releasing some singles for Buddah Records. Norman recorded his first album in 1987 for the tiny Badcat label.

● ALBUMS: Home (Badcat 1987)★★★.

Norris, Walter

b. 27 December 1927, Little Rock, Arkansas, USA. Norris studied piano formally as a child, then began playing professionally in his home-town while still in his early teens. In the early 50s he played in various parts of the country, sometimes as sideman, sometimes as leader of his own small group. In 1954 he settled for a time on the west coast, working with an array of leading jazz musicians including Jack Sheldon, Frank Rosolino and Ornette Coleman. In the early 60s he moved to New York, taking up a post as musical director at the Playboy Club and also studying at the Manhattan School of Music. In the early 70s he occasionally played with the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra. He toured internationally with this band, then continued to work overseas as a single and also with small bands accompanying Red Mitchell, Dexter Gordon, Red Rodney and others. Back in New York in 1976 he played with Charles Mingus, then went to Europe where he became resident in Germany, playing with German orchestras and also teaching. He has continued to work in Europe although he periodically visits the USA. An outstanding technician, Norris's highly adventurous musical mind has taken him from bop beginnings through most subsequent developments in jazz, notably free jazz and third-stream.

● ALBUMS: Something Else!!!! The Music Of Ornette Coleman (Contemporary 1958)★★★★, Drifting (Enja 1974)★★★, Synchronicity (Enja 1978)★★★, Stepping On Cracks (Progressive 1978)★★★, Live At The Berklee Performance Center (Shiah 1985)★★.

North, Alex

b. 4 December 1910, Chester, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 8 September 1991, Pacific Palisades, California, USA. An important composer for films, theatre, television, ballet and classical music, whose career stretched from the late 30s through to the 80s. After studying at Juilliard with the distinguished composer Aaron Copland, as well as at the Moscow Conservatory (1933-35), North composed for the Federal Theatre Project in the late 30s. During those years, through to 1950, he wrote the scores for government documentary and information films, and served in the US Army in World War II. In 1948 he composed the incidental score for Arthur Miller's landmark play Death Of A Salesman, on Broadway, and repeated the role for the film version in 1951. For that, and for his innovative jazz-tinged score to A Streetcar Named Desire (1951), he gained the first two of his 15 Academy Award nominations. Other early 50s film music included The 13th Letter, Viva Zapata! (considered an early milestone in his career), Les Miserables, the ballet music for Fred Astaire and Leslie Caron in Daddy Long Legs, and Unchained (1955). The latter featured 'Unchained Melody' (lyric by Hy Zaret), a ballad of yearning that was nominated for an Academy Award, and became popular at the time for Les Baxter (US number 1), Al Hibbler and Jimmy Young (UK number 1), among others, and through the years was constantly remembered and revived. The Righteous Brothers' 1965 smash-hit version accompanied an erotic scene in the popular 1990 movie Ghost, and in 1995 the song topped the UK chart once again in a version by Robson Green and Jerome Flynn, two actors from the popular television series Soldier, Soldier. North's other 50s scores included The Man With The Gun (1955), I'll Cry Tomorrow (1955), The Rose Tattoo (1955), The Bad Seed (1956), The Rainmaker (1956), Four Girls In Town (1956), The King And Four Queens (1956), The Bachelor Party (1957), The Long Hot Summer (1958), Stage Struck (1958), Hot Spell (1958), The Sound And The Fury (1959) and The Wonderful Country (1959). Early in the 60s North began an association with director John Huston that lasted until Huston's death in 1987. Together they worked on such films as The Misfits (1961), Wise Blood (1979), Under The Volcano (1984), Prizzi's Honor (1985) and The Dead (1987), Huston's swan-song. North's 60s film work began with the epic Spartacus ('magnificent score, staggering battle scenes'), followed, in complete contrast, by The Children's Hour. His other scores of the decade included another epic, Cleopatra, John Ford's Cheyenne Autumn, The Agony And The Ecstasy, Who's Afraid Of Virginia Woolf?, The Shoes Of The Fisherman, Hard Contract and A Dream Of Kings. In the 70s, as his style of spectacular, dramatic scores went out of fashion, North worked less for the big screen. However, in later years he composed the music for movies such as Pocket Money, Once Upon A Scoundrel, Bite The Bullet and Somebody Killed Her Husband. In the 80s, besides his collaborations with Huston, North was still being critically acclaimed for scores such as Carny, Dragonslayer, Under The Volcano, Good Morning Vietnam, and his final film, The Penitent (1988). In 1986 he became the first composer to receive an honorary Academy Award 'in recognition of his brilliant artistry in the creation of memorable music for a host of distinguished motion pictures'. He died, five years later, in 1991. As well as films, his occasional television work included the feature documentary Africa (1967), music for the mini-series The Word, which was nominated for an Emmy, and Rich Man, Poor Man, which won two, the telefeature Death Of A Salesman (again), and music for other programmes, such as Your Show Of Shows, 77 Sunset Strip, Playhouse 90 and The F.D.R. Story. Many of North's scores were made available on albums, and several individual items, such as the title themes from I'll Cry Tomorrow and The Long Hot Summer, and 'Unchained Melody', of course, endure.

North, Freddie

b. 28 May 1939, Nashville,Tennessee, USA. In the mid-50s the soulful singer formed the Rookies, who recorded 'Money, Money, Money' on Federal. North later became a demo singer (often singing country songs) for a Nashville publisher. In 1959, under the future hit producer Billy Sherrill, he recorded a single on Sam Phillips' Phillips label. North's record 'Okay, So What', on University in 1960, led to his appearing on Bandstand, but no hit resulted. In 1962 he moved to Capitol and two years later recorded on Ric Records. In the mid-60s he joined Nashboro working in their stockroom. This led to his recording on their A-Bet label in 1968 where he released his debut, The Magnetic North. In 1970 he moved to the Nashboro-distributed Mankind label and, produced by owner producer/songwriter Jerry Williams Jnr. (aka Swamp Dogg and Raw Spitt), had his first and biggest hit, 'She's All I Got', an R&B Top 10 hit that made the US Top 40 in 1971. A year later, while working as Nashboro's national director of promotion, he had his second and last chart hit with 'You And Me Together Forever'.

- ● ALBUMS: The Magnetic North (A-Bet 1968)★★★, Friend (Mankind 1972)★★★, Cuss The Wind (Nashboro 1974)★★★, I'm Your Man (Broadway Sounds 1977)★★★.
- ● COMPILATIONS: I'm Your Man (Charly R&B 1989)★★★.

Northcott, Tom

b. 1943, Vancouver, Canada. Northcott began his career as a folk-singer but embraced pop on hearing the Beatles. By 1964 he was starring on television's Let's Go, the house band of which, the Vancouver Playboys, supported the singer on his debut single, 'She Loves Me, She Loves Me Not'. The following year later he established his own record label, New Syndrome. This outlet not only featured his group the Tom Northcott Trio (Northcott (guitar, vocals), Rick Enns (bass) and Mike 'Kat' Hendrikse (drums), but also early releases by the CFUN Classics, later known as the Collectors. His trio completed three vibrant singles, including the dazzling 'Just Don't', before Northcott opted for a solo career, having aligned New Syndrome to Warner Brothers Records. His first release for the label, a haunting version of Donovan's 'Sunny Goodge Street' was succeeded by Nilsson's '1941'. Leon Russell arranged the latter single, and its follow-up, 'Girl From The North Country', before Jack Nitszche assumed control for 'The Rainmaker'. Its expansive production cost in excess of $60,000, yet the anticipated hit failed to materialize. The Best Of Tom Northcott ensued, which collected several of these tracks, fleshing them out with material Northcott recorded with Canadian group Spring. In 1970 the singer switched to the UNI label. Although his original composition, 'Crazy Jane', was issued as a single, Northcott continued to rely on other songwriters, including Carole King, Leonard Cohen and Randy Newman. He retired from music in 1973, phasing out New Syndrome and selling his home-based Studio 3. Occasional demos aside, Northcott has preferred to study marine law.

- ● ALBUMS: The Best Of Tom Northcott (Warners 1969)★★★, Upside Down (UNI 1971)★★.
- ● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Tom Northcott 1964 - 1971 (Neptoon 1987)★★★.

Northern Uproar

Arriving in 1995 with comparisons to fellow Manchester, England band Oasis ringing in their ears, Northern Uproar comprise Leon Mayer (vocals, bass), Paul 'PK' Kelly (guitar), Keith Chadwick (drums) and Jeff Fletcher (guitar). Signed to Heavenly Records after a well-received appearance at the 1994 In The City showcase, their debut single, 'Rollercoaster', was produced by James Bradfield of the Manic Street Preachers. Herein the Oasis connection was confirmed by the same sort of thuggish charm and belligerent pop tunes, written by Mayer, who had also recently appeared in a Levi jeans commercial. 'From A Window' brought them to the UK Top 40 and brokered their debut appearance on Top Of The Pops, before the release of the third single, 'Livin' It Up', and an attendant, self-titled debut album. The latter surprised many with its depth of sound and maturity (production was once again headed by Bradfield). It also argued against frequent media charges that Northern Uproar were too fresh from the playground to legitimately hold their current position of prominence - despite the fact that the band had been formed at the turn of the 90s. As Mayer confirmed to the music press: 'We're not just about being energetic. Our music's on a wide span; it's got massive variety. We want to go for everything. We get better and better, so by the time we're 25, we'll be writing 60, 70 million-selling albums'. The press were then pleasantly surprised by the musical progress shown on the follow-up album, although its poor sales did not bode well for the band's future.

● ALBUMS: Northern Uproar (Heavenly 1996)★★★, Yesterday Tomorrow Today (Heavenly 1997)★★★.

Northside

This UK independent label, dance music band was formed in mid-1989 in Manchester by Warren 'Dermo' Dermody (vocals), Cliff Ogier (bass), Timmy Walsh (guitar) and Paul Walsh (drums). After signing to the premier Manchester independent Factory Records, they released two singles in 1990, 'Shall We Take A Trip' and 'Rising Star', which benefited from the 'Madchester' explosion brought about by the success of labelmates the Happy Mondays. Pilloried in the press as being an opportunistic 'baggy' band, these releases and an attendant album did little to persuade critics of any real significance to their shambolic dance shuffles.

● ALBUMS: Chicken Rhythms (Factory 1991)★★★.

Norum, John

Norum was formerly guitarist for the Swedish band Europe but left just as the band were on the verge of worldwide recognition with 'The Final Countdown'. After completing the recording of the Countdown album, he decided to break ranks, unhappy with the pop-metal direction that vocalist Joey Tempest was intent on pursuing. Turning to a solo career, he enlisted the help of Marcel Jacob (bass, ex-Yngwie Malmsteen), Peter Hermansson (drums, ex-220 Volts) and Goran Edman (vocals, ex-Madison) to record Total Control in 1987. Musically, this followed a similar path to that of his former employers, but featured more prominent rock guitarwork and less polished vocals. Following the release of a live album and a collaboration with Don Dokken, he moved to Los Angeles to work on sessions with Glenn Hughes (ex-Trapeze, Deep Purple), which resulted in Face The Truth.

● ALBUMS: Total Control (CBS 1987)★★★, Live In Stockholm (CBS 1988)★★, Face The Truth (Epic 1992)★★★.

Norum, Tone

Tone is the younger sister of former Europe guitarist John Norum. She debuted in 1986 with One Of A Kind, an album written, arranged and played on by Joey Tempest (also of Europe) and her brother. Predictably, the musical direction was very close to that of her sibling's concern: melodic pop-metal, with the occasional power ballad. This Time followed a similar pattern, but used session musicians and the Billy Steinberg/Tom Kelly writing team who had previously penned hits for Madonna and Whitney Houston. The result was a highly polished melodic rock album in the style of Heart and Starship. Red saw Tone move away from AOR towards folk rock.

● ALBUMS: One Of A Kind (Epic 1986)★★★, This Time (Epic 1988)★★, Red (Epic 1989)★★★.

Norvo, Red

b. Kenneth Norville, 31 March 1908, Beardstown, Illinois, USA. After playing in a marimba band, Norvo was hired by Paul Whiteman in the late 20s. With this band he played xylophone and was called upon largely to deliver novelty effects. While with Whiteman he met and married one of the band's singers, Mildred Bailey; in 1933 they went to New York and embarked upon a career which culminated with them being billed as 'Mr and Mrs Swing'. During the 30s Norvo played and recorded with many leading jazz musicians of the day and remained in demand into the mid-40s, at which time he joined Benny Goodman and switched to vibraphone. During the 40s Norvo worked with leading bop musicians such as Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker, and in 1945 became a member of Woody Herman's First Herd. In the early 50s he was resident in California (his marriage to Bailey had ended in 1945), working in a trio he formed with Tal Farlow and Charles Mingus. He continued to play throughout the 60s and on into the mid-70s, when he decided to retire. This decision proved to be only temporary and the 80s saw him engaged in a series of worldwide tours as a solo artist, performing with Benny Carter, and in a reunion with Farlow. Norvo's vibraphone style retains the sound and feel of his earlier xylophone work, a fact which ensures a rhythmic urgency to much of his playing and which might well be the motive behind his long-standing preference for working in groups without a drummer. The assurance with which he incorporated bop phrasing into his work makes him unusual among musicians of his generation and brings an added quality to his work that ensures that it is always interesting.

● ALBUMS: Time In His Hands (1945)★★★, Red Norvo's Nine (1945),★★★★ The Red Norvo Septet i (1947)★★★, The Red Norvo Trio i (1950)★★★, The Red Norvo Trio ii (1950)★★★, The Red Norvo Trio iii (1953)★★★, The Red Norvo Trio iv (1953)★★★, The Red Norvo Trio v (1954)★★★, The Red Norvo Septet ii (1956)★★★, The Red Norvo Quartet (1956)★★★, The Red Norvo Sextet (1957)★★★, Music To Listen To (1957)★★★, Norvo - Naturally! (1957)★★, The Forward Look (Reference Recordings 1957)★★★, Red Norvo And His Orchestra (1958)★★, Sessions, Live (1958)★★, The Red Norvo Septet iii (1958)★★★, Command Performance (1959)★★★, The Red Norvo Quintet (1969)★★★, Swing That Music (Affinity 1969)★★★★, Vibes A La Red (1975)★★★, The Second Time Around (1975)★★★, Red In New York (1977)★★★, Live At Rick's Cafe Americain (1978)★★, with Ross Tompkins Red & Ross (1979)★★, with Bucky Pizzarelli Just Friends (1983)★★★, with others Swing Reunion (1985)★★★, Benny Carter All Stars (1985)★★★.

- COMPILATIONS: Red Norvo And His All Stars (1933-38),★★★★ The Band Goes To Town (1935)★★★, Small Band Jazz (1936-44)★★★, Small Band Jazz: Rare Broadcasts (1943)★★.

Norworth, Jack

b. 5 January 1879, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 1 September 1959, Laguna Beach, California, USA. A songwriter, producer, and all-round entertainer in the musical theatre, Norworth started out as a black-faced comedian, and spent several years in minstrel shows and vaudeville at the turn of the twentieth century. In 1906, he appeared in Lew Fields's elaborate vaudeville revue About Town, and two years later joined contralto Nora Bayes - his second wife - in Florenz Ziegfeld's Follies Of 1908. They introduced their most famous composition, 'Shine On Harvest Moon', in that show, and were together again in Follies Of 1909, The Jolly Bachelors (1910), Little Miss Fix-It (1911), and Roly Poly (1912). In the early years of World War I Norworth was in London, where he starred in productions such as Hullo Tango (taking over during the run in 1914), Rosy Rapture-The Pride Of the Beauty Chorus and Looking Around (both 1915), specializing in tongue-twisting numbers such as 'Sister Susie's Sewing Shirts For Soldiers' (R.P. Weston-Herman Darewski) and 'Which Switch Is The Switch, Miss, For Ipswich?' (Darewski-F.W. Mark). He made his final Broadway appearance in Odds And Ends (1917), which he also co-produced. Norworth's other compositions with Bayes included 'Turn Off Your Light, Mr. Moon-Man', 'Fancy You Fancying Me', 'I'm Sorry', and 'Young America'. He also wrote the lyrics for composer Albert von Tilzer's immensely popular 'Take Me Out To The Ball Game', and other numbers such as 'Honey Boy', 'Smarty', and 'Good Evening, Caroline'. Norworth and Bayes's most famous song, 'Shine On Harvest Moon', was sung by Ruth Etting in the Ziegfeld Follies Of 1931, and it was the title of the Norworth-Bayes 1944 film biography, which starred Ann Sheridan and Dennis King. In 1948 Norworth was still reported to be active in benefit shows, as well as running a novelty shop in California.

Notations

An R&B vocal group from Chicago, Illinois, USA, the original group members were Clifford Curry, LaSalle Matthews, Bobby Thomas and Jimmy Stroud (replaced by Walter Jones in 1973). The Notations featured a delightful upbeat sound and made a modest impact during the 70s. The group was formed in the late 60s and recorded unsuccessfully for a few local labels before achieving a hit nationally on the Twinight label with 'I'm Still Here' (number 26 R&B). They were signed by Curtom Records in 1975 to the company's Gemigo subsidiary and had hits with 'It Only Hurts For A Little While' (number 27 R&B) and 'It's Alright (This Feeling)' (number 42 R&B). The Notations left Curtom in 1977, and three of the members - Curry, Matthews and Thomas - made one more single, 'Judy Blue Eyes', for Mercury, before breaking up in 1978.

- ALBUMS: Notations (Gemigo 1976)★★★.

Notes From The Underground

Based in Berkeley, California, USA, the NFTU were one of the region's first electric-folk bands. Fred Sokolow (b. 1945, Los Angeles, California, USA), an accomplished bluegrass musician, formed the group in 1965 with Mark Mandell (guitar), Joe Luke (drums) and David Gale. Mike O'Connor (bass) and Peter Ostwald (drums) replaced Gale and Luke while a pianist, Jim Work, also joined the unit prior to their recording debut, a privately pressed EP. Work then left the line-up and his place was ultimately filled by Skip Rose. The quintet released their only album in 1968. Notes From The Underground was a remarkably eclectic set, featuring good-time music, jazz and Bay Area-styled interplay, but its disparate nature robbed the NFTU of any cohesion. The subsequent loss of several key members undermined their progress. In 1970 Sokolow and Mandell disbanded the group and re-emerged the following year with a new ensemble, Prince Bakaradi.

- ALBUMS: Notes From The Underground (1968)★★★★.

Notes, Freddie, And The Rudies

(see Greyhound)

Nothing's Shocking - Jane's Addiction

The instrumental track that opens the album reminds the listener of Randy California and his Spirit. Everything changes from then on; the lightness of Spirit gives way to harder stuff, much closer to Blue Cheer. Musically, it is easy to understand why the band were strongly tipped for great things; lyrically, there are some strange ramblings. 'Standing In The Shower' is a nice concept, but tells us nothing, and it is hard to agree with the paradox of 'Ted, Just Admit It' and just why 'sex is violent'. Maybe the art of enjoyment is to let the music wash over you at a high volume, because these chaps could certainly play.

- Tracks: Up The Beach; Ocean Size; Had A Dad; Ted, Just Admit It; Standing In The Shower, Thinking; Summertime Rolls; Mountain Song; Idiot's Rule; Jane Says; Thank You Boys; Pigs In Zen.
- First released 1988
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 103

Noto, Sam

b. 17 April 1930, Buffalo, New York, USA. After playing trumpet in a number of leading 50s big bands, including that led by Stan Kenton, Noto worked in small groups until joining Count Basie for two spells in the mid- and late 60s. He then returned to small group format, co-leading a band with Joe Romano. After spending part of the 70s in show bands in Las Vegas, Noto moved to Canada where he worked with Rob McConnell, playing and arranging for the latter's big band. During the late 70s and throughout the 80s Noto played on the international festival circuit and also worked in clubs in his home town and in Canada. A fluent improviser, Noto's composing and arranging reveal an exceptional talent although his chosen locations for much of his best work has unwarrentedly kept him hidden from the attention of audiences.

● ALBUMS: Entrance! (Xanadu 1975)★★★, Act One (Xanadu 1975)★★★★, with Rob McConnell The Jazz Album (1976)★★★, Notes To You (Xanadu 1977)★★★, Noto-riety (Xanadu 1978)★★★, 2-4-5 (Unisson 1988)★★.

Notorious

This ill-fated pop-rock act seemed set to revive the careers of ex-Diamond Head singer Sean Harris and guitarist Robin George, but was aborted before it had a chance to get off the ground. With an expensively recorded debut for the relaunched Bronze label, with George contributing all instrumentation, the future seemed bright, but the duo were reluctant to recruit a touring band when pressed by the record company, as they viewed Notorious as a 'studio project'. The disagreement resulted in Notorious being deleted after only three weeks on release. The album itself was an underrated effort, with Robert Plant's solo work an obvious influence, and produced an excellent single in 'The Swalk'. Denied any real chance of success, the duo parted company, with Harris returning to a revived Diamond Head.

● ALBUMS: Notorious (Bronze 1990)★★.

Notorious B.I.G.

b. Christopher Wallace, 21 May 1972, New York, USA, d. 8 March 1997, Los Angeles, California, USA. A large, imposing figure in contemporary rap before his murder in 1997, Wallace grew up in the tough district of Bedford-Stuyvesant, in Brooklyn, New York. He soon graduated to a life modelled on the activities of those around him, selling drugs and acting as a teenage lookout. He first rapped, under the name Biggie Smalls, as part of the neighbourhood group the Old Gold Brothers. He also experimented with his own demo recordings, a copy of which was eventually passed to Mister Cee, Big Daddy Kane's DJ. Cee passed the demo on to The Source, America's bestselling rap periodical, which gave it a glowing review in its 'Unsigned Hype' column. This attracted the attention of Sean 'Puffy' Combs of Bad Boy Entertainment, who signed Wallace. Having now adopted the stage name Notorious B.I.G., Wallace made his recording debut in 1993 backing Mary J. Blige on 'Real Love'. He also made a guest appearance on Supercat's 'Dolly My Baby'. His first solo effort was 'Party And Bullshit', included on the soundtrack to the film Who's The Man. His debut album followed in 1994. Ready To Die became a major hit thanks to the inclusion of singles such as 'Juicy', 'One More Chance' and 'Big Poppa', the latter voted Billboard's rap single of the year. He scooped a number of end-of-year awards in The Source, as the album achieved platinum sales. He went to the UK to support R. Kelly at Wembley Stadium in London, and also guested on Michael Jackson's HIStory - Past, Present And Future Book 1. However, despite his elevation to such exalted company, Notorious B.I.G. never left the ghetto behind. He formed a group, M.A.F.I.A., with some of his former hustler colleagues, who released an album, Conspiracy, in 1995. He was also involved in sundry episodes involving violence, such as a fracas with a promoter in New Jersey and his attempt to take a baseball bat to autograph hunters (for which he received a 100 hours' community service sentence). There was also a running feud between B.I.G. and Tupac '2Pac' Shakur - who was convinced of B.I.G.'s involvement in a 1994 robbery in which he was injured. Their disagreement soon festered into a bitter feud between the east and west coast American rap scenes. When Shakur was murdered, B.I.G.'s non-attendance at a rap peace summit in Harlem was widely criticized. Instead he began work on a second album, entitled, prophetically, Life After Death. Its cover featured the rapper standing next to a hearse with the numberplate B.I.G. He never lived to see its official release. He was gunned down after leaving a party in California in March 1997. Subsequent conjecture indicated that his murder may have been in retaliation for Shakur's killing.

● ALBUMS: Ready To Die (Bad Boy/Arista 1994)★★★, Life After Death (Bad Boy/Arista 1997)★★★★.

Notting Hillbillies

On 31 May 1986, Mark Knopfler played a low-key gig at the Grove pub in Holbeck, Leeds, with old friends Steve Phillips and Brendan Croker. They were billed as the Notting Hillbillies and each received the princely sum of £22 for their performance. Phillips first met Knopfler in 1968 when both interviewed a local blues and country guitarist (also called Steve Phillips) for the Yorkshire Post. As both journalists played guitar they formed the Duolian String Pickers duo and played together during the late 60s. They split when Knopfler went to university in 1970. When he finished studying three years later he went to London and eventually formed Dire Straits. Meanwhile, Phillips formed the Steve Phillips Juke Band to play rockabilly. In 1976 Bradford-born Croker met Phillips and when the Juke Band split they toured as Nev And Norriss. In 1980, Phillips temporarily retired from music to concentrate on art, and Croker eventually formed the 5 O'Clock Shadows. In 1986 Knopfler, flushed with success through Dire Straits, decided the time was right to do something a little different and all three musicians came together. Dire Straits manager Ed Bicknell was recruited as drummer (he had previously played in Mogul Thrash) and with backing musicians such as Guy Fletcher (guitar), Paul Franklin (pedal steel) and Marcus Cliff (bass, of the 5 O'Clock Shadows), they set out on a tour. They made just one album before returning to concentrate on their main bands.

- ALBUMS: Missing ... Presumed Having A Good Time (Vertigo 1990)★★.
- VIDEOS: Notting Hillbillies: Missing (Channel 5 1990).

Nottingham, Jimmy

b. 15 December 1925, New York City, New York, USA. After a brief apprenticeship with Cecil Payne, trumpeter Nottingham served in the US Navy, where he was a member of a band directed by Willie Smith. After World War II, he joined Lionel Hampton and during the late 40s also worked in the big bands led by Lucky Millinder and Charlie Barnet. Then he joined Count Basie's Orchestra, where he remained until 1950. In the 50s he played mostly in small groups and was also with bands specializing in Latin-American dance music. From the mid-50s until the mid-70s he was a staff musician with CBS Records, but continued to play jazz with artists such as Dizzy Gillespie, Edgar Sampson, Quincy Jones and Benny Goodman. From 1966 until the end of the decade, his Monday evenings were spent at the Village Vanguard as a member of the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis band. A powerful lead trumpeter with a searing high register, Nottingham's skill and versatility make him a notable member of any band in which he plays.

- ALBUMS: with Edgar Sampson Swing Softly Sweet Sampson (1956)★★★, with Thad Jones Mel Lewis Live At The Village Vanguard (1957)★★★★, with Lionel Hampton Newport Uproar! (1967)★★★★, with Jones-Lewis Central Park North (1969)★★★.

Notwist

A German hardcore punk band comprising Martin Messerschmidt (drums), Markus Acher (vocals, guitar), Martin Grteschmann and Michael Acher (bass), Notwist first came to prominence when, in 1989, they submitted a demo recording of their song, 'I Don't Want To Sell Myself', to a Bavarian radio contest. Following the breakthrough of compatriots Blumfeld, by the mid-90s Notwist had secured a domestic following sufficient to provoke overseas interest. 12, their fourth album, was the first to be released in the USA by the Zero Hour label. An unconventional take on punk electronica, with discordant twists akin to early Sonic Youth and Wire, the record also featured other unusual elements including bluegrass guitar (on 'The Incredible Change Of Our Alien'). Such eclecticism and adventurism reflects the brothers' varied musical interests - they additionally play in the spin-off groups Potawatome and Village Of Sangoona and write soundtrack music for friends' films.

- ALBUMS: 12 (Zero Hour 1997)★★★.

Nouveau Flamenco - Ottmar Liebert

The flamenco old guard will tell you this is not really flamenco, much as the members of stodgy progressive combos such as Barclay James Harvest and Camel would have told you that punk was not rock. Essentially, Liebert reduces the flamenco format to its rhythmic and melodic basics, and pulls them into shape with a rhythm section that would not be out of place on one of Santana's better albums. When it works, which is about half of the time, Liebert's tense, hard-plucked gipsy melodies are irresistible, and even when it does not work, they are still rich and vibrant. The Santa Fe-based 'nouveau-flamenco movement', of which Liebert was claimed to be a leading light, has failed to materialize, but the man himself has undeniably contributed something unique in the annals of new age. Olé!

- Tracks: Barcelona Nights; Heart Still/Beating; 3 Women Walking; 2 The Night; Passing Storm; Sante Fe; Surrender 2 Love; Waiting 4 Stars 2 Fall; Road 2 Her/Home; After The Rain; Flowers Of Romance; Moon Over Trees; Shadows.
- First released 1990
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 134

Nova Mob

(see Hart, Grant)

- ALBUMS: The Last Days Of Pompeii (Rough Trade 1991)★★★, Nova Mob (World Service 1994)★★★.

Nova, Aldo

b. Aldo Caparucio. Nova is a virtuoso guitarist of Italian descent. He arrived on the rock scene in 1982 with a self-titled debut of melodic AOR/pomp-rock that incorporated elements of Boston and Styx, with production offered by Blue Öyster Cult's Sandy Pearlman. Momentum was lost, however, with Subject, a disjointed and ultimately disappointing concept album. Twitch made amends somewhat, with a return to smooth, sophisticated and melody-conscious symphonic rock. Disillusioned by the lack of media response and complex legal wrangles and contractual commitments, he left the music business in 1985. After a six-year break, he was persuaded to return to the studio by his good friend Jon Bon Jovi (having guested on the latter's Blaze Of Glory solo project). Together they wrote the material for Blood On The Bricks, a stunning collection of hard rock songs, saturated with infectious hooks and inspired guitar breaks. The album was well received in the music press and drew comparisons with Bryan Adams, Europe and, unsurprisingly, Bon Jovi.

- ALBUMS: Aldo Nova (Portrait 1982)★★★★, Subject: Aldo Nova (Portrait 1983)★★★, Twitch (Portrait 1985)★★★, Blood On The Bricks (Polygram 1991)★★★★.

Nova, Heather

b. 1968, Bermuda. Nova's early interest in music intensified when, aged 19, she moved to art school in Providence, Rhode Island. She did not join in with the local rock scene but wrote film music for her own films. Inspired by Patti Smith and Lou Reed, she soon started writing songs. A tape of her demos was sent to the indie Big Cat Records in London for whom she recorded a single, before supporting the Violent Femmes and Bob Mould. Basing herself in south London, she set up her own home studio, made further demos, and started working with Youth, who became her producer for the 5,000-limited-edition Glowstars, which attracted favourable reviews. A raw live album, Blow, was recorded at The Mean Fiddler in early 1993 and released in October 1993. A European tour followed, and October 1994 brought the first full studio album, Oyster, which included 'Island', a controversial track about domestic abuse.

- ALBUMS: Glowstars (Butterfly 1993)★★★, Blow (Big Life 1993)★★★, Oyster (Big Life 1994)★★★★.

Novamute

The dance/techno arm of Mute Records' independent empire, launched in January 1992 with Mick Paterson (promotions, subsequently departed), Pepe Jansz (A&R) and Seth Hodder (production). Unlike many other established record companies trawling the backwaters of club music angling for financial reward, Mute had established its own tradition in commercial dance with Depeche Mode and Erasure, or more particularly Renegade Soundwave and Nitzer Ebb. They had also supported the fledgling Rhythm King for several years, before that label branched out on its own in the 90s. The step to the burgeoning house/techno scenes was a natural one, particularly as the parent label had already released Exit 100's 1991 12-inch 'Liquid', the Underground Resistance mini-album X101, and licensed a Black Market compilation set. The original plan for Novamute then, was to license 12-inch white labels and imports and give them a proper release. In the US this was achieved via a distribution deal with independent rap label, Tommy Boy. Three compilations were crucial in establishing Novamute: Tresor 1 (The Techno Sound Of Berlin and Tresor II (Berlin-Detroit: A Techno Alliance) - from the Berlin-based Tresor label, and Probe Mission USA - drawn from Canada's Plus 8 Records. Their roster of artists has grown to include Moby, Richie Hawtin/Plastikman, 3Phase, Juno Reactor, Spirit Feel ('Forbidden Chant'), 3MB ('Jazz Is The Teacher'), Compufonic (aka Hyper Go-Go: 'Make It Move') and Doof ('Disposable Hymns To The Infinite').

- ALBUMS: Various: Version 1.1 (Novamute 1993)★★★.

Novello, Ivor

b. David Ivor Davies, 15 January 1893, Cardiff, Wales, d. 6 March 1951, London, England. A much-loved composer, lyricist, librettist and actor, Novello was born into a musical family, and was encouraged by his mother, a singing teacher. He soon became musically proficient, and quickly established a local reputation. That reputation spread throughout the UK with the publication of a song that encapsulated the feelings of many families torn apart by World War I. Setting to music a poem by the American Lena Guilbert-Ford, Novello's 'Keep The Home Fires Burning' (1915) was a huge popular success. He continued to write songs while serving in the Naval Air Service, but in 1919 turned mainly to acting and appeared in a number of silent films. With a classic profile that gained him matinee idol status amongst the film-going public, his screen career continued into the 30s, although he persisted in his desire to write for the stage. He contributed material to Theodore & Co. (1916) and Arlette (1917), before writing the music for Tabs (1918) and Who's Hooper? (1919). These were followed during the 20s by The Golden Moth, Puppets, Our Nell, and The House That Jack Built (1929), but real success eluded him until 1935 when he teamed up with lyricist Christopher Hassall for the hugely popular Glamorous Night ('Shine Through My Dreams', 'Fold Your Wings'), which was followed by equally lush and romantic productions such as Careless Rapture ('Love Made The Song', 'Why Is There Ever Goodbye?', 1936), Crest Of The Wave ('Rose Of England', 'The Haven Of Your Heart', 1937), The Dancing Years ('I Can Give You The Starlight', 'Primrose', 'Waltz Of My Heart', 'My Dearest Dear', 'My Life Belongs To You', 1939), Arc De Triomphe, ('Man Of My Heart', 'Waking Or Sleeping', 1943), Perchance To Dream ('We'll Gather Lilacs', 'Love Is My Reason', 1945), and King's Rhapsody ('Someday My Heart Will Awake', 'Take Your Girl', 1949). His last show, Gay's The Word (lyrics by Alan Melville), in which Cicely Courtneidge introduced 'It's Bound To Be Right On The Night' and 'Vitality', opened in London in 1951, three weeks before Novello died. In a way, it lampooned the kind of lavish, brilliantly staged productions with which Novello had captured the imagination of London theatre audiences, and successfully challenged the ever-present American invasion. By customarily taking the non-singing romantic lead in several of his own productions, Novello also built an immense following with the female audience, despite the fact that in his private life he was homosexual. Apart from Hassall, who was the lyricist for six of his shows, Novello's other collaborators included P.G. Wodehouse, Clifford Grey, Harry Graham, Ronald Jeans, Howard Talbot, Dion Titheradge (especially for the song 'And Her Mother Came Too'), Adrian Ross, and Douglas Furber. In 1993, the centenary of his birth was marked by several celebratory shows around the UK, including one at the Players Theatre in London, and the tribute album, Marilyn Hill Smith Sings Ivor Novello, which contained 20 of his loveliest melodies.

● FURTHER READING: Perchance To Dream: The World Of Ivor Novello, Richard Rose. Ivor Novello, Sandy Wilson. Ivor Novello: Man Of The Theatre, Peter Noble.

Now Generation

One of the great unsung bands (or session teams) in the history of Jamaican music. Led by Geoffrey Chung on keyboards, the band included Mikey Chung on lead guitar, Val Douglas on bass, Mikey 'Boo' Richards on drums, Robert Lynn on keyboards and Earl 'Wire' Lindo on organ. They worked on sessions for all the top producers in the early 70s, including Derrick Harriott, Herman Chin-Loy, Ken Khouri, Sonia Pottinger, Joe Gibbs and some of the late Duke Reid's reggae recordings. Their music was 'uptown' and soul-influenced (they covered many soul classics), but they proved that they could provide raw roots records too - Glen Brown's better work, or Herman's 'Aquarius Dub' being notable examples. Their tightness and all-round panache distinguished them from other session bands at the time, but they have never, sadly, been quite as celebrated as other less skilful outfits - perhaps due to a lack of show and stage work. They certainly deserve much wider recognition.

● ALBUMS: For The Good Times (Trojan 1974)★★★★.

Nowherefast

This Californian melodic rock quartet was formed in 1981 by Steve Bock (vocals, bass) and Jeff Naideau (guitar, keyboards). Enlisting the services of Bob Frederickson (guitar) and Jimmy Hansen (drums), they soon secured a contract with the WEA/Scotti Brothers label. Incorporating elements of blues and funk into Kansas and Journey-like AOR, they delivered a self-titled debut in 1982. The album was unsuccessful and the band's name unfortunately provided a fair description of the impact they had made.

● ALBUMS: Nowherefast (Scotti Bros 1982)★★.

NRBQ

Formed in Miami, Florida, USA, 1968, the origins of NRBQ (New Rhythm & Blues Quintet) were actually in Louisville, Kentucky a few years earlier. There, Terry Adams (keyboards) and Steve Ferguson (guitar) were members of a group called Merseybeats USA. Moving to Miami, the pair joined with New York musicians Frank Gadler (vocals) and Jody St. Nicholas (b. Joseph (Joey) Spampinato; bass, vocals), then working with a group named the Seven Of Us. Tom Staley (drums) completed the line-up and the group relocated to New Jersey. They were signed by Columbia Records in New York and released their self-titled debut album in 1969. From the start, NRBQ's music was an eclectic mix incorporating rockabilly, avant garde jazz, pop-rock, country, blues and novelty songs - their first album included songs by both early rocker Eddie Cochran and spacy-jazz musician Sun Ra. From the beginning and into the 90s, the group's live show included a large range of covers in addition to their own material - they claim a repertoire of thousands of songs. Humour marked both their recordings and concerts, where they would often grant audience requests to perform unlikely cover songs. Their second album, Boppin' The Blues, was a collaboration with rockabilly legend Carl Perkins. Like their debut, it was praised by critics but the group was dropped from Columbia. In the 70s they recorded for numerous labels, including Kama Sutra and Mercury Records before launching their own Red Rooster label in the late 70s.

Personnel changes during the 70s resulted in the group being trimmed to a quartet: Adams and Spampinato (reverting to his true name) remained from the original band, while guitarist Al Anderson, formerly of Connecticut's Wildweeds, joined in 1971; Tom Ardolino (drums) joined in 1974, since when the group has retained that line-up into the 90s. A goodtime spirit and down-to-earth attitude towards performing marked NRBQ's live show, which could be unpredictable. The band recorded an album backing country singer Skeeter Davis (who later married Spampinato) and also the ex-Lovin' Spoonful singer John Sebastian in concert a number of times. For a while they were managed by a wrestling star, Captain Lou Albano, with whom they recorded a single. Spampinato appeared as a member of the houseband in the Chuck Berry concert film Hail! Hail! Rock 'N' Roll and Adams recorded with jazz artist Carla Bley. Anderson has released two solo albums. In 1989 NRBQ signed to Virgin Records and released Wild Weekend, their first album to chart since the 1969 debut.

● ALBUMS: NRBQ (Columbia 1969)★★★, with Carl Perkins Boppin' The Blues (Columbia 1970)★★★, Scraps (Kama Sutra 1972)★★, Workshop (Kama Sutra 1973)★★, All Hopped Up (Red Rooster 1977)★★★, At Yankee Stadium (Red Rooster 1978)★★★★, Kick Me Hard (Red Rooster 1979)★★★, Tiddlywinks (Red Rooster 1980)★★★, Tapdancin' Bats (Red Rooster 1983)★★, Grooves In Orbit (Red Rooster 1983)★★, with Skeeter Davis She Sings, They Play (1985)★★, God Bless Us All (Rounder 1988)★★, Diggin' Uncle Q (1988)★★, Wild Weekend (Virgin 1989)★★, Honest Dollar (Ryko 1992), Message For The Mess Age Forward (Rhino 1994)★★★, You're Nice People You Are (Rounder 1997)★★★, Tokyo (Rounder 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Peek-a-Boo: The Best Of NRBQ (Rhino 1990)★★★★, Stay With Me: The Best Of (Columbia 1993)★★★.

NSO Force

The NSO Force are a UK-based hip-hop crew featuring the vocal skills of Melodee and Ola the Soul Controla. While Melodee was London-born and bred, Ola came from Nigeria via Baltimore and Brooklyn. This influenced the band's international flavour, and their acknowledged influences include Fela Kuti And His African Beats, alongside Eric B And Rakim. The crew were one of the few bands to endure into the 90s from the early 80s' old-school hip-hop movement that emerged in Ladbroke Grove, London. NSO Force have been articulating their reality lyrics since 1984 and built a solid reputation at clubs and venues across London. In 1989 the NSO Force released their debut, 'Give It Up', for Vinyl Solution, which proved especially popular in dance venues. They followed the release through the Whole World Recording group in 1990, echoing Peter Tosh with '400 Years'. The song succeeded in gaining the band a hardcore following, while they were concurrently admired as prominent performers on the underground scene. In 1993 the band crossed over to the mainstream with their third release, 'Chains'/'In Too Deep'. The song featured on mainstream radio and held the number 1 position on the hip-hop chart for three weeks. The group followed the hit in 1995 with their fourth release, 'The Capital (Land Of The Lost)', a heavier track that led to their eventual signing with China Records. The NSO Force were not overtly militant, although they maintained that they could not be bought, divided or ruled - hence the band's initials, inspired by the Malcolm X stance: No Sell Out. In 1998 the band were asked to perform on Supercharger's 'Tick Like A Bomb', which featured the classic line, 'Like a time bomb tickin' -Yo - the plot thickens - A tale of two cities - but it ain't Charles Dickens'. The NSO Force also shared a French-only release with the Cash Crew, contributing a reference to their west London roots, 'Notting Ill'. Their association with China led to the release of 'Money', a self-production that introduced the vocals of an up-and-coming Malaysian soul vocalist, Blue, who performed a variation on 'Love Come Down', while the NSO Force demonstrated their hip-hop skills to full effect.

● ALBUMS: Friends In Low Place (Indochina 1998)★★★.

Nu Colours

Widely regarded as one of the UK's premier R&B vocal groups, Nu Colours are led by Lawrence Johnson and were the first act signed to Polydor Records' rap/soul division Wild Card. They made a minor impact in 1992 with two singles, 'Tears' and 'Power', both gaining positions in the lower regions of the UK's Top 75. After a third single, 'What In The World', they gained their biggest success with a 1993 re-release of 'Power', which reached number 40. However, the attendant album was, by the group's own admission, rather disjointed and unconvincing, although their appearance as backing singers on M People's Elegant Slumming confirmed their technical abilities. Having failed to make the transition to chart status that Wild Card anticipated, the group spent much of 1994 and 1995 working with a variety of different producers and collaborators in order to mould their obvious talents into a more cohesive direction. Original member Priscilla Mae-Jones was reunited with the band too, in an effort to consolidate the vocal power of lead singer Fazay Simpson. Working with producers such as Simon Law, Ian Green, Joel Kipnes and Dinky Bingham, the resulting suite of songs became the basis for the group's second album release in 1996.

● ALBUMS: Unlimited (Wild Card/Polydor 1993)★★, Nu Colours (Wild Card/Polydor 1996)★★★.

Nu Groove Records

Revered New York-based record label owned by Frank and Judy Russell but established in the public's mind and ears by house producers and twins Rheji and Ronnie Burrell, who had formerly recorded for Virgin subsidiary Ten as Burrell. It was originally created for them as 'an alternative outlet ... because we had a lot of material that we were doing and we couldn't put it all out on Virgin', but went on to become their priority operation. The first record on the label was Tech Trax Inc's 'Feel The Luv' in August 1988, created by Rhji. Further early material arrived from Ronnie's Bas Noir project and Rheji's 'You Can't Run From My Love'. The original plan was to release a record by each brother every two weeks, and they have not fallen far short of that blistering schedule. Among their more successful vinyl expeditions have been 1989's 'It's Power House Brooklyn Style' - created by Powerhouse, aka Masters At Work, 1990's 'The Poem' and 'Rydims' (Bobby Konders) and Transphonic's 'Tune In Light Up' and 'Bug Out'. Most featured the keyboard talents of Peter Daou (formerly, and incredibly, a member of the Beirut Jazz Trio, where he grew up). Together with wife Vanessa he released 'Law Of Chants' and 'Part Two' (as Vandal). Rheji was also behind the New York House N Authority album (SBK 1990), a softer, more reflective affair. Another significant record from this time was 'Major Problem', an anti-drugs parody from Lennie Dee and Ralphie, which utilized samples from Yello and others. 1991 brought the Metro EP, a weighty, bass-driven house cut from Rheji, and Lost Entity's 'Bring That Back On'/'The Verge', which boasted the label's familiar deep soul feel. Other examples were Howie How and Little Carlos's 'Cause I Need You' (as the Divine Masters), the Vision's 'Laidback And Groovy', created by Eddie 'Satin' Maduro, and Transphonic ('Club Tools (Professional Use Only)'). 1992 brought Ize 2's 'House Trix' (a Isaac Santiago production). This was also the label that housed Joey Negro's Mr Maize scam, when his club hit 'Together' was licensed to the US. When the single topped the dance charts journalists tried to hunt down the entirely fictional Mr Maize. Other notable appearances included Victor Simonelli (under the guise of Groove Committee) with 'Dirty Games', and the Houz Negroz 'How Do You Love A Black Woman', produced once more by the Burrell brothers. Tracing the Nu Groove discography remains an arduous but rewarding task for fans of high-class house music.

● COMPILATIONS: Nu Groove - Here Comes That Sound Again (Passion 1998)★★★★.

Nua, Onipa

b. Amada Jebre, *c.*1945, Ghana. 'Hausa' singer Nua learned to play the kalimba, or Ghanaian thumb piano, as a child, after becoming blind at the age of two. His travels across the African continent brought him his stage name, translating as 'The People's Brother', while in Kumasi. He eventually settled in Accra in the mid-60s. There he worked as a street musician, occasionally appearing at social functions, where his three-octave vocal range proved adaptable to many tempos and styles. In 1980 he was discovered by promoter Faisal Helwani, who subsequently placed his career on a professional footing. Nua's first European performance in Paris, France, came in 1990, though his only releases so far have been on cassette, and exclusively for the domestic market.

Nubiles

The Nubiles, from Oxford, Oxfordshire, England, comprise Tara Milton (vocals, bass, ex-Five Thirty), Penny Schueller (guitar, keyboards), Georgio Curcetti (guitar) and Dan Goddard (drums). They moved to London in 1995 to further their career, and earned early press both for Milton's Five Thirty connections and their unusual song arrangements, prompting comparisons to the Fall, Pixies, Fugazi and Jimi Hendrix. Their debut single, 'Layabout', a compressed amalgamation of these influences released on Lime Street Records in February 1995, found critical favour and a Top 10 UK indie chart placing.

● ALBUMS: Mindbender (Lime Street 1998)★★.

Nuclear Assault

Formed in New York, USA, in 1985, this extreme and influential group consisted of John Conelly (guitar, vocals), Anthony Bramante (guitar), Dan Lilker (bass) and Glenn Evans (drums). Lilker formed Nuclear Assault while still a member of Anthrax, making them one of the earliest thrash metal outfits. The sound of Nuclear Assault proved much more aggressive, however, merging the styles of hardcore and thrash with socially aware lyrics. Becoming popular through constant touring and a refusal to compromise in their recorded work, their audience grew steadily throughout the 80s. Lilker, however, left the band in 1993 to concentrate on a new project, Brutal Truth. Bramante was expelled around the same time, with the pair being replaced by Scott Metaxas and Dave DiPietro, respectively, both formerly of Prophet. The transitional Something Wicked failed to provide any conclusive proof of artistic rejuvenation.

● ALBUMS: Game Over (Music For Nations 1986)★★★, The Plague (Music For Nations 1987)★★★, Survive (Music For Nations 1988)★★★, Handle With Care (Music For Nations 1989)★★★, Out Of Order (Music For Nations 1991)★★, Live At Hammersmith (Music For Nations 1993)★★, Something Wicked (Music For Nations 1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Assault & Battery (Receiver 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Radiation Sickness (1988), Handle With Care (Strand 1996).

Nuclear Valdez

This unconventional AOR act was based in Miami, Florida, but drew from the members' ethnic origins for both musical and lyrical inspiration. Vocalist/guitarist Froilan Sosa's family originated in the Dominican Republic, while Jorge Barcala (lead guitar), Juan Diaz (bass) and Robert Slade LeMont (drums) are all of Cuban descent. The band incorporated the Latin influences in their backgrounds to give an unusual and unique flavour to their sound. Lyrically, the band were not content with the AOR conventions of love and heartache, but explored themes closer to their collective heart, such as the Castro regime and the homesickness of Cuban exiles, while their choice of band name, with its clever ecological overtones, served to confirm their more cerebral approach. I Am I established their characteristic rhythmic sound with classy guitarwork from Barcala and passionate, smoky vocals from Sosa, and also produced a US hit in 'Summer'. Dream Another Dream confirmed their abilities with further strong material; nevertheless, Nuclear Valdez remain a cult act.

● ALBUMS: I Am I (Epic 1990)★★★★, Dream Another Dream (Epic 1992)★★★.

Nucleus

The doyen of British jazz-rock groups, Nucleus was formed in 1969 by trumpeter Ian Carr. He was joined by Chris Spedding (guitar, ex-Battered Ornaments), John Marshall (drums) and Karl Jenkins (keyboards). The quartet was signed to the distinctive progressive outlet, Vertigo, and their debut, Elastic Rock, is arguably their exemplary work. The same line-up completed We'll Talk About It Later, but Spedding's subsequent departure heralded a bewildering succession of changes which undermined the group's potential. Carr nonetheless remained its driving force, a factor reinforced when Solar Plexus, a collection the trumpeter had intended as a solo release, became the unit's third album. In 1972 both Jenkins and Marshall left the group to join fellow fusion act, Soft Machine, and Nucleus became an inadvertent nursery for this 'rival' ensemble. Later members Roy Babbington and Alan Holdsworth also defected, although Carr was able to maintain an individuality despite such damaging interruptions. Subsequent albums, however, lacked the innovatory purpose of those first releases and Nucleus was dissolved during the early 80s. Nucleus took the jazz/rock genre further into jazz territory with skill, melody and a tremendous standard of musicianship. Their first three albums are vital in any comprehensive rock or jazz collection.

● ALBUMS: Elastic Rock (Vertigo 1970)★★★★, We'll Talk About It later (Vertigo 1970)★★★, Solar Plexus (Vertigo 1971)★★★★, Belladonna (Vertigo 1972)★★★, Labyrinth (Vertigo 1973)★★★, Roots (Vertigo 1973)★★★, Under The Sun (Vertigo 1974)★★★, Snake Hips Etcetera (Vertigo 1975)★★★, Direct Hits (Vertigo 1976)★★★, In Flagrante Delicto (1978)★★★, Out Of The Long Dark (1979)★★, Awakening (1980)★★, Live At The Theaterhaus (1985)★★★.

Nudeswirl

This band from New Jersey, New York, USA, was formed by guitarist/vocalist Shane M. Greene and guitarist Diz Cortright with drummer Woody Newland and bassist Christopher Worgo, specializing in an indie guitar-driven, heavy-rock style that prompted comparisons with acts as diverse as Soundgarden, Nirvana, the Pixies and Trouble. This was rather different to Greene and Cortright's occasional They Might Be Giants tribute band, known as They Might Be Vaginas, which played locally with Greene on vocals and accordion and Cortright on bass. Nudeswirl signed to Megaforce on the strength of chaotic live shows around the underground club circuit. Nudeswirl was a varied debut, with the band driving their weighty sound in a multitude of directions, with their use of Gretsch guitars lending the delivery a warm, earthy feel. However, the nuances of the album were somewhat lost in the live arena as the band toured Europe with Mindfunk and the USA with Flotsam And Jetsam, in addition to their own dates, producing some visually lifeless performances. The band's future seemed in doubt following the departure of Greene in mid-1994.

● ALBUMS: Nudeswirl (Megaforce 1993)★★★.

Nudie

b. Nudie Cohen, 1902, Kiev, Russia, d. May 1984. The surname has also been given as Cohn but he is usually referred to as just 'Nudie'. His father was a bootmaker in the Russian army and as a boy he began to learn the trade of a tailor. Around 1911, because of anti-Jewish purges in Russia, he and an elder brother emigrated to the USA, where they initially settled in Brooklyn. Around 1920, he began travelling around the USA, struggling to make a living. He had a brief and financially unrewarding career as a flyweight boxer, appeared as a Hollywood film extra and did tailoring work in the costume department of Warner Brothers. In New York, he even worked on costumes for striptease acts. In the early 40s, in Los Angeles, he became friendly with country singer Tex Williams, and persuaded Williams that he could make stage costumes for him and his band that would attract attention. Williams was delighted with the result, ordered further costumes and widely advertised their designer. The popularity of his suits quickly spread and soon other West Coast artists, especially singing cowboys such as Gene Autry, Roy Rogers and Rex Allen were wearing brightly coloured, rhinestone-studded Nudie creations. Nudie designed a 'free' suit, whose pattern included wagon wheels and cacti, for Porter Wagoner, then a struggling young hopeful. It was a very shrewd investment on Nudie's part. Wagoner, who continued to wear Nudie suits on the Grand Ole Opry for a great many years, became Nudie's best and longest-running advert. The attraction soon passed on to other country singers and during the 40s and 50s, most of Nashville's major stars were dressed by Nudie. His first cowboy designs were mainly elaborately decorated western wear, but for the country stars, he designed the clothes for the individual, as he had done with the wagon wheels for Wagoner. Hawkshaw Hawkins' jacket had a large hawk on the back, Ferlin Husky had husky dogs and Jimmy C. Newman had alligators (after his hit 'Alligator Man'). Hank Williams regularly wore Nudie-designed drape suits and was actually buried in one. Nudie also designed the stage costumes of Bill Anderson and his band, and Hank Snow, another long-time flamboyant dresser, regularly wore his rhinestone-studded creations. It was Nudie who created the $10,000 gold lamé tuxedo worn by Elvis Presley and later the flashy suits worn by the Flying Burrito Brothers, which had marijuana leaves embroidered on them, and stage costumes for the Rolling Stones. However, not all of his creations were so brightly coloured, since it was Nudie who was responsible for Johnny Cash's Man in Black image. Nudie inevitably became a wealthy man and his own suits usually attracted considerable interest, as did his penchant for jewellery, which often saw him wearing $25,000 worth of gold (he was once described as 'a caricature of an American cowboy drawn by an enraged Russian cartoonist'). He was also noted for his famous white Pontiac convertible. The hood had giant Texas longhorn horn ornaments, while the interior contained patterned hand tool leather, with a silver saddle between the rear seats. There were 14 guns mounted in varying positions, which included Colt revolvers that worked as arm rests and door handles, gear lever and direction indicators and three rifles on the rear boot lid. The interior was decorated with hundreds of silver dollars, the front bumper had chrome quarter horses and the tape player could blast out a recording of a cattle stampede, while the horn played Dale Evans singing 'Happy Trails'. It seems that when they were going out together, Nudie's wife, not surprisingly, used to suggest that they took her car. Naturally, the car was at one point stolen, but the police appear to have had little trouble finding it again. Later there were several other Nudie-designed cars, which over the years have had several owners, including Webb Pierce and Hank Williams Jnr. Nudie died from natural causes in May 1984 but his wife continued to operate their store. Nudie, who was once quoted as saying, 'If Tom Mix got out of his grave and saw my clothes, he'd get back in again', was always proud of his achievements but never forgot the early days of struggle. A reminder was the photograph sent to him by famous American strip artist Lili St. Cyr, and autographed with: 'If I ever wear clothes, they'll be yours', which he proudly displayed in his store. For many years, clothes bearing a label that said 'Nudie's Rodeo Tailors, North Hollywood, California', were very much a status symbol to country artists. Nudie also played mandolin and apparently recorded an album featuring himself on that instrument, but recording data is seemingly not readily available. (In 1974, Manual Cuevas, who had started to work for Nudie in the late 50s, formed his own Manual's Western Wear in North Hollywood, from which he carried on the traditions of dressing stars, including Dolly Parton, Marty Stuart and Dwight Yoakam, in styles he had learned while with Nudie.)

Nueva Manteca

Led by pianist Jan Laurenz Hartong (b. *c.*1941, The Netherlands), eight-piece band Nueva Manteca are a Dutch-based Latin jazz outfit who produce a highly authentic distillation of Latin music and also embraces traditions such as Arabic, classical, Dutch Antillean and salsa. As Hartong told the press in 1996, 'It's the same situation as hearing a Korean violinist playing a Beethoven concerto. It's already accepted in the jazz world. In the whole world music development, a lot of people are digging into all kinds of cultures.' Hartong began playing dixieland piano at the age of 12, before progressing to bebop by 15, at which time he began to work professionally. He played alongside Jan Hammer and Joachim Kühn in a 1966 international jazz festival judged by Cannonball and Nat Adderley where he won a medal. A fan of Latin music since his childhood, Hartong formed a 10-piece salsa band in Rotterdam in 1983. He also visited the music's home in Cuba in 1984 and 1987, which led to him switching to a Latin jazz style and changing his group's name from Manteca to Neuva Manteca. For the first three years of the group's existence he was joined by highly respected New York timbales player Nicky Marrero. The group won its live reputation playing festivals throughout Europe, also performing alongside guest artists including Giovanni Hidalgo, Juanito Torres, Orestes Vilato, Armando Peraza and Bobby Sanabria as part of the state-sponsored Nueva Manteca Meets The Legends series. The group also toured the USA in 1995, preparing for the release of Let's Face The Music And Dance. Dedicated to Vernon Boggs, the late New York professor who championed salsa in Scandinavia, it featured Latin-flavoured treatments of material by Duke Ellington ('Caravan'), Miles Davis ('All Blues') and an Irving Berlin medley. Previous albums included Porgy & Bess, a revision of the George Gershwin opera set to a Latin tempo.

● ALBUMS: Porgy & Bess (Lucho 1993)★★★, Let's Face The Music And Dance (Blue Note 1996)★★★★.

Nugent, Ted

b. 13 December 1949, Detroit, Michigan, USA. Inspired by 50s rock 'n' roll, Nugent taught himself the rudiments of guitar playing at the age of eight. As a teenager he played in the Royal Highboys and Lourds, but this formative period ended in 1964 upon his family's move to Chicago. Here, Nugent assembled the Amboy Dukes, which evolved from garage band status into a popular hard-rock attraction. He led the group throughout its various permutations, assuming increasing control as original members dropped out of the line-up. In 1974 a revitalized unit - dubbed Ted Nugent And The Amboy Dukes - completed the first of two albums for Frank Zappa's DiscReet label, but in 1976 the guitarist embarked on a fully fledged solo career. Derek St. Holmes (guitar), Rob Grange (bass) and Cliff Davies (drums) joined him for Ted Nugent and Free For All, both of which maintained the high-energy rock of previous incarnations. However, it was as a live attraction that Nugent made his mark - he often claimed to have played more gigs per annum than any other artist or group. Ear-piercing guitarwork and vocals - 'If it's too loud you're too old' ran one tour motto - were accompanied by a cultivated 'wild man' image, where the artist appeared in loin-cloth and headband, brandishing the bow and arrow with which he claimed to hunt for food. Trapeze stunts, genuine guitar wizardry and a scarcely self-deprecating image ('If there had been blind people at the show they would have walked away seeing') all added to the formidable Nugent persona. The aggression of a Nugent concert was captured on the platinum-selling Double Live Gonzo, which featured many of his best-loved stage numbers, including 'Cat Scratch Fever', 'Motor City Madness' and the enduring 'Baby Please Don't Go'. Charlie Huhn (guitar) and John Sauter (bass) replaced St. Holmes and Grange for Weekend Warriors, and the same line-up remained intact for State Of Shock and Scream Dream. In 1981 Nugent undertook a worldwide tour fronting a new backing group, previously known as the D.C. Hawks, comprising Mike Gardner (bass), Mark Gerhardt (drums) and three guitarists - Kurt, Rick and Verne Wagoner. The following year Nugent left Epic for Atlantic Records, and in the process established a new unit that included erstwhile sidemen Derek St. Holmes (vocals) and Carmine Appice (drums, ex-Vanilla Fudge). Despite such changes, Nugent was either unwilling, or unable, to alter the formula that had served him so well in the 70s. Successive solo releases offered little innovation and the artist drew greater publicity for appearances on talk shows and celebrity events. In 1989 Nugent teamed up with Tommy Shaw (vocals, guitar, ex-Styx), Jack Blades (bass, ex-Night Ranger) and Michael Cartellone (drums) to form the successful 'supergroup', Damn Yankees. After the Damn Yankees were put on hold in 1994, Nugent resumed his solo career for his first studio album in seven years. Reunited with Derek St. Holmes, Spirit Of The Wild also saw Nugent return to his usual lyrical posturing, including the pro-firearms 'I Shoot Back' and 'Kiss My Ass', a hate list featuring Courtney Love (of Hole) and the cartoon characters Beavis and Butthead among its targets.

- ALBUMS: Ted Nugent (Epic 1975)★★★, Free For All (Epic 1976)★★★, Cat Scratch Fever (Epic 1977)★★★★, Double Live Gonzo (Epic 1978)★★★, Weekend Warriors (Epic 1978)★★★, State Of Shock (Epic 1979)★★★, Scream Dream (Epic 1980)★★★, Intensities In Ten Cities (Epic 1981)★★★, Nugent (Atlantic 1982)★★, Penetrator (Atlantic 1984)★★, Little Miss Dangerous (Atlantic 1986)★★, If You Can't Lick 'Em ... Lick 'Em (Atlantic 1988)★★, Spirit Of The Wild (Atlantic 1995)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Great Gonzos: The Best Of Ted Nugent (Epic 1981)★★★★, Anthology: Ted Nugent (Raw Power 1986)★★★.
- VIDEOS: Whiplash Bash (Hendring 1990).
- FURTHER READING: The Legendary Ted Nugent, Robert Holland.

Nugg Original Artyfacts From The First Psychedelic Era - Various Artists

A compilation that actually defined a genre, this sent out musical ripples that influenced innumerable bands, from the Damned to R.E.M. Compiler Lenny Kaye even gave the genre a name: punk. Although the music was later better known as 'garage', Kaye — himself about to pioneer 70s punk as Patti Smith's guitarist — was onto something when he asserted that America's aggressive teen bands of the mid-60s were the original punks. To prove that this was not an isolated, parochial movement, Kaye included not only Top 40 hits such as the Castaways' 'Liar, Liar' and the Count Five's 'Psychotic Reaction', but also buried treasures like the Remains' classic 'Don't Look Back' and the Chocolate Watch Band's 'Let's Talk About Girls'.

- Tracks: I Had Too Much To Dream (Last Night); Dirty Water; Night Time; Lies; Respect; A Public Execution; No Time Like The Right Time; Oh Yeah; Pushin' Too Hard; Moulty; Don't Look Back; Invitation To Cry; Liar, Liar; You're Gonna Miss Me; Psychotic Reaction; Hey Joe; Just Like Romeo And Juliet; Sugar And Spice; Baby Please Don't Go; Tobacco Road; Let's Talk About Girls; Sit Down I Think I Love You; Run Run Run; My World Fell Down; Open My Eyes; Farmer John; It's-A-Happening.
- First released: 1972
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Null, Cecil

b. 26 April 1927, East War, McDowell County, West Virginia, USA. He played guitar and wrote songs as a boy but actually began his entertaining career in the US Navy in World War II. After discharge, he played as a member of the Pioneer Pals on WOPI Bristol, Tennessee, gave guitar tuition and turned his attention to the autoharp. He moved to WCYB Bristol in 1948, as a member of Cousin Zeke's Band, with whom he recorded. He began to teach autoharp, so effectively that the manufacturers contracted him to work as a consultant and demonstrate the instrument at shows. He also published an instruction book, Pickin' Style Auto-Harp. Between 1950 and 1958, he was a member of the Tennessee Serenaders and from 1952, he made recordings. In 1958, he and Semie Moseley created an electrified autoharp that gained Null considerable television exposure as a folk-country crossover. In 1964, he began appearing as a duo with his wife Annette (b. 30 September 1939), who sang, yodelled, played autoharp and also guitar. They subsequently made recordings for Briar, Epic and a gospel instrumental album for Decca Records. They were very popular and worked on various major television shows including Bobby Lord TV Show* (1965), Ralph Emery (1966-68) and from 1967, they appeared regularly on the Grand Ole Opry. They never achieved a chart hit, perhaps because, while the country fans liked their music, they were possibly unsure whether they were exactly country or folk. Null wrote numerous songs but his best-known is 'I Forgot More Than You'll Ever Know' (a US country number 1 and pop number 18 for the Davis Sisters in 1953 and since recorded by countless artists, including Jeanne Pruett who charted it again in 1972). In 1964, he penned 'Mother Maybelle', a tribute to his autoharp inspiration, Maybelle Carter.

- ALBUMS: New Sounds In Folk Music (Briar 1964)★★★, Folk Instrumentals (Jed 1967)★★★, Instrumental Country Hymns (Decca 1968)★★.

Numan, Gary

b. Gary Anthony James Webb, 8 March 1958, Hammersmith, London, England. Originally appearing under the group name Tubeway Army, Numan enjoyed enormous success in the UK at the close of the 70s. His Kraftwerk/David Bowie-influenced electronic music saw Tubeway Army top the UK charts in May 1979 with 'Are Friends Electric?' By September 1979 Numan abandoned the group pseudonym for the follow-up single 'Cars' which also topped the UK charts and reached the US Top 10. At his peak, Numan was one of the bestselling artists in Britain and his albums The Pleasure Principle and Telekon both entered the charts at number 1. His science fiction-orientated lyrics and synthesizer-based rhythms brought further Top 10 successes with 'We Are Glass', 'I Die: You Die', 'She's Got Claws' and 'We Take Mystery (To Bed)'. As the decade progressed his record sales steadily declined and his glum-robotic persona was replaced by that debonair man-about-town who also enjoyed aviation. In March 1982 he attempted to fly around the world in his light aircraft and was arrested in India on suspicion of spying. The charge was later dropped. While his reputation among music critics atrophied amid accusations of anachronism, his fan base remained solid and his recordings continue to reach the lower placings in the UK charts. His career took an upturn in 1996 following the use of 'Cars' in a television advertisement. Numan promoted the greatest hits album with gusto. Nothing had changed except his hair, which had become much thicker and darker.

● ALBUMS: as Tubeway Army Tubeway Army (Beggars Banquet 1979)★★, as Tubeway Army Replicas (Beggars Banquet 1979)★★, The Pleasure Principle (Beggars Banquet 1979)★★★, Telekon (Beggars Banquet 1980)★★★, Living Ornmanments 1979-80 (Beggars Banquet 1981)★★, Dance (Beggars Banquet 1981)★★, I Assassin (Beggars Banquet 1982)★★, Warriors (Beggars Banquet 1983)★★, The Plan (Beggars Banquet 1984)★★, Berserker (Numa 1984)★★, White Noise - Live (Numa 1985)★★, The Fury (Numa 1985)★★, Strange Charm (Numa 1986)★★, Exhibition (Beggars Banquet 1987)★★, Metal Rhythm (Illegal 1988)★★, The Skin Mechanic (IRS 1989)★★, Outland (IRS 1991)★★, Machine And Soul (Numa 1992)★★, Dream Corrosion (Numa 1994)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: New Man Numan - The Best Of Gary Numan (TV 1982)★★★, Document Series Presents (Document 1992)★★, The Best Of... (Beggars Banquet 1993)★★★★, The Premier Hits (Polygram 1996)★★★★, The Best Of ... (Emporio 1997)★★★, Archive (Rialto 1997)★★, tribute album Random various artists (Beggars Banquet 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Dream Corrosion (Numa 1994).

● FURTHER READING: Gary Numan By Computer, Fred and Judy Vermorel. Gary Numan: The Authorized Biography, Ray Coleman, Praying To The Aliens, Gary Numan with Steve Malins.

Number One Cup

Comprising Michael Lenzi (guitar), Pat O'Connel (drums) and Seth Cohen (guitar, vocals), indie band Number One Cup formed in Chicago, Illinois, USA, in 1993. Though unable to find a permanent bass player, the group have prospered with their blend of college pop/rock, which has brought several comparisons with Pavement. Much of the attraction lay in Cohen's lyrics and the group's relaxed, irreverent presentation of them. In common with other 'lo-fi' acts such as Pavement and Sebadoh, Number One Cup were not driven by ambition as much as the desire to please themselves musically. As Cohen told Raw magazine in 1996: 'We haven't laid down any plans to become gigantic. Not that we're morally opposed to it.' The group recorded its debut album, Possum Trot Plan, in 1995. Taken from it, 'Divebomb' secured extensive mainstream and alternative radio play. Following the bizarrely titled EP 'Kim Chee Is Cabbage', the band released their follow-up album, which was felt by many critics to be too derivative to qualify as a success.

● ALBUMS: Possum Trot Plan (1995)★★★, Wrecked By Lions (Blue Rose 1997)★★.

Nunez, Alcide 'Yellow'

b. 17 March 1884, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 2 September 1934. One of his home-town's most noted musicians, Nunez's career was dogged by bad luck and poor timing. After playing clarinet with several famous marching and brass bands, including Papa Laine's, Nunez visited Chicago, where he teamed up with Nick La Rocca and others to form a band. He fell out with La Rocca, however, and quit to work in vaudeville with a music and comedy act. Meanwhile, La Rocca and the band, calling themselves the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, went on to international fame and fortune. After working with obscure bands in Chicago, Nunez returned to New Orleans in 1927 and remained there for the rest of his life. Although an enormously skilled musician, Nunez displayed a penchant for the shrill, jokey, barnyard effects popular with audiences in the early years of this century. As a result, his few records have received attention more for their curiosity value than for their musical content.

Nunn, Gary P.

b. Austin, Texas, USA. A singer-songwriter and guitarist who lived and worked around Austin. Nunn and some other musicians started working with the 70s progressive musician Jerry Jeff Walker, and they eventually coalesced in the progressive country group, the Lost Gonzo Band. The high spot of Viva Terlingua! in 1973 was when Walker generously allowed Nunn to take the lead vocals on his song about life on the road, 'London Homesick Blues'. It was also recorded by David Allan Coe and became the theme song for the long-running television series Austin City Limits. The Lost Gonzo Band worked on four more albums with Jerry Jeff Walker and also recorded under their own name. Nunn himself was married to singer-songwriter Karen Brooks, and their songs 'Couldn't Do Nothin' Right' (Karen) and 'Kara Lee' (Gary) comment on their relationship. Willie Nelson recorded his song 'The Last Thing I Needed The First Thing This Morning'. He works with the Sons Of The Bunkhouse Band and he was reunited with Walker as part of the Gonzo Compadres on Viva Luckenbach!, which included his lead vocal on 'What I Like About Texas'.

● ALBUMS: Nobody But Me (Turnrow 1980)★★★, Home With The Armadillo (Guacamole 1985)★★★, Border States (Dixie Frog 1988)★★★, For Old Times Sake (AO 1989)★★★, Under My Hat (Campfire 1997)★★★.

Nunn, Trevor

b. 14 January 1940, Ipswich, Suffolk, England. Nunn was educated at Downing College, Cambridge, and in 1962 won an ABC Director's Scholarship to the Belgrade Theatre in Coventry where he produced a musical version of Around The World In 80 Days. In 1964 he joined the Royal Shakespeare Company, was made an associate director in 1965, and became the company's youngest-ever artistic director in 1968. He was responsible for the running of the RSC until he retired from the post in 1986. As well as his numerous productions for the RSC, he co-directed Nicholas Nickleby (winner of five Tony Awards), Peter Pan, and Les Misérables, which became one of the most-performed musicals in the world. Outside of the RSC he has directed the Tony Award-winning Cats, along with other musicals including Starlight Express, Chess, and The Baker's Wife, and operas such as Cosi Fan Tutte and Peter Grimes. His 'magnificent' 1986 Glyndebourne Festival Opera production of Porgy And Bess, which later transferred to the London Royal Opera House, became the first television version of George Gershwin's masterpiece in 1993. He has also worked in television and directed several films including Hedda and Lady Jane. Nunn is credited, along with Andrew Lloyd Webber and the late poet T.S. Eliot, with the writing of 'Memory', the hit song from Cats which has been recorded by hundreds of artists. In 1992 he directed the RSC's highly acclaimed production of Pam Gems' musical play The Blue Angel, and a year later became the ninth recipient of the 'Mr. Abbott Award' given by the US Stage Directors and Choreographers Foundation. In the early 90s he was back with Lloyd Webber again, staging the London, Los Angeles and Broadway productions of Sunset Boulevard. It was also reported that Nunn had decided to take a break from the theatre, and had signed a two-year deal to produce films for the New Line Cinema studio. However, in 1995, he did co-direct and supervise a one-night only all-star 10th anniversary concert performance of Les Misérables at London's Royal Albert Hall. A year later the movie Twelfth Night, which he scripted and directed, was released. In September 1997, Nunn took over from Richard Eyre as the artistic director of the Royal National Theatre.

Nuns

Formed in San Francisco, California, USA, in 1977, the Nuns were one of the city's leading punk/new wave attractions, forerunning the rock and outrage antics of the Dead Kennedys. Their insubstantial progress was further limited by continual line-up problems, but such frustrations coalesced to astonishing effect in their 'Savage'/'Suicide Child' single. Their work appeared on several compilations, including Rodney On The Roq and Experiments In Destiny, but having split up in 1979, they re-formed the following year to complete The Nuns, only to disband once more. Ritchie Detrick (vocals), Jeff Olener (vocals), Alejandro Escovado (guitar), Jennifer Miro (keyboards), Mike Varney (bass) and Jeff Raphael (drums) were among those passing through the Nuns' ranks, of whom Escavado subsequently joined Rank And File. The Nuns re-formed again in 1986 to record a completely different record, the icy, dance-fixated Rumania.

● ALBUMS: The Nuns (Posh Boy 1980)★★★, Rumania (PVC 1986)★★★.

Nunsense

Originally presented at the Duplex nightspot in Greenwich Village in 1984, this spoof on the Catholic sisterhood - 'The Habit Forming Musical Comedy' - transferred to the Off Broadway Cherry Lane Theatre on 12 December 1985. It was the brainchild of Dan Goggin, who wrote the book (from an original libretto by Steve Hayes), music, and lyrics, and also staged it. The story concerns the efforts of the convent's five surviving nuns to raise money so that they can bury the last few of their 52 companions who died of botulism after having eaten a meal of vichyssoise prepared by the convent chef, Sister Julia. The quintet are still around because they went out to bingo that night. Sister Julia is preparing a cook book containing some of her best recipes (including barbecued spare-ribs), while the rest of the nuns decide to put on a musical so as to raise enough money to get rid of the bodies, thereby leaving more space in the deep-freeze. The energetic Mother Superior was played by comedienne Marilyn Farina, and the rest of a highly talented cast included Suzi Winston, Christine Anderson, Semina De Laurentis, and Vicki Belmonte. Among the lively and extremely relevant songs were 'Nunsense Is Habit-Forming', 'So You Want To Be A Nun', 'Tackle That Temptation', 'Growing Up A Catholic', 'I Want To Be A Star', 'Just A Coupl'a Sisters', 'I Could've Gone To Nashville', and 'Holier Than Thou'. The show ran and ran, and, in 1992, when it entered its eighth 'everlasting' year, was advertising itself as 'The longest-running show in Off-Broadway history'. But what about The Fantasticks, which opened in 1960? An explanatory rider was attached which stated: 'The Fantasticks is more than a show, it is an institution!'. In the early 90s, Nunsense II: The Second Coming was out of town on its way to New York, with the Mother Superior demanding more audience participation on numbers such 'Oh Dear, What Can The Matter Be', in which Franciscan nuns get locked in the lavatory. Meanwhile, the off-Broadway production of Nunsense closed in October 1994, ending a phenomenal run of 3,672 performances. It had also toured extensively. London audiences first saw a version in 1987, and sampled the show again in 1996. In that same year, the Chanhassen Theatre, Minneapolis, was Goggin's chosen launching pad for Sister Amnesia's Country And Western Nunsense Jamboree, the third lively and engaging chapter in the Nunsense saga. An original member of the convent from way back, Sister Amnesia does not remember her real name ever since a crucifix fell on her head.

Nussbaum, Adam

b. 29 November 1955, New York, USA. Nussbaum had initially learnt to play the piano and alto saxophone, then switched to studying drums with Charlie Persip and majoring in music at the Davis Centre, City College of New York. After freelancing in New York he played through the late 70s and 80s with the bands of John Scofield, Dave Liebman, Stan Getz, Gil Evans, Randy Brecker, George Gruntz and Gary Burton. Nussbaum has attained a wide knowledge of the history of jazz drumming. He has a bright, swinging style which he has been able to adapt to all these differing contexts.

● ALBUMS: with Dave Liebman If Only They Knew (1980)★★★★, with John Scofield Shinola (1981)★★★, Out Like A Light (1981)★★★, with Bill Evans Living On The Crest Of A Wave (1983)★★★, with Gil Evans Live At Sweet Basil (1984)★★★★, with John Abercrombie, Dan Wall Tactics (ECM 1997)★★★.

Nut

b. 1972. Named after an Egyptian goddess and brought up by a decidedly hippyish mother in a remote Northumbrian village, Nut left school at 14 and went through a series of dead-end jobs before three years of jazz singing engagements in various wine bars and hotels around London. Influenced musically by Ella Fitzgerald and lyrically by authors such as Graham Greene and Peter Carey, she started creating moody, angst-ridden songs with hints of Sinead O'Connor but debts to no-one. Most of 1995 was occupied recording demos in her home studio in Hammersmith, London; these formed the basis for her debut album, with musicians including her co-writer/producer Pete Evans on drums and Morrissey bassist Jonny Bridgewood. Nut's mysterious, urchin-like image helped to gain press attention, but her husky voice and intriguing, acoustic soundscapes also enabled her to stand apart from the rest of the mid-90s female singer-songwriter revival.

● ALBUMS: Fantanicity (Epic 1996)★★★, Nut (Epic 1996)★★★.

Nutmegs

The Nutmegs comprised lead Leroy Griffin, first tenor James 'Sonny' Griffin, second tenor James Tyson, baritone Billy Emery and bass Leroy McNeil. The group was formed in New Haven, Connecticut, USA, in 1954. The Nutmegs are famed for just two records, 'Story Untold' (number 2 R&B) and the follow-up, 'Ship Of Love' (number 13 R&B), both from 1955. The songs, with their exotic warbling, are a working definition of 'rockaballad', a valuable term of the era that anticipated the rock 'n' roll revolution. Most notable among the lesser songs are 'Whispering Sorrows', 'My Story', and the west coast-sounding 'My Sweet Dream'. Surviving less well in the Nutmegs' canon were the rock 'n' roll jumps, which were mostly routine. After several years of declining fortunes and many personnel changes, the group broke up in 1962. The Nutmegs were one of the cult groups of the east coast collecting scene, and during the early 60s, a cappella practice versions of their songs launched a craze for a cappella doo-wop recordings. The group, without lead Leroy Griffin (who died years earlier), worked the doo-wop revival circuit on the east coast during the 70s.

● COMPILATIONS: The Nutmegs Featuring Leroy Griffin (Relic 1971)★★★, Story Untold (Relic 1993)★★★.

Nutz

This UK hard rock quintet was formed in 1973 by Dave Lloyd (vocals) and Mick Devonport (guitar). With the addition of Keith Mulholland (bass), Kenny Newton (keyboards) and John Mylett (drums), they gained a reputation as the ubiquitous support act. Playing competent, blues-based rock and boogie, their exuberant and high-energy live shows always overshadowed the drab and lifeless studio recordings. Their sexist album covers were typical of the genre, though less likely was Lloyd's contribution of a vocal to a Crunchie chocolate bar advertisement. Newton left to join Nightwing in 1978 while the band changed their name to Rage in a deliberate attempt to jump on the N.W.O.B.H.M. bandwagon.

● ALBUMS: Nutz (A&M 1974)★★★, Nutz Two (A&M 1975)★★, Hard Nutz (A&M 1976)★★★, Live Cutz (A&M 1977)★.

NWA

The initials stand for Niggers With Attitude, which was the perfect embodiment of this Los Angeles group's outlook. They comprised Dr. Dre (b. Andre Young), DJ Yella (b. Antoine Carraby), MC Ren (b. Lorenzo Patterson) and Eazy E (b. Eric Wright, 7 September 1973, Compton, California, USA, d. 26 March 1995, Los Angeles, California, USA). Founder-member Ice Cube (b. Oshea Jackson, *c.*1970, South Central, Los Angeles, California, USA), arguably the most inspiring of the rapping crew, departed for a solo career after financial differences with the band's manager (which would later be recorded in a highly provocative song that attacked him for, amongst other things, being Jewish). However, all the band's members had long CVs: Dr. Dre had DJed for World Class Wreckin' Crew, and had produced Ice Cube's first band, CIA. Both Eazy E and DJ Yella had recorded and produced several rap discs under their own names, the former funding his Ruthless Records label, allegedly, through illegal activities. Other early members of the posse included Arabian Prince and D.O.C. NWA's first single was 'Boyz N' The Hood', marking out their lyrical territory as guns, violence and 'bitches'. Though N.W.A. And The Posse was their debut album, they only performed four of the raps on it, and to all intents and purposes, Straight Outta Compton counts as their first major release. For those attracted to the gangsta rappers first time round, this was more of the same, only sharper and more succinct. A landmark release, in its aftermath rap became polarized into two distinct factions; traditional liberal (reflecting the ideas of Martin Luther King) and a black militancy redolent of Malcolm X, albeit much less focused and reasoned. In 1989 the FBI investigated Straight Outta Compton's infamous 'Fuck Tha Police', after which Cube left the group. It set a precedent for numerous actions against NWA, including the first time anyone in the music industry had received a threatening letter from the FBI. Efil4zaggin (Niggaz4life spelt backwards) which made US number 1, also surpassed the outrage factor of its predecessor by addressing gang rape and paedophilia, in addition to the established agenda of oral sex, cop killing and prostitution. Musically, it contained furious blasts of raggamuffin and 70s funk, but that was somehow secondary. It did reveal some humour in the band, i.e., on 'Don't Drink That Wine' (which jokingly encourages drug abuse instead), or lines like, 'Why do I call meself a nigger, you ask me? Because my mouth is so muthafuckin' nasty, Bitch this bitch that nigger this nigger that, In the meanwhile my pockets are getting fat.' However, such wit was stretched paper-thin over a clutch of expletives and obscenities. The UK government used the Obscene Publications Act to seize copies but were forced to return them following legal action. Ultimately the BPI withdrew their support from Island Marketing's successful action. Counsel for the defence was Geoffrey Robertson QC, who had played a similar role in the infamous Oz trial of 1971. Expert testimony from Wendy K of Talkin' Loud Records, rap author David Toop and psychologist Guy Cumberbatch of Aston University swung the case. This prompted a variety of statements from British MPs outlining their intention to toughen up the law. However, even the anti-censorship lobby must concede that NWA's by turns ludicrous ('Find 'Em Fuck 'Em And Flee') and dangerous ('To Kill A Hooker') songs have blurred the generally positive influence of the rap movement. As the decade progressed it became obvious that the remaining members of NWA were spending more time on their solo projects, Dr. Dre, in particular, going on to enjoy huge success both as an influential artist and producer with Death Row Records, the phenomenally successful label he co-founded with Marion 'Suge' Knight. His acrimonious parting from Eazy-E over monies owed through Ruthless Records was celebrated in records by both artists. Yella has been quiet, co-production credits on Ruthlesss aside, while Ren released a disappointing solo ablum and EP.

● ALBUMS: NWA And The Posse (Ruthless 1987)★★★, Straight Outta Compton (Ruthless 1989)★★★★, Efil4zaggin (Ruthless 1991)★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Virgin 1996)★★★.

NY Loose

Redolent of 70s New York cool, in sound as well as image, NY Loose are led by singer Brijitte West (b. New York City, New York, USA). The group's first single, 'Bitch', offered an attitudinal retort to male street aggression: 'Pigs call me from their truck/They say "hey Miss America we'll give you a ride"/I just walk on by/Wish I was carrying a 45'. The original 7-inch sold out of its initial 500-copy pressing on the group's own Loose Records almost immediately, before being licensed to Holy Plastic Records. Both 'Bitch', and the follow-up, 'Green Little Semaphore', were recorded with an original line-up that West jettisoned soon after release. While piecing together a new outfit she was invited to take on the singer's role in Garbage, but turned down the offer because of its lack of creative freedom. NY Loose's third single, 'Pretty Suicide', was released in the UK on Non-Fiction, a subsidiary of Fiction Records. It was written after seeing a Time Life magazine photograph of an Empire State Building suicide, the image of which haunted West for some time.

● ALBUMS: Year Of The Rat (Hollywood 1996)★★★.

Nyame, E.K.

b. December 1927, Kwahu, Ghana, d. 19 January, 1977, Accra, Ghana. Along with E.T. Mensah, Nyame was one of the godfathers of modern Ghanaian highlife music. His particular contribution was the bringing together of rural 'palm wine' music typically performed by a vocalist accompanying himself on acoustic guitar, and played on street corners and in bars, and 'concert parties' - a peculiarly Ghanaian mixture of drama and music performed by touring troupes in villages across the country. Nyame's fusion of the two arts would be updated by bands like the African Brothers in the 60s and 70s. The music of the early concert parties was essentially western ballroom music: foxtrots, quicksteps and ragtimes learnt from British Army marching bands and records played by European settlers. Nyame africanized the concert party by using palm wine-based music and rejecting English language lyrics and speech in favour of indigenous Ghanaian languages. A self-taught guitarist, Nyame joined his first band, Appiah Adjekum's Band, in 1948. In 1951 he left to form his own group, the Akan Trio, where he first combined palm wine music and the concert party. The innovation was an almost immediate success, and was adopted by countless other highlife bands. During the 50s Nyame recorded over 400 78 rpm discs for West African Decca, Queenaphone and HMV Records and through them built up a reputation throughout west Africa. He became President Nkrumah's favourite musician and accompanied him on many state visits (many of Nyame's songs and plays had supported Nkrumah and the independence movement during the final years of British colonial rule). When he died in 1977 Nyame's body was laid out on a golden bed and he was given a state funeral attended by an estimated 10,000 people. Sadly, none of his many records have to date been issued outside of Africa.

● ALBUMS: E.K.'s Favourites (1963)★★★, Famous E.K. (STK 1970)★★★, Sankofa (RAL 1974)★★★, In Memory Of E.K. (1981)★★★.

Nylons

Formed in Toronto, Canada, in 1979, the Nylons' line-up comprised three erstwhile actors: Paul Cooper, Marc Connors and Claude Morrison, with Arnold Robinson (b. Wilmington, North Carolina, USA), who had spent several years in Sonny Turner's Platters (aka Sounds Unlimited). Originally harmonizing a cappella, their material was one third original, one third classic doo-wop and one third contemporary pop covers. Their debut album featured bare rhythmic accompaniment underpinning the group's elegant harmonies. One Size Fits All housed the single 'Silhouettes', which gained a number of plays on mainstream US radio. The Tokens' 'The Lion Sleeps Tonight' and Steam's 'Na Na Hey Hey (Kiss Him Goodbye)' were reprised on Seamless and Happy Together, respectively, and again sold well in their domestic market, while the latter single also breached the US charts at number 12 in 1987. The same year they collaborated on their expansive Rockapella project, while their version of the Turtles' 'Happy Together' (which gave their fourth album its title), peaked at number 75 in the US charts. Paul Cooper departed in 1990 to be replaced by Micah Barner, but by the following year Marc Connors had died, prompting a further line-up shuffle, with Billy Newton-Davis stepping into the breach.

● ALBUMS: The Nylons (Attic 1982)★★, One Size Fits All (Attic 1984)★★, Seamless (Attic 1986)★★★, Happy Together (Attic 1987)★★, Rockapella (Attic 1987)★★, Four On The Floor (Attic 1991)★★.

Nyman, Michael

b. 23 March 1944, London, England. A composer, pianist, orchestra leader, and author, Nyman studied at the London Academy of Music (of which he is a Fellow) and at King's College, London. To the public at large, he is probably best known for his music to Jane Campion's award-winning 1993 film, The Piano, and for the 18 'propulsively pounding' film scores he composed for the idiosyncratic director and screenwriter, Peter Greenaway. Most notable amongst these are The Draughtsman's Contract (1982), A Zed And Two Noughts (1985), Drowning By Numbers (1988), The Cook, The Thief, His Wife And Her Lover (1989), and Prospero's Books (1991). The two men parted after Nyman discovered that his original score for Prospero's Books had been overlayed with what he called 'awful phoney electronic music'. Nyman's film music is just a part of a prolific and extremely varied output that has consisted of several operas (including The Man Who Mistook His Wife For A Hat), string quartets, a saxophone concerto ('Where The Bee Dances'), the libretto for Harrison Birtwhistle's dramatic pastoral, Down By The Greenwoodside, other classical works, and numerous commissions. He also collaborated on the Channel 4 film, The Final Score, in which he paid tribute to the game of football, and in particular to his own favourite club, Queen's Park Rangers. Nyman's score for The Piano received the Australian Film Institute Award for Best Original Music, was nominated for a Golden Globe Award, and won the first-ever Chicago Film Critics Award for Best Musical Score. Although the film was nominated for eight Oscars, Nyman's brilliant score was ignored. In 1995, London's South Bank Centre presented a celebratory festival, Nyman On The South Bank, which opened with an all-night showing of a number of films associated with him. It continued with performances by his various ensembles, which 'showed off the grandeur of Nyman's orchestral writing, the amplified power of the Michael Nyman Big Band, and the intimate delights of his chamber music'. Among the works performed at the festival were premieres of 'The Upside-Down Violin', with the Orquesta Andalusi de Tetuan from Morocco, Nyman's score for the film Carrington, as well as his 'Harpsichord Concerto' with Elisabeth Chojnacka, and 'Six Celan Songs', sung by Hilary Summers. His music, which effortlessly spans the pop/classical divide, has attracted great attention from concert-goers and critics alike, making him a unique figure in UK contemporary music.

● ALBUMS: Decay Music (Obscure 1978)★★★, Michael Nyman (Sheet 1982)★★★★, The Kiss And Other Movements (Editions EG 1987)★★★, Michael Nyman: Box Set (Venture 1989)★★★★, And They Do/Zoo Caprices (TER 1988)★★★, The Essential Michael Nyman (Argo/Decca 1992)★★★★, Time Will Pronounce (Argo/Decca 1993)★★★, The Piano (Virgin 1993)★★★★, Michael Nyman Live (Virgin 1995)★★★, Carrington (Argo 1995)★★★, AET (After Extra Time) (Virgin 1996)★★★, Harpsicord, Bassoon And Horn Concertos (EMI Classics 1997)★★, Gattaca OST (Virgin 1998)★★★, The Suit & The Photograph (EMI 1998)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Experimental Music: Cage And Beyond, Michael Nyman.

Nymph Errant

A vehicle for the talented and glamorous Gertrude Lawrence, this show was unusual in that it was written specifically for the London stage by the celebrated American composer Cole Porter. It opened at the Adelphi Theatre on 6 October 1933, with book by Romney Brent which was based on James Laver's somewhat risqué novel. The story told of Evangeline Edwards (Gertrude Lawrence), who, after graduating from a Lausanne finishing school, travels around Europe in a fruitless, but amusing search for a man who will love her. Unsuitable candidates include a Russian violinist, a Greek slave trader and a Count of the Holy Roman Empire. The Adelphi's revolving stage was used to excellent effect by costume and set designer Doris Zinkeisen to conjure up stylish locations such as the Carnival at Venice, Athens by moonlight, and the stage of the Folies de Paris. Elisabeth Welch as Haidee Robinson, Austin Trevor as the French impresario André de Croissant, and Morton Selton in the role of a devilish rake, were all outstanding, but the evening belonged to Gertrude Lawrence. As usual, Porter's songs were both tuneful and witty, especially 'The Physician', in which Lawrence complained: 'He said my maxillaries were marvels/And found my sternum stunning to see/He did a double hurdle/When I shook my pelvic girdle/But he never said he loved me.' The rest of the songs, including 'It's Bad For Me', 'How Could We Be Wrong?, 'Nymph Errant', 'Solomon', and 'If You Like Les Belles Poitrines' were all of similarly high quality. The show was presented by impresario Charles B. Cochran, so it was inevitable that his 'Young Ladies' should turn up from time to time. Considering the quality of performers and the production, he must have been disappointed with a run of only 154 performances.

Nymphs

This band originated in the Los Angeles club scene around volatile vocalist Inger Lorre (b. Laurie Wenning), a former model from New Jersey, with a line-up that eventually stabilized with drummer Alex Kirst, guitarists jet freedom (who prefers to have his initials expressed in lower case) and Sam Merrick, and bassist Cliff D. The Nymphs signed to Geffen in 1989, bolstered by a wave of hype that suggested that the band were a female-fronted Guns N'Roses (in truth their sound owed more to Lou Reed, the Stooges and Patti Smith). A period of limbo ensued as the band fought to record a debut on their own terms. Tales of drug abuse, rehabilitation and mental hospitals escalated as the tension of being contractually prohibited from playing live took its toll. These problems were exacerbated when producer Bill Price was commandeered by Guns N'Roses to mix their Use Your Illusion albums. Lorre expressed the feelings of the Nymphs by crushing five poppies (to represent the band members) and urinating on them, all on top of the desk of her label's A&R chief. Nymphs eventually emerged in February 1992 to a fanfare of critical praise; it was a darkly enthralling set that mixed punk and grunge with Lorre's lyrical images of death, drugs and sex (often drawn from personal experience). Subsequent live shows were of variable quality, with internal tensions abounding due to Lorre's eccentric behaviour, and following A Practical Guide To Astral Projection, it was no surprise when the Nymphs disintegrated spectacularly on stage in Miami in September of that same year. Lorre has reportedly since focused her attention on writing children's stories.

● ALBUMS: Nymphs (Geffen 1992)★★★, A Practical Guide To Astral Projection mini-album (Geffen 1992)★★★.

Nyro, Laura

b. Laura Nigro, 18 October 1947, The Bronx, New York City, New York, USA, d. 8 April 1997, Danbury, Connecticut, USA. The daughter of an accomplished jazz trumpeter, Nyro was introduced to music at an early age, reputedly completing her first composition when she was only eight years old. Her main influences ranged from Bob Dylan to John Coltrane, but the artist's debut More Than A New Discovery (aka The First Songs) revealed a talent akin to Brill Building songwriters Carole King and Ellie Greenwich. Nyro's empathy for soul and R&B enhanced her individuality, although she later disowned the set, claiming its stilted arrangements were completed against her wishes. The set nonetheless contained several songs adapted by other artists, notably 'Stoney End' (Barbra Streisand), 'And When I Die' (Blood, Sweat And Tears) and 'Wedding Bell Blues' (Fifth Dimension). Eli And The Thirteenth Confession complied more closely to Nyro's wishes; while containing the highly popular 'Stone Souled Picnic', it revealed the growing sense of introspection that flourished on the following year's New York Tendaberry. Here the singer's dramatic intonation, capable of sweeping from a whisper to anguished vibrato within a phrase, emphasized a bare emotional nerve exposed on 'You Don't Love Me When I Cry' and 'Sweet Lovin' Baby'. Her frequent jumps in tempo irked certain critics, but the majority applauded its audacious ambition and peerless fusion of gospel and white soul. The extraordinary Christmas And The Beads Of Sweat, which included the startling 'Christmas Is My Soul', offered a similar passion while Gonna Take A Miracle, a collaboration with producers Kenny Gamble and Leon Huff, acknowledged the music that provided much of the artist's inspiration. Backed by the Sigma Sound Studio house band and singing trio Labelle, Nyro completed enthralling versions of uptown R&B and Motown favourites. She then retired from music altogether, but re-emerged in 1975 upon the disintegration of her marriage. Smile showed the singer's talent had remained intact and included the powerful 'I Am The Blues', while an attendant promotional tour spawned Season Of Lights. Nested was, however, less impressive and a further domestically inspired hiatus followed. Mother's Spiritual reflected Nyro's reactions to both parenthood and ageing; her comeback was confirmed in 1988 when she embarked on her first concert tour in over a decade. Walk The Dog And Light The Light was her only new release of the 90s. Stoned Soul Picnic was a fitting 34-song retrospective, but only weeks after its release Nyro succumbed to cancer. Laura Nyro will be remembered as a mature songwriter and a singularly impressive performer, her intonation proving influential on several other female singers, notably Rickie Lee Jones.

● ALBUMS: More Than A New Discovery aka The First Songs (Verve/Forecast 1967)★★★, Eli And The Thirteenth Confession (Columbia 1968)★★★★, New York Tendaberry (Columbia 1969)★★★★, Christmas And The Beads Of Sweat (Columbia 1970)★★★, Gonna Take A Miracle (Columbia 1971)★★★, Smile (Columbia 1976)★★★, Season Of Lights (Columbia 1977)★★★, Nested (Columbia 1979)★★, Mother's Spiritual (Columbia 1985)★★, Live At The Bottom Line (Columbia 1990)★★, Walk The Dog And Light The Light (Columbia 1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Impressions (Columbia 1980)★★★★, Stoned Soul Picnic: The Best Of ... (Columbia/Legacy 1997)★★★★, tribute album Time And Love: The Music Of Laura Nyro (Astor Place 1997)★★★.

O

O Lucky Man

Noted British film director Lindsay Anderson (This Sporting Life, If) cast Malcolm McDowell in the leading role of this enthralling 1973 feature. Arthur Lowe, Ralph Richardson, Rachel Roberts and Helen Mirren were among the first-class supporting players. Screened at the Cannes Film Festival in its original three-hour form, O Lucky Man was later trimmed for US audiences. The plot revolved around the antics of a self-serving young man, initially intent on gratification, who later attempts to make amends for his perceived wrong-doings. The proceedings were suitably enhanced by a taut score from former Animals pianist/vocalist Alan Price. Aided by guitarist Colin Green, formerly of Georgie Fame's Blue Flames, Dave Markee (bass) and ex-Jethro Tull drummer Clive Thacker, Price committed some of his finest songs and performances to the project, notably 'Poor People', 'My Home Town' and the ironic title song. One of the finest British films of the early 70s, O Lucky Man demonstrates Price's maturity as a songwriter as well as Anderson's considerable cinematic gifts.

O'Brien, Floyd

b. 7 May 1904, Chicago, Illinois, USA, d. 26 November 1968. Throughout the 20s and early 30s trombonist O'Brien worked regularly, playing in numerous bands mostly in Chicago. In the mid-30s he also played in New York, appearing on record with the Chocolate Dandies, Fats Waller, Eddie Condon, George Wettling and other leading jazz groups. He spent the second half of the 30s in the orchestra led by popular singer-comedian Phil Harris, then joined successively Gene Krupa and Bob Crosby. During the 40s he played mostly in dixieland and New Orleans-style bands, some of which he led. This pattern continued into the 50s, when he recorded with Albert Nicholas and also established a reputation as a brass teacher. Although not as well-known as some of his contemporaries, O'Brien was a gifted trombonist and an often vital and exciting exponent of Chicago-style.

● ALBUMS: with Albert Nicholas All Star Stompers (1959)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with George Wettling Chicago Jazz (1939-40)★★★, with Bob Crosby South Rampart Street Parade (1935-42)★★★.

O'Brien, Tim

b. Wheeling, West Virginia, USA. While he was growing up, the country singer Tim O'Brien became proficient on guitar, mandolin, fiddle and a guitar-shaped bouzouki and used to sing with his sister Mollie. In 1979 he and the banjo player Pete Wernick formed a bluegrass band, Hot Rize, with O'Brien on lead vocals, mandolin and fiddle. They also performed as their own opening act, as Red Knuckles And The Trailblazers, a western swing band. Hot Rize had run its course by 1984 and O'Brien, after making a solo album, teamed up with his sister again. Kathy Mattea had a US country hit with O'Brien's song 'Walk The Way The Wind Blows' and O'Brien also sang on her version of 'The Battle Hymn Of Love'. In 1988 they made their first album together, which included John Prine's 'Unwed Fathers'. Because of a change in record company management, a solo album for RCA was never released and he returned to Sugar Hill Records for a traditional album, Odd Man In. He has said of his music: 'I go by own my own rules and I've made a place for myself that I'm comfortable with. There are lots more of us out there that don't fit in.' In 1996 he released an album of Bob Dylan cover versions.

● ALBUMS: Guess Who's In Town (Biscuit City 1979)★★★, Hard Year Blues (Flying Fish 1984)★★★, Odd Man In (Sugar Hill 1993)★★★, Oh Boy! Oh Boy! (Sugar Hill 1994)★★★; as Hot Rize Hot Rize (Flying Fish 1979)★★★, Radio Boogie (1981)★★, In Concert (Flying Fish 1984)★★★, Traditional Ties (Sugar Hill 1985)★★★, Untold Stories (Sugar Hill 1987)★★★, Take It Home (Sugar Hill 1990)★★★; as Red Knuckles And The Trailblazers Red Knuckles And The Trailblazers (Flying Fish 1982)★★★, Shades Of The Past (Sugar Hill 1988)★★; as Tim And Mollie O'Brien Take Me Back (Sugar Hill 1988)★★★, Remember Me (Sugar Hill 1992)★★★, Away Out On The Mountain (Sugar Hill 1994)★★★; with the O'Boys Rock In My Shoes (Sugar Hill 1995)★★★, Red On Blonde (Sugar Hill 1996)★★★.

O'Connell, Helen

(see Dorsey, Jimmy)

O'Connell, Maura

b. County Clare, Eire. Folk singer Maura O'Connell began her career working with Mike Hanrahan before becoming a full-time member of Stockton's Wing then De Dannan. However, after that band had enjoyed substantial success with Star Spangled Molly, O'Connell relocated to Nashville in 1985 to launch her solo career. She went there because of its reputation for songwriters, and the fact that all the major publishing houses were represented there - increasing the types and styles of songs available to her many times over. On arrival she quickly formed a musical partnership with dobro player Jerry Douglas, who has been a constant companion throughout her solo work. A succession of albums followed, before she joined Rykodisc Records in 1996 for the release of Stories. This included material drawn from established and disparate sources such as Shawn Colvin ('Shotgun Down The Avalanche'), Paul Brady (the title track), Hal Ketchum ('Ordinary Day') and Mary-Chapin Carpenter ('Wall Around Your Heart'). There was also a Beatles song, 'If I Fell', to further demonstrate O'Connell's diversity and her move away from a straightforward country or folk heritage. Wandering Home marked a return to her Irish folk roots, and saw O'Connell covering a diverse range of standards including 'West Coast Of Clare' and 'Down By The Sally Gardens'.

● ALBUMS: Just In Time (Philo 1988)★★★, Helpless Heart (Warners 1989)★★★, A Real Life Story (Warners 1991)★★★, Blue Is The Colour Of Hope (Warners 1992)★★★, Stories (Rykodisc 1996)★★★, Wandering Home (Rykodisc 1997)★★★★.

O'Connor, Cavan

b. Clarence Patrick O'Connor, 1 July 1899, Eire, d. 11 January 1997, London, England. An immensely popular singer in the UK from the 30s through to the 60s, with a fine, lilting tenor voice. O'Connor's family moved to Nottingham, England shortly after he was born and his Irish father died when Cavan was two years old. After leaving school, the youngster worked as a pit boy in the local colliery and a lather boy in a barber's shop. Eager to play a part in World War I, he was turned down for the Navy because he was too young, so he joined the Army instead, and sailed for France at the end of 1915. After he was demobilized in 1919, he worked in a music showroom, selling instruments and delivering pianos. The shop's owner heard him singing, and booked him for a concert at a Masonic lodge. The fee was seven shillings and sixpence, but, far more importantly, some of the lodge members took a collection which raised £200, enabling O'Connor to travel to London and audition for Sir Hugh Allan at the Royal College of Music. He was awarded a four-year operatic scholarship, and became what used to be known as 'a dedicated singer'. While appearing as a member of the chorus in Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado at the Old Vic, he was noticed by a recording executive, and subsequently made tests of 'Take A Pair Of Sparkling Eyes' and 'The Wandering Minstrel' with a full orchestral accompaniment. He was later told that he had the perfect 'cutting voice' to suit the wax system used in those days for making records. In the early 20s, O'Connor collaborated with John Logie Baird in a television experiment, and joined Sir Nigel Playfair's management at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith, playing small parts and understudying in productions such as The Beggar's Opera, The Duenna, and A.P. Herbert and Playfair's revue, Riverside Nights (1926). Immensely versatile, O'Connor subsequently appeared in a season of opera under Lillian Baylis at the Old Vic, and at the famous Gaiety Theatre, sang with pianist Fred Hartley's ensembles, and successfully auditioned for the BBC in 1925 at Savoy Hill. Although he worked constantly, real fame did not arrive until 1935, when songwriter and producer Eric Maschwitz, head of Variety at BBC radio, had an idea for a weekly spot called 'The Vagabond Lover'. Rather along the lines of Arthur Tracy, who sheltered under the title of The Street Singer on American radio, it was to feature an anonymous vocalist, and listeners were invited to speculate as to his identity. One national newspaper offered the prize of a guinea for the best description of the mystery man. The programme was an overnight success, and catapulted the singer into the big time. By the time his identity was revealed, he had become one of Britain's highest paid radio personalities - second only to Gracie Fields - and he was booked by the Stoll Moss circuit as a star attraction at all the top music halls, where audiences loved his relaxed manner when he strolled on stage singing his theme song, 'Goodnight (I'm Only A Strolling Vagabond)', dressed simply in a slouch hat, corduroy trousers and open necked shirt, with a sports jacket slung over his right shoulder. In the late 30s, he was welcomed in the USA and Europe, and during World War II broadcast regularly from Bristol, until the studio was bombed, when he switched to Bangor. He also made numerous appearances on popular radio shows, such as Monday Night At Eight and Jimmy O'Dea's Irish Half Hour. In 1939, Eric Maschwitz and George Posford wrote 'The World Is Mine Tonight' especially for O'Connor. It became one of his specialities, along with 'I'll Take You Home Again Kathleen', a song whose tune he first heard on a music box in Bangor, 'Daybreak', 'When I Leave The World Behind', 'In The Still Of The Night', 'Danny Boy', 'The Rose Of Tralee', 'The Mountains Of Mourne', and 'Hear My Song, Violetta'. He brought the latter number back from Berlin, claiming that 'it had been pinched' from the opera, La Traviata. Over the years he made more than 800 recordings for numerous labels, with studio orchestras, and various dancebands led by artists such as Bertini, Alfredo, Harry Bidgood, Herman Dareweski, and Geraldo. He used his own name for what he called the standard ballads, and a number of pseudonyms, including Cliff Connelly, Pat O'Brian, Terence O'Neill, Alan O'Sullivan, and Harry Carlton, amongst several others, for the more 'commercial' releases. He also appeared in two films Ourselves Alone (1936) and Honeymoon Hotel (1946).

After the war, O'Connor visited South Africa and the Antipodes, but still continued to tour at home until television finally killed off the music halls, and the radical changes in popular music sounded the death knell for most balladeers. He also formed Avonmore Trio, with his wife, Rita Tate, who had been a fellow student at the Royal College of Music, on piano, and son Michael on guitar, His career enjoyed a brief Indian summer when producer Don Ross included him in a series of small nostalgia package shows which played the UK provinces, and his last stage appearance is said to have been in 1985 at the re-opened Hackney Empire in London, where he topped the bill and received a thrilling reception.

O'Connor, Des

b. January 1932. O'Connor served an apprenticeship on UK pop package tours - including that headlined by Buddy Holly - in the 50s before elevation to television as a smooth comedian-interlocutor. In the wake of Ken Dodd's mid-60s record success as a balladeer, EMI Records decided to try O'Connor's light baritone on a few exploratory singles in the same vein. He struck gold in 1967 when 'Careless Hands' reached the Top 10. The next year had him at the top with 'I Pretend' composed by Les Reed and Barry Mason. Further success followed with the excellent '1-2-3 O'Leary'. An uptempo approach with 'Dick-A-Dum-Dum' (a paeon to London's fashionable King's Road) precipitated a gradual slip from the hit parade - though he retained a strong following in the UK. He was also the good-natured victim of derogatory bon mots from showbusiness peers about his singing but he enjoyed a measure of revenge in 1980 when his hosting of an ITV chat-show hoisted Just For You to number 17 - his highest position in the album chart since I Pretend. O'Connor has been at the sharp end of the critics' pens for many years, especially with regard to his musical ablity. He seems to have taken the sniping with very good nature.

● ALBUMS: I Pretend (Columbia 1968)★★★★, With Love (Columbia 1970)★★★, Sing A Favourite Song (Pye 1972)★★★, Des O'Connor Collection (Pickwick 1978)★★★, With Feelings (Hallmark 1979)★★★, Christmas With... (Pickwick 1979)★★, Careless Hands (Ideal 1980)★★★, Des O'Connor Remembers (Warwick 1980)★★★, This Is Des O'Connor (EMI 1980)★★★★, Just For You (Warwick 1980)★★★, Golden Hits Des O'Connor (MFP 1983)★★★★, Des O'Connor Now (Telstar 1984)★★★, The Great Songs (Telstar 1985)★★★, Anytime (Hour Of Pleasure 1986)★★★, True Love Ways (Arista 1987)★★★, Portrait (1992)★★★.

O'Connor, Donald

b. Donald David Dixon Ronald O'Connor, 30 August 1925, Chicago, Illinois, USA. One of the most likeable and nimble of all Hollywood's song-and-dance-men, who seems to have retained his youthful looks and casual charm throughout a career spanning well over 50 years. O'Connor was the seventh child of parents who were circus and vaudeville performers. After his father died, Donald (aged three) joined his mother and two of his brothers in the family act until he made his film debut in the minor musical Melody For Two in 1937. A year later, at the age of only 13, he made a big impact in Sing You Sinners in which he completely captivated cinema audiences in his role as the younger brother of Fred MacMurray and Bing Crosby. The trio's version of 'Small Fry' was the highlight of the picture. After a few straight parts and one other musical, On Your Toes, O'Connor went back to vaudeville until 1941 when he signed a contract with Universal which resulted in supporting roles in musicals such as What's Cookin?, Private Buckaroo, Get Hep To Love, and Give Out Sisters. These led to better parts in It Comes Up Love, When Johnny Comes Marching Home, Strictly In The Groove, and especially Mister Big. He was top-billed for the first time in Top Man (1943) with soprano Susanna Foster. Funny-girl Peggy Ryan was also in Top Man, and she joined O'Connor in several other films around this time, including Chip Off The Old Block, This Is The Life, Follow The Boys, Bowery To Broadway, The Merry Monahans (all 1944) and Patrick The Great (1945). After service in the US Army, O'Connor 'stole' Something In The Wind from Universal's premiere female star, Deanna Durbin, and further re-established himself in Are You With It?, Feudin' Fussin' And A-Fightin', and Yes Sir, That's My Baby for which he was teamed with Gloria DeHaven. He was paired with a rather more unusual partner next - a 'talking mule' named Francis. The popular series, which began with Francis (1950), continued until O'Connor called a halt, saying: 'When you've made six pictures and the mule still gets more mail than you do . . .' In 1950 O'Connor starred at the London Palladium, and, on his return to the USA, joined Gene Kelly and Debbie Reynolds for what is probably his best-remembered film - Singin' In The Rain. All the routines are classics, but O'Connor's marvellous solo moment, 'Make 'Em Laugh', a series of pratfalls and back-flips performed in the company of a headless dummy, was improvised by O'Connor himself, and remains one of the all-time great sequences from any movie musical. Ironically, he revealed recently that the first take was ruined by 'foggy film' in the camera, and he had to do the whole thing over again three days later. The early 50s were good times for O'Connor. He featured on television's The Colgate Comedy Hour for three years, and continued to sing, dance and clown his way through Call Me Madam, I Love Melvin, Walking My Baby Back Home, There's No Business Like Show Business, and Anything Goes (1956). After that, with the glossy big screen musical in a state of terminal decline, he returned to television, and played the big cabaret rooms and clubs throughout the USA. He continued to appear in the occasional straight roles in films such as The Buster Keaton Story (1957), Ragtime (with James Cagney in 1981), and Toys (1992). In the 80s he toured in revivals of immortal stage musicals such as Show Boat, and, later in the decade, was attracting enthusiastic reviews in Las Vegas for his shows with fellow movie legends Debbie Reynolds and Mickey Rooney. In June 1994 he brought his classy cabaret act to London for the opening of the capital's latest (ill-fated) cabaret space, the Connaught Room.

O'Connor, Hazel

b. 16 May 1955, Coventry, England. O'Connor's introduction to showbusiness involved working as an dancer and started with a minor movie role in Girls Come First.

At the close of the 70s, she signed to the Albion label and issued the single 'Ee-I-Adio', which failed to sell. Her profile increased when she appeared in the film Breaking Glass, a melodramatic portrayal of a fictional rock star. O'Connor's aggressive singing style and confrontational appearance was used to good effect on the Tony Visconti-produced 'Eighth Day' (complete with 'robotic' intonation) which reached the UK Top 5. The following year, she registered two further Top 10 singles, 'D-Days' and the uncharacteristic ballad 'Will You'. Various disputes with her record company and management slowed down her career. In 1984, she recorded Smile for RCA Records but the record sold poorly and the label declined to renew her option. O'Connor subsequently appeared in the musical Girlfriends in 1987.

● ALBUMS: Breaking Glass film soundtrack (A&M 1980)★★, Sons And Lovers (A&M 1980)★★, Glass Houses (A&M 1980)★★, Cover Plus (Albion 1981)★★, Smile (RCA 1984)★★, Live In Berlin (Start 1997)★.

● FURTHER READING: Hazel O'Connor: Uncovered Plus, Hazel O'Connor.

● FILMS: Breaking Glass (1980).

O'Connor, Mark

b. 4 August 1962, Seattle, Washington, USA. O'Connor is a naturally gifted instrumentalist, who first began to play the guitar at the age of six and won a University of Washington classical/flamenco guitar contest when he was aged 10. A year later, tiring of just playing the guitar, he turned to the fiddle and within weeks was playing it at square dances. Influenced by noted Texas fiddler Benny Thomasson, he played at festivals and contests. By the age of 14, he had already won two National Fiddle Championships, a Grand Masters Fiddle Championship, the National Guitar Flatpicking Championship and had also produced two albums. After graduation in 1979, he toured extensively on the festival circuits, where he worked with several noted bluegrass musicians. After touring Japan with Dan Crary, he became the guitarist with David Grisman's quintet, where he also worked on a tour with the jazz violinist Stéphane Grappelli. In 1981, while O'Connor was recovering from a broken arm sustained in a skiing accident, Grisman reduced to a quartet and O'Connor became the fiddle player with the Dixie Dregs. He left in 1983 and began to work with many artists including John McKuen, Peter Rowan, Chris Hillman and the legendary Doc Watson. His multi-instrumental ability has seen him much in demand and he has played on countless recordings as a session musician. By the late 80s, his music mixed various genres including bluegrass, rock, jazz and classical. In 1990, he began to follow a more independent career and, writing much of his own material, he began to concentrate more on his own recordings. His collaboration with the cream of country sessionmen on New Nashville Cats won him much critical acclaim, and his revival of Carl Perkins' 'Restless', with vocals by Ricky Skaggs, Steve Wariner and Vince Gill, won several CMA Awards. O'Connor then began work on a record of duets with famous violinists from the classical as well as country field. His flatpicking guitarwork has been compared to that of Doc Watson and many now rate him as Nashville's top fiddle player. He is also an accomplished banjoist, and in 1983, he won the World Mandolin Championship.

● ALBUMS: Mark O'Connor Four-Time National Junior Fiddle Champion (1975)★★★, Pickin' In The Wind (1976)★★★, Texas Jam Session (1977)★★★, In Concert (1977)★★★, Markology (Rounder 1980)★★★, On The Rampage (Rounder 1980)★★★, with Fred Carpenter Cuttin' Loose (1980)★★★, with David Grisman Quintet Quintet: '80 (Warners 1980)★★★, Soppin' The Gravy (Rounder 1981)★★★, False Dawn (Rounder 1982)★★★, with Doc and Merle Watson Doc & Merle Watson Guitar Album (Flying Fish 1983)★★★, Meanings Of (Warners 1986)★★★, Stones From Which The Arch Was Made (Warners 1988)★★★, Elysian Forest (Warners 1988)★★★, On The Mark (Warners 1989)★★★, The New Nashville Cats (Warners 1991)★★★★, Heroes (Warners 1993)★★★★, The Fiddle Concerto (Warners 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Championship Years (Country Music Foundation 1990)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Devil Came Back To Georgia (1993).

O'Connor, Sinead

b. 12 December 1966, Glenageary, Eire. This Irish vocalist has combined her highly distinctive vocal range with striking post-feminist imagery to great commercial effect on both sides of the Atlantic. She endured a turbulent youth and diagnoses of 'behavioural problems', which included shoplifting. O'Connor signed her first record deal with Ensign Records in 1985. Her previous experience was limited to sessions with Dublin pop band Ton Ton Macoute. Nigel Grainge, the label's co-manager, allowed her a full year to develop her knowledge of music and the industry by helping around the office, before the sessions for her debut album began. Through connections on the Dublin music scene, O'Connor provided the vocals to U2 guitarist The Edge's film soundtrack for The Captive. The track 'Heroine' was released by Virgin Records and stirred some interest when aired on BBC Television's Old Grey Whistle Test in 1986.

O'Connor's debut solo single, the disappointing 'Troy', emerged in late 1987, failing to capitalize on column inches seemingly generated only by the singer's shaven head. Early 1988 saw 'Mandinka' reach the UK Top 20, and proved a more suitable showcase for O'Connor's banshee-like attack. Although two subsequent singles failed to chart, The Lion And The Cobra sold well on the strength of 'Mandinka', and her media profile was bolstered by a series of highly opinionated interviews. 1989 saw a lull in her solo output as she worked on a variety of collaborative projects. She also appeared in her first film role as a 15-year-old Catholic schoolgirl in Hush-A-Bye Baby, a project developed by the Derry Film Workshop. It explored the moral dilemmas forced upon unmarried pregnant women in the province, and motherhood as a theme would become central in her work thereafter. To promote her second solo album, O'Connor chose the Prince-written 'Nothing Compares 2 U', originally recorded by Family for the Paisley Park label. A remarkable ballad that demonstrated the strength and vulnerability which are pivotal elements in the singer's delivery, it transfixed audiences worldwide. The second album, I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got, saw similar global success. Her 1990 tour of the USA prompted the first stirrings of a backlash. At the Garden State Arts Centre in New Jersey she refused to go on stage after 'The Star Spangled Banner' was played. It was her protest at the censorship which was sweeping the USA, but this fact was obscured under a wave of nationalistic vitriol from Frank Sinatra amongst others. It emerged in interviews that the artist was as troubled privately as her public persona may have suggested. Although the mother of a son, Jake, a series of miscarriages had been emotionally draining, catalogued in the tender singles 'Three Babies' and 'My Special Child'. O'Connor is now established as one of the most potent forces in the left field of popular music. Further controversy ensued in late 1992 when O'Connor tore up a photograph of the Pope on US television. Her appearance at the Bob Dylan celebration concert shortly after was highly charged as she defied numerous hecklers by staring them out. She became too overcome, however, and was led from the stage by a reassuring Kris Kristofferson. In 1993 she appeared as a guest on Willie Nelson's Across The Borderline, duetting as a substitute Kate Bush on Peter Gabriel's 'Don't Give Up'. Universal Mother found only marginal success compared to her previous efforts, leading to the suspicion that perhaps her sermonizing had begun to cloud the music. In 1997/8 she once again turned her hand to acting, ironically, as an Irish Virgin Mary in Neil Jordan's The Butcher Boy.

● ALBUMS: The Lion And The Cobra (Chrysalis 1988)★★★, I Do Not Want What I Haven't Got (Ensign 1990)★★★★, Am I Not Your Girl? (Ensign 1993)★★★, Universal Mother (Ensign 1994)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: So Far . . . The Best Of Sinead O'Connor (Chrysalis 1997)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Sinead O'Connor: So Different, Dermott Hayes. Sinead: Her Life And Music, Jimmy Guterman.

O'Daniel, Wilbert Lee

b. 1890, Malta, Ohio, USA, d. 1969. The family relocated to Kansas, where he grew up and worked for several milling companies. In 1925, he moved to Fort Worth, Texas, to become the sales manager of the Burrus Mill And Elevator Company. A very competent salesman, he soon made the sales of the company's Light Crust Flour increase enormously, an achievement that saw him promoted to general manager of Burrus Mill. In 1930, he believed he could boost sales further by means of a radio programme, although he initially professed that he did not like hillbilly music. Early in 1931, the Light Crust Doughboys, which included both Milton Brown and Bob Wills, began broadcasting, first on KFJZ before moving to the more powerful WBAP. O'Daniel, determined to make the advertising exactly as he wanted it, began to carry out all the announcing duties himself. He wrote promotional ditties and songs, arranged tours for the band and in 1932, the band recorded for RCA-Victor. Eventually, differences of opinion with O'Daniel saw both Brown and Wills leave to pursue their own careers. In 1935, when O'Daniel was fired by Burrus Mill (probably for promoting himself more than his employers), he formed his own company and began to market Hillbilly Flour. He also had political aspirations and to assist in these and to advertise his product, he formed his band, the Hillbilly Boys, which included his sons Pat and Mike, singer/yodeller Leon Huff and Kitty Williamson (aka Texas Rose). The band proved very popular and made several recordings, which included material that O'Daniel wrote. It also proved a useful and popular attraction during his successful 1938 campaign for the office of state governor. He was re-elected in 1940 and in 1941, on the death of the state senator, in a campaign that was far from pleasant, he was elected to the Senate (the person he beat for the office was Lyndon Baines Johnson, who later served as President from 1963 to 1969). At the end of his term, O'Daniel retired and an attempted comeback in 1956 failed miserably. During his career, he composed several songs that have remained popular in country music, including 'Beautiful Texas' and 'Put Me In Your Pocket'.

O'Day, Alan

b. 3 October 1940, Hollywood, Los Angeles, California, USA. After leaving school, O'Day began writing music for Hollywood b-movies before being signed to Warner Brothers Music as a staff writer. O'Day composed a number of hits including Bobby Sherman's 'The Drum' and the Righteous Brothers' 'Rock 'n' Roll Heaven' before finally hitting number 1 with 'Angie Baby', recorded by Helen Reddy. In an inspired move, Warners decided to launch a subsidiary, Pacific Records, whose purpose was to exploit the work of promising songwriters. O'Day was invited to record the first single for the new company and came up with 'Undercover Angel'. Surprisingly, the song was banned on some US radio stations due to its alleged sexual connotations, but O'Day surmounted the controversy and went all the way to number 1 in July 1977. Unwilling to pursue his singing career to excessive lengths, O'Day continued his main job as a writer and accepted the mantle of a chart-topping one-hit-wonder.

O'Day, Anita

b. Anita Colton, 18 October 1919, Kansas City, Missouri, USA. As Anita Colton, in her early teens she scraped a living as a professional Walkathon contestant (marathon dancer). During this period she changed her surname to O'Day. Along with other contestants she was encouraged to sing and during one Walkathon was accompanied by Erskine Tate's orchestra, an event which made her think that singing might be a better route to showbiz fame than dancing. By her late teens she had switched to singing and was told by Gene Krupa, who heard her at a Chicago club, that if he ever had a slot for her he would call. In the meantime she failed an audition with Benny Goodman, who complained that she did not stick to the melody, and upset Raymond Scott, who disliked her scatting - actually, she had momentarily forgotten the words of the song. Eventually Krupa called and O'Day joined the band early in 1941, just a few weeks before Roy Eldridge was also hired. The combination of Krupa, Eldridge and O'Day was potent and the band, already popular, quickly became one of the best of the later swing era. O'Day helped to give the band some of its hit records, notably 'Let Me Off Uptown', (also a feature for Eldridge), 'Alreet', 'Kick It' and 'Bolero At The Savoy'. After Krupa folded in 1943, O'Day went with Stan Kenton, recording hits with 'And Her Tears Flowed Like Wine' and 'The Lady In Red'. In 1945 she was back with the re-formed Krupa band for more hit records including, 'Opus No. 1'. In 1946 she went solo and thereafter remained a headliner. She made a number of fine albums in the 50s, including a set with Ralph Burns in 1952, and made a memorable appearance at the 1958 Newport Jazz Festival. This performance, at which she sang 'Tea For Two' and 'Sweet Georgia Brown', resplendent in cartwheel hat, gloves, and stoned out of her mind, was captured on film in Jazz On A Summer's Day (1958). Drug addiction severely damaged O'Day's life for many years, although she continued to turn out excellent albums, including Cool Heat with Jimmy Giuffre, Trav'lin' Light with Johnny Mandel and Barney Kessel and Time For Two with Cal Tjader. Extensive touring, high living and a punishing life style (not to mention a dozen years of heroin addiction) eventually brought collapse, and she almost died in 1966. Eventually clear of drugs, O'Day continued to tour, playing clubs, concerts and festivals around the world. She recorded less frequently, but thanks to forming her own record company, Emily, in the early 70s many of the albums that she did make were entirely under her control. In 1985 she played Carnegie Hall in celebration of 50 years in the business, and towards the end of the decade appeared in the UK at Ronnie Scott's club and at the Leeds Castle Jazz Festival in Kent. O'Day's singing voice is throaty and she sings with great rhythmic drive. Her scat singing and the liberties she takes on songs, especially when singing up-tempo, result in some remarkable vocal creations. In her hey-days her diction was exceptional and even at the fastest tempos she articulated clearly and precisely. On ballads she is assured and distinctive, and although very much her own woman, her phrasing suggests the influence of Billie Holiday. On stage she displays enormous rapport with musicians and audience, factors that make some of her studio recordings rather less rewarding than those made in concert. Late in her career some of her performances were marred by problems of pitch but, live at least, she compensated for wuch difficulties through the sheer force of her personality. O'Day's autobiography makes for compulsive reading.

● ALBUMS: Specials (1951)★★★, Singing And Swinging (1953)★★★★, Collate (1953)★★, Anita O'Day (1954)★★★★, Anita O'Day Sings Jazz (1955)★★★★, An Evening With Anita O'Day (1956)★★★, Anita (1956)★★★, Pick Yourself Up (1956)★★★, The Lady Is A Tramp (1956)★★★★, Anita Sings The Most (1957)★★★, Anita Sings The Winners (1958)★★★, Anita O'Day At Mr Kelly's (1958)★★★, Cool Heat (1959)★★★, Anita O'Day Swings Cole Porter With Billy May (1959)★★★★, Waiter, Make Mine Blues (1960)★★★, Incomparable! (1960)★★★★, Anita O'Day And Billy May Swing Rodgers And Hart (1960)★★★★, Trav'lin' Light (1961)★★★, All The Sad Young Men (1961)★★★, Time For Two (1962)★★★, Anita O'Day And The Three Sounds (1962)★★★, Anita O'Day In Tokyo 1963 (1963)★★, Once Upon A Summertime (1969)★★★, Live At The Berlin Jazz Festival (1970)★★, Anita '75 (1975)★★, My Ship (1975)★★★, Live In Tokyo (1975)★★, Live At Mingo's (1976)★★★, Skylark (1978)★★★, Angel Eyes (1978)★★★, Mello' Day (GNP 1979)★★★, Live At The City, Vols 1 & 2 (1979)★★★, Misty (1981)★★★★, A Song For You (1984)★★★, Wave (Essential 1986)★★★, In A Mellow Tone (1989)★★★, At Vine St Live (Disque Swing 1992)★★, Rules Of The Road (Pablo 1994)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Anita O'Day Sings With Gene Krupa (1941-42)★★★, Singin' And Swingin' With Anita O'Day (1947)★★★, Hi Ho Trailus Boot Whip (1947)★★★, Anita O'Day 1949-1950 (1949-50)★★★★, Tea For Two (1958-66)★★★★, The Big Band Sessions (1959-61)★★★, 1956-62 (1993)★★★★, Anita O'Day (Verve Jazz Masters 1995)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: High Times, Hard Times, Anita O'Day with George Eells.

O'Day, Molly

b. LaVerne Lois Williamson, 9 July 1923, McVeigh, Pike County, Kentucky, USA, d. 5 December 1987. O'Day learned several instruments and first sang with her brother Cecil 'Skeets' Williamson on WCHS Charleston in 1939, initially using the name Mountain Fern but soon changing to Dixie Lee. In 1940, she joined the Forty Niners, a group led by singer/guitarist Leonard (Lynn) Davis (b. 15 December 1914, Paintsville, Kentucky, USA), whom she married in April 1941. In 1942, she changed her stage name to Molly O'Day and together with Davis, worked on a variety of radio stations, including WHAS Louisville and WNOX Knoxville. Between 1946 and 1951, with their band the Cumberland Mountain Folks, they recorded almost 40 sides for Columbia. These included such heart-rending numbers as 'The Drunken Driver' and 'Don't Sell Daddy Any More Whiskey'. She was the first artist to record Hank Williams' songs ('When God Comes To Gather His Jewels' and 'Six More Miles') after hearing Williams in 1942 singing 'Tramp On The Street', which also became one her most requested numbers. In the early 50s, she and her husband turned to religious work (Davis later becoming an evangelist), but her singing was slowed by tuberculosis, which led to the removal of part of a lung, although they later recorded some religious material for Rem and GRS. Throughout the 60s and 70s, they did limited radio work centred around their home in Huntington, West Virginia. O'Day's individual emotional style prompted some to dub her 'the female Hank Williams or Roy Acuff'; she died of cancer in 1987.

● ALBUMS: Hymns For The Country Folks (Audio Lab 1960)★★★, Molly O'Day Sings Again (1961)★★★, The Unforgettable Molly O'Day (Harmony1963)★★★, The Living Legend Of Country Music (Starday 1966)★★★★, A Sacred Selection (1975)★★★, Skeets Williamson & Molly O'Day (1975)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Molly O'Day Radio Favorites (1981)★★★, The Soul Of Molly O'Day Volume 1 (Old Homestead 1983)★★★, The Soul Of Molly O'Day Volume 2 (Old Homestead 1984)★★★, In Memory (Old Homestead 1990)★★★, Molly O'Day And The Cumberland Mountain Folks (Bear Family 1992)★★★★.

O'Dell, Kenny

b. Kenneth Gist, Jnr., *c.*early 40s, Oklahoma, USA. O'Dell began writing songs in his early teens and after completing his education, he formed his own Mar-Kay record label in California. In the early 60s, he recorded his own 'Old Time Love' but it failed to chart. After working for a time with Duane Eddy, he formed a group, Guys And Dolls, with which he toured for some five years. In 1966, he wrote and recorded 'Beautiful People', which became a smash hit in Atlanta. Liberty Records told Bobby Vee he could record a better version and have a national hit; Vee later said he should never have listened to them, but in spite of split sales, both versions made the US Top 40. After further unsuccessful attempts at chart success, he moved to Nashville in 1969, where he managed Bobby Goldsboro's publishing company. He continued with his songwriting, sometimes with Larry Henley and in 1972, after producer Billy Sherrill had heard O'Dell's own recording, Sandy Posey charted with their song 'Why Don't We Go Somewhere And Love'. Sherrill became interested in O'Dell's songs and had Charlie Rich record 'I Take It On Home'. In 1973, Rich had a smash country and pop hit with 'Behind Closed Doors', which won O'Dell the CMA's Song Of The Year award (he actually played guitar on Rich's recording). In the latter half of the 70s, he tried to relaunch his singing career with Capricorn. He had a Top 10 country hit with 'Let's Shake Hands And Come Out Lovin'' in 1978 but 'Medicine Woman' in 1979 has so far proved to be his last country hit. He will always be remembered for, and was infinitely more successful with, his writing rather than his singing. Many artists have benefited by recording his songs, including Anthony Armstrong Jones ('I've Got Mine'), Tanya Tucker ('Lizzie And The Rainman'), both Billie Jo Spears (1977) and the Bellamy Brothers & Forrester Sisters (1986) ('Too Much Is Not Enough'), Dottie West ('When It's Just You And Me'), the Judds ('Mama He's Crazy') and many others.

● ALBUMS: Beautiful People (Vegas 1968)★★★, Kenny O'Dell (Capricorn 1973)★★★, Let's Shake Hands And Come Out Lovin' (Capricorn 1978)★★.

O'Donnell, Daniel

b. 12 December, 1961, Kincasslagh, Co. Donegal, Eire. O'Donnell is without doubt the biggest-selling act in history in the musical genre known as 'Country 'n' Irish'. He is a clean-cut and gimmick-free vocalist with leanings towards sentimental MOR material. He first emerged in Britain in 1985, although he was already popular in Ireland. His first attempts at singing came when he worked as a backing vocalist in the band that backed his sister, folk/country singer Margo O'Donnell (see Margo), during the early 80s, and his popularity among the female audiences increased at high speed. After a handful of early recordings (later released after he came to fame as 'The Boy From Donegal'), he signed to Michael Clerkin's Ritz Records, an Irish label based in London, and Two Sides Of Daniel O'Donnell was released in 1985. It was promoted by the first in a continuing series of nationwide UK tours that attracted capacity audiences (largely composed of fans of artists such as the late Jim Reeves - O'Donnell usually features in his stage show a medley of songs connected with Reeves). In 1986 came a second O'Donnell release, I Need You, which in March 1987 was his first to reach the UK country album charts. That year's album Don't Forget To Remember (featuring a cover version of the hit by the Bee Gees as its title track) was O'Donnell's first to enter the UK country chart at number 1, a feat he has repeated with his five subsequent original albums, although the next one to be released in chronological terms, The Boy From Donegal, consisted mainly of material recorded in 1984 before he signed to Ritz, and was released in the UK by Prism Leisure. In 1988, Ritz licensed O'Donnell's next release, From The Heart, to Telstar Records, a television marketing company, and as well as entering the UK country chart at number 1, the album also reached the UK pop album chart in the autumn of that year, while a video, Daniel O'Donnell Live In Concert, was released. 1989 brought Thoughts Of Home, an album and video that were both heavily advertised on television by Telstar - the album made the Top 40 of the pop chart and the video became O'Donnell's first to reach the UK Music Video chart; once again, all his subsequent video releases have featured in the latter chart, which the original Live In Concert also entered in the wake of Thoughts From Home. By 1990, O'Donnell was back with an album, Favourites, and a companion video, TV Show Favourites, which was composed of material filmed for a hugely successful Irish television series. However, of far greater interest in 1990 was the news that he was making an album in Nashville with noted producer Allen Reynolds (who had enjoyed major success with Don Williams, Crystal Gayle, Kathy Mattea and latterly, Garth Brooks) - the first since O'Donnell's breakthrough that he had recorded with his original producer John Ryan. Released in late 1990, The Last Waltz was somewhat closer to genuine country music than its predecessors, and once again entered the UK country album charts at the top and charted strongly in the UK pop equivalent. During 1991, it was decided that nearly all of O'Donnell's album catalogue was MOR rather than country, and at a stroke, the UK country album chart - in which O'Donnell usually occupied the majority of the Top 10 places - hardly featured his albums at all. This produced an avalanche of complaints (including one from a nun) and public demonstrations urging that the decision be reversed and his albums be reinstated in the country list, which eventually occurred in late 1991. Another release, The Very Best Of Daniel O'Donnell, a compilation composed partly of previously released items along with some newly recorded material, continued O'Donnell's remarkable success story. In musical terms, what O'Donnell records is unadventurous, yet his immense popularity in the UK and Eire makes it clear that his output has been brilliantly targeted. As yet, he has not released an album in the USA, although imported albums have sold prodigiously in areas with populations of Irish extraction, and several concert appearances, including one at New York's Carnegie Hall in 1991, have been commercial triumphs. Songs Of Inspiration and I Believe, his most recent albums, were lacklustre gospel collections.

● ALBUMS: Two Sides Of Daniel O'Donnell (Ritz 1985)★★★, I Need You (Ritz 1986)★★★, Don't Forget To Remember (Ritz 1987)★★★, The Boy From Donegal 1984 recording (Ritz 1987)★★★, From The Heart (Telstar 1988)★★★, Thoughts From Home (Telstar 1989)★★★, Favourites (Ritz 1990)★★★, The Last Waltz (Ritz 1990)★★★, Follow Your Dream (Ritz 1992)★★★, Especially For You (Ritz 1994)★★★, with Mary Duff Timeless (Ritz 1996)★★★, Songs Of Inspiration (Ritz 1996)★★, I Believe (Ritz 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Very Best Of Daniel O'Donnell (Ritz 1991)★★★★, Irish Collection (Ritz 1996)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live In Concert (Ritz 1988), Thoughts Of Home (Telstar Video 1989), TV Show Favourites (Ritz 1990), An Evening With Daniel O'Donnell (Ritz 1990), Follow Your Dream (Ritz 1992), And Friends Live (Ritz 1993), Just For You (Ritz 1994), Christmas With Daniel O'Donnell (Ritz 1996).

O'Farrill, Chico

b. Arturo O'Farrill, 28 October 1921, Havana, Cuba. After playing trumpet in several Cuban-based bands throughout the 40s, O'Farrill moved to the USA where he concentrated on arranging. During the 50s his work was played and recorded by Benny Goodman, Stan Kenton, Dizzy Gillespie among others and he also collaborated with Machito on albums featuring such leading American jazzmen as Charlie Parker and Joe 'Flip' Phillips. O'Farrill also toured and recorded with his own band. He spent the early 60s in Mexico, then returned to the USA taking up a staff post with CBS but retained his jazz links by arranging for Count Basie. In the 70s and 80s O'Farrill continued to be active but his jazz work gradually diminished. An outstanding exponent of Latin-American music, O'Farrill's arrangements consistently demonstrate his comprehensive grasp of the music's potential and are often far more imaginative than others who work in this field.

● ALBUMS: by Machito Afro-Cuban Jazz Suite (1950)★★★★, Chico O'Farrill And His Orchestra i (1951)★★★, Chico O'Farrill And His Orchestra ii (1952)★★★, Chico O'Farrill And His Orchestra iii (1952)★★★, Mambo Latin Dances (1953)★★★, Tropical Fever (1955)★★★, Torrid Zone (1955)★★★, Chico O'Farrill And His Orchestra iv (1966)★★★, Chico O'Farrill And His Orchestra v (1966)★★★, with Dizzy Gillespie, Machito Afro-Cuban Jazz Moods (1975)★★★★, Latin Roots (1976)★★★, Pure Emotion (Milestone 1995)★★★.

O'Flynn, Bridget

b. 1923, Berkely, California, USA. O'Flynn taught herself to play drums as a small child, eventually taking lessons while attending school. Fighting against the automatic resistance towards women in jazz, especially as a drummer, she eventually joined an all-female band, led by Sally Banning. This was in 1939 and she later played in an otherwise all-male band co-led by Sally and George Banning. O'Flynn then formed her own all-male big band, which she led until the USA's entry into World War II. After the war, and by that time based in New York, she played in various clubs, eventually becoming a member of a trio led by Mary Lou Williams that also included June Rotenberg. In the mid-50s O'Flynn became progressively more discouraged with the entrenched attitudes that militated against her as a woman in jazz, and also when racism affected the mixed-race bands with whom she sometimes worked. Early in the following decade, she quit the business. In the early 80s, however, she reportedly told Sally Placksin that she was tempted to return. A fine, supportive drummer with a fine ear for those she is accompanying, O'Flynn always preferred brushes, providing a discreet and subtle rhythmic underpinning to the bands in which she worked.

● COMPILATIONS: included on Café Society (Onyx 1948)★★★.

O'Flynn, Liam

b. Kill, County Kildare, Eire. O'Flynn, a uillean piper, is acclaimed as being one of the most influential pipers on the Irish music scene. His father, like Liam a schoolteacher, had also been a fiddle player, and Liam was brought up into a world rich in folk tradition. He first came into contact with the uillean pipes through family friend Sergeant Tom Armstrong of the Garda in Co. Kildare. During the 60s, O'Flynn won prizes at the Orieachtas Festival and the Fleadh Ceoil, but it was not until helping to found the influential Irish group Planxty in 1972 that his name came to wider prominence. His recordings with the group became definitive documents in the evolution of contemporary Irish music without breaking with its heritage, a lineage to which O'Flynn's eloquent musicianship was central. Later O'Flynn and classical guitarist John Williams performed the Brendan Voyage Suite at the Royal Festival Hall in London, as part of the South Bank Festival. The piece was written, with specific parts for the uillean pipes, by Shaun Davey after being jointly impressed by Tim Severin's travelogue of the same title and O'Flynn's work with Planxty. It led to other similar orchestral commissions from Davey including Granuaille and the Siege Of Derry. O'Flynn has subsequently worked with other well-known names, such as John Cage, Gary Moore and Kate Bush. The film Cal featured his piping on the soundtrack score by Mark Knopfler, and he also featured on another modern Irish film classic, The Field. In the 90s O'Flynn released his first solo album, increasing his profile with a series of concerts and television and radio appearances. In 1993 he reunited with former touring partners Sean Keane and Matt Molloy for The Fire Aflame, a formidable collaboration covering solo as well as ensemble pieces and even poetry. 1995's The Given Note, another exemplary piping collection using sources such as Paul Brady and Andy Irvine, featured a sleeve note from Nobel prizewinner Seamus Heaney, from whose poem the title was taken.

● ALBUMS: David Balfour film soundtrack (1978)★★, with Sean Davey The Brendan Voyage (Tara 1980)★★★, Liam O'Flynn (Tara 1989)★★★, The Fine Art Of Piping (Tara 1992)★★★, with Sean Keane, Matt Molloy The Fire Aflame (Claddagh 1993)★★★, The Given Note (Tara 1995)★★★★.

O'Gwynn, James

b. James Leroy O'Gwynn, 26 January 1928, Winchester, Mississippi, USA. He grew up on a farm in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, and was taught to play guitar by his mother. After completing his education, he spent four years in the US Marines, during which time, greatly influenced by the music of Hank Williams and Jimmie Rodgers, he decided to seek a singing career. In 1954, he became a cast member of Bif Collie's Houston Jamboree, which at the time also included George Jones. In 1956, he made his first recordings for Starday and also relocated to Shreveport to join the Louisiana Hayride. He gained his first chart entries in 1958, with two self-penned numbers on the D label, 'Talk To Me Lonesome Heart' (a number 16) and 'Blue Memories' (a number 28). In 1959, he moved to Mercury Records and, working under producer Shelby Singleton, he achieved further hits in 1959 with two co-written numbers, 'How Can I Think Of Tomorrow' and 'Easy Money'. He left the Hayride, moved to Nashville in 1961, and regularly played on the Grand Ole Opry until 1963. In 1961, he charted with 'House Of Blue Lovers' and in 1962, he gained his final chart entry 'My Name Is Mud', which peaked at number 7. During the 60s, he made further recordings for United Artists Records, Hickory and Stop and, in 1971, for Plantation, where he renewed his association with Singleton but achieved no major successes. O'Gwynn, known affectionately as the Smiling Irishman Of Country Music, finally retired to Dardanelle, Arkansas, where, apart from some casual appearances locally, he tended to withdraw from the music scene. In the 80s, his fan club was still active and Cattle Records of Germany issued three albums of recordings - some made for various labels and some live Hayride appearances.

● ALBUMS: Heartaches And Memories (Mercury/Wing 1964)★★★, Country Dance Time (Plantation 1978)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of James O'Gwynn (Mercury 1962)★★★★, James O'Gwynn's Greatest Hits (Plantation 1971)★★★★, Star Of The Louisiana Hayride Volumes 1 & 2 German release, 50s recordings (Cattle 1982)★★★, The Louisiana Hayride Presents James O'Gwynn (Cattle 1985)★★★.

O'Hara, Jamie

b. 8 August 1950, Toledo, Ohio, USA. The 90s country singer Jamie O'Hara had already enjoyed a certain amount of success with the O'Kanes with Kieran Kane when the duo split up in 1989. Prior to that he had been a halfback footballer, but had to retire following a knee injury. He went to Nashville and became a writer for Tree Publishing. O'Hara wrote 'Wandering Eyes' and 'Older Women' for Ronnie McDowell and 'For Reasons I've Forgotten' for Trisha Yearwood. His own version is included on Rise Above It, which was produced by Garth Fundis. It also includes '50,000 Names', a song about the wall in Washington listing those who died in Vietnam. O'Hara wrote five songs on Shelby Lynne's Temptation.

● ALBUMS: Rise Above It (RCA 1994)★★★.

O'Hare, Husk

Formed in Chicago, Illinois, USA, in the mid-20s, Husk O'Hare's Orchestra included sidemen Jimmy McPartland, Bud Freeman, Jimmy Lannigan, Frank Teschemacher, Floyd O'Brien, Dave North, Arnold Sweatman, Harry O'Connor, Franklyn Marsh and, at one time, Bix Beiderbecke. Unlike other dance bands of the period, O'Hare rarely played engagements at hotels or ballrooms, preferring instead to exist as a studio band, recording for Gennett and Decca Records, and performing extensively on radio. His first band was a small combo entitled the Blue Friars. He renamed them O'Hare's Red Dragons then Husk O'Hare's Wolverines. Occasional dates were played in Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Atlantic City, where O'Hare's radio profile ensured strong box office trade. The orchestra remained a staple of radio schedules throughout the late 20s and 30s, before their leader retired to run a manufacturing business in Chicago.

O'Jays

The core of this long-standing soul group, Eddie Levert (b. 16 June 1942) and Walter Williams (b. 25 August 1942) sang together as a gospel duo prior to forming the Triumphs in 1958. This doo-wop-influenced quintet was completed by William Powell, Bill Isles and Bobby Massey and quickly grew popular around its home-town of Canton, Ohio, USA. The same line-up then recorded as the Mascots before taking the name the O'Jays after Cleveland disc jockey Eddie O'Jay, who had given them considerable help and advice. Having signed to Imperial Records in 1963, the O'Jays secured their first hit with 'Lonely Drifter', which was followed by an imaginative reworking of Benny Spellman's 'Lipstick Traces' (1965) and 'Stand In For Love' (1966). Despite gaining their first R&B Top 10 entry with 'I'll Be Sweeter Tomorrow (Than I Was Today)' (1967), the group found it difficult to maintain a consistent profile, and were reduced to a four-piece following Isles' departure. However, they were in demand as session singers, backing artists including Nat 'King' Cole and the Ronettes. In 1968 the group met producers (Kenny) Gamble And (Leon) Huff with whom they recorded, unsuccessfully, on the duo's short-lived Neptune label. The line-up was reduced further in 1972 when Bobby Massey left. Paradoxically, the O'Jays then began their most fertile period when Gamble And Huff signed them to Philadelphia International Records. The vibrant 'Back Stabbers', a US Top 3 hit, established the group's style, but the preachy 'Love Train', with its plea for world harmony, introduced the protest lyrics that would be a feature of their later releases 'Put Your Hands Together' (1973) and 'For The Love Of Money' (1974). Back Stabbers, meanwhile, rapidly achieved classic status and is regarded by many as Gamble And Huff's outstanding work. In 1975 Sammy Strain joined the line-up from Little Anthony And The Imperials when ill health forced William Powell to retire from live performances. This founder-member continued to record with the group until his death on 25 April 1976. 'Message In Our Music' (1976) and 'Use Ta Be My Girl' (1977) confirmed the O'Jays' continued popularity as they survived Philly soul's changing fortunes, with So Full Of Love (1978) achieving platinum sales. However, as the genre felt the ravages of fashion so the group also suffered. The early 80s were commercially fallow, until Love Fever (1985) restated their direction with its blend of funk and rap. Two years later, the O'Jays were unexpectedly back at the top of the soul chart with 'Lovin' You', confirming their status as one of soul music's most durable groups. The commercial resurrection was due in no small part to their renewed relationship with Gamble And Huff. Their output in the 90s has failed to equal the success of their 70s releases, although Eddie's son, Gerald Levert, both as a member of Levert and solo, has kept the family name alive. In 1995 Eddie, who had previously appeared alongside his son on several occasions, recorded an album of duets with Gerald for release as Father And Son. He is also the spokesperson for the social/business collective 100 Black Men, reaffirming the O'Jays' long-standing commitment to social change. Love You To Tears was their best album in many years, probably because it echoed the lush romantic sound of their heyday with Gamble And Huff in the early 70s.

● ALBUMS: Comin' Through (Imperial 1965)★★★, Soul Sounds (Imperial 1967)★★★, O'Jays (Minit 1967)★★★, Full Of Soul (Minit 1968)★★★, Back On Top (Bell 1968)★★★, The O'Jays In Philadelphia (Neptune 1969)★★★, Back Stabbers (Philadelphia International 1972)★★★★, Ship Ahoy (Philadelphia International 1973)★★★★, The O'Jays Live In London (Philadelphia International 1974)★★, Survival (Philadelphia International 1975)★★★, Family Reunion (Philadelphia International 1975)★★, with the Moments The O'Jays Meet The Moments (Philadelphia International 1975)★★★, Message In The Music (Philadelphia International 1976)★★★, Travelin' At The Speed Of Thought (Philadelphia International 1977)★★, So Full Of Love (Philadelphia International 1978)★★★, Identify Yourself (Philadelphia International 1979)★★★, The Year 2000 (TSOP 1980)★★, Peace (Phoenix 1981)★★, My Favourite Person (Philadelphia International 1982)★★, When Will I See You Again (Epic 1983)★★, Love And More (Philadelphia International 1984)★★★, Love Fever (Philadelphia International 1985)★★★, Close Company (Philadelphia International 1985)★★★, Let Me Touch You (EMI Manhattan 1987)★★★, Serious (EMI 1989)★★, Emotionally Yours (EMI 1991)★★, Heartbreaker (EMI 1993)★★, Love You To Tears (Global Soul/BMG 1997)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Collectors' Items: Greatest Hits (Philadelphia International 1977)★★★, Greatest Hits (Philadelphia International 1984)★★★★, From The Beginning (Chess 1984)★★★, Working On Your Case (Stateside 1985)★★★, Reflections In Gold 1973-1982 (Charly 1988)★★★, Love Train: The Best Of ... (Columbia/Legacy 1995)★★★★, The Classic Philadelphia Years (Music Club 1998)★★★.

O'Kanes

Jamie O'Hara (b. 8 August 1950, Toledo, Ohio, USA) planned to be a professional American footballer until knee injuries forced him to change his mind. He says, 'My father gave me a guitar as a gift. Two years later, I was in Nashville. That either shows a lot of confidence, a lot of arrogance or a lot of stupidity.' He wrote 'Grandpa (Tell Me 'Bout The Good Old Days)' for the Judds and befriended another songwriter, Kieran Kane. Kane (b. 7 October 1949, Queens, New York, USA) had worked with rock acts in Los Angeles in the early 70s and then moved to Nashville. He wrote 'Gonna Have A Party' for Alabama. O'Hara and Kane became friends, sharing their frustration at not having songs recorded, and they began collaborating on material. They recorded demos in Kane's attic studio, which Columbia Records considered good enough to release on their own account. The acoustic recordings (two guitars, bass, fiddle, mandolin, accordion, drums) made a stunning album debut in 1987. Their harmonies were reminiscent of a mellow version of the Louvin Brothers. They made the US country Top 10 with their first single, 'Oh Darlin' (Why Don't You Care For Me No More)', and then topped the chart with 'Can't Stop My Heart From Loving You'. Although their album was quiet and low-key, their rousing shows won them further acclaim. They were among the 'new traditionalists' in country music, but they stopped performing when Columbia failed to renew their recording contract. Their final chart entry was 'Rocky Road' from Tired Of The Runnin'. Following the recording of a third album, Kane and O'Hara split up and concentrated on solo careers.

● ALBUMS: The O'Kanes (Columbia 1987)★★★, Tired Of The Runnin' (Columbia 1988)★★★, Imagine That (Columbia 1990)★★.

O'Keefe, Danny

b. 1943, Wenatchee, Washington, USA. O'Keefe developed his blues-influenced songwriting in Minnesota and New York before recording 'That Old Sweet Song' for the Seattle-based Jerden label. An album of O'Keefe's demos were also released by the Panorama label in 1966. He next performed with the band Calliope, making one album for Buddah before a tape of his best-known song, 'Good Time Charlie's Got the Blues' (subsequently covered by Elvis Presley and many other artists), persuaded Ahmet Ertegun to sign him to Atlantic's Cotillion subsidiary. His second album was produced by Arif Mardin and included the reflective 'The Road', which was later taken up by Jackson Browne, while 'Magdalena' and 'Angel Spread Your Wings' from Breezy Stories were covered by Leo Sayer and Judy Collins, respectively. During the mid-70s, O'Keefe played benefit concerts for conservation causes and in 1977 changed labels to Warner Brothers Records. Although critically acclaimed, his two albums for the company failed to sell and he performed only occasionally in the early 80s. O'Keefe set up his own label, Coldwater, to issue The Day To Day in 1985. He has since concentrated on songwriting.

● ALBUMS: Introducing Danny O'Keefe (Panorama 1966), Danny O'Keefe (Cotillion 1970)★★★, O'Keefe (Signpost 1972)★★★, Breezy Stories (Atlantic 1973)★★★, So Long Harry Truman (Atlantic 1975)★★★, American Roulette (Warners 1977)★★, Global Blues (Warners 1979)★★★, The Day To Day (Coldwater 1985)★★.

O'Keefe, Johnny

b. 19 January 1935, Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, d. 6 October 1978. If one person were to claim the title 'Australian Legend' Johnny O'Keefe would be the one to assume the mantle; his personal success and contribution to the fledgling Australian rock industry can never be overstated. He single-handedly persuaded promoters to stage rock concerts, pioneered rock on television and toured the length and breadth of the country. Prior to his efforts, rock was virtually unknown in Australia. After the film Rock Around The Clock was shown in Australia, Johnny O'Keefe took up the cause and organized a rock band, the Dee Jays, in early 1957, recruiting jazz players. Once he had demonstrated that teenagers were prepared to attend his dances, other promoters followed suit. Johnny O'Keefe, with his precociousness, bluffed his way onto national television and once he had achieved notoriety, was asked to host his own show, Six O'Clock Rock, on national television in 1959. O'Keefe used this show to foster the talent and careers of many other Australian acts. His recording career is easily the most extensive of any Australian rock/pop performer with 63 singles, 53 EPs and 66 albums released, since the first single of mid-1957. His career was initially based on covers of international hits, but eventually he wrote and co-wrote his own songs or recorded other local writers' material, thus promoting fellow artists. His career established in Australia, O'Keefe went to the USA in 1959 where he was known as the 'Kangaroo Kid', but despite a contract with Liberty Records he was unable to make any impact.

His career faltered in mid-1960 after a car accident. He now suffered bouts of ill health and several nervous breakdowns, but his records continued to chart, until the arrival of Beatlemania. O'Keefe publicly denounced the 'long-haired' acts and lost most of his teenage following to the new trend. He then concentrated on the club and dance circuit, but seemed to fade almost into obscurity. A re-release of an earlier song in 1969 saw him in the charts for the first time in three years but another three-year hiatus followed before another re-release of an earlier song entered the charts. O'Keefe now concentrated on occasional tours as part of a rock 'n' roll revival show and devoted time to his management company. Following his death in 1978, his record sales noticeably increased.

● ALBUMS: Shout (1959)★★★, Lee Gordon Presents The Big Show (1960)★★★, I'm Still Alive (1961)★★★★, Oldies, But Goodies (1962)★★★★, Twist (1963)★★★, Come On (1963)★★★★, About Love (1963)★★★★, Shake Baby Shake (1964)★★★, J. O'K Sound (1964)★★★, The J. O'K Story (1964)★★★, The Sun's Gonna Shine Tomorrow (1965)★★★★, J. O'K's Ballads (1966)★★★, Where The Action Is (1966)★★★, My Heart Belongs To You (1967)★★★, She's My Baby (1969)★★★, Johnny B Goode (1973)★★★, The Wild One Rocks Again (1973)★★, J. O'Keefe Live (1974)★★, King Of Rock (1975)★★★, The Last Concert (1988)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Wild One's King Size Hits (1962)★★★★, The Best Of Johnny O'Keefe (1964)★★★★, Collector's Items From The 50s (1969)★★★★, The Great J. O'K (1970)★★★★, The Legend Of J. O'K (1978)★★★, A Tribute To J. O'Keefe (1978)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: The A To Z Of J. O'K: A Pictorial Discography Of Johnny O'Keefe, D. Hudson and B. Ross.

O'Neal, Alexander

b. 14 November 1953, Natchez, Mississippi, USA. O'Neal was one of the best-known soul crooners of the late 80s. In 1978, he joined Flyte Tyme with future producers Jimmy Jam And Terry Lewis. The group became the backing band for Prince, although O'Neal was soon dismissed for insubordination. During the early 80s he began a solo career as a vocalist, making his first recordings with Jam and Lewis producing in 1984. The resulting album was issued by the local Tabu label, and contained R&B hits with 'A Broken Heart Could Mend', 'Innocent' (a duet with Cherrelle) and 'If You Were Here Tonight'. The latter reached the UK Top 20 in 1986, after Cherrelle's 'Saturday Love' (which featured O'Neal) had been an even bigger success there. His career was interrupted by treatment for drug and alcohol addiction, but O'Neal broke through to the mainstream US audience in 1987-88 with his second album and the singles 'Fake' and 'Never Knew Love Like This', another collaboration with Cherrelle. He remained very popular in the UK with live performances (including a Prince's Trust concert) and a BBC Television special. When, in 1991, he released his first album of new material for three years, it went straight into the UK Top 10. Jam and Lewis were again the producers.

● ALBUMS: Alexander O'Neal (Tabu 1985)★★★, Hearsay (Tabu 1987)★★★★, My Gift To You (Tabu 1988)★★★, All Mixed Up (Tabu 1989)★★★, All True Man (Tabu 1991)★★★★, Love Makes No Sense (Tabu 1993)★★★, Lovers Again (One World/EMI Premier 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: This Thing Called Love, The Greatest Hits (Tabu 1992)★★★★.

O'Neal, Shaquille

b. *c.*1971, Newark, New Jersey, USA. O'Neal is the star of the previously obscure Orlando Magic basketball team ('Rookie Of The Year' in 1992). After the media picked up on his demonstrative play, notably his cult slam-dunk action, he emerged as a major multi-media star of the early 90s - so much so that a record contract was just around the corner, and the format was hip-hop. His generally sport-related raps such as '(I Know I Got) Skillz' and 'Shoot Pass Slam' kept the cash-tills rattling, the latter song being the soundtrack to the Reebok commercials of which he was the high-profile star. He did possess some history in the hip-hop idiom, having previously been a breakdancer in Newark until his size made the activity impossible/ludicrous. Later he moved to Germany where his father, Sgt Phillip Harrison, took a post. He relocated to San Francisco to attend high school, playing for 68-1, who won the state championship. From there he was picked up by Louisiana State University coach Dale Brown, from where he joined Orlando. Basketball and music are by no means his only interests. In February 1994 he appeared in his first film, Blue Chips, with Nick Nolte. Incredibly, he had already penned his own autobiography, at the age of 21. His recording career was recovering from critical reaction to his long-playing debut, which featured over-familiar Gap Band breakbeats funnelled through maestros like Erick Sermon (EPMD), Def Jef, Ali Shaheed (A Tribe Called Quest) and Fu-Schnickens. The final set was delivered for the approval of no lesser men than Scarface, Big Daddy Kane and Ice Cube.

● ALBUMS: Shaq Diesel (Jive 1993)★★★, You Can't Stop The Reign (MCA 1996)★★★.

O'Neill, Sharon

b. 23 November 1952, New Zealand. O'Neill was an established singer-songwriter in New Zealand where she won several 'Queen of Pop' awards, before relocating to Australia in 1980. Unlike other singer-songwriters her material was piano-based rather than guitar, but her music always involved a band. Her early albums quickly became popular with the public, culminating in platinum awards for Maybe and Foreign Affairs, plus several hit singles. Subsequent albums were not so successful and a dispute with her record company, CBS, kept her unrecorded between 1984 and 1986. A new contract with Polygram saw the release of Dance In The Fire in 1987. This album garnered good reviews and radio support but generated poor sales.

● ALBUMS: This Heart, This Song (1977)★★★★, Smash Palace Soundtrack (1980)★★, Words (1980)★★, Maybe (1981)★★★★, Foreign Affairs (1983)★★★★, Danced In The Fire (1987)★★★.

O'Rahilly, Ronan

The inspirational figure behind UK pirate radio's classic era, O'Rahilly initially worked as a song plugger for the renowned Rik Gunnell Agency. When the BBC refused to entertain a Georgie Fame release he was touting, Ronan looked to Radio Veronica, a pirate radio ship anchored off the Dutch coast, and hatched plans for his own similar operation. He secured the requisite backing to purchase and refit the Frederica, a Danish passenger ferry, which began broadcasting as Radio Caroline on 28 March 1964. The station's name was taken from the daughter of the late US President, John F. Kennedy. Within four months O'Rahilly had absorbed an early rival, Radio Atlanta, into his organization. The original ship was relocated off the Isle of Man while the new acquisition, the Mi Amigo, was anchored off the east coast of England as Caroline South. Several more stations followed in the wake of Ronan's vision, including Radio London and Radio City. Much of station's freewheeling style was curbed when the idealistic O'Rahilly went into partnership with the businessman Phil Solomon. Although beloved by loyal audiences, the 1967 Marine Offenses Bill came into effect on 15 August 1967, effectively closing the pirates' heyday. O'Rahilly was the only proprietor to defy the law and the Mi Amigo continued broadcasting, albeit intermittently, until 1973, when the entrepreneur leased the ship to the Radio Veronica consortium. Ronan's pursuit of alternative careers also included a role as executive producer on the Marianne Faithfull film, Girl On A Motor Cycle, and an unfulfilled plan to operate a pirate television service.

O'Shea, Tessie

b. 13 March 1914, Cardiff, Wales, d. 21 April 1995, Leesburg, Florida, USA. A warm, ebullient, and immensely endearing entertainer, 'Two Ton Tessie', as she was billed, was taken to watch variety acts perform at Cardiff Empire when she was only four years old. She later won talent contests for her singing and dancing, and when she was 12, made her solo stage debut at the Bristol Hippodrome. This was followed by an engagement at the Chiswick Empire, and further variety circuit bookings. Always conscious of her more than ample girth - she eventually reached 17 stones in weight - Tessie dressed initially in comic clothes - elastic-sided boots, striped stockings and over-large hats. In the early days she based her act on the legendary Lily Morris, and belted out numbers such as 'Josh-u-ah', 'Don't Have Any More, Missus Moore', 'Hold Your Hand Out, Naughty Boy', and 'Why Am I Always The Bridesmaid, Never The Blushing Bride'. By the late 30s she was a star, regularly playing summer seasons in Blackpool, and topping bills throughout the land, accompanying herself on the banjulele while singing songs such as 'I Met Him By The Withered Weeping Willows', 'Nobody Loves A (Fat) Fairy When She's Forty', and, as war broke out, 'I Fell In Love With An Airman Who Had Big Blue Eyes, But I'm Nobody's Sweetheart Now'. During World War II she toured with ENSA, and in 1942 appeared with Leslie Hutchinson, Cecil Frederick, Robby Vincent, and Harry Korris in Robert Nesbitt's revue, Happidrome, at the Prince of Wales theatre. In 1944 she topped the bill at the London Palladium with Max Miller, and, two years later, was back at the Palladium starring with Nat Jackley, Jimmy Jewel and Ben Warriss in another Nesbitt production, High Time. In this show, Tessie made her entrance atop an elephant which became pregnant during the run and threw the star off, necessitating a three-month period of recuperation. However, she was fit enough by November 1946 to take part in the Royal Variety Performance of that year. In 1949, she toured with another of Britain's favourite 'characters', bandleader Billy Cotton, and their lively musical revue Tess And Bill was also resident at London's Victoria Palace for a season. During the 50s, as the advent of television gradually closed most of the variety theatres, Tessie continued to work in summer shows and cabaret, and on radio, as well as appearing in provincial productions of plays such as Sailor Beware, and Peter Ustinov's Romanoff And Juliet. On 8 December 1963, she opened on Broadway in Noël Coward's The Girl Who Came To Supper, a musical adaptation of Terence Rattigan's play The Sleeping Prince. She was an enormous success as the splendid cockney fish-and-chips seller, Ada Cockle, and stopped the show every night with her exuberant rendition of 'London' ('is a little bit of all-right/nobody can deny that's true'). She won the Tony Award for Supporting/Featured Actress, and returned to New York in 1966 (complete with Welsh accent) with another musical, A Time For Singing, based on Richard Llewellyn's How Green Was My Valley. She became the toast of Broadway, guested on all the US television chat shows, and played the Nurse in a New Orleans Repertory Theatre presentation of Shakespeare's Romeo And Juliet. She also won an Emmy for her part in a television version of Dr. Jekyll And Mr. Hyde. She was back in Britain in 1970 at the Blackpool Opera House with comedian Ken Dodd, and also shone in the television comedy As Good Cooks Go. In later years, domiciled in the USA, she had a cameo role in the Walt Disney movie Bedknobs And Broomsticks and starred in a Las Vegas revue. She still continued to return to Britain occasionally, reminding audiences there of her position as a unique entertainer.

● ALBUMS: Cheers (60s)★★.

● FILMS: The Way Ahead (1944), London Town (1946), Holidays With Pay (1948), Somewhere In Politics (1949), The Blue Lamp (1950), The Shiralee (1957), The Russians Are Coming, The Russians Are Coming (1966), The Best House In London (1968), Bedknobs And Broomsticks (1971).

O'Sullivan, Gilbert

b. Raymond O'Sullivan, 1 December 1946, Waterford, Eire. O'Sullivan's family moved to Swindon, England, during his childhood and after attending art college there, the singer was signed to CBS Records. Under the name Gilbert he issued the unsuccessful 'What Can I Do?' and soon moved on to Phil Solomon's Major Minor label, where 'Mr Moody's Garden' also failed. Seeking a new manager, Gilbert wrote to the starmaking Gordon Mills, who had already launched Tom Jones and Engelbert Humperdinck to international success. Mills was impressed by the demo tape enclosed and relaunched the artist on his new MAM label under the name Gilbert O'Sullivan. The debut 'Nothing Rhymed' had some clever lyrics and a strong melody. It reached the UK Top 10 in late 1970 and television audiences were amused or puzzled by the sight of O'Sullivan with his pudding-basin haircut, short trousers and flat cap. The 'Bisto Kid' image was retained for the first few releases and the singer initially acted the part of an anti-star. At one point, he was living in the grounds of Mills' Weybridge house on a meagre £10-a-week allowance. His hit-making potential was undeniable and his ability to pen a memorable melody recalled the urbane charm of Paul McCartney. Early UK successes included 'We Will', 'No Matter How I Try' and 'Alone Again (Naturally)'. Any suspicions that O'Sullivan's charm was largely parochial were dashed when the latter single broke through in America, peaking at number 1 and selling over a million copies. The debut album, Himself, was also highly accomplished and included the radio favourite 'Matrimony', which would have provided a sizeable hit if released as a single. O'Sullivan went on to become one of the biggest-selling artists of 1972. That year he enjoyed two consecutive UK number 1s with 'Clair' (written in honour of Mills's daughter) and 'Get Down'. These singles also reached the US Top 10. By this time, O'Sullivan's image had radically changed and he began to appreciate the superstar trappings enjoyed by Mills' other acts.

O'Sullivan's second album, Back To Front, reached number 1 in the UK and his appeal stretched across the board, embracing teen and adult audiences. For a time, he seemed likely to rival and even surpass Elton John as Britain's most successful singer-songwriter export. Although further hits were forthcoming with 'Ooh Baby', 'Happiness Is Me And You' and 'Christmas Song', it was evident that his appeal had declined by the mid-70s. Following the UK Top 20 hit 'I Don't Love You But I Think I Like You' in the summer of 1975, his chart career ceased. After a spectacular quarrel with Mills, he left MAM and returned to CBS, the label that had launched his career. Five years on, only one hit, 'What's In A Kiss?', emerged from the association. Minus Mills, it seemed that the superstar of the mid-70s was incapable of rekindling his once illustrious career. His disillusionment culminated in a High Court battle against his former manager and record company which came before Justice Mars Jones in the spring of 1982. The judge not only awarded O'Sullivan substantial damages and had all agreements with MAM set aside, but decreed that all the singer's master tapes and copyrights should be returned. The case made legal history and had enormous repercussions for the British music publishing world. Despite his court victory over the starmaking Mills, however, O'Sullivan has so far failed to re-establish his career as a major artist. A series of albums have appeared on the Park label and Sullivan now caters for a small but loyal following.

● ALBUMS: Himself (MAM 1971)★★★, Back To Front (MAM 1973)★★★★, I'm A Writer Not A Fighter (MAM 1973)★★★, Stranger In My Own Backyard (MAM 1974)★★, Southpaw (1977)★★, Off Centre (Columbia 1980)★★, Life And Rhymes (Columbia 1982)★★, Frobisher Drive (1988)★★, In The Key Of G (Chrysalis 1989)★★, Sounds Of The Loop (Park 1992)★★, Live In Japan 1993 (Park 1993)★★, By Larry (Park 1994)★★, Every Song Has Its Play (Park 1995)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (MAM 1976)★★★, 20 Golden Greats (K-Tel 1981)★★, 20 Of The Very Best (Hallmark 1981)★★, 20 Golden Pieces Of Gilbert O' Sullivan (Bulldog 1985)★★, 16 Golden Classics (1986)★★, Greatest Hits (Big Time 1988)★★★.

Oak Ridge Boys

Originally called the Country Cut-Ups, the Oak Ridge Boys were formed in 1942 in Knoxville, Tennessee. They often performed at the atomic energy plant in Oak Ridge, where, in the midst of a war, their optimistic gospel songs were welcomed, and hence they were renamed the Oak Ridge Quartet. They recorded their first records in 1947 and there were many changes in personnel, although Wally Fowler (b. *c.*1916, d. 3 June 1994, Tennessee, USA) remained its leader. The group disbanded in 1956, only to emerge as the New Oak Ridge Quartet with a new leader, Smitty Gatlin. Handled by Fowler, they recorded their first records in 1947, moving their base to Nashville, but disbanded in 1956. A year later, they re-formed in a revised line-up organized by an original member, Smitty Gatlin. They became full-time professionals in 1961 and the album on which they changed from the Oak Ridge Quartet to the Oak Ridge Boys included strings and horns, an unusual move for a gospel group. William Lee Golden (b. 12 January 1939, near Brewton, Alabama, USA), who had admired the group since he saw them as an adolescent, became their baritone in 1964. When Gatlin decided to become a full-time minister, Golden recommended Duane David Allen (b. 29 April 1943, Taylortown, USA), who became the group's lead vocalist in 1966. They established themselves as the best-loved white gospel group in the USA and won numerous awards and Grammys. Further changes came in 1972 with bass singer Richard Anthony Sterban (b. 24 April 1943, Camden, New Jersey, USA) and in 1973 with tenor Joseph Sloan Bonsall (b. 18 May 1948, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA) becoming part of the group. Although most gospel fans enjoyed their high-energy, criss-crossing performances, they were criticized for adding a rock 'n' roll drummer to their band. They recorded a single, 'Praise The Lord And Pass The Soup', with Johnny Cash and the Carter Family in 1973. In 1975, they switched to country music, but their first secular single, 'Family Reunion', only reached number 83 in the US country charts. Their total income fell to $75,000 in 1975 and they made a loss in 1976. Columbia Records dropped them, ironically at the same time as they were accompanying their labelmate, Paul Simon, on 'Slip Slidin' Away', which featured sentiments diametrically opposite to gospel music. They opened for Johnny Cash in Las Vegas, played the USSR with Roy Clark, and had a major country hit with 'Y'All Come Back Saloon'. They topped the US country charts with 'I'll Be True To You' (a death disc), the classic 'Leavin' Louisiana In The Broad Daylight' and 'Trying To Love Two Women'. In 1981 they made number 5 on the US pop charts with 'Elvira' and followed it with 'Bobbie Sue' (number 12). Ronald Reagan, in a presidential address, said: 'If the Oak Ridge Boys win any more gold, they'll have more gold in their records than we have in Fort Knox.' Further country hits followed with 'American Made', 'Love Song', 'I Guess It Never Hurts To Hurt Sometime' (written by Randy Vanwarmer), 'Make My Life With You' and 'Come On In (You Did The Best You Could)'. In award ceremonies, they ousted the Statler Brothers as the top country vocal group, and their band has won awards in its own right. Golden, who stopped cutting his hair in 1979, became a mountain man, going bear hunting and sleeping in a teepee. When he was dismissed in 1986 for 'continuing musical and personal differences', he filed a $40 million suit, which was settled out of court. He released a solo album, American Vagabond, also in 1986, and has since formed a family group called the Goldens. His replacement was their rhythm guitarist, Steve Sanders (b. 17 September 1941, Richmond, Georgia, USA; d. 10 June 1998, Florida, USA), formerly a child gospel performer and Faye Dunaway's son in the film Hurry Sundown. The Oak Ridge Boys continue with their philosophy to 'Keep it happy, keep it exciting', and do nothing that might tarnish their image. They turn down beer commercials and only sing positive songs. To quote Joe Bonsall, 'We're just an old gospel group with a rock 'n' roll band playing country music.' In 1996 Golden returned to the band when they signed to A&M Records. Sanders shot himself in June 1998.

- ALBUMS: The Oak Ridge Boys Quartet (Cadence 1959)★★★, Wally Fowler's All Nite Singing Gospel Concert Featuring The Oak Ridge Quartet (1960)★★, The Oak Ridge Boys With The Sounds Of Nashville (Warners 1962)★★★, Folk Minded Spirituals For Spiritual Minded Folk (Warners 1962)★★★, The Oak Ridge Quartet In Concert (Cumberland 1963)★★, The Oak Ridge Boys Sing For You (Skylite 1964)★★★, The Oak Ridge Quartet Sing And Shout (Skylite 1964)★★★, I Wouldn't Take Nothing For My Journey Now (Skylite 1965)★★★, At Their Best (United Artists 1966)★★★★, Solid Gospel Sound Of The Oak Ridge Quartet (Skylite 1966)★★★, with the Harvesters Together (Canaan 1966)★★★, The Oak Ridge Quartet Sings River Of Love (Skylite 1967)★★★, International (Heartwarming 1971)★★★, The Light (Heartwarming 1972)★★★, Hymns (1973)★★★, Street Gospel (1973)★★★, The Oak Ridge Boys (Columbia 1974)★★★, Super Gospel - Four Sides Of Gospel Excitement Heartwarming (1974)★★, Sky High (Columbia 1975)★★★, Old Fashioned, Down Home, Handclappin' Footstompin', Southern Style, Gospel Quartet Music (Columbia 1976)★★★, Y'All Come Back Saloon (ABC 1977)★★★, Live (ABC 1977)★★, Room Service (ABC 1978)★★★, The Oak Ridge Boys Have Arrived (1979)★★★, Together (MCA 1980)★★★, Fancy Free (MCA 1981)★★★, Bobbie Sue (MCA 1982)★★★, Christmas (MCA 1982)★★, American Made (MCA 1983)★★★, The Oak Ridge Boys Deliver (MCA 1983)★★★, Friendship (MCA 1983)★★★, Seasons (MCA 1985)★★★, Step On Out (MCA 1985)★★★, Where The Fast Lane Ends (MCA 1986)★★, Christmas Again (MCA 1986)★★, Monongahela (MCA 1987)★★, New Horizons (MCA 1988)★★★, American Dreams (MCA 1989)★★★, Unstoppable (MCA 1991)★★★, The Long Haul (MCA 1992)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Sensational Oak Ridge Boys From Nashville, Tennessee (Starday 1965)★★★, Greatest Hits, Vol. 1 (MCA 1980)★★★★, Greatest Hits, Vol. 2 (MCA 1984)★★★, Greatest Hits, Vol. 3 (MCA 1989)★★★, The Collection (MCA 1992)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: The Oak Ridge Boys - Our Story, with Ellis Winder and Walter Carter.

Oakenfold, Paul

Oakenfold was active in club promotions from the early 80s and became one of the most successful DJs and remixers of the 90s. Having trained as a chef he decided to pursue a career in music after he had been introduced to the decks by his friend Trevor Fung in 1981. He later moved to New York where he worked for a number of record companies and regularly visited the Paradise Garage. When he returned to the UK he worked for Champion Records, promoting Jazzy Jeff and Salt-N-Pepa among others, and later Profile and Def Jam Records. He also DJed at the Project Club in Streatham, London, and wrote a hip-hop column in Blues And Soul magazine under the name Wotupski. In 1987, along with Danny Rampling and a few others, he visited Fung and Ian St. Paul (who later helped to set up TIP Records) in Ibiza where he went to clubs such as Amnesia, which were playing a mixture of Chicago house, pop and indie. On his return Oakenfold recreated the Balearic feeling at a few after-hours parties at the Project Club and towards the end of the year, with St. Paul, he organized a similar club at the Sanctuary in London's West End called Future - it became Spectrum when it moved to Heaven in 1988. Spectrum, along with Rampling's Shoom, helped to establish the underground acid house movement. Later, Oakenfold played at a number of the huge Sunrise and Biology parties, opened shows for the Stone Roses and the Happy Mondays and toured the world with U2. In 1989 he set up the label Perfecto Records and remixed the Happy Mondays' 'Wrote For Luck' with his musical collaborator Steve Osborne. The pair have subsequently remixed for a variety of artists including Arrested Development, Massive Attack, M People, New Order, the Shamen, the Stone Roses and U2, and have recorded under a number of names including Grace, Virus, the Perfecto Allstarz and Wild Colour. Oakenfold has compiled a number of compilation albums for the Ministry Of Sound and in 1994 was employed by East West Records as an A&R consultant. During the 90s he helped to popularize the trance sound and has become one of the best-known DJs in the UK, graduating from house towards a melodic, commercial style of trance.

Oaktown's 3-5-7

Half-hearted female rap troupe from the USA whose strings were pulled by an indulgent Hammer. Following the latter's defection from Capitol the group appear to have been washed up in the blood-letting. The group comprised local Oakland, Calfornia-rappers Sweet LD (b. Djuana Johnican), Terrible T (b. Tabatha King), Vicious C and Sweat P. The latter was formerly a cheerleader with the Oakland Raiders. By 1991 only Johnican and King remained.

- ALBUMS: Wild And Loose (Capitol 1989)★★★, Fully Loaded (Capitol 1991)★★★.

Oar - Alexander 'Skip' Spence

This is the product of a mad, tortured genius who took too many chemicals and lost it. Moby Grape had so much potential and Spence was a major figure in the band. This stark, disjointed collection is a classic 'cult' album, and will remain so as long as Syd Barrett, Roky Erickson, Peter Green and Spence continue to be written about. This is a challenging, brilliant, odd, lovable album that comes highly recommended. The Sony reissue in 1991 contains five bonus tracks. When Spence delivered this to Columbia Records, imagine the record executive listening to it, sitting back in his chair and saying, 'gee . . . I don't hear a hit single'.

- Tracks: Little Hands; Cripple Creek; Diana; Margaret-Tiger Rug; Weighted Down (The Prison Song); War In Peace; Broken Heart; All Come To Meet Her; Book Of Moses; Dixie Peach Promenade; Lawrence Of Euphoria; Grey/Afro; This Time He Has Come; It's The Best Thing For You; Keep Everything Under Your Hat; Halo Of Gold; Doodle.
- First released 1969
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Oasis

From Manchester, England, Oasis became overnight sensations in 1994 on the back of sublime singles and exponentially increasing press interest, culminating in the fastest-selling debut album of the 90s. Widely regarded in the press as natural successors to the Happy Mondays, Oasis proffered a similar working-class, roughneck chic. The group's creative axis is the Gallagher brothers, Liam John (b. 21 September 1972, Longsight, Cheshire, England; vocals) and Noel Thomas (b. 29 May 1967, Longsight, Cheshire, England; guitar, vocals). They were brought up by Irish Roman Catholic parents in the south Manchester suburb of Burnage. While his younger brother was still in school, Noel, whose country-and-western DJ father had purchased a guitar for him at age 11, discovered punk, and like many of his peers happily engaged in truancy, burglary and glue-sniffing. After six months' probation for robbing a corner shop he began to take the instrument seriously at the age of 13, later finding his role model in Johnny Marr of the Smiths. Liam was not weaned on music until 1989 when his elder brother took him to see the Inspiral Carpets. Afterwards, Noel befriended the Inspiral's Clint Boon, subsequently becoming a guitar technician and travelling the world with them. When he telephoned home in 1991 he was informed by his mother that Liam had joined a band. Paul 'Bonehead' Arthurs (guitar), Tony McCarroll (drums) and Paul 'Guigsy' McGuigan had been playing together as Rain (not the Liverpool group of similar moniker) before meeting with Liam, who became their singer, as they changed their name to Oasis. When Noel returned to watch them play at Manchester's Boardwalk in 1992, he recognized their promise, but insisted that they install him as lead guitarist and only perform his songs if he were to help them. Noel continued as roadie to the Inspiral Carpets to help purchase equipment, as the band set about establishing a local reputation. The incident that led to them being signed to Creation Records quickly passed into rock mythology. In May 1993 they drove to Glasgow with fellow denizens of the Boardwalk rehearsal studios, Sister Lovers, to support 18 Wheeler at King Tut's Wah Wah Club. Strong-arming their way onto the bill, they played five songs early in the evening, but these were enough to hypnotize Creation boss Alan McGee who offered them a contract there and then. However, they did not sign until several months later, during which time a copy of the band's demo had been passed to Johnny Marr, who became an early convert to the cause and put the band in touch with Electronic's management company, Ignition. With news spreading of the group's rise it seemed likely that the band would join any number of labels apart from Creation, with U2's Mother label rumoured to guarantee double any other offer. However, loyalty to the kindred spirits at Creation won through by October 1993, and two months later the label issued the group's 'debut', a one-sided 12-inch promo of 'Columbia' taken straight from the original demo. BBC Radio 1 immediately playlisted it (an almost unheralded event for such a 'non-release'). 1994 began with a torrent of press, much of it focusing on the group's errant behaviour. Punch-ups and the ingestion of large quantities of drink and drugs led to gig cancellations, while frequent, often violent, bickering between the Gallagher brothers lent the group a sense of danger and mischief. 'Supersonic' reached the UK Top 40 in May 1995. 'Shakermaker', owing an obvious debt to the New Seekers' 'I'd Like To Teach The World To Sing', duly made number 11 two months later. High-profile dates at the Glastonbury Festival and New York's New Music Seminar ensued, along with more stories of on-the-road indulgence. The Beatles-redolent 'Live Forever', with a sleeve featuring a photo of the house where John Lennon grew up, reached the Top 10 in October, all of which ensured that the expectation for a debut album was now phenomenal. After scrapping the original tapes recorded at Monmouth's Monnow Studios, the songs had been completed with Mark Coyle and Anjali Dutt, with subsequent mixing by Electronic producer Owen Morris, at a total cost of £75,000. In August 1994 Definitely Maybe entered the UK charts at number 1, and, backed by a live version of the Beatles' 'I Am The Walrus', 'Cigarettes And Alcohol', a stage favourite, became the group's biggest UK singles success to date, when it reached number 7 in October 1994. In December they released 'Whatever' (not quite the Christmas number 1), a lush pop song with full orchestration that sounded astonishingly accomplished for a band whose recording career stretched over only eight months. Their assault on America began in January 1995, and with a few gigs and word-of-mouth reports, they were soon hovering around the US Top 50. In mid-1995 it was announced that drummer McCarroll had amicably left the band and Alan White sessioned on their second album. The eagerly anticipated (What's The Story) Morning Glory? was a rich and assured record. Gallagher's Beatlesque melodies were spectacular, from the acoustic simplicity of 'Wonderwall' to the raucous and dense harmony of 'Don't Look Back In Anger' and 'Morning Glory'. Further gems (also released as singles) included 'Roll With It' and 'Some Might Say'. Nobody could dispute that this was one of the finest albums of the pop era. Oasis were suddenly receiving the media attention that was previously bestowed on Liverpool's fab four. With the massive attention and success in the charts the volatile relationship of the two brothers came under public scrutiny. Their sex lives, drug habits and fist fights were all examined and dissected, their uncompromising behaviour and laddish attitudes increasingly both entertaining and irritating. Rumours of the band splitting came to a head on their ninth attempt to break America in September 1996. Following one of their many fights, Noel returned to the UK with the band in tow the following day. The rest of the US tour was cancelled and the press statement that followed reported that although touring was unlikely the band would stay together. By that time, (What's The Story) Morning Glory? had sold over seven million copies worldwide and was on the way to becoming the biggest-selling UK album of all time. In the USA, although their tours were beset with problems, the album has also sold over three million. Awards flowed throughout a remarkable year. Few pop bands in recent times have created such a body of high-quality work in such a short time, and no other (except the Beatles) has become a such a massive media success. The greatly anticipated third album was introduced to the world with an excellent single, 'D'You Know What I Mean?'. The title of Be Here Now was inspired by John Lennon's response to a question regarding the transient state of rock 'n' roll. This philosophy was applied to the album: not since the release of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band in 1967 had there been such anticipation for a new record. Queues formed outside record shops on the day of release as 800,000 copies were sold in the UK within 24 hours. The music was much denser than in the past, with guitars overlaid on many tracks and Liam's vocals turned up to eleven. Although still relying on the Beatles for inspiration, there were some outstanding songs, with no weak fillers. 'Stand By Me' will stand as one of Noel Gallagher's finest songs and the epic 'Hey Jude'-styled 'All Around The World' is destined to become a live encore favourite. The 'difficult' third album mountain had been successfully climbed. There were further problems for the Gallagher brothers, however, when Liam was arrested in Australia for allegedly assaulting a fan, although the charges were later dropped.

● ALBUMS: Definitely Maybe (Creation 1994)★★★★, (What's The Story) Morning Glory? (Creation 1995)★★★★★, Be Here Now (Creation 1997)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live By The Sea (PMI 1995), ... There And Then (SMV 1996).

● FURTHER READING: Oasis: How Does It Feel, Jemma Wheeler. Oasis: The Illustrated Story, Paul Lester. The World On The Street: The Unsanctioned Story Of Oasis, Eugene Masterson. Oasis Definitely, Tim Abbot. Oasis, Mick St. Michael. Oasis '96, Pat Gilbert. Oasis: What's The Story, Ian Robertson. Oasis: Round Their Way, Mick Middles. Brothers: From Childhood To Oasis: The Real Story, Paul Gallagher and Terry Christian. Oasis: The Story, Paul Mathur. Getting High - The Adventures Of Oasis, Paolo Hewitt. Don't Look Back In Anger: Growing Up With Oasis, Chris Hutton and Richard Kurt.

Obey, Ebenezer

b. 27 August 1942, Abeokuta, Nigeria. Obey's earliest musical experiences were as a member of the local church choir while a child in Abeokuta - his parents, both devout Christians, were also members. In 1955, he joined the local band Ifelode Mambo, which despite its name was actually a juju outfit, playing guitar and thumb piano. He also played briefly with Fatayi Rolling Dollar and the Federal Rhythm Brothers Orchestra before moving to Lagos in 1963 and forming his own juju band, the International Brothers, in 1964. Under Obey's leadership, the International Brothers forged a highly individual style of juju. Abandoning the percussion and single-guitar style developed by I.K. Dairo, Obey added two more frontline guitars and electric bass, speeded up the tempo and simplified the beat. The formula struck an immediate chord with Nigerian juju fans. Obey enjoyed his first hit, 'Omo Lami', in 1965, followed by even greater success the following year with 'Olo Mi Gbo Temi'. By the early 70s, Obey was rivalling King Sunny Ade in album output and sales, achieving major local hits with In London, On The Town, Board Members and Aiye Wa A Toro. In 1971, he renamed his band the Inter Reformers and retitled his style miliki system (essentially a shrewd marketing move, for the music continued in the same juju style he had introduced with the International Brothers, heavier and faster than that played by most of his peers). In 1972, he opened his Lagos nightclub, the Miliki Spot, and for the next two or three years reigned as the city's pre-eminent juju bandleader. By the mid-70s, however, Obey was beginning to be threatened by the younger Ade. Juju fans split into two camps: those who followed the Master Guitarist Ade, and those who favoured the sweetness of Obey's vocals and the philosophical nature of his lyrics. It was with their lyrics, above all, that the two men identified themselves. Ade's reflected his belief in traditional Yoruba religion, while Obey, always the perfect Christian gentleman, preached the orthodox values of love, the family and peace in the household. He also took on the role of Government spokesman, explaining the switch to the right-hand side that took place on Nigeria's roads in 1972, and the need to follow more recent campaigns, such as Operation Feed Yourself in 1976 (with Operation Feed The Nation), or the austerity measures that followed the end of Nigeria's oil-based boom in the early 80s. While Obey never achieved the international profile of Ade, he actually preceded the latter in the attempt. In 1980, he licensed six albums to the London-based OTI label (including Current Affairs and What God Has Joined Together). Lacking the promotional and financial muscle of a larger label like Island Records, with whom Ade signed in 1982, OTI were unable to sell Obey outside the expatriate Nigerian market and a small number of white enthusiasts. In 1983 he tried again, signing to Virgin Records, and releasing the adventurous funk and highlife infused Je Ka Jo. Grossly under-promoted, the album failed to convince expatriate Nigerians or make any impact on the growing white audience for juju. A similar fate befell the Virgin follow-up, Greatest Hits. A third attempt, with yet another label, the specialist independent Stern's, produced Solubon. It too failed to reap a sufficient audience. Ever resilient, Obey next set his sights on the US market, touring there to great acclaim - but with little effect on record sales - in 1985 and 1986. He continues, however, to be a major recording and performing artist at home in Nigeria.

● ALBUMS: In London (Decca West Africa 1969)★★★★, Board Members (Decca West Africa 1970)★★★, The Horse The Man And His Son (Decca West Africa 1973)★★★★, Around The World (Decca West Africa 1974)★★★, Murtala Mohammed (Decca West Africa 1976)★★★★, Operation Feed The Nation (Decca West Africa 1976)★★★, Adam And Eve (Decca West Africa 1977)★★★, No Place Uke My Country Nigeria (Decca West Africa 1978)★★★, Celebration (Decca West Africa 1982)★★★, Je Ka Jo (Virgin 1983)★★★★, The Only Condition To Save Nigeria (OPS 1984)★★★, Solution (Stern's 1984)★★, Juju Jubilee (Shanachie 1985)★★★, My Father (1989)★★★, Get Your Jujus Out (Provogue/Rykodisc 1989)★★★, Formula 0-1-0 (OPS 1989)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Virgin 1984)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: On The Rock (1990).

Obiedo, Ray

b. San Francisco, California, USA. Contemporary jazz composer and guitarist Obiedo had an eclectic musical background during his youth, spent in the Bay Area of San Francisco. Here the sounds of Miles Davis, Henry Mancini, Antonio Jobim and the imported soul and pop of Motown Records influenced his early musical persona. Probably the greatest influence on his embryonic career, however, was the James Brown revue, whose funky, percussive guitar sound was the platform on which Obiedo built his technique. In the early 80s his reputation grew as one of California's finest exponents of jazz, pop and fusion. He joined organist Johnny 'Hammond' Smith on tour, then ECM trombonist Julian Priester. His own fusion band, Kick, included Sheila E. on drums and Sonny Rollins associate Mark Soskin on keyboards. His other outlet during this time was the pop-rock vehicle Rhythmus 21, wherein he worked with other prominent session musicians from the Bay Area. His own session/touring experience is considerable, having partnered artists including Herbie Hancock, George Duke, Lou Rawls, Rodney Franklin and Marc Russo. His solo compositions also attracted acclaim, and saw interpretations from Sheila E., saxophonist Alex Murzyn, guitarist Bruce Forman and percussionist Pete Escovedo. Parts of this work have appeared on film soundtracks, most notably Michael Caine's A Shock To The System and Richard Gere's Internal Affairs, and he also collaborated with Teresa Tull on Claire Of The Moon. Such notoriety co-existed with Obiedo's rising status as a solo artist, recording a clutch of 90s albums for Windham Hill Records while leading the Ray Obiedo group on club dates and concerts. Sticks And Stones peaked at number 7 on Billboard's Contemporary Jazz chart, while Zulaya continued his exploration of Latin and Brazilian influences. Sheila E. was on hand to provide percussion, while the backing vocals of Claytoven Richardson, Annie Stocking, Sandy Griffith and Jenny Meltzer lent the compositions a new emotive depth and identity. It was the first album to be solely produced by the artist, ensuring a clarity of vision to match the pristine musical performances.

● ALBUMS: Perfect Crime (Windham Hill 1989)★★★, Iguana (Windham Hill 1991)★★★, Sticks & Stones (Windham Hill 1993)★★★, Zulaya (Windham Hill 1995)★★★★.

Obituary

This intense and disturbing death metal group originates from Brandon, Florida, USA, where they formed in 1985. After recording a single and contributing two tracks to Metal Massacre compilations as Xecutioner, they changed their name to Obituary. This was initiated by the appearance of another, inferior act, who also travelled under the Xecutioner banner. Signed to Roadrunner Records, the band comprised John Tardy (vocals), Allen West (guitar), Trevor Peres (guitar), David Tucker (bass) and Donald Tardy (drums). Slowly We Rot, unveiled in 1989, was characterized by their vocalist's gurgling, sewer-like vocals, primarily employed as a musical instrument rather than a means of imparting lyrics, over a maelstrom of crashing power-chords and demonic drumming. Indeed, the indecipherable nature of John Tardy's outbursts helped to insure them against some of the hysterical criticisms levelled at other death metal pioneers. Cause Of Death saw the band refine their unique style, with ex-Death guitarist James Murphy and bassist Frank Watkins in place of West and Tucker, respectively. Obituary, however, continued to specialize in a hideous and brutal musical carnage, taking the death metal concept to its ultimate conclusion. The release of World Demise, again recorded with long-time producer Scott Burns, revealed a more considered approach, with the occasional audible lyric from Tardy (a press statement from Peres noted, 'We're serious people, and we wanna be taken seriously'). By this time, Tucker had been replaced by the returning Watkins, while Allen West was enjoying his own side-project, Six Feet Under, with Cannibal Corpse's Chris Barnes. A three-year gap elapsed before Back From The Dead, during which time the band had changed their style to hardcore/punk.

● ALBUMS: Slowly We Rot (Roadracer 1989)★★★, Cause Of Death (Roadracer 1990)★★★, The End Complete (Roadracer 1992)★★★, World Demise (Roadrunner 1994)★★★, Back From The Dead (Roadrunner 1997)★★★, Dead (Live) (Roadrunner 1998)★★★★.

Oblivians

US garage band the Oblivians comprise Jack 'Oblivian' (guitar, drums, vocals), Greg 'Oblivian' (guitar, drums, vocals) and Eric 'Oblivian' (guitar, drums, vocals). Formed in the summer of 1993 in Memphis, Tennessee, USA, they immediately wore their MC5/Stooges influences on their sleeves, releasing a stream of obscure, independently distributed singles. Live shows saw the members regularly switch instruments. They compensated for the lack of a bass player via the low pitch emitted from their PV Classic amplifiers, distorted through a tape deck. Soul Food was released on Crypt Records in 1995, with the fusion of dirty rock and pop melodies perfectly complementing their songwriting.

● ALBUMS: Soul Food (Crypt 1995)★★★, Popular Favourites (Crypt 1996)★★★, Play Nine Songs With Mr Quintron (Crypt 1997).

Obsessed

Spawned by the Washington, DC underground of the early 80s, the Obsessed were ranked alongside Minor Threat and Bad Brains in the vicinity, yet never made the immediate transition to nationwide renown that those two outfits achieved. Though more obviously metal-inclined than either, notwithstanding odes to mysticism and Black Sabbath riffs, the Obsessed - Scott 'Wino' Weinrich (vocals, guitar), Mark Laue (bass) and Ed Gulli (drums) - proved influential to two rival camps of supporters, who could be delineated by the length of their hair. They made their debut with a three-track EP (Sodden Jackyl) for their own Invictus label, but otherwise relied on live shows and the circulation of demo tapes to establish their reputation. After several years of attrition, Weinrich hooked up with Saint Vitus, replacing vocalist Scott Reagers (on the latter's request), and moving to Los Angeles. The group went on to cut several albums of ultra-heavy hardcore between 1986 and 1991. Towards the end of this stint, Saint Vitus's German label, Hellbound, approached Weinrich about the now-legendary Obsessed demos, and an eponymous album was released in 1990 (also referred to as The Purple Album). A fine collection that overcame the obvious budget limitations, it immediately drew the kind of attention that the band lacked during its infancy, but put into question Weinrich's tenure with Saint Vitus. Forced to make a choice by guitarist Dave Chandler, he elected to re-form the Obsessed with Scott Reeder (bass) and Greg Rogers (drums, ex-Poison 13). The raging Lunar Womb revealed a rejuvenated and ferocious band back at the peak of its powers. However, problems with Hellbound delayed progress, until Columbia stepped in to offer the Obsessed a recording contract, while Reeder (going on to join Kyuss) was replaced by part-time B.A.L.L./Scream member, Guy Pinhas. Despite signing with a major, however, the Obsessed, and Weinrich in particular, maintained an enviable status amongst their peers, the more high-profile of their supporters including L7's Jennifer Finch, Corrosion Of Conformity's Pepper Keenan, Fugazi's Ian MacKaye, Pantera's Phil Anselmo and Henry Rollins.

● ALBUMS: The Obsessed (Hellbound 1990)★★★★, Lunar Womb (Hellbound 1991)★★★, The Church Within (Columbia 1993)★★★.

Obsession

This Connecticut, USA-based outfit was formed in 1983 by vocalist Mike Vescara and guitarist Bruce Vitale. Adding Art Maco (guitar), Matt Karugas (bass) and Jay Mezias (drums), they made their debut with a track on the Metal Massacre compilation album in 1983. Combining Judas Priest, Venom and Anvil influences, they subsequently recorded the Marshall Law mini-album; a high-speed, dual guitar onslaught, accentuated by Vescara's piercing howl. A contract with Enigma ensued and the two albums that resulted showed the band diversifying into more melodic territory. In mid-1988 Maco and Mezias quit, but the band finally folded when Vescara accepted the position of frontman with Japanese rockers Loudness.

● ALBUMS: Marshall Law (Metal Blade 1984)★★★★, Scarred For Life (Enigma 1986)★★★, Methods Of Madness (Enigma 1987)★★.

Obus

This Spanish melodic metal band was formed in 1980 by vocalist Fortu, guitarist Francisco Laguna, Fernando Sanches (drums) and Juan Luis Serrano. Though restricting their potential audience by singing in their native tongue, this undoubtedly helped the authenticity of their sound, which was otherwise unoriginal. Signing to the local Chapa Discos label, they recorded three amateurish albums that lacked fresh ideas, before dissolving in the mid-80s.

● ALBUMS: Preparato (Chapa Discos 1981)★★, Podoroso Como El Trueno (Chapa Discos 1982)★★, El Que Mas (Mausoleum 1984)★★.

Ocasek, Ric

b. Richard Otcasek, 23 March 1949, Baltimore, Maryland, USA. The former leader of the Cars, Ocasek's songs bridged a gap between punk and AOR on the band's six highly successful albums. When the band broke up at the end of the 80s Ocasek turned his hand to record production, with much greater success. His main credits include Weezer's excellent self-titled debut in 1994, Bad Religion's The Gray Race in 1996 and D Generation's No Lunch. His solo recordings have been disappointing ● ALBUMS: Beautitude (Geffen 1983)★★, The Side Of Paradise (Geffen 1986)★★, Fireball Zone (Warners 1991)★★, Quick Change World (Reprise 1993)★★, Troublizing (Columbia 1997)★★.

Ocean

A song that owed much of its stylistic origin to pure hand-clapping gospel gave Ocean from Canada their one and only true hit in the spring of 1971. 'Put Your Hand In The Hand', originally recorded by Anne Murray, was written by Gene MacLellan, who also composed Murray's hit 'Snowbird'. Ocean, who were initially called Leather And Lace, rearranged the song themselves and sent copies to radio stations, resulting in the US number 2 hit. Ocean consisted of Janice Morgan (lead vocals), Jeff Jones (bass), Dave Tamblyn (lead guitar), Greg Brown (keyboard, vocals) and Chuck Slater (drums). After three other minor chart singles, the group disbanded in 1975, although they remained together domestically living on a Canadian farm. Sadly, during the 80s, Chuck Slater committed suicide.

● ALBUMS: Put Your Hand In The Hand (1971)★★★, Give Tomorrow's Children One More Chance (1972)★★.

Ocean Colour Scene

Led by singer Simon Fowler (b. 1966, Birmingham, England), the rock/pop band Ocean Colour Scene survived several lean years in the early 90s to triumph in 1996 with the success of 'The Riverboat Song'. Fowler, Steve Craddock (b. 1961, England; guitar), Damon Minchela (bass) and Oscar Harrison (drums) peddled a rather indistinctive and generic indie guitar sound from 1989 onwards, heavily inspired by the breakthrough of the Stone Roses. Managed by Steve Craddock's former policeman father Chris, the group recorded their debut single, 'Sway', for the Birmingham independent label Phffft at the end of 1990. Phonogram Records immediately recruited Ocean Colour Scene for its Fontana Records roster as a total cost of over £1 million. Rolling Stones producer Jimmy Miller agreed to produce their debut album, sessions for which began in the summer of 1991. However, Phonogram were unimpressed with the Miller recordings, installing Hugh Nicholson (Primal Scream, etc.) in his stead. He too was replaced by Tim Palmer, as the debut album, with backing vocals from Alison Moyet, finally emerged in May 1992. As Fowler later conceded: 'It hasn't really got much personality. We did like it at the time, but a year later we were very different.' The momentum had been lost and Phonogram's excessive investment in the band seemed ill fated. Moreover, when they returned from a tour of the USA at the end of 1992 they were unable to convince their label that their songs were strong enough for a follow-up set. The process dragged on for several months until Ocean Colour Scene walked out on the contract (using lawyer Michael Thomas to extricate themselves from massive debts). Deprived of a product to promote, they found touring opportunities hard to secure and struggled to continue. However, by the mid-90s Ocean Colour Scene had been endorsed by Noel Gallagher of Oasis, with whom they toured. Two members of the group, Steve Craddock and later Minchela, also worked in Paul Weller's backing band. Like Gallagher, Weller would make public his affection for the group, describing them as 'English 90s R&B'. Their 1996 single, 'The Riverboat Song', was heavily promoted on radio by disc jockeys such as Chris Evans, and became a UK Top 20 chart hit after the group had secured a new contract with MCA Records. An accompanying album, Moseley Shoals, named after the region of Birmingham in which the group formed, followed in April, and spawned a further UK Top 10 hit with 'The Day We Caught The Train'. Marchin' Already was released in October 1997 to almost universal critical disapproval; the Select reviewer, Andrew Male, condemned it as 'a grab-bag of influences with nothing at the centre'. The album featured vocals from P.P. Arnold.

● ALBUMS: Ocean Colour Scene (Fontana 1992)★★, Moseley Shoals (MCA 1996)★★★★, B-Sides, Seasides & Freerides (MCA 1997)★★, Marchin' Already (MCA 1997)★★★.

Ocean Front Property - George Strait

George Strait, another country singer who enjoyed tremendous success by developing Merle Haggard's sound, suffered personal tragedy when his daughter was killed in a car accident. With considerable composure, he managed to complete his magnificent album Ocean Front Property, and perhaps the anguish in his voice is all too real. It is a very country-sounding album with George's western swing influences in evidence in 'You Can't Buy Your Way Out Of The Blues' and 'All My Ex's Live In Texas'. Veteran country writer Hank Cochran supplied the witty title song which is about ocean front property in Arizona!

● Tracks: All My Ex's Live In Texas; Someone's Walking Around Upstairs; Am I Blue; Ocean Front Property; Hot Burning Flames; Without You Here; My Heart Won't Wander Very Far From You; Second Chances; You Can't Buy Your Way Out Of The Blues; I'm All Behind You Now.

● First released 1987

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 117

Ocean, Billy

b. Leslie Sebastian Charles, 21 January 1950, Trinidad, West Indies. Raised in England, Ocean worked as a session singer simultaneously with his employment at the Dagenham Ford Motor Company plant, before being signed by the GTO label as a solo artist. His early hits included 'Love Really Hurts Without You' (1976) and 'Red Light Spells Danger' (1977), two purposeful, if derivative, performances. The singer's subsequent releases fared less well, and for four years between 1980 and 1984, Ocean was absent from the UK charts. Paradoxically, it was during this period that he began to win an audience in America. Ocean moved there at the turn of the decade and several R&B successes prepared the way for 'Caribbean Queen (No More Love On The Run)', his first national US pop number 1. Now signed to the Jive label, this million-selling single introduced an impressive run of hits, including two more US chart toppers, 'There'll Be Sad Songs (To Make You Cry)' (1986) and 'Get Outta My Dreams, Get Into My Car' (1988). Despite securing a UK number 1 with 'When The Going Gets Tough, The Tough Get Going' (which was featured in the film The Jewel Of The Nile), Ocean's luck in Britain constantly fluctuated. However, his popular appeal secured him three UK Top 5 albums during this period, including the Greatest Hits collection in 1989.

● ALBUMS: Billy Ocean (GTO 1977)★★, City Limit (GTO 1980)★★, Nights (Feel Like Getting Down) (GTO 1981)★★★, Inner Feelings (GTO 1982)★★★, Suddenly (Jive 1984)★★★, Love Zone (Jive 1986)★★, Tear Down These Walls (Jive 1988)★★, Time To Move On (Jive 1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Jive 1989)★★★, Lover Boy (Spectrum 1993)★★★.

Ochs, Phil

b. 19 December 1940, El Paso, Texas, d. 7 April 1976. A superior singer-songwriter, particularly adept at the topical song, Phil Ochs began his career at Ohio State University. He initially performed in a folk-singing duo, the Sundowners, before moving to New York, where he joined the radical Greenwich Village enclave. Ochs' early work was inspired by Woody Guthrie, Bob Gibson and Tom Paxton, and its political nature led to his involvement with the Broadside magazine movement. The singer was signed to the prestigious Elektra Records label, and through his initial work was hailed as a major new talent. He achieved popular acclaim when Joan Baez took one of his compositions, 'There But For Fortune', into the pop charts. Ochs' own version later appeared on his In Concert, the artist's best-selling set which also featured the evocative 'When I'm Gone' and the wry 'Love Me I'm A Liberal'. Ochs' move to A&M Records in 1967 signalled a new phase in his career. Pleasures Of The Harbour, which included the ambitious 'Crucifixion', emphasized a greater use of orchestration, as well as an increasingly rock-based perspective. He remained a lyrical songwriter; his sense of melody was undiminished, but as the decade's causes grew increasingly blurred, so the singer became disillusioned. Although Rehearsals For Retirement documented the political travails of a bitter 1968, the sardonically titled Phil Ochs Greatest Hits showed an imaginative performer bereft of focus. He donned a gold lamé suit in a misguided effort to 'wed Elvis Presley to the politics of Che Guevara', but his in-concert rock 'n' roll medleys were roundly booed by an audience expecting overt social comment. This period is documented on the controversial Gunfight At Carnegie Hall. Ochs' later years were marked by tragedy. He was attacked during a tour of Africa and an attempted strangulation permanently impaired his singing voice. Beset by a chronic songwriting block, Ochs sought solace in alcohol and although a rally/concert in aid of Chile, An Evening With Salvador Allende, succeeded through his considerable entreaties, he later succumbed to schizophrenia. Phil Ochs was found hanged at his sister's home on 7 April 1976. One of the finest performers of his generation, he was considered, at least for a short time, Bob Dylan's greatest rival.

● ALBUMS: All The News That's Fit To Sing (Elektra 1964)★★★★, I Ain't Marching Anymore (Elektra 1965)★★★★, Phil Ochs In Concert (Elektra 1966)★★★, The Pleasures Of The Harbour (1967)★★★, Tape From California (1968)★★★, Rehearsals For Retirement (1968)★★★, Gunfight At Carnegie Hall (1975)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Phil Ochs Greatest Hits (1970)★★★, Phil Ochs - Chords Of Fame (1976)★★★★, Phil Ochs - Songs For Broadside (1976)★★★, Broadside Tapes (1976)★★★, A Toast To Those Who Are Gone (1987)★★★, There But For Fortune (1989)★★★, The Broadside Tapes 1 (Smithsonian Folkways 1995)★★★, Farewells & Fantasies 3-CD box set (Elektra/Rhino 1997)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Phil Ochs: Death Of A Rebel, Marc Elliott.

Octopus

Signed to Food Records in 1996 and making their debut with singles such as 'Your Smile', Octopus were first spotted by former Levitation drummer David Francolini. Through his auspices a demo tape was sent to Andy Ross at Food who signed the group before seeing them play live. Led by Marc Shearer, Octopus are a quartet which is expanded on stage to an eight-piece line-up including a horn section. Shearer's lyrics also led to a concurrent contract with EMI Publishing, whose Mike Smith stated: 'I have seldom come across a band with as much breadth to their songwriting.' The band confirmed their potential with UK support slots to Sleeper early in 1996 before embarking on their own headlining tour later in the same year. Their debut album proved to be a fine pop record with an eclectic and experimental edge.

● ALBUMS: From A To B (Food 1996)★★★.

Odelay - Beck

His debut Mellow Gold had been overshadowed by the huge success of the slacker anthem 'Loser', but on this 1996 major label follow-up, Beck Hansen corralled his wildly imaginative talent into a stunning collection of tracks that has made the skinny white wunderkind one of contemporary music's most important artists. Odelay is a potent mix of the new and the old, sampling from the deep wells of hip-hop, electronica, funk, blues and folk to create a multi-layered postmodern masterpiece. The album's surreal air, however, does not detract from the accessibility of songs such as 'Jack-Ass' and 'The New Pollution'.

● Tracks: Devils Haircut; Hotwax; Lord Only Knows; The New Pollution; Derelict; Novacane; Jack-Ass; Where It's At; Minus; Sissyneck; Readymade; High 5 (Rock The Catskills); Ramshackle.

● First released 1996

● UK peak chart position: 18

● USA peak chart position:

Odell, Mac

b. Odell McLeod, 31 May 1916, Roanoke, Alabama, USA. Odell, who sang, wrote songs and played harmonica, guitar and mandolin equally well, was a popular radio entertainer. He grew up listening to early country stars such as Jimmie Rodgers, the Skillet Lickers and especially the harmonica wizard Deford Bailey. He first worked with Slim Bassett and hoboed for a time around several states before they gained a regular show, as Mac And Slim in New Orleans, in 1935. After he married, he worked with his wife as Mac And Little Addie. They played WJJD Chicago's Supper Time Frolics for some time but their career was interrupted by World War II. Odell worked in a Michigan factory but continued to write songs as a staff writer for Roy Acuff (he wrote Acuff's popular 'Radio Station SAVED' and 'That Glory Bound Train'). After the war, he and his wife resumed their career on WLAC Nashville, remaining there until 1957. During this time he did daily shows with Addie and also appeared solo. He recorded for Mercury Records in 1949 but in 1952, he joined King. Many of his recordings were self-penned numbers, with the vast majority being of a gospel nature. These included 'Thirty Pieces Of Silver' (popularized by Wilma Lee Cooper) and 'From The Manger To The Cross', both of which have become much-recorded country standards. In 1957, he relocated to Benton Harbor, Michigan, where for some years, he neglected music to run Odell's Signs, until a 1974 heart attack forced him to give up sign writing. In the late 70s, he was persuaded to make further recordings for Folk Variety of Germany, who also released some of his earlier material. In 1985, he and Addie made a tour of Holland with the popular gospel singing Dutch duo, A.G. And Kate. In the late 80s, he was entertaining locally with three old friends as the Silver Threads. Odell also wrote 'Purple Robe', 'The Stone Was Rolled Away' and the Flatt And Scruggs hit 'Cora Is Gone'.

● ALBUMS: Hymns For The Country Folks (Audio Lab 1961)★★★, Be On Time (Folk Variety 1977)★★★, Wild Rose Of The Mountain (Folk Variety 1978)★★★, Seven Seven Nashville Session (Folk Variety 1978)★★★, Austin, Texas Git Together (Folk Variety 1981)★★★, Early Radio (Old Homestead 1981)★★★.

Oden, James Burke

b. 26 June 1903, Nashville, Tennessee, USA, d. 30 December 1977, Chicago, Illinois, USA. He was also known as St. Louis Jimmy, Big Bloke, Poor Boy and Old Man Oden. Although he was a moderately capable pianist, Oden's fame rests mainly on his prowess as a blues singer and composer. His most famous song, 'Going Down Slow', has been recorded by many famous blues artists, including an outstanding version by Howlin' Wolf aided by Willie Dixon, and was something of an anthem among white groups during the 60s. He was born, according to some sources, to Henry Oden, a dancer, and Leana West. Both parents died before he was eight years old and his early life remains a blank, largely because he wished it so, until he emerged in St. Louis, Missouri, at the age of 14, working in a barber's shop. St. Louis had a thriving blues community during the 20s and Jimmy Oden found himself a niche within it. He taught himself piano during this period but did not play professionally, believing that there were many better players than himself who would be able to accompany him. His main influence would appear to be Walter Davis, although his most constant companions were Big Joe Williams and Roosevelt Sykes. It was in the company of Sykes and violinist Curtis Mosby that he made his first foray into a recording studio in 1932. He moved north to Chicago in 1933 and was active in the blues scene of that city from that time until the 50s, performing, writing, and sometimes managing a band for Eddie Boyd, as well as being involved in the founding of the JOB record label. On one of his later sessions he was backed by the then emerging Muddy Waters and, after his activities were restricted by a serious car accident, he took up lodgings in the basement of Waters' house, paying his rent by supplying the occasional song. He benefited briefly from the resurgence of interest in the blues during the 60s, recording albums for such labels as Delmark, Bluesville and Spivey. His death was the result of bronchopneumonia.

Odessey & Oracle - The Zombies

Reappraised, and now widely accepted as a masterpiece of late 60s pop, this is as timeless as it is faultless. Swirling Mellotron over Colin Blunstone's emotive voice, with every track to be cherished. It was a major success in the USA, where the Zombies were appreciated, and they put 'Time of The Season' near the top of the charts. The UK gave up on them after 'She's Not There'. Rod Argent went on to great success with Argent, Blunstone became a solo singer, but they have never forgotten their first love. The five Zombies are all alive and well, and are now bathing in the much-deserved praise this album receives.

● Tracks: Care Of Cell 44; A Rose For Emily; Maybe After He's Gone; Beechwood Park; Brief Candles; Hung Up On A Dream; Changes; I Want Her She Wants Me; This Will Be Our Year; Butchers Tale (Western Front 1914); Friends Of Mine; Time Of The Season.

● First released 1968

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 95

Odetta

b. Odetta Holmes Felious Gorden, 31 December 1930, Birmingham, Alabama, USA. A classically trained vocalist, Odetta sang in the chorus of the 1947 Broadway production of Finian's Rainbow, before opting for a career in folk music. Successful residencies in San Francisco clubs, the Hungry i and Tin Angel, inspired interest in New York circles although her early releases revealed a still maturing talent. Odetta had been brought up in the blues tradition, but moved increasingly towards folk during the late 50s. Odetta had sung jazz and blues for the RCA and Riverside labels, and, only occasionally, folk for the Tradition label. Her blues was sung in the Bessie Smith tradition, but without the same level of emotion. Nevertheless, she recorded standards including 'House Of The Rising Sun' and 'Make Me A Pallet On Your Floor'. In 1960 she took to the solo acoustic guitar and moved to Vanguard. Possessed of a powerful voice, her style embraced gospel, jazz and blues, but eventually Odetta fell foul of changing trends and fashions in music, and much was forgotten of her early work from the 50s and 60s. The singer was championed by Pete Seeger and Harry Belafonte, the latter of whom Odetta accompanied on a 1961 UK hit, 'Hole In The Bucket', while her solo career flourished with a succession of albums for the Vanguard label. The artist's emotional mixture of spiritual, ethnic and jazz styles is best captured in person, and, therefore, Odetta At Town Hall and Odetta At Carnegie Hall remain her most representative sets in their showcasing of the full extent of her varied repertoire.

● ALBUMS: Odetta And Larry 10-inch album (Fantasy 1955)★★★, Odetta Sings Ballads And Blues (Tradition 1956)★★★, Odetta At The Gate Of Horn (Tradition 1957)★★★, My Eyes Have Seen (Vanguard 1959)★★★, Ballads For Americans (Vanguard 1960)★★★, Odetta At Carnegie Hall (Vanguard 1961)★★★★, Christmas Spirituals (Vanguard 1961)★★★, Odetta And The Blues (Riverside 1962)★★★, Sometimes I Feel Like Crying (RCA Victor 1962)★★★, Odetta At Town Hall (Vanguard 1962)★★★★, Odetta (1963)★★★, Odetta Sings Folk Songs (RCA 1963)★★★, One Grain Of Sand (Vanguard 1963)★★★, It's A Mighty World (1964)★★★, Odetta Sings Of Many Things (1964)★★★, Odetta Sings Dylan (1965)★★★, Odetta In Japan (1965)★★★★, Odetta (1967)★★★, Odetta Sings The Blues (1968)★★★, Odetta Sings (1971)★★★, It's Impossible (Four Leaf Clover 1978)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Odetta (1967)★★★, The Essential Odetta (Start 1989)★★★.

Odom, Andrew

b. 15 December 1936, Denham Springs, Louisiana, USA, d. 23 December 1991. Odom occasionally worked under the name of 'BV' or 'Big Voice'. He sang in a church choir as a child; his family moved north in the mid-50s, settling in St. Louis, Missouri. While there Odom sometimes worked with Albert King and reputedly recorded in the late 50s. He moved to Chicago in 1960 where he had long associations with Earl Hooker and Jimmy Dawkins. Singles under Odom's name have appeared on several local labels, and he made his debut album for Bluesway in 1969. He also recorded for Wasp Music and French labels MCM and Isabel. Odom was an intense, powerful blues singer, influenced by B.B. King and Bobby Bland.

● ALBUMS: Farther On Down The Road (1969)★★★, Feel So Good (1982)★★★.

Odyssey

Formed in New York City, vocalists Lillian, Louise and Carmen Lopez were originally known as the Lopez Sisters. Their parents came from the Virgin Islands, but they were born and raised in Stamford, Connecticut, USA. Carmen left the group in 1968 and was replaced by Tony Reynolds (b. Manila), who, after the group's first album, was replaced by Bill McEachern. Odyssey's 1977 release, 'Native New Yorker', reached the US Top 20, but the song proved more popular in the UK where it peaked at number 5. It was not until 1980 that Odyssey appeared again in the UK chart with the first of several UK hits. 'Use It Up And Wear It Out' topped the chart in June of that year, while the beautiful, soulful ballad, 'If You're Looking For A Way Out', gave them their third Top 10 hit. Two more effortless pop/soul offerings, 'Going Back To My Roots' (1981) and 'Inside Out' (1982), reached the Top 5. However, the lack of sustained success at home hampered the group's wider progress and they latterly broke up.

● ALBUMS: Odyssey (RCA 1977)★★★, Hollywood Party Tonight (RCA 1978)★★★, Hang Together (RCA 1980)★★★, I Got The Melody (RCA 1981)★★, Happy Together (RCA 1982)★★, A Piping Journey (Mannick Music 1987)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Odyssey (RCA 1981)★★★, Magic Touch Of Odyssey (Telstar 1982)★★, Magic Moments With Odyssey (RCA 1984)★★★, Greatest Hits (Stylus 1987)★★★, Greatest Hits (RCA 1990)★★★.

Of Perception

Between 1979 and 1984, Deviant (b. Stuart Powell, Enfield, England; vocals, guitar, keyboards) and Jellyfish (b. Kevin Nicholson, Tottenham, London, England; bass, vocals, keyboards), were the mainstay of the New Wave Of British Heavy Metal band Tooth. After playing in various other groups, the two reunited in 1989 for a jam session with various friends and session men. Within a year they had assembled a stable line-up with ex-Swamp Angels guitarist Dave Williams and former lighting engineer Pete Smith. After a few gigs and two demos they found ex-Neil Christian bassist Arthur Anderson to record/produce and mix an entire album in 24 hours. The resulting So Join Mr Dreams offered a marriage of Doors, Motörhead and Hawkwind influences. It found little favour in the UK but an audience emerged in Europe. Dejected after a tour of Holland fell through at the last moment in 1992, they entered the studio to record a new album with producer Brian Martin. The resultant Lords So Strange R was a much more ambitious project, featuring the debut of female backing vocalist Jazz J. Soon afterwards they broke up, which turned out to be a blessing in disguise. Absent from the music scene, they attracted a cult following in Spain and Germany, as well as in 'underground' magazines around the world. The group re-formed late in 1994 minus Jazz J and Smith, and after initial studio work, were joined by session drummer 'Chops'.

● ALBUMS: So Join Mr Dreams (Hawke Park 1991)★★★, Lords So Strange R (Hawke Park 1992)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Of Perception (1991).

Of The Heart, Of The Soul And Of The Cross: The Utopian Experience - P.M. Dawn

They may not have many friends in hardcore hip-hop circles (just ask KRS-1), but anybody who wilfully ignores this set is denying themselves a treat. Boosted by the hugely impressive singles, 'Reality Used To Be A Friend Of Mine' and the Spandau Ballet-sampling 'Set Adrift On Memory Bliss', PM Dawn fused pop sentiments with knowing lyrics in a manner that saw them draw comparisons to De La Soul and the Daisy Age Soul tag. However, Prince Be and DJ Minute Mix employed more than copycat tactics, with fully blown song structures that betrayed the former's musical heritage (his father was a member of Kool & The Gang).

- Tracks: Intro; Reality Used To Be A Friend Of Mine; Paper Doll; To Serenade A Rainbow; Comatose; A Watcher's Point Of View (Don't 'Cha Think); Even After I Die; In The Presence Of Mirrors; Set Adrift On Memory Bliss; Shake; If I Wuz U; On A Clear Day; The Beautiful.
- First released 1991
- UK peak chart position: 8
- USA peak chart position: 48

Of Thee I Sing

After George S. Kaufman's uncompromising book for Strike Up The Band had been replaced by a less contentious one by Morrie Ryskind, the two writers collaborated on the libretto for this show which has been called 'the greatest of all American musicals'. It opened at the Music Box Theatre in New York on 26 December 1931, complete with a sharp and witty plot in which most American institutions, especially family life and politics, come in for their fair share of satirical attention. John P. Wintergreen (William Gaxton) and his prospective Vice-President, Alexander Throttlebottom (Victor Moore), have discarded issues such as home and foreign affairs, and are running for office on a ticket of LOVE. In fact, Wintergreen issues a statement that he will propose to his Mary (Lois Moran) in every one of the 48 states. They are elected to the White House with a landslide victory, but, like so many presidents that followed him, Wintergreen's future is threatened by an indiscreet dalliance with the fairer sex - in his case, Diana Devereaux (Grace Brinkley), the current Miss America. Impeachment looms, but Wintergreen keeps his job after Throttlebottom offers to marry the beauty queen because, under the Constitution: 'When the President of the United States is unable to fulfil his duties, his obligations are assumed by the Vice President.' Gaxton and Moore were marvellous, and went on to star in several other musicals together, including Anything Goes, Leave It To Me!, and Louisiana Purchase. Once again, George and Ira Gershwin wrote a score that was both tuneful and entirely complementary to the action. Two of the songs matured into standards, 'Who Cares?' and 'Love Is Sweeping The Country', and the spirited 'Of Thee I Sing (Baby)' was also a hit at the time for Ben Selvin. The remainder of the score consisted of 'Wintergreen For President', 'Hello, Good Morning', 'The Illegitimate Daughter', and 'Because, Because'. As one of 29 new Broadway musicals that season, Of Thee I Sing enjoyed an excellent run of 441 performances, and returned two years later for a brief spell at the Imperial theatre. The show became the first musical to be awarded the prestigious Pulitzer Prize for Drama, although composer George Gershwin's music and name was omitted from the citation. Over the years, Of Thee I Sing was a leading candidate for revival in the US, especially at election time. When the Arena Stage in Washinton presented the show in November 1992, each patron received a voting slip in their programme. The running total was chalked on the back wall of the auditorium, and, even early on in the campaign, there was a hint of things to come, with the Clinton-Gore ticket regularly beating Bush-Quayle by about four to one.

Ofarim, Esther And Abi

Esther Ofarim (b. Esther Zaled, 13 June 1943, Safed, Israel) and Abraham Reichstadt (b. 5 October 1939, Tel Aviv, Israel) were a husband-and-wife team who shot to fame in their homeland during the early 60s. With a keen eye for the international market, Esther had represented Switzerland in the 1963 Eurovision Song Contest while the duo extended their appeal on the Continent via concert performances and foreign language recordings. An appearance on the high-rating Eamonn Andrews Show on UK television, in which Esther and Abi sang a novelty love duet, proved so popular that the song became an overnight smash. 'Cinderella Rockefella' (composed by Mason Williams) topped the British charts for three weeks in early 1968 and although the duo seemed likely one-hit-wonders they managed a successful follow-up with 'One More Dance'. The partnership subsequently broke up when their marriage was dissolved.

- ALBUMS: 2 In 3 (1968)★★, Ofarim Concert - Live '69 (1969)★.

Off The Wall - Michael Jackson

The album that moved Jackson out of juvenile pop, even though the suit he wears on the cover belies his still tender years untouched by facial butchery. Is it really 20 years ago that, along with the Clash, Jackson was deemed OK? The Quincy Jones production was immaculate and totally sympathetic to the 90s sound. Virtually the whole album holds up, with a thumbs-down for 'Burn This Disco Down', but remember that this does contain the perfection of 'Rock With You', the angst of 'She's Out Of My Life', Paul McCartney's 'Girlfriend' and the abandon of 'Get On The Floor/Off The Wall'. Absolutely harmlessly brilliant.

- Tracks: Don't Stop 'Til You Get Enough; Rock With You; Working Day And Night; Get On The Floor/Off The Wall; Girlfriend; She's Out Of My Life; I Can't Help It; It's The Falling In Love; Burn This Disco Down.

- First released 1979
- UK peak chart position: 5
- USA peak chart position: 3

Offenbach

Progressive rock outfit originating from Quebec, Canada. The band were assembled in 1975 by Gerard Boulet (vocals, keyboards) and Breen Laboeuf (vocals, bass). Following the addition of Jean Gravel (guitar), John McGale (guitar) and Pierre Ringuet (drums), they signed to A&M Records in 1976. Debuting with Never Too Tender, they initially opted for English lyrics, which sounded rather wooden in their extended psychedelic, blues-based workouts. Realizing this, they switched to singing in French from Offenbach onwards. Changing labels to RCA in 1979 saw a swing towards an earthy R&B style, not that dissimilar to Joe Cocker. Failing to find an audience with this new direction, they started to incorporate wind instruments, extend the length of compositions and move into the domain of symphonic folk-rock.

- ALBUMS: Never Too Tender (A&M 1976)★★, Offenbach (A&M 1977)★★★, Victoire D'Armour (A&M 1978)★★★, Traversion (RCA 1979)★★★, Encore (RCA 1980)★★★, Coup De Foudu (RCA 1981)★★★.

Offitt, Lillian

b. 4 November 1938, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. On the evidence of her half dozen releases, Lillian Offit was a plain but lusty blues shouter, of small stature and commensurate talent. She was still attending college when she visited the offices of Nashboro Records in the hope of making a gospel record. Owner Ernie Young suggested that she try secular music, and 'Miss You So' was issued on Excello in 1957. It was successful enough for her to turn professional, and two further singles were issued, with diminishing success. In 1958 she moved to Chicago to become featured singer with the Earl Hooker band at Robert's Show Lounge. Through Hooker, she met Me London, owner of Chief Records, and cut her first record for the label in February 1960. 'Will My Man Be Home Tonight', heavily featuring Hooker's slide guitar, became a hit in the Chicago area. 'My Man I A Lover', recorded in May 1960, and 'Troubles' from a year later, repeated the downward curve of Excello releases. She left music to start a family, preventing her from joining the 1964 American Folk Blues Festival tour, her place taken by Sugar Pie DeSanto. She was last sighted in 1974 as part of the Streakers Rated-X Revue in St. Joseph, Michigan.

- ALBUMS: including Chicago Calling (1986)★★★.

Offramp - Pat Metheny

If it isn't jazz, what is it? Where do we place Metheny, notwithstanding his stature as a comparatively recent musical genius? This album is one of a dozen of his albums that came close to qualifying; his music is uplifting, emotional, clever and often breathtaking. 'Are You Going With Me' is the finest example of Metheny music: it slowly builds on a hypnotic beat until his guitar synthesizer is unleashed for a fitting climax. 'James' (dedicated to Mr. Taylor) demonstrates that beauty and simplicity can go together. Metheny has to be seen as one of the most important musical figures of the past 20 years.

- Tracks: Barcorolle; Are You Going With Me; Au Lait; Eighteen; Offramp; James; The Bat (Part Two).
- First released 1982
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 50

Offspring

Although they only found commercial fortune in the mid-90s, the Offspring had been a staple of the southern Californian punk community since 1984. Singer/guitarist Bryan 'Dexter' Holland (b. 29 December 1965) and bass player Greg Kriesel (b. 20 January 1965, Glendale, California, USA) announced their intention to form a band at a party where they heard TSOL's Change Today for the first time. Kriesel then joined Manic Subsidal, with former Clowns Of Death guitarist Holland, plus Doug Thompson (vocals) and Jim Benton (drums). When Thompson was forced out, Holland took over vocals, while Benton was replaced by Clowns Of Death drummer James Lilja. A third Clowns Of Death member, guitarist Kevin 'Noodles' Wasserman (b. 4 February 1963, Los Angeles, California, USA), joined later. Manic Subsidal was rechristened the Offspring in 1985. Shows supporting the likes of Econo Christ and Isocraces followed, at an average of one performance every two months. Their debut single, 'I'll Be Waiting', was released on their own Black Records. However, by 1987 Lilja was losing interest in the band, and was replaced for a Las Vegas show by Ron Welty (b. 1 February 1971, Long Beach, California, USA; ex-FQX - Fuck Quality X-Rays). He joined them permanently in July 1987, ironically during an Offspring show supported by FQX, whom he had now abandoned. A demo was recorded in 1988 and touted around punk labels, but Offspring were initially forced to gain recognition by advertising in the classifieds of underground magazines Flipside and Maximum Rock 'n' Roll. These songs were lifted and placed on compilation cassettes and albums, spreading the group's name in the process. By March 1989 they were ready to record their debut studio album, recruiting Dead Kennedys, TSOL and Iggy Pop veteran Thom Wilson. Via a contract with Nemesis Records the world was at last able to hear the Offspring's unique cross-matching of hardcore with Middle Eastern guitar from chief songwriter Holland. A six-week national tour followed, though Noodles was stabbed during their Hollywood anti-nuclear benefit. The Baghdad EP bore witness to the group's progression, with a less self-consciously punk musical dialogue, and the notable absence of some of the cluttered tempo changes of their debut. It was their last record for Nemesis, however, and by 1992 they were in Brett Gurevitz's West Beach

Studio working on a new project for Epitaph Records (Gurevitz had initially rejected the band, as had practically every other underground label in the USA, only to change his mind on hearing a new demo tape). Ignition's more relaxed pace, dropped in favour of bigger, memorable choruses, opened up Holland's lyrics to closer scrutiny. There was evident craftsmanship in songs such as 'Take It Like A Man' and 'No Hero', which concerned suicide. This reflected the sophistication of the music, with Holland's Arabic guitar breaks contrasting with Noodles' forceful blues licks. Its release coincided with individual academic success, with Kreisel finishing his finance degree, Welty his electronics degree and Holland taking his masters (he went on to complete his doctorate in molecular biology). In June they toured Europe for the first time with labelmates No FX, preceding a two-week domestic stint with the Lunachicks on which Noodles was temporarily replaced by his friend, Rob Barton, who also helped out on the following tour with Pennywise. The group's third album, Smash, was completed in February 1994 with Thom Wilson again producing. Ever more adventurous, this time Offspring combined punk with ska and hard rock, with a cover version of the Didjits' 'Killboy Powerhead' as a concession to their roots. 'What Happened To You' eloquently addressed the subject of hard drugs (to which so many of their So-Cal hardcore compatriots had fallen victim), while 'Something To Believe In' and 'Self-Esteem' were more detached and introspective than before. By the end of 1994 the album had achieved platinum status as the result of extensive touring with labelmates Rancid and Dutch hardcore band Guttermouth (now signed to Nitro Records, Holland and Kreisel's own label). By 1995 Smash was accredited with quadruple platinum sales, and their recording of the Damned's 'Smash It Up', for the soundtrack of Batman Forever, was another major success. Much of 1995 was spent in dispute with their record company. Ixnay On The Hombre was well received in February 1997.

- ALBUMS: Offspring (Nemesis 1989)★★, Ignition (Epitaph 1992)★★★, Smash (Epitaph 1994)★★★, Ixnay On The Hombre (Columbia 1997)★★★.

OG (Original Gangster) - Ice-T

The hardest Tracey ever. Ice-T had a longer history than most on the west coast, having even appeared in an early 80s breakdancing film. His 'party rhymes' on earlier excursions saw him permanently walking the good taste tightrope, but this was his most forceful statement so far. The sustained intensity of his delivery was familiar, but there was greater finesse on display too. It was this set that formed the platform for his elevation to black spokesman of the 90s, and the first to provide real evidence of substance behind the stance.

- Tracks: Home Of The Bodybag; First Impression; Ziplock; Mic Contract; Mind Over Matter; New Jack Hustler; Ed; Bitches 2; Straight Up Nigga; OG Original Gangster; The House; Evil E - What About Sex?; Fly By; Midnight; Fried Chicken; MVP's; Lifestyles Of The Rich And Infamous; Body Count; Prepared To Die; Escape From The The Killing Fields; Street Killers; Pulse Of The Rhyme; The Tower; Ya Shoulda Killed Me Last Year.
- First released 1991
- UK peak chart position: 38
- USA peak chart position: 15

Ogada, Ayub

b. Nyahere, Kenya. Nyatiti (lyre) player Ayub Ogada first rose to fame in 1993 when he was invited to support Peter Gabriel on his extensive two-month tour of Europe. Before this point he had yet to release an album. He was quickly told that he needed something to support his presence, and recorded his debut over three days at the Real Sounds Studio, an album that duly became a major hit with critics. The roots of this fairytale stem from 1989, when Ogada was spotted busking on the London Underground by an employee of WOMAD. He was invited to perform in-between bands at a Cornish festival where he was 'field recorded' by enthusiastic Radio 1 disc jockey Andy Kershaw. Before this he had toured the USA with his medical student father before returning to finish his schooling in Kenya and taking up percussion, essentially because it was the most affordable contemporary instrument. He drummed for Kenyan band Black Savage for a year and a half, featuring on their sole album. From there he became a solo singer and guitarist working in a restaurant and leading dance classes at Nairobi's French Cultural Centre. He first came to the UK as part of Makonde, but their manager disappeared with the master tapes for an album and in 1979 he was forced to return to Kenya once again. There he formed African Heritage - a name also employed by a cultural complex that provided them with a recording contract in exchange for their performances at their restaurant. Eventually, Ogada became dissatisfied with percussion, and found the perfect instrument for his self-expression in the nyatiti, a versatile instrument easily adapted to both traditional and contemporary songwriting. African Heritage's growing infatuation with Western pop eventually saw him leave and, by chance, he found a major acting role in Robert Redford's Out Of Africa film. This inspired a thespian career, which also included the role of the Mau Mau leader in The Kitchen Toto, but after arriving in England he was denied the chance of an acting career by the Equity Union's intransigent membership policies, and instead, he sought a future in music once more. He returned to the drums to play with Nsimba Foggis's Taxi Pata Pata, but then took his nyatiti to the London underground system as a busker. This eventually resulted in the garlanded En Mana Kuoyo debut album of 1993. Sung entirely in his native Luo tongue, it included sympathetic assistance from Zak Sikkobe and David Oladunnil and confirmed the value of his application and persistence.

- ALBUMS: En Mana Kuoyo (Real World 1993)★★★.

Ogdens' Nut Gone Flake - The Small Faces

Having begun their career as the archetypal Mod band, the Small Faces latterly embraced traces of flower-power's whimsy. Astute enough not to sacrifice their identity, the quartet retained a distinctive perspective, as evinced by a string of superb pop singles, including 'Here Comes The Nice' and 'Itchycoo Park'. A sense of pop melody and adventurism culminated on this album which encompassed tongue-in-cheek fun ('Lazy Sunday') and passionate love songs ('Afterglow'). Steve Marriott's voice remains completely self-assured and the group's characteristic organ-based swell is often enhanced by P.P. Arnold's emotional backing vocals. Eccentric comedian Stanley Unwin narrates the concept suite 'Hapiness Stan', but the music is strong enough to withstand the novelty tag. Ogdens' Nut Gone Flake was the Small Faces' swan-song, at least until an ill-starred reunion, but it proved a fitting end to a golden era.

● Tracks: Ogdens' Nut Gone Flake; Afterglow; Long Agos And Worlds Apart; Rene; Song Of A Baker; Lazy Sunday; Hapiness Stan; Rollin' Over; The Hungry Intruder; The Journey; Mad John; Happy Days Toy Town; Tin Soldier (live).
● First released 1967
● UK peak chart position: 1
● USA peak chart position: 159

Ogholi, Evi-Edna

Even though there is frankly little competition, Evi-Edna Ogholi is widely recognized as the 'queen of Nigerian reggae'. Specializing in a cool, romantic style, sung in her native Isoko tongue, the sound is a little akin to the UK's lovers rock idiom. Ogholi began her career in the late 80s. A contract with Polydor Nigeria produced Happy Birthday in 1989, but it was not successful enough for her contract to be renewed. She recovered her equilibrium, however, and within a few months had re-established her reputation throughout West Africa. A national tour of Nigeria followed, sponsored by the Pepsi soft drink company.

● ALBUMS: Happy Birthday (Polydor Nigeria 1989)★★.

Oh Mercy - Bob Dylan

Dylan has been written off many times, and yet he can and will always come back and surprise us with another tremendous album. Much credit is given to producer Daniel Lanois, but don't forget, a producer cannot do much with pencil shavings. Some of Dylan's most cryptic statements are on this album. He was always better as a romantic than as a protest folkie, and the less obscure his lyrics become, the more he opens his heart. Take, for example, the simple 'Where Teardrops Fall'. Alternatively, the brilliant twist in the tail, 'Most Of The Time', is the deepest: 'Don't even remember what her lips felt like on mine, most of the time'.

● Tracks: Political World; Where Teardrops Fall; Everything Is Broken; Ring Them; Man In The Long Black Coat; Most Of The Time; What Good Am I?; Disease Of Conceit; What Was It You Wanted; Shooting Star.
● First released 1989
● UK peak chart position: 6
● USA peak chart position: 30

Oh! Calcutta!

A musical revue, devised in 1969 by Kenneth Tynan, the drama critic, and literary manager of Britain's National Theatre for 10 years, Oh! Calcutta! is rarely discussed in theatrical reference books. One of the excuses given for its omission is that it was not very good; but the main reason is surely that in most of the sketches the artists appear in the nude, and perform simulated sex acts. Tynan recruited John Lennon, Samuel Beckett, Jules Feiffer, Joe Orton, Sam Shepard, and others, to write material that reflected the sexual revolution that was taking place in the 'swinging sixties'; music and lyrics were credited to Open Window. The show opened in New York in June 1969 at the off-Broadway Eden Theatre, and was such a success that within a few months it was promoted to Broadway, where it stayed for 1,314 performances. The 1970 London production, taking advantage of the abolition of theatre censorship in 1968, ran for 3,918 performances. However, that impressive total paled in comparison with the 1976 Broadway revival which notched up an incredible total of 5,852. For many years that production was in second place in the Broadway long-running stakes, just behind A Chorus Line (6,137), but was overtaken by Andrew Lloyd Webber's Cats late in 1996. More than 20 years after its inception, Oh! Calcutta! continues to be controversial. In 1991, a judge in Chattanooga, Tennessee, overruled local officials and allowed the show to go on in a city-owned theatre. In both London and New York, its prolonged existence was often attributed to the patronage of visiting Japanese businessmen, so it was somewhat ironic that an American production opened in Tokyo in 1993 - albeit with some concessions involving partial body stockings and body paint.

Oh, Boy!

This was the second musical comedy to be written by the young Anglo/American team of Jerome Kern (music), Guy Bolton (book), and P.G. Wodehouse (book and lyrics), and their first to be presented at the the tiny Princess Theatre in New York. When Oh, Boy! opened there on 20 February 1917, it blew like a wind of change through the cobwebs of operetta that were hanging around most of the other Broadway shows. It was a jolly, contemporary production, unpretentious and thoroughly entertaining. There were elements of farce, too - people did seem to enter and leave through windows rather a lot - but the story was really about George Budd (Tom Powers). His main problem is to prevent his guardian, Aunt Penelope (Edna May Oliver), from discovering that he has just got married to Lou Ellen (Marie Carroll). If she does - there goes his allowance. When they learn of her imminent arrival, the newlyweds decided to part for a time - Lou Ellen's parents have not been informed of the situation either - and from that moment on, a series of complicted events ensues, during which Tom rescues the lovely actress, Jackie Sampson (Ann Wheaton), from the clutches of an amorous Judge Carter ('Tootles' to her), who eventually turns out to be his (Tom's) father-in-law, and Aunt Penelope gives the happy couple (George and Lou Ellen) her blessing while under the influence of a glass of spiked lemonade. The cast played it all with great style, aided by a marvellous score that included the romantic couple's naive and wistful 'You Never Knew About Me' ('I'd have let you feed my rabbit/Till the thing became a habit, Dear!/But I never knew about you/Or what might have been/And you never knew about me.'). Jackie and Tom's best chum, Jim (Hal Forde), combined on another of the best numbers, 'Nesting Time In Flatbush', but there was not a dud among the rest of the bunch, which included 'Ain't It A Grand And Glorious Feeling', 'Be A Little Sunbeam', 'Every Day', 'The First Day Of May', 'FlubbyDub, The Cave Man', 'Land Where The Good Songs Go', 'A Pal Like You', 'Words Are Not Needed', 'An Old-Fashioned Wife', and 'A Package Of Seeds.' Another of the songs, 'Till the Clouds Roll By', became popular through recordings by Ann Wheaton with James Harrod, the Prince's Orchestra, and Vernon Dalhart. The tremendous success of Oh, Boy!, which ran for 475 performances, meant that the next Kern-Bolton-Wodehouse show, Leave It To Jane, which was originally intended for the Princess, had to be diverted to the much larger Longacre Theatre. In 1919, when the show was presented in London, it was retitled Oh, Joy!, and starred Beatrice Lillie in her first book musical. The title Oh, Boy! did eventually go up in lights in London's West End 60 years later, when a show starring pop stars such as Joe Brown, Shakin' Stevens, and Alvin Stardust that was based on the television show, played the Astoria Theatre.

Oh, Joy!

(see Oh, Boy!)

Oh, Kay!

This show provides the perfect argument for those who believe that 'they don't write them like that any more'. George and Ira Gershwin introduced four of the their all-time standards in Oh, Kay! which opened at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 8 November 1926, and the rest of the score was in the same class. Guy Bolton and P.G. Wodehouse, fresh from their successes with Jerome Kern, wrote the book in which the Kay of the title (Gertrude Lawrence in her first Broadway book musical) helps her hard-up ducal brother (Gerald Oliver Smith) - a bootlegger - illegally to import alcoholic beverages into the USA. They stash the booze on the Long Island estate of young and wealthy Jimmy Winter (Oscar Shaw), who is normally away and too busy enjoying himself at various shindigs to notice their comings and goings. However, when he returns, complications ensue, and Kay actually has to take a job in the household for a time, before Jimmy - cold sober - rejects his legion of admirers and decides to marry his 'Dear Little Girl'. Although not one of the hits from the show, it was a charming number, which Julie Andrews reprised in the Gertrude Lawrence biopic, Star! (1968). Kay and Jimmy's romance can only flourish, of course, after the two lovers have duetted on 'Maybe' and 'Do, Do, Do', and danced the night away with 'Clap Yo' Hands'. A more poignant moment occurs when, disguised as a housemaid, Kay 'meditates musically' - as Ira Gershwin put it - with the tender ballad, 'Someone To Watch Over Me'. 'Fidgety Feet' was another lively number by the two Gershwin brothers, but 'Oh, Kay!' and 'Heaven On Earth' both had lyrics by Howard Deitz who helped out when Ira Gershwin was ill. Victor Moore, one of America's favourite funny-men, returned to Broadway for the first time in 15 years in Oh, Kay!, and the cast also included Harland Dixon, Marion and Madeleine Fairbanks, Gerald Oliver, and Sascha Beaumont. The show ran for 256 performances, and Gertrude Lawrence recreated her role in the 1927 London production which lasted for six months. Oh, Kay! was revived off-Broadway in 1960, and was back in a main house, the Richard Rodgers Theatre, in 1990. The latter production, which started out at the Goodspeed Opera House in 1989, moved the show's location from Long Island to Harlem, and included an all-black cast. It closed after 77 performances, and producer David Merrick's attempt to restage it ended during previews. A reasonably successful West End revival was mounted in 1974, and 10 years later the show was a big hit when it played a season in England at the Chichester Festival Theatre, with the highly acclaimed Michael Siberry as Jimmy.

Oh, Lady! Lady!!

Another of the celebrated Princess Theatre shows with a score by Jerome Kern and P.G. Wodehouse, and a book by Wodehouse and Guy Bolton It opened at the tiny theatre in New York on 1 February 1918, and proved to be the last really successful show that the team wrote together. This time the plot centres on the well-to-do Long Island home belonging to the parents of Mollie Farrington (Vivienne Segal). She is about to marry Willoughby 'Bill' Finch (Carl Randall), that is until May Barber (Carroll McComas) turns up and announces that, in the past, she and Bill have been more than just good friends. Mollie is aghast: could Bill really have a female skeleton in his closet? Actually, it's not Bill that May is after at all, but Mollie's parents' jewels. All ends happily when May is apprehended by Bill's associate (and former crook), Spike Hudgins (Edward Ebeles). A thoroughly entertaining score contained no immediately identifiable hits, although Kern's music and Wodehouse's lyrics were far superior than those of their contemporaries - always relevant to the libretto - and continually pushing musical comedy forward. The songs included 'Before I Met You', 'Dear Old Prison Days', 'Do Look At Him', 'Do It Now', 'I'm To Be Married Today', 'It's A Hard, Hard World For A Man', 'Little Ships Come Sailing Home', 'Moon Song' 'Not Yet', 'Our Little Nest', 'A Picture I Want To See Of You', 'Some Little Girl', 'Waiting Round The Corner', 'You Found Me And I Found You', and 'Greenwich Village'. The latter number was featured in a spectacular rooftop sequence set in that New York location. One song was discarded during rehearsals because it was not considered suitable for Vivienne Segal's voice. It almost got to Broadway via Zip Goes A Million in 1919, but eventually had to wait until 1927 before it was introduced to the world by Helen Morgan in the magnificent Show Boat. The song in question was 'Bill'. Even without it, Oh, Lady! Lady!! had an excellent run of 219 performances.

Oh, What A Lovely War!

This 'British musical entertainment' started out at the Theatre Royal, Stratford East in March 1963 before transferring to Wyndham's Theatre on 29 June that year. The cast consisted mainly of members of the Theatre Royal's 'repertory company', such as George Sewell, Avis Bunnage, Brian Murphy, Victor Spinetti, et al. Some of them collaborated with librettist Charles Chilton on the book, which purported to reflect the misery and sheer waste of human life during World War I from the coercive recruitment methods ('We Don't Want To Lose You, But We Think You Ought To Go') to the grim reality of the trenches. This was achieved in an intelligent and humorous fashion by the use of more than 20 popular songs of the period, such as 'Your King And Country Need You', 'I'll Make A Man Of You', 'Goodbye ee', 'When This Lousy War Is Over', 'Hush, Here Comes A Whizzbang', 'Belgium Put The Kibosh On the Kaiser', 'Keep The Home Fires Burning', 'I Want To Go Home', and Jerome Kern's lovely ballad 'They Didn't Believe Me'. Although some aspects of what started out at Stratford as a bitter anti-war tract were softened somewhat for West End audiences, the message remained loud and clear, and Oh, What A Lovely War! continued to spell it out for more than two years, during which time it won the Evening Standard Award for best musical. The appeal proved not to be so great in America, although Victor Spinetti won a Tony Award for best supporting actor, and the show folded after three and a half months. The 1969 film, directed by Richard Attenborough, adopted a different, star-studded approach. A rare revival of Oh, What A Lovely War! was presented by the UK National Youth Theatre in 1994 at the Bloomsbury Theatre in London. Four years later, exactly 35 years after the show's Stratford East premiere, a Royal National Theatre production, directed by Fiona Laird, embarked on a UK tour.

Ohio Express

Key players in the bubblegum trend of the late 60s, the Ohio Express evolved from the Mansfield, Ohio, USA-based group Rare Breed in 1967. The group consisted of Joey Levine (lead vocals), Dale Powers (lead guitar), Doug Grassel (rhythm guitar), Jim Pflayer (keyboards), Dean Krastan (bass) and Tim Corwin (drums). Their first single, 'Beg, Borrow And Steal', had originally been recorded by the group under its old moniker in 1966 before it was reissued the following year by Cameo Records. There the group teamed up with producers Jerry Kasenetz and Jeff Katz, and reached number 29 in the autumn of 1967. A second Cameo single to chart was 'Try It', a song penned by Levine that was later covered by the Standells. In 1968 the Ohio Express signed with Neil Bogart's Buddah Records and released the bubblegum 'Yummy Yummy Yummy', which became their biggest hit, reaching the Top 5 on both sides of the Atlantic. By the end of 1969 they had charted on six more occasions, the final time with 'Sausalito (Is The Place To Go)', sung by Graham Gouldman, later of 10cc fame. The Ohio Express released six albums, of which only Ohio Express and Chewy Chewy made any real impact on the US charts. The group carried on until 1972; Levine formed Reunion in 1974.

● ALBUMS: Beg, Borrow And Steal (Cameo 1968)★★, Ohio Express (Pye 1968)★★★, Salt Water Taffy (1968)★★, Chewy Chewy (Buddah 1969)★★★, Mercy (1969)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Very Best Of The Ohio Express (1970)★★★.

Ohio Knox

Ohio Knox was formed in 1972 in Los Angeles, California, USA, by Peter Gallaway (vocals, guitar; ex-Fifth Avenue Band) and also consisted of the session musicians Paul Harris (keyboards), Ray Neopolitan (bass) and Dallas Taylor (drums; ex-Clear Light and Crosby, Stills, Nash And Young). Ohio Knox featured the same lightweight pop rock of the singer's previous band and bore an obvious similarity to the work of John Sebastian. Galloway started a solo career when Harris and Taylor joined Stephen Stills' band, Manassas.

● ALBUMS: Ohio Knox (Reprise 1971)★★★.

Ohio Players

Formed in Dayton, Ohio, USA, in 1959, this multi-talented unit originated from three members of the Ohio Untouchables, Leroy 'Sugarfoot' Bonner, Clarence 'Satch' Satchell and Marshall Jones. They forged a reputation as a powerful instrumental group by providing the backing to the Falcons, whose R&B classic 'I Found A Love' (1962) featured singer Wilson Pickett. The Players began recording in their own right that same year, but did not achieve a notable success until the following decade when they embarked on a series of striking releases for the Westbound label after brief sessions for both Compass and Capitol Records. The group's experimental funk mirrored the work George Clinton had forged with Funkadelic for the same outlet and in 1973 the septet - Bonner, Satchell, Jones, Jimmy 'Diamond' Williams, Marvin 'Merv' Pierce, Billy Beck and Ralph 'Pee Wee' Middlebrook - enjoyed a massive R&B smash with the irrepressible 'Funky Worm'. The Players later switched to Mercury where their US hits included 'Fire' (1974) and 'Love Rollercoaster' (1975), both of which topped the soul and pop charts. 'Who'd She Coo?' became the group's last substantial hit the following year and although success did continue throughout the rest of the 70s, their releases grew increasingly predictable. The group had become renowned for their sexually explicit album covers, suggesting the possibilities of a jar of honey, or depicting macho males dominating scantily clad subservient females - and vice-versa. However, their musical credibility was such that their version of 'Over The Rainbow' was played at Judy Garland's funeral. Williams and Beck left the line-up in 1979 to form a new group, Shadow. A reshaped Ohio Players recorded throughout the 80s, and scored a minor soul hit in 1988 with 'Sweat'. They have continued touring into the 90s.

● ALBUMS: First Impressions (1968)★★, Observations In Time (1968)★★, Pain (Westbound 1972)★★★, Pleasure (Westbound 1973)★★★, Ecstasy (Westbound 1973)★★★, Skin Tight (Mercury 1974)★★, Climax a collection of out-takes (Westbound 1974)★★, Fire (Mercury 1974)★★★★, Honey (Mercury 1975)★★★★, Contradiction (Mercury 1976)★★★, Angel (Mercury 1977)★, Mr. Mean (Mercury 1977)★★, Jass-Ay-Lay-Dee (Mercury 1978)★★, Everybody Up (Arista 1979)★★, Tenderness (Boardwalk 1981)★★, Ouch! (Epic 1982)★★, Graduation (Air City 1985)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Ohio Players Greatest Hits (Westbound 1975)★★★, Rattlesnake (Westbound 1975)★★, Ohio Players Gold (Mercury 1976)★★★★, Ohio Players (Capitol 1977)★★, The Best Of The Westbound Years (Westbound 1991)★★★, Orgasm (Westbound 1993)★★★, Funk On Fire: The Mercury Anthology (Mercury 1997)★★★, Greatest Hits (Spectrum 1998)★★★.

Ohman, Phil

b. 1896, USA, d. 1954, Santa Monica, California, USA. Before setting up his own dance band, Ohman was the co-leader of the Arden-Ohman Orchestra with Victor Arden. They also shared the same musical skill, and would often perform together as a piano duo and as featured musicians in Broadway musicals. They released a number of records together, and were regulars on radio shows of the late 20s and early 30s. When the partnership broke up Ohman moved to the west coast and formed his own band, a 12-piece orchestra to back his ever popular compositions. These included 'Lazy Rolls The Rio Grande', 'The Cowboy And The Senorita', 'Dream Awhile', 'Strawberry Samba', 'Zilda', 'Each Time You Say Goodbye', 'Only One' and 'The Girl With The High Button Shoes'. They recorded extensively, holding contracts at various times with Edison, Victor, Columbia and Brunswick Records. Ohman also wrote a great deal for films and radio, performing regularly at the Hollywood Mocambo, where many of the film industry's starlets gathered. He continued to remain active as a bandleader until his death in 1954.

Ohrlin, Glenn

b. 26 October 1926, Minneapolis, Minnesota, USA. Ohrlin's father was a Swedish immigrant, and his mother's parents were from Norway. Apart from learning basic tunes and songs, and guitar technique, Glenn wanted to be a horse rider. At the age of 14, Ohrlin's family moved to California, and two years later he left home to go to Nevada to work in rodeo. He also worked on ranches throughout the West, and served in the US Army from 1945-46. After World War II, Ohrlin continued to absorb musical influences, including Flamenco guitar style, and traditional songs, learned from Mexican cowboys. He continued riding, both bareback and saddle, and, in September 1954, he and his wife moved to Mountain View, Arkansas to raise cattle. Later still, in 1960, having realized that some of the songs he was singing were important from a historical perspective, he began to collect songs from his friends and relations. Many of these were recorded in the field during the mid-60s. In April 1963, Glenn played at a Mountain View Festival, organized by the Rackensack Folklore Society. In September of the same year, Ohrlin travelled to Memphis, Tennessee, to play on the coffee house circuit. This, however, did not inspire any great reaction on the part of the music listening public at the time. He made his last rodeo ride in October 1963, at Andalusia, Alabama, and in less than three months made his debut recording, Glenn Ohrlin, in Illinois, in December 1963. It appeared on the University of Illinois Campus Folk Song Club Records label. The recording featured some of the songs performed at the University Folk Song Club on 14 December 1963, with other tracks taken from recordings made between 13 December and 16 March 1964. Glenn had already been recorded by Bruce Jackson during the summer of 1964. Between 1965-66, Ohrlin collected and recorded a number of performers throughout the states of Arkansas, Minnesota, and North Dakota. The material ranged from unaccompanied works (some with guitar and fiddle), to material sung in Swedish and Norwegian. The Hell-Bound Train contained tracks from the concert recorded in 1963-64, at the Campus Folksong Club.

● ALBUMS: The Hell-Bound Train - Glenn Ohrlin At The Campus Folksong Club (1964)★★★, with other artists The Midwinter Festival Of Traditional Music (1970)★★, The Wild Buckaroo (1983)★★★, with other artists Roots Of Country Music (1988)★★★. Other recorded works held in sound archives at Indiana University: Glenn Ohrlin At The Indiana University Folksong Club (1964)★★, Glenn Ohrlin At The Illinois Folksong Club (1964)★★★, Glenn Ohrlin At The Indiana Folksong Club (1964)★★, Glenn Ohrlin At The Campus Folksong Club (1968)★★, The Hell-Bound Train: A Cowboy Songbook (1973)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Hell-Bound Train: A Cowboy Song, Glenn Ohrlin.

Oi Polloi

This Scottish punk band were formed in Edinburgh in the early 80s, immediately gaining a reputation within both the anarchist and skinhead movements (their name, more than their actual music or attitudes, allied them to the nascent Oi! scene gathering pace in England). Although similarly influenced by the football terrace chanting aesthetic displayed by bands such as Sham 69 and the Cockney Rejects, Oi Polloi quickly proved themselves to be more deft both in terms of song construction and ideology than the Oi! bands. Acutely socially aware, emphasizing a strong anti-racist, anti-homophobic, pro-environmental stance, their only constant member through five albums of searing protest was Deek Allan (vocals). By 1990's grim manifesto, In Defence Of Our Earth, they had moved to the WOW Records label, also the home of Blaggers ITA. This was arguably their most compelling release, earning deserved respect from the anarchist/hardcore fraternity and some grudging reviews from a mainstream media who had effectively ignored the band up to this point.

● ALBUMS: Unlimited Genocide split album with AOA (1986)★★, Skins 'N' Punks II split album with the Betrayed (Oi! 1987)★★, Mad As Fuck (Don't You Think?) split album with Toxic Ephex (Green Vomit 1987)★★, Unite And Win (Oi! 1988)★★★, In Defence Of Our Earth (WOW 1990)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Outraged By The Atomic Menace (WOW 1991)★★★, Live (Released Emotions 1993)★★.

Oingo Boingo

An eight-piece band from Los Angeles, California, USA, Oingo Boingo's prolific, if unspectacular, career has always been centred on the compositional skills of leader Danny Elfman. Their early recordings for A&M Records were mainly synthesizer-led songs accompanied by a three-piece horn section, and many compared them to a 'west coast Devo'. They developed their sound, however, and on Nothing To Fear, for example, they attempted to achieve commercial recognition with electronic funk. Good For Your Soul, produced by Robert Margouleff, was more effective and included the notable 'Wake Up (It's 1984)', although too many of the band's songs remained slight and insubstantial. Elfman's solo debut, So-Lo, on which other members of the band played, gave prominence to his sometimes grandiose vocals and lyrical themes, but made little impression on the charts or the critics. Dead Man's Party anticipated Elfman's future solo career with material suited to film soundtracks (most obviously on 'Weird Science', which accompanied the movie of the same name and was released as a single). With forceful songs such as 'Help Me' and 'Stay', many see Dead Man's Party as Oingo Boingo's finest hour. Boi-ngo retreated to a more experimental stance, offering an intricate but difficult listening climate, in which instruments vied with each other and stereo effects in an aural collage, but not one destined for repeated listening. In the 90s Elfman concentrated increasingly on film and television soundtrack work, finding particular success with Batman, The Nightmare Before Christmas, Edward Scissorhands, Dick Tracy and The Simpsons. Despite this, he has continued to return to the Oingo Boingo format, releasing a double live album before a new studio set, Dark At The End Of The Tunnel, in 1990.

● ALBUMS: Oingo Boingo mini-album (IRS 1980)★★, Only A Lad (A&M 1981)★★, Nothing To Fear (A&M 1982)★★, Good For Your Soul (A&M 1983)★★, Dead Man's Party (MCA 1985)★★★, BOI-NGO (MCA 1987)★★, Boingo Alive: Celebration Of A Decade 1979-1988 (MCA 1988)★★, Dark At The End Of The Tunnel (MCA 1990)★★.

Solo: Danny Elfman So-lo (MCA 1984)★★, Music For A Darkened Theatre (MCA 1990)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Skeletons In The Closet: The Best Of Oingo Boingo (A&M 1989)★★, Farewell (A&M 1996)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Farewell (A&M Video 1996).

Oisin

This Irish folk group featured Geraldine MacGowan (vocals, bodhran), and Anne Conroy (accordion). For Winds Of Change, on Tara Records, was largely credited to MacGowan and Conroy but were supplemented by Davy Spillane (uillean pipes, low whistle), Tom McDonagh (bouzouki), Brian O'Connor (flute, whistle), Maire Bhreathnach (fiddle), Gerry O'Connor (fiddle), Steve Cooney (bass, synthesizer), Noel Bridgeman (percussion), and Shay MacGowan (vocals, guitar).

● ALBUMS: Oisin (1976)★★★, Bealoideas (1979)★★★★, Over The Moor To Maggie (1980)★★★★, The Jeannie C (1983)★★★, Winds Of Change (1987)★★★.

OK Computer - Radiohead

Having seemingly peaked with 1995's The Bends, Radiohead emerged two years later with a spiky and 'difficult' collection of songs far removed from the epic rock of the previous album. Eschewing the easy option of grafting stadium choruses onto every track, OK Computer is an album of distorted guitars and eerie atmospherics, welded together by Thom Yorke's acutely modern lyrics. The album's first single, 'Paranoid Android', perfectly encapsulated the band's new agenda: a stunning tri-part song whose aura of restlessness is captured by its thrilling musical adventure. With this album, Radiohead dragged rock music kicking and screaming into the late 90s.

● Tracks: Airbag; Paranoid Android; Subterranean Homesick Alien; Exit Music (For A Film); Let Down; Karma Police; Fitter Happier; Electioneering; Climbing Up The Walls; No Surprises; Lucky; The Tourist.

● First released 1997

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 21

OK Jazz

(see Franco)

OK Jive

A quintet of Ruby Jive, Lee Partis, Datsun Cherry, Bavon Wayne Wayne and 'Chopper', OK Jive made a brave attempt to conquer the charts in the early 80s with their brand of 'Congo Pop'. The group was formed after the demise of the Plymouth, Hampshire, England group Cha-Cha Rhythms Kings. A conscious attempt to translate Afro-pop traditions such as highlife, rumba and cha-cha for an English audience, their debut single, 'To You', was released on their own Frenzy Records in 1981. Although they attracted a good deal of early press (photographs showed them wearing exotic clothes in front of leopard skin backdrops) the experiment failed and they returned to obscurity after a handful of small-scale releases and a single session for Radio 1 disc jockey Richard Skinner.

Okasili, Martin

b. *c.*1966, London, England. Only the second prominent black Irish musician (he grew up in Craigavon, Northern Ireland) to come to mainstream attention following Phil Lynott, Martin Okasili set about making amends by titling his debut album The Invisible History Of The Black Celt. As he says, 'Being black (there) meant that I was a complete outsider. The nationalist and loyalist communities are so polarised and have invested so much in their own cultures that there's very little room for people who don't fit in a neat pigeonhole.' He was signed by WEA Records' A&R general manager Mickey D in 1996 after first seeing him two years earlier. He made his debut with the single, 'Survival Technique', which like his debut album was released in July. Both revealed an artist coming to terms with his roots, the album in particular moving from wild soul to rock and traditional Celtic folk. The most important component, however, was Okasili's resonant lyrics, establishing a storytelling approach to his ideas which managed to convey both maturity and passion.

● ALBUMS: The Invisible History Of The Black Celt (WEA 1996)★★★.

OKeh Records

One of the earliest labels to record black music, OKeh was founded by Otto Heineman in 1916 as a producer of all kinds of music. Its ethnic European music catalogue was especially strong. In 1920 the label launched the race music recording industry, when its musical director Fred Hagar hired songwriter Perry Bradford to produce 'Crazy Blues' by Mamie Smith. It was a massive hit in the black community and other labels soon followed the lead of OKeh. To market records to the black audience, the company coined the name 'race music' in its publicity. There was another first in 1923 when Hager's assistant Ralph Peer recorded performances by country music performer Fiddlin' John Carson in Atlanta, Georgia. Although it was sold to Columbia in 1926, OKeh remained the leading blues and jazz label of the 20s, recording tracks by Louis Armstrong, Lonnie Johnson, and many others. However, in common with the rest of the record business, its activities were drastically curtailed during the Depression, although Bessie Smith recorded for the label in 1933. After a hiatus for several years, OKeh was revived in 1940 as a home for R&B music, and in 1951 had a big hit with Johnnie Ray's 'Cry'. Later OKeh artists included Chuck Willis, Big Maybelle, and Screaming Jay Hawkins, but by the early 60s the label was virtually moribund. In 1962, producer Carl Davis was put in charge of A&R for OKeh and working out of Chicago revived the label's fortunes while producing a number of soul music hits by such artists as Billy Butler, Walter Jackson, Major Lance, and the Vibrations. OKeh lost its major asset with the departure of Davis in 1965, but the label managed to linger on until 1970, before it closed its doors. The label was ressurrected once more in the 90s, issued via Epic Records. One of the label's most interesting prospects are funk/rappers G. Love And Special Sauce.

● COMPILATIONS: The OKeh Rhythm & Blues Story 1949-57 (Epic 1994)★★★★.

Okey Dokey Stompers

British blues band the Okey Dokey Stompers were formed in Dagenham, Essex, England, in September 1992 from the ashes of the Corn Beef City Blues Band and the Impossibles. Comprising Stevie 'Young Blood' Cook (lead guitar), 'Automatic' Nick Nichols (vocals, harp), Gary 'Reverend Coco' Choules (bass), Johnny 'Boy' (keyboards) and 'Marky' Mark Ward (drums), members had also taken part in gigging bands such as Big Joe Louis, the Hoods and Night Prowler. Of these former incarnations, the Impossibles earned the greatest notoriety, as finalists in the Best Of British Blues competition sponsored by Banks Brewery in 1990/1. As the Okey Dokey Stompers the band played a shattering 400 gigs in their first two years, with a sound located somewhere between Texas and west coast rhythm and blues. A strong following for their energetic live shows led to the recording of a debut CD, Dangerman Blues, which was distributed by Hot Shot Records.

● ALBUMS: Dangerman Blues (Dyna-might 1994)★★★, I Told You So (Dixiefrog 1994)★★★, World Wide Open (Provogue 1995)★★★, Hurry On Home (Philo 1995)★★★.

Okie From Muskogee - Merle Haggard

A chance remark on Merle Haggard's tour bus led to him writing the anthem against draft-dodgers and hippies, 'Okie From Muskogee'. Was it for real or was it a parody? We will perhaps never know, but right-wing country fans were delighted to have a song that articulated their feelings. Haggard sided with blue-collar America on 'Working Man Blues', and country fans loved his songs about prison - 'Sing Me Back Home', 'Mama Tried', 'Branded Man' and 'I'm A Lonesome Fugitive' (Haggard had been in the audience when Johnny Cash played San Quentin). As John Stewart said in '18 Wheels', 'Eight track's playing me "Silver Wings", Like a razor's edge, Merle Haggard sings.'

- Tracks: Opening Introduction And Theme; Mama Tried; No Hard Times; Silver Wings; Swinging Doors; I'm A Lonesome Fugitive; Sing Me Back Home; Branded Man; In The Arms Of Love; Workin' Man Blues; Introduction To Hobo Bill; Hobo Bill's Last Ride; Billy Overcame His Size; If I Had Left It Up To You; White Line Fever; Blue Rock; Okie From Muskogee.
- First released 1970
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 46

Oklahoma! (film musical)

The show that opened on Broadway in 1943, and is credited with being a significant turning point in the history of the musical theatre, was transferred to the screen in the less than glorious Todd-AO widescreen process in 1955. The skilful integration of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II's wonderful songs into the sentimental but sincere story for which the stage production was so rightly admired, was equally impressive in this celluloid version. The action takes place just after the turn of the century, on and around a ranch in the Oklahoma Territory, where Laurey (Shirley Jones) lives with her Aunt Eller (Charlotte Greenwood). The handsome and decent Curly (Gordon MacRae) and the evil-looking and devious Jud (Rod Steiger) both want to take Laurey to the 'box social'. Her decision to spite Curly (with whom she actually wants to go) by accepting Jud's invitation, sets off a train of events that culminates in Jud's death, for which Curly is immediately blamed, but just as swiftly exonerated. Jones and MacRae were perfect together, and the supporting cast was exceptionally fine, with Gene Nelson as Will Parker and Gloria Grahame as his girlfriend Ado Annie, who 'just cain't say no'. Eddie Albert played a travelling pedlar-man, Ali Akim, whose indiscriminate use of a kissing technique known in his native country as 'A Persian Goodbye', results in a shotgun wedding. Other parts were taken by James Whitmore, Marc Platt, Barbara Lawrence and Roy Barcroft. Dancers James Mitchell and Bambi Lynn were stunning in the ballet sequence to the music of 'Out Of My Dreams'. Most of the rest of Rodgers and Hammerstein's rich and varied score was retained, and included all the favourites such as 'Oh, What A Beautiful Mornin'', 'The Surrey With The Fringe On Top', 'Kansas City', 'I Cain't Say No', 'Many A New Day', 'People Will Say We're In Love', 'Poor Jud Is Dead', 'The Farmer And The Cowman', 'All Er Nothin'', and the rousing 'Oklahoma'. Choreographer Agnes de Mille and musical arranger Robert Russell Bennett adapted their original stage work for the film, and Russell Bennett, together with Jay Blackton and Adolph Deutsch, won Oscars for 'scoring of a musical picture'. It was photographed in Technicolor and produced for Magna by Arthur Hornblow Jnr. The director was Fred Zinnemann. Sonya Levian and William Ludwig's screenplay was adapted from the original libretto by Oscar Hammerstein II, which was based on Lynn Riggs' play Green Grow The Lilacs.

Oklahoma! (stage musical)

If one show can be said to mark the turning-point in the history of the American musical theatre then it must be Oklahoma! Although many of the trend-setting features of the show had been tried before, sometimes successfully, never before had such features as a ballet sequence and a serious plot been blended so well into a production that had great dramatic merit and yet was filled with many wonderful songs. Set in the early years of the 20th century, as a section of Indian territory is about to become the state of Oklahoma, the story traces the love lives of two contrasting couples, Curly and Laurey, and Will Parker and Ado Annie. Conflict between farmers and cowmen, a staple of western films, provided drama as did the personal struggle for Laurey between Curly and Jud Fry, a disreputable farmhand who is finally killed in a knife fight with Curly. An on-stage death in a musical was another 'first' for Oklahoma!. Based upon Lynn Riggs's play, Green Grow The Lilacs, the book and lyrics for Oklahoma! were written by Oscar Hammerstein II with music by Richard Rodgers, the first time the two men had collaborated. Producers and outside commentators were agreed in their pre-production reservations about the show. Many felt it was doomed to failure, that the basis of an only moderately successful play, along with a collaboration between Hammerstein, who had been without a hit for some time, and Rodgers, now without his long-time collaborator Lorenz Hart, was a riskily shaky foundation. On opening night, 31 March 1943, despite playing to a less than full house at the St. James Theatre in New York, all doubts vanished. The vivid staging, sparkling choreography by Agnes de Mille, strong central performances, and above all a string of superb songs, made this the most momentous musical event of several decades. The songs included 'Oh, What A Beautiful Mornin'', which opened the show, 'The Surrey With The Fringe On Top', 'Kansas City', 'I Cain't Say No', 'Many A New Day', 'People Will Say We're In Love', 'The Farmer And The Cowman', 'Poor Jud', 'Out Of My Dreams', 'All Er Nothin'' and the rousing 'Oklahoma' with which the show ended. The original cast included Alfred Drake as Curly, Joan Roberts as Laurey, Lee Dixon as Will, Celeste Holm as Ado Annie, Howard Da Silva as Jud and Betty Garde as Laurey's Aunt Eller. By the time the show closed, after 2,248 performances, other artists had replaced one or another of the leads, among them Howard Keel, Shelley Winters and John Raitt. The 1947 London production starred Keel and Betty Jane Watson and ran for 1,151 performances. London audiences, still war-shocked and starved of spectacle - among other things - were overwhelmed. The show profoundly affected the producers of British shows, which were still rooted in the 30s sophistication of Noël Coward and the flimsy Ruritania of Ivor Novello. Oklahoma! was the opening wave of a transatlantic musical tide that would take three decades to reverse. The show became a near-permanent feature of the theatrical scenes of both the USA and UK with touring companies seemingly forever on the road. There were major New York revivals in 1951 and 1965, and the 1980 London production gave impresario Cameron Mackintosh one of the first of his many West End successes. The 1955 film version starred Gordon MacRae and Shirley Jones. In 1993, the show's 50th anniversary was marked by a special Tony Award and several more revivals worldwide.

● FURTHER READING: OK! The Story Of Oklahoma!, Max Wilk.

Oklahoma! - Various

Twelve years after it opened on Broadway, Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II's first musical burst onto the screen in the Todd-AO widescreen process, with a fine cast that included Gordon MacRae, Shirley Jones, Charlotte Greenwood, Rod Steiger, Gloria Grahame, Gene Nelson and James Whitmore. All the marvellous songs heard in the stage production are here, with the highlights being 'Oh, What A Beautiful Mornin'', 'The Surrey With The Fringe On Top', 'People Will Say We're In Love', and the rousing title number. A spell of over four years in the US charts (four weeks at number 1) says it all.

● Tracks: Oklahoma Overture; Oh, What A Beautiful Morning; Surrey With The Fringe On Top; Kansas City; I Can't Say No; Many A New Day; People Will Say We're In Love; Poor Jud Is Dead; Out Of My Dreams; Farmer And The Cowman; All Or Nothin'; Oklahoma.

● First released 1955

● UK peak chart position: 4

● USA peak chart position: 1

Okoshi, Tiger

b. 21 March 1950, Ashita, Japan. Tiger Okoshi moved to the USA in 1972 and played with artists including Gary Burton and Bob Moses. He has also had his own groups playing what he calls 'Baku music' - a Baku is a mythical creature that eats bad dreams. This is a form of jazz-rock fusion derived from the music Miles Davis was creating in the late 60s. Okoshi is an interesting composer and accomplished trumpeter.

● ALBUMS: Tiger's Baku (1981)★★★★, Mudd Cake (1982)★★★, with Gary Burton Times Square (1977)★★★, with Bob Moses Visit With The Great Spirit (1983)★★★.

Okosun, Sonny

b. 3 April 1947, Benin, Nigeria. On leaving school, Okosun's first ambition was to be an actor, and he spent a year training with Eastern Nigeria Theatre before joining his first group, the Postmen, in 1964. Nicknamed the Local Beatles by Benin music fans, the group concentrated on covers of western pop hits and were a big draw throughout Eastern Nigeria until the outbreak of civil war in 1967 led to their break-up. Western rock and pop, however, remained a big influence on Okosun, who later added reggae to the mix in an attempt to find an African-based style with wide international appeal. In 1969, Okosun joined Victor Uwaifo and his Melody Maestros, staying with the group for two years, touring Japan and throughout West Africa. In 1971, he decided he was ready to form his own band, and set up Paperback Unlimited, based in Lagos. Instrumentation and arrangements gave the group a sound similar to UK bands such as Cream or Traffic, but most of their material was in fact composed of reworkings of traditional local music. Paperback Unlimited stayed together until 1975 while Okosun refined his vision of an African-Western musical fusion. That year he began calling the style Ozzidizm, after a river god worshipped by the Ijaw people, and reformed Paperback Unlimited as Ozzidi. The band's approach, mixing highlife, progressive rock and touches of soul, rapidly became a major live draw throughout Nigeria and was followed by four best-selling albums - Ozzidi, Living Music, Papa's Land and Ozzidi For Sale. In 1977, Okosun began adding reggae elements to Ozzidizm, and went on to release his most successful albums - Fire In Soweto, which dealt with the struggle in South Africa, and Holy Wars, which looked to the day when Africa would be ruled by Africans. By the early 80s, Okosun's fascination with reggae had played itself out, and he abandoned Ozzidizm in favour of a new style which he called Afro-carnival, combining rock, funk and traditional African folk styles. The first album in the new mould was 1981's 3rd World, which was followed a year later by Mother And Child, a concept album marking the International Year of the Child. Despite the consistently outward-looking nature of his music, and regular tours of Britain and mainland Europe, Okosun by the mid-80s had failed to match the international impact of Fela Anikulapo Kuti, King Sunny Ade or Manu Dibango. In 1985, however, he embarked upon a well-received tour of the USA, to promote the release of his album, Liberation. That same year he launched a further attack on the world market with the British release, through Jive Afrika, of his 1983 album, Which Way Nigeria?, supported by a major UK tour. Despite the enthusiastic reception for both his USA and UK tours, Okosun's record sales in both territories continued to be limited to the specialist market, and by the late 80s he had decided to suspend his efforts for international recognition and concentrate on the West African market.

● ALBUMS: Ozzidi (1976)★★★, Ozzidi For Sale (1976)★★★, Living Music (NCC 1977)★★★★, Papa's Land (NCC 1977)★★★, Fire In Soweto (OTI 1978)★★★★, Holy Wars (NEMI 1978)★★★, 3rd World (NEMI 1981)★★★, Mother And Child (OTI 1982)★★★, Which Way Nigeria? (Jive Afrika 1983)★★★★, Liberation (Shanachie 1984)★★★, Africa Now Or Never (HMV 1986)★★★, Ozzidi/Ozone (1989)★★★, African Soldier (Profile 1991)★★★.

Ol' Dirty Bastard

New York rapper Ol' Dirty Bastard is a member of the American rap band Wu Tang Clan. His first solo album, however, was disappointingly formulaic. The album was interesting only on those tracks ('Brooklyn Zoo', 'Cuttin' Heads' and 'Snakes') which featured the familiar beats of the Wu Tang producer, RZA. Other guests from Wu Tang Clan included Method Man, The Ghost, and U God. At the time of the album's release, Ol' Dirty Bastard was pursued by police into an apartment. It was not a burglary, he claimed, but an attempt to escape from an assassin. A week later the same assailant shot him twice in the back.

- ALBUMS: Return To The 36 Chambers: The Dirty Version (WEA 1995)★★★★.

Ol' Waylon - Waylon Jennings

Although Waylon Jennings found fame as one of the country music outlaws, it is clear from 'Luchenbach, Texas' that he wasn't enjoying it much (Luchenbach was a minute town owned by an 'imagineer' Hondo Crouch, to which the outlaws returned for solace). Many of the songs reflected the darker side of Waylon's personality, notably 'Till I Gain Control Again', and a rock 'n' roll medley reminded us that he was around in the 50s and nearly took that aeroplane with Buddy Holly. At times on this album, it seems as if he wishes he had been on it.

- Tracks: Luchenbach, Texas (Back To The Basics Of Love); If You See Me Getting Smaller - with Larry Keith/Steve Pippin; Lucille; Sweet Caroline; I Think I'm Gonna Kill Myself; Belle Of The Ball; That's Alright; My Baby Left Me; Till I Gain Control Again; Brand New Goodbye Song; Satin Sheets - with Jesse Colter/Toni Wine; This Is Getting Funny (But There Ain't Nobody Laughing).
- First released 1977
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 15

Olaiya, Victor

b. Victor Abimbola Olaiya, 1926, Ijebu, Nigeria. Vocalist, composer and trumpeter Olaiya is one of the founding fathers of modern Nigerian highlife, a music he first became enthused by during Ghanaian bandleader E.T. Mensah's legendary and seminal tour of the country in 1952. During the 50s he led the Cool Cats, and during the 60s the All Stars, both hugely popular throughout west Africa. During the 70s he ran - and performed nightly at - his own club, the Papingo, in Lagos and was also involved in the Nigerian Musicians Union. Still active during the 80s, he frequently toured Nigeria with his International Stars, playing a form of highlife that had changed little since the 60s.

- ALBUMS: In The Sixties (Polydor Nigeria 1965)★★★, Highlife Reincarnation (Polydor Nigeria 1973)★★★★, Country Hard O! (Polydor Nigeria 1986)★★★★.

Olatunji, Babatunde

b. Michael Olatunji, 1939, Ijaw, Nigeria. Drummer and bandleader Olatunji moved to the USA in the early 60s to study medicine, but quickly joined a group of expatriate Africans in a musical group, partially formed to alleviate homesickness. He had already recorded the enormous local success, Drums Drums Drums, in 1959. As well as staying on the national charts for several years, this collection also allegedly sparked John Coltrane's interest in African culture. Olatunji soon resumed his musical career, and later enjoyed lucrative mainstream success with epic, highly sanitized, versions of traditional Nigerian drum and percussion music. Nevertheless, it brought him into the company of Carlos Santana, Bob Marley, Art Blakey and many other famed western musicians. His 1986 album, The Beat Of My Drum, even featured input from members of the Grateful Dead. By the advent of the 90s he was a popular session drummer, and had made the USA his permanent base of operations.

- ALBUMS: Drums Drums Drums (Columbia 1957)★★★, Drums Of Passion (Columbia 1959)★★★, More Drums Of Passion (Columbia 60s)★★, Flaming Drums (70s)★★★, The Beat Of My Drum (1986)★★, Drums Of Passion: The Beat (Provogue/Rykodisc 1989)★★★, The Invocation (Provogue/Rykodisc 1989)★★★.

Old 97's

Texas, USA band the Old 97's, alongside groups such as the Pickettes, Hazeldine and Whiskeytown (with whom they toured in the 'No Depression' package), are part of a second wave of grittier, grass-roots country rockers inspired by the breakthrough of groups such as Uncle Tupelo and Green On Red. Led by singer-songwriter Rhett Miller, the group have actually been compared to the Replacements and Clash as much as the former artists - a situation that suits Miller: 'We have never seen ourselves as a throwback country band by any means. We're a pop or rock band, but because we're from Texas, we happened to grow up listening to songs with classic songwriting structures like Hank Williams.' The band's 1997 debut for Elektra Records, Too Far To Care, highlighted Miller's affecting songwriting, ranging in tone from traditional country ('W. Tex. Teardrops') to stylish roots rock ('Time Bomb'). One of the best songs was 'Four Leaf Clover', a duet with punk legend Exene Cervenka (formerly of X, now of Auntie Christ - whose debut album featured Miller on backing vocals). Production was by ex-Orbit musician Wally Gagel, previously best known for his work with Sebadoh. Among the group's other high-profile fans is Waylon Jennings. He praised the group in a newspaper interview for the Austin Chronicle, and as a result was invited to record a joint single with the band.

- ALBUMS: Too Far To Care (Elektra 1997)★★★.

Old And In The Way

Formed in San Francisco, California, USA, Old And In The Way were active between 1973 and 1976. Founders Peter Rowan (lead vocals, guitar), David Grisman (mandolin, vocals), Richard Greene (violin, vocals) and John Kahn (bass) were previously members of superior bluegrass ensemble Muleskinner. The similarly styled Old And In The Way was buoyed by the inclusion of the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia (banjo, vocals). Vassar Clements replaced Greene prior to Old

And In The Way, which showcased the group's informal dexterity. As well as traditional material, the set featured a version of the Rolling Stones' 'Wild Horses' and a Rowan original, 'Panama Red', also recorded by the New Riders Of The Purple Sage. Garcia was later replaced by Bill Keith, another ex-member of Muleskinner, but commitments to contemporary projects brought Old And In The Way to an end. Garcia, Grisman and Greene were later reunited in the Great American String Band.

- ALBUMS: Old And In The Way (Round 1975)★★★.

Old And New Dreams

This group formed in 1976 and featured Ornette Coleman alumni, Dewey Redman, Don Cherry, Charlie Haden, Ed Blackwell. They came together to play music, particularly that of the early, acoustic bands. By the mid-70s Coleman had become committed to expressing his musical theory of Harmolodics through the medium of his electric band, Prime Time. Old And New Dreams set out to play in the spirit of, rather than recreate, the earlier acoustic groups by reworking compositions of the period as well as composing new numbers within the parameters of the Coleman style. The group has experienced a great deal of success, particularly on the European festival circuit, indicating the enduring quality of Coleman's early musical output.

- ALBUMS: Old And New Dreams (1976)★★★, Playing (1980)★★★, Tribute To Ed Blackwell (1990)★★.

Old Grey Whistle Test, The

The name was coined from a BBC commissionaire/doorman (presumably grey-suited and senior in years) who whistled the latest pop hits. Whatever he whistled passed the test of acceptability. With Top Of The Pops enjoying consistently high viewing figures in 1969, BBC Television decided its music coverage should be complemented by a less chart-orientated show reflecting the growth of the 'underground'. An initial attempt at fulfilling this need was made with How It Is (retitled How Late It Is when moved to a late-night format), produced by Tony Palmer. It is nowadays remembered chiefly for hosting the only British television appearance of Led Zeppelin (a performance of 'Communication Breakdown' which has subsequently been erased). When the BBC2 show Colour Me Pop was also axed, it left the field clear for the arrival of The Old Grey Whistle Test, first broadcast on 21 September 1971. America performed two songs live in the studio, accompanied by various filmed clips, with the show presented by journalist Richard Williams. It ran weekly until July 1972. The shows documented appearances by some of music's most enduring performers - including Jerry Lee Lewis, David Bowie, Stevie Wonder, the Beach Boys and Muddy Waters - all in its first series. However, it was the arrival of disc jockey 'Whispering' Bob Harris for the beginning of the second series in September 1972 that gave the show its identity. Harris's personal tastes informed the selection of many of the artists, including Rick Wakeman, who was the most regular early performer. However, The Old Grey Whistle Test also offered a melting pot of 70s music unavailable elsewhere, with blues, folk, fusion, jazz and singer-songwriters all performing in the unique 'live studio' format. Harris remained as host until the end of the seventh series in June 1978. With the arrival of punk he finally took a back seat behind disc jockey Annie Nightingale, joined in the early 80s by journalist David Hepworth. From September 1982 Hepworth became the main presenter with assistance from Mark Ellen, though both would later return to publishing with Q, Select and Mojo magazines. The show was revamped in the autumn of 1983 with the arrival of Andy Kershaw (alongside Hepworth and Ellen), but it survived only a further three years as Janet Street Porter pushed the channel into 'yoof' music. A brave attempt to provide a broadcast outlet for adult fans of rock and pop, The Old Grey Whistle Test, in spite of its evident flaws, prospered for nearly a decade and a half, and provided some of the best surviving footage (recently unearthed by the Windsong reissue company) of artists as diverse as the Who, Tim Buckley, Lynyrd Skynyrd, Jack Bruce, Can, Captain Beefheart, Fairport Convention, Nico and Siouxsie And The Banshees in their prime.

Old No. 1 - Guy Clark

Having retreated from Texas psychedelia to front a guitar repair shop, Guy Clark was saved from a journeyman life when several of his songs were covered by Jerry Jeff Walker. A recording contract ensued, which Clark embraced with this country/folk masterpiece. Mature lyricism and captivating melodies mark an intimate set enhanced by the singer's raspy, lived-in intonation. These largely autobiographical songs are never introverted and address scenarios of love, longing and ageing in a compelling, haunting manner. The evocative 'Desperados Waiting For A Train' exemplifies the skills of a crafted songsmith who reclaimed the art of the singer-songwriter at a time when it seemed doomed to self-pity.

- Tracks: Rita Ballou; LA Freeway; She Ain't Goin' Nowhere; A Nickel For The Fiddler; That Old Time Feeling; Texas 1947; Desperados Waiting For A Train; Like A Coat From The Cold; Instant Coffee Blues; Let Him Roll.
- First released 1971
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Old Rope String Band

More than simply a folk group, Newcastle, England's Old Rope String Band represent a complete entertainment package; comedy, mime and theatre accompanying traditional music of English and European extraction. In this way they draw as much influence from Dario Fo and the Commedi del'Arte as Pete Seeger or Phil Ochs. The members have all previously been involved in strands of the socialist protest movement.

Joe Scurfield (vocals, fiddle, guitar) formerly unicycled to performances with his ceilidh band, making his living from children's parties as 'Joey The Clown'. His former groups include the Peanuts Band (full title - We Don't Want The Peanuts, We Want The Whole Plantation), the Tyneside People's Choir and the Flop-eared Mules. While taking part in The Red Umbrella alliance which supported the UK coal miners' strike of 1984, he met fellow student and banjo player Pete Challoner. Together with guitarist Ian Carr, the Old Rope String Band was formed. Their performances in the north of England were instantly memorable - with instruments played while performing handstands, fire eating, comic routines and other such diversions. Challoner also played concurrently with Howling At The Moon until their demise in 1992, while Carr became an in-demand guitarist, performing with Syncopace, Simon Thoumire, the Rub and the Kathryn Tickell Band. These activities eventually forced him, reluctantly, to leave the band, and he was replaced by Scottish accordion and piano player, Tim Dalling, another veteran of alternative theatre. They continue to tour the north-east widely, carrying folk's protest tradition before them but imbuing it with great humour and sparkle.

- ALBUMS: TSORB Tape cassette only (TSORB 1993)★★★.

Old Swan Band

Formed in 1974 by Rod And Danny Stradling, the band comprised Rod Stradling (b. London, England; melodeon), Danny Stradling (b. London, England; tambourine, drum), Martin Brinsford (b. 17 August 1944, Gloucester, England; mouth organ, skulls), Fi Fraser (b. Fiona Mildred Newmarch Fraser, 31 July 1959, Barnet, Hertfordshire, England; fiddle, clarinet, hammer dulcimer), Jo Fraser (b. Jo-Anne Rachel Newmarch Fraser, 4 December 1960, St. Albans, Hertfordshire, England; whistle) and Ron Field (autoharp, banjo). The group played what was described as Southern English Country Dance music. At a time when the vast majority of other dance groups were performing Irish and Scottish dance music, the Old Swan Band were researching and revitalizing many English dance tunes that had been almost forgotten. As with many groups of the time, they were relatively short-lived due to the commitments of the various group members, with Brinsford joining Brass Monkey in 1981. Their influence resulted in a growing interest in English dance music, and the formation of a number of other groups who followed their example.

- ALBUMS: No Reels - The Empire Strikes Back (1976)★★★, Old Swan Brand (1978)★★★, Gamesters, Pickpockets And Harlots (1981)★★, The Old Swan Band (1984)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Still Swaning ... After All These Years (Free Reed 1995)★★★★.

Older - George Michael

After his agonizing litigation with Sony, Michael could have gone under. He had put his recorded career on ice for some time, and pop is fickle and disloyal. Older was preceded by the single 'Jesus To A Child', which, although a substantial hit, disappointed. Over the past two years this track has grown as a song that has seeped into the consciousness. Together with the rest of the album, it has taken a while, but it is now seen as a very fine record. Michael is better at the slow ballads like 'Older' and 'To Be Forgiven', but 'Fastlove' brings back strong memories of that fresh-faced lad performing with whassisname in Wham! Michael is here for the long haul.

- Tracks: Jesus To A Child; Fastlove; Older; Spinning The Wheel; It Doesn't Really Matter; The Strangest Thing; To Be Forgiven; Move On; Star People; You Have Been Loved; Free.
- First released 1996
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 6

Oldfield, Mike

b. 15 May 1953, Reading, Berkshire, England. Multi-instrumentalist Oldfield will forever be remembered for a piece of symphonic-length music he wrote before his 20th birthday. Tubular Bells sold 12 million copies worldwide and topped the charts in the USA and UK, staying in both for more than five years. He began his career providing acoustic guitar accompaniment to folk songs sung by his older sister, Sally Oldfield, who would often appear in Reading's pubs and clubs with Marianne Faithfull. Mike and Sally recorded Sallyangie together before he left to join Kevin Ayers And The Whole World, with whom he played bass and guitar for a short period. He continued working on his own material and produced a demo of instrumental music which later became Tubular Bells. Several record companies rejected the piece but entrepreneur Richard Branson, the head of Virgin stores, recognized its marketing potential. He asked Oldfield to re-record the demo in the recently acquired Manor Studios and it became one of Virgin's first releases. The 49-minute long piece was a series of basic melodies from folk, rock and classical sources that featured an array of different instruments, all played by Oldfield, and was introduced by guest master of ceremonies, Viv Stanshall. Excerpts from it were used in the horror film, The Exorcist, and a shortened version was released as a single in 1974.

On Hergest Ridge he attempted to capture Berkshire's pastoral beauty and largely succeeded, although matching the impact of Tubular Bells was clearly impossible and many critics dubbed the album 'Son of Tubular Bells' because of the similarity. It reached the top of the UK charts but, like all his subsequent album releases, it did not chart in the USA. Along with arranger Dave Bedford, a former collaborator of Kevin Ayers, he scored Tubular Bells and a version recorded by the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra was released in 1975. Ommadawn featured the uillean pipe-playing of the Chieftains' Paddy Moloney and a team of African drummers. It sold well but the critical response was that his introspective music had become over-formularized over the three albums. Virgin also saw the records as complementary works and packaged them together in 1976 as Boxed. Oldfield had two consecutive Christmas hits in 1975 and 1976 with the traditional 'In Dulci Jubilo' and 'Portsmouth'.

Around 1977-78, the shy, withdrawn Oldfield underwent a programme of self-assertiveness with the Exegesis method. The result was a complete reversal of personality and Oldfield took the opportunity in music press interviews to retaliate, almost to the point of parody, to accusations of limp, neo-hippie blandness and strongly defended himself against pillorying by the nascent punk movement. Incantations drew strongly on disco influences and Exposed was recorded at various concerts where Oldfield played with up to 50 other musicians. In 1979 Oldfield also recorded a version of the theme tune to the popular BBC Television show, Blue Peter. Entitled 'Barnacle Bill', it was released as a charity single and was subsequently adopted by the programme as a revamped signature tune. It was retained as such up to the late 80s Platinum, QE2 and Five Miles Out caught Oldfield slightly out of step with his contemporaries as he tried to hone his songwriting and avoid repeating himself. Hall And Oates recorded a version of 'Family Man', which had missed out as a single for Oldfield, and it became a Top 20 hit in the UK in 1983. Oldfield began working with soprano Maggie Reilly and she sang on the hit 'Moonlight Shadow' from Crises (where other guests included Roger Chapman (Family/Chapman Whitney). After Discovery he wrote the music for the award-winning film The Killing Fields. On Islands he was joined by further guest vocalists Bonnie Tyler and Kevin Ayers. Even though he was now writing to a more standard pop structure, Oldfield found himself no longer in vogue and his music was largely portrayed in the music press as anachronistic. Earth Moving, with contributions from Maggie Reilly, Anita Hegerland and Chris Thompson (ex-Manfred Mann) failed to challenge the prevailing modern view. It appears that Tubular Bells will always ring rather too loudly and diminish most of Oldfield's other work, certainly in terms of commercial acceptance, but he continues releasing records welcomed by a large cult following that apparently cares little about his low profile and the scarcity of live appearances. 1992 found him working with Trevor Horn on Tubular Bells II to mark the 20th anniversary of the original album. The album's success resulted in increased sales for the original Tubular Bells and led to a spectacular live concert of the new version.

● ALBUMS: with Sally Oldfield Sallyangie (Transatlantic 1968)★★, Tubular Bells (Virgin 1973)★★★★, Hergest Ridge (Virgin 1974)★★★, with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra The Orchestral Tubular Bells (Virgin 1975)★★★, Ommadawn (Virgin 1975)★★★, Incantations (Virgin 1978)★★, Exposed (Virgin 1979)★★, Platinum (Virgin 1979)★★, QE2 (Virgin 1980)★★, Five Miles Out (Virgin 1982)★★, Crises (Virgin 1983)★★, Discovery (Virgin 1984)★★, The Killing Fields film soundtrack (Virgin 1984)★★, Islands (Virgin 1987)★★, Earth Moving (Virgin 1989)★★, Amarok (Virgin 1990)★★, Heaven's Open (Virgin 1991)★★, Tubular Bells II (Warners 1992)★★★, The Songs Of Distant Earth (Warners 1994)★★, Voyager (Warners 1996)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Boxed (Virgin 1976)★★★, The Complete Mike Oldfield (Virgin 1985)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Wind Chimes (Virgin Vision 1988), Essential Mike Oldfield (Virgin Vision 1988), Elements (1993).

● FURTHER READING: True Story Of The Making Of Tubular Bells, Richard Newman. Mike Oldfield: A Man And His Music, Sean Moraghan.

Oldfield, Sally

This UK-born vocalist was the sister of Mike Oldfield. Together with her brother she formed Sallyangie and released an album and a couple of singles to little success. By the early 70s the duo had gone their separate ways professionally. While Mike was making a name for himself with albums like Tubular Bells and Hergest Ridge, Sally joined a number of small bands, and appeared as guest vocalist on her brother's first four albums. In 1978 she released a solo album which included her debut and only hit 'Mirrors'. Four other albums appeared on the Bronze label, all to mixed reactions and little success. She re-emerged in 1987 with the backing of a major label and considerable press backing, but still she could not add to her initial success. She remains highly popular in Europe, notably Germany and the Netherlands.

● ALBUMS: with Mike Oldfield Sallyangie (Transatlantic 1968)★★, Water Bearer (Bronze 1978)★★, Easy (Bronze 1979)★★, Celebration (Bronze 1980)★★, Playing With The Flame (Bronze 1981)★★, Strange Day In Berlin (Bronze 1983)★★, Femme (Columbia 1987)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Collection (Castle 1988)★★, Mirrors (Spectrum 1995)★★.

Oldham, Andrew Loog

b. 1944, England. A one-time office junior with designer Mary Quant, Oldham made several attempts at launching a pop career under such aliases as 'Chancery Lane' and 'Sandy Beach'. When these failed he took employment as a publicist for such disparate characters as Don Arden and Brian Epstein. It was during this period that Andrew became acquainted with American producer Phil Spector, who left an indelible mark on his thinking. Having spied a glowing testimony in Record Mirror, Oldham watched the Rolling Stones perform at Richmond's Crawdaddy club. Impressed, he persuaded the group to break an unofficial deal with impresario Giorgio Gomelsky and emerged as their manager and producer. Although he initially tried to cultivate a clean-cut image, Oldham quickly abandoned this in favour of a rebellious, unkempt approach that directly pitted his charges against the more sedate Beatles. Copy and publicity was honed for outrage, establishing an impression that haunts the group to this date. Several other charges, including Marianne Faithfull, the Poets and the Mighty Avengers, joined his management stable, and Oldham also began recording in his own right. Clearly still indebted to Phil Spector, he fronted the Andrew Loog Oldham Orchestra over a series of singles and albums which retain a curiosity, rather than musical, value. In 1965, Oldham established the Immediate label with associate Tony Calder. Despite initial success and an impressive roster which included the Small Faces, the Nice, Chris Farlowe and Amen Corner, the company was bankrupt by the end of the decade. Andrew's tenure with the Stones ended in 1967 when he was dismissed following a period of estrangement between the two parties. He later moved to New York, and having established a small office in Broadway's Brill Building, resumed his production career. In 1977 he returned to pop management with the Texan group the Werewolves, and the following year produced their debut album. Oldham latterly married a Colombian film star and now spends several months of the year in Bogota, which he once claimed invokes the atmosphere of 50s London. Still in business with Calder they have recently attempted to resurrect the Immediate label and in 1994 they put their efforts into writing a book on Abba.

● ALBUMS : 16 Hip Hits (Ace Of Clubs 1964)★★★, The Andrew Oldham Orchestra Plays Lionel Bart's Maggie May (1964)★★, East Meets West - Famous Hits Of The Beach Boys And The Four Seasons (1965)★★, The Rolling Stones Songbook (Decca 1965)★★, Gullivers Travels (Instant 1968)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Rarities (1984)★★.

● FURTHER READING: The Name Of The Game, A. Oldham, T. Calder and C. Irwin.

Oldham, Spooner

b. Lindon Dewey Oldham. Oldham first came to prominence as an in-house pianist at the Fame recording studio. Here he met Dan Penn and the resultant songwriting partnership was responsible for scores of southern soul compositions, including hits for James And Bobby Purify ('I'm Your Puppet'), Clarence Carter ('She Ain't Gonna Do Right') and Percy Sledge ('Out Of Left Field'). Oldham later moved to California where he became a fixture as a session musician, appearing on albums by Jackson Browne, Maria Muldaur, Linda Ronstadt and the Flying Burrito Brothers. He also maintained his relationship with Penn and the duo subsequently formed an independent production company. During the 70s/80s Oldham appeared with Neil Young as a member of the Gone With The Wind Orchestra and the International Harvesters.

Olive

Olive are a studio-bound project inaugurated in 1995 by Tim Kellet, Robin Taylor-Firth and singer Ruth-Ann Boyle (b. 1971, Sunderland, England). Kellet had formerly been a member of the horn group, Rebop, whilst at music college in Manchester, England. He subsequently joined Vini Reilly's Durutti Column, before 10 years spent as a sideman for Simply Red. He finally left that group after the hugely successful Stars tour, retreating to a purpose-built home studio he had financed in Derbyshire. The first result of his self-employment was a successful co-production venture with the Lighthouse Family. Taylor-Firth had previously worked in the Sheffield area with underground dance artists Nightmares On Wax, playing and co-writing their 1995 album. Via a mutual friend he made the acquaintance of Kellet, and the two agreed to work together on a collaborative project. The final piece of the jigsaw was completed by Ruth-Ann, a Sunderland native who had sung with many underground bands in that city and also contributed a sample of her voice to the Vini Reilly's 1996 album. Kellet discovered her by accident, playing a keyboard sample while in Reilly's company, and enquiring as to the origin of the voice. One hastily convened meeting later, Ruth-Ann had become the third and final member of the trio. They made their debut with 'Miracle', the perfect showcase for Ruth-Ann's haunting vibrato, released in July 1996 on RCA Records. The re-released 'You're Not Alone' brought the group a UK number 1 hit in May 1997.

● ALBUMS: Extra Virgin (BMG 1997)★★★, Miracle (BMG 1997)★★★.

Olivencia, Tommy

b. mid-30s, Villa Palmeras, Santurce, San Juan, Puerto Rico. During the three and a half decades of its existence, Olivencia's band has acted as an 'incubator' for various notable solo salsa singers, including Marvin Santiago (see Bobby Valentín), Paquito Guzmán, Lalo Rodríguez, Gilberto Santa Rosa, Frankie Ruiz and Héctor Tricoche. Olivencia began as a singer at the age of 16, but he preferred the role of trumpeter and musical director. He became a bandleader when he was 22-years-old. He favours a frontline of trumpets and trombones, and used a combination of four trumpets and two trombones on most of his albums since 1978. Tommy released his early recordings on his own Tioly label. He signed with Inca Records and remained with them until 1978. He switched to TH (Top Hits) Records (now TH-Rodven) and released eight albums on the label between 1978-88. In 1990, Olivencia's band was one of a number of popular Puerto Rican salsa acts lured to the major record company Capitol/EMI Latin. He debuted with them the following year. Early vocalists with Olivencia's band included Chamaco Ramírez and ex-Joe Quijano band member Paquito Guzmán. Ramírez's last recording with Tommy was 1975's Planté Bandera; heavy drug addiction destroyed his health and Chamaco died shortly after releasing the 1979 solo set Alive And Kicking, which contained material that its producer and arranger, Javier Vázquez, had originally prepared for Ismael Rivera to record. Apart from Olivencia's 1975 and 1976 releases, Guzmán was co-lead singer on six of the bandleader's albums between 1972-79. During the same period, Guzmán issued several solo albums on Inca Records, including Paquito

Guzmán (1972), Escucha Mi Canción (1975), Mintiendo Se Gana Mas (1977) and the compilation Peligro in 1980. He signed as a solo performer with TH Records and after releasing El Caballero de la Salsa (1983) and Paquito Guzmán Con Trio (1985), he became one of the earliest artists to record in the salsa romántica style on his major 1986 hit Las Mejores Baladas En Salsa. So-called sexy salsa boosted the ageing singer's career and he continued in the same vein with Tu Amante Romántico (1987) and Aquí Conmigo (1989). In 1990 Guzmán defected to Capitol/EMI Latin for more of the same on El Mismo Romántico. Additionally, Guzmán recorded with the Puerto Rico All Stars in the 70s and has sessioned extensively as a coro (chorus) singer.

Another Olivencia co-lead vocalist, Sammy González, left after 1972's Secuestro to join Roberto Roena's band Apollo Sound. Reinaldo Jorge, Olivencia's first trombonist, left the band, after 1974's Juntos De Nuevo. He relocated to New York and worked there with Los Kimbos, Fania All Stars, Conjunto Libre, Frankie Morales and Rubén Blades' Son del Solar, amongst others. In 1981, Jorge made his debut as a bandleader on No Sufro. Young trumpeter/arranger Luis 'Perico' Ortiz produced, performed on and contributed some first-rate arrangements to Tommy's albums between 1975-79. In 1976, 18-year-old singer/composer Lalo Rodríguez, who worked previously with Eddie Palmieri, joined Simón Pérez as co-lead vocalist on Introducing Lalo Rodríguez & Simón Pérez. The same year, Tommy won awards for the best band in Puerto Rico and best foreign band in Panamá. Rodríguez departed, but Pérez stayed on for three more albums with the band. In 1978 Olivencia won a Puerto Rican music industry Diplo award. The awards were created by Cuban Bernardo Hevia, editor of the salsa magazine Farándula, which he founded in 1958. Pérez was replaced in 1979 by Gilberto Santa Rosa on Tommy Olivencia & His Orchestra; after which Santa Rosa left to join Willie Rosario's band. Tommy hired two new young lead singers for 1981's Un Triángulo De Triunfo!: Frankie Ruiz and Carlos Alexis. Ruiz hails from Paterson, New Jersey, USA, and formerly sang lead vocals with the Puerto Rican band La Solución; he appeared on their commendable La Solución in 1980. Alexis was succeeded by Héctor Tricoche, who sang previously with Mikey Cora's Orquesta Cabala and La Terrifica, on Celebrando Otro Aniversario in 1984, which was Ruiz's last album with Olivencia. That year, Olivencia oversaw the production and his band provided the accompaniment for the veteran Colombian singer Nelson Pinedo on . . . Desde Puerto Rico. Three of Olivencia's hits performed by Ruiz: 'Primero Fui Yo' (from Un Triángulo De Triunfo!), 'Como Lo Hacen' (from Tommy Olivencia) and 'Te Estoy Estudiando' (from Celebrando Otro Aniversario), were written by veteran former heart throb singer/composer Raúl Marrero and arranged by guitarist/arranger Máximo Torres. Marrero recorded his own interpretation of the first two compositions as part of a medley on his 1988 release El Señor de la Salsa. In the latter part of the 80s, Máximo Torres became the director and arranger of the Salsa Selection band, which accompanied his son, singer Max Torres, on the best-sellers Sensualmente Tropical (1988) and Aprenderé! (1989). These were followed by the less successful Max Torres releases Peligroso Amor (1990) and From Puerto Rico (1991). Frankie Ruiz remained with TH (and TH-Rodven) and his first two solo releases: Solista . . . Pero No Solo (1985) and . . . Voy Pa' Encima! (1987), both topped the Billboard tropical/salsa chart. Historia Musical de Frankie Ruiz was a compilation of the young superstar's 14 best tracks with La Solución, Olivencia and his own band. It was released in time for Christmas 1987 and was another runaway success. Ruiz's emotive and captivating voice sounded strained - probably due to his gruelling gigging schedule - on his 1988 En Vivo Y . . . A Todo Color . . .!, which did less well in chart terms. His imprisonment for a drugs offense did not prevent 1989's . . . Mas Grande Que Nunca reaching number 1 in early 1990. Meanwhile, Ruiz was replaced by Paquito (Junior) Acosta on Olivencia's Ayer, Hoy, Mañana Y Siempre . . .! in 1985. In 1987 he celebrated three decades as a bandleader with the chart-topping 30 Aniversario. The album contained the smash hit 'Lobo Domesticado', performed by Héctor Tricoche and arranged by Máximo Torres, and an anniversary medley of past hits. Olivencia mixed salsa romántica flavoured songs with his usual searing salsa on El Jeque, which was his 1988 parting shot on TH-Rodven. Tricoche left and made his solo debut in 1990 with the TH-Rodven release Clase Aparte, which spawned the Máximo Torres arranged hit 'Hacer El Amor'. That year, Héctor appeared at the second part of the New York Salsa Festival at Madison Square Garden. His 1991 follow-up Motorizame contained the hit single 'Macho Pérez'. In 1990, singer Héctor 'Pichy' Pérez left Sonora Ponceña (see Papo Lucca) to join Olivencia as Tricoche's replacement. He made his recording debut with the band on 1991's Enamorado . . . Y Que! on Capitol/EMI Latin.

● ALBUMS: La Nueva Sensación (1965)★★★, Jala Jala y Guaguanco (1966)★★★, Fuego Fuego (1966)★★★, A Toda Maquina (1968)★★★★, Cueros, Salsa y Sentimiento (1969)★★★, with Paquito Guzmán and Sammy González Secuestro (1972)★★★★, with Chamaco Ramírez and Guzmán Juntos De Nuevo (1974)★★★, with Ramírez Planté Bandera (1975)★★★, Introducing Lalo Rodríguez & Simón Pérez (1976)★★★, with Guzmán and Pérez El Negro Chombo (1977)★★★, with Guzmán and Perez La Primerisima (1978)★★★, with Guzmán and Pérez Sweat Trumpet Hot 'Salsa' (1978)★★★★, with Gilberto Santa Rosa and Guzmán Tommy Olivencia & His Orchestra (1979)★★★, with Frankie Ruiz and Carlos Alexis Un Triángulo De Triunfo! (1981)★★★, with Ruiz and Alexis Tommy Olivencia (1983)★★★, with Ruiz and Héctor Tricoche Celebrando Otro Aniversario (1984)★★★★, with Nelson Pinedo... Desde Puerto Rico (1984)★★★, with Tricoche and Paquito Acosta Ayer, Hoy, Mañana Y Siempre..! (1985)★★★, with Tricoche and Acosta

30 Aniversario (1987)★★★★, with Tricoche and Acosta El Jeque (1988)★★★★, with Pichy Pérez, Acosta Enamorado... Y Que! (1991)★★★.
● COMPILATIONS: Lo Mejor de/The Best Of Tommy Olivencia (1975)★★★★, Fiesta De Soneros (1978)★★★★, Las 12 Grandes De Tommy Olivencia (1991)★★★★.

Oliver! (film musical)

'Please sir, can I have some more' was not just the tragic cry of the young orphan in Charles Dickens' famous story, but the plea of theatregoers both in Britain and on Broadway when they witnessed the tremendous success of Lionel Bart's stage musical Oliver! in the early 60s. Therefore, it was not surprising that the film adaptation of the stage hit, released in December 1968, with just two songs missing from the original score, did so well and became such a favourite with adults and children alike. Adapted for the screen by Vernon Harris, this musical version of the Dickens story follows young Oliver (Mark Lester) as he runs away from his desperately unhappy existence in a poor-house and his job as an undertaker's assistant, only to find himself lost in the big city. Here he meets the worldly wise Artful Dodger (Jack Wild), and falls in with a group of young pickpockets. At the head of this gang is Fagin (Ron Moody in the part he orginally played on stage), a scoundrel who always keeps one eye on his 'bank' balance and the other on the boys in his charge. It is in Fagin's hideout that Oliver has his first stealing lessons, but the innocent boy gets caught on one of his first attempts. His subsequent arrest leads to the discovery of a loving and wealthy relative, and, eventually a happy ending to the story. Oliver Reed gives a truly villainous performance as Bill Sikes, and Shani Wallis is more than adequate in the role of Nancy, the girl who loves despite his evil nature. Directed by Carol Reed, and produced by John Woolf, Oliver! is an enchanting film full of great musical sequences and emotional drama. Mark Lester is perfectly innocent in the leading role. His rendition of the plaintive 'Where is Love?' tugs at the audience's heartstrings, and the scene in Fagin's den when he joins Nancy for 'I'd Do Anything' is gentle and touching. Other highspots include Nancy's powerful reaffirmation of her love for Bill in 'As Long As He Needs Me', and Fagin's 'You've Got To Pick A Pocket Or Two' which is a quirky and irresistible celebration of villainy, while his indecision and frustration are perfectly captured in the witty lyrics of 'Reviewing The Situation'. However, it is not just the individual performances that make the film so successful. The ensemble musical numbers are often breathtaking, ranging from the fantasizing of 'Food Glorious Food' to the brotherhood of 'Consider Yourself.' The rest of the fine score includes 'Boy For Sale', 'Who Will Buy?', and the joyous 'Oom-Pah-Pah'. Among the excellent supporting cast were Harry Secombe, Leonard Rossiter, Hugh Griffith, Fred Emney and James Hayter. The film was beautifully photographed in Technicolor and Panavision by Oswald Morris. Oliver! won five Oscars, for best picture, director, choreographer (Onna White), and remains one of the all-time great British movies.

Oliver! (stage musical)

Soon after it opened at the New Theatre in London on 30 June 1960, Oliver! was an instant success, winning rave reviews and ecstatic audiences. With book, music and lyrics by Lionel Bart, the show's storyline was reasonably faithful to Oliver Twist, the Charles Dickens novel upon which it was based. Filled with memorable songs, from sweet ballads to comic masterpieces, the show had the benefit of a strong cast and one performance that ranks among the genre's finest - Ron Moody's Fagin was worth the price of admission alone. Well supported by a cast that included Georgia Brown as Nancy, Danny Sewell (Bill Sikes), Barry Humphries (Mr. Sowerberry), Sonia Fraser (Mrs. Sowerberry), Paul Whitsun-Jones (Mr. Bumble), Hope Jackman (Mrs. Corney), Betty Turner (Old Sally), Trevor Ray (Noah Claypole), Dian Grey (Bet), George Bishop (Mr. Brownlow), Claude Jones (Mr. Grimwig), Madeline Newbury (Mrs. Bedwin), and a succession of good Olivers (Keith Hampshire, Royston Thomas, Martin Stephens) and Artful Dodgers (Martin Horsey, Tony Robinson, Michael Goodman), Oliver! was excellent entertainment, although the book, which followed young Oliver's journey from the workhouse, via 'employment' in Fagin's gang of thieves, to eventual security with new-found members of his own family, was considered rather lightweight compared to the original Dickens. However, no such reservations were expressed about Bart's thrilling songs, which included 'As Long As He Needs Me', 'Where Is Love?', 'Food, Glorious Food', 'Consider Yourself', 'You've Got To Pick A Pocket Or Two', 'Come Back Soon', 'I Shall Scream', 'Who Will Buy?', 'Oom-Pah-Pah', 'I'd Do Anything' and 'Reviewing The Situation'. The show also had the benefit of extraordinary sets by Sean Kenny, much-admired to the point of outright copying in later years. Oliver! ran for 2,618 performances in London, while Georgia Brown, Barry Humphries, and Danny Sewell reprised their roles, with Clive Revill as Fagin, for the 1963 New York production which ran at the Imperial and Shubert Theatres for nearly two years. The Broadway production won Tony Awards for composer and lyricist (Bart), scenic designer (Kenny), and musical director-conductor (Donald Pippin). The 1968 film version dropped a song or two, inexplicably replaced Brown with Shani Wallis, but fortunately preserved Moody's performance for all time. There were also good child actors in Mark Lester as Oliver and, particularly, Jack Wild as the Artful Dodger. Other young stars in the latter role have included Phil Collins and Steve Marriott. Not surprisingly, Oliver! has been revived many times over the years by amateur and professional companies alike, most recently in Cameron Mackintosh's major production at the London Palladium which opened on 8 December 1994 with a £7 million box office advance. Directed by Sam

Mendes, it starred Jonathan Pryce as Fagin, Sally Dexter as Nancy, Miles Anderson (Bill), Gregory Bradley/James Daley (Oliver), and Paul Bailey/Adam Searles (Dodger). Searles virtually stole the show on the first night. The lavish £3.5 million presentation was generally enthusiastically received by the critics - and Lionel Bart - who, courtesy of Cameron Mackintosh, recouped a portion of the show's rights which he had sold many years earlier. Subsequent cast changes included Claire Moore, Ruthie Henshall, and Sonia Swaby (the first time a black actress had played the role in the West End) as Nancy, and in the part of Fagin - George Layton (a holiday replacement), Jim Dale, Russ Abbott, and Robert Lindsay, who won a Laurence Olivier Award for his outstanding performance. In May 1997, Barry Humphries, by now well known worldwide for his portrayal of Australian superstar Dame Edna Everage, took over the role of Fagin. After creating the part of undertaker Sowerberry in the original London production, Humphries had played Fagin in the 1967 revival of Oliver! at the Piccadilly Theatre. Some 30 years later, on 8 July 1997, he was leading the cast when Oliver! became the longest-running show in the history of the London Palladium.

Oliver! - Original London Cast

A perfect souvenir of Lionel Bart's celebrated stage musical which was a smash hit in London and on Broadway in the early 60s. All the drama and exuberance of Peter Coe's breathtaking original production is captured perfectly on this album, with stand-out performances from Ron Moody (Fagin), Georgia Brown (Nancy) and Keith Hamshere (Oliver Twist). The 1989 reissue on CD is a timely reminder that, although there have been many stage revivals over the past 30 years - and an excellent film version in 1968 - this cast laid down the definitive version of Bart's masterpiece (although Robert Lindsay came close). Once again, its all about great, great songs

- Tracks: Food Glorious Food; Oliver; I Shall Scream; Boy For Sale; That's Your Funeral; Where Is Love?; Consider Yourself; You've Got To Pick A Pocket Or Two; It's A Fine Life; Be Back Soon; Oom Pah Pah; My Name; As Long As He Needs Me; I'd Do Anything; Who Will Buy?; Reviewing The Situation; Finale.
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Oliver! - Various

Ron Moody recreates his magnificent stage performance as Fagin on this soundtrack album of what must be the best British musical film ever. Shani Wallis replaced Georgia Brown as Nancy, and, together with Mark Lester (Oliver), Jack Wild (Artful Dodger) and Oliver Reed (the sinister Bill Sikes), gives Lionel Bart's marvellous score the full treatment. Highlights are impossible to select; Oliver's tender 'Where Is Love?' and Fagin's 'You've Got To Pick A Pocket Or Two' linger in the memory, but the complete set is as fresh now as when it was released over 25 years ago. In those pre-Lloyd Webber days, musicals had lots of strong songs, not just one.

- Tracks: Overture; Food Glorious Food; Boy For Sale; Where Is Love?; You've Got To Pick A Pocket Or Two; Consider Yourself; I'd Do Anything; Be Back Soon; As Long As He Needs Me; Who Will Buy; It's A Fine Life; Reviewing The Situation; Oom Pah Pah; Finale.
- First released 1968
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: 20

Oliver, Frankie

b. 1970, Bow, London, England. Oliver's early influences include Dennis Brown, Gregory Isaacs and Bob Marley. His initial introduction to reggae was through his cousin, who first played him Marley's Kaya. Oliver was instantly fascinated, and persuaded his mother to buy him a copy of the album. Impressed by the power of the playing and songwriting, and influenced by the sound of Jamaica, Oliver decided to pursue a career in the reggae industry, despite lacking the usual credentials, being a white East-ender of Greek/Cypriot descent; however, undeterred, he fought against these obstacles. He began performing in clubs and pubs in the East End of London and neighbouring Essex, where he was spotted by Christine Atkins of Island Records. She asked him to provide a demo, which led to requests for further examples of his work. Unfamiliar with the recording industry, Oliver had no other demo versions, although he was able to overcome this drawback through a chance meeting with Delroy Pinnock. Pinnock had been involved in the UK reggae scene for a number of years in various guises, best remembered for his 1981 S&G hit, 'I Want To Be', and became responsible for launching Oliver's recording career. The second demo arrived at Island when Sly Dunbar and Robbie Shakespeare were in the office, and having heard the results, they invited the singer to record in Jamaica. The sessions led to his debut single, 'She Lied To Me', which faltered, although the b-side, 'What Is Life', proved acceptable within the reggae industry. His record company was determined to promote him as Britain's answer to Snow, following the hapless debut with the heavily promoted 'Give Her What She Wants'. The release demonstrated a vocal style similar to Ali Campbell of UB40, with DJ vocals provided by Bigga Ranks, but despite all the promotional efforts, his follow-up suffered the same fate. In an effort to increase his profile the label secured a billing at the Essential Festival Roots Day, the Respect Festival and as the support act for Ziggy Marley's showcase at the Forum in London.

- ALBUMS: Looking For The Twist (Island Jamaica 1997)★★★.

Oliver, Joe 'King'

b. 11 May 1885, Louisiana, USA, d. 10 April 1938. Raised in New Orleans, cornetist Oliver became well known through appearances with local marching and cabaret bands during the early years of this century. After playing with such notable early jazzmen as Kid Ory and Richard M. Jones in 1918, he left for Chicago and two years later was leading his own band. After a brief trip to California, Oliver returned to Chicago and performed an engagement at the Lincoln Gardens. This was in 1922 and his band then included such outstanding musicians as Johnny and Baby Dodds, Lil Hardin and Honore Dutrey. Not content with being merely the best jazz band in town, Oliver sent word to New Orleans and brought in the fast-rising young cornetist Louis Armstrong. His motives in hiring Armstrong might have been questionable. Hardin, who later married Armstrong, reported that Oliver openly stated that his intention was to ensure that by having the newcomer playing second cornet in his band he need not fear him as a competitor. Whatever the reason, the Oliver band with Armstrong was a sensation. Musicians flocked to hear the band, marvelling at the seemingly telepathic communication between the two men. The band's glory days did not last long; by 1924 the Dodds brothers had gone, dissatisfied with their financial arrangements, and Armstrong had been taken by his new wife on the first stage of his transition to international star. Oliver continued leading a band but he quickly discovered that his example had been followed by many, and that even if his imitators were often musically inferior they had made it harder for him to obtain good jobs. His own judgement was also sometimes at fault; he turned down an offer to lead a band at New York's Cotton Club because the money was not good enough and lived to see Duke Ellington take the job and the radio exposure that went with it. In the early 30s Oliver led a succession of territory bands with a measure of local success but he rarely played. He was suffering from a disease of the gums and playing the cornet was, at best, a painful exercise. By 1936 he had quit the business of which he had once been king and took a job as a janitor in Savannah, Georgia, where he died in 1938. An outstanding exponent of New Orleans-style cornet playing, Oliver was one of the most important musicians in spreading jazz through his 1923-24 recordings, even if these did not gain their internationally-accepted status as classic milestones until after his death. His role in the advance of Armstrong's career is also of significance, although, clearly, nothing would have stopped the younger man from achieving his later fame. Stylistically, Oliver's influence on Armstrong was important although here again the pupil quickly outstripped his tutor in technique, imagination and inventiveness. Setting aside the role he played in Armstrong's life, and the corresponding reflected glory Armstrong threw upon him, Oliver can be seen and heard to have been a striking soloist and a massively self-confident ensemble leader. He was also a sensitive accompanist, making several fine records with popular blues singers of the day.

● COMPILATIONS: King Oliver (Brunswick 1950)★★★, King Oliver Plays The Blues (Riverside 1953)★★★, King Oliver's Uptown Jazz (X 1954)★★★, King Oliver Featuring Louis Armstrong (Epic 1956)★★★★, King Oliver And His Orchestra (Epic 1960)★★★, King Oliver In New York (RCA Victor 1965)★★★, Complete Vocalion/Brunswick Recordings 1926 - 1931 (1992)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: King Joe Oliver, Walter C. Allen and Brian A.L. Rust. 'King' Oliver, Laurie Wright. King Oliver And Kings Of Jazz, M Williams.

Oliver, Sy

b. Melvin James Oliver, 17 December 1910, Battle Creek, Michigan, USA, d. 28 May 1988. Born into a family in which both parents were music teachers, Oliver played trumpet as a child and at the age of 17 was a member of the popular territory band led by Zack Whyte. During this stint he began arranging, primarily to prove to his older and supposedly wiser fellow sidemen that his theories about harmony were sound. After the Whyte band, Oliver played in another important territory band, led by Alphonso Trent. Then, after some of his arrangements had been accepted by Jimmie Lunceford, Oliver took a job with his band, playing in the trumpet section, singing and arranging. Lunceford had already enjoyed the benefits of good arrangers in Eddie Durham and, especially, Eddie Wilcox; but, more than anyone, it was Oliver who shaped the sound of the Lunceford band from 1933 until 1939, the period of its greatest commercial and aesthetic success. Oliver's use of two-beat rhythm, stop-time breaks, intricate saxophone choruses and ear-splitting brass explosions, brilliantly executed by Lunceford's musicians, in particular drummer Jimmy Crawford and lead alto saxophonist Willie Smith, not only sealed Lunceford's success but created a style of big band music which proved widely influential. Oliver's arranging style was especially suitable to the more commercial aspects of the swing era and was taken up and adapted by many of his contemporaries and successors. Although employed by Lunceford, Oliver did arrange for other bands too, including Benny Goodman's, and his reputation in the business was enviable. Tiring of his work with Lunceford, Oliver decided to quit music and study law, but Tommy Dorsey made him an offer he could not refuse: $5,000 a year more than he'd earned with Lunceford. Oliver's arrangements for Dorsey propelled the band into a new era of success, which transcended what had gone before for both arranger and leader. 'Swing High', 'Well, Git It!', 'Sunny Side Of the Street' and 'Opus No. 1' were all massively popular and the records became big sellers. After military service during World War II, Oliver briefly led his own musically excellent but commercially unsuccessful big band and worked as a freelance arranger, his charts being used by Dorsey and by studios for recording orchestras' dates with singers such as Ella Fitzgerald and Frank Sinatra. In the 60s he once again tried bandleading, but as before was not prepared to bow to commercial pressures. In the late 60s and 70s he toured extensively, resumed trumpet playing and undertook several club residencies in New York, a pattern which persisted into the 80s. A major figure in the development of jazz arranging, Oliver was almost single-handedly responsible for the creation of what later became definable as mainstream big band music. His use of attacking brass and clean ensemble passages was picked up and modified, sometimes simplified, but rarely if ever improved.

- ALBUMS: Sy Oliver And His Orchestra i (1954)★★★, Sy Oliver And His Orchestra ii (1957)★★★, Sy Oliver And His Orchestra iii (1958)★★★★, Sy Oliver And His Orchestra iv (1958)★★★, Back Stage (1959)★★★, 77 Sunset Strip (1959)★★, Just A Minute (1960), Annie Laurie (1960)★★★, Four Roses Dance Party (1961)★★★, Easy Walker (1962)★★★, Take Me Back (1972)★★★★, Yes, Indeed! (1973)★★★, Sy Oliver And His Orchestra Play The Famous Rainbow Room (1976)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Indispensable Tommy Dorsey, Vols 7/8 (1939 recordings)★★★★, The Complete Jimmie Lunceford (1939-40 recordings)★★★★.

Olivier, Laurence, Awards

These awards are presented by the Society of West End Theatre in recognition of distinguished artistic achievement in West End Theatre. They were established in 1976 as the Society of West End Theatre Awards. Lord Olivier agreed to have his name associated with them in 1984 and they are now regarded as the highlight of the British theatrical year. The Awards are judged by three separate panels; for theatre, opera, and dance. The Theatre Panel comprises seven people chosen for their specialist knowledge and professional experience, plus six members of the theatre-going public. Anyone who applies to be included in the latter group should be prepared to see some 80 productions during the Awards year. The musical categories consist of: best director choreographer, actress, actor, supporting performance, revival, and the American Express Award for Best Musical. A musical production, or those associated with it, can also conceivably win in other sections such as best entertainment, costume design, lighting design, set design, outstanding achievement, and lifetime achievement. In 1993, the musicals prizes all went to the highly acclaimed British productions of the American shows Carousel, Crazy For You, and Assassins. The bronze Laurence Olivier Award itself was specially commissioned by the Society from the sculptor Harry Franchetti and represents the young Laurence Olivier as Henry V at the Old Vic in 1937.

Ollie And Jerry

The R&B duo of Ollie Brown and Jerry Knight came from Los Angeles, California, USA. This dance music producing and writing team briefly charted courtesy of two soundtrack items from the motion picture Breakin'. Their 'Breakin' . . . There's No Stopping Us' went to number 3 in the US R&B chart and number 9 national in 1984, and later in the year 'Electric Boogie' proved to be a minor R&B hit at number 45. In the UK, 'Breakin' . . . There's No Stopping Us' went to number 5 in 1984, and 'Electric Boogaloo' went to number 57 in 1985. The Ollie and Jerry team was somewhat of an outgrowth of their work together on several albums for Ray Parker, Jnr., and his Raydio group. Brown continued his career in Detroit in 1975, playing drums with Edwin Starr, Stevie Wonder and the Rolling Stones, and beginning in 1978 as guest drummer for Raydio. By the early 80s he was producing for such acts as Patti Austin and Klique. Knight began his musical career as bass player in Bill Withers' band, and then moved to Raydio, where he sang the high parts as well as played bass. He charted with three albums, Jerry Knight (1980), Perfect Fit (1981) and Love's On Our Side (1983) and six singles, notably 'Overnight Sensation' (US R&B number 17, 1980) and 'Perfect Fit' (1981), before teaming up with Ollie Brown on the soundtrack titles for Breakin'.

- FILMS: Breakdance - The Movie (1984).

Olsen, George

b. 1893, USA, d. 18 March 1971, Paramus, New Jersey, USA. Olsen started his first dance band in Portland, Oregon, USA, in 1917. A six-piece group, this early combo included Wilbur Johnson, who at that time travelled under the billing 'the world's only mellophone soloist', violinist Herman Kanin, later president of the American Federation of Musicians, and Olsen himself as drummer. Afterwards Olsen relocated to California to play theatre and ballroom dates. At that time he was contacted by Florenz Ziegfeld, who invited him to travel to New York to play in the musical comedy Kid Boots. Other Broadway shows followed, including Whoopee, The Girl Friend, and Good News. He also played the New York night-clubs in the evenings, at venues including Jack White's 54th Street Club, the Rendezvous and the Club Richman. A national hit followed in 1925 with 'Who', recorded for Victor Records, which brought coast to coast fame. It enabled Olsen to recruit the best sidemen of the day such as Rudy Wiendoeft, Don Lindley, Chuck Campbell, Floyd Rice, George Henkel, Eddie Kilfeather, Jack Hansen, Bob Borger, Jack Fulton, Milton Neul, Ed Joyce, Larry Mercy, Jack Gifford, Dick Gardner, Fred MacMurray, Lou Busch, Eddie McKinney, Ernie Mathias, Orville Knapp, Leighton Noble, Red Nichols and Fran Frey. In MacMurray and Wiendoeft Olsen was able to work with the two most gifted saxophonists of their generation, and by the early 20s the band had extended to a 16-piece orchestra. At this stage they employed their most celebrated vocalist, Ethel Shutta, whom Olsen would later marry. In the early 30s the band returned to the Los Angeles circuit to play the Plantation Ballroom, at which time Olsen was also commissioned to make a number of movie shorts. When Orville Knapp died in a plane crash in 1936, Olsen took over his band, and gave it its new name, 'Music Of Tomorrow'. In this new role Olsen toured throughout America, with Leighton Noble now the featured vocalist. He finally retired from bandleading in 1951, after a final engagement at the Edgewater Beach Hotel in Chicago.

Olympic Records

Record company formed in Liverpool by James Barton and Andy Carroll, named after their respected club night. Barton was a DJ who served his apprenticeship on the Northern club scene, going on to launch one of the best known venues, Cream. He was then instrumental in setting up Olympic Records in 1992 with Carroll, who was also a DJ. The label earned its biggest success with Seven Grand Housing Authority (Terrence Parker)'s 'The Question'. Barton also furnished K-Klass, who remixed the record, with management services, and introduced them to their, and his, future employers, DeConstruction. He joined the latter label in early 1994 to take a hand in their A&R operation, though he retained his interests in Olympic and Cream.

Olympics

Originally known as the Challengers, this adaptable vocal group, Walter Ward (b. 1940, Jackson, Mississippi, USA; lead), Eddie Lewis (b. 1937, Houston, Texas, USA; tenor), Charles Fizer (b. 1940, Shreveport, Louisiana, USA, d. August 1972; baritone) and Walter Hammond (baritone) was formed in Compton, California, in 1954. The Olympics' finest moment came with 'Western Movies' (1958), a humorous novelty disc in the vein of the Coasters and the Clovers, which reached the Top 10 in the USA and Top 20 in the UK. The song was produced and co-written by Fred Smith, who later worked with Bob And Earl. The same was true of 'Private Eye', another laconic tribute to 50s pulp-fiction culture, but it was 1960 before the group claimed another US hit with 'Big Boy Pete', by which time Melvin King (b. 1940, Shreveport, Louisiana, USA), had replaced Walter Hammond. Meanwhile, the sacked lead vocalist Fizer, whose troubled life had already resulted in a prison sentence for drugs possession, was shot by the National Guard during the Watts riots in 1965. A reshaped Olympics later went on to have hits with such dancefloor favourites as 'The Bounce' (1963), 'Good Lovin'' (1965 - later successfully covered by the Young Rascals) and 'Baby Do The Philly Dog' (1966), before being drawn towards the 'oldies' circuit.

● ALBUMS: Doin' The Hully Gully (Arvee 1960)★★★, Dance By The Light Of The Moon (Arvee 1961)★★, Party Time (Arvee 1961)★★, Do The Bounce (Tri-Disc 1963)★★, Something Old Something New (Mirwood 1966)★★, Soul Music (1968)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (1971)★★★, The Official Record Album Of The Olympics (1984)★★★, The Olympics Meet The Marathons (Ace 1985)★★★.

Om Records

'The idea of Om is to cover the spectrum of house music and to do absolutely the best stuff that house can offer', explained DJ Nick Hook, who founded the UK label Om together with New Musical Express dance correspondent Sherman and Morgan King. The label was thus inaugurated with three double-pack EPs that displayed just that: a pot pourri of modern house, labelled Absolute Om, 1 - 3. Other bands on the label included mainstays Soundsource (essentially Morgan King, whose recordings, such as 'Take Me Up' and 'One High', also appear on Sweden's B-Tech imprint), ex-Guerilla act Euphoria, Bump and Marine Boy (who are one-time Ruts member Segz and engineer Steve Dub's deep house/ambient project, disinguished by releases of the calibre of 'Fluid'). 1994 releases included 108 Grand featuring Roy Galloway's 'Love U All Over'.

Omar

b. Omar Lye Fook, 1969, Canterbury, England. Omar was born the son of a Chinese Jamaican father and an Indian Jamaican mother. A former principle percussionist of the Kent Youth Orchestra, he would later graduate from the Guildhall School Of Music. His debut singles were 'Mr Postman' and 'You And Me' (featuring backing vocals from Caron Wheeler), before his debut album was released, via Harlesden's Black Music Association's Kong Dance label, on a slender budget. Nevertheless, it reached the Top 60. In its wake, Omar's name suddenly began to crop up everywhere, be it as a singer, writer or producer. Following a high-profile Hammersmith Odeon concert in December 1990, Gilles Peterson of Talkin' Loud persuaded financial backers Phonogram to open their wallets. The debut album was slightly remixed and re-released, the title track having already earned its stripes as a club favourite. Although by definition a soul artist, Omar's use of reggae, ragga and particularly hip-hop has endeared him to a wide cross-section of the dance community. RCA won the scramble to sign Omar after departing from Talkin' Loud in January 1993. Since then, Omar has continued to collaborate with a number of premier R&B artists - songwriter Lamont Dozier, keyboard player David Frank (famed for his contribution to Chaka Khan's 'I Feel For You'), bass player Derek Bramble (ex-Heatwave), Leon Ware (arranger for Marvin Gaye) and no less than Stevie Wonder himself, who contacted Omar after hearing his 'Music' cut.

● ALBUMS: There's Nothing Like This (Kongo Dance 1990)★★★, For Pleasure (RCA 1994)★★★, This Is Not A Love Song (RCA 1997)★★★.

Omar And The Howlers

Born and raised in McComb, Mississippi, USA (Bo Diddley's birthplace), Omar (b. Kent Dykes) began playing guitar in the town's tough blues clubs at the age of 13. Forming the Howlers, he built up a reputation throughout Mississippi and the south, before moving on to Austin, Texas, and recording two albums for independent labels in the early 80s. Featuring Omar's powerful guttural blues voice and the tight rhythm section of Bruce Jones (bass) and Gene Brandon (drums), the band's powerful live shows won them a loyal fanbase. Signing a contract with Columbia Records in 1987, they released the acclaimed Hard Times In The Land Of Plenty album that year, gaining Omar extensive radio exposure for the first time in his career. An expanded band toured throughout Europe and signed a licensing agreement with the Dutch label Provogue, with Omar releasing the his debut solo set Blues Bag in 1991. A live album recorded in Amsterdam was followed by the first Howlers studio release for three years, the musically diverse Courts Of Lulu. Recent albums have seen Omar playing with Stephen Bruton (guitar), Paul Junior (bass), Steve Kilmer (drums), Mark Hallman (percussion), Gary Primich (harmonica) and Nick Connolly (organ). Southern Style was released in September 1996 and featured the usual mix of blues and rock influences filtered through Omar's distinctive southern sensibilities.

● ALBUMS: Big Leg Beat (Stomp 1980)★★★, I Told You So (Dixiefrog 1984)★★★, Hard Times In The Land Of Plenty (Columbia 1987)★★★, Wall Of Pride (Columbia 1988)★★★, Monkeyland (Provogue 1990)★★★, Live At The Paradiso (Provogue 1992)★★★, Courts Of Lulu (Provogue 1993)★★★, Muddy Springs Road (Provogue 1994)★★★, World Wide Open (Provogue 1995)★★★, Southern Style (Provogue 1996)★★★. Solo: Omar Blues Bag (Provogue 1991)★★★.

Omartian, Michael

b. 26 November 1945, Evanston, Illinois, USA. Omartian is a veteran US rock and pop producer with a long list of credits including Rod Stewart, Amy Grant and Christopher Cross. Prior to making his mark as a producer, he had worked as a freelance session player and arranger in the 70s around the Midwest. His most notable contributions were to three of Steely Dan's most successful albums, Pretzel Logic, Katy Lied and Aja. By 1978 he had joined Warner Brothers Records as an executive producer, where his work with Rod Stewart yielded the hits 'Some Guys Have All The Luck', 'Sailing' and 'Infatuation'. He also produced Christopher Cross's hit, 'Ride Like The Wind'. He continued to work as a session musician, for clients including Al Jarreau, Eric Clapton, Michael Jackson and Rickie Lee Jones. In 1985 he left Warners to work as an independent producer, and immediately collaborated with contemporary Christian artists Gary Chapman and Steve Camp, to modest acclaim. He enjoyed his biggest success to date with Amy Grant, whose 1991 A&M Records set, Heart In Motion, proved to be her commercial breakthrough. By the 90s, Omartian had relocated to Nashville and embarked on writing music for a Donna Summer stage show.

OMD

This UK synthesizer pop duo comprised Paul Humphreys (b. 27 February 1960, Liverpool, England) and Andy McCluskey (b. 24 June 1959, Liverpool, England). Originally combining in school band Equinox they moved on through VCL XI and Hitlerz Underpantz, and finally the Id. When that band broke up in 1978 McCluskey spent a short time with Dalek I Love You before he and Humphreys, together with Paul Collister, performed live in October 1978 under their full title Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark. Tony Wilson of Factory Records became interested in the band, releasing their debut 'Electricity'. It was quickly re-released when Virgin Records subsidiary DinDisc signed them. Its success subsequently allowed the group the chance to build their own studio. They replaced their four-track recorder ('Winston') with real personnel Malcom Holmes (ex-Equinox and the Id) and Dave Hughes (Dalek I Love You). 1980 saw 'Red Frame/White Light' released as a single to preface the band's first, self-titled album. Their breakthrough, however, came with the re-recorded 'Messages' and was followed by the UK Top 10 'Enola Gay', and its familiar nuclear war sentiments. Organisation followed quickly, with Martin Cooper replacing Dave Hughes shortly afterwards. The more sophisticated Architecture And Morality showed a new romanticism, particularly in the singles 'Joan Of Arc' and 'Maid Of Orleans'. 1983's Dazzle Ships was a flawed attempt at progression, highlighting dilemmas forced on them by popularity and DinDisc's collapse (the band transferred to Virgin). Junk Culture faced similar critical disdain, and boasted the presence of a hit single 'Locomotion'. Crush was a less orchestrated and more immediate affair, featuring the return of political commentary alongside the permanent insertion of Graham and Neil Weir into the line-up. The Pacific Age was premiered on another of the band's frequent worldwide touring endeavours, but it was obvious from its chart position that their domestic popularity was slipping. The six-piece line-up was proving too cumbersome and the Weir brothers departed shortly afterwards. The rift was compounded when Holmes and Cooper and, more importantly, Humphreys, joined the list of departures. McCluskey retained the name and, after a long restorative period, resurfaced in 1991 with 'Sailing On The Seven Seas'. The resultant album harked back to the era of Architecture And Morality, including the use of choral effects. Meanwhile, Humphreys, Holmes and Cooper formed a new band under the name the Listening Pool.

● ALBUMS: Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark (DinDisc 1980)★★★, Organisation (DinDisc 1980)★★★, Architecture And Morality (DinDisc 1981)★★★, Dazzle Ships (Telegraph 1983)★★, Junk Culture (Virgin 1984)★★★, Crush (Virgin 1985)★★★, The Pacific Age (Virgin 1986)★★, Sugar Tax (Virgin 1991)★★, Liberator (Virgin 1993)★★★, Universal (Virgin 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of OMD (Virgin 1988)★★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark, Mike West.

Omen

This Los Angeles, USA-based, melodic power-metal outfit formed in 1984. Comprising J.D. Kimball (vocals), Kenny Powell (guitar, ex-Sacred Blade), Jody Henry (bass) and Steve Wittig (drums), they debuted with a track on the Metal Massacre V compilation. This led to a contract with Metal Blade and the release of Battle Cry the same year. This was a competent, if uninspired, collection of Iron Maiden-style rockers, which lacked distinction owing to Kimball's weak vocals. Three more albums followed a similar pattern, with 1987's mini-opus Nightmares being the most interesting (it featured a strong cover version of AC/DC's 'Whole Lotta Rosie'). Coburn Pharr replaced Kimball in 1988 and helped the band to produce Escape From Nowhere, their finest recorded work. Adding Rush-styled dynamics to their basic metal framework, it was characterized by Pharr's powerful and high-pitched vocals. Surprisingly, it failed to sell and Pharr left to join Annihilator in 1990. Kenny Powell emerged in the 90s with a new band, Step Child.

● ALBUMS: Battle Cry (Roadrunner 1984)★★, Warning Of Danger (Roadrunner 1985)★★★, The Curse (Roadrunner 1986)★★★, Nightmares (Roadrunner 1987)★★★★, Escape From Nowhere (Roadrunner 1988)★★★.

Ommadawn - Mike Oldfield

Ommadawn represents a creative peak for Oldfield that is often overshadowed by the huge commercial success of his debut Tubular Bells. Oldfield employed the same format he had used on his previous two albums, with both sides of the album comprising a lengthy instrumental collage. This time he drew on a greater range of musical styles, using recurring motifs that had recognizable African, Eastern European and Irish sources (Paddy Moloney of The Chieftains being responsible for the latter). The album was also notable for the way Oldfield collaborated with the other musicians, drawing attention away from his image as the self-styled studio recluse.

● Tracks: Ommadawn Part 1; Ommadawn Part 2.
● First released 1975
● UK peak chart position: 4
● USA peak chart position: 146

On A Clear Day You Can See Forever

Alan Jay Lerner's long-time partnership with Frederick Loewe had lapsed by the early 60s partly owing to the composer's ill-health, when he decided to write a Broadway show based on his absorbing interest in the subject of extrasensory perception (ESP). Lerner's first choice for a project that was originally entitled I Picked A Daisy, was Richard Rodgers, who had been searching for a new partner since the death of Oscar Hammerstein II in 1960. According to reports, the collaboration resulted in the irresistible force meeting the immovable object, so Lerner turned instead to Burton Lane. The new show, now called On A Clear Day You Can See Forever, made its debut at the Mark Hellinger theatre on 17 October 1965. In Lerner's book, Dr. Mark Bruckner (John Cullum) discovers that one of his patients, Daisy Gamble (Barbara Harris), can not only foresee the future and persuade her plants to grow by just talking to them, but is prepared to go into details about her life as Melinda, an early feminist, who lived in 18th century London. They fall in love, but when Daisy begins to believe (mistakenly) that Mark is more interested in Melinda than in her, she walks out. Although miles away, she hears and responds when he gives out with 'Come Back To Me' ('Leave behind all you own/Tell your flowers you'll telephone/Let your dog walk alone/Come back to me!'). McCallum also had two lovely ballads, the title song, 'On A Clear Day (You Can See Forever)', and 'Melinda'. The remainder of a fine score included the delightful 'Hurray! It's Lovely Up Here', 'She Wasn't You', 'Wait Till We're Sixty-Five', 'When I'm Being Born Again', 'What Did I Have That I Don't Have?', 'Don't Tamper With My Sister', and 'Tosy And Cosh'. The show ran for an unsatisfactory 280 performances, and, as usual, while Lerner's lyrics were admired, his book came in for a deal of criticism. Barbara Harris was particularly applauded for her work, but, in the 1970 film, her role was taken by Barbra Streisand, who co-starred with Yves Montand.

On The Avenue

After enjoying tremendous success in partnership with several American leading ladies in movie musicals such as 42nd Street, Dames and the Gold Diggers series, Dick Powell teamed with English actress Madeleine Carroll for this picture, which was released by 20th Century-Fox in 1937. Carroll plays wealthy socialite Mimi Caraway who objects violently to being lampooned in a satirical revue by Gary Blake (Dick Powell). Naturally, they eventually resolve their differences and fall in love. This leaves Blake's previous girlfriend, Mona Merrick (Alice Faye), out in the cold, but she consoles herself by singing the lion's share of Irving Berlin's wonderful score, including the enduring 'This Year's Kisses', 'He Ain't Got Rhythm' and 'Slumming On Park Avenue' (the last two with the Ritz Brothers); and 'I've Got My Love To Keep Me Warm' and 'The Girl On The Police Gazette' (both with Dick Powell). Powell himself had the superior 'You're Laughing At Me', which later became popular for Fats Waller. Also among the cast of On The Avenue were Alan Mowbray, George Barbier, Cora Witherspoon, Walter Catlett, Billy Gilbert, and Stepin Fetchit. Gene Markey and William Conselman wrote the amusing screenplay, the stylish dances were staged by Seymour Felix, and the film was directed by Roy Del Routh. The basic plot of this film was used again in Let's Make Love (1960) starring Marilyn Monroe, Yves Montand and Frankie Vaughan.

On The Beach - Neil Young

Just how long should we tolerate the non-appearance of this album on CD? Sometimes the artist should be overruled. We don't care that Neil Young is unhappy with i;, his public want it out and it is unfair to continue to deprive them. That said, this is one of Young's finest works, melodic, intense yet light, played exquisitely. Everything that some suggest Harvest lacks is present on this record. Young devotees read more into this album than the dark Tonight's The Night, such as the spectre of Charles Manson in 'Revolution Blues'. The real clincher is the autobiographical title track, with the simplistically powerful line 'the world is turning, I hope it don't turn away'.

- Tracks: Walk On; See The Sky About To Rain; Revolution Blues; For The Turnstiles; Vampire Blues; On The Beach; Motion Pictures; Ambulance Blues.
- First released 1974
- UK peak chart position: 42
- USA peak chart position: 16

On The Riviera

Post-war cinema audiences were given a double ration of Danny Kaye in this Sol C. Siegel Technicolor production when it was released by 20th Century-Fox in 1951. Henry and Phoebe Ephron's screenplay concerned a well-known nightclub entertainer who is the spitting image of a philandering businessman. If that plot sounds familiar, it is because it cropped up on the screen in Folies Bergère De Paris (1934) and That Night In Rio (1941), and, with a slight twist and another change in location, formed the basis of On The Double (1961). Kaye played both roles, of course, and had a great time with all the complications that naturally spring from this kind of situation. Gene Tierney was the businessman's wife who could not tell the difference between her real husband and his stand-in, and also taking part in the hilarious shenanigans were Corinne Calvert, Marcel Dalio, Clinton Sundberg, Henri Letondal, Sig Ruman, and Joyce McKenzie. Future dancing star Gwen Verdon was in the chorus. Sylvia Fine, Kaye's wife, tailored four songs especially for him: 'Popo The Puppet', 'Rhythm Of Romance', 'Happy Ending', and 'On The Riviera', and he also sang one of his much-loved favourites, the 1913 number 'Ballin' The Jack' (James Henry Burris-Chris Smith). Jack Cole staged the imaginative dance sequences, and the film was directed by Walter Lang.

On The Road With Duke Ellington

A remarkable film record, made originally in 1967 and updated after Duke Ellington's death in 1974. In addition to Ellington talking about his life there are sequences showing him receiving honorary doctorates, rehearsing and recording his orchestra, playing the piano and, most intriguing of all, composing and arranging. If anything, the casual manner in which he does this simply adds to the mystique. Sprawled out on a couch, feet up, he and Billy Strayhorn put together a piece of music with such deceptive ease as to make even a Hollywood songwriter biopic seem forced. Apart from the Maestro, musicians such as Harry Carney, Jimmy Hamilton, Johnny Hodges, Paul Gonsalves and Louis Armstrong also make appearances.

On The Threshold Of A Dream - Moody Blues

If you disregard the precious sleeve-note introduction written by friend of the band Lionel Bart, and ignore the spoken-word 'therefore I am' twaddle at the beginning, this is arguably their best album. The band are oozing ideas and the contrast between Ray Thomas's songs and Justin Hayward's is as refreshing as the difference between Mike Pinder's 'So Deep Within You' and John Lodge's 'To Share Our Love'. The last segment is the album's peak; Pinder's sensitive 'Have You Heard' and 'The Voyage' sum up the whole album. Never had the Mellotron been used so well and it is a great pity they became so unfashionable.

- Tracks: In The Beginning; Lovely To See You; Dear Diary; Send Me No Wine; To Share Our Love; So Deep Within You; Never Comes The Day; Lazy Day; Are You Sitting Comfortably; The Dream; Have You Heard Part 1; The Voyage; Have You Heard Part 2.
- First released 1969
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 20

On The Town (film musical)

Remembered particularly for its innovative staging of some of the musical sequences on the streets of New York, On The Town was released by MGM in 1949. Betty Comden and Adolph Green's screenplay (they also wrote all the lyrics) was based on their book for the 1944 stage musical, which itself was inspired by choreographer-director Jerome Robbins' ballet Fancy Free. From the moment that the three sailors, played by Gene Kelly, Frank Sinatra, and Jules Munshin, come dashing from their ship to the strains of the rousing 'New York, New York' (music-Leonard Bernstein), eager to enjoy the delights of New York on their 24 hours' leave, the film sings and dances along in an exhilarating fashion. Naturally, they each find their ideal partner: Kelly first sees the girl of his dreams, Vera-Ellen, on a poster in the subway, and their delightful pas-de-deux, 'Main Street' (music-Roger Edens), is one of the film's many high spots; Munshin is pursued through the Museum of Natural History by the anthropological Ann Miller who considers him to be a perfect example of a 'Prehistoric Man' (music-Edens); while the ingenuous Sinatra is invited to 'Come Up To My Place' (music-Bernstein) by the amusingly man-hungry taxi driver Betty Garrett. Stage musical buffs were offended by the way Bernstein's original Broadway score was 'decimated', with only five numbers surviving - the two already mentioned, plus 'I Feel Like I'm Not Out Of Bed Yet' and two ballets, 'Miss Turnstiles' and 'A Day In New York'. The substitutes, with music by Roger Edens, included 'You're Awful' and 'On The Town'. Edens was also co-musical director with Lennie Hayton, and both men won Oscars for music scoring. Alice Pearce recreated her original stage role as Betty Garrett's flatmate, a girl with a permanent cold, and also in the cast were Florence Bates, Carol Haney, Hans Conried, and George Meader. Gene Kelly and Stanley Donen's first film together was photographed in Technicolor and produced by Arthur Freed.

On The Town (stage musical)

Opening on 28 December 1944, On The Town was based on the 20-minute ballet, Fancy Free, by choreographer Jerome Robbins and composer Leonard Bernstein. Robbins had been on Broadway before, as a dancer, but for Bernstein, and librettists and lyricists Betty Comden and Adolph Green, On The Town was their first taste of the glamorous New York musical theatre. The 'almost non-existent book' concerns three sailors, Gaby (John Battles), Ozzie (Adolph Green), and Chip (Cris Alexander) who are on leave in New York for just 24 hours. They meet three girls, Ivy (Sono Osato), Hildy (Nancy Walker), and Claire (Betty Comden), and all enthusiastically take in tourist spots such as Coney Island, the Museum of Natural History, Central Park, Carnegie Hall, Times Square, and a dive called Diamond Eddie's. The thrilling score ranged from the rousing 'New York, New York', through the amusing 'Ya Got Me', 'Come Up To My Place', 'I Can Cook, Too', and 'I Get Carried Way', to the lovely ballads, 'Lonely Town', 'Lucky To Be Me', and 'Some Other Time'. At the end of the boys' day of freedom, the girls see them off at the quay - and another batch of sailors come careering down the gangplank singing 'New York, New York', and the whole process begins all over again. On The Town enjoyed a run of 463 performances and was revived twice in New York, off-Broadway in 1959 (Harold Lang, Wisa D'Orso, and Pat Carroll), and in a main house in 1971, with Ron Husman, Donna McKechnie, Bernadette Peters and Phyllis Newman (Mrs. Adolph Green). A 1963 London production folded after 53 performances. There was renewed interest in the show almost 30 years later, when, in June 1992, a semi-staged version, narrated by Comden and Green, was presented at London's Barbican Hall, and then, in 1993, the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut, USA, mounted a well-received production. In August 1997, the Joseph Papp Public Theatre/New York Shakespeare Festival presented a revival that was performed out of doors in Central Park's Delacorte Theatre. Directed by George C. Wolfe ('arguably the hottest producer and director in US theatre'), the cast consisted mostly of unknowns - and admission was free. The 1949 film starred Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly, Jules Munshin, Vera-Ellen, Ann Miller, and Betty Garrett.

On The Twentieth Century

In the long history of the musical theatre, this was probably not the first occasion on which the critics inferred that 'the audience left the theatre whistling the scenery'. However, that phrase did crop up a lot (along with 'it ran out of steam') in the reviews for this show which opened at the St. James Theatre in New York on 19 February 1978, and was set mostly aboard the fondly remembered train, the Twentieth Century Limited, which used to run from Chicago to New York. The set was certainly spectacular - a splendid art-deco affair - designed by Robin Wagner. The book, by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, which was based on Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur's farce, Twentieth Century, concerns the legendary producer-director, Oscar Jaffee (John Cullum), a Broadway legend - but not recently. He is at the bottom of the barrel, but his former lover and protegée, the temperamental movie star Lily Garland (Madeline Kahn), is at the top of the tree. His efforts to sign her for a project that will ensure his rehabilitation bring him into contact with the current rivals for her attention, actor Bruce Granit (played by Kevin Kline, himself a film heart-throb of the 80s and 90s), and the film producer Max Jacobs (George Lee Andrews). The veteran Broadway comedienne Imogene Coca, making a welcome comeback to the New York musical stage after an absence of over 30 years, played a kooky religious character with a great deal of fervour. The score was written by Comden and Green together with composer Cy Coleman. His music, which is usually jazz-based, like the man himself, was regarded this time as being too flamboyant and out of character, 'alternating much of the time between early nineteenth century comic-opera mannerisms and early twentieth century operetta', in songs such as 'I Rise Again', 'Veronique', 'On The Twentieth Century', 'Our Private World', 'Repent', 'We've Got It', 'She's A Nut', 'Legacy', 'Never', 'Life Is Like A Train', 'Together', 'Stranded Again', and 'Mine'. In spite of the criticism, the show won Tony Awards for score, book, Cullum, and Kline, and stayed on the rails for 449 performances. Cullum is said to have based his portrayal of the mogul on John Barrymore, who appeared with Carole Lombard in the 1934 film Twentieth Century. The 1980 West End production of On The Twentieth Century starred Julia McKenzie, one of the outstanding leading ladies of the London musical theatre, but it still ground to a halt after only 165 performances.

On Top - Heptones

The transformation from ska to rocksteady during the mid-60s took Jamaican music away from the brazen, fast tempos of the former to the more measured, lilting drift of the latter. This evolution allowed a greater emphasis on vocal groups. The Heptones were one of several superb acts, including the Paragons and the Melodians, to rise to prominence at this time. Their superb close three-part harmonies were inspired by the Impressions and a similar spirituality marked their work. On Top is the Heptones' second album for the fabled Studio One label. Its empathic house band provides subtle support to the trio's gorgeous voices, which weave together with mesmerizing sweetness. This is a lynchpin collection in the development of Jamaican music.

● Tracks: Equal Rights; Pure Sorrow; Heptones Gonna Fight; I

Hold The Handle; My Baby Is Gone; Soul Power; Take Me Darling; We Are In The Mood; Sea Of Love; Pretty Looks Isn't All; Party Time; I Love You.

- First released *c.*60s
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

On U Sound System

(see Clail, Gary, And The On U Sound System)

On With The Dance

Noël Coward's first revue for impresario C. B. Cochran opened at the London Pavilion on 30 April 1925. Coward wrote the book and most of the songs, with Philip Braham providing a few extra numbers. The cast included Hermione Baddeley, Douglas Byng, Ernest Thesiger, Greta Fayne, and Lance Lister. The star was Alice Delysia, who introduced 'Poor Little Rich Girl', a song which Cochran thought 'dreary', although it went on to become one of Coward's most enduring copyrights. The lavish, superbly presented show also contained two ballets created and danced by Leonide Massine, and enjoyed a run of 229 performances.

On Your Toes

Ballet came to Broadway in a big way, courtesy of choreographer George Balanchine, in this show which opened at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 11 April 1936. Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart wrote the book, along with George Abbott, and their complex plot involved Junior Dolan (Ray Bolger), who has given up the grind of the vaudeville circuit in favour of teaching music at the Knickerbocker University. When the Russian Ballet stage a production of a jazzy, insinuating ballet, 'Slaughter On Tenth Avenue', in the locale, Junior becomes involved, both onstage and off, with its prima ballerina, Vera Barnova (Tamara Geva). This Pavlovian pas de deux offends both Junior's girlfriend, Frankie Frayne (Doris Carson), and Vera's regular dancing partner, who tries to have Junior bumped off. Bolger, in a part that was originally created for Fred Astaire, was sensational in his first Broadway role, and soon became one of America's most cherished clowns. Balanchine's choreography, which included a second ballet, 'Princess Zenobia', was highly praised. The show also marked the acting debut of the former Yale professor, Monty Woolley, as the director of the ballet company. Rodgers and Hart's lively and tuneful score was right up to their highest standard, and contained the delightful 'There's A Small Hotel' and It's Got to Be Love', sung by Carson and Bolger, a poignant ballad, 'Glad To Be Unhappy', the comical 'Too Good For The Average Man', and other pleasing numbers such as 'The Heart Is Quicker Than The Eye', 'The Three B's', 'On Your Toes', and 'Quiet Night'. On Your Toes danced along for 315 performances, and in 1937 was presented at the Palace Theatre in London with Vera Zorina in the leading role. She also starred in a 1954 Broadway revival with Bobby Van and Elaine Stritch. When On Your Toes returned to Broadway again in 1983, the role of Vera was played by the celebrated ballerina, Natalia Makarova, during the early part of a run of 505 performances. Both revivals were staged by George Abbott. Makarova also co-starred with Tim Flavin in a successful West End presentation in 1984. 'Slaughter On Tenth Avenue' reached a wider audience when it was danced by Gene Kelly and Vera-Ellen in the Rodgers and Hart biopic, Words And Music (1948).

Once Upon A Mattress

This is an expanded musical adaptation of the comical fairy tale, The Princess And The Pea, with music by Mary Rodgers, daughter of the famous composer, Richard Rodgers, and lyrics by Marshall Barer. The show opened off-Broadway at the Phoenix Theatre in New York on 11 May 1959, transferring to the Alvin Theatre on Broadway in November. The book, by Jay Thompson, Dean Fuller, and Barer, told of Princess Winnifred (Carol Burnett), who is unable to marry Prince Dauntless the Drab (Joseph Bova), until she can prove to his mother, Queen Agravain (Jane White), that she is a genuine princess of royal blood. She triumphs during a series of tests, the last of which is to get no sleep at all during a night spent on a heap of mattresses with just one pea underneath the bottom one. Comedienne extraordinaire Carol Burnett, who later went on to star in her own top-rated television series via the the Gary Moore Show, made an auspicious Broadway debut, and the cast also included that ever-reliable funny-man, Jack Gilford. No hits emerged from the score, but there were several pleasant songs, such as 'Shy', 'Sensitivity', 'Normandy', 'Man To Man Talk', 'Many Moons Ago', 'Very Soft Shoes', 'In A Little While', 'Happily Ever After', 'The Swamp Of Home', and 'Yesterday I Loved You'. An encouraging New York run of 460 performances was followed by a brief, one month stay in London. A Broadway revival opened at the Broadhurst Theatre in December 1996, and hung on for 187 performances mainly due to clever targeting of family audiences. Directed by Gerald Gutierrez, it starred Sarah Jessica Parker (Princess Winnifred), Mary Lou Rosato (the Queen), David Aaron Baker (Prince Dauntlass), and Heath Lamberts (the King).

Once Upon A Time - Simple Minds

Simple Minds gained belated US chart success with '(Don't You) Forget About Me' and a distinctly transatlantic burr covered this, the ensuing album. Producers Jimmy Iovine and Bob Clearmountain sculpted an unambiguous sound where crowd-pleasing anthems invoked a genuine excitement. Loud, forthright and shorn of subtlety, Once Upon A Time shows the group's core trio - Jim Kerr (vocals), Charlie Burchill (guitar) and Mick McNeil (keyboards) - working together with genuine empathy, while a revamped rhythm section underpins the material with sinewy precision. They combine to create what many consider to be Simple Minds' most exciting and exhilarating release.

- Tracks: Once Upon A Time; All The Things She Said; Ghostdancing; Alive And Kicking; Oh Jungleland; I Wish You Were Here; Sanctify Yourself; Come A Long Way.
- First released 1985
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 10

One Dam Thing After Another

This C.B. Cochran revue, written by Ronald Jeans, opened at the London Pavilion on 20 May 1927. The impressive cast included Sonnie Hale, Leslie 'Hutch' Hutchinson, Melvin Cooper, the accomplished American pianist Edythe Baker, and the delightful, vivacious Jessie Matthews in her first leading role. One song, 'The Birth Of The Blues', was written by De Sylva, Brown And Henderson, but the remainder were provided by Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart, and included 'My Lucky Star', 'I Need Some Cooling Off', and the enduring standard, 'My Heart Stood Still', which was introduced by Jessie Matthews. The latter number, with Hart's emotional and affecting lyric, played a significant part in the show's success. After the Prince of Wales attended the opening night, he asked for the song to be played at a subsequent function. The orchestra did not know it, so the royal personage hummed it for them. Naturally, the press gave the incident extensive coverage, and also printed the words and music of the song's first 16 bars. The royal seal of approval helped One Dam Thing After Another to overcome initially lukewarm reviews, and it became a hit, running for 237 performances.

One Dove

Glasgow, Scotland trio, who caught the nation's imagination in 1993 with their mellow musical depths. The group comprise Ian Carmichael (b. 1 June 1960, Glasgow, Scotland), Jim McKinven (b. David James McKinven, *c.*1959, Glasgow, Scotland) and former chemical engineering student Dot Allison (b. Dorothy Elliot Allison, 17 August 1969, Edinburgh, Scotland). McKinven had been in an early incarnation of the Bluebells (rehearsal only), but was best known for his stint in Altered Images. Carmichael owns Toad Hall Studios, and has engineered or produced for many Glaswegian acts (Orchids, Bachelor Pad, etc.). The group made their first public appearance at the Rock Garden, Queens Street, Glasgow, in August 1991. The fact that Andy Weatherall got involved attracted some initial attention, but there was more to the group than merely another of his side projects. They had already broken into the rave scene's élite with the single 'Fallen', prior to their collaboration. It was released on Soma, before the band had changed their name from their original selection, Dove. However, litigation followed from representatives of Supertramp (the band had, inadvertently, used a sample from an Italian house record which in turn had sampled the prog-rockers). They met Weatherall in Rimini in 1991. After he agreed to work with them there was some discussion in the press that One Dove's debut album would signal another landmark episode, à la Primal Scream's Screamadelica, but this was perhaps over-optimistic. It was at least a solid, musically enthralling collection conveying One Dove's biggest influence: King Tubby and Jamaican dub music.

- ALBUMS: Morning Dove White (London1993)★★★.

One Dozen Berrys - Chuck Berry

Popular music is almost unthinkable without the influence of Chuck Berry. He combined the economy of R&B with a brilliant gift for lyricism that encapsulated adolescent spirit in a manner no other performer has matched. The three opening tracks on this album define Berry's gifts; each one is now an integral part of pop's lexicon. Intriguingly, these compositions can be heard in the early work of the Beach Boys, Rolling Stones and Beatles, which itself is a tribute to Berry's enormous influence. His unique guitar style is showcased on 'Blue Ceiling' and 'Guitar Boogie', resulting in a set that expresses the artist's talent to the full. Compilations have superseded this vinyl release.

- Tracks: Sweet Little Sixteen; Blue Feeling; La Jaunda; Guitar Boogie; Oh Baby Doll; In-Go; Rock At The Philharmonic; Reelin' And Rockin; Rock & Roll Music; It Don't Take But A Few Minutes; Low Feeling; How You've Changed.
- First released 1958
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

One For All - Brand Nubian

From the Bronx, New York, and led by Grand Puba Maxwell, Brand Nubian's debut album was as cool and classy as anything in the genre. Backed by Lord Jamar, Sadat X and DJ Alamo, Puba kicked out reams of Muslim-influenced thinking, backed by steals from some of the great moments of soul music. Despite the creed of the Five Percent Nation, which was so manifest within its grooves, it was by no means humourless (highlighted by name-checks for people such as Englebert Humperdink), while samples of James Brown and Roy Ayers spiced up the backing tracks. In 1991 Puba left to go solo, taking DJ Alamo with him, and although Brand Nubian have persevered with a new line-up and recorded two well-received albums, they have yet to match this achievement.

- Tracks: All For One; Feels So Good; Concerto In X Minor; Ragtime; To The Right; Dance To My Ministry; Drop The Bomb; Wake Up; Step To The Rear; Slow Down; Try To Do Me; Who Can Get Busy Like This Man; Grand Puba, Positive And LG; Brand Nubian; Wake Up; Dedication.
- First released 1991
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 130

One Hit Wonder

From Long Beach, Orange County, California, and led by singer and principal songwriter Dan Root, One Hit Wonder additionally comprise Randy Bradbury (bass), Trey Pangborn (guitar) and Chris Webb (drums). Their self-titled debut EP in 1995, produced by alternative rock team the Robb brothers (Lemonheads, Buffalo Tom), consolidated the impression created by an initial batch of underground 7-inch singles for Lethal Records. The material on offer ('Break Your Heart', 'After Her Disasters') provided down-at-heel takes on life, backed by focused metal riffing with power-pop flourishes.

● ALBUMS: Outfall (Nitro 1997)★★★.

One Hour With You

This highly acclaimed musical, a delightful and sophisticated picture which was released by Paramount in 1932, reunited Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald following their joint triumph two years earlier in The Love Parade. As with that film, One Hour With You bore the unmistakable touch of director Ernst Lubitsch, and was, in fact, a remake of his 1924 silent, The Marriage Circle. Samson Raphaelson's screenplay told of a happily married couple, played by Chevalier and MacDonald, whose domestic bliss is shattered when he becomes far too friendly with her flirtatious best friend (Genevieve Tobin). Also in the cast were Roland Young, Charlie Ruggles, Josephine Dunn, Donald Novis, and George Barbier. The songs, with music by Oscar Straus and Richard Whiting and lyrics by Leo Robin, included 'Three Times A Day', 'One Hour With You', 'We Will Always Be Sweethearts', 'What Would You Do?', 'It Was Only a Dream Kiss', 'Oh, That Mitzi', and 'What A Little Thing Like A Wedding Ring Can Do'. For various complicated reasons, Lubitsch shared directorial credit with George Cukor on a film that is considered a classic of its kind.

154 - Wire

This much revered and influential punk outfit had a complexity and sense of original thought that could easily have outlived the self-destructive punk boom. Articulate but truly anarchic in their vision, they had a wry sense of cynicism tempered by a glorious abandon in their music. 154, their third album, showed them in a truly innovative light. Guitarist Bruce Gilbert described the songs as nothing more than coffee table polaroids, yet they contained much wider observations. Regardless of Gilbert's view, the final result is a magnificent work of wordplay, wit, texture and some occasional brevity. Definitely at the upper reaches of punk's legacy.

●Tracks: I Should Have Known Better; Two People In A Room; The 15th; Other Window; Single KO; Touching Display; On Returning; Mutual Friend; Blessed State; Once Is Enough; Map Ref 41 Degrees N. 95 Degrees SW; Indirect Enquiries; 40 Versions.

●First released 1979

●UK peak chart position: 39

●USA peak chart position: did not chart

101 Ranch Boys

Cliff Brown (29 April 1916, Argentine, Kansas, USA; fiddle, vocals), George Long, Andy Reynolds (b. 14 April 1914, on ranch in Western Kansas but raised in Kansas City, USA, d. 29 November 1975; guitar, vocals), Smokey Roberts (b. William L. Roberts, 27 November 1925, Pitcher, Oklahoma, USA; guitar, vocals) and Leonard Zinn (b. 27 December 1924, Hanover, Pennsylvania, USA; electric steel guitar). While working as a truck driver, Reynolds decided on a musical career and first performed solo until he met Brown. A Cherokee Indian, Brown first sang and played on WLBF Kansas City and as the fiddler for local dances prior to meeting Reynolds. On the suggestion of Brown's mother (who was born on the 101 Ranch, Oklahoma), they adopted the name and began to play for square dances and on local radio. A few years later they were joined by Roberts and Long and commenced their main career at WSBA York, Pennsylvania. Zinn, who for some years taught guitar, played with the Hawaiian Sharps before joining the 101 Ranch Boys in 1948. He also acted as the group's comedian and on retirement opened a music store in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. Wayne Chipley (fiddle) also recorded with the group but no biographical information is available. The 101 Ranch Boys, under Long's leadership, re-formed after World War II and remained active until around 1955. During this time they recorded for Security, Rich and Columbia Records.

● ALBUMS: George Long And The 101 Ranch Boys (Cattle 1985)★★★.

101ers

Formed in London in May 1974, the 101ers made their performing debut four months later at the Telegraph pub in Brixton. Led by guitarist/vocalist Joe Strummer, the group established itself on a fading pub-rock circuit about to be undermined by the advent of punk. Support slots by the Sex Pistols confirmed Strummer's growing agitation and he left to join the Clash in June 1976. The 101ers then broke up with Clive Timperley (guitar) later joining the Passions. Dan Kelleher (bass) moved on to the Derelicts and Richard Dudanski (drums) went on to work with the Raincoats and Public Image Limited. The group was commemorated by 'Keys To Your Heart', issued on the independent Chiswick label the following month. In 1981 Strummer sanctioned the release of Elgin Avenue Breakdown, a collection of live recordings, BBC sessions and studio out-takes. The material ranged from traditional R&B - 'Too Much Monkey Business', 'Route 66' - to ebullient originals that showed the singer's abrasive delivery already in place.

●ALBUMS: Elgin Avenue Breakdown (Andalucia 1981)★★.

110 In The Shade

If only this show had not opened in the same 1963-64 Broadway season as Hello, Dolly! and Funny Girl, things might have been different; it would probably have won some awards for a start. Even so, when it made its debut at the Broadhurst Theatre on 24 October 1963, 110 In The Shade met with almost universal acclaim. The odd man out was Walter Kerr of the New York Herald Tribune, who called the song 'Little Red Hat' 'dirty and salacious'; lines such as 'I find us a spot/Where no one is at/Then I reach across and grab her little red hat' would hardly raise any eyebrows today. That song, and the rest of the score, was written by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, whose first collaboration in 1960 had resulted in The Fantasticks, the record-breaking off-Broadway production. N. Richard Nash's book was adapted from his own 1954 play, The Rainmaker, and it was only after seeing that on US television that Jones and Schmidt came up with this musical. A feature film version, with Burt Lancaster and Katharine Hepburn had been released in 1956. The story is set in a bleak town in the American Midwest, where a self-styled rainmaker, the handsome Bill Starbuck (Robert Horton), has arrived to cure the problem ('Rain Song'). Lizzie Curry (Inga Swenson) has a problem of her own - she cannot find a husband ('Love Don't Turn Away'). Her father and brothers try to fix her up with the town's sheriff, File (Stephen Douglass), a shy divorcee ('A Man And A Woman'), but she prefers the glamorous Starbuck. He indulges in all the rigmarole that is needed to bring the much-needed rain, but is eventually revealed to be a con-man on the run. Even so, Lizzie is about to run away with him ('Is It Really Me?') until File at last reveals his own love for her ('Wonderful Music'). She decides to accept him, and settle for the quiet life. At that moment, the heavens open . . . Jones and Schmidt's lovely, tuneful score, complemented perfectly the folksy, sentimental feeling of the piece. The rest of the songs included 'Gonna Be A Hot Day', 'Lizzie's Comin' Home', 'Poker Polka', 'Hungry Men', 'You're Not Foolin' Me', 'Raunchy', 'Old Maid', 'Everything Beautiful Happens At Night', 'Little Red Hat', 'Melisande', and 'Simple Little Things'. 110 In The Shade had a decent run of 330 performances, and Inga Swenson's performance was oustanding. She was widely tipped to win a Tony Award, but Hello, Dolly! swept the board. In 1992 the show was revived by the New York City Opera, with Karen Ziémba as Lizzie. It was taped for transmission on the Great Performances television series.

One Hundred Men And A Girl

'Anything can be achieved if you just try hard enough', was the message that came through loud and clear in this charming and delightful Deanna Durbin film which was produced by Charles Rogers and Joe Pasternak for Universal in 1937. In the wonderfully optimistic screenplay, by Bruce Manning, Charles Kenyon, and Hans Kraly, the 16-year-old female star uses all her unbounded energy and enthusiasm to persuade the celebrated maestro Leopold Stokowski to conduct an orchestra consisting of her father (Adolph Menjou) and a number of other out-of-work musicians. Given that scenario, the songs such as 'It's Raining Sunbeams' (Sam Coslow-Frederick Hollander) and 'A Heart That's Free' (Alfred Robyn-Thomas T. Reilly), were joined by several classical pieces including '2nd Hungarian Rhapsody' (Liszt), 'Lohengrin Prelude' (Wagner), 'Alleluja' (Mozart), and 'La Traviata' (Verdi). Charles Previn, head of Universal Studio's music department, won an Oscar for the film's score. In the strong supporting cast were Alice Brady, Eugene Pallette, Mischa Auer, and Billy Gilbert. Henry Koster directed the film, which immediately proved to have enormous box-office appeal and touched the hearts of all who saw it.

100% Fun - Matthew Sweet

'Sick Of Myself', the first single from this, Matthew Sweet's follow-up to Altered Beast, captured the mood of a time when artists from Beck to Green Day were vying to capture self-hatred on record. Although ex-Television guitarist Richard Lloyd was given freer reign this time around, the songs were still short - averaging less than three-and-a-half minutes - and snappy, with hooks and harmonies aplenty. Continuing his obsession with 60s pop, he added such instruments as harpsichord, electric piano, clavinet and theremin to his usual army of 12-string guitars. He has still to write the classic pop song of which he is capable.

● Tracks: Sick Of Myself; Not When I Need It; We're The Same; Giving It Back; Everything Changes; Lost My Mind; Come To Love; Walk Out; I Almost Forgot; Super Baby; Get Older; Smog Moon.

● First released 1995

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 65

100 Proof Aged In Soul

This short-lived quartet was formed in Detroit around Steve Mancha (b. Clyde Wilson, 25 December 1945, Walhalla, South Carolina, USA), Joe Stubbs, Don Hatcher and Eddie Anderson. The group was the culmination of several individual careers. Joe Stubbs, the brother of Four Tops' singer Levi, was the featured voice on the Falcons' hit 'You're So Fine', prior to his spells in the Originals and the Contours. Mancha had recorded several solo singles and, with Eddie Anderson, was a member of the Holidays. 100 Proof made their soul chart debut with 'Too Many Cooks (Spoil The Soup)' in 1969. The nursery-rhyme simplicity of 'Somebody's Been Sleeping' gave them a US Top 10 hit the following year. '90 Day Freeze' (1971) introduced a revamped group of Mancha, Hatcher, Ron Bykowski, Dave Case and Darnell Hughes, which remained intact until their outlet, Hot Wax, was wound down. Mancha revived his solo career under his real name as a gospel singer and also became involved in production work. A new 100 Proof appeared in 1976, but none of the original cast were involved.

● ALBUMS: Somebody's Been Sleeping In My Bed (Hot Wax 1970)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (HDH/Fantasy 1990)★★★★.

100th Monkey

(see Guthrie, Andy)

One In A Million

Forty years before John Curry, and then others such as Robin Cousins and Torvill And Dean, caused television ratings to soar with their graceful and imaginative ice dancing, Norwegian champion Sonja Henie was delighting cinema audiences with her own individual brand of ice skating. She made he screen debut in this 1936 film, playing the daughter of a Swiss innkeeper who trains her for the Winter Olympic Games. Naturally, after some hitches along the way, she wins a medal - and the heart of press reporter Don Ameche. He headed an impressive cast along with Adolph Menjou as a band-leading impresario, the always hilarious Ritz Brothers, Jean Hersholt, Arline Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Ned Sparks, Montagu Love, Leah Ray, and Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals. Sidney Mitchell and Lew Pollack's songs, which cropped up occasionally throughout an amusing and entertaining picture, included 'We're Back In Circulation Again', 'The Moonlight Waltz', 'Who's Afraid Of Love?', 'Lovely Lady In White', and 'One In A Million'. Producer Darryl F. Zanuck, who produced the film for 20th Century-Fox, is credited with the inspiration for bringing Sonja Henie to Hollywood - an idea that paid off handsomely at the box-office. Leonard Praskins and Mark Kelly wrote the screenplay, the choreographers were Jack Haskell and Nick Castle, and One In A Million was directed by Sidney Lanfield.

One Little Indian Records

The roots of the UK One Little Indian record label lie in the anarcho-punk scene of the early 80s, particularly in one of its pioneering bands, Flux Of Pink Indians. The precursor to One Little Indian was Spiderleg, which released records by the System, Subhumans, and Amebix in addition to Flux's own material. Both labels were run by Derek Birkett (b. 18 February 1961, London, England), Flux's bass player, alongside friends and colleagues from the independent punk scene. Early releases included ones by Annie Anxiety, D&V and the Very Things. Reflecting on the mistakes made earlier, the label used expensive and tasteful cover art by Paul White's Me Company. When the Sugarcubes, a band Birkett previously knew when they were Kukl, broke through, financial security was assured. While One Little Indian retains its identity as the 'ethical indie', the operation is constructed on level-headed business practices: 'Our motives are artistic and business is reality'. Unlike many labels, the roster of bands does not have a uniform image or sound. Music on the label includes the bright and breezy pop of the Popinjays, Heart Throbs and the Sugarcubes, the dance sound of the Shamen and Finitribe, the delicate, crafted pop of Kitchens Of Distinction and the shattering volume of What? Noise. The label was also the temporary home for They Might Be Giants, who released Lincoln and two singles. The recent mainstream success of the Shamen has consolidated their position in the independent charts. The massive success of Björk was long overdue and was financially very welcome, although other outfits, such as Daisy Chainsaw, failed to fulfil expectations. Recent signings include Compulsion, Credit To The Nation and the revitalized Chumbawamba. The label has released several 'Best Of' compilations which act as a good introductions.

● VIDEOS: One Little Indian (Virgin Vision 1990).

One More Time

Comprising Peter Grönwall (the son of Abba's Benny Andersson), Nanne Nordqvist and Maria Radsten, the visual appearance of Sweden's One More Time evoked nothing so much as a reduced Heart when they made their debut in 1992. They enjoyed immediate success not only domestically but throughout Europe when 'Highland', a single taken from their debut album of the same title, announced their bombastic style. It brought them a clutch of international awards, included a Group Of The Year accolade in Belgium. Grönwall, an experienced symphonic instrument musician, remains the creative power behind One More Time, although the combined harmonies of the group's two female members are what gave Highland its immediacy.

● ALBUMS: Highland (CNR 1992)★★★.

One Night Of Love

Grace Moore brought her wonderful world of opera to the screen for the first time proper in this classic musical which was released by Columbia in 1934. In the uncomplicated story, by S.K. Lauren, James Gow, and Edmund North, she plays a young American soprano whose eventual worldwide fame is mainly due to the efforts of her music mentor and guru played impressively by Tullio Carminati. Also in the cast were Lyle Talbot, Mona Barrie, Jessie Ralph, and Jane Darwell. The score was a mixed bag of extracts from popular operettas and arias, along with some classical songs such as 'Ciribiribin' (Rudolph Thaler-Alberto Pestalozza) and 'None But The Lonely Heart' (Peter I. Tchaikovsky). The title number, by the film's director Victor Schertzinger (music) and Gus Kahn (lyric), won an Academy Award for Thematic Music although the award went to Louis Silvers, head of Columbia's music department - that was the custom in those days. One Night Of Love won another Oscar for sound recording, and was nominated for best film, actress (Moore), and director.

One Of These Nights - The Eagles

This marked the transition from a nifty country rock band to a rock combo with the potential for world domination. The music was a tad sweeter and less ironic, a morsel rockier with Top 40 friendliness. Tracks such as 'Take It To The Limit' and 'Lyin' Eyes' have been played far too much on the radio. They need to be rested in place of Bernie Leadon's unusual instrumental, 'Journey Of The Sorcerer' (used as the theme to BBC Television's Hitchhiker's Guide To The Galaxy), or the other great Leadon song, 'I Wish You Peace'. Financially, the Eagles never looked back after this, but the critical snipers were out in force.

- Tracks: One Of These Nights; Too Many Hands; Hollywood Waltz; Journey Of The Sorcerer; Lyin' Eyes; Take It To The Limit; Visions; After The Thrill Is Gone; I Wish You Peace.
- First released 1975
- UK peak chart position: 8
- USA peak chart position: 1

One Records

Record label run by Eddie Colon (pronounced 'Cologne'), a former Kiss FM DJ, former proprietor of Renegade Records and a recording artist in his own right (scoring a US hit with 'Upfront') and the celebrated Roger Sanchez. They first met in 1991 when Colon was still a struggling DJ. The first One record was 'No Way' by Countdown, produced by Toddy Terry/Kenny 'Dope' Gonzalez. The release schedule continued apace with material by Murk's Oscar G, more Kenny 'Dope' Gonzalez ('Axis Project', etc.) and Victor Simonelli ('I Know A Place') - almost a who's who of US house producers. The label was invoked 'to bring quality records out of New York ... a souful, house type of sound. We want to start developing artists. I'm an old song guy and I don't like this whole track thing'. One would sign Farley and Heller as their remix team, as well as UK singer J.B. Braithwaite ('Love Me Tonite'). In January 1994 the operation unveiled Sanchez's first ever long playing release.

- ALBUMS: Roger Sanchez Secret Weapons Vol. 1 (One 1994)★★★, various artists The Sound Of One (One 1994)★★★.

One Size Fits All - Frank Zappa/Mothers Of Invention

Unusual for a Zappa album to open with the star turn; he usually waits until midway. 'Inca Road' is a superb piece that reaffirms, should it be necessary, that Zappa was an astonishingly great lead guitarist. The quality of the guitar solo is matched throughout by some skilful keyboards from George Duke. Having said that, the solo on 'Po-Jama People' is also pretty nifty. This was a high-charting album for Zappa (in the USA), and for once justice was done, as other similarly great Zappa albums failed completely. This is one of 71 necessary FZ albums to own!

- Tracks: Inca Roads; Can't Afford No Shoes; Sofa No 1; Po-Jama People; Florentine Pogen; Evelyn, A Modified Dog; San Ber'dino; Andy; Sofa No. 2.
- First released 1975
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 26

One Step Beyond - Madness

Madness were at the forefront of the UK ska revival at the end of the 70s, very much a regional thing. Madness were very London and they soon shed the two-tone image and became one of the most consistent UK chart groups of the following decade. This debut shows both sides, from the excellent blue beat signature tune 'Chipmunks Are Go!' and a first class cover of Prince Buster's 'One Step Beyond' to their own masterful pop, and in particular the highly polished 'My Girl'. What Lindisfarne are to Newcastle, and Fairport Convention are to Cropredy, so Madness are to Finsbury Park.

- Tracks: One Step Beyond; My Girl; Night Boat To Cairo; Believe Me; Land Of Hope And Glory; The Prince; Tarzan's Nuts; In The Middle Of The Night; Bed & Breakfast; Razor Blade Alley; Swan Lake; Rockin' In A Flat; Mummy's Boy; Chipmunks Are Go!
- First released 1979
- UK peak chart position: 2
- USA peak chart position: 128

One Touch Of Venus

After making her initial impact on Broadway in 1938 with Cole Porter's 'My Heart Belongs To Daddy' in Leave It To Me!, Mary Martin shot to stardom five years later in this show which opened at the Imperial Theatre in New York on 7 October 1943. The music was written by Kurt Weill, a familiar name in the American musical theatre following his flight from Germany in 1933, but for the two celebrated humorists, poet Ogden Nash (lyrics) and his fellow librettist, S.J. Perelman, One Touch Of Venus was their first, and only, book musical. The authors' story, which was based on F. Anstey's The Tinted Venus, was a contemporary 'sophisticated and witty variation on the Pygmalion-Galatea myth'. Whitelaw Savory (John Boles) has discovered a 3,000 year-old statue of Venus which he has put on display at his New York museum. While viewing the piece, Rodney Hatch (Kenny Baker), a barber from Ozone Heights, puts his fiancée's ring on Venus's finger, and the statue immediately springs to life in the classic shape of Mary Martin. Complex, and sometimes hilarious situations then develop, during which Whitelaw falls for Venus, but she prefers Rodney - that is until she finds out that he is just a simple barber. Eventually, disillusioned with her animated existence, Venus returns to her marble state, and Rodney falls in love with a girl who looks remarkably like . . . Mary Martin. Weill and Nash's score in which the words and music are always in perfect sympathy, is usually remembered for the haunting torch song, 'Speak Low', but there were several other attractive numbers including 'I'm A Stranger Here Myself', 'How Much I Love You', 'One Touch Of Venus', 'West Wind', 'That's Him', 'Foolish Heart', 'The Trouble With Women', 'Wooden Wedding', 'Very, Very, Very', and two beautiful and highly effective ballets sequences, 'Forty Minutes For Lunch' and 'Venus In Ozone Heights', both of which were choreographed by Agnes de Mille. Elia Kazan directed a brilliant all-round cast which included Paula Laurence, Teddy Hart, Ruth Bond, Sono Osato, and Harry Clark. The show ran for a respectable 322 performances, and is regarded as one of the classic musical comedies. Surprisingly, revivals have been few and far between, but the Goodspeed Opera House mounted an acclaimed production in 1987 which starred Richard Sabellico, Semina De Laurentis, Michael Piontek, and Lynnette Perry.

One Trick Pony

This underrated 1980 feature was written, scored and directed by its star Paul Simon. He played a musician reduced to the club circuit, questioning his existence after 14 years on the road had yielded a solitary hit. The cast included Blair Brown as Simon's wife, who wants a divorce, and Joan Hackett as his mistress, while his band included real-life musicians Eric Gale, Tony Levin and Richard Tee. The star's frustrations and dilemmas are skilfully drawn and Simon's untutored thespian gifts enhance the air of uncertainty. This was not the singer's first celluloid adventure - he enjoyed a cameo role in Woody Allen's Annie Hall - but One Trick Pony suggested a broadening artistic palate, particularly in the wake of the hiatus in Simon's recording career. The rebirth ushered in by Gracelands was still some years away and the attendant soundtrack album, which included 'How The Heart Approaches What It Yearns' and 'God Bless The Absentee', was not a major success despite being uniformly high-quality. The same was true of this low-key film, which also offered notable contributions from various denizens of the New York music scene from the 60s to the 80s. A re-formed Lovin' Spoonful, Lou Reed, Tiny Tim and the B-52s make fascinating appearances in a feature that deserves reappraisal.

One, The

(see Perrett, Peter)

One-derful Records

A Chicago record company founded by George Leaner in 1962 to record the hard soul sounds of the city. George Leaner, with his brother Ernie Leaner (d. 17 April 1990, Kalamazoo, Michigan, USA), had been operating a distribution firm, United Distributors, since 1950. The One-derful/Midas/M-Pac/Mar-V-lus label complex secured notable national hits with McKinley Mitchell's 'The Town I Live In', the Five Dutones' 'Shake A Tail Feather', Harold Burrage's 'Got To Find A Way' and Otis Clay's 'That's How It Is', all of which epitomized Leaner's hard-soul vision for the label. His most successful artist, however, was a recording act that could not sing, Alvin Cash And The Crawlers. Rather, leader Cash chanted his way through such giant hits as 'Twine Time', 'The Barracuda', and 'Philly Freeze'. Leaner recorded his acts in One-derful's house studio at 1825 S. Michigan, using such producer talents as Monk Higgins (Milton Bland) and Andre Williams, and songwriting talents such as Otis Hayes, Eddie Silvers and Larry Nestor. The label folded in 1968, but brother Ernie and nephew Tony Leaner continued the family's involvement in the record business by founding the Toddlin' Town label, signing some of the artists who had previously been on One-derful. It lasted until 1971.

Ongala, Remmy

b. Ramathan Mtoro Ongala, 1947, Kindu, Zaire. At the age of 17 Remmy Ongala chose music as a means of supporting his family, the task he was left with after the death of his mother. His father was also a singer, dancer and sanza player. Ongala spent the 60s and 70s in groups such as Bantu Success, Success Mwachame, Mickey Jazz (who hit with 'Siska' and 'Sukuma') and Ugandan band Toro. He then moved to Kenya, joining ex-OK Jazz guitarist Fan Fan in Orchestre Makassy, a very popular local attraction. However, following inter-group squabbles he became leader of Orchestre Super Matimila in 1980, founded in Tanzania. Ongala has subsequently become one of the best-known musicians in that country, though the territory's lack of record production facilities has limited his discography. In his base of Dar Es Salaam he is well known by the community and even has a bus-stop named after him. His insightful, inspirational songwriting has led to fans nicknaming him the Doctor. The lyrics are serious considerations of the problems that he and his fellow people face - poverty, poor living conditions, the struggle of women and other topics. These lyrics, combined with the bright, danceable, rumba-based music of Orchestre Super Matimila, produce an instantly appealing combination, primarily based on the style of Franco. The group came to England in 1988, recording its first international album for the WOMAD organization. It was the first of several visits that gradually built critical acclaim and a responsive audience. The sight of Ongala nonchalantly cuffing a member of his band for playing a dud note was just one of the vivid memories these shows produced.

● ALBUMS: Nalilia Mwana (WOMAD 1988)★★★, Songs For The Poor Man (Real World 1989)★★★, Mambo (Real World 1992)★★★★, The Kershaw Sessions 1988-93 recordings (Strange Roots 1995)★★, with Orchestre Super Matimila Sema (WOMAD 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Kershaw Sessions (Strange Roots 1995)★★★★.

Only Child

This US heavy rock group was formed by the multi-talented songwriter, vocalist and guitarist Paul Sabu in 1988. Featuring Tommy Rude (keyboards), Murril Maglio (bass) and Charles Esposito (drums), their self-titled debut consisted of melodic rock that partially justified the critical acclaim it received. The praise heaped upon the album by Kerrang! magazine, in particular, was rather premature, as the overtly commercial riffs and obvious hooks soon wore thin.

This was borne out by the shortfall in anticipated sales. Esposito was replaced by Tommy Amato in 1989 and they were signed by Geffen Records to start work on new material, but thus far Only Child have remained quiet.

- ALBUMS: Only Child (Rampage 1988)★★.

Only Ones

The Only Ones were formed in 1976 with a line-up comprising: Peter Perrett (vocals, guitar), John Perry (guitar), Alan Mair (bass) and Mike Kellie (b. 24 March 1947, Birmingham, England; drums). Although touted as a new wave group, the unit included several old lags; Mair had previously worked with the Beatstalkers, while Kellie had drummed with Spooky Tooth, Peter Frampton and Balls. Perrett's former band, England's Glory, would have their demos released retrospectively (on the Skyclad label in 1989) after the Only Ones' demise. After a promising independent single, 'Lovers Of Today', the group were signed by CBS Records and made their debut with the searing opus 'Another Girl, Another Planet' - one of the new wave's most enduring songs. Front man Perrett, with his leopard-skin jacket and Lou Reed drawl, won considerable music press attention and the group's self-titled debut album was very well received. A second self-produced collection, Even Serpents Shine, was also distinctive, but internal group friction and disagreements with their record company hampered their progress. Producer Colin Thurston took control of Baby's Got A Gun, which included a guest appearance by Pauline Murray, but the album lacked the punch of their earlier work. With sales dwindling, CBS dropped the group from their roster and the Only Ones finally broke up in 1981, with Perrett by now in the throes of desperate drug addiction. Since that time, the group, and in particular Perrett, have frequently been hailed as influential figures. After overcoming his chemical dependencies, Perrett made known his intentions for a comeback in 1991. This eventually materialized when his new band, The One, took the stage at London's Underworld in January 1994. This coincided with reports that Perrett had now written over 40 new songs; this was confirmed by the release of his debut solo album, Woke Up Sticky, in 1996.

- ALBUMS: The Only Ones (Columbia 1978)★★★, Even Serpents Shine (Columbia 1979)★★★, Baby's Got A Gun (Columbia 1980)★★, Live At The BBC (Strange Fruit 1995)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Special View (Columbia 1979)★★★★, Remains (Closer 1984)★★, Alone In The Night (Dojo 1986)★★, The Only Ones Live In London (Skyclad 1989)★★, Only Ones Live (Demon 1989)★★, The Peel Sessions (Strange Fruit 1989)★★★, The Immortal Story (Columbia 1992)★★★, The Big Sleep (Jungle 1993)★★★.

Only The Lonely

This 'throbbing tribute' to Roy Orbison, which was conceived and produced by the ubiquitous Bill Kenwright for the Liverpool Playhouse, opened at London's Piccadilly Theatre on 27 September 1994. In Shirlie Roden and Jon Miller's 'inept' book, Orbison's life is retold for the benefit of his son, Wesley (Stephen Tremblay), by the late singer's best friend, Bobbie Blackburn (James Carroll Jordan). The 'Big O' himself was played by an uncanny sound- and look-alike, Larry Branson, a Canadian who toured North America for several years in shows which gave him plenty of opportunities to sing 'Running Scared', 'It's Over', 'Crawlin' Back', 'Oh, Pretty Woman', 'In Dreams', 'Blue Bayou', 'Only The Lonely' and the rest of the nearly 30 songs featured during the evening. Not content with noting Branson's 'unnervingly similar Orbison characteristics - wide, plump cheeks, unsmiling mouth, and dark glasses' - some unkind critics also thought that they saw a likeness to the notorious terrorist Carlos the Jackal! Martin Glyn Murray gave a riveting performance as Bruce Springsteen, and the rest of the cast pretended to be Dusty Springfield, Patsy Cline, Bob Dylan, and the Beatles, amongst others. No pretence was needed in May 1995 when a real-life survivor from the 60s - a genuine icon - P.J. Proby joined the cast, and delighted audiences with his own 15-minute spot during each performance.

Ono, Yoko

b. 18 February 1933, Tokyo, Japan. Yoko Ono moved to the USA at the age of 14 and was later immersed in the New York avant garde milieu. A reputation as a film-maker and conceptual artist preceded her collaborations with John Lennon which followed in the wake of their meeting in 1966. The couple's links were both professional and personal - they married in 1969 - and whereas Lennon introduced Yoko to rock, she in turn brought an appreciation of electronic music. Early collaborations, Two Virgins, Life With The Lions and Wedding Album, were self-indulgent and wilfully obscure, but with the formation of the Plastic Ono Band the Lennons began to forge an exciting musical direction. Unfairly vilified as the architect of the Beatles' demise, Yoko emerged as a creative force in her own right with a series of excellent compositions, including 'Don't Worry Kyoto' and 'Listen, The Snow Is Falling'. Yoko Ono/The Plastic Ono Band, her companion collection to John's cathartic solo debut, was equally compulsive listening and a talent to captivate or confront was also prevalent on Fly, Approximately Infinite Universe and Feeling The Space. Several tracks, including 'Men Men Men' and 'Woman Power', addressed feminist issues while her music's sparse honesty contrasted with the era's penchant for self-indulgence. The couple's relationship continued to undergo public scrutiny, particularly in the wake of a highly publicized separation, but the birth of their son Sean, following their reconciliation, resulted in a prolonged retirement. The Lennons re-emerged in 1980 with Double Fantasy, for which they shared creative responsibility, and were returning home from completing a new Yoko single on the night John was shot dead. The resultant track, 'Walking On Thin Ice', was thus imbued with a certain poignancy, but while not without merit, the artist's ensuing albums have failed to match its intensity. Yoko has also supervised the release of unpublished material - videos, writings and recordings - drawn from Lennon's archive and continues to pursue their pacifist causes. Yoko has tolerated much indifference and abuse over the years, initially because she dared to fall in love with a Beatle and latterly because it was felt that she manipulated John. Through all the flack she has maintained her integrity and dignity, resulting in The Ono Box being reappraised in 1992, albeit 20 years too late. She returned to music in 1995 together with her 20-year-old son Sean and his band Ima. The album Rising came as a surprise as Ima added great texture to Yoko's strong yet bizarre lyrics. At 63 years of age she sounded hip and deserves our respect.

● ALBUMS: Yoko Ono/The Plastic Ono Band (Apple 1970)★★, Fly (Apple 1971)★★, Approximately Infinite Universe (Apple 1973)★★, Feeling The Space (Apple 1973)★★, Season Of Glass (Geffen 1981)★★, It's Alright (I See Rainbows) (1982)★★, Starpeace (1985)★★, Rising (Geffen 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Ono Box (1992)★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Bed-In (PMI 1991).

● FURTHER READING: Grapefruit: A Book Of Instructions, Yoko Ono. Yoko Ono: A Biography, Jerry Hopkins. Yoko Ono - Arias And Objects, Barbara Haskell and John G. Hanhardt.

Onslaught

This UK thrash quintet, originally conceived as a punk/metal hybrid, was formed in Bristol in 1983 by guitarist Nige Rockett and drummer Steve Grice. With the addition of vocalist Paul Mahoney and bassist Jason Stallord, they recorded Power From Hell on the independent Cor label in 1985. This opened the doors to a contract with Under One Flag, the thrash subsidiary of Music For Nations. The Force saw the band expand to a quintet, with the arrival of new vocalist Sy Keeler; Mahoney was relegated to bass and Stallord switched to rhythm guitar. The album was heavily reliant on the styles of Slayer, Metallica and Anthrax, with little original input. Mahoney was replaced by James Hinder on bass shortly after the album was released. Moving to London Records, In Search Of Sanity was their make-or-break album. Before it was completed, Steve Grimmett (ex-Grim Reaper) and Rob Trottman replaced Keeler and Stallord, respectively. After a series of delays, the album finally surfaced in early 1989. Producer Stephan Galfas had watered down their aggressive sound in an attempt to court commercial success. Even the cover version of AC/DC's 'Let There Be Rock' proved less strong than expected, and the material generally lacked distinction. They had moved away from hard-line thrash towards mainstream metal with negative results. The album was slated by the metal media and Grimmett quit in 1990. A replacement was found in the form of Tony O'Hara, but the band were dropped by their label soon after. Disillusioned, the members went their separate ways in 1991.

● ALBUMS: Power From Hell (Music For Nations 1985)★★★, The Force (Music For Nations 1986)★★★, In Search Of Sanity (London 1989)★★.

Onuora, Oku

b. Orlando Wong, March 1952, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. In 1971, at the start of a 15-year prison sentence for his part in an armed robbery, Onuora began writing poetry. In true Robin Hood style, the funds from the misdemeanour were to finance projects to help the underprivileged. Not considering himself a criminal, the poems reflected his assertion that he was a political prisoner. In the mid-70s much of his work had been smuggled out against the wishes of the authorities. It was probably owing to the praise bestowed upon his writing by the Jamaican Literary Festival Commission that the Jamaican Government was compelled to grant an early release in 1977. Soon after securing freedom, his first collection of poems, Echo, was published in Jamaica by Sangsters and later in Europe by the Cultural Media Collective. Onuora's debut in the recording studio was at Tuff Gong where backed by the Wailers drum and bass duo, Aston 'Familyman' Barrett and Carlton Barrett, he read 'Reflection In Red' over a heavy dub sound. The poem was a sceptical chronicle of the peace truce between rival gangs led by Bucky Marshall and Claudie Massop. The single won critical acclaim but was not to make an impression in the reggae charts. He began performing his poetry around the world and incongruously appeared at the One Love Peace Concert, a commemoration of the reprieve, alongside Jacob Miller, Culture, Leroy Smart, Big Youth, Peter Tosh and Bob Marley. His numerous awards and notoriety inevitably led to a working relationship with the first successful dub poet Linton Kwesi Johnson. In 1982 following a tour of Europe with Rico Rodriguez, he released 'I A Tell' on his own Kuya label with 'Reflection in Red' on the b-side. By the mid-80s he released his debut, Pressure Drop, with backing supplied by AK7 (Armageddon Knights Column 7), demonstrating his uncompromising lyrics and inventive reggae style. In the early 90s Oku began experimenting with dub, working alongside Courtney Panton, who played and programmed all the instruments. Although Onuora's recorded work is sporadic he enjoys a cult following and occasional releases are snapped up by his dedicated followers.

● ALBUMS: Pressure Drop (Heartbeat 1986)★★★★, New Jerusalem Dub (ROIR 1991)★★★, I A Tell Dubwise And Otherwise (ROIR 1994)★★★.

Onyeka

b. Onyeka Owenu, 17 May 1961, Onitsha, Nigeria. Steering a course between middle-of-the-road international pop and her own eastern Nigerian roots music, Onyeka has various professional interests outside music. She originally trained as a journalist, taking a master's degree in communications in the USA and working at the United Nations headquarters in New York before returning home to work in Nigerian television. In 1984, for BBC Television, she presented a programme titled The Squandering Of The Riches, a critical look at the management of the Nigerian economy. Onyeka's recording career began in 1981 when, with the help of Sonny Okosun, she released Onyeka. This was followed in 1983 with Endless Life. In 1985, dissatisfied with the accounting procedures used by Nigerian EMI Records, who had released both her albums, she set up her own label, Ayolo, and released In The Morning Light. Later that year she released a bizarre single, 'Trina 4', on London-based specialist label Stern's, a strangely compelling mixture of reggae rhythms and bagpipe melodies. Little was heard from her for a period, until she collaborated with King Sunny Ade in the late 80s on Wait For Me, the album which caused a storm of controversy when its origins - as part of the USAID Office Of Population's effort to stem the tide of overpopulation - became public.

● ALBUMS: Onyeka (EMI Nigeria 1981)★★★, Endless Life (EMI Nigeria 1983)★★★, In The Morning Light (Ayolo 1985)★★★, with King Sunny Ade Wait For Me (Sunny Alade 1989)★★.

Onyx

Hardcore gangsta rappers from Queens, New York, USA, Onyx are led by Sticky Fingaz (b. Kirk Jones), with the rest of the group initially comprising Fredro Starr, Big DS and DJ Suavé Sonny Caesar. Their intense, gun-fixated image quickly became a popular receptacle for ill-conceived teenage fantasies in both the US and UK. They originally recorded a solitary single for Profile Records, 'Ahh, And We Do It Like This', before switching to Columbia Records. Boasting titles such as 'Blac Vagina Finda', a visual image of bald heads and bad attitudes, their debut album was co-produced by Jam Master Jay (Run DMC). It sold in huge quantities, arguably because the music itself, on tracks such as 'Throw Ya Gunz', was undeniably exciting as well as forceful. As if to live up to the group's image, Fingaz found himself in trouble for allegedly assaulting a passenger on a United Airlines flight to New York from Chicago O'Hare airport. Group member Fredro also appeared in Forrest Whitaker's film, Strapped in 1993, and (with Sticky) in Spike Lee's Clockers. By the advent of the group's second album in 1995 their ultra-violent image had been usurped by the arrival of Staten Island's Wu Tang Clan, but Onyx still offered ample evidence of their ability to hammer home their message in tracks such as 'Two Wrongs' ('Two wrongs don't make a right, But it sure do make us even'). Shut Em Down was a better attempt at recapturing the energy and attitude of their debut.

● ALBUMS: Bacdafucup (Columbia 1993)★★★, All We Got Iz Us (Def Jam 1995)★★, Shut Em Down (Def Jam 1998)★★★★.

Opal

Formed in the USA in 1984, Opal comprised of David Roback (guitar, vocals; ex-Rain Parade), Kendra Smith (bass, vocals; ex-Dream Syndicate) and Keith Mitchell (drums). All were previously members of Clay Allison. A four-track EP, Fell From The Sun was issued in 1984 under the name Kendra Smith/David Roback/Keith Mitchell, before the three-piece became known as Opal. In 1985 they issued another EP, Northern Line, which combined two acoustic folk-styled tracks with an extended piece centring on feedback guitar. Happy Nightmare Baby is an excellent example of new psychedelia. Although Roback's sometimes somnolent vocal style lacks urgency, the atmosphere generated combines with superior songs to create an enchanting collection. However, Smith left the line-up during a promotional tour and Opal broke up upon its completion. The posthumous Early Recordings combines out-takes with material drawn from the group's two EPs. In 1990 Roback teamed with vocalist Hope Sandoval in Mazzy Star, a group that has continued Opal's waif-like, naive style.

● ALBUMS: Happy Nightmare Baby (SST 1987)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Early Recordings (Rough Trade 1989)★★.

Open Road

This short-lived quartet took their name from a 1970 album by singer-songwriter Donovan. A self-styled 'celtic rock' release, Open Road featured guitarist Barry (Young) Husband, former vocalist with pop group the Warm Sounds, and percussionist John 'Candy' Carr who met as members of Hapshash And The Coloured Coat. Simon Lanzon (keyboards) and Mike Thompson (bass) completed the line-up when the group left Donovan for an independent career. Windy Daze continued the direction already pursued with their erstwhile mentor, but the album was not a commercial success and Open Road folded soon afterwards.

● ALBUMS: Windy Daze (Dawn1971)★★.

Open Sesame - Freddie Hubbard

Trumpeter Freddie Hubbard had an amazing gift for being around at just the right time, appearing on countless modern jazz classics, and recording some of the Blue Note label's greatest albums of the 60s. Open Sesame was his very first Blue Note release as leader, and features bluesy tenor saxophonist Tina Brooks, pianist McCoy Tyner (who had recently joined John Coltrane), bassist Sam Jones and drummer Clifford Jarvis. A fiery, but superbly controlled, trumpeter who never, even at this stage in his career, sounds stretched or short of an idea, Hubbard would become one of the most profound trumpet talents in post-war jazz.

● Tracks: Open Sesame; But Beautiful; Gypsy Blue; All Or Nothing At All; One Mint Julep; Hub's Nub.

● First released 1960

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Operation Ivy

US ska/punk cultish legends Operation Ivy were formed in 1987 by Tim 'Lint' Armstrong (guitar, vocals), Matt Freeman aka Matt McCall (bass), Dave Mello (drums) and Jesse Michaels (vocals). Inspired equally by Britain's first wave of punk bands and the 2-Tone ska revivalists such as the Specials, they blended these two musics into a frenetic live show. Their main American influence was the Uptones, from Berkeley, California. Their debut in Mello's garage was followed quickly by an appearance supporting MDC at Berkeley's Gilman Street club, the prominent local facility that would later breed peers such as Green Day. After making their vinyl debut on a Maximum Rock 'n' Roll compilation, Operation Ivy released the Hectic EP in January 1988 on Lookout Records. A full-length album, Energy, followed in 1989. It added to Operation Ivy's growing popularity, with the band competently matching reggae, ska, pop and punk with vitriolic lyrics. However, it was live that they were at their most impressive, performing a punishing schedule of concerts throughout North America. However, the pressure finally eroded the group's spirit, and they collapsed in May 1989. Michaels became a Buddhist monk and Mello joined Schlong, but Armstrong and Freeman continued working together. Two ska-inspired bands, the Dance Hall Crashers and Downfall, featured both of them. By April 1990 Freeman had joined MDC, touring with them while Armstrong roadied; Freeman featured on that year's album, Hey Cop, If I Had A Face Like Yours. He left by the end of the year, however, and Rancid was eventually formed, initially as a trio with Freeman, Armstrong and Reed (ex-Smog). Rancid then set about building a commercial profile that finally matched Operation Ivy's critical standing.

● ALBUMS: Energy (Lookout 1989)★★★.

Operation Radication - Yellowman

Originally released on vinyl only, this vital CD reissue covers the early part of Winston Foster's career. The tall, imposing figure of a black albino is now seen as a sex-symbol; in his school-days he was often an outcast as people found it hard to come to terms with the way he looked. Sly and Robbie give all the tracks here the edge of professionalism, although the secret of being able to appreciate Yellowman is the depth of his humour. Subtly hidden, his humour, often very rude, is a joy to discover. Take 'Even Tide Fire' as a perfect example. Highly rewarding.

● Tracks: 11 + 11; Shorties; Morning Ride; Even Tide Fire; Operation Radication; Couchie; Out A Hand; Mad Over Me; Lovers Corner; Bim & Bam; Badness; My Possie.

● First released 1980

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Operation: Mindcrime - Queensrÿche

The idea in the late 80s that the concept album could attain any sort of artistic or commercial significance, was at best, unfashionable. Nevertheless, Queensrÿche, with their unlikely tale of subversion and mental manipulation (with full orchestration and choral backing) centred around prostitute-turned-nun Mary, street punk Nikki and the mysterious Dr X, brought the band to an entirely new audience. Geoff Tate's dramatic vocal swoops matched with the band's sublime eloquence, both lyrically and musically, ensuring them a host of songs strong enough to stand in or out of context. Dazzling and complex, but worthy of closer inspection.

● Tracks: I Remember Now; Anarchy X; Revolution Calling; Operation: Mindcrime; Speak; Spreading The Disease; The Mission; Suite Sister Mary; The Needle Lies; Electric Requiem; Breaking The Silence; I Don't Believe In Love; Waiting For 22; My Empty Room; Eyes Of A Stranger.

● First released 1988

● UK peak chart position: 58

● USA peak chart position: 50

Ophichus

A folk/rock group from Wiltshire, England, with varying line-ups, who played 'rural English rock'. Often whimsical and certainly literate, they created music from rustic isolation and could well have earned the tag 'crusty' before the Levellers.

● ALBUMS: Pronounced Offeickus (1989)★★★.

Optimystic

Comprising brothers Ian and Stuart McKeith, Bryn Downing, Shola Finni and Selina Charlier, Scottish pop group Optimystic made their debut in September 1994 with 'Caught Up In My Heart', which peaked at number 49 in the UK charts. It was followed in December by 'Nothing But Love' which broke into the Top 40. Their third single, 'Best Thing In The World', which saw them team up with producer Nigel Lowis (Dina Carroll, Eternal), was released in April 1995. They had previously worked with producers such as John Reid of the Nightcrawlers.

Opus III

UK vocalist Kirsty Hawkshaw (b. *c.*1969), attired with boots and mohican haircut coupled with dayglo beads, led this pop house outfit on their breakthrough single, 'It's A Fine Day'. An update of Jane & Barton's faint ballad, mixing poetry with sweet, haranguing vocals, it added a generic backbeat and little else. Hawkshaw had led a gypsy lifestyle since leaving school (her father composes theme music for television programmes, including News At Ten, Grange Hill and Countdown). As a child she recorded cover versions of the hits of the day for cheap compilation albums, before travelling around the free festival circuit selling home-made jewellery (and MCing for Spiral Tribe). She met the outfit's boiler room staff, Ian Dodds, Kevin Walters and Nigel Munro, at a rave. They form part of the Ashebrooke Allstars, and also recorded as A.S.K. ('Freedom We Cry' for MCA). The follow-up single was a cover of King Crimson's 'I Talk To The Wind'. Nurtured by her record company and band as a chanteuse straddling the pop/rave market, Hawkshaw has yet to provide adequate substance to sustain her strong visual image. However, the band did eventually return in 1994 with 'When You Made The Mountain', and a new, 'spiritual' album.

● ALBUMS: Mind Fruit (PWL 1992)★★★, Guru Mother (PWL 1994)★★.

Oral

A rather sad four-piece all-female UK band comprising 'glamour' models and Stripagram girls, the line-up of Oral (a suitably childish reference point) consisted of Bev (vocals), Monica (guitar), Dee (drums) and Candy (bass). Candy had quit by the time their only album was released and as they played no gigs, it is questionable whether any of them could play at all. Evidently the whole thing was designed to further their day jobs, and they gained a little publicity thanks to song titles such as 'I Need Discipline' and 'Gas Masks Vicars And Priests'. Their debut album was entitled Sex, written so that anyone glancing at the sleeve would read simply 'Oral Sex'. Even the group's version of the Sex Pistols' 'Black Leather' was ill-advised.

● ALBUMS: Sex (Conquest 1987)★★.

Orange

This Yugoslavian hard rock quintet was formed in 1981 by Zlato Magdalenic (vocals), Mijo Popovic (guitar), Tomaz Zontar (keyboards), Marko Herak (bass) and Franc Teropic (drums). Together they secured a contract with the local RTB label. Musically, they incorporated elements of AC/DC, Deep Purple and Accept, but added little creative input of their own. The band were known as Pomeranca in Yugoslavia and attracted a small but loyal cult following after the release of their debut album in 1982. This featured native lyrics and consequently excluded a large section of their potential audience. Madbringer saw the band using English lyrics for the first time, but their crude enunciation failed to enhance their appeal.

● ALBUMS: Peklenska Pomaranca (RTB 982)★★★, Madbringer (RTB 1983)★★.

Orange Juice

Formed in Scotland at the end of the 70s, this engaging and, in some quarters, revered, pop group comprised Edwyn Collins (b. 23 August 1959, Edinburgh, Scotland; vocals, lead guitar), James Kirk (vocals, rhythm guitar), David McClymont (bass) and Steven Daly (drums). They began their career on the cult independent label Postcard Records, where they issued some of the best pop records of the early 80s, including 'Blue Boy' and 'Falling And Laughing'. Collins' coy vocal and innocent romanticism gave them a charm that was matched by strong musicianship. After signing to Polydor Records they issued You Can't Hide Your Love Forever, a highly accomplished effort that augured well for the future. At that point, the group suffered an internal shake-up with Kirk and Daly replaced by Malcolm Ross and Zeke Manyika. Rip It Up was another strong work, and the insistent title track reached the UK Top 10. Further musical differences saw the group reduced to Collins and Manyika as they completed an energetic mini-album, Texas Fever, and an eponymous third album, which included the wistful 'What Presence?'. Collins subsequently recorded a couple of singles with Paul Quinn, after which he embarked on a solo career that has only begun to fulfil its early promise in the mid-90s. Ross joined the line-up of Roddy Frame's Aztec Camera. Manyika also spawned solo projects on Polydor and Parlophone Records.

● ALBUMS: You Can't Hide Your Love Forever (Polydor 1982)★★★, Rip It Up (Polydor 1982)★★★★, Texas Fever mini-album (Polydor 1984)★★★, The Orange Juice (Polydor 1984)★★★, Ostrich Churchyard (Postcard 1992)★★.
Solo: Zeke Manyika Call And Response (Polydor 1985)★★★, Mastercrime (Some Bizzare/ Parlophone 1989)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: In A Nutshell (Polydor 1985)★★★, The Very Best Of (Polydor 1992)★★★★, The Heather's On Fire (Postcard 1993)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Dada With Juice (Hendring Video 1989).

Oranges & Lemons - XTC

Using a 60s Milton Graser-type cover illustration, this purported to be a retro album. In reality it was another extremely fine XTC album, their ninth in a series of classy, offbeat pop exercises from the musically fertile brain of Andy Partridge, who hated touring and loved to stay at home as a reclusive pop star. This is probably their best album and features Partridge's most complete and satisfying song. 'The Loving' and 'The Mayor Of Simpleton' are both excellent compositions, but they pale against the exceptional 'Chalkhills And Children'. On this, Partridge celebrates that his home (the nearby chalkhills) and children keep him sane and well-grounded against the possible excesses to which he would succumb as a touring popster.

● Tracks: Garden Of Earthly Delights; The Mayor Of Simpleton; King For A Day; Here Comes President Kill Again; The Loving; Poor Skeleton Steps Out; One Of The Millions; Scarecrow People; Merely A Man; Cynical Days; Across This Antheap; Hold Me My Daddy; Pink Thing; Miniature Sun; Chalkhills And Children.

● First released 1989

● UK peak chart position: 28

● USA peak chart position: 44

Orb

The Orb is really one man, Dr Alex Paterson (b. Duncan Robert Alex Paterson, hence the appropriation of the Dr title), whose specialist field is the creation of ambient house music. A former Killing Joke roadie, member of Bloodsport, and A&R man at EG Records, he formed the original Orb in 1988 with Jimmy Cauty of Brilliant fame (for whom he had also roadied). The name was taken from a line in Woody Allen's Sleeper. The band first appeared on WAU! Mr Modo's showcase set Eternity Project One (released via Gee Street Records), with the unrepresentative 'Tripping On Sunshine'. However, their first release proper came with 1989's Kiss EP, again on WAU! Mr Modo (which had been set up by Paterson with Orb manager Adam Morris). It was completely overshadowed by the success of the band's subsequent release, 'A Huge Ever-Growing Pulsating Brain Which Rules From The Centre Of The Ultraworld'. It was an extraordinary marriage of progressive rock trippiness and ambience, founded on a centrepoint sample of Minnie Riperton's 'Loving You' (at least on initial copies, later being voiced by a soundalike due to clearance worries). The group signed with Big Life, but Cauty departed in April 1990. He had wished to take Paterson and the Orb on board in his new KLF Communications set-up. There was no little acrimony at the time and Cauty re-recorded an album that was to have been the Orb's debut, deleting Paterson's contributions, and naming it Space (also the artist title). In the event the ethereal 'Little Fluffy Clouds', with co-writer Youth, was the next Orb release, though that too ran into difficulties when the sample of Rickie Lee Jones attracted the artist's displeasure. Paterson did at least meet future co-conspirator Thrash (b. Kristian Weston) during these sessions, who joined in late 1991 from a punk/metal background, hence his name (though he had also been a member of Fortran 5). Their debut album (and the remix set of similar title) was based on a journey to dimensions beyond known levels of consciousness, according to the participants. It soared, or perhaps sleepwalked, to the top of the UK album charts, and led to a plunge of remixes for other artists (including Front 242 and Primal Scream). The album was fully in tune with, and in many ways anticipative of, the blissed-out rave subculture of the early 90s, mingled with dashes of early 70s progressive rock (Pink Floyd were an obvious reference point). There was also an LP's worth of the band's recordings for John Peel's Radio 1 show. This included a 20-minute version of 'Huge Ever-Growing . . . ', which prompted fellow disc jockey Andy Kershaw to ring the BBC to complain, mockingly, about the return of hippie indulgence on a gross scale polluting the nation's airwaves. The Orb signed to Island Records in 1993 following a departure from Big Life that took seven months (and eventually the high court) to settle. The contract with Island allowed Paterson to continue to work on collaborative projects through their own label Inter-Modo, outside of the Orb name. Other projects included a remix album for Yellow Magic Orchestra, though a previous request by Jean Michel Jarre for them to do the same for his Oxygene opus was declined. They also took the opportunity to play live at unlikely venues such as the Danish island of Trekroner, and generally appeared to be making a hugely enjoyable time of their unlikely celebrity, Paterson even being made honorary president of Strathclyde University's Student Union. However, their first studio set for Island, Pomme Fritz, saw them witness the first signs of a critical backlash. This was seemingly unfounded as their musical growth could not be disputed; this progress continued with Orblivion in 1997.

● ALBUMS: The Orbs Adventures Beyond The Ultraworld (WAU! Mr Modo/Big Life 1991)★★★, Peel Sessions (Strange Fruit 1991)★★★, Aubrey Mixes, The Ultraworld Excursion (WAU! Mr Modo/Big Life 1992)★★★, UFOrb (WAU! Mr Modo/Big Life 1992)★★★, Live 93 (Island 1993)★★, Pomme Fritz (Island 1994)★★★, Orbvs Terrarvm (Island 1995)★★★★, Orblivion (Island 1997)★★★.

Orbach, Jerry

b. 20 October 1935, Bronx, New York, USA. An actor and singer who created a handful of important roles for the Broadway musical theatre, before turning mostly to films and television. Orbach studied acting with Lee Strasberg, and singing with Mazel Schweppe. After making his professional debut as the Typewriter Man in a 1952 Illinois version of Room Service, he continued to work in regional theatre, appearing in stock productions of musicals such as The King And I and The Student Prince. He made his Broadway debut taking over the roles of the Streetsinger (1957) and Macheath (1958), in the long-running revival of The Threepenny Opera that opened at the Theatre De Lys in 1955. In 1960 he played the dual role of the Narrator and the bandit El Gallo off-Broadway in Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones's historic epic The Fantasticks, introducing the show's hit song, 'Try To Remember'. During the 60s he created the character of cynical puppeteer Paul Berthalet in Carnival (1961) on Broadway and on tour, played in revivals of The Cradle Will Rock (1964 as Larry Foreman), Guys And Dolls (1965 as Sky Masterson, with Alan King and Sheila MacRae), Carousel (1965 as Jigger Craigin), and Annie Get Your Gun (1966 as Charlie Davenport), as well as appearing in several straight plays. In 1969 Orbach won a Tony Award for his portrayal of Chuck Baxter, the sad, lowly office worker who lends out his apartment to senior executives in Promises, Promises, and introduced (with Jill O'Hara) Burt Bacharach and Hal David's 'I'll Never Fall In Love Again'. In 1974, he played in the Neil Simon revue The Trouble With People ... And Other Things in Miami. Orbach subsequently returned to Broadway, full of assurance, singing 'All I Care About' and 'Razzle Dazzle', as Gwen Verdon and Chita Rivera's smart lawyer, the silver-tongued prince of the courtroom, Mr. Billy Flynn, in Chicago (1975). Orbach's last major stage musical role to date came in 1980, when he portrayed tough producer Julian Marsh in the long-running Broadway adaptation of the famous 1932 Busby Berkeley movie 42nd Street. Since then, he has continued to appear in dramatic parts in the theatre, but seems to have concentrated mostly on television (Perry Mason, Murder, She Wrote, Law And Order, etc.) and films. The music connection has continued though, and in more recent years moviegoers have seen him as the disapproving doctor/father figure in the hit film Dirty Dancing (1987), and heard his voice behind the hospitable candelabra, Lumiere, singing Alan Menken and Howard Ashman's Oscar-nominated 'Be Our Guest', in Walt Disney's animated feature Beauty And The Beast (1991).

● FILMS: Cop Hater (1958), Mad Dog Coll (1961), John Goldfarb, Please Come Home (1964), The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight (1971), A Fan's Notes (1972), Foreplay (1975), The Sentinel (1977), Prince Of The City (1981), Brewster's Millions (1985), F/X (1986), The Imagemaker (1986), I Love N.Y. (1987), Dirty Dancing (1987), Someone To Watch Over Me (1987), Last Exit To Brooklyn (1989), Crimes And Misdemeanors (1989), Dead Women In Lingerie (1990), Toy Soldiers (1991), Out For Justice (1991), Delusion (1991), voice of Lumiere Beauty And The Beast (1991), Delirious (1992), Straight Talk (1992), Mr. Saturday Night (1992), Universal Soldier (1992), Quiet Killer (1992).

Orbison, Roy

b. 23 April 1936, Vernon, Texas, USA, d. 6 December 1988, Madison, Tennessee, USA. Critical acclaim came too late for one of the leading singers of the 60s. He became the master of the epic ballad of doom-laden despair, possessing a voice of remarkable range and power, and often finding it more comfortable to stay in the high register. The former reluctant rockabilly singer, who worked with Norman Petty and Sam Phillips in the 50s, moved to Nashville and became a staff writer for Acuff-Rose Music. He used his royalties from the success of 'Claudette', recorded by the Everly Brothers, and written for his first wife, to buy himself out of his contract with Sun Records, and signed with the small Monument label. Although his main intention was to be a songwriter, Orbison found himself glancing the US chart with 'Up Town' in 1960. A few months later, his song 'Only The Lonely' was rejected by Elvis Presley and the Everly Brothers, and Orbison decided to record it himself. The result was a sensation: the song topped the UK charts and narrowly missed the top spot in the USA. The trite opening of 'dum dum dum dummy doo wah, yea yea yea yea yeah', leads into one of the most distinctive pop songs ever recorded. It climaxes with a glass-shattering falsetto, and is destined to remain a modern classic.

The shy and quiet-spoken Orbison donned a pair of dark-tinted glasses to cover up his chronic astigmatism, although early publicity photos had already sneaked out. Over the next five years he enjoyed unprecedented success in Britain and America, repeating his formula with further stylish but melancholy ballads, including 'Blue Angel', 'Running Scared', 'Crying', 'Dream Baby', 'Blue Bayou' and 'In Dreams'. Even during the takeover of America by the Beatles (of whom he became a good friend), Orbison was one of the few American artists to retain his ground commercially. During the Beatles' peak chart year he had two UK number 1 singles, the powerful 'It's Over' and the hypnotic 'Oh Pretty Woman'. The latter has an incredibly simple instrumental introduction with acoustic guitar and snare drum, and it is recognized today by millions, particularly following its use in the blockbuster film Pretty Woman. Orbison had the advantage of crafting his own songs to suit his voice and temperament, yet although he continued to have hits throughout the 60s, none except 'It's Too Soon To Know' equalled his former heights; he regularly toured Britain, which he regarded as his second home. He experienced appalling tragedy when, in 1966, his wife Claudette was killed as she fell from the back of his motorcycle, and in 1968, a fire destroyed his home, also taking the lives of his two sons. In 1967 he starred as a singing cowboy in The Fastest Guitar Alive, but demonstrated that he was no actor. By the end of the decade Orbison's musical direction had faltered and he resorted to writing average MOR songs such as the unremarkable 'Penny Arcade'. The 70s were barren times for his career, although a 1976 compilation topped the UK charts. By the end of the decade he underwent open-heart surgery. He bounced back in 1980, winning a Grammy for his duet with Emmylou Harris on 'That Lovin' You Feelin' Again' from the film Roadie, and David Lynch used 'In Dreams' to haunting effect in his chilling film Blue Velvet in 1986. The following year Orbison was inducted into the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame; at the ceremony he sang 'Oh Pretty Woman' with Bruce Springsteen. With Orbison once again in favour, Virgin Records signed him, and he recorded an album of his old songs using today's hi-tech production techniques. The result was predictably disappointing; it was the sound and production of the classics that had made them great. The video A Black And White Night showed Orbison being courted by numerous stars, including Springsteen, Tom Waits and Elvis Costello. This high profile led him to join George Harrison, Bob Dylan, Tom Petty and Jeff Lynne as the Traveling Wilburys. Their splendid debut album owed much to Orbison's major input. Less than a month after its critically acclaimed release, Orbison suffered a fatal heart attack in Nashville. The posthumously released Mystery Girl in 1989 was the most successful album of his entire career, and not merely as a result of morbid sympathy. The record contained a collection of songs that indicated a man feeling happy and relaxed; his voice had never sounded better. The uplifting 'You Got It' and the mellow 'She's A Mystery To Me' were impressive epitaphs to the legendary Big 'O'.

● ALBUMS: Lonely And Blue (Monument 1961)★★, Exciting Sounds Of Roy Orbison (Roy Orbison At The Rockhouse) (Sun 1961)★★, Crying (Monument 1962)★★★, In Dreams (Monument 1963)★★★, Oh Pretty Woman (1964)★★★★, Early Orbison (Monument 1964)★★, There Is Only One Roy Orbison (MGM 1965)★★, Orbisongs (Monument 1965)★★, The Orbison Way (MGM 1965)★★, The Classic Roy Orbison (MGM 1966)★★, Roy Orbison Sings Don Gibson (MGM 1966)★★★, Cry Softly, Lonely One (MGM 1967)★★, The Fastest Guitar Alive (MGM 1968)★, Roy Orbison's Many Moods (MGM 1969)★★, The Big O (MGM 1970)★★, Hank

Williams: The Roy Orbison Way (MGM 1970)★★, Roy Orbison Sings (MGM 1972)★★, Memphis (MGM 1972)★★, Milestones (MGM 1973)★★, I'm Still In Love With You (Mercury 1975)★★, Regeneration (Monument 1976)★★, Laminar Flow (Asylum 1979)★★, with Jerry Lee Lewis, Johnny Cash, Carl Perkins The Class Of '55 (1986)★★★, Mystery Girl (Virgin 1989)★★★★, Rare Orbison (Monument 1989)★★★, A Black And White Night Live (Virgin 1989)★★, King Of Hearts (Virgin 1992)★★★★, Combo Concert (Orbison 1997)★★★.

- COMPILATIONS: Roy Orbison's Greatest Hits (Monument 1962)★★★★, More Of Roy Orbison's Greatest Hits (Monument 1964)★★★, The Very Best Of Roy Orbison (Monument 1965)★★★★, The Great Songs Of Roy Orbison (Monument 1970)★★★★, All-Time Greatest Hits Of Roy Orbison, Volumes 1 & 2 (Monument 1976)★★★, Golden Days (Monument 1981)★★★, My Spell On You (Hits Unlimited 1982)★★★, Big O Country (Decca 1983)★★, Problem Child (Zu Zazz 1984)★★, In Dreams: The Greatest Hits (Virgin 1987)★★★★, The Legendary Roy Orbison (Sony 1988)★★★, For The Lonely: A Roy Orbison Anthology 1956-1965 (Rhino 1988)★★★★, The Classic Roy Orbison (1965-1968) (Rhino 1989)★★★, Sun Years (Rhino 1989)★★★★, Our Love Song (Monument 1989)★★★, Singles Collection (Polygram 1989)★★★, The Sun Years 1956-58 (Bear Family 1989)★★★, The Legendary Roy Orbison (Columbia 1990)★★★★, Best Loved Moments (1993)★★★, The Gold Collection (Tristar 1996)★★★, The Very Best Of Roy Orbison (Virgin 1996)★★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Dark Star, Ellis Amburn. Only The Lonely, Alan Clayson.
- FILMS: The Fastest Guitar Alive (1966).

Orbit, William

b. William Wainwright, England. In addition to heading the Bass-O-Matic group, Orbit has remixed for the likes of Prince, Madonna ('Justify Your Love'), Belinda Carlisle, S'Express, Shamen, Seal, Les Negresses Vertes, the Cure ('Inbetween Days') and Shakespears Sister, though he gave up remixing in 1993 so it would not overshadow his own work. As a teenager Wainwright would make his own music by splicing tapes together to produce sound collages. He started cutting songs as part of Torch Song, and released two albums, Wild Thing in 1984 and Exhibit A in 1987, with Laurie Mayer. He then took the name Orbit and brought in vocalist Peta Nikolich for his debut, having retained Mayer as his co-writer. This set included bizarre cover versions of the Psychedelic Furs' 'Love My Way' and Jackie Mittoo's 'Feel Like Jumping'. The club favourite 'Fire And Mercy' brought him to the attention of dance pundits. This was housed on Strange Cargo, a collection of soundscapes recorded between 1984 and 1987. Strange Cargo II also steered away from the electronic house music that had marked Orbit's work with Bass-O-Matic, and resembled instead the experimental pieces of Brian Eno or Holger Czukay. Eventually the Madonna remix brought him to the attention of Rob Dickins, chairman of Warner Music, and together they set up the N-Gram Recordings label in 1995. (Orbit had previously founded Guerrilla Records which released progressive house artists such as Spooky and D.O.P. and which folded in 1984.) The first release on N-Gram was a single by cellist Caroline Lavelle, whom Orbit discovered when she played on Massive Attack's 'Home And Away'. An album followed, as well as Orbit's first release for his new label, a continuation of the Strange Cargo series. N-Gram also gave him the opportunity to work with the Torch Song trio once more, while Pieces In A Modern Style was an interpretation of 20th Century classical music.

- ALBUMS: Orbit (MCA 1987)★★★★, Strange Cargo (MCA 1988)★★★★, Strange Cargo II (IRS 1990)★★★, Strange Cargo III (IRS 1993)★★★, Strange Cargo IV (N-Gram 1995)★★★, Pieces In A Modern Style (N-Gram 1995)★★.

Orbital

This UK ambient techno outfit have done much to deliver the possibilities of improvisation to live electronic music. Unlike many other groups, their stage performances do not depend on DAT or backing tapes. They also use more varied samples than is the norm, including sources as diverse as the Butthole Surfers on 'Satan' and Crass on 'Choice'. Comprising brothers Paul Hartnoll (b. 19 May 1968, Dartford, Kent, England) and Phillip Hartnoll (b. 9 January 1964, Dartford, Kent, England), the Orbital name was first suggested by their friend Chris Daly of the Tufty Club. With several 'M25' dance parties happening so close to their homes in Dunton Green, they named themselves after the UK's least adored stretch of road. It also helped convey the idea of tape loops which are so central to their craft. Before the band began its active life in 1987, Paul had played with an outfit by the name of Noddy And The Satellites as well as doing labouring odd jobs, while his brother had been a bricklayer and barman. They made their live debut in the summer of 1989 at the Grasshopper, Westerham, Kent, joining the ffrr Records imprint shortly afterwards. They opened their account for the label with the UK Top 20 single 'Chime' in March 1990, setting a pattern for a sequence of dramatic, one-word titles ('Omen', 'Satan', 'Choice', 'Mutations'). They moved to Internal Records for 'Raddiccio' in October 1992, while work continued apace on their remixing chores. These included work on releases by artists as diverse as the Shamen, Queen Latifah, Meat Beat Manifesto and EMF. Their first two albums, beginning with Untitled in 1991 (subsequently referred to as Untitled 1), showcased their ability to sustain a musical dynamic over a full-length album, a rare ability within their field, which saw them bracketed alongside artists such as Underworld and the Orb. In 1994 they appeared as headliners at the Glastonbury Festival and contributed to the Shopping film soundtrack. They also released Snivilisation, a largely instrumental political concept album which was successful on both a musical and thematic level. Meanwhile, their live work earned them an award for Best Live Show at the New Musical Express's BRAT Awards as they made a triumphant return to Glastonbury in 1995. If previous albums had always hinted at a cinematic bent, 1996's 'The Box' was a fully fledged film soundtrack - comprising four distinct movements with vocal versions by lyricist Grant Fulton and Tricky singer Alison Goldfrapp. The film itself was Orbital's own exploration of science-fiction adventurism, ironically filmed in the highly terrestrial environs of Milton Keynes. It was followed by the release of Orbital's fourth studio album. The exquisitely dense rhythms on the six tracks that comprised In Sides emphasized the group's critically acclaimed accommodation of the experimental with the accessible. It included tracks such as 'The Girl With The Sun In Her Hair', recorded using solar power as a reaffirmation of the group's anarchist/environmental standing.

● ALBUMS: Untitled 1 (ffrr 1991)★★, Untitled 2 (Internal 1993)★★★, Snivilisation (Internal 1994)★★★★, In Sides (Internal 1996)★★★★, with Michael Kamen Event Horizon soundtrack (London 1997)★★.

Orchestra Baobab

Formed in 1970 by singers Laye M'Boup, a traditional folk musician, and current leader Balla Sidibe, Orchestra Baobab were early Senegalese fusionists, who paved the way for artists such as Youssou N'Dour and Toure Kunda. The original line-up also included Barthelemy Atisso (guitar), Baroune N'Diaye (saxophone), Sedat Li (bass) and Rodolphe Gomis (vocals). Horn player Issi Cissokho, a John Coltrane disciple who brought a strong jazz influence, joined later, as did Peter Oudo (clarinet), Ndiouga Dieng (vocals) and, in 1977, Thione Seck (vocals). Originally the group drew on material inherited from Senegalese legends the Star Band, establishing a residency at the Baobab Club (whence they took their name) for seven years in the early 70s. However, following a management change in April 1977 they took their Latin/Cuban influenced music (with Spanish or Kriolu - Portugese Creole - lyrics) to the Djandeer/Kilimanjaro Club. In that year they also released a total of five albums. Although atrociously produced and poorly distributed, they at least served to announce the vibrancy of the group's material, lent added maturity by their many performances together. A brief stand at the Balafon Hotel followed before an offer to relocate to Paris, France, in June 1978, was accepted. However, a lack of adequate promotion and arrangements ensured the stay was not a happy one, and after trying their luck in the Marseilles expatriate Senegalese community they returned home at the end of the year. They soon discovered that the musical climate at home had changed with the arrival of artists such as Youssou N'Dour. They persevered with their sound at the Ungalam for a time, but lost most of the nucleus of the band as rewards diminished. By the mid-80s only Sidibe remained from the original group, and he soon realized the risk of continually ignoring the prevailing musical developments. The 'new' Orchestra was introduced in 1985 with instruments such as the tamar drum and sabar, plus female singers and more focused, political lyrics. Despite the radical change, they still found it hard to recover lost ground, despite the return of original singer Gomis.

● ALBUMS: '75' (BR 1975)★★★, Guy Gu Rey Gu (BR 1975)★★★, Senegal, Senegal (BR 1975)★★★★, Visage Au Senegal (BR 1975)★★★, Adduna Jarul (BR 1975)★★★★, Baobob In Paris Volume 1 (ASL 1978)★★, Baobob In Paris Volume 2 (ASL 1978)★★, Africa (Mon Afrique) (DARL 1979)★★★, Mohamadou Bamba (JM 1980)★★★★, Sibou Odja (JM 1980)★★★, Sotante Xalat (BS 1981)★★★, Ken Dou Werente (MCA 1982)★★★, Pirate's Choice (World Circuit 1989)★★, On Verra Ca (World Circuit 1992)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Coumba (MCA 1979)★★★.

Orchestra Makassy

Makassy, along with a number of other bands such as Orchestra Virunga and Orchestre Super Mazembe, were one of a number of largely Zairean line-ups who left their overcrowded domestic music scene in the 70s, to make a living in the neighbouring Kenyan and Tanzanian markets. During the UK's mid-80s African music boom, Makassy made a brief impact with Western audiences via a licensing deal with the Virgin Records label. Makassy took their name from their leader, vocalist/guitarist Mzee Makassy. Born in Zaire, he learned his music at school and in his late teens began sitting in with bands in the capital, Kinshasa. In the early 70s, he found work with various groups in Kenya and Uganda and in 1974 formed the first Orchestra Makassy, a 10-piece aggregation, with whom he spent a year recording and touring in Europe. Returning to Africa in 1975, the band spent a few months in Uganda, before the then oppressive political climate (under Idi Amin) encouraged them to set up base in Tanzania. Ironically, it was in Tanzania rather than Uganda that tragedy hit Makassy, when, in 1976, lead vocalist Isiak Baharia was stabbed and killed in a street fight. For a time, the group was in turmoil, until Mzee was able to stabilize the line-up again, with the addition of musicians from the OK Jazz stable (including Remmy Ongala). The new personnel had a huge East African hit in 1979 with the single 'Mosese 2000' (written by ex-OK Jazz guitarist Fan Fan, who would go on to lead the UK-based outfit Somo Somo in the mid-80s before returning to Makassy). In 1982, Makassy's album Agwaya was released in the UK by Virgin, along with the single 'Mambo Mado'. Both releases made a substantial impact on the UK's dance and African music scenes, but in the absence of any UK follow-up releases, this promising start remained undeveloped.

● ALBUMS: Mosese 2000 (1979)★★★, Agwaya (Virgin 1982)★★★★, Chapter And Verse (1985)★★★.

Orchestra Wives

The marvellous music more than made up for a dull plot in this, the second of only two films in which the enormously popular Glenn Miller Orchestra appeared. The story concerns the glitz and the grind of a band on the road in the heyday of the Swing Era. Glamour-boy trumpeter George Montgomery cannot bear to leave his young sweetheart Ann Rutherford behind so he marries her and brings her aboard the bus - much to the chagrin of the hard-bitten wives of the other orchestra members who give the poor girl a hard time. After providing the Miller band with several hits in their previous movie, Sun Valley Serenade, Harry Warren and Mack Gordon came up trumps in this 1942 release with 'At Last', 'Serenade In Blue', 'People Like You And Me', and 'I Got A Gal In Kalamazoo'. The latter number was a speciality for Tex Beneke And The Modernaires, and they were joined by most of Miller's regular sidemen, including Hal McIntyre, Ray Anthony, Billy May, and singers Marion Hutton and Ray Eberle. Also in the cast were Cesar Romero, Lynn Bari, Carole Landis, Mary Beth Hughes, Jackie Gleason, Virginia Gilmore, Tamara Geva, Harry Morgan, and the marvellously athletic dancing team, the Nicholas Brothers. Karl Tunberg and Darrell Ware wrote the screenplay, and Nick Castle choreographed the dances. The director was Archie Mayo and the film was released in 1942. A film to watch again and again - just for those historic musical sequences.

Orchestral Manoeuvres In The Dark

(see OMD).

Orchestre Jazira

Of the several dozen bands who emerged in the UK during that country's sizeable growth of interest in African music during the early and mid-80s, Jazira were the least roots orientated. Formed in 1980, they had an almost continuously shifting line-up (usually 10-piece, sometimes even larger) during the seven years of their existence, although some stylistic continuity was provided by a core of more-or-less permanent members including founder vocalists Isaac Tagoe and Martin Nii-Moi, founder guitarists Ben Mandelson and Folo Graff, and a three-piece horn section. In part, the band's stylistic eclecticism was a result of the large number of nationalities, African and European, represented amongst the personnel, with no single national grouping overwhelming the others. In part it was also a conscious effort by the founding members to create a pan-African, even global, sound - incorporating highlife, soukous, rock, jazz and practically anything else that took their fancy. After making unsuccessful approaches to a number of major labels, Jazira signed a singles deal with the independent Earthworks label in 1982, releasing the critically acclaimed but commercially unsuccessful 'Love' towards the end of the year. By 1983, the band had left Earthworks and had signed a three-year deal with Beggars Banquet Records. They drafted in London-based Sierra Leonean producer Akie Deen, who had achieved widespread African and Caribbean success in the late 70s with his 'discolypso' sound. The first fruit of the new partnership, 'Sakabo', mixed by dub maestro Dennis Bovell, combined highlife, soca, soukous and reggae to glorious effect. True to form, Jazira shifted direction yet again with Nomadic Activities in 1984. The album was consciously and defiantly at odds with what both the UK record business and its public then expected of an 'African' band - that is a simple, happy, all-night party sound. The approach was just too moody, complex and cosmopolitan to fit the bill. In a desperate attempt to gain radio play, Beggars Banquet persuaded Jazira to release one of the album's least demanding tracks, 'Happy Day', as a single - and when that failed, let the band's contract expire. Over the next three years, Jazira slowly unwound, as members left to pursue solo careers or join other bands. Graff was one of the first to leave, followed by Mandelson and Nii-Moi, then saxophonists Jane Shorter and Sophie Hellborg, who moved to Paris to join Mory Kante's band. Tagoe continued to lead a much reduced Jazira around the UK club circuit until the end of 1987, when the group finally broke up.

● ALBUMS: Nomadic Activities (Beggars Banquet 1984)★★★.

Orchestre Super Mazembe

With a varying line-up of between nine and 14 musicians, Mazembe (Zairois for earth movers) were one of the most popular Kenyan bands of the 80s, and for a brief while in the mid-80s enjoyed a cult following in Europe, following their signing by Virgin Records and the UK release of the album, Kaivaska. Although based in Kenya since the early 70s, the band's personnel is wholly Zairean - it being one of several outfits that decided to leave the overcrowded Kinshasa scene in the late 70s to move to the greener East African markets of Kenya and Tanzania. Like fellow expatriates Orchestra Makassy, Mazembe have recorded their most popular material in Nairobi with British producer Norman Mighell. In 1984, they enjoyed a sizeable international hit with a cover version of Nguashi Timbo's East African evergreen, 'Shauri Yako', which had been included on Kaivaska. A second UK album, Maloba D'Amor, repackaged some of the Kaivaska tracks - including 'Shauri Yako' - while new material included a curiously faithful reading of the old Buddy Holly hit 'Words Of Love' (the title track).

● ALBUMS: Mazembe (EMA 1980)★★★, Tenth Anniversary (EMA 1981)★★★, Double Gold (EMA 1982)★★★★, Kaivaska (Virgin 1983)★★★, Maloba D'Amor (1990)★★★★.

Oregon

This inventive and influential progressive jazz chamber group were formed in 1970 from the nucleus of the Paul Winter Consort, an aggregation led by Paul Winter. Oregon comprised Ralph Towner (b. 1 March 1940, Chehalis, Washington, USA; guitar, keyboards), Collin Walcott (b. 24 April 1945, New York City, USA, d. 8 November 1984; percussion, sitar, tabla, clarinet), Glen Moore (bass, violin, piano, flute) and Paul McCandless (b. 24 March 1947, Indiana, Pennsylvania, USA; alto saxophone, oboe, bass clarinet). Walcott's death from a car accident in 1984 seemed a fatal blow to the band, but after a year in mourning they returned. The recruitment of Walcott's friend Trilok Gurtu (b. 30 October 1951, Bombay, India; tabla, drums, percussion) gave them a fresh incentive. Their debut on ECM Records in 1983 was an eclectic, part-electric album. Oregon explore the boundaries of jazz, using uniquely disparate influences of classical, folk, Indian and other ethnic music. Their chamber-like approach encourages hushed auditoriums and intense concentration, which is required to get maximum benefit from their weaving style. Occasionally they will burst into a song of regular form and pattern, as if to reward a child with a treat. One such number is the evocatively rolling 'Crossing' from the same album. Another outstanding piece from their immense catalogue is 'Leather Cats'. Their refusal to compromise leaves them a lone innovative force and one of the most important jazz-based conglomerations of the past three decades.

● ALBUMS: Music Of Another Present Era (Vanguard 1972)★★, Distant Hills (Vanguard 1973)★★★, Winter Light (Vanguard 1974)★★, In Concert (1975)★★, with Elvin Jones Oregon/Jones Together (Vanguard 1976)★★★, Friends (Vanguard 1977)★★★, Out Of The Woods (Elektra 1978)★★★★, Violin (Vanguard 1978)★★★, Roots In The Sky (Elektra 1979)★★★, Moon And Mind (Vanguard 1979)★★, In Performance (Elektra 1980)★★, Oregon (ECM 1983)★★★, Crossing (ECM 1985)★★★★, Ectopia (ECM 1987)★★★, 45th Parallel (Verabra 1989)★★, Always, Never, And Forever (Verabra 1991)★★★, Beyond Words (Chesky 1995)★★★.

Orendorff, George

b. George Robert Ordendorff, 18 March 1906, Atlanta, Georgia, USA, d. 1984. Orendorff learned to play guitar and cornet as a child, working professionally from his mid-teens. This was in Chicago where his family had settled and he attracted the attention of many bandleaders; by this time he was mostly playing trumpet. In California in the mid and late 20s he worked in several bands including Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders and Les Hite's Sebastian Cotton Club Orchestra. In both these bands he was with Lionel Hampton whom he had known in Chicago. With Hite he recorded with Louis Armstrong, and also appeared in films. He spent some years from 1939 with guitarist Ceele Burke, then entered the armed forces during World War II. During the 50s and 60s he sporadically played in and around Los Angeles on a casual basis. He also made appearances in films in these years and John Chilton records that he has published poetry. A good section player, Orendorff could also play driving solos when opportunities arose. Backing Armstrong, he sometimes played discreet obbligati behind vocals, and even as early as his recordings with Howard, he displays startlingly progressive ideas.

● COMPILATIONS: Paul Howard's Quality Serenaders (TOM 1929)★★★, with Louis Armstrong, Les Hite Louis In Los Angeles (1930-31)★★★★.

Organ Grinder Swing - Jimmy Smith

Using the monicker 'Incredible' was no flash banner, it was true. Smith defined the Hammond organ as a jazz instrument and milked and bled it to its limit. The sub-credit for guitarist Kenny Burrell and drummer Grady Tate is also well deserved. This is the ultimate groovy, smokey jazz trio record that Smith made. The title track has been used for countless radio trailers over the years, while the often covered Duke Ellington classic, 'Satin Doll', is given extra special effort. Burrell has worked with Smith more than any other musician. His mellow tone and Smith's treble notes blend like cucumber and salmon.

- Tracks: The Organ Grinder's Swing; Oh, No, Babe; Blues For J; Greensleeves; I'll Close My Eyes; Satin Doll.
- First released 1965
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: 15

Organization

Formed from the remnants of Death Angel, the US band Organization are Rob Cavestany (vocals, guitar), Andy Galeon (drums, vocals), D. Pepa (bass) and Gus Pepa (guitar). The former band, while on tour supporting Act III, suffered a bus crash that seriously injured drummer and youngest member Galeon. When singer Mark Osegueda decided he was unable to wait for him to make a full recovery, Cavestany took over as singer and frontman and the Organization was born. Marking their arrival with an appearance at the Dynamo Festival in Europe in 1992, the members had learned enough about the music industry to act in a more independent fashion, setting up their own Unsafe Unsane Recordings for the release of Free Burning (licensed to Bulletproof/Music For Nations in the UK). However, reactions to the set were lukewarm after the positive press generated by their stage shows. Critical apathy also afflicted its 1995 follow-up, Savor The Flavor.

● ALBUMS: Free Burning (Unsafe Unsane Recordings 1993)★★, Savor The Flavor (Unsafe Unsane Recordings 1995)★★★.

Organized Konfusion

Duo comprising Pharoahe Monch and Prince Poetry, whose music is distinguished by both a rare knack for samples/rhythm tracks and a smooth lyrical flow. Coming from Jamaica and New York, respectively, the band's members absorbed everything from jazz and reggae to gospel in their youth. They met at high school in 1986, signing to a small independent after honing their skills. No recordings emerged from the contract, and they switched instead to Disney-funded Hollywood Basic, scoring immediate success with the number 1 rap hit, 'Walk Into The Sun', and a well-received debut long player (which also included a second hit single in 'Open Your Eyes'). The title track, 'Stress', from their second album set out their stall with an attack on racist taxi drivers, and music industry incompetents. Joined by Q-Tip (A Tribe Called Quest) on 'Let's Funk', these were just two of the best tracks on another excellent album, with Prince Po indeed the '...exec with the intellectual concepts that elevate you like steps' ('Let's Organize').

● ALBUMS: Organized Konfusion (Hollywood Basic 1991)★★, Stress: The Extinction Agenda (Hollywood Basic 1994)★★★, The Equinox (Priority 1997)★★★.

Oriental Brothers Band

A highlife band from Eastern Nigeria, the original Orientals were formed by the Opara brothers Warrior, Dan Satch and Godwin Kabaka in 1972. By the end of the decade, the group had released 20 albums. In 1977, Godwin Kabaka left to form the Kabaka International Guitar Band, and the Orientals continued under the leadership of Warrior and Dan Satch. In 1980, Warrior also left, to form Dr Sir Warrior And The Original Oriental Brothers. Three years later, the original line-up got back together to record the album, Onye Nwe Ala, before Warrior and Godwin Kabaka left once more to re-establish their own groups. A new audience opened up for the band with the 1991 release of Heavy On The Highlife, a furious compilation documenting fifteen years of spirited performances.

● ALBUMS: Orientals Specials (1974)★★★, Murtala Mohammed (1977)★★★, Nwanne Awu Enyi (1978)★★, Obi Nwanne (1981)★★, Onye Nwe Ala (1983)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of The Oriental Brothers (1979)★★★, Heavy On The Highlife 1973-1988 recordings (Original Music 1991)★★★★.

Original Concept

Long Island, New York, four-piece who made an early impression on hip-hop's underground scene with their 1986 single, 'Knowledge Me'/'Can You Feel It', following it with the mighty 'Pump That Bass'. The former was mainly notable for being the first of several rap tracks to sample the Art Of Noise's 'Close To The Edit'. On album Original Concept concentrated squarely on entertainment, using comedic raps over dance-orientated grooves. Mainman Dr Dre (not the Dre of NWA/solo fame) went on to DJ for the Beastie Boys and co-host Yo! MTV Raps with Ed Lover.

● ALBUMS: Straight From The Basement Of Kooley High (Def Jam 1988)★★★.

Original Dixieland Jazz Band

In May 1916 several young white New Orleans musicians were working in Chicago, some in the same band. After a few changes the group settled down with its personnel consisting of Nick La Rocca (b. 11 April 1889, d. 22 February 1961; cornet) Eddie Edwards (b. 22 May 1891, d. 9 April 1963; trombone), Larry Shields (b. 13 September 1893, d. 21 November 1953; clarinet), pianist Henry Ragas (b. 1891, d. 18 February 1919) - his successor at the piano, J. Russell Robinson (b. 8 July 1892, d. 30 September 1963) and Tony Sbarbaro (Spargo) (b. 27 June 1897, d. 30 October 1969; drums). Under its somewhat hyperbolic and misleading title, the Original Dixieland Jazz Band, aided by widespread publicity, became known as the creators of jazz. Despite this hopelessly inaccurate and unfair description, the ODJB's 1917 recordings of 'Livery Stable Blues' and 'Dixie Jass Band One-Step' succeeded in bringing the emergent music to the attention of millions. They were also able to make far more prestigious public appearances than would have been possible had they been black. First at Resenweber's restaurant in New York and later at London's Palladium theatre, the ODJB offered audiences a mixture of vaudeville eccentricity and good jazz (rather more of the former than the latter) and helped boost the music from its limited origins into worldwide popularity. Synonymous with the Jazz Age, and sometimes having just as little to do with real jazz as that loose term for a sociological and cultural phenomenon, the ODJB quickly became legendary and thereafter did not need to live up to the usually unfulfilled promise their name evokes. In its original form the ODJB broke up in 1925, re-forming in 1936 for a brief and not too successful tour. The founding five had variable success after their ODJB days with Sbarbaro being perhaps the most active.

● COMPILATIONS: The Original Dixieland Jazz Band 1917-1936 recordings (1979)★★★★, Sensation (1983)★★★.

Original Memphis Five

Formed by a group of white musicians who were based in New York, the band became hugely popular during the 20s. Founder-members were Phil Napoleon, Frank Signorelli, Miff Mole, Jimmy Lytell and Jack Roth. The band filled an engagement at the Balconnades Ballroom in New York, USA, and then stayed together for a number of years and made many popular records, sometimes using other names. Later, other musicians graced the band's ranks but, by the end of the 20s, the band, which had been the inspiration of many young white jazzmen, broke up. Towards the end of the 40s Napoleon re-formed the band and a little while later Signorelli also formed a band that used the same name and included Mole and Lytell. Reunions and re-formations continued during the 50s. Specializing in snappily played dixieland jazz, the band did much to popularize jazz in the early years of its development. Napoleon and Mole made notable individual contributions to the music, gaining many emulators.

● ALBUMS: Connee Boswell And The Original Memphis Five In Hi-Fi (1957)★★★, Phil Napoleon And His Memphis Five (1959)★★.

Original Rockers

Midlands, UK-based dance outfit, led by DJ Dick (b. Richard Whittingham) and musician Glynn Bush, who have been compared to the On-U Sound troupe via their ambient dub/deep trance techniques. They made their debut in February 1992 with a single, 'Breathless', dedicated to DJ Dick's club of the same name. Their 1993 single 'Rockers To Rockers' was originally issued a year before as the b-side to limited edition promos of 'Push Push', (previously titled 'Come Again'). As is usual, it was based on deep dub grooves, with adventurous drum and bass patterns. Other singles include the self-descriptive 'Stoned', recorded in collaboration with fellow-Birmingham outfit Groove Corporation.

● ALBUMS: Rockers To Rockers (Different Drummer 1993)★★★.

Originals

Freddie Gorman, Walter Gaines, C.P. Spencer (aka Crathman Spencer and Spencer Craftman), Henry 'Hank' Dixon and Joe Stubbs first recorded as the Originals in 1966. Several members were already an integral part of Detroit's music history. Gorman, who released several solo singles, also co-wrote 'Please Mr. Postman' for the Marvelettes, while Stubbs was a former singer with both the Falcons and the Contours. Between 1965 and 1969, the quintet was used primarily as a backing group before their career blossomed with 'Baby I'm For Real', a number 1 R&B single co-written and produced by Marvin Gaye. The singer's involvement continued on two further releases, 'The Bells' and 'We Can Make It Pretty Baby', but despite several excellent records, including California Sunset, a collection of Lamont Dozier songs, the group was unable to sustain this momentum. Reduced to a quartet following Stubbs' departure for 100 Proof Aged In Soul, the Originals underwent further changes prior to their departure from Motown in 1978. By this point, Ty Hunter, former singer with the Voice Masters and Glass House, had joined the line-up, but his death three years later effectively marked the end of this group. The original line-up teamed with the Supremes for 'Back By Popular Demand' on Ian Levine's Motor City label in 1992. Former members C.P. Spencer, Freddie Gorman and Joe Stubbs were also signed to Levine's label.

● ALBUMS: Green Grow The Lilacs aka Baby I'm For Real (Soul 1969)★★★, Portrait Of The Originals (Soul 1970)★★★★, Naturally Together (Soul 1970)★★★, Def.I.Ni.Tions (Soul 1972)★★★, Game Called Love (Soul 1974)★★★, California Sunset (Soul 1975)★★★★, Communique (Soul 1976)★★★, Down To Love Town (Soul 1977)★★, Another Time Another Place (Fantasy 1978)★★, Come Away With Me (Fantasy 1979)★★, Yesterday And Today (1981)★★.

Oriole Records

A contemporary of other UK independent labels Top Rank, Triumph and Ember, Oriole was established in London during the 50s. It enjoyed fleeting chart success with Maureen Evans, who scored five hits between 1960 and 1964, notably with 'Like I Do', and Swedish instrumental combo the Spotniks, who reached the Top 10 with a wild interpretation of 'Hava Nagila'. However, the outlet is best known for the brief period is distributed material licenced from Tamla/Motown. Having secured the rights from Fontana in September 1962, Oriole issued 19 singles including the Contours' 'Do You Love Me' and Marvin Gaye's 'Stubborn Kind Of Fellow'. One EP and seven albums also appeared under its banner. However, the arrangement proved temporary and in October 1963 the catalogue was acquired by EMI's Stateside division. Oriole also issued the Donays' revered 'Devil In His Heart' in the UK and this classic was later covered by the Beatles on With The Beatles. The label's links with the Liverpool scene was enhanced further when A&R director/producer John Schroeder recorded several of the city's lesser-known beat groups on a two-volume series This Is Merseybeat. Schroeder's departure in 1964 to inaugurate the Pye subsidiary, Piccadilly, coupled with the generally tenuous existence UK independents enjoyed, sealed Oriole's fate. Singles by the Rats, a Blackpool group featuring future David Bowie musicians, Mick Ronson and Woody Moodmansey, were among its last releases. In 1965 its catalogue was absorbed by CBS.

Orioles

This R&B vocal group was formed in 1947 in Baltimore, Maryland, USA. Along with the Ravens, the Orioles were considered the pioneers of rhythm and blues vocal harmony. All born in Baltimore, the group members were Sonny Til (b. Earlington Carl Tilghman, 18 August 1928, d. 9 December 1981; lead), Alexander Sharp (tenor), George Nelson (baritone), Johnny Reed (bass) and guitarist Tommy Gaither. Gaither died in a car accident in 1950 and was replaced by Ralph Williams, and Nelson left in 1953 and was succeeded by Gregory Carroll. The Orioles launched their career with the quiet, languorous ballad 'It's Too Soon To Know', which went to number 1 in the R&B charts (number 13 pop) in 1948. The song was written by Deborah Chessler, the group's manager, and she wrote many of their subsequent hits. Most Orioles hits followed the same formula of Til's impassioned tenor lead with sleepy vocal support and almost invisible instrumental accompaniment in which the music was felt rather than heard. These included the US R&B hits '(It's Gonna Be A) Lonely Christmas' (number 8, 1948), 'Tell Me So' (number 1, 1949), 'Forgive And Forget' (number 5, 1949), 'Crying In The Chapel' (number 1 - and a pop number 11, 1953), and their last R&B chart record, 'In The Mission Of St. Augustine' (number 7, 1953). In 1955 the Orioles broke up, with Sharp and Reed joining various Ink Spots groups. Til formed a new Orioles group from members of another group, the Regals, but could not revive the fortunes of the Orioles. George Nelson died around 1959, Alexander Sharp some time in the 60s, and Sonny Til on 9 December 1981.

● ALBUMS: The Cadillacs Meet The Orioles (1961)★★, Modern Sounds Of The Orioles Greatest Hits (1962)★★★, Sonny Til Returns (1970)★★★, Old Gold/New Gold (1971)★★★, Visit Manhattan Circa 1950's (1981)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Orioles Sing: Their Greatest Hits, 1948-1954 (Collectables 1988)★★★, Hold Me, Thrill Me, Kiss Me (1991)★★, Greatest Hits (1991)★★★, The Jubilee Recordings 7-CD box set (Bear Family 1993)★★★★.

Orion

b. Jimmy Ellis, 1945, Orrville, Alabama, USA. Orion was an Elvis Presley soundalike and lookalike who gained recognition following the death of the rock 'n' roll 'king'. In fact, Orion's following was largely the result of many Presley fans believing that he actually was Elvis Presley hiding behind a Lone Ranger-type mask. Ellis began singing in 1963, influenced by country singers Marty Robbins, Eddy Arnold, Ray Price and Presley. After graduating from high school and winning a talent contest, he turned professional, performing at nightclubs in the south. His first recorded single was, 'Don't Count Your Chickens Before They Hatch', for the small Dradco label in 1964. He then gave up the music business until the mid-70s. In 1974 he recorded a single for MCA Records and then several for the Boblo label through 1977. Always compared to Presley, Orion started capitalizing on the comparisons in 1978 when he recorded an album for Boblo titled By Request: Ellis Sings Elvis. In 1979 he signed to the revived Sun Records, which had been Presley's first label and continued to further the connection. To drive the point home, Ellis's first single was the same Elvis had recorded, 'That's All Right' coupled with 'Blue Moon Of Kentucky'. The record label released the single with no artist's name on the label, and rumours spread that Presley had not died but returned to his roots instead. The name Orion was adopted after receiving a phone call from a woman who had written a book titled Orion, a fictionalized version of the Presley story. Although he did not perform Presley material in his show, he interpreted music in Presley's style. After a few years of building his reputation, Orion removed his mask and attempted to rid himself of the Presley connection. He continued to record and maintained a popular following, but press coverage lessened after the hype died and he never had a hit record.

● ALBUMS: By Request: Ellis Sings Elvis (1978)★★★, Reborn (1978)★★, Sunrise (1979)★★★, Rockabilly (1980)★★★, Country (1980)★★★, Feelings (1981)★★, Glory (1981)★★★, Fresh (1981)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 20 All-Time Favorites (1981)★★★.

Orlando

Comprising songwriter/guitarist Richard Edwards (b. *c.*1971, England) and drama school graduate, former funeral director and singer Timothy Mark, this duo from London, England, made a colourful debut in 1995 with the single 'Reproduction Is Pollution'. Credited to Shelley, it was released on cult independent label Sarah Records and attacked the unjustified propagation of the species in the light of over-population statistics. Their debut single as Orlando, 'Just For A Second', was released in the spring of 1996 for Blanco y Negro. The b-side featured a spoken extract from their first major press interview - with weekly music paper Melody Maker. They then toured the UK as part of the Club Skinny package tour with Plastic Fantastic.

Orlando, Ramón

b. Santo Domingo, Dominica, Lesser Antilles. Dominican merengue singer and composer Ramón Orlando is the son of Cuco Valoy, a popular protest singer on the island. He is also an evangelist preacher, writing and distributing religious literature in addition to recording for the local Karen Records label. Despite such a moral background, his records have inspired a large degree of controversy in the mid-90s. His 1993 single, 'Te Compro Tu Novia', concerned the question 'how much would it cost to obtain your girlfriend?' Even more incendiary was his 1995 merengue single, 'El Venao', which caused a huge furore in Puerto Rica. The song, which utilized a Caribbean Spanish contraction of the word 'venado', literally a deer, concerned an unfaithful wife. Its title was intended as an insult to those who had been cuckolded in love (the deer's metaphorical antlers). Law enforcement agencies in San Juan alleged that the song might have played a part in several homicides which took place in August 1995. As chief of police Pedro Toldeo told the press, 'I don't have any hard evidence that 'El Venao' has promoted any killings, but given the machista culture that Puerto Rico has, 'El Venao' could have been a factor in as many as four killings.' All involved angry husbands killing their wives after accusing them of adultery.

Orlando, Tony

b. 4 April 1944, New York, USA. An engaging, commercially minded singer, Orlando's early success came in 1961 when he scored two US Top 40 entries with 'Halfway To Paradise' and 'Bless You'. The former, a superb Gerry Goffin/Carole King composition, was later successfully covered by Billy Fury, but Orlando enjoyed an emphatic UK hit when the latter reached number 5. Subsequent releases, including 'Happy Times' (1961) and 'Chills' (1962) were less impressive and Orlando began forging a backroom career in the music business, eventually rising to general manager of Columbia Records' April/Blackwood publishing division. In 1970 he was tempted back into recording when he formed the highly popular Dawn. A later solo album was recorded on the Elektra label. In 1986, Orlando celebrated 25 years in showbusiness at Harrah's in Atlantic City, and, three years later, joined Dawn at the Hilton, Las Vegas, for a run through of most of their old hits, including 'Tie A Yellow Ribbon,' 'Candida', and 'Knock Three Times'.

● ALBUMS: Bless You (And 11 Other Great Hits) (Epic 1961)★★★, Tony Orlando (Elektra 1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Before Dawn (Epic 1976)★★, The Best Of Tony Orlando And Dawn (Rhino 1995)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Tony Orlando, Ann Morse.

Orleans

This mid-70s US group comprised John Hall (b. 1948, Baltimore, Maryland, USA; guitar, vocal), Lance Hoppen (b. 1954, Bayshore, New York, USA; bass), Wells Kelly (organ, vocal), Larry Hoppen (guitar, keyboards, vocal) and Jerry Marotta (drums). Drawing from a variety of sources - country, rock, soul and calypso - Orleans acquired a cult following as one of the more intelligent mainstream bands of their era. They signed with ABC in 1973, but were dropped after one album and were picked up by Elektra-Asylum. Success for their new label came immediately with 'Dance With Me' an American Top 10 hit. They continued from strength to strength, until Hall left to pursue a solo career in 1977. Morotta departed soon afterwards. They were replaced by Bob Leinback and R.A. Martin, and although the new-look Orleans were less well regarded, they enjoyed another US Top 10 hit in 1979 with 'Love Takes Time'.

● ALBUMS: Orleans later reissued as Before The Dance (ABC 1973)★★, Let There Be Music (Asylum 1975)★★★, Walking And Dreaming (Asylum 1976)★★★, Forever (Infinity 1979)★★, Orleans (1980)★★, One Of A Kind (1982)★★.

Orlons

A mixture of schoolfriends and neighbours, this Philadelphia-based group was formed by Shirley Brickley (b. 9 December 1944), Steve Caldwell (b. 22 November 1942), Rosetta Hightower (b. 23 June 1944, USA) and Marlena Davis (b. 4 October 1944). Introduced to Cameo Records by the lead singer of the Dovells, Len Barry, the Orlons' first hits, 'The Wah Watusi', 'Don't Hang Up' and 'South Street', cleverly exploited the male/female aspect of the group. Each of these releases reached the US Top 5, but their potential was undermined when 'Cross Fire!' (1963) and 'Rules Of Love' (1964) were only minor hits. Any lingering impetus was lost when Davis and Caldwell left the line-up, but although Audrey Brickley took their place, the Orlons broke up in 1968 when Rosetta Hightower moved to the UK to become a session singer.

● ALBUMS: The Wah-Watusi (Cameo 1962)★★, All The Hits (Cameo 1963)★★, South Street (Cameo 1963)★★★, Not Me (Cameo 1964)★★, Down Memory Lane (Cameo 1964)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Biggest Hits (Cameo 1963)★★, Golden Hits Of The Orlons And The Dovells (1963)★★★, Cameo Parkway Sessions (London 1978)★★.

Ornadel, Cyril

b. 2 December 1924, London, England. A composer, arranger and conductor for the theatre and films, Ornadel studied piano, double bass, and composition at the Royal College of Music. He was with ENSA for a while, and later toured Europe with the popular singer Dorothy Carless. He led his own all-female band at Murray's Club in London, and later worked as a concert party pianist. After providing some musical and vocal arrangements for the Players' Theatre, he was appointed musical director of the touring show Hello Beautiful, which led to his first London assignment as the conductor of a pantomime at the People's Palace in the Mile End Road. In 1950, he became the West End's youngest pit conductor when he took over the baton for the musical revue Take It From Us at the Adelphi Theatre. During the remainder of the 50s he conducted for the London productions of several successful American musicals, such as Kiss Me, Kate, Call Me Madam, Paint Your Wagon, Wish You Were Here, Pal Joey, Wonderful Town, Kismet, Plain And Fancy, and My Fair Lady. Ornadel also collaborated with David Croft on the scores for regional productions of Star Maker, The Pied Piper, and the London Palladium's 1956 pantomime, The Wonderful Lamp (with Phil Park). For much of the 50s he was the resident musical director for the top-rated television programme, Sunday Night At The London Palladium. In 1960, he and lyricist Norman Newell won Ivor Novello Awards for their delightful ballad, 'Portrait Of My Love', which gave Matt Monro his first UK chart hit. Ornadel's other 'Ivors' (to date) came in 1963 for 'If I Ruled The World' (lyric by Leslie Bricusse), the hit song from his score for the immensely successful musical, Pickwick, starring Harry Secombe; and the scores for two 'Best British Musicals', Treasure Island (1973) and Great Expectations (1975), both with Hal Shaper. After playing its initial UK dates and in several Canadian cities, Ornadel and Shaper rewrote the score for Great Expectations, and the revised version was presented at the Liverpool Playhouse (1989) and in Sydney, Australia (1991). Ornadel's other stage musicals have included Ann Veronica (1969, with Croft), Once More, Darling (1978, with Newell), Winnie (1988, additional songs with Arnold Sundgaard), Cyrano: The Musical (with Shaper), and The Last Flower On Earth (1991, with Kelvin Reynolds). Over the years, Ornadel has also conducted and/or composed and orchestrated the music for numerous radio, film and television productions, including Some May Live, Subterfuge, The Waitors, I Can't, I Can't, Wedding Night, Man Of Violence, Europa Express, Cool It Carol, Die Screaming Marianne, Yesterday, The Flesh And The Blood Show, The Strauss Family (series), Edward VII (series), Christina, Brief Encounter (1974 remake), and many more. His albums, especially those on which his Starlight Symphony Orchestra celebrated the great popular composers, have been extremely successful, especially in America. He also composed a series of children's records for EMI, and was the musical supervisor for the Living Bible records with Sir Laurence Olivier, and created the 'Stereoaction Orchestra' for RCA Records. A genial, and much-liked man, in the early 90s Cyril Ornadel was living and working in Israel. His many albums include: Musical World Of Lerner And Loewe, Opening Night-Broadway Overtures, Bewitched, Camelot, Carnival, Dearly Beloved, Enchanted Evening, Gone With The Wind, Musical World Of Jerome Kern, Musical World Of Cole Porter, Musical World Of Rodgers And Hammerstein, So Nice To Come Home To, and The Music Man .

Orphan

This Canadian melodic heavy rock quartet was formed in 1982 by ex-Pimps duo Chris Burke Gaffney (vocals, bass) and Brent Diamond (keyboards). Enlisting the services of guitarist Steve McGovern and drummer Ron Boivenue, they negotiated a contract with the Portrait label the following year. Drawing inspiration from commercial rockers such as Bryan Adams and Queen, they debuted with Lonely At Night, a sophisticated collection of accessible AOR anthems. Salute saw Boivenue succeeded by Terry Norman Taylor and the guest appearance of guitarist Aldo Nova, but the songs lacked the impact of those on their debut release and the band's progress dissipated.

● ALBUMS: Lonely At Night (Portrait 1983)★★★★, Salute (Portrait 1985)★★★.

Orpheus

Of the three Boston, Massachusetts, USA groups (the others were Ultimate Spinach and the Beacon Street Union) signed to MGM Records in 1968 in an attempt to create a 'Bosstown Sound' to rival San Francisco's scene, Orpheus was the only one to create music still remembered years later. The group formed in the mid-60s and was originally known as the Mods. At that time the members included guitarists/vocalists Bruce Arnold and Jack McKenes, Eric Gulliksen (bass) and Harry Sandler (drums). Preferring a soft-rock sound, the band changed its name to Orpheus and signed to MGM, recording a self-titled album in 1968. Both it and the debut single, 'Can't Find The Time', hit the lower end of the charts, but the single found a home on easy listening radio stations in later years and was still receiving airplay in the early 90s. Orpheus recorded four albums and disbanded in the early 70s.

● ALBUMS: Orpheus (MGM 1968)★★★, Ascending (MGM 1968)★★★, Joyful (MGM 1969)★★, Orpheus (1971)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Orpheus: The Best Of (Ace 1995)★★★.

Orquesta De La Luz

A Japanese conglomeration; Orquesta de la Luz, created salsa industry history by generating the fastest ever sales for a debut album. Latinos were clearly flattered to have members of another culture, especially the Japanese, perform their music so competently. Orquesta de la Luz were formed in Tokyo in 1984 by former funk musicians, singer Nora Shoji and percussionist Gen Ogimi. In 1988 Nora journeyed to New York armed with demonstration tapes. She so impressed booking agent Richie Bonilla, that he brought them over to the Big Apple to perform in August 1989. The band made a tremendous impact with audiences and were approached by the city's leading salsa promoter, Ralph Mercado, who signed them to his RMM Records label.

Orquesta de la Luz's first album, Salsa Caliente del Japón/Hot Salsa From Japan, was released to coincide with their return to New York in the summer of 1990, which included an appearance at the first part of the 15th annual New York Salsa Festival. The album topped the Billboard tropical/salsa chart, reached number 1 in Puerto Rico and Colombia, and went platinum. Orquesta de la Luz record as a 12-piece, sporting a horn section of three trumpets and two trombones; a rhythm section of conga, bongo, timbales, bass and piano; and voices (lead and chorus). RMM house musical director, keyboardist Sergio George, co-produced Salsa Caliente del Japón and the band's follow-up, Sin Fronteras (1991), which featured a timbales solo by special guest musician, Tito Puente, on the track 'Descarga de la Luz'. George also contributed arrangements to both records. Nora, the band's lead vocalist, first met the 'Queen of Salsa', Celia Cruz, at the 1990 New York Salsa Festival: '... she must have known that "Cucala" (one of Celia's biggest hits) was in my regular repertoire because as soon as she saw me, she started singing "Cucala" really loudly. She said, "There aren't many other women that sing salsa, so good luck", and then gave me a big hug. I was so moved I couldn't speak.' (Quote from an interview in the Japanese magazine Latina, 1991). The following year, Celia Cruz joined Nora Shoji on stage at the second part of the 16th New York Salsa Festival to perform a duet of 'Cucala'.

● ALBUMS: Salsa Caliente del Japón/Hot Salsa From Japan (1990)★★★★, Sin Fronteras (1991)★★★, Somos Differentes (1992)★★★.

Orquesta Reve

b. Elio Reve, 1930, Cuba. Reve and his band are among the most popular musicians in Cuba and are becoming increasingly revered on the western-music scene. Reve has been performing since his mid-20s and was the driving force behind two other successful Cuban groups - Ritmo Oriental and Loss Van Van. He then formed Orquesta Reve, a band whose rhythm section is made up of a host of percussionists playing a varied of instruments including claves, congas and maracas, with Reve on timbale. The band also included tres-player Papi Oviedo. They popularized changui, a little known style of dance music originating from eastern Cuba, fusing it with son (the popular style from which salsa originates) and rumba to produce a dynamic sound. Rhumberos Latino Americano, La Explosion del Memento and Que Cuento Es Ese! kept Orquesta Reve at the top of the Cuban charts throughout the 80s and won them two gold discs. Although these albums were not officially promoted outside of Cuba, the western version of La Explosion del Momento! takes highlights from them all. Oviedo left in 1995 to form his own group, Papi Oviedo Y Su Soneros.

● ALBUMS: La Explosion del Momento! (1989)★★★.

Orrall, Robert Ellis

In the early 80s the US country singer Robert Ellis Orrall worked with Carlene Carter and then moved to Nashville. He wrote country hits for Mason Dixon ('When Karen Comes Around') and Shenandoah ('Next To Me, Next To You'). His album, Flying Colours, has a similar pop/country mix to Dr. Hook's records.

● ALBUMS: Flying Colours (RCA 1993)★★★.

Ørsted Pedersen, Niels-Henning

b. 27 May 1946, Osted, Denmark. Ørsted Pedersen first learned to play piano but took up the bass as his friend Ole Kock Hansen was also a pianist and they wanted to play duets together. He achieved an amazing facility on his new instrument while still in his mid-teens, making his first record at the age of 14. Playing regularly at the noted Montmartre Club in Copenhagen from early in 1961, he accompanied and occasionally recorded with visiting and ex-patriot American jazz stars, including Brew Moore, Yusef Lateef, Sonny Rollins, Bud Powell and Bill Evans (with whom he toured in the early 60s having earlier refused an invitation to join Count Basie). He recorded frequently in the 60s, 70s and 80s, happily ranging from mainstream through bop to free jazz with artists such as Don Byas, Ben Webster, Tete Montoliu, Kenny Dorham, Dexter Gordon, Anthony Braxton and Albert Ayler. By the end of the 70s he had sealed his international reputation, thanks in part to a long stint with Oscar Peterson which continued well into the 80s. He has made a number of fine duo albums with Kenny Drew (Duo), Joe Pass (Chops) and Archie Shepp (Looking At Bird). A superbly accomplished technician, his brilliant virtuosity is underpinned with a great sense of time and dynamics. His solos are always interesting and display his awareness of the roots of jazz bass whilst acknowledging the advances made in more recent years.

● ALBUMS: Oscar Peterson Big Six At The Montreux Jazz Festival 1975 (1975)★★★★, Jay Walkin' (Steeplechase 1975)★★★, Double Bass (Steeplechase 1976)★★★★, with Oscar Peterson The Paris Concert (1978)★★★, with Joe Pass Chops (1978)★★, Dancing On The Tables (Steeplechase 1979)★★★, Just The Way You Are (1980)★★★, with Archie Shepp Looking At Bird (1980)★★, with Count Basie Kansas City Six (1981)★★★, The Viking (1983)★★★, with Palle Mikkelborg Once Upon A Time (1992)★★, Friends Forever (Milestone 1997)★★★.

Ortiz, Mario

Trumpeter Ortiz is a prominent bandleader and arranger working out of Puerto Rico. In the 60s, he led a 14 to 16-piece orchestra, called All Star Band, and recorded with them on the Ramso and Remo labels. At the time, the bandleader's 'extreme youth' attracted comment. Mario participated in Kako's 1963 Latin jam session recording, Puerto Rican All-Stars Featuring Kako, and in the 70s Puerto Rico All Stars albums. Also in the 70s, he wrote arrangements for Roberto Roena's band Apollo Sound and recorded for El Gran Combo's EGC label. In the first half of the 80s Mario appeared on four albums by bandleader Willie Rosario. Ortiz signed to Ralph Cartagena's Rico Records. His 1984 hit on the label, Vamos A Gozar, was exceptional. The 13-piece band on the album comprised of three trumpets, two saxophones (alto and tenor), bass, piano, timbales, bongo, conga and three vocalists. Mario wrote all the arrangements and played trumpet, as did his son, Mario Ortiz Jnr., who sessions widely on the Puerto Rican recording scene. Anthony Cruz (b. 5 January 1965, New Jersey, USA) and Primi Cruz shared the lead vocals. Gilberto Santa Rosa acted as artistic assistant on the album, and on four of Ortiz's other releases between 1985-90; he also sang in the chorus on this album and all of Mario's records issued during the same period.

Baritone saxophone and a fourth trumpet were added to Mario's band on Ritmo y Sabor in 1985. Ernesto Sánchez began his tenure as Ortiz's regular baritone saxophonist on 1986's Dejenme Soñar!, and contributed a few arrangements to subsequent albums. Sánchez sessioned outside the band and worked extensively as an arranger, mainly in the salsa romántica vein. He arranged Lalo Rodríguez's enormous 1988 Latin hit 'Ven Devorame Otra Vez', and wrote arrangements for Eddie Santiago, Andy Montañez, Paquito Guzmán, Oscar D'León, Amilcar Boscan, Pupy Santiago, David Pabón, Rubby Haddock, Frankie Ruiz, Grupo Clase, Héctor Tricoche, Vitín Ruiz, and others. In 1986, Ortiz and El Gran Combo leader, Rafael Ithier, co-produced Gilberto Santa Rosa's solo debut Good Vibrations. Mario contributed arrangements to this album and Santa Rosa's next two releases. 1987's Algo Diferente was Primi Cruz's last album with Ortiz before he left to join Willie Rosario's band. Nelson Rodríguez joined as a third vocalist (lead and chorus) on the same album. Cruz's vacancy was filled by Luigi Valentín on Sexy Salsa (1988). Rodríguez was replaced by Roberto Dávila, who sang the hit title track of the Puerto Rican Top 10 album, Que Sera De Mi?, in 1990. Anthony Cruz departed to go solo and had a big hit with Algo Nuevo, released on Tony Moreno's Musical Productions label. For 1991's The Trumpet Man, Ortiz radically rejigged his front-line to two trumpets, two trombones and baritone saxophone. Vocalist José David replaced Cruz and Dominican merengue star, Bonny Cepeda, sang and composed one track. Ortiz played trumpet with La Puertorriqueña, a Puerto Rican all-star gathering co-ordinated by bandleader/timbales player Don Perignon for Festival De Soneros (1990). During the 80s and at the beginning of the 90s, Mario wrote arrangements for artists and bands, such as: Julio Castro, Conjunto Clásico, Puerto Rican Power, Pedro Conga, Tony Vega, José Alberto and Ray de la Paz.

● ALBUMS: Mario Ortiz y su All Star Band, Swinging With Mario Ortiz All Star Band (1964)★★★, with the Puerto Rico All Stars Puerto Rico All Stars (1976)★★★★, with the Puerto Rico All Stars Los Profesionales (1977)★★★, Vamos A Gozar (1984)★★★, Ritmo y Sabor (1985)★★★, Dejenme Soñar! (1986)★★, Algo Diferente (1987)★★★, Sexy Salsa (1988)★★, Que Sera De Mi? (1990)★★★, The Trumpet Man (1991)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Mario Ortiz (1964)★★★.

Orton, Beth

b. December 1970, Norwich, Norfolk, England. Beth Orton pulled off the unlikely task of making folk-influenced music hip among mid-90s clubbers. Her early musical heroes were the likes of Neil Young, Ricki Lee Jones and Joni Mitchell, but by her teens she was more interested in an acting career than in being a singer. However, when William Orbit recruited her to record some spoken text for his Strange Cargo project, the moderately drunk Orton sang instead. Bizarrely, shortly afterwards she went totally blind for five days, for reasons still unexplained. After she regained her sight she made further guest appearances with Orbit and Red Snapper, then worked with the Chemical Brothers, singing 'Alive: Alone' on Exit Planet Dust. She recorded some demos with members of Primal Scream, which came to the attention of Heavenly Records boss Jeff Barrett and the Winnebago project was born. Orton's songs were definitely influenced by her 70s singer-songwriter idols but with the assistance of musicians such as Red Snapper's Ali Friend and Sandals drummer Will Blanchard, as well as remixes by dance maestro Andy Weatherall, the songs maintained a sort of trip-folk momentum and the album (renamed Trailer Park after threats of legal action from the makers of the camper van) was rivalled only by Portishead's Dummy as a prime choice chill-out album for broad-minded beautiful people. Finally, British folk/dance meant something other than fat men in white trousers hitting each other with bladders. The Best Bits EP, released in December 1997, featured Orton duetting with her musical hero Terry Callier on a cover version of Fred Neil's 'Dolphins'.

● ALBUMS: Trailer Park (Heavenly 1996)★★★★.

Ory, Edward 'Kid'

b. 25 December 1886, La Place, Louisiana, USA, d. 23 January 1973. A gifted, hard-blowing trombonist and a competitive musician, Ory came to New Orleans when in his mid-20s and he quickly established a fearsome reputation. An aggressive music maker and a tireless self-promoter, he was determined to be successful and very soon was. By 1919 he was one of the city's most popular musicians and bandleaders but he left town on medical advice. Taking up residence in California, he became just as popular in Los Angeles and San Francisco as he had been in New Orleans. In 1922 Ory became the first black New Orleans musician to make records and the success of these extended his fame still further. In 1925 he travelled to Chicago, playing and recording with Joe 'King' Oliver, Jelly Roll Morton and Louis Armstrong, with whom he made many classic Hot Five and Hot Seven sides. In 1930 he was back in Los Angeles, joining Mutt Carey, who had taken over leadership of the Ory band. By 1933, however, Ory had tired of the business and the lack of success he was enjoying compared to that of his earlier days and quit music. He returned in the early 40s, sometimes playing alto saxophone or bass. Encouraged by some prestigious radio dates, he was soon bandleading again and playing trombone and was thus well-placed to take advantage of the boom in popularity of traditional jazz which swept the USA. Throughout the 50s and into the early 60s he played successfully in San Francisco and Los Angeles, where he had his own club, touring nationally and overseas. He retired in 1966. A strong soloist and powerful ensemble player, Ory's work, while redolent of New Orleans-style jazz, demonstrated that his was a much richer and more sophisticated ability than that of many early trombonists. His compositions included 'Ory's Creole Trombone' and 'Muskrat Ramble', which became a jazz standard.

● ALBUMS: Kid Ory's 'This Is Jazz' Broadcast (1947)★★★, Live At The Club Hangover Vol. 1 (1953)★★, Live At The Club Hangover Vol. 2 (1953)★★, Live At The Club Hangover Vol. 3 (1954)★★, Live At The Club Hangover Vol. 4 (1954)★★, Kid Ory's Creole Jazz Band (1954)★★★, with Henry 'Red' Allen Henry Red Allen Meets Kid Ory (Verve 1957)★★★★, with Allen We've Got Rhythm (Verve 1957)★★★, Live In England (1959)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Louis Armstrong Hot Five And Hot Seven (1925-28)vH, Edward 'Kid' Ory And His Creole Band (1948), This Kid's The Greatest! 1953-1956 recordings (Contemporary 1983)★★★★, The Legendary Kid (Good Time Jazz 1993)★★★, Creole Jazz Band (Good Time Jazz 1993)★★★, Kid Ory Favourites (Fantasy 1993)★★.

Oryema, Geoffrey

b. 16 April 1953, Soroti, Uganda. Born into a family of poets, storytellers and musicians. Oryema began to write songs at an early age, also mastering a variety of traditional instruments. However, he decided to pursue a career in the theatre and, after graduating from drama school, he set up his own theatre company, mixing traditional African and modern western theatrical styles. Following the assassination of his father (a local politician) during the period of political turmoil in Uganda in the late 70s, Oryema, fearing for his own life, escaped across the border to Kenya in the boot of a car. Subsequently moving to Paris, he turned to music. Singing, as well as playing guitar, thumb piano, flute and nanga (seven-string Ugandan harp), he performed at the WOMAD festival in 1989 and at the Nelson Mandela Birthday Celebration Concert at Wembley Stadium in England a year later. In the same year Real World Records released Exile, his debut album. Produced by Brian Eno and featuring Peter Gabriel, it combined traditional African influences with elements of blues, country and folk rock. Lyrically, Exile addressed the problems of Oryema's homeland and the sadness he felt at being separated from it. In 1991 Oryema contributed a track to I'm Your Fan, a tribute album to Leonard Cohen. 1993's Beat The Border was co-produced by Bob Ezrin, (who had previously worked with artists such as Pink Floyd and Alice Cooper). The album saw Oryema moving further towards a polished soft rock sound, with his vocals at times sounding very much like Gabriel's. This shift towards a slick, westernized style continued with Night To Night (1996), on which Oryema abandoned the Ugandan languages of Swahili and Acoli to sing in French and English throughout ● ALBUMS: Exile (Real World 1990)★★★, Beat The Border (Real World 1993)★★, Night To Night (Real World 1996)★★.

Osadebe, Chief Stephen Osita

b. Stephen Osita Osadebe, 1936, Atani, Onitsha, Nigeria. Vocalist and bandleader Chief Stephen Osita Osadebe, one of the founding fathers of eastern Nigerian highlife, started as a percussion player, specializing in konkoma and other forms of street music. His real interest, however, lay in big band highlife, typified by the sophisticated sounds of legendary Ghanaian bandleader E.T. Mensah and, nearer home, Stephen Amechi and other Lagos-based outfits. In 1956, when Amechi's band visited his home-town, Osadebe contacted them, asking for an audition as a vocalist and percussionist. Although he impressed Amechi, and was invited to join the line-up, the band broke up and it was two years later, when Amechi reformed the group, that Osadebe played his first gig with them. After a few months, he left to join the Central Dance Band, playing drums, congas, percussion and alto saxophone. He released his first record under his own name, 'Lagos Life Na So So Enjoyment', in 1959, with accompaniment from trumpeter Zeal Onyia's band. The single was a sizeable local hit, and encouraged Osadebe to form his own band, the Nigeria Soundmakers International. The group met with wide, but by no means universal, acclaim: indeed, when Osadebe's father first heard his son's voice on Nigerian radio, he sent a telegram informing him he had died of shame. Fortunately, Osadebe's uncle was later able to effect a reconciliation. Since that first single, Osadebe has released over 30 albums, earning four gold discs and a platinum award for Osadebe 75. He remains a pillar of Nigerian highlife, continuing to perform in a style barely changed from that of his original inspiration, E.T. Mensah, although he has at last slowed down a little in the 90s. Kedu America, recorded in a single day in Connecticut, USA, was another typically vibrant album.

● ALBUMS: Osadebe '75 (Polydor Nigeria 1975)★★★★, Osadebe '78 (Polydor Nigeria 1978)★★★, Agbalu Aka No Ano (Polydor Nigeria 1980)★★, Onu Kwulonjo Okwue Nma (Polydor Nigeria 1981)★★★, People's Club Special (Polydor Nigeria 1982)★★★, Onye Kwusia (Polydor Nigeria 1983)★★, Osandi Owendi (Polydor Nigeria 1984),★★★ Makajo (Polydor Nigeria 1985)★★★, Osadebe '87 (Polydor Nigeria 1987)★★, Nigeria Go Better (Polydor Nigeria 1988)★★, Ana Masi Ife Uwa (Polydor Nigeria 1989)★★, Ezi Oy Amaka (Polydor Nigeria 1990)★★★, Kedu America (Xenophile 1996)★★★.

Osborne Brothers

Bobby Van (b. 7 December 1931; mandolin, vocals) and Sonny (b. 29 October 1937, both at Hyden, Kentucky, USA; banjo, vocals) formed this talented bluegrass duo. Bobby had played with the Lonesome Pine Fiddlers in 1949 and in 1951, they recorded as a duo with Jimmy Martin. During Bobby's military service in 1952, Sonny, though barely 15 years old, was playing and appearing on the Grand Ole Opry with Bill Monroe. They were reunited in 1953, appeared on WROL Knoxville and made further recordings with Martin. From 1956-59, they played the WWVA Wheeling Jamboree and, recording with Red Allen, they had a 1958 hit on MGM with 'Once More'. In 1963 they joined the Opry and after changing to the Decca label had several country chart successes, including 'Rocky Top'. Never afraid to modernize their bluegrass (Sonny actually once stated that he did not care too much for the genre), they added other musicians and used electrified instruments including a steel guitar, piano and drums, which caused some traditionalists to criticize their work. In spite of the instrumental innovations, their unique harmonies saw them readily accepted and they survived the competition of rock and pop music much better than some of the other bluegrass groups. They toured with major stars including Conway Twitty and Merle Haggard and also played non-country venues such as nightclubs and even a concert at the White House. In the mid-70s. they began recording for the new CMH label and later recorded several albums, including one with Mac Wiseman with whom they charted 'Shackles And Chains' in 1979. They have continued recording and performing throughout the 80s and 90s.

● ALBUMS: with Red Allen Country Pickin' & Hillside Singin' (MGM 1959)★★★, Bluegrass Music (MGM 1962)★★★, Bluegrass Instrumentals (MGM 1962)★★★, Cuttin' Grass (MGM 1963)★★★, Voices In Bluegrass (Decca 1965)★★★, Up This Hill And Down (1966)★★★, Modern Sounds Of Bluegrass (Decca 1967)★★★, Yesterday, Today & The Osborne Brothers (Decca 1968)★★★, Favorite Hymns By The Osborne Brothers (Decca 1969)★★, Up To Date & Down To Earth (Decca 1969)★★★, Ru-Beeee (Decca 1970)★★, The Osborne Brothers (Decca 1971)★★★, Country Roads (Decca 1971)★★★, Georgia Pinewoods (Decca 1971)★★★, Bobby & Sonny (Decca 1972)★★★, Bluegrass Express (Decca 1973)★★★, Midnight Flyer (Decca 1973)★★★, Fastest Grass Alive (Decca 1974)★★★, Pickin' Grass And Singin' Country (Decca 1975)★★★, Number One (CMH 1976)★★★, with Charlie Bailey Everlasting Joy (Early Bluegrass Gospel) (Old Homestead 1976)★★★, From Rocky Top To Muddy Bottom (CMH 1977)★★★, Bluegrass Collection (CMH 1978)★★★, with Mac Wiseman Essential Bluegrass Album (CMH 1979)★★★★, with Buddy Spicher Bluegrass Concerto (CMH 1979)★★★, with Kenny Baker Farmyard Swing (County 1979)★★★, I Can Hear Kentucky Calling Me (CMH 1980)★★★, Bluegrass Spectacular (CMH 1982)★★★, Bluegrass Gold (CMH 1982)★★★, Some Things I Want To Sing About (Sugar Hill 1985)★★★, Once More Volumes 1 & 2 (Sugar Hill 1986)★★★, Favorite Memories (Sugar Hill 1987)★★★, Singing, Shouting Praises (Sugar Hill 1988)★★★, Hillbilly Fever (CMH 1991)★★★.

Solo: Bobby Osborne Bobby Osborne & His Mandolin (CMH 1981)★★★. Sonny Osborne Early Recordings Volumes 1, 2,.3 (1979)★★★, Sonny Osborne & His Sunny Mountain Boys (70s), Songs Of Bluegrass, Five String In Hi-Fi.

● COMPILATIONS: with Allen The Osborne Brothers & Red Allen (Rounder 1977)★★★, with Mac Wiseman The Essential Bluegrass Album (CMH 1979)★★★★, Bluegrass 1956-1968 4-CD box set (Bear Family 1995)★★★★, Bluegrass 1968-1974 4-CD box set (Bear Family 1995)★★★★,

Osborne, Jeffrey

b. 9 March 1948, Providence, Rhode Island, USA. Osborne sang with LTD (Love, Togetherness And Devotion) from 1970 until its disbandment 12 years later. However, he remained subject to the LTD contract with A&M Records for whom he recorded five albums as a solo soul executant. Under George Duke's supervision, the first of these contained the singles 'I Really Don't Need No Light' and 'On The Wings Of Love' which both reached the US Top 40 - and the latter was a 'sleeper' hit in the UK, when 'Don't You Get So Mad' and the title track of Stay With Me Tonight had made slight headway there. In 1984 'Don't Stop' was, nevertheless, his last UK chart entry. The album of the same name featured a duet with Joyce Kennedy - duplicated on her Lookin' For Trouble, which was produced by Osborne. Emotional was a strong album, as were the subsequent singles, one of which, 'You Should Be Mine (The Woo Woo Song)', reached number 13, becoming his biggest US hit. For two years, he chose - perhaps unwisely - to rest on his laurels. He returned with One Love One Dream (co-written with Bruce Roberts) and, just prior to a transfer to Arista Records, he teamed up with Dionne Warwick for 1990's 'Love Power'. Airplay for his increasingly more predictable output was no longer automatic - and consumers had not restored him, even temporarily, to his former moderate glory.

● ALBUMS: Jeffrey Osborne (A&M 1982)★★★, Stay With Me Tonight (A&M 1983)★★★, Don't Stop (A&M 1984)★★★, Emotional (A&M 1986)★★★, One Love One Dream (A&M 1988)★★, Only Human (Arista 1991)★★★, Something Warm For Christmas (Modern 1997)★★.

Osborne, Jimmie

b. James Osborne Jnr., 8 April 1923, Winchester, Kentucky, USA, d. 26 December 1957. After someone gave him a guitar, Osborne decided to be a singer and at 16 he was appearing regularly on WLAP Lexington. World War II disrupted his plans and, for a time, he entertained only in the evenings and weekends, while working days in a factory. After the war, he performed on several stations including WLAP, before arriving at KWKH Shreveport in 1947. His vocal work there with the Bailes Brothers and on the Louisiana Hayride led to him recording for King. In 1948, he scored a number 10 country hit with his first release, 'My Heart Echoes'. He returned to WLEX Lexington, working as a disc jockey and singer. He always called himself the Kentucky Folk Singer and he had a penchant, like Red River Dave, for writing songs about topical events. In 1949, his recording of one such number, 'The Death Of Little Kathy Fiscus', the story of the tragic death of a young girl in California, became a number 7 hit for him. (The song has since been successfully recorded by many others, including Howard Vokes and Kitty Wells). During the Korean War, Osborne produced an almost endless line of story songs, most of a patriotic nature such as 'God Please Protect America', which gave him another Top 10 hit in 1950. Others included 'Thank God For Victory In Korea' and 'The Voice Of Free America'. He made appearances on Nashville's Grand Ole Opry and on WLS Chicago's National Barn Dance. In 1952, he opened a record shop in Louisville, where he also became very popular for his radio show on WKLO. He made further King recordings until 1955 but he achieved no further hits. Osborne suffered bouts of depression and during one of these, for some unknown reason, he committed suicide on 26 December 1957. In 1988, a Dutch record label, Strictly Country, released an album that contained some of his King singles. (He is not connected with the Osborne Brothers.)

● ALBUMS: Jimmie Osborne Singing Songs He Wrote (Audio Lab 1959)★★★, The Legendary Jimmie Osborne (King 1961)★★★, Golden Harvest (King 1963)★★★, Jimmie Osborne's Gold Harvest (24 Songs) (King 1965)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Very Best Of Jimmie Osborne (King 1964)★★★, The Voice Of Free America Dutch release (Strictly Country 1988)★★★.

Osborne, Joan

b. 1963, Anchorage, Kentucky, USA. The 90s rock singer Joan Osborne began her singing career one evening at the Abilene blues bar in New York, USA. Prompted by several drinks, she took the stage at 3 am as a dare and sang Billie Holiday's 'God Bless The Child'. The resident pianist at the club encouraged her to attend the bar's regular open-microphone nights. Although a reluctant performer at first, she soon learned to enjoy these opportunities, building a solid reputation in the New York area. Soul Show was released on her own Womanly Hips Records in 1991 and an EP, Blue Million Miles, followed in 1993. Later that year she became the first signing to Blue Gorilla, a new label set up by Rick Chertoff, senior vice-president of PolyGram Records. However, before the deal was completed, Chertoff invited Osborne to take part in writing workshops in Katonah, New York, alongside a variety of musicians. It was here that the group who appeared on her major label debut formed. Relish featured Rob Hyman (keyboards), Eric Brazilian (guitar), Charlie Quintana (drums; also of Cracker) and Rainy Orteca (bass). Brazilian wrote the infectious single 'One Of Us'. This simple song, which combines a Neil Young/Crazy Horse guitar sound with a plaintive Aimee Mann-style vocal, opens with the thought-provoking 'what if God was one of us, just a slob like one of us, just a stranger on a bus, trying to make his way home'. Osborne's own songwriting was helped by a workshop given by Doc Pomus; this would explain the rootsy nature of much of her work which owes more to blues and R&B than to 90s rock music. The album also included two songs, 'Help Me' and 'Crazy Baby', originally included on Soul Show. Following the success of 'One Of Us', Relish received strong reviews from Rolling Stone, the New York Times and the New Yorker, the latter describing Osborne as 'one of the most distinct voices in rock'. Rolling Stone went further, describing her as 'the next explosion waiting to happen'. Two television appearances on the Late Show With David Letterman, and national tours, during which she invited pro-life organizations to put their case to her audience, increased her profile throughout 1995. In 1996 'One Of Us' found its way to the UK and was a sizeable hit. It is hoped that media attention and radio saturation does not lessen the quality of her work. Both Sheryl Crow and Alanis Morissette received too much adulation too soon, and quickly became part of the establishment. Osborne does not deserve the same fate.

● ALBUMS: Soul Show (Womanly Hips 1991)★★, Relish (Blue Gorilla/Mercury 1995)★★★★, Early Recordings (Mercury 1996)★★.

Osborne, Mary

b 17 July 1921, Minot, North Dakota, USA. As a tiny child, Osborne played various string instruments including the banjo, and also took violin lessons. However, from the age of nine she began to concentrate upon the guitar. For some time she played in one or another of several bands led by her father. She heard jazz on radio and liked it but her father's bands played ragtime and for country dances. When she was 12, Osborne had begun appearing on radio, singing to her own guitar accompaniment, then joined an all-female trio. Around 1938 she heard the Alphonso Trent band at a dance, having been urged by friends to pay attention to the guitar player, Charlie Christian. This event changed her direction and she switched from acoustic to electric guitar and even sat in with Christian. By the early 40s Osborne had married; her husband, a trumpet player named Ralph Scaffidi, actively encouraged her playing, and she worked in a number of well-known if lesser big bands, including those led by Dick Stabile and Bob Chester. The 40s were very busy times for Osborne - she played in an all-female band, with Joe Venuti, and in the closing years of the decade was active in New York, playing clubs and making records. In the 50s she was busier than ever, working in television and radio and also finding time to extend her studies. She continued an active career, in the late 70s forming a small band which included her husband and also her son, playing bass. A fine soloist and a gifted accompanist, Osborne has played and recorded with many of the great names of jazz, amongst them Mary Lou Williams, Coleman Hawkins and Charlie Shavers. Her enthusiasm and skill never flagged. As she said to Sally Placksin, 'I got to do everything I wanted to do, and I'm ending up still doing exactly what I want. I'm still in music, and I'll stay in it until - until!'

● ALBUMS: The Complete Coleman Hawkins, Vol 2, "Low Flame" (RCA 1941-47)★★★★, included on Café Society (Onyx 1948)★★★, Now And Then (Stash 1981)★★★.

Osborne, Mike

b. 28 September 1941, Hereford, England. Osborne played violin in the school orchestra, but when he went to the Guildhall School it was to study clarinet. He could play piano too, but since turning professional his main instrument has always been alto saxophone. His favourite players are Phil Woods, Joe Henderson and Jackie McLean, with whom he shares a sharp-edged, slightly distressed-sounding tone, but he is often compared with Ornette Coleman for the urgency of his sound and his ability to create long, intense, graceful skeins of free melody. He first came to notice with the Mike Westbrook Concert Band when it re-formed after Westbrook's move to London from Plymouth. 'Ossie' sat in for a couple of gigs and was asked to join permanently in early 1963, when he was one of only two professional musicians in the orchestra. Over the next few years he was an important constituent of several fine bands, including the Michael Gibbs Band, Chris McGregor's Brotherhood Of Breath, Harry Miller's Isipingo and the group, ranging from a quartet to an octet, which he co-led with John Surman during 1968 and 1969. He also worked with John Warren, Alan Skidmore, Kenneth Terroade, Rik Colbeck, and Humphrey Lyttelton. In 1969 he established his own exceptionally exciting trio with Harry Miller and Louis Moholo, which, apart from many fine public gigs, recorded several superb sessions for BBC Radio's Jazz Club. In the early 70s he began a fruitful association with Stan Tracey in wholly improvised duets, which brought Tracey back from the brink of retirement through disillusion with the music business. In 1973 he co-founded S.O.S., probably the first regular all-saxophone band, with Alan Skidmore and John Surman. He was voted best alto saxophonist in the Melody Maker poll every year from 1969-73. During the late 70s he became increasingly ill and has been unable to play since 1980. His relatively small recorded oeuvre does show the range of his playing, from deeply moving but unsentimental ballad interpretations with Westbrook to scorchingly intense free explorations with Isipingo or the trio.

● ALBUMS: Outback (Future Music 1970)★★★, with Stan Tracey Original (1972)★★★★, Border Crossing (Ogun 1975)★★★, All Night Long (Ogun 1975)★★, SOS (1975)★★★, with Tracey Tandem (1976)★★★, Marcel's Muse (Ogun 1977)★★, Gold Hearted Girl (Crosscut 1988)★★★, A Case For The Blues (Crosscut 1993)★★★.

Osborne, Tony, Sound

UK-born Osborne was nominal leader of a traditional jazz outfit whose 'Saturday Jump' was the opening and closing theme to the highly influential BBC Light Programme's Saturday Club pop series on which they appeared regularly in the late 50s. By 1960, Osborne had enlisted additional musicians of such exacting calibre that the Tony Osborne Sound was hired frequently as all-purpose accompanists to visiting Americans such as Connie Francis, whose million-selling 'Mama' was recorded in Britain with them. Signed to HMV, the orchestra spent a week in the Top 50 in February 1961 under their own name with the film tune, 'Man From Madrid'. Twelve years later, they notched up a fractionally less minor UK hit - on the Philips label - with 'The Shepherd's Song', featuring vocalist Joanne Brown. His son Gary has composed numerous songs, most notably with Elton John.

Osborne, Will

b. USA. d. 22 October 1981. Bandleader Will Osborne established his first orchestra in New York City, New York, USA, in 1924, led by himself on drums and vocals. However, it was the slide trombone playing of his band that always most readily identified them. After several months playing 'the Speakeasy Circuit', the group followed Duke Ellington into the Kentucky Club for a year's engagement. His featured singers included Dick Robertson, Dorothy Rogers, Joan Whitney, Janice Todd, Lynn Davis and Eileen Wilson. However, it was Osborne's voice that dominated, and soon provoked something of a furore within the popular music industry. Osborne claimed to have invented the heavily stylized 'crooning' style of singing, much to the chagrin of Rudy Vallee, who argued that it was entirely his invention. This feud over the new style would run for several years. In truth it was prompted largely by Osborne's increasing popularity, which was built on remote radio broadcasts from hotels in New York. These were sponsored by Herbert's Blue-White Diamonds, Corn Products or Camel Cigarettes, while the orchestra's recordings, on a variety of labels including Banner, Mellotone, Perfect, Black & White, Columbia and Decca Records, sold well. These included dual theme songs 'Beside An Open Fireplace' and 'The Gentleman Awaits', while the later 'Pompton Turnpike' celebrated Frank Dailey's Meadowbrook, one of the most popular big band venues. The group continued to tour widely in the late 30s and early 40s. During the war years Osborne relocated the band to Los Angeles, where he appeared in several films. The group remained active until the late 50s, though by this time the orchestra had reduced from its original 17-piece composition. Osborne then became entertainment director at Harvey's night-club in Lake Tahoe, Nevada. He subsequently retired to Newport Beach in California.

Osbourne, Johnny

b. *c.*1948, Jamaica, West Indies. During 1967 Osbourne became lead vocalist of the Wildcats, and recorded for producer Winston Riley, although nothing was issued. The Wildcats' manager then financed a session at Coxsone Dodd's Studio One, from which his debut single, 'All I Have Is Love', was released. In 1969 he recorded an album, Come Back Darling, for Riley. It was a strong collection on which Osbourne was supported by the Sensations on harmony vocals. On the day that he completed the album, he emigrated to Toronto, Canada, to join his family. After singing with various soul and reggae groups, he became lead vocalist for Ishan People, and recorded two albums with them. The group broke up in 1979, and Osbourne decided to return to Jamaica. Shortly after returning, he recorded 'Forgive Them' and 'Jealousy, Heartache And Pain' for the Studio One label. Through late 1979 and early 1980 he recorded extensively for Dodd, with these sessions culminating in a stunning album, Truths And Rights. This beautifully understated set of classic songs is Osbourne's major work. In 1979 he also had a hit for King Jammy (then Prince Jammy) with 'Folly Ranking', and an excellent album of the same name followed in 1980. The success of these recordings made him one of the most in-demand vocalists on the island, and a glut of material was released, including Fally Lover, Warrior, Innah Disco Style and Never Stop Fighting, between 1980 and 1982. In 1983, he began the year with two big hits, 'Yo Yo' and 'Lend Me A Chopper', and later in the year enjoyed massive success with 'Water Pumping', an adaptation of Hopeton Lewis's 'Take It Easy', which had also served as the basis for Johnny Clarke's 1976 hit 'Rockers Time Now'. The hits continued with 'Get Cracking', 'Check For You', 'Rewind' (1984), 'Buddy Bye', 'No Sound Like We' and 'In The Area' (1985). In the late 80s he was particularly successful when recording for Bobby Digital, and had hits with 'Good Time Rock' (1988) and 'Rude Boy Skank' (1988), both of which are included on the 1989 album Rougher Than Them. Throughout the 80s he continued to record for Coxsone Dodd, and excellent singles included 'Keep That Light', 'Unity' and 'A We Run Things', but a long-promised second album from Dodd has not materialized. Osbourne's versatility and talent have enabled him to remain at the forefront of reggae, and no matter how thin the lyrics he has sung have been, often no more than encouragements to dance or endorsements of a particular sound system, he always manages to inject artistry and vitality into the proceedings. He is doubtless capable of another Truths And Rights, but it has been a long time coming.

● ALBUMS: Come Back Darling (Trojan 1969)★★★, Truths And Rights (Studio One 1980)★★★★, Folly Ranking (Jammys 1980)★★★, Fally Lover (Greensleeves 1980)★★★, Never Stop Fighting (Greensleeves 1982)★★★, Water Pumping (Greensleeves 1984)★★★, Reggae On Broadway (Vista Sounds 1984)★★, Dancing Time (Londisc 1984)★★★, Johnny Osbourne (Lix 1984)★★★, In The Area (Greensleeves 1984)★★★, Michael Palmer Meets Johnny Osbourne (Vibes & Vibes 1984)★★, Rub A Dub Soldier (Jammys 1985)★★★, Bring The Sensi Come (Midnight Rock 1985)★★, Reality (Selection 1985)★★★, Rock Me Rock Me (Top Rank 1986)★★★, Cool Down (1989)★★★, Johnny Osbourne (Jetstar 1989)★★★, Rougher Than Them (1989)★★★★, Smiling Faces (Blue Mountain 1989)★★★, Nuh Dis (Come Ya Fe Drink Milk) (Star 1990)★★★.

Osbourne, Ozzy

b. John Osbourne, 3 December 1948, Birmingham, England. In 1979 this highly individual and by now infamous vocalist and songwriter left Black Sabbath, a band whose image and original musical direction he had helped to shape. His own band was set up with Lee Kerslake, formerly of Uriah Heep, on drums, Rainbow's Bob Daisley (bass) and Randy Rhoads, fresh from Quiet Riot, on guitar. Rhoads' innovative playing ability was much in evidence on the debut, Blizzard Of Oz. By the time of a second album, Daisley and Kerslake had left to be replaced by Pat Travers drummer Tommy Aldridge and Rudy Sarzo (bass). Throughout his post-Black Sabbath career, Osbourne has courted publicity, most famously in 1982 when he had to undergo treatment for rabies following an onstage incident when he bit off the head of a bat. In the same year his immensely talented young guitarist, Rhoads, was killed in an air crash. In came Brad Gillis, former guitarist in Night Ranger, but, so close was Rhoads' personal as well as musical relationship to Osbourne, many feared he would never be adequately replaced. Speak Of The Devil was released later in 1982, a live album that included Sabbath material. Following a tour that saw Sarzo and Gillis walk out, Osbourne was forced to rethink the line-up of his band in 1983 as Daisley rejoined, along with guitarist Jake E. Lee. Aldridge left following the release of Bark At The Moon, and was replaced by renowned virtuoso drummer Carmine Appice. This combination was to be short-lived, however, Randy Castillo replacing Appice, and Phil Soussan taking on the bass guitar. Daisley appears on No Rest For The Wicked, although Sabbath bassist Geezer Butler played on the subsequent live dates. The late 80s were a trying time for Osbourne. He went on trial in America for allegedly using his lyrics to incite youngsters to commit suicide; he was eventually cleared of these charges. His wife, Sharon (daughter of Don Arden), also became his manager, and has helped Osbourne to overcome the alcoholism that was the subject of much of his work. His lyrics, however, continue to deal with the grimmest of subjects, including the agony of insanity, and The Ultimate Sin is concerned almost exclusively with the issue of nuclear destruction. In later years Osbourne has kept to more contemporary issues, rejecting to a certain extent the satanic, werewolf image he constructed around himself during the early 80s. He embarked on a farewell tour in 1992, but broke four bones in his foot which inhibited his performances greatly. He also donated $20,000 to the Daughters Of The Republic Of Texas appeal to help restore the Alamo, and performed his first concert in the city of San Antonio since being banned for urinating on a wall of the monument in 1982. Predictably, neither retirement nor atonement sat too comfortably with the man, and by late 1994 he was announcing the imminent release of a new solo album, recorded in conjunction with Steve Vai. He also teamed up with Therapy? to sing lead vocals on the track 'Iron Man' for the Black Sabbath tribute album, Black Nativity. Far less likely was his pairing with Miss Piggy of The Muppet Show on 'Born To Be Wild', for a bizarre Muppets compilation album. He also confesssed that his original partner on his 1992 Don Was-produced duet with actress Kim Basinger, 'Shake Your Head', was Madonna, although he had not actually recognized her. Other strange couplings included one with the Scottish comedian Billy Connolly and the popular UK boxer Frank Bruno on the 'Urpney Song', written by Mike Batt for the cartoon series Dreamstone. Ozzmosis was arguably his best album, and was a major success. The line-up on the album was Geezer Butler (bass), Rick Wakeman (keyboards), Zakk Wylde, who co-wrote six tracks (guitar), and Deen Castronovo (drums). Osbourne is one hard-rocker who has tried every excess known and has survived. Amazingly, his work continues to sound inspired and exciting.

● ALBUMS: Blizzard Of Oz (Jet 1980)★★★, Diary Of A Madman (Jet 1981)★★★, Talk Of The Devil (Jet 1982)★★, Bark At The Moon (Jet 1983)★★, The Ultimate Sin (Epic 1986)★★, Tribute (Epic 1987)★★★, No Rest For The Wicked (Epic 1988)★★, Just Say Ozzy (Epic 1990)★★, No More Tears (Epic 1991)★★★, Live & Loud (Epic 1993)★★, Ozzmosis (Epic 1995)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Ozz Man Cometh (Epic 1997)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Ultimate Ozzy (Virgin Vision 1987), Wicked Videos (CIC Videos 1988), Bark At The Moon (Hendring Video 1990), Don't Blame Me (Sony Music Video 1992), Live & Loud (1993), Ozzy Osbourne: The Man Cometh (SMV 1997).

● FURTHER READING: Ozzy Osbourne, Garry Johnson. Diary Of A Madman: The Uncensored Memoirs Of Rock's Greatest Rogue, Mick Wall.

Osby, Greg

b. 1961, St Louis, Missouri, USA. New York-based saxophonist who has attached jazz's cool to a militant hip-hop beat. Following his work with the M-Base project (including Steve Coleman and Cassandra Wilson), Osby decided he wanted to record a more free-ranging, one-off hip hop record: 'The purpose for this record was to function as an 'either/or', meaning that it could rest solely as a hardcore hip-hop record without any jazz or musicians at all, and that it also would be a strong musical statement without breakbeats or anything. I wanted it to bridge the gap'. Alongside jazz musicians including Geri Allen and Darrell Grant, he enlisted the aid of hip-hop producers Ali Shaheed Muhammed (A Tribe Called Quest) and Street Element, and a variety of rappers. Osby had actually begun life as an R&B musician, only discovering jazz when he attended college in 1978. Though setting up M-Base as a streetwise jazz/hip-hop enclave, he had little time for the work of Gang Starr or Digable Planets, who sample from jazz but do not, generally, work with live musicians. That did not stop him from being bracketed alongside those artists, however.

● ALBUMS: Greg Osby And Sound Theatre (Watt 1987)★★★, Mind Games (JMT 1989)★★★, Season Of Renewal (JMT 1990)★★, Man Talk For Moderns Vol X (Blue Note 1991)★★, 3-D Lifestyles (Blue Note 1993)★★, Black Book (Blue Note 1995)★★★, Art Forum (Blue Note 1996)★★★.

Oscar The Frog

A highly regarded UK folk band, surprisingly neglected. Oscar The Frog had far more energy than most of the competition of the time. Despite definite power pop overtones, they deserve consideration for adapting the Ian Dury hit to 'Hit Me With Your Morris Stick'.

● ALBUMS: Oscar The Frog (1980)★★★.

Osibisa

Formed in London, England in 1969 by three Ghanaian and three Caribbean musicians, Osibisa played a central role in developing an awareness of African music - in their case, specifically, West African highlife tinged with rock - among European and North American audiences in the 70s. Since then, Osibisa have suffered the fate of many once-celebrated 70s African-oriented performers. Their pioneering blend of rock and African rhythms has either been overlooked or downgraded for its lack of roots appeal. There is, in truth, some justification for this: Osibisa's style was too closely hitched to western rock, and too much of a fusion to survive the scrutiny of western audiences who, from the early 80s onwards, were looking for 'authentic' African music. However, the group's towering achievements in the 70s should not be denigrated.

The Ghanaian founder members of Osibisa - Teddy Osei (saxophone), Sol Amarfio (drums) and Mac Tontoh (trumpet, Osei's brother) - were seasoned members of the Accra highlife scene before they moved to London to launch their attack on the world stage. Osei and Amaflio had played in the Star Gazers, a top Ghanaian highlife band, before setting up the Comets, who scored a large West African hit with their 1958 single 'Pete Pete'. Tontoh was also a member of the Comets, before joining the Uhuru Dance Band, one of the first outfits to bring elements of jazz into Ghanaian highlife. The other founder-members of Osibisa were Spartacus R, a Grenadian bass player, Robert Bailey (b. Trinidad; keyboards) and Wendel Richardson (b. Antigua; lead guitar). They were joined soon after their formation by the Ghanaian percussionist Darko Adams 'Potato' (b. 1932, d. 1 January 1995, Accra, Ghana). In 1962, Osei moved to London, where he was eventually given a scholarship by the Ghanaian government to study music. In 1964, he formed Cat's Paw, an early blueprint for Osibisa which blended highlife, rock and soul. In 1969, feeling the need for more accomplished African musicians within the line-up, he persuaded Tontoh and Amarfio to join him in London, where towards the end of the year Osibisa was born. The venture proved to be an immediate success, with the single 'Music For Gong Gong' a substantial hit in 1970 (three other singles later made the British Top 10: 'Sunshine Day', 'Dance The Body Music' and 'Coffee Song'). Osibisa's debut album displayed music whose rock references, especially in the guitar solos, combined with vibrant African cross rhythms. The band's true power only fully came across on stage, when African village scenarios and a mastery of rhythm and melody summoned up energy and spirit. Woyaya reached number 11 in the UK and its title track was later covered by Art Garfunkel. During the late 70s they spent much of their time on world tours, playing to particularly large audiences in Japan, India, Australia and Africa. In 1980 they performed a special concert at the Zimbabwean independence celebrations. By this time, however, Osibisa's star was in decline in Europe and America. The band continued touring and releasing records, but to steadily diminishing audiences. Business problems followed. After initially signing to MCA Records, Osibisa had changed labels several times, ending with Bronze Records. The moves reflected their growing frustration with British business, as each label in turn tried to persuade them to adapt their music to the disco style. Osibisa were prepared to make some concessions but only up to a point. In the mid-80s, the group directed their attention to the state of the music business in Ghana, planning a studio and theatre complex which came to nothing following the withdrawal of state funding, and helping in the promotion of younger highlife artists. In 1984, Tontoh formed a London band to back three visiting Ghanaian musicians - A.B. Crentsil, Eric Agyeman and Thomas Frempong. An album, Highlife Stars, followed on Osibisa's own Flying Elephant label. Effectively disbanded, Osibisa occasionally staged reunion concerts before Osei put together a new line-up for 1996's Monsore.

● ALBUMS: Osibisa (MCA 1971)★★★, Woyaya (MCA 1972)★★★★, Heads (MCA 1972)★★★, Happy Children (Warners 1973)★★, Superfly TNT (1974)★★, Osibirock (Warners 1974)★★★, Welcome Home (1976)★★, Ojah Awake (1976)★★★, Black Magic Night (1977), Mystic Energy (Calibre 1981)★★, Celebration (Bronze 1983)★★, Unleashed: Live In India 1981 (Magnet 1983)★★, Live At The Marquee (Premier 1984)★★★, Monsore (Red Steel 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Osibisa (MCA 1974)★★★, The Best Of Osibisa (BBC 1990)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: Warrior (Hendring Video 1990).

Oslin, K.T.

b. Kay Toinette Oslin, 1943, Crossitt, Arkansas, USA. Oslin was raised in Mobile, Alabama, and then in Houston, Texas. She loved Hank Williams and the Carter Family, but hated early 60s country music because 'it was middle-aged men singing about drinking whiskey and cheating on their wives'. She attended drama school and worked in Houston as a folk trio with Guy Clark and radio producer David Jones. A live album she made with Texas singer Frank Davis was never released. She was in the chorus for the Broadway production of Hello, Dolly! starring Betty Grable, and for many years, she played bit parts, did session work and sang commercials to make a living. She sang harmony on the 1978 album Guy Clark, but her 1981 Elektra singles of 'Clean Your Own Tables' and 'Younger Men (Are Startin' To Catch My Eye)', released as Kay T. Oslin, did not sell. In 1982 Gail Davies recorded her song 'Round The Clock Lovin'', which prompted her to borrow $7,000 from an aunt to form a band for a Nashville showcase. The Judds recorded her song 'Old Pictures', while her own piano-based ballad, '80's Ladies', was a Top 10 country single and an anthem for older, single women (Oslin herself is unmarried). An album of songs written from the female perspective, also called 80's Ladies, was a top-selling country album that crossed over to the pop market. Tom T. Hall described her as 'everybody's screwed-up sister'. Her number 1 country singles are 'Do Ya' (she stopped a faster take being released when she realized it worked much better at half-tempo), 'I'll Always Come Back' and the partly narrated 'Hold Me'. As a self-confessed 'aging sex bomb', it is unusual for a woman to have made her first mark on country music so late in life; it seems doubtful that she can maintain the momentum, particularly as she seems to have exhausted her original flow of songs, and because of the heart bypass operation she had to undergo in 1995. She released an imaginative covers album a year later, featuring songs picked from the past two centuries.

● ALBUMS: 80's Ladies (RCA 1987)★★★, This Woman (RCA 1988)★★★, Love In A Small Town (RCA 1990)★★★★, My Roots Are Showing... (BNA 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits: Songs From An Aging Sex Bomb (RCA 1993)★★★★.

Osmond, Donny

b. Donald Clark Osmond, 9 December 1957, Ogden, Utah, USA. The most successful solo artist to emerge from family group the Osmonds, Donny was particularly successful at covering old hits. His first solo success came in the summer of 1971 with a version of Billy Sherrill's 'Sweet And Innocent', which reached the US Top 10. The follow-up, a revival of Gerry Goffin/Carole King's 'Go Away Little Girl' (previously a hit for both Steve Lawrence and Mark Wynter) took Osmond to the top of the US charts. 'Hey Girl', once a success for Freddie Scott, continued his US chart domination, which was now even more successful than that of the family group. By the summer of 1972, Osmondmania reached Britain, and a revival of Paul Anka's 'Puppy Love' gave Donny his first UK number 1. The singer's clean-cut good looks and perpetual smile brought him massive coverage in the pop press, while a back catalogue of hit songs from previous generations sustained his chart career. 'Too Young' and 'Why' both hit the UK Top 10, while 'The Twelfth Of Never' and 'Young Love' both reached number 1. His material appeared to concentrate on the pangs of adolescent love, which made him the perfect teenage idol for the period. In 1974, Donny began a series of duets with his sister Marie Osmond, which included more UK Top 10 hits with 'I'm Leaving It All Up To You' and 'Morning Side Of The Mountain'. It was clear that Donny's appeal was severely circumscribed by his youth and in 1977 he tried unsuccessfully to reach a more mature audience with Donald Clark Osmond. Although minor hits followed, the singer's appeal was waning alarmingly by the late 70s. After the break-up of the group in 1980, Donny went on to star in the 1982 revival of the musical Little Johnny Jones, which closed after only one night on Broadway, and ceased recording after the mid-70s. A decade later, a rugged Osmond returned with 'I'm In It For Love' and the more successful 'Soldier Of Love', which reached the US Top 30. Most agreed that his attempts at mainstream rock were much more impressive than anyone might have imagined. Osmond proved his versatility again in the 90s by playing the lead in Canadian and North American productions of Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice's musical Joseph And The Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat. When he hung up his loincloth at Toronto's Elgin Theatre in May 1997, after almost five years and 2,000 performances as the biblical son of Jacob, it was to join the cast of the 60th Hill Cumorah Pageant, America's Witness To Christ. In this upstate New York outdoor production, Osmond portrayed a prophet of the Mormon faith.

● ALBUMS: The Donny Osmond Album (MGM 1971)★★, To You With Love, Donny (MGM 1971)★★, Portrait Of Donny (MGM 1972)★★, Too Young (MGM 1972)★★, My Best Of You (MGM 1972)★★, Alone Together (MGM 1973)★★, A Time For Us (MGM 1973)★★, Donny (MGM 1974)★★, Discotrain (Polydor 1976)★★, Donald Clark Osmond (Polydor 1977)★★, Donny Osmond (Virgin 1988)★★★, Eyes Don't Lie (Capitol 1990)★★. With Marie Osmond I'm Leaving It All Up To You (MGM 1974)★★, Make The World Go Away (MGM 1975)★★, Donny And Marie - Featuring Songs From Their Television Show (Polydor 1976)★★, Deep Purple (Polydor 1976)★★, Donny And Marie - A New Season (Polydor 1977)★★, Winning Combination (Polydor 1978)★★, Goin' Coconuts (Polydor 1978)★★.

Osmond, Little Jimmy

b. 16 April 1963, Canoga Park, California, USA. The youngest member of the Osmonds family, Jimmy unexpectedly emerged as a pre-teen idol in 1972. Overweight and cute, he was launched at the peak of Osmondmania and topped the Christmas charts in the UK with his singalong 'Long-Haired Lover From Liverpool'. In doing so, he became, at nine years of age, the youngest individual ever to reach number 1 in the UK up until that time. He returned to the charts during the next two years with Lavern Baker's old hit 'Tweedle Dee' and Eddie Hodges' 'I'm Gonna Knock On Your Door'. His brief popularity in Britain was eclipsed by fan mania in Japan where he was known as 'Jimmy Boy'. When the hits ceased and he grew up, he became successful as an entrepreneur and rock impresario.

● ALBUMS: Killer Joe (MGM 1972)★.

Osmond, Marie

b. 13 October 1959, Ogden, Utah, USA. Following the success of her elder siblings in the Osmonds, Marie launched her own singing career in late 1973. Her revival of Anita Bryant's 'Paper Roses' reached the US Top 5 and did even better in the UK, peaking at number 2. Following two solo albums, she successfully collaborated with her brother Donny Osmond on a series of duets. They enjoyed a transatlantic Top 10 hit with a version of Dale And Griffin's 'I'm Leaving It All Up To You' and repeated that achievement with a cover of Tommy Edwards' 'Morning Side Of The Mountain'. Marie simultaneously continued her solo career with a reworking of Connie Francis's 'Who's Sorry Now?' The brother and sister duo next moved into the country market with a version of Eddy Arnold's 'Make The World Go Away'. By early 1976, their popularity was still strong and they featured in a one-hour variety television show titled Donny And Marie. The programme spawned a hit album and another UK/US hit with a revival of Nino Tempo And April Stevens' 'Deep Purple'. By 1977, the Mormon duo were covering Tamla/Motown material, duetting on Marvin Gaye And Tammi Terrell's 'Ain't Nothing Like The Real Thing'. The duets continued until 1978 and their last significant success was a cover of the Righteous Brothers' '(You're My) Soul And Inspiration'. That same year, Donny and Marie starred together in the movie Goin' Coconuts. Following the break-up of the Osmonds the sister continued with her own television series, Marie. Thereafter, she moved successfully into country music and recorded several albums for the Curb label. In addition to several Gold Records, Osmond's other honours have included a 1986 Country Music Association Award for Duo of the Year (with Dan Seals), and a 1979 People's Choice Awards for favourite television variety series. In 1989, she was the recipient of the Country Music Association's prestigious Roy Acuff Award for her efforts with children through the Children's Miracle Network, which she co-founded in 1983. In 1994 and 1995, Osmond starred as the governess Maria in the US and Canadian national tour of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II's The Sound Of Music, and reprised the role in 1997 via a tour across South East Asia. In December of that year she made her Broadway debut, taking over from Faith Prince, as Mrs. Anna, in the Tony Award-winning revival of another Rodgers and Hammerstein classic, The King And I.

● ALBUMS: Paper Roses (MGM 1973)★★, In My Little Corner Of The World (MGM 1974)★★, Who's Sorry Now? (MGM 1975)★★, This Is The Way That I Feel (Polydor 1977)★★, There's No Stopping Your Heart (Capitol 1986)★★, I Only Wanted You (Capitol 1986)★★, All In Love (Capitol 1988)★★. With Donny Osmond I'm Leaving It All Up To You (MGM 1974)★★, Make The World Go Away (MGM 1975)★, Donny And Marie - Featuring Songs From Their Television Show (Polydor 1976)★★, Deep Purple (Polydor 1976)★★, Donny And Marie - A New Season (Polydor 1977)★★, Winning Combination (Polydor 1978)★★, Goin' Coconuts (Polydor 1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: 25 Hits Special Collection (Curb 1995)★★★.

● FILMS: Goin' Coconuts (1978), The Gift Of Love (1979).

Osmonds

This famous family all-vocal group from Ogden, Utah, USA comprised Alan Osmond (b. 22 June 1949), Wayne Osmond (b. 28 August 1951), Merrill Osmond (b. 30 April 1953), Jay Osmond (b. 2 March 1955) and Donny Osmond (b. 9 December 1957). The group first came to public notice following regular television appearances on the top-rated Andy Williams Show. From 1967-69, they also appeared on television's Jerry Lewis Show. Initially known as the Osmond Brothers they recorded for Andy Williams' record label Barnaby. By 1971, their potential was recognized by Mike Curb, who saw them as likely rivals to the star-studded Jackson 5. Signed to MGM Records, they recorded the catchy 'One Bad Apple', which topped the US charts for five weeks. Before long, they became a national institution, and various members of the family including Donny Osmond, Marie Osmond and Little Jimmy Osmond enjoyed hits in their own right. As a group, the primary members enjoyed a string of hits, including 'Double Lovin'', 'Yo Yo' and 'Down By The Lazy River'. By the time Osmondmania hit the UK in 1972, the group peaked with their ecologically conscious 'Crazy Horses', complete with intriguing electric organ effects. Their clean-cut image and well-scrubbed good looks brought them immense popularity among teenagers and they even starred in their own cartoon series. Probably their most ambitious moment came with the evangelical concept album, The Plan, in which they attempted to express their Mormon beliefs. Released at the height of their success, the album reached number 6 in the UK. During the early to mid-70s, they continued to release successive hits, including 'Going Home', 'Let Me In' and 'I Can't Stop'. Their sole UK number 1 as a group was 'Love Me For A Reason', composed by Johnny Bristol. Their last major hit in the UK was 'The Proud One' in 1975, after which their popularity waned. The individual members continued to prosper in varying degrees, but the family group disbanded in 1980. Two years later, the older members of the group re-formed without Donny, and moved into the country market. During the mid-80s, they appeared regularly at the Country Music Festival in London, but their recorded output lessened.

● ALBUMS: Osmonds (MGM 1971)★★, Homemade (MGM 1971)★★, Phase-III (MGM 1972)★★, The Osmonds 'Live' (MGM 1972)★, Crazy Horses (MGM 1972)★★★, The Plan (MGM 1973)★★, Our Best To You (MGM 1974)★★, Love Me For A Reason (MGM 1974)★★, I'm Still Gonna Need You (MGM 1975)★★, The Proud One (MGM 1975)★★, Around The World - Live In Concert (MGM 1975)★, Brainstorm (Polydor 1976)★★, The Osmonds Christmas Album (Polydor 1976)★★, Today (1985)★★.

- COMPILATIONS: The Osmonds Greatest Hits (Polydor 1978)★★★, The Very Best Of The Osmonds (Polydor 1996)★★★.
- VIDEOS: Very Best Of (Wienerworld 1996).
- FURTHER READING: At Last ... Donny!, James Gregory. The Osmond Brothers And The New Pop Scene, Richard Robinson. Donny And The Osmonds Backstage, James Gregory. The Osmond Story, George Tremlett. The Osmonds, Monica Delaney. On Tour With Donny & Marie And The Osmonds, Lynn Roeder. Donny And Marie Osmond: Breaking All The Rules, Constance Van Brunt McMillan. The Osmonds: The Official Story Of The Osmond Family, Paul H. Dunn. Donny And Marie, Patricia Mulrooney Eldred.

Osser, Glenn

b. 28 August 1914, Munising, Michigan, USA. The son of Russian immigrants, Osser has had a successful career arranging and conducting for many leading bands and singers. He has also achieved a distinctive string sound through his clever scoring, which he describes as 'voicing register, and composition of the counterpoint'. In his early career Osser concentrated on arranging, and his scores were accepted by Bob Crosby, Charlie Barnet, Bunny Berigan, Paul Whiteman, Les Brown and Red Nichols. During the 50s, while still regularly working with Whiteman (who was Musical Director of the ABC Network at that time), Osser was in demand to back many singers for albums, including Georgia Gibbs, Vic Damone, Jack Jones, Frankie Laine, John Raitt, Maurice Chevalier and Guy Mitchell. Osser was also recording his own instrumental albums, notably some with Bobby Hackett and Joe Bushkin. Further albums found Osser backing Johnny Mathis, Jerry Vale, Tony Bennett, Robert Goulet and Leslie Uggams. Leaving US Columbia and moving to RCA, Osser worked with Della Reese and Sam Cooke. Until 1987 he was Music Director and arranger for the Miss America Beauty Pageant on television, with Osser and his wife contributing various original songs including 'Miss America, You're Beautiful' and 'Look At Her'. He has also written many works for concert bands that are still regularly performed by many high school and college bands in the USA.

- ALBUMS: as Glenn Osser Orchestra But Beautiful (Kapp 1956)★★★, with Joe Bushkin Midnight Rhapsody (Capitol 1957)★★★, March Along Sing Along (Marching Band And Chorus) (United Artists 1960)★★★, Be There At Five (Mercury 1960)★★★.

As accompanist: Marian McPartland With You In Mind (Capitol 1957)★★★, Georgia Gibbs Swingin' With Her Nibs (Mercury 1957)★★★, Vivian Blaine Songs From Ziegfeld Follies (Mercury 1957)★★★★, Jerry Vale I Remember Buddy (Columbia 1958)★★, Red Buttons, Barbara Cook Hansel And Gretel (MGM 1958)★★★, Maurice Chevalier Maurice Chevalier Sings Songs Of Yesterday/Today (MGM 1958)★★★, Guy Mitchell A Guy In Love (Columbia/Philips 1959)★★★, Vic Damone Angela Mia (Columbia 1959)★★★, Johnny Mathis Heavenly (Columbia 1959)★★★★, Leslie Uggams The Eyes Of God (Columbia 1959)★★★, Della Reese Della By Starlight (RCA 1960)★★★★, Sam Cooke Cooke's Tour (RCA 1960)★★★, Tony Bennett Tony Bennett Sings A String Of Harold Arlen (Columbia 1960)★★★, Diana Trask Diana Trask (Columbia 1961)★★★★, Dona Jacoby Swinging Big Sound (Decca 1962)★★★, Bobby Hackett The Most Beautiful Horn In The World (Columbia 1962)★★★, Jack Jones Gift Of Love (Kapp 1962)★★★, George Maharis Portrait In Music (Epic 1962)★★★, Robert Goulet Two Of Us (Columbia 1962)★★★, Jerry Vale Arrivederci Roma (Columbia 1963)★★★★, Barbara Carroll Fresh From Broadway (Warners 1964)★★★, Brook Benton That Old Feeling (RCA 1966)★★★, Jerry Vale The Impossible Dream (Columbia 1967)★★★, Johnny Mathis Up Up And Away (Columbia 1967)★★★, Bob Thiele Those Were The Days (Flying Dutchman 1972)★★★.

Ossian

This Scottish revival group, formed in 1976, performed traditional songs and tunes in an authentic setting combining contemporary instruments. The original line-up of Billy Jackson (b. Glasgow, Scotland; harp, uillean pipes, whistle, vocals), George Jackson (b. Glasgow, Scotland; cittern, guitar, whistle, flute), John Martin (b. Glasgow, Scotland; fiddle, viola), and Billy Ross (b. Glasgow, Scotland; guitar, vocals) changed in 1980 with the departure of Ross. He was replaced by Tony Cuffe (vocals, guitar, whistle, tiple). In 1981, Iain MacDonald (highland pipes, flute, whistle) joined the group. George and Billy Jackson and John Martin had played on the 1974 self-titled album by Contraband, fronted by singer Mae McKenna. The group provided music for a theatre group in Jura in 1976, which led to other theatrical music work, including providing music and songs for a play called 'Clanna Cheo'. This was a play based around the legend of Rob Roy, and it toured widely including London. Ossian was released on Springthyme Records, but subsequent recordings featured fewer Gaelic songs than previously. The various members continued with other commitments outside of the group, including Billy Jackson teaming up with former member Billy Ross to record Misty Mountain, and George Jackson and Maggie MacInnes recording Cairistiona. By 1991 both Billy and George Jackson were touring with the Tag Theatre Company. In 1997 the group reunited to release The Carrying Stream.

- ALBUMS: Ossian (Springthyme 1977)★★★, St. Kilda Wedding (1978)★★★, Seal Song (1981)★★, Dove Across The Water (1982)★★★, Borders (1984)★★★, Light On A Distant Shore (1986)★★★★, The Carrying Stream (Greentrax 1997)★★★.

Solo: Billy Ross and Billy Jackson Misty Mountain (1986)★★★★. George Jackson and Maggie MacInnes Cairistiona (1986)★★★, with William Jackson Heart Music (1987)★★★, with William Jackson St. Mungo: A Celtic Suite For Glasgow (1991)★★★. Billy Ross And John Martin Braes Of Lochiel (1991)★★.

- COMPILATIONS: The Best Of... (Iona 1994)★★★.

Ostrogoth

This Belgian hard rock outfit was formed in Gent, Belgium, during 1983, by guitarist Rudy Vercruysse and drummer Mario Pauwels. After a series of false starts, the line-up stabilized with the addition of Marc Debrauwer (vocals), Marnix Vandekauter (bass) and Hans Vandekerckhove (guitar). They debuted with a mini-album, Full Moon's Eyes, a competent if predictable rehash of Iron Maiden and Judas Priest riffs. This line-up recorded two further collections in the same vein, but received little recognition outside their native Belgium. The band splintered in 1985, with only Vercruysse and Pauwels remaining. They rebuilt Ostrogoth with Peter de Wint (vocals), Juno Martins (guitar), Sylvain Cherotti (bass) and Kris Taerwe (keyboards). In 1987 they produced Feelings Of Fury, which added a melodic slant to their previous enterprises. The group subsequently disbanded with Pauwels moving on to Shellshock and Hermetic Brotherhood.

● ALBUMS: Full Moon's Eyes mini-album (Mausoleum 1983)★★★, Ecstasy And Danger (Mausoleum 1983)★★, Too Hot (Mausoleum 1985)★★★, Feelings Of Fury (Ultraprime 1987)★★★.

Other Half

Although based in San Francisco, USA, during the latter part of the 60s, this primitive group was rooted in a Los Angeles garage band, the Sons Of Adam. Randy Holden (guitar) and Mike Port (bass) joined the new venture, although Port's contribution was confined to that of auxiliary member. The Other Half made an immediate impression with the powerhouse 'Mr. Pharmacist', and this seminal 60s punk offering was later covered by the Fall. Jeff Nowlen and Geoff Westen were among those supporting Holden on his group's lone album, which included 'Feathered Fish', a rare Arthur Lee song that the Sons Of Adam had also recorded. The quartet broke up in 1968 when Holden replaced Leigh Stephens in Blue Cheer.

● ALBUMS: Other Half (Acta 1968)★★.

Other Records

Other Records, originally the recording outlet for acclaimed house artists A Man Called Adam, has expanded since its formation in 1993 to become one of the UK's premier deep house record labels. The idea for the label came when Sally Rodgers and Steve Jones of A Man Called Adam broke away from their previous home at Big Life Records. Rather than look for a new deal, the duo elected to set up their own label. Eschewing the prevailing trend for progressive house and trance records, Other was envisaged as a home for the type of deeply melodic material A Man Called Adam had patented. They were inspired to pursue their own path by like-minded friends such as Roberto Mello (of Sensory Productions) and DJ D, both of whom would later work with Other. The label's first release was A Man Called Adam's 'I Am The Way'. That, and subsequent records like Beachflea's self-titled EP and Diane Mathis's 'Never Give Up', fell somewhere between the dominant dance strains in the UK of the time - hard house and garage. The duo began to work with Mike Ward of the About Time soul label, bartering their production services for the right to release house mixes of vocal tracks by former Prince backing singer Rosie Gaines and the aforementioned Diane Mathis. As well as further A Man Called Adam material such as 'Love Come Down' and 'Easter Song', other artists on the label included Reel Houze (a collaboration between Mello and DJ D), Jose Padilla and Maria Naylor. By 1996, and riding on a crest of acclaim, Other Records had become financially viable for the first time, proving once again that independent labels remain the touchstone for developments in the UK dance scene.

● ALBUMS: various artists Other (Other 1995)★★★.

Other Two

The most purely dance-orientated project of the three major New Order spin-offs, the Other Two features arguably the least attention-seeking members of the Manchester quartet: Stephen Morris (b. 28 October 1957, Macclesfield, Cheshire, England) and Gillian Gilbert (b. 27 January 1961, Manchester, England). Recording at their own studio in rural Macclesfield, they debuted on the charts with the number 41-peaking 'Tasty Fish' in 1991. The follow-up, 'Selfish', came two years later, and featured fashionable remixes by both Moby and Farley And Heller. The Other Two also tampered with the work of other artists, as well as earning several credits for television and soundtrack motifs.

● ALBUMS: The Other Two & You (London 1993)★★★.

Otis Blue - Otis Redding

The man who bought classic soul music to the white masses at the Monterey Pop Festival died later that year, just as he was really gearing up for a creative burst that included 'Dock Of The Bay'. This is the finest of many classic Otis albums in the soul genre and an automatic recommendation for anyone's playlist. Redding could make you dance and scream and the next minute have you crying yourself to sleep, such was his wide emotional range. Compare the power of 'Respect' and 'Shake' to the passion of 'I've Been Loving You Too Long' and 'My Girl'. Untouchable.

● Tracks: Ole Man Trouble; Respect; Change Gonna Come; Down In The Valley; I've Been Loving You Too Long; Shake; My Girl; Wonderful World; Rock Me Baby; Satisfaction; You Don't Miss Your Water.

● First released 1966

● UK peak chart position: 6

● USA peak chart position: 75

Otis Redding Live In Europe - Otis Redding

Otis Redding was adored in Europe long before he became an international star. The Essex mods held him in high esteem, and that reverence spread early on to Germany and Holland. The wonderful Stax tour of 1967 will remain in the hearts of everyone who was lucky enough to have seen it. The cream of the 60s soul movement came and played on our doorsteps. This is living proof of what it was like - Otis shook, he moaned, he cried, he sang his soul out and yet managed not to split his blue mohair suit. This is a sweaty album worth the price alone for the emotional version of 'Try A Little Tenderness'.

- Tracks: Respect; I Can't Turn You Loose; I've Been Loving You Too Long; My Girl; Shake; (I Can't Get No) Satisfation; Fa-Fa-Fa-Fa-Fa (Sad Song); These Arms Of Mine; Day Tripper; Try A Little Tenderness.
- First released 1967
- UK peak chart position: 14
- USA peak chart position: 32

Otis, Johnny

b. 28 December 1921, Vallejo, California, USA. Born into a family of Greek immigrants, Otis was raised in a largely black neighbourhood where he thoroughly absorbed the prevailing culture and lifestyle. He began playing drums in his mid-teens and worked for a time with some of the locally based jazz bands, including, in 1941, Lloyd Hunter's orchestra. In 1943 he gained his first name-band experience when he joined Harlan Leonard for a short spell. Some sources suggest that, during the difficult days when the draft was pulling musicians out of bands all across the USA, Otis then replaced another ex-Leonard drummer, Jesse Price, in the Stan Kenton band. In the mid-40s Otis also recorded with several jazz groups, including Illinois Jacquet's all-star band and a septet led by Lester Young, which also featured Howard McGhee and Willie Smith. In 1945 Otis formed his own big band in Los Angeles. In an early edition assembled for a recording session, he leaned strongly towards a blues-based jazz repertoire and hired such musicians as Eli Robinson, Paul Quinichette, Teddy Buckner, Bill Doggett, Curtis Counce and singer Jimmy Rushing. This particular date produced a major success in 'Harlem Nocturne'. He also led a small band, including McGhee and Teddy Edwards, on a record date backing Wynonie Harris. However, Otis was aware of audience interest in R&B and began to angle his repertoire accordingly. Alert to the possibilities of the music and with a keen ear for new talent, he quickly became one of the leading figures in the R&B boom of the late 40s and early 50s. Otis also enjoyed credit for writing several songs, although, in some cases, this was an area fraught with confusion and litigation. Among his songs was 'Every Beat Of My Heart', which was a minor hit for Jackie Wilson in 1951 and a massive hit a decade later for Gladys Knight. Otis was instrumental in the discovery of Etta James and Willie Mae 'Big Mama' Thornton. A highly complex case of song co-authorship came to light with 'Hound Dog', which was recorded by Thornton. Otis, who had set up the date, was listed first as composer, then as co-composer with its originators, Leiber And Stoller. After the song was turned into a multi-million dollar hit by Elvis Presley, other names appeared on the credits and the lawyers stepped in. Otis had a hit record in the UK with an updated version of 'Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me' in 1957. During the 50s Otis broadcast daily in the USA as a radio disc jockey, and had a weekly television show with his band and also formed several recording companies, all of which helped to make him a widely recognized force in west coast R&B. During the 60s and 70s, Otis continued to appear on radio and television, touring with his well-packaged R&B-based show. His son, Johnny 'Shuggie' Otis Jnr., appeared with the show and at the age of 13 had a hit with 'Country Girl'. In addition to his busy musical career, Otis also found time to write a book, Listen To The Lambs, written in the aftermath of the Watts riots of the late 60s.

- ALBUMS: Mel Williams And Johnny Otis (1955)★★★, Rock 'N' Roll Parade, Volume 1 (Dig 1957)★★★, The Johnny Otis Show (Capitol 1958)★★★★, Cold Shot (Kent 1968)★★★★, Cuttin' Up (Epic 1970)★★, Live At Monterey (Epic 1971)★★, The New Johnny Otis Show (Alligator 1981)★★, Spirit Of The Black Territory Bands (1993)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Original Johnny Otis Show (Savoy1985)★★★★, The Capitol Years (Capitol 1989)★★★★, The Greatest Johnny Otis Show (Ace 1998)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Upside Your Head! Rhythm And Blues On Central Avenue, Johnny Otis.

Otis, Shuggie

b. John Otis Jnr., 30 November 1953, Los Angeles, California, USA. A precociously talented guitarist, Otis was encouraged by his bandleader father, Johnny Otis, who had him playing bass and lead guitar onstage in his early teens. Johnny Otis featured him on his 1969 Kent album, Cold Shot, and through that Al Kooper espoused his cause and recorded his debut album for Columbia. Father and son then both signed to Epic, and Shuggie appeared on his father's albums, Cuttin' Up and The Johnny Otis Show Live At Monterey!, as well as doing session work for Sugarcane Harris and playing bass on one track on Frank Zappa's Hot Rats. Three further solo albums of indifferent quality were issued before Otis retired at the grand old age of 22. In the years that followed, he continued to do session work for his father but drug problems hampered his efforts at reviving his own career. An album recorded for Big Bear in 1991, At The Blues Summit, remains unissued.

- ALBUMS: Kooper Session: Al Kooper Introduces Shuggie Otis (Columbia 1969)★★★, Here Comes Shuggie Otis (Epic 1970)★★, Freedom Flight (Epic 1971)★★, Inspiration Information (Epic 1975)★★, Omaha Bar-B-Q (Epic 1976)★★, Shuggie's Boogie: Shuggie Otis Plays The Blues (Epic/Legacy 1994)★★★.

Ottawan

This European disco duo consisted of Annette (b. 1960, Guadeloupe Islands, West Indies) and Patrick (b. 1956, Guadeloupe Islands, West Indies). Patrick moved to Paris in 1966 and Annette in 1976. He was already a star in France when they met and formed Ottawan. 'D.I.S.C.O.' was a hit on the continent in 1979 and was requested by returning holiday makers who helped make it a UK hit in 1980. Only the combined efforts of the Police ('Don't Stand So Close To Me') and Barbra Streisand ('Woman In Love') managed to hold Ottawan at number 2 for three weeks. The follow-ups, all in a very similar vein, were 'You're OK', 'Hands Up (Give Me Your Heart)' (which reached number 3), and 'Help, Get Me Some Help!'. By this time their audience was growing tired of their material, and Ottawan disbanded.

● ALBUMS: Ottawan (Carrere 1980)★.

● COMPILATIONS: Ottawan's Greatest Hits (Carrere 1981)★, The Very Best Of Ottawan (Carrere 1993)★.

Otway, John

b. 2 October, 1952, Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, England. The enigmatic, madcap John Otway first came to prominence in the early 70s with his guitar- and fiddle-playing partner, Wild Willie Barrett. Otway's animated performances and unusual vocal style caught the attention of Pete Townshend, who produced the duo's first two Track label singles, 'Murder Man' and 'Louisa On A Horse'. Extensive gigging, highlighted by crazed and highly entertaining stage perfomrances, won Otway and Barrett a loyal collegiate following and finally a minor hit with 'Really Free' in 1977. Its b-side, 'Beware Of The Flowers ('Cause I'm Sure They're Going To Get You Yeh)', was equally appealing and eccentric, and augured well for further hits. Although Otway (with and without Barrett) soldiered on with syllable-stretching versions of Tom Jones's 'Green Green Grass Of Home' and quirky, novelty work-outs such as 'Headbutts', he strangely remains a 70s curio, still locked into the UK college/club circuit. Premature Adulation was Otway's first original album in 12 years, but there was little change evident in his warped gallows humour.

● ALBUMS: with Wild Willy Barrett John Otway & Wild Willie Barrett (Polydor 1977)★★★, with Barrett Deep And Meaningless (Polydor 1978)★★★, Where Did I Go Right? (Polydor 1979)★★★, with Barrett Way & Bar (Polydor 1980)★★, with Barrett I Did It Otway (Stiff Canada 1981)★★★, All Balls & No Willy (Empire 1982)★★, with Barrett The Wimp And The Wild (1989)★★, Under The Covers And Over The Top (Otway Records 1992)★★, Live! (Amazing Feet 1994)★★★, Premature Adulation (Amazing Feet 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Barrett Gone With The Bin Or The Best Of Otway & Barrett (Polydor 1981)★★★, John Otway's Greatest Hits (Strike Back 1986)★★★, Cor Baby That's Really Me! (Strike Back 1990)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: John Otway And Wild Willie Barrett (ReVision 1990).

● FURTHER READING: Cor Baby That's Really Me, John Otway.

Ougenweide

A punchy German electric folk band, who wrote in their national folk style and adapted Bohemian drinking songs and ancient harmonies in a series of very successful, endemic records.

● ALBUMS: Eulenspigel (1976)★★★.

Oui 3

Oui 3 are Blair Booth (b. California, USA, vocals, programming), Phillip Erb (b. Switzerland, keyboards) and Trevor Miles (lyrics, rapping). In addition, their debut album featured the formidable rhythmic skills of Youth (Killing Joke, Brilliant, etc.), Jah Wobble, Galliano and the Brand New Heavies. It revealed an obvious debt to PM Dawn, with a flat, distinctively English rapping style. Booth was once a sidekick of Terry Hall of the Specials/Fun Boy 3 (as part of Terry, Blair and Anouschka), while Erb worked alongside Billy MacKenzie (ex-Associates). Together they met unknown rapper Miles, who shared their interest in George Clinton and Lee Scratch Perry. Their speciality then, was a witty mix of vocals and raps, with clever observations on a series of tightly wound scenarios. 'Break From The Old Routine', for example, depicted a collapsing relationship: 'We ain't gelling these days - we're congealing'. They returned to their reggae roots with the 45 'Arms Of Solitude', which featured of all things, an Augustus Pablo mix.

● ALBUMS: Oui Love You (MCA 1993)★★★.

Our Daughters Wedding

This New York, USA electronic trio comprised Keith Silva (vocal), Layne Rico (synthesizers, vocal) and Scott (keyboards). After extensive gigging, they relocated to the UK and signed to EMI. In the summer of 1981, they broached the UK Top 40 with the catchy 'Lawnchairs'. The follow-up EP, The Digital Cowboy, gained considerable press but proved less commercial. Despite a strong record company investment, the trio lost ground and their sole album was followed by their demise.

● ALBUMS: Moving Windows (EMI 1982)★★★.

Our Kid

This school-aged Liverpool based quartet were Kevin Rown (b. 1964), Brian Farrell (b. 1963), Terry McCreight (b. 1961) and Terry Beccino (b. 1961). The well choreographed and groomed young vocal group were winners on UK television's top talent show New Faces and were quickly signed up by Polydor Records. Their first single 'You Just Might See Me Cry' in 1976, which was penned by the hit team of Roger Greenaway and Barry Mason, shot to the runner-up position on the UK chart. The future looked very bright for the polished and youthful foursome. However, the local educational authorities intervened and, because of their age, banned them from various television and live appearances. They had two more singles on Polydor but when neither charted they returned to their studies.

● ALBUMS: Our Kid (1975)★★.

Our Lady Peace

Comprising Raine Maida (vocals), Mike Turner (guitar), Chris Eacrett (bass) and Jeremy Taggart (drums), Our Lady Peace were formed in Toronto, Canada, in 1994. The unusual, eclectic nature of the band's music is as much a result of their varied experiences as their musical influences. Maida (b. *c.*1972, Canada) is a former criminology student at the University of Toronto, while Turner (b. *c.*1965, Canada), an English graduate, grew up in England during the punk explosion. Eacrett (b. *c.*1971, Canada) was studying marketing when he made initial contact with Maida and Turner. The youngest member of the group is drummer Taggart (b. *c.*1977, Canada). Accommodatingly, Our Lady Peace waited until he had finished high-school studies before entering the studio. After meeting local producer Arnold Lanni they set about recording their first demos, which immediately attracted the attention of Sony Music Canada. The group's debut album, Naveed, took its title from 'the ancient Middle Eastern name for bearer of good news'. As Maida elaborated: 'We took the concept of Naveed and placed it into the dark optimism of our music. Naveed is a constant quest to obtain knowledge, possessed with the desire to grow mentally and spiritually.' The songwriting, which was undertaken before their stage debut, evolved out of a communal musical approach, with Maida supplying lyrics. Although there are strong influences of Nirvana and Dinosaur Jr, the strength of their material is likely to see them through.

● ALBUMS: Naveed (Sony Canada/Epic 1995)★★★★, Clumsy (Columbia 1997)★★★.

Our Man In Paris - Dexter Gordon

One of the most successful of Blue Note's 'blue' period and an album that remains his finest work. Although his tenor sax occasionally grates, this is a brilliant example of late bebop. Supported by Bud Powell (piano), Kenny Clarke (drums) and Pierre Michelot (bass), the simple quartet sound coolly in control. 'Willow Weep For Me' is played with great beauty and 'A Night in Tunisia' is yet another well-crafted version. The bonus of 'Our Love Is Here To Stay' and 'Like Someone In Love' (from Powell's Alternate Takes) on the CD reissue puts this album in the first division.

● Tracks: Scrapple From The Apple; Willow Weep For Me; Stairway To The Stairs; A Night In Tunisia; Our Love Is Here To Stay; Like Someone In Love; Broadway.

● First released 1963

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: did not chart

Our Miss Gibbs

Another vehicle for the vivacious actress and singer Gertie Millar, with music written for her by her husband, Lionel Monkton, in collaboration with Ivan Caryll. Our Miss Gibbs opened at the Gaiety Theatre in London on 23 January 1909, and dwelt, like so many similar productions of the time, on the life and loves of the common shop girl. This time the shop is in the county of Yorkshire, England, and sells flowers. Mary Gibbs (Gertie Miller) loves bank clerk Harry Lancaster (J. Edward Fraser), and the romance is going swimmingly until she discovers he is really the well-heeled Lord Eynsford, who has made certain commitments, marriage-wise, to Lady Elizabeth Thanet (Julia James). Wanting to be alone, she dashes off to the 1908 Franco-British Exhibition at London's White City Stadium (capacity 70,000), and emerges to accept the good Lord's apology and nuptial proposal. Most of the songs were written by Monkton or Caryll with lyricists Adrian Ross and Percy Greenbank, but the popular 'Yip-I-Addy-I-Ay', which was sung in the show by George Grossmith Jnr. (as the Hon. Hughie Pierrepoint), was the work of Grossmith Jnr. himself, with Will Cobb and John Flynn. The bulk of the score consisted of 'My Yorkshire Lassie', 'Not That Sort Of Person', 'Yorkshire', 'Mary', 'Hats', 'Country Cousins', 'White City', and 'Our Farm'. The song that created quite a stir, and endured, was the charming 'Moonstruck', which was introduced by Gertie Millar, dressed as a Pierrot, in a party scene. Our Miss Gibbs had - for those days - a prodigious run of 636 performances, but, understandably, given its subject matter and setting, flopped in New York, even with Pauline Chase as Mary, and some interpolated songs from Jerome Kern.

Our Tribe

Our Tribe is essentially Rob Dougan and Rollo Armstrong. They first met when Armstrong travelled to Australia with his friend Will Mount (later to become Gloworm) after finishing university, where he studied gynaecology. He met Dougan, who was then training to be an actor in Australia, signing a deal together for the rooArt label (nothing was released). On his return to England Rollo became a successful producer in his own right, and when Dougan emigrated they teamed up again. Their debut release for ffrr, 'I Believe In You', became a number 1 in the dance lists in the early 90s. Mel Medalie of Champion soon came along with the offer of both recording opportunities and their own subsidiary label (Cheeky). It was this that housed the duo's 'Understand This Groove' (as Franke), Gloworm's 'I Lift My Cup' and the OT Quartet's 'Hold That Sucker Down', a Top 10 hit. Our Tribe went on to remix for U2 ('Numb'), Pet Shop Boys ('Can You Forgive Her', 'Absolutely Fabulous'), M People ('How Can I Love U More?'), Wonderstuff ('Full Of Life'), Shola ('Love, Respect & Happiness'), Raze ('Break 4 Love') and Gabrielle ('Dreams'). The duo were also behind the writing and production of Kristine W's 'Feel What You Want' and Our Tribe, featuring Sabrina Johnston's 'What Hope Have I?'.

Out Cold Cops

This gang of law enforcement toughs caused the Detroit Police Department to launch an internal enquiry when it was discovered that the crew was made up of their officers. After peforming on television's the Jerry Springer Show, they released an album, Diary Of A Killer, which recounted the joys of brutalizing prisoners and criminals, thereby presenting their employers with a PR nightmare.

- ALBUMS: Diary Of A Killer (1994)★★.

Out Of My Hair

Effectively a vehicle for lead singer and guitarist 'Comfort' (b. Simon Eugene, *c.*1970), so much so that he sacked the rest of the original line-up when they objected to his controlling influence, Out Of My Hair additionally comprises Sean Elliot (guitar), Kenny Rumbles (drums) and Jon George (bass). Formed in London, England, and signed to RCA Records, the sound was one of glamorous indie guitar pop, with Comfort offering a Rolling Stones/Jimi Hendrix-styled vocal performance at its heart. However, he and the band remained suspicious of the 'retro' tag that had dogged more mainstream artists such as Lenny Kravitz: 'I'm not into all that hippie shit. I was watching Woodstock the other day and it just made me think, Fuck Off!'. Despite this, the group's debut single, 'In The Groove Again', had an obvious 60s, neo-acid rock feel. The follow-up, 'Heart's Desire', was less restrained and more sprawling, but still in the classic pop tradition - or, as Comfort prefers to call it, 'psychedelic bubblegum folk'.

- ALBUMS: Drop The Roof (BMG 1996)★★★.

Out Of The Blue

'More like into the red', wrote one critic, after attending the opening night of this musical drama on 23 November 1994 at the Shaftesbury Theatre in London. Another scribe remarked on 'the wild courage it takes to create a West End musical in which America's atomic bombing of Nagasaki in 1945, and a terminal case of radiation sickness are the catalysts for catastrophe.' The brave (or foolhardy) person who conceived this epic and wrote the sung-through score, was Tokura Shun-Ichi, one of Japan's leading composers of contemporary music. Paul Sand, the British rock musician-turned composer, lyricist, and director, was responsible for the libretto. His story concerns Father Marshall (James Graeme), a Boston Roman Catholic priest, whose wartime memories comes flooding back to him when he receives a request from the Japanese Dr. Akizuki (Michael McCarthy) to speak at his Boston church on the 25th anniversary commemoration of the dropping of the bomb on Nagasaki. As a young American GI in Japan after the war, Marshall (Greg Ellis) had married a local girl, Hideko (Meredith Braun), who died of radiation sickness. After he returned to the USA, Marshall received a letter from her fanatically nationalistic brother, Hayashi (Simon Burke/David Burt), telling him that their daughter, Hana (Paulette Ivory), had also died. However, during his visit to Boston, Akiszuki reveals that Hana did not perish, but is alive and working in his hospital in Nagasaki. In the second act, father and daughter are finally reunited at the Nagasaki Peace Park. Accompanying this worthy and well-meaning, if often sententious, tale with its inevitable reliance of flashbacks between the 40s, early 50s and 1970, was a score 'which mixed the styles of East and West, and combined frenzied percussion and whispering synthesisers with fragments of haunting melody', sung by some of the most beautiful voices in London. No individual song titles were listed in the programme. Ironically, set and costume designer Terry Parsons's dramatically angular stage, and chorus of hooded, visored, samurai-like figures, gave the David Gilmore production a kind of space-age look. John Combe was the choreographer. Lighting designer Mark Henderson won a Laurence Olivier Award for his work on this show and others during the year.

As with the other current oriental-type musical, Miss Saigon, some critics recognized echoes of Puccini's Madame Butterfly in Out Of The Blue. That may well be true, but the similarity ended there. For, when the latter closed on 10 December after a run of less than three weeks, Miss Saigon was in the process of overtaking My Fair Lady to become the longest-running musical in the history of the Theatre Royal Drury Lane.

Out Of The Blue - Electric Light Orchestra

Leader Jeff Lynne took his Lennon/Beatles sound to the extreme by releasing a double album of Beatlesque pop. Hit after hit followed and it is arguable that radio overplay made us sick of the sound of ELO and their subsequent fall from credibility. However, this would be unfair since Lynne is a master songwriter and this album is crammed full of great melodies and 'interesting twiddly bits'. Rather than recall the flogged hits, let us recall other corkers; 'Jungle', 'Standing In The Rain' and 'Birmingham Blues'. Who will own up to building the impossible cardboard cut-out space ship that came with the original, and how many still exist?

- Tracks: Turn To Stone; It's Over; Sweet Talkin' Woman; Across The Border; Night In The City; Starlight; Jungle; Believe Me Now; Steppin' Out; Standing In The Rain; Summer And Lightning; Mr. Blue Sky; Sweet Is The Night; The Whale; Wild West Hero; Birmingham Blues.
- First released 1977
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: 4

Out Of The Cool - Gil Evans

A much admired and loved man, of all the many brilliant orchestration projects this was his finest in his own right. He teases us with the opening of 'La Nevada' until the gorgeous repeated four-bar riff finally bursts on our ears with orgasmic delight. There are wonderful brass solos from John Coles, Tony Studd and Budd Johnson and a bass showcase for Ron Carter. As the opening track peters out after 15 minutes the listener enjoys the smug realization that there are a further four outstanding pieces to come. Too much of Evans's fame came through Miles Davis and Jimi Hendrix.

- Tracks: La Nevada; Where Flamingoes Fly; Bilbao Song; Stratusphunk; Sunken Treasure.
- First released 1960
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Out Of Time - R.E.M.

R.E.M. are the most successful band of recent years, and their stream of acclaimed albums illustrates their importance as America's greatest post-Springsteen export. Michael Stipe's thinking person's lyrics are almost buried by the band's Byrdslike arrangements of the notable 'Radio Song' and 'Shiny Happy People'. There are those that have criticized R.E.M. for stepping out of a parochial indie scene, but their impact in the 90s was as welcome as the Sex Pistols were in the 70s. Their catalogue is destined to endure as critics reluctantly accept their considerable importance in the history of rock. They will continue to make albums as good as this.

- Tracks: Radio Song; Losing My Religion; Low; Near Wild Heaven; Endgame; Shiny Happy People; Belong; Half A World Away; Texarkana; Country Feedback; Me In Honey.
- First released 1991
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: 1

Out To Lunch! - Eric Dolphy

Although a difficult album for those not seeped in jazz, it is still regarded as a milestone of recorded jazz. Featuring Freddie Hubbard (trumpet), Bobby Hutcherson (vibes), Tony Williams (drums) and Richard Davis (bass), this recording shows a unit hell-bent on pushing forward the perimeters of jazz, with extraordinary success. Dolphy's various saxophones, flute and chilling bass clarinet are literally all over the place without ever detracting from the quite outstanding performances from his supporting musicians. Although it won't be played as often as Kind Of Blue your collection would be all the poorer without it.

- Tracks: Hat And Beard; Something Sweet, Something Tender; Gazzelloni; Out To Lunch; Straight Up And Down.
- First released 1964
- UK peak chart position: did not chart
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Outcaste Records

This label was set up in May 1994 by Shabs Jobanputra to promote new Asian music in the UK. Among its releases are Nitin Sawhney's two albums Migration (1995) and Displacing The Priest (1996), Shri's Drum The Bass (1997) and Badmarsh And Shri's Dancing Drums (1998). Their first compilation, Untouchable Outcaste Beats (1997), included tracks by a number of these and other contemporary artists working in this area, as well as material by fusionists from the 60s and 70s such as Shankar, Wolfgang Dauner and the Dave Pyke Set. Outcaste have also run successful club nights in London at the End and Notting Hill Arts Club, which, as well as featuring DJs, present live music, rappers, traditional dancing, poetry and films. Although some of their music blends British dance styles with traditional Asian music in the same vein as much of the so-called Asian Underground, the label's artists, notably Nitin Sawhney and Shri, have a much broader scope that combines all kinds of sounds bound together by the Asian theme. In 1997 the label signed a distribution agreement with the American hip-hop label Tommy Boy Records.

Outcasts

At one time the premier punk band in Northern Ireland, the Outcasts' line-up revolved around the three Cowan brothers; Greg (b. *c.*1961; bass, vocals), Martin (b. *c.*1955; guitar) and Colin (b. *c.*1957, d. 1984; drums). This was the nucleus, though Gordon Blair had temporarily replaced Greg when he was injured in a car crash. The line-up was completed by 'Getty' (b. Colin Getgood, *c.*1960; guitar) and Raymond Falls (b. *c.*1965; additional drums). An impressive early single, 'Magnum Force', earned them the support of BBC disc jockey John Peel. They went on to release a solid debut album, characterized by the heavy rhythms produced by the twin drummers. However, before the release of Seven Deadly Sins, Colin Cowan was killed in a car crash.

- ALBUMS: Blood And Thunder (Abstract 1983)★★★, Seven Deadly Sins (New Rose 1984)★★★.

Outer Rhythm Records

A subsidiary of the UK label Rhythm King Records, Outer Rhythm was established in 1989 to license hot 'outside' products. Early releases on the label included Leftfield's single 'Not Forgotten' (1990) released before that band had become a duo. They also scored with material under license from R&S Records including Digital Excitation's 1992 trance hit, 'Pure Pleasure'. They imported heavily from Detroit, notably Random Noise Generation's 'Falling In Dub' in early 1992, which had originally been housed on 430 West Records and Germany's Hithouse stable. The label closed in June 1992 owing to 'changing forces in the market place'.

Outfield

A trio of Tony Lewis (vocals), John Spinks (guitar) and Alan Jackman (drums), Outfield formed in the East End of London, England, in the mid-80s. However, all of their success would come in the USA. Signed to Columbia Records, they recorded the bland but proficient pop rock debut Play Deep in 1986, which included the successful radio single 'Your Love'. As a result the album rose to number 9 in Billboard's US charts and achieved double platinum sales. A second collection, Bangin', was released a year later and reached the US Top 20 and went gold. However, afterwards the group's career hit a downward spiral. The group followed their Columbia Records' boss to MCA Records in 1990 but the move failed to revive their flagging career. Jackman later played with After Hours.

- ALBUMS: Play Deep (Columbia 1986)★★★, Bangin' (Columbia 1987)★★★★.

Outhere Brothers

This dance outfit from Chicago, Illinois, USA, consist of the singer and lyricist Malik and the producer Hula. Malik previously wrote the lyrics to Jazzy Jeff And The Fresh Prince's worldwide hit, 'Boom Boom Shake The Room'. He had also been a member of another dance group, Lidell Townsell And M.T.F., who had a Top 20 US hit with 'Nu Nu'. He agreed to work with Hula through a mutual Jazzy Jeff connection. Hula produced the rapper/DJ team's Grammy award-winning platinum single, 'Summertime'. They were originally joined by two other members, who promptly disappeared on their first trip to Europe. As the Outhere Brothers they enjoyed considerable success first with 'Pass The Toilet Paper' then two UK number 1 singles, 'Don't Stop (Wiggle Wiggle)' and 'Boom Boom Boom'. The latter stayed at the top of the charts for several weeks in 1995, and featured a memorable video of the two Chicago Bulls fans playing basketball. Both singles were big sellers in Europe, despite a near absence of mainstream radio play due to their risqué lyrical contents. In April 1995 the duo were investigated by New Scotland Yard following a justified complaint from a Bradford mother that the album, purchased by her 10-year-old daughter, was obscene, especially deliberately provocative titles such as 'I'll Lick Your Pussy' and 'Fuck U In The Ass'. At the same time further complaints were received about the lyrics of a bonus track on their irritating number 1 hit, 'Don't Stop (Wiggle Wiggle)'. In September 1995 another single, 'La La La Hey Hey', appeared in the UK charts. The repetitive nature of their work would indicate a short commercial life and thousands of parents will breathe a sigh of relief.

- ALBUMS: 1 Polish 2 Biscuits And A Fish Sandwich (Eternal/WEA 1995)★★, The Party Album (WEA 1996)★★.

Outkast

Atlanta, Georgia duo comprising Andre 'Dre' Benjamin and Antoine 'Big Boi' Patton, who broke big with 'Player's Ball' - produced by TLC backroom gang Organized Noise. It comprised tales of the streets of their local East Point and Decateur neighbourhoods. Sadly songs like 'Get Up And Get Out' introduced wholly regrettable lines like 'I learned the difference between a bitch and a lady, but I treated them all like ho's'. They were signed to LA & Babyface's LaFace imprint. 'Elevators (Me & You)' became a major rap chart success in July 1996, as did the following album ATLiens.

- ALBUMS: Southerplayalisticadillacmuzik (LaFace 1994)★★★, ATLiens)LaFace 1996)★★★.

Outlandos D'Amour - The Police

It is hard to imagine, after the sophistication of Synchronicity and Sting's excellent solo work, together with the new age/prog direction that Summers has taken, that the Police debut is a bit punky. This writer saw one of their first gigs supporting hippie darlings Spirit. They were energetic and raw but when they played 'So Lonely', 'Next To You' and 'Roxanne', you realized the potential of something really special. This album is underproduced and raw but it retains a quality that cannot be quantified. These are the real inventors of white reggae-flavoured punk pop. Derivative but innovative.

- Tracks: Next To You; So Lonely; Roxanne; Hole In My Life; Peanuts; Can't Stand Losing You; Truth Hits Everybody; Born In The 50s; Be My Girl - Sally; Masoko Tanga.
- First released 1979
- UK peak chart position: 6
- USA peak chart position: 23

Outlaw Posse

UK duo of the early 90s comprising DJ K Gee and rapper Bello, originally titled Brothers Like Outlaw, who saw the potential of their debut album neutered by a long-delayed release schedule. Disillusioned, it was some small time before the release of their next record, the 'Party Time' 45, which included a sample of the Cookie Crew's 'Born This Way'. Here they worked with a singer (Alison Evelyn) and live percussion. Although some accused them of jumping the jazz-rap bandwagon, they had actually prefaced their interest in such things as long ago as their 1989 debut single, 'Original Dope', which sampled Donald Byrd. Bello rapped memorably on the KLF's 'What Time Is Love', and also produced tracks for Upfront, while Karl has remixed for numerous artists inlcuding Queen Latifah, Mica Paris, Young Disciples and Omar. The group enlisted a live crew entitled Push, and gigged widely through Europe and Scandanavia during the 90s, eventually shortening their name to simply Outlaw. The group split shortly thereafter, Bello going on to record solo as Mister Bello. He also inaugurated his own label, Krazy Fly, to which he signed Upfront Ruddies, a crew he also manages.

- ALBUMS: My Afro's On Fire (Gee St 1990)★★★★.

Outlaws (UK)

Although officially formed in December 1960, the origins of this group date to the preceding May when Billy Grey (vocals), Billy Kuy (lead guitar), Reg Hawkins (rhythm guitar), Chas Hodges (bass) and Bobby Graham (drums) put together Billy Grey And The Stormers to play at Filey holiday camp. When Grey opted to leave music, the remaining four musicians stayed together as the Outlaws. In 1961 they were signed by producer Joe Meek who employed the group to support vocalist Mike Berry, notably on 'Don't You Think Its Time' and 'Tribute To Buddy Holly'. The Outlaws also recorded instrumentals, most of which were composed by Meek and revolved around cowboy themes. Two 1961 singles, 'Swingin' Low' and 'Ambush', reached the Top 50 of the UK charts, which in turn inspired the release of Dream Of The West. By 1962 only Hodges remained from the founding line-up and a reshaped Outlaws was completed by Roger Mingay (lead guitar, ex-Savages), Ken Lundgren (rhythm guitar) and Don Groom (drums). Three further singles, 'Valley Of The Sioux', Ku Pow' and 'Sioux Serande', followed before further changes in personnel. However, by September 1962 the Outlaws had a settled line-up of Hodges, Lundren, Ritchie Blackmore (lead guitar, ex-Savages) and Mick Underwood (drums). They remained a crucial part of Joe Meek's productions, appearing on sessions by John Leyton, Heinz and Glenda Collins, as well as numerous package tours. The Outlaws continued to record under their own name and the introduction of Blackmore brought more fire to their releases. 'Return Of The Outlaws', 'That Set The West Free' and 'Law And Order' are vibrant singles, but the rise of Merseybeat made Meek's work sound increasingly old-fashioned. The Outlaws' recording career ended with a vocal track, 'Keep A Knockin'', in 1964. Following this Blackmore left to join Heinz's Wild Boys, then Neil Christian's Crusaders. He was replaced by Harvey Hinsley, but in June 1965 the Outlaws split up. Hodges joined Cliff Bennett And The Rebel Rousers, while Underwood joined the embryonic Herd before opting for Episode Six. Lundren emigrated to Canada and Hinsley eventually found a niche as a member of Hot Chocolate.

- ALBUMS: Dream Of The West (HMV 1961)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Outlaws Ride Again (The Singles As And Bs) (See For Miles 1990)★★★.

Outlaws (USA)

Formed in Tampa, Florida, USA in 1974, the Outlaws comprised Billy Jones (guitar), Henry Paul (guitar), Hugh Thomasson (guitar), Monty Yoho (drums) and Frank O'Keefe (bass) - who was superceded by Harvey Arnold in 1977. With Thomasson as main composer, they were respected by fans (if not critics) for a strong stage presentation and artistic consistency which hinged on an unreconstructed mixture of salient points from the Eagles, Allman Brothers and similarly guitar-dominated, denim-clad acts of the 70s. The first signing to Arista, their 1975 debut album - produced by Paul A. Rothchild - reached number 13 in Billboard's chart. The set included the riveting lengthy guitar battle 'Green Grass And High Tides', which was the highlight of the group's live act. Singles success with 'There Goes Another Love Song' and 'Lady In Waiting' (the title track of their second album) was followed by regular touring. A coast-to-coast tour in 1976 and further less publicized work on the road necessitated the hire of a second drummer, David Dix, who was heard on 1978's in-concert Bring It Back Alive - the first without Paul (replaced by Freddy Salem) whose resignation was followed in 1979 by those of Yoho and Arnold. In 1981 the band was on the edge of the US Top 20 with the title track of Ghost Riders - a revival of Vaughn Monroe's much-covered ballad - but, when this proved their chart swansong, the outfit - with Thomasson the only remaining original member - disbanded shortly after Les Hombres Malo. Following modest success with two albums by the Henry Paul Band, its leader rejoined Thomasson in a re-formed Outlaws who issued Soldiers Of Fortune in 1986.

- ALBUMS: The Outlaws (Arista 1975)★★★★, Lady In Waiting (Arista 1976)★★★, Hurry Sundown (Arista 1977)★★, Bring It Back Alive (Arista 1978)★★★, Playin' To Win (Arista 1978)★★, In The Eye Of The Storm (Arista 1979)★★, Ghost Riders (Arista 1980)★★★, Los Hombres Malo (Arista 1982)★★, Soldiers Of Fortune (Pasha 1986)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits Of The Outlaws/High Tides Forever (Arista 1982)★★★★, On The Run Again (Raw Power 1986)★★, Best Of: Green Grass & High Tides (Arista 1998)★★★★.

Outside

Namely one Matt Cooper (b. *c.*1973, England), who is widely recognized among club and genre cognoscenti as the most talented arrival on the jazz/funk scene in the last decade. Classically trained on the piano, he went on to a deal with Dorado Records that allowed him to install a new digital recording studio in his own North London abode. Their relationship began with the singles 'No Time For Change' and 'Big City', whose featured vocalists included Cleveland Watkiss, with a bass line from Gary Crosby, before collaborating with fellow Dorado interns D*Note and jazzmen like Steve Williamson and Ronnie Laws. A third single, 'Movin' On', was completed as a typically strong and energetic debut album was assembled in late 1993. Outside also comprise Patrice Blanchard (bass) and Byron Wallen (trumpet), plus various session musicians as the occasion demands.

- ALBUMS: Almost In (Dorado 1993)★★★, Discoveries (Dorado 1997)★★★.

Outside Edge

Formerly known as Blackfoot Sue and Liner, this UK band switched to the name Outside Edge in 1984 to pursue an AOR direction. Comprising Tom Farmer (vocals, bass), Eddie Golga (guitar), Pete Giles (keyboards) and Dave Farmer (drums), they signed to Warner Brothers and released a self-titled debut in 1985. This was Americanized melodic rock, but featured rough and ragged vocals from Farmer, in contrast to the musical stylization. Running Hot followed in 1986 and was produced by Terry Manning (of ZZ Top fame), but Outside Edge were still unable to break through on a commercial level. The Farmer brothers left in 1989 and the remaining duo recruited new members to become Little Wing.

- ALBUMS: Outside Edge (Warners 1985)★★★, Running Hot (10 1986)★★.

Outsiders

Based in Cleveland, Ohio, USA, the Outsiders was the brainchild of Tom King, a guitarist, composer and arranger. He was born in the city in 1944, and the group evolved from a duo he had formed with vocalist Sonny Geraci (b. 1948, Cleveland, Ohio, USA). Initially known as Tom King And The Starfires, the line-up was completed by Bill Bruno (b. 1946, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA; guitar), Met Madsen (b. Denmark; bass) and Rick Biagiola/Baker (b. 1949, Cleveland, Ohio, USA; drums). The Outsiders scored a million-selling single in 1966 with their debut release, 'Time Won't Let Me'. An infectious slice of classic American pop, it introduced a series of similarly excellent songs, which included the original version of 'Help Me Girl', later a hit for Eric Burdon And The Animals in 1966. Madsen was replaced by Ritchie D'Amato (b. 1949, Cleveland, Ohio, USA). By the following year the Outsiders' brand of unassuming pop was deemed anachronistic and their brief spell in the spotlight ended. Geraci subsequently fronted a new group, Climax, who attained a gold disc in 1971 with 'Precious And Few'.

● ALBUMS: Time Won't Let Me (Capitol 1966)★★★★, The Outsiders Album #2 (Capitol 1966)★★★, Happening Live! (Capitol 1967)★★, In (capitol 1967)★★.

Ovans, Tom

b. Boston, Massachusetts, USA. After leaving high school, folk-singer, songwriter and harmonica player Ovans headed to the west coast and then New York. Living on friends' floors and in cheap hotel rooms, he was initially disillusioned by the fact that the Village coffee-house scene that birthed his hero Bob Dylan was dying on its feet. It was only when he moved to Nashville that he secured a recording contract, resulting in the release of Industrial Days. It prompted one reviewer to state that '. . . sometimes only a cliché will do, so - with apologies to all concerned - maybe Tom Ovans is the new Bob Dylan.'

● ALBUMS: Industrial Days (Nebula Sound 1995)★★★, Nucelar Sky (Demon 1996)★★★★, Dead South (Demon 1997)★★★.

Ovations

An R&B vocal group from Memphis, Tennessee, USA. The lead singer Louis Williams sounded very much like Sam Cooke, and the group built their career on a merger of the Sam Cooke sound with southern gospel harmonies. Recording for the Goldwax label, their first hit in 1965 was 'It's Wonderful To Be In Love' (number 22 R&B, number 61 pop). Although producing a score of southern hits, they had only one other national hit on Goldwax with 'Me And My Imagination' (number 40 R&B) in 1967. The original group soon broke up, and Williams formed a new Ovations group with three former members of Ollie And The Nightingales, Rochester Neal, Bill Davis and Quincy Billops Jnr. They reached the charts again with the MGM-subsidiary label Sounds Of Memphis. Reverting to the parent label, the group had its biggest hit in 1973 by fully exploiting Williams' ability to sound like Sam Cooke with a remake of the singer's 1962 hit, 'Having A Party' (number 7 R&B, number 56 pop). The group was sadly never able to reach the charts again and soon disbanded.

Overbea, Danny

b. 3 January 1926, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 11 May 1994, Chicago, Illinois, USA. Guitarist and singer Overbea, who came out of the Chicago R&B scene, was one of the earliest pioneers of rock 'n' roll. He began his musical career in 1946 and first recorded in 1950 as a vocalist on an Eddie Chamblee track. Overbea joined Chess Records in 1952, producing his best-known songs, 'Train Train Train' (number 7 R&B) and '40 Cups Of Coffee', the following year. Both were essentially rock 'n' roll songs before the concept of 'rock 'n' roll' had even emerged. In the pop market, 'Train Train Train' was covered by Buddy Morrow and '40 Cups Of Coffee' by Ella Mae Morse. By 1955, when rock 'n' roll was making its breakthrough on the pop charts, Bill Haley And His Comets recorded '40 Cups Of Coffee', which, even though it did not chart, proved to be one of the group's better efforts. Famed disc jockey Alan Freed featured Overbea many times in his early rock 'n' roll revues in Ohio and New York; his acrobatic back-bend to the floor while playing the guitar behind his head was always a highlight of the shows. Overbea was also a talented ballad singer (in the mode of Billy Eckstine), having most success with 'You're Mine' (also recorded by the Flamingos) and 'A Toast To Lovers'. Overbea made his last records in 1959 and retired from the music business in 1976.

Overdose

First sighted contributing a track to the Metal Massacre 9 compilation, Brazilian thrash band Overdose actually started their career alongside the better-known Sepultura, each band supplying one side to the Brutal Devastation/Seculo XX album in 1985. Afterwards, the fortunes of the two bands diverged, and it looked as though Overdose would become a mere footnote in the Sepultura story (Overdose vocalist B.Z., a graphic artist, also designed their logo). Claudio David (guitar), Sergio Cichovicz (guitar), Eddie Weber (bass), Andre Marcio (drums) and B.Z. kicked their heels while contractual problems were sorted out. They sustained themselves with a rigorous South American touring schedule that helped to define their bombastic and potent sound. They also recorded profusely. 1994's Progress Of Decadence was their sixth album, but was the first to be released in Europe, the group having previously sustained themselves with a staunch following in their native territory.

● ALBUMS: including Progress Of Decadence (Under One Flag 1994)★★★.

Overflash

Announcing his musical style as 'Cyberdeath', Overflash is the creation of Swedish-born 'musical deviant' Devo. Employing high-tech midi-computer technology in addition to his own screaming vocals, Overflash's musical output encompasses everything from baroque to techno and death metal. Calling on guitars, percussion instruments, strings, vocoder voice treatments and a wide variety of samples, his debut album was released on MNW Records in 1994 - though Overflash had originally been founded in 1986. Despite its eclecticism, Threshold To Reality was criticized for the artist's over-employment of pulp cyberpunk imagery that lacked lyrical dexterity.

● ALBUMS: Threshold To Reality (MNW 1994)★★.

Overkill

This thrash metal quartet was formed in New York, USA, in 1984 by vocalist Bobby 'Blitz' Ellsworth, guitarist Bobby Gustafson, bassist D.D. Vernie and drummer Sid Falck. Together they self-financed the recording of a mini-album. Desperately short of cash and exposure, they sold the rights to the small Azra label and made a net loss. They were soon picked up by Megaforce, however, and released their full debut album in 1985. Feel The Fire was a brutal speed-metal riff assault, but lacked the variation in light and shade to compete with groups such as Metallica and Anthrax. Three more albums followed a similar pattern, with Under The Influence raising their profile and generating comparisons to Testament. Following The Years Of Decay, Gustafson quit and was replaced by Rob Cannavino and Merritt Gant (ex-Faith Or Fear). Expanded to a quintet, the band recorded Horrorscope, their best work to date. Varying their approach, they only switched to hyperspeed at crucial moments, in order to maximize the impact. The album also featured an amazing version of Edgar Winter's 'Frankenstein'. Their reputation has continued to grow, following successful support slots on Helloween and Slayer tours, and another excellent album in I Hear Black. W.F.O. was packed with strong songs such as 'Where It Hurts' and 'New High In Lows', but was released only in mainland Europe. In 1995, shortly after releasing a 10th anniversary live triple album, guitarists Cannavino and Gant both left the band. Gustafson later appeared as a member of Grip Inc, Cycle Sluts From Hell and Skrew.

● ALBUMS: Overkill mini-album (Azra 1984)★★★, Feel The Fire (Megaforce 1985)★★, Taking Over (Megaforce 1987)★★, Under The Influence (Megaforce 1988)★★★, The Years Of Decay (Megaforce 1989)★★★, Horrorscope (Megaforce 1991)★★★★, I Hear Black (Megaforce 1993)★★★, W.F.O. (Concrete 1994)★★★, Wrecking Your Neck - Live (Concrete/Edel 1995)★★, The Killing Kind (Concrete/Edel 1996)★★★.

Overlanders

This UK vocal trio - Paul Arnold (aka Paul Friswell), Laurie Mason and Peter Bartholemew - initially pursued a folk-based career, but scored a surprise, if minor, US hit in 1964 with their version of 'Yesterday's Gone'. Buoyed by the addition of Terry Widlake (bass) and David Walsh (drums), they enjoyed a UK number 1 the following year with an opportunistic version of the Beatles' 'Michelle', but the reshaped group was unable to shake off a somewhat anachronistic image. A strong follow-up to their chart-topper, 'My Life', unfortunately failed to chart. Arnold left for a solo career in 1966, but despite the arrival of Ian Griffiths, the Overlanders failed to reap reward from their early success.

● ALBUMS: Michelle (Pye 1966)★★★.

Overlord X

b. c.1968. Hackney, London, England. Overlord X is a Brit-rapper who first arrived on Music Of Life's Hard As Hell compilation. However, he made his name with the verve of two excellent albums for Island Records, which were particularly successful in Europe. Indeed, X Versus The World went platinum in France, making it the most popular hardcore hip-hop album in that territory. Although not immediately recognizable as hardcore in the musical sense, there remained a lyrical exactitude that defied compromise. The influence of Public Enemy and Chuck D, in particular, has always been self-evident, notably on cuts like 'Prologue 1990', which featured a sample of the former's 'Bring The Noise'. However, Overlord had little time for NWA's ghetto-romanticism: 'Trying to say we're niggers, who the fuck are you? Coming from this brother with an attitude' ('You Can't Do It In London'). An alliance with ragga stars Midrange and Kandy on X Versus The World proved his diversity. He also produced their recordings as part of the X-Posse, and began work on his own film and a documentary about Hackney. Perhaps Overlord X's influence in the medium of television has had the greatest impact, however. Terry Jarvis, a well-known BBC producer, directed the promo clip, '14 Days In May', through which Janet Street Porter commissioned him to provide continuity links between sections of Def II. He subsequently became producer for that show for 18 months, before providing the title-song and music for sitcom The Real McCoy. However, a 1992 record deal with Jarvis was less successful. His imprint, Down To Jam, was financed by Motown, but its life span was truncated by financial considerations. Overlord X, no longer employing that name, regrouped in 1994 as part of Benz.

● ALBUMS: Weapon Is My Lyric (Mango Street 1988)★★★, X Versus The World (Mango Street 1990)★★★★.

Overstreet, Paul

b. 17 March 1955, Newton, Mississippi, USA. Overstreet moved to Nashville in 1973 and was married for a short time to Dolly Parton's sister Frieda. It was not until 1982 that he made an impression as a songwriter. George Jones had a US country hit with 'Same Old Me' and Overstreet was able to 'buy a lot of booze and drugs and a new car'. The country hits continued with 'Diggin' Up Bones', 'On The Other Hand' and 'Forever And Ever, Amen', all for Randy Travis, and 'You're Still New To Me', a duet for Marie Osmond and Paul Davis. In 1985 and with the help of his new wife, Julie, Paul Overstreet decided to giving up drinking and drugs and devote his time to God and his family. This new lifestyle is reflected in many of his songs. He was part of the band SKO in 1986/7 and then had another US country number 1 with 'I Won't Take Less Than Your Love', which he performed with Tanya Tucker and Paul Davis. He wrote 'When You Say Nothing At All' (Keith Whitley), 'A Long Line Of Love' (Michael Martin Murphey) and 'Love Can Build A Bridge' (Judds) as well as having his own country hits with 'Seein' My Father In Me', 'Richest Man On Earth' and 'Daddy's Come Around', which was a number 1.

● ALBUMS: Paul Overstreet (RCA 1982)★★★, Sowin' Love (RCA 1989)★★★, Heroes (RCA 1991)★★★, Love Is Strong (RCA 1992)★★, Time (Scarlett Moon 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Paul Overstreet (RCA 1994)★★★★.

Overstreet, Tommy

b. Thomas Cary Overstreet, 10 September 1937, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, USA. Overstreet grew up in Houston, the home-town of his uncle, the 30s pop singer Gene Austin, and learned to play the guitar at the age of 14. Here he first appeared on KTHT radio and in a local production of Hit The Road, but after completing high school, he moved to Abilene. During 1956-57, he studied radio and television production at the University of Texas and also featured on Slim Willett's local television show, at one time appearing as Terry Dean from Abilene. Between 1957 and 1964 (military service excepted), he toured with Gene Austin, after which he worked for a time as a songwriter with Pat Boone's Cooga Music in Los Angeles. He recorded, without success, for Dunhill and eventually returned to Texas. In 1967, he moved to Nashville, where his University training saw him become manager of Dot Records' office. He also recorded for the label and after two minor hits, he had a Top 5 US country and minor pop hit with 'Gwen (Congratulations)'. This launched his career, and during the 70s, he registered 27 Billboard country chart hits. Although he never achieved a number 1, he did have Top 3 hits with 'Ann (Don't Go Runnin')', 'Heaven Is My Woman's Love' and '(Jeannie Marie) You Were A Lady'. Overstreet was never solely a country performer and with his band Nashville Express, he toured extensively both in the USA and Europe. He was at one time especially popular in Germany, where a recording of 'Heaven Is My Woman's Love', sung in German, was a hit. He appeared on most of the top US television programmes and made guest appearances on the Grand Ole Opry and Hee-Haw. He left Dot in 1979 and had six minor hits on Elektra, including 'What More Could A Man Need', but by the early 80s he was recording for minor labels. By this time, he had become a polished cabaret-style entertainer, far removed from any country roots; many may perhaps doubt that any ever really existed. He had a minor chart hit with 'Next To You' in 1986.

● ALBUMS: Gwen (Congratulations) (Dot 1971)★★★, This Is Tommy Overstreet (Dot 1972)★★★, Heaven Is My Woman's Love (Dot 1972)★★★, My Friends Call Me T.O. (Dot 1973)★★, Woman Your Name Is My Song (Dot 1974)★★, I'm A Believer (Dot 1975)★★★, Live From The Silver Slipper (Dot 1975★★★, Turn On To Tommy Overstreet (Dot 1976)★★★, Vintage '77 (Dot 1977)★★, Hangin' Around (Dot 1977)★★★, A Better Me (10th Anniversary Album) (Dot 1978)★★★, There'll Never Be Another First Time (Dot 1978)★★★, The Real Tommy Overstreet (Dot 1979)★★★, I'll Never Let You Down (Elektra 1979)★★★, I Can Hear Kentucky Calling (Elektra 1980)★★, Tommy Overstreet (1982)★★, Dream Maker (1983)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Solid Gold Hits (Bulldog 1988)★★★.

Oviedo, Papi

b. Gilberto Oviedo, 1934, Havana, Cuba. The son of Isaac Oviedo, the renowned songwriter and master of the tres (traditional Cuban guitar), Papi continued in the family tradition, playing the tres from an early age. He formed his first group, a trio with whom he busked on the streets of Havana, in 1949. He joined the group of Enrique Perez in 1954, and moved on to play with Conjunto Chocolate and then with the band of trumpeter Felix Chapatin. In 1981 Papi joined Orquesta Reve. He stayed with them for the next 14 years, recording extensively and touring around the world. He left Reve in 1995 to form his own group, Papi Oviedo Y Su Soneros, which featured an all-acoustic line-up of tres, guitar, trumpets, bass and percussion, and vocalists Maria Cristina Azcuy and Miguel Martinez Rajas. Both vocalists had previously sung with some of Cuba's leading groups. The group recorded their debut, Encventro Entre Soneros, in 1996 at ICAIC studios in Havana. Released a year later, the album provides a fine introduction to their traditional Cuban 'son' sound.

● ALBUMS: Encventro Entre Soneros (Tumi 1997)★★★★.

Owen, Jim

b. 21 April 1941, Robards, Kentucky, USA. When he was eight years old, Owen saw Hank Williams sing and from that time he became completely fascinated by the star and his music. After completing his education, he worked variously as a journalist and as a golf coach until 1969 when, with Mel Tillis's help, he relocated to Nashville to work as a songwriter. Over the next few years, several artists had chart hits with his songs. These included 'Too Lonely Too Long' and 'One More Drink' (both Mel Tillis), 'Little Boy's Prayer' (Porter Wagoner), 'Sweet Baby On My Mind' (June Stearns), 'Southern Loving' and 'Broad Minded Man' (both Jim Ed Brown), 'The Telephone' (Jerry Reed) and arguably the best-known of all, 'Louisiana Woman, Mississippi Man' (Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn). He never lost his obsession with Hank Williams and encouraged by his wife, who once dreamed that she saw Owen onstage at the Grand Ole Opry but that it was Williams' voice that she heard coming from him, he began to recreate his idol. He talked with people that had known or worked with Williams and practised his mannerisms and stage presentation. In 1976, he presented Hank, a one-hour PBS television special that won him an Emmy award for the best show of the year on public television. He then produced a 90-minute one-man live stage show, An Evening With Hank Williams, which had backing tracks provided by Hank's band, the Drifting Cowboys. He commenced touring extensively with the show and regularly drew audiences of thousands at countless venues. He also starred in the 1980 film Hank Williams:The Man And His Music, for which he received an Emmy nomination. In 1978, his Epic recording of 'Lovesick Blues', recorded with the Drifting Cowboys, was a minor chart hit and in the early 80s, he scored two more minor hits with 'Ten Anniversary Presents' and 'Hell Yes, I Cheated'. In 1985, he wrote and produced a 10-hour Hank Williams radio show which, on New Year's Day, was broadcast on various US stations as a tribute. Owen has also appeared as Williams for the noted Legends In Concert at the Imperial Palace, Las Vegas, and made many appearances on the Opry, including a special one on 1 January 1993, the 40th anniversary of Williams' death, which gained him a standing ovation. He continued to tour into the 90s, still writes songs and, at times, works as an auctioneer near his Henderson, Tennessee home. He is also noted for his collection of classic cars.

● ALBUMS: with the Drifting Cowboys A Song For Us All - A Salute To Hank Williams (Epic 1977)★★★, Hank (Sun 1982)★★.

● FILMS: Hank Williams: The Man And His Music (1980).

Owen, Mark

b. Mark Anthony Owen, 27 January 1974, England. Widely regarded as 'the pretty one' in Take That, the diminutive Mark Owen was the third of that group to launch a solo career in 1996, following Gary Barlow and Robbie Williams. Although his debut single, 'Child', was evidently intended to offer a bridge between Take That fans and a new audience, his debut solo album, The Green Man, was far more experimental in nature than anything issued by his former compatriots. Though it retained pop elements, there was a committed attempt to take the songwriting and production away from the 'teenybopper' constituency of old. Among the surprises was Owen's choice of collaborators. The producers involved were John Leckie (Radiohead, Fall) and Craig Leon (famed for his work with Blondie). The musicians included Dave Gregory (ex-XTC) and Clem Burke (ex-Blondie). Owen later confessed to not really knowing who Leckie was, but to admiring the depth of atmosphere created on Radiohead's The Bends. The songwriting was predominantly Owen's own, despite the fact that he had only contributed two b-sides to Take That's extensive career. All the tracks, apart from 'Child', were solo efforts, which he had previously demoed at his Lancashire home with his father playing the guitar.

● ALBUMS: Green Man (RCA 1996)★★.

Owen, Reg

b. February 1928, England. Owen was a British bandleader who reached the US and UK charts in 1959 with his version of the song 'Manhattan Spiritual', written by Billy Maxted. The song was issued on the small Palette label in the USA and began its climb in December 1958, ultimately reaching number 10 in February 1959. Meanwhile, the record was issued in England on Pye International, where it reached number 20. Owen placed one other single on the English chart, 'Obsession', in 1960, and although he continued to record, there were no further chart successes on either side of the Atlantic. None of his albums, including those recorded for RCA Records prior to 'Manhattan Spiritual's success, charted in either country.

● ALBUMS: I'll Sing You A Thousand Love Songs (RCA 1958)★★★, Girls Were Made To Take Care Of Boys (RCA 1959)★★, Cuddle Up A Little Closer (RCA 1959)★★★, Manhattan Spiritual (RCA 1959)★★, Fiorello (RCA 1959)★★★.

Owens, Bonnie

b. Bonnie Campbell, 1 October 1932, Blanchard, Oklahoma, USA. Bonnie was a yodelling country singer, who married Buck Owens in 1947. Their son, Alvis Alan Owens (b. 22 May 1948), became the singer Buddy Alan. Buck and Bonnie Owens toured together and had a radio series in Arizona. They divorced in 1953 but both moved to Bakersfield in the early 60s, where she made her first records, 'Dear John Letter', 'Why Daddy Don't Live Here Anymore' and 'Don't Take Advantage Of Me'. After a relationship with Merle Haggard's manager, Fuzzy Owen, she married Haggard in 1965, becoming part of his stage show and recording a successful duet album with him. Their marriage was unusual in that Owens tolerated Haggard's affairs - 'I don't care what you do so long as you don't flaunt it in my face', she is reputed to have said. In 1970 they co-wrote 'Today I Started Loving You Again'. She stopped performing in 1975 to look after their family and business interests. They divorced in 1978 but she is now an integral part of his roadshow.

● ALBUMS: Don't Take Advantage Of Me (Capitol 1965)★★★, with Merle Haggard Just Between The Two Of Us (Capitol 1966)★★★, Your Tender Loving Care (Capitol 1967)★★★, All Of Me Belongs To You (Capitol 1967)★★★, Somewhere Between (Capitol 1968)★★★, Hi-Fi To Cry By (Capitol 1969)★★, Lead Me On (Capitol 1969)★★★, Mother's Favourite Hymns (Capitol 1971)★★.

Owens, Buck

b. Alvis Edgar Owens Jnr., 12 August 1929, Sherman, Texas, USA. Buck Owens became one of the leading country music stars of the 60s and 70s, along with Merle Haggard, the leading exponent of the 'west coast sound'. Owens gave himself the nickname Buck at the age of three, after a favourite horse. When he was 10, his family moved to Mesa, Arizona, where Owens picked cotton, and at 13 years of age he began playing the mandolin. He soon learned guitar, horns and drums. Owens performed music professionally by the age of 16, starring, along with partner Ray Britten, in his own radio programme. He also worked with the group Mac's Skillet Lickers, and at 17 married their singer, Bonnie Campbell, who later launched her own career as Bonnie Owens. The couple bore a son, who also had a country music career as Buddy Alan. In 1951 Owens and his family moved to Bakersfield, California, at the suggestion of an uncle who said work was plentiful for good musicians. Owens joined the Orange Blossom Playboys, with whom he both sang and played guitar for the first time, and then formed his own band, the Schoolhouse Playboys. Owens made ends meet by taking on work as a session guitarist in Los Angeles, appearing on recordings by Sonny James, Wanda Jackson, Tommy Sands and Gene Vincent. When the Playboys disbanded in the mid-50s Owens joined country artist Tommy Collins as singer and guitarist, recording a few tracks with him.

In 1955-56 Owens recorded his first singles under his own name, for Pep Records, using the name Corky Jones for rockabilly and his own name for country recordings. Owens signed to Capitol Records in March 1957. It was not until his fourth release, 'Second Fiddle', that he made any mark, reaching number 24 on Billboard's country chart. His next, 'Under Your Spell Again', made number 4, paving the way for over 75 country hits, more than 40 of which made that chart's Top 10. Among the biggest and best were 'Act Naturally' (1963), later covered by the Beatles, 'Love's Gonna Live Here' (1963), 'My Heart Skips A Beat' (1964), 'Together Again' (1964), 'I've Got A Tiger By The Tail' (1965), 'Before You Go' (1965), 'Waitin' In Your Welfare Line' (1966), 'Think Of Me' (1966), 'Open Up Your Heart' (1966) and a cover version of Chuck Berry's 'Johnny B. Goode' (1969), all of which were number 1 country singles. Owens recorded a number of duets with singer Susan Raye, and also with his son Buddy Alan. He also released more than 100 albums during his career. In addition, his compositions were hits by other artists, notably Emmylou Harris ('Together Again') and Ray Charles ('Crying Time'). Owens' band, the Buckaroos (guitarist Don Rich, bassist Doyle Holly, steel guitarist Tom Brumley and drummer Willie Cantu), was also highly regarded. Their back-to-basics, honky-tonk instrumental style helped define the Bakersfield sound - Owens' recordings never relied on strings or commercialized, sweetened pop arrangements. The Buckaroos also released several albums on their own. In 1969, Owens joined as co-host the country music television variety programme Hee Haw, which combined comedy sketches and live performances by country stars. He stayed with the show until the mid-80s, long after his Capitol contract expired, and he had signed with Warner Brothers Records in 1976. Although Owens continued to place singles in the country charts with Warners, his reign as a top country artist had faltered in the mid-70s and he retired from recording and performing to run a number of business interests, including a radio station and recording studio in Bakersfield. In 1988, country newcomer Dwight Yoakam convinced Owens to join him in recording a remake of Owens' song 'Streets Of Bakersfield'. It reached number 1 in the country chart and brought new attention to Owens. He signed with Capitol again late in 1988 and recorded a new album, Hot Dog, featuring re-recordings of old Owens songs and cover versions of material by Chuck Berry, Eddie Cochran and others. Although Owens had not recaptured his earlier status by the early 90s, he had become active again, recording and touring, including one tour as a guest of Yoakam. In 1996 he was inducted into the Country Music Hall Of Fame.

● ALBUMS: Buck Owens (LaBrea 1961)★★★, Buck Owens Sings Harlan Howard (Capitol 1961)★★★, Under Your Spell Again (Capitol 1961)★★★, The Fabulous Country Music Sound Of Buck Owens (Starday 1962)★★★, You're For Me (Capitol 1962)★★★, Buck Owens On The Bandstand (Capitol 1963)★★★, Buck Owens Sings Tommy Collins (Capitol 1963)★★★, Together Again/My Heart Skips A Beat (Capitol 1964)★★★, I Don't Care (Capitol 1964)★★★, I've Got A Tiger By The Tail (Capitol 1965)★★★, Before You Go/No One But You (Capitol 1965)★★★, The Instrumental Hits Of Buck Owens And The Buckaroos (Capitol 1965)★★★, Christmas With (Capitol 1965)★★★, Roll Out The Red Carpet (Capitol 1966)★★★, Dust On Mother's Bible (Capitol 1966)★★★, Carnegie Hall Concert (Capitol 1966)★★★, Open Up Your Heart (Capitol 1967)★★★, Buck Owens And His Buckaroos In Japan (Capitol 1967)★★★, Your Tender Loving Care (Capitol 1967)★★★, It Takes People Like You To Make People Like Me (Capitol 1968)★★★, A Night On The Town (Capitol 1968)★★★, Sweet Rosie Jones (Capitol 1968)★★★, Christmas Shopping (Capitol 1968)★★★, Buck Owens The Guitar Player (Capitol 1968)★★★, Buck Owens In London (Capitol 1969)★★★, Tall Dark Stranger (Capitol 1969)★★★, Big In Vegas (Capitol 1970)★★★, with Susan Raye We're Gonna Get Together (Capitol 1970)★★★, with Raye The Great White Horse (Capitol 1970)★★★, A Merry Hee Haw Christmas (Capitol 1970)★★★, I Wouldn't Live In New York City (Capitol 1971)★★★, Bridge Over Troubled Water (Capitol 1971)★★★, with Raye Merry Christmas From Buck Owens & Susan Raye (Capitol 1971)★★, The Songs Of Merle Haggard (Capitol 1972)★★★, Buck Owens Live At The Nugget (Capitol 1972)★★★, 'Live' At The White House (Capitol 1972)★★, In The Palm Of Your Hand (Capitol 1973)★★★, Ain't It Amazing, Gracie (Capitol 1973)★★★, with Raye The Good Old Days Are Here Again (Capitol 1973)★★, Arms Full Of Empty (Capitol 1974)★★★, 41st Street Lonely Hearts' Club/ Weekend Daddy (Capitol 1975)★★, Buck 'Em (Warners 1976)★★, with Roy Clark, Grandpa Jones, Kenny Price The Hee-Haw Gospel Quartet (Songbird 1981)★★★, Hot Dog!

(Capitol 1988)★★★, Act Naturally (Capitol 1989)★★★, Blue Love (1993)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Country Hit Maker #1 (Starday 1964)★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens (Capitol 1964)★★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens, Volume 2 (Capitol 1968)★★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens, Volume 3 (Capitol 1969)★★★, Close Up (Capitol 1969)★★★, Buck Owens (Capitol 1970)★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens, Volume 4 (Capitol 1971)★★★, with Susan Raye The Best Of Buck Owens & Susan Raye (Capitol 1972)★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens, Volume 5 (Capitol 1974)★★★, The Best Of Buck Owens, Volume 6 (Capitol 1976)★★★, All-Time Greatest Hits, Vol. 1 (Curb 1990)★★★, The Buck Owens Collection (1959-1990) 3-CD box set (Rhino 1992)★★★★, Very Best Of Buck Owens, Vol. 1 (Rhino 1994)★★★★, Very Best Of Buck Owens, Vol. 2 (Rhino 1994)★★★★, The Buck Owens Story Vol. 1 (1956-64) (Personality 1994)★★★★, The Buck Owens Story Vol. 2 (1964-68) (Personality 1994)★★★★, The Buck Owens Story Vol. 3 (1969-89) (Personality 1994)★★★★, Duets: Half A Buck (K-Tel 1996)★★★.

Owens, Calvin

b. 1929, Houston, Texas, USA. His Creole mother told her son stories about Louis Armstrong, so that by the age of 13 Owens was keen to play the trumpet. A year later, he joined up with the Leonard Dunkins Revue, a vaudeville band that played various musical styles and at the time featured Willie Mae Thornton as one of its singers. After that, Owens led a series of bands of his own, as well as touring Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana with various territory bands. During the 40s, his band backed men such as Big Joe Turner and T-Bone Walker when they were in town. Owens also worked with the young Amos Milburn, and also Leroy Ervin and Lightnin' Hopkins. In 1949, he toured briefly with the Brownskin Models before joining I.H. Smalley's band, who regularly backed guitarist Lester Williams. Owens also worked in the house band at the Eldorado Ballroom until 1953, when B.B. King asked him to join his touring group. He remained with the band for four years and became King's music director. Owens returned to Houston in 1957 and became an A&R director for Don Robey, appearing on many Duke and Peacock recordings. In 1979, he returned to work for B.B. King for another five years, appearing on Live At Ole Miss and Live In London, for which he also wrote the arrangements. During this time he married and settled in Belgium, his wife's home country. True Blue was recorded there, with guest appearances by King and Johnny Copeland. The album and its successor, That's Your Booty, brilliantly recreate the heyday of big band blues, with lavish brass arrangements and driving rhythm.

● ALBUMS: True Blue (Sequel 1993)★★★★, That's Your Booty (Coast To Coast 1995)★★★★.

Owens, Harry

b. 1902, Nebraska, USA, d. 11 December 1986, Eugene, Oregon, USA. Before forming his own dance band Owens played trumpet in several Los Angeles area orchestras, including those of Vincent Rose and the Cocoanut Grove Orchestra. When he established his own combo in 1926 to play at the local Lafayette Cafe, it was a conventional dance band which gave little indication of his future direction. The change came about when he travelled to Honolulu in 1934 to fulfil a four-month contract as the musical director of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel. The orchestra he pieced together here took native Hawaiian music as its theme, combining this with a more traditional dance band sound. The musicians who contributed were primarily local men, tutored in the big band dynamic by Owens himself. Various vocalists were also employed, including Hilo Hattie, the Royal Hawaiian Sweethearts, Kenny Allen and Gil Mershon. Songs such as 'Hawaiian Paradise', 'To You Sweetheart Aloha', 'Voice Of The Trade Winds' and 'Polynesian Holiday', plus theme tune 'Sweet Leilani', readily identified the group's sound. These and other songs were released on recordings by Hamilton, Columbia, Capitol and Decca Records, which proved particularly popular with American audiences who idealised the island's sun swept beaches but were unable to afford the air fare. Owens stayed at the Royal Hawaiian for seven years, with his raw musicians gradually becoming more adept at what was essentially an alien style of playing. Throughout he made brief returns to the American mainland, playing Californian venues such as the St. Francis and Beverley Wilshire Hotels, also appearing in several films. However, the advent of World War II, and more particularly the Japanese bombing of Pearl Harbor, precluded his return to the island for several years. Owens continued to work on the west coast however, and in 1949 organised a successful CBS television show that ran for nine years. When he retired from music he established a Hawaiian tour agency in Santa Monica, before moving to Eugene, Oregon, in 1976.

Owens, Jack

b. 17 November 1904, Bentonia, Mississippi, USA, d. 9 February 1997. Along with Skip James and the unrecorded Henry Stuckey, Owens was one of the originators of the distinctive blues style developed in Bentonia after World War 1, featuring 'deep' lyrics much concerned with death and loneliness, given a high and melismatic delivery. The complex three-finger guitar accompaniment, often in an eerie E minor tuning, blends inextricably with the equally affecting vocal line. Owens was not recorded until 1966, but proved to be a major musician, playing very extended songs with long guitar breaks. He was proud of his guitar prowess and, although fondest of E minor, he could play in seven tunings. He lived in Bentonia all his life, farming and at one time operating a juke-joint. His wife's death in 1985 allowed him to play a few concerts further afield; in 1989 he played in Chicago, still a master musician at 84. In later years he received a US government grant.

● ALBUMS: It Must Have Been The Devil (1971)★★★, Bentonia Country Blues (1979)★★★, 50 Years - Mississippi Blues In Bentonia (1991)★★★, with Bud Spires It Must Have Been The Devil (Testament 1995)★★★.

Owens, Jay

b. Jerome Owens, 1947, Lake City, Florida, USA. Blind singer and guitarist Owens purveys music that is accurately described by the title of his first album. His first musical inspiration was his uncle Clarence Jenkins, a popular local blues musician, whom Owens quickly learned to accompany on the bass strings of his first guitar. Further tuition in chords and tunings came from Ink Spots guitarist Jimmy McLin, who lived nearby. In high school he joined Albert Wright And The Houserockers, a revue band that also featured shake dancers. Although both parents were ministers in the Pentecostal Church, they encouraged their son's musical education. He joined Chuck Mills' band, the Barons, and travelled throughout America, working with Al Green, O.V. Wright, Donny Hathaway, Little Milton and Bobby Womack. He also worked with Faith Hope And Charity, a vocal group whose lead singer, Zulema Cusseaux, left to pursue a solo career in New York, taking Owens with her. After several years, he left to form a series of his own bands, including Soundtrack And The Pocket, a blues trio that gigged at New York venues such as Manny's Car Wash and the Lone Star Cafe. He was introduced to Mike Vernon through Lazy Lester; Vernon heard his songs and invited him to England, where he was a surprise hit at the 1992 Burnley Blues Festival. The Blues Soul Of..., consisting entirely of original material that skilfully blended blues, soul and gospel influences, was well received. Moving to Code Blue, Movin' On repeated the same feat, proving the emergence of a serious songwriting talent.

● ALBUMS: The Blues Soul Of... (Indigo/Code Blue 1992/1994)★★★, Movin' On (Code Blue 1995)★★★★.

Owens, Jimmy

b. 9 December 1943, New York, USA. Owens went to the High School of Music and Art in New York when he was aged 14. He then studied composition with Henry Bryant and trumpet with Donald Byrd. In the 60s, after Marshall Brown's Newport Youth Band, he played with the bands of Slide Hampton, Lionel Hampton, Maynard Ferguson, Gerry Mulligan, Charles Mingus and Herbie Mann. Owens worked briefly with Duke Ellington and Count Basie and was a member of the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis band. During the early 70s he played with drummer Billy Cobham as well as in Billy Taylor's band on the Frost Show and continued the work he had started with Collective Black Artists Inc. (1969) and Jazzmobile. He has been on the music panel of the New York State Council on the Arts and was musical director of the New York Jazz Repertory Company (1974). Owens has written many extended pieces for the Brooklyn Philharmonic Orchestra. The foundation of his music remains in the blues. He plays with a prodigious technique and clear, ringing tone. He has had a special four valve fluegelhorn made for him. In 1979 he toured with the Mingus Dynasty band.

● ALBUMS: with Charles Mingus The Black Saint And The Sinner Lady (1963)★★★★, with Mingus Live At Monterey (1965)★★★★, with Gerald Wilson The Golden Sword (1966)★★★, No Escaping It (1970)★★★, Young Man On The Move (1976)★★★, Heading Home (1978)★★★, with Billy Cobham Spectrum (1973)★★★, with Mingus Dynasty Chair In The Sky (1979)★★★.

Owens, Robert

A long time collaborator with Mr Fingers in Fingers Inc, Owens provided the vocal for early house classics like 'Washing Machine' and 'Music Takes Me Up'. He also sang on classics like Frankie Knuckles' 'Tears' and (uncredited) on the Bobby Konders' production, Jus' Friends' 'As One'. Ownes grew up, inspired by Stevie Wonder, Patti Labelle and others, with a church choir background, going on to sing in several bands. As a youth he travelled between his Los Angeles-based mother and Chicago-stabled father, where he was first introduced to house music. Ironically his first experience of a warehouse party left him overpowered, and he left after 15 minutes. He would later watch the assembled masses through a window, and decided to begin DJing himself, combining deck skills with his own vocals. It was at this point that he was introduced to Larry Heard, aka Mr Fingers. Owens would select from the tunes presented to him by Fingers and choose the ones he wished to write lyrics for. This paved the ground for Owens' breakthrough performance on Fingers Inc's 'Can You Feel It?'. When his songwriting partnership with Fingers broke up due to financial pressures, he recreated the method with Frankie Knuckles and David Morales (hardly a step down in quality) for his debut solo album. He was eventually dropped from his contract with Island in 1992 despite US success with 'I'll Be Your Friend' (which came out on Paul Oakenfold's Perfecto, and was remixed by Morales and Satoshi Tomiie) and the self-produced 'You Gotta Work'. Owens remains one of house music's great showmen, offering uplifting live sets with his Freetown posse (which was also the name of the label he helped establish). Earlier he had been the star turn on the first house package tour to London which arrived on English shores in February 1987. 1994 saw him defect to the Musical Directions imprint.

● ALBUMS: Rhythms In Me (4th & Broadway 1990)★★.

Owens, Tex

b. Doie Hensley Owens, 15 June 1892, Killeen, Texas, USA, d. 9 September 1962, New Baden, Texas, USA. The eldest of the 13 children of a sharecropper family that included sister Texas Ruby, who married fiddler Curly Fox, and who was a very popular country singer at the time of her tragic death in 1963. The family relocated to Oklahoma where, at 15 as 'Tex', he worked on ranches and briefly with touring shows as a singer and guitarist. For some years, he drifted around and worked on oilfields and railroad bridge building. He married Maude Neal in 1916. From 1920-22, he was a town marshal in Kansas and in the mid-20s, was working as a mechanic for a Chevrolet dealer. In 1932, after beginning to write songs seriously, he had his own show on KMBC Kansas City, Missouri, and also appeared on KMBC's Brush Creek Follies. In 1934, he made two recordings with a KMBC group, the Texas Rangers (who appeared on his show but were not his band) and four solo numbers including his now famous 'Cattle Call'. His show, which at times included his two daughters singing as Joy And Jane, proved so popular that it was networked by CBS and lasted on KMBC for over 11 years. It is possible that the show even appeared on early television broadcasts in 1932. Ten 1936 RCA-Victor recordings were unissued and seemingly are now lost. After KMBC, he starred on and co-hosted Boone County Jamboree in Cincinnati, before moving to KHJ Hollywood to do radio and film work. He broke his back when his horse fell on him during filming for the John Wayne film Red River (Owens spent over a year in hospital and later found that his scenes had been cut from the movie). He made his final four recordings in Hollywood in 1953-54, with backing that included his guitarist brother Charles. In 1960, he retired to his native state where he died at New Baden, on 9 September 1962. He wrote over 100 songs, and in 1971, he was posthumously elected to the Nashville Songwriters' Hall Of Fame. His song 'Cattle Call' has become a country standard, recorded by countless artists but none with more success than the million-selling RCA-Victor version made by Eddy Arnold in 1955. Owens' eldest daughter (as Laura Lee McBride) later became known for her vocal work with Bob Wills.

● COMPILATIONS: Tex Owens - Cattle Call (Bear Family 1994)★★★.

Owoh, Orlando

b. 1942, Owo, Oyo State, Nigeria. Guitarist, vocalist and composer 'Dr Ganja' Owoh is amongst the handful of Nigerian musicians who has remained within the highlife tradition throughout his career - even when the style was eclipsed by juju, apala and fuji and audiences and record sales dwindled. Playing in an acoustic style known as toye, he continues today to be popular with Yoruba audiences (although those audiences are of Owoh's own generation, with few younger people within them). He began playing professionally in the early 60s, as a percussionist, first with the Fakunle Major Band and then with Kehinde Adex. Moving to the capital, Lagos, in 1965, he learnt guitar from Fatai Rolling Dollar, and spent the years 1967-70 in the Nigerian army, then at war with the secessionist Biafran state. At the conclusion of the war, Owoh returned to music, forming his own Omimah Band and enjoying a sizeable local hit with the single 'Oriki Ilu Oke'. In 1976, now a major star throughout Western (Yoruba) Nigeria, he renamed the band the Young Kenneries. His last period of major success came in the early 80s, before the wholesale triumph of juju music, when he recorded a string of singles riddled with double entendres. However, much of the rest of that decade he spent imprisoned, but returned in the 90s with a tour of Nigerian communities in the UK.

● ALBUMS: In Great Britain (Decca West Africa 1972)★★★★, Okiki Ojo (Decca West Africa 1975)★★★, Easter Special (Decca West Africa 1977)★★★★, Money For Hand Back For Ground (Shana-Olu 1979)★★★, Ganja Part 2 (Shana-Olu 1981)★★★, In The Sixties (Decca 1983)★★★, Asotito Aiye (Shana-Olu 1984)★★★★, Foufou (Shana-Olu 1986)★★, Dr Ganja's Polytonality Blues (Original Music 1995)★★★.

Oxford, Vernon

b. 8 June 1941, Benton County, Arkansas, USA. Oxford comes from a musical, church-going family, and his father passed his fiddle-playing talent on to his son. He was given a guitar when he was 13 years old and has been singing country and country/gospel ever since. In 1964 he moved to Nashville with his wife, Loretta, and, after being turned down by several companies, RCA Records signed him, releasing a single and an album, both called 'Woman, Let Me Sing You A Song'. Oxford's recordings are a throwback to the rural honky-tonk sound of Hank Williams, with a voice to match, but he claims, 'I am being me. I sing a lot of Hank's songs but I never set out intentionally to imitate him. I guess we're both country boys and we both sing from the heart.' RCA dropped Oxford when his records did not sell, but a contingent of British fans lobbied RCA so hard that they reversed the decision. RCA released a UK double album in its Famous Country Music Makers series, although Oxford was anything but famous at the time. Oxford won more British fans with UK appearances, particularly at Wembley Country Music Festivals. He made the US country charts with 'The Shadows Of My Mind' and then, in 1976, with his controversial 'Redneck! (The Redneck National Anthem)', written by Mitchell Torok, and in the same vein, 'Redneck Roots' and 'A Good Old Fashioned Saturday Night Honky Tonk Barroom Brawl'. He also recorded a humorous duet with Jim Ed Brown called 'Mowing The Lawn'. He claims he just dreamed the words and music of his own songs, 'She's Always There' and 'Better Way Of Life'. Since 1977, Oxford has not had chart success in the USA, but that is not one of his objectives. He says, 'Going to church doesn't make you a Christian, and, in 1978, I was born again, even though I was a Baptist already'. However, Oxford, the subject of a BBC Television documentary, says, 'I do cheating songs but now I do them to represent what sin is: I use them to make a point about Jesus Christ. "Redneck!" shows what I used to be before I was saved. I sing gospel songs at the end of every show and tell them about the Truth. Sometimes I combine singing with preaching.

When I called a girl out of the audience once, the power of God knocked her down and she slithered like a snake across the floor. I have found peace and happiness and I would like to help others to find it too.'

● ALBUMS: Woman, Let Me Sing You A Song (RCA Victor 1967)★★★, By Public Demand (RCA 1975)★★★, America's Unknown Superstar (RCA 1976)★★★, I Just Want To Be A Country Singer (RCA 1976)★★★, Tribute To Hank Williams (Meteor 1978)★★★, Nobody's Child (1978)★★★, If I Had My Wife To Love Over (Rounder 1979)★★★, Keepin' It Country (1979)★★, I Love To Sing (1980)★★★, His And Hers (1980)★★, A Better Way Of Life (Minit 1981)★★, Pure Country (1982)★★★, The Tradition Continues (1983)★★, Power In The Blood (BBC 1989)★★, 100% Country (1990)★★★, The Gospel Truth (Rocade 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Famous Country Music Makers (RCA 1974)★★★, Twenty Of The Best (RCA 1984)★★★, Keeper Of The Flame 5-CD box set (Bear Family 1995)★★★★.

Oxley, Tony

b. 15 June 1938, Sheffield, Yorkshire, England. Oxley began to teach himself piano at the age of eight, and did not pursue the drums seriously until he was 17. During his National Service (1957-60) he studied drums and theory and for the following four years he led his own group in Sheffield. From 1963-67 he worked with Derek Bailey and bassist/composer Gavin Bryars in developing an abstract, freely improvised genre. In 1966 he moved to London, and was for some years in the house band at Ronnie Scott's club, backing many famous visiting musicians. He was also in Scott's octet, the Band, and worked with Howard Riley, Gordon Beck, Alan Skidmore, Mike Pyne and Barry Guy's London Jazz Composers Orchestra (LJCO). In 1970 he co-founded Incus Records with Evan Parker and Bailey and was a founder-member of the London Musicians' Co-operative, and from 1973 was an organizing tutor at the Barry Summer School in Wales. In the mid-70s he led his own band, Angular Apron, which included Riley, Guy and Dave Holdsworth. In 1978 he moved to East Germany, then (clandestinely) to West Germany in 1981, but has returned to the UK for concerts. He also plays in the trio SOH (with Skidmore and Ali Havrand), with Didier Levallet and in the Quartet. Since the late 80s he has been a regular associate of Cecil Taylor, playing in the pianist's Feel Trio and recording the Leaf Palm Hand duo with him at FMP's special Taylor festival in Berlin in 1988. His Celebration Orchestra comprised four brass players, six strings, piano and five drummers, but he enjoys small group improvising best: witness the excellence of the trio Coe, Oxley & Co. (with Tony Coe and Chris Laurence). Oxley is a highly skilled and versatile drummer whose fierce dedication to his music has gained him a reputation for being a difficult person to deal with. His playing is, however, that of a responsive and supportive colleague.

● ALBUMS: The Baptised Traveller (1969)★★★, Four Compositions For Sextet (1970)★★★, Ichnos (1971)★★★, with Alan Davie Duo (1974)★★★, Tony Oxley (Incus 1975)★★★★, February Papers (1977)★★★, Nutty (On) Willisau (1984)★★, with Phil Wachsmann The Glider And The Grinder (1987)★★, Tomorrow Is Here (1988)★★★, with Cecil Taylor Leaf Palm Hand (1989)★★★, The Tony Oxley Quartet (Incus 1993)★★★★.

Oysterband

The Oysterband entry was withdrawn at the suggestion of band member John James.

● ALBUMS: Jack's Alive (1980)★★, English Rock 'N' Roll - The Early Years 1800-1850 (Pukka 1982)★★★★, Lie Back And Think Of England (Pukka 1983)★★★, 20 Golden Tie-Slackeners (1984)★★★, Liberty Hall (Pukka 1985)★★★, Step Outside (Cooking Vinyl 1986)★★★, Wide Blue Yonder (Cooking Vinyl 1987)★★★, Freedom And Rain (Cooking Vinyl 1990)★★★, Deserters (Cooking Vinyl 1992)★★★★, Holy Bandits (Cooking Vinyl 1993)★★★, The Shouting End Of Life (Cooking Vinyl 1995)★★★, Deep Dark Ocean (Cooking Vinyl 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Trawler (Cooking Vinyl 1994)★★★★,

Oz

This Finnish heavy metal outfit was formed by The Oz (vocals) and Eero Hamalainen (guitar) in 1977. Complemented by Kari Elo (bass) and Tauno Vajavaara (drums), they adopted an approach that fused elements of Black Sabbath and Motörhead into a violent power-chord frenzy. It took five years before the band made their debut with The Oz, a heavy rock album that suffered from a low-budget production and weak vocals. Elo and Hamalainen were fired shortly after the album's release, with bassist Jay C. Blade and guitarists Speedy Foxx and Spooky Wolff recruited as replacements. The band relocated to Sweden and produced Fire In The Brain, a collection of tough and uncompromising power-metal songs not dissimilar to the work of Judas Priest. It served to bring them to the attention of RCA Records who offered them a European contract. The two albums that followed, however, were disappointing. Oz moved away from their metallic roots and experimented with a greater use of melody, and this approach did not suit. It came as no surprise when they lost their contract. Disillusioned, the band split up in 1987 before re-forming two years later (with no original members). Comprising Ape De Martini (vocals), Mark Ruffneck (drums), T.B. Muen (bass), Michael Loreda (guitar) and Mike Paul (guitar), they entered the studio to start work on new material in vain pursuit of former glories.

● ALBUMS: The Oz (Kraf 1982)★★, Fire In The Brain (Wave 1983)★★★, III Warning (RCA 1984)★★★, Decibel Storm (RCA 1986)★★★.

Ozark Jubilee, The

The show was the brainchild of four Springfield, Missouri men, led by a promoter named Ely E. 'Si' Siman, who was initially connected with KWTO Springfield radio. In the early 50s, KWTO broadcast country radio programmes and Siman recognized the potential success of a networked televised country show. When KYTV Springfield began to televise local country shows, Siman and his three associates, Ralph Foster, Lester Cox and John Mahaffey, formed Crossroads Television Productions, Inc. and gave up their interest in the purely local radio shows. On 26 December 1953, the first of the new televised shows was broadcast and the following year, Siman succeeded in talking Red Foley, an established Grand Ole Opry star in Nashville, into becoming the MC and star of the Springfield show. In September 1954, the show was transmitted from the Jewell Theatre, Springfield, back to KYTV's studio and then relayed from there. Siman soon succeeded in selling the show to ABC-TV and on 22 January 1955, part of it was broadcast live on that network. There were some initial transmission difficulties and for 22 Saturdays, the show was transmitted from KOMU Columbia, Missouri. In April 1955, the Jubilee returned to Springfield, where it ran until its final show in January 1961 (Red Foley's departure because of income tax problems with the IRS has been cited as one reason for the show's demise). It was then replaced by the Five Star Jubilee, a colour show, which made KYTV the first station outside of Los Angeles, Chicago and New York, to have a regular colour programme. It broadcast 29 shows from the Landers Theatre, Springfield, before the series ended. Many future stars benefited from their appearances on the Jubilee programme including Porter Wagoner, Bobby Lord, Wanda Jackson, Jean Shepard, Carl Smith and Billy Walker. Amusingly, Willie Nelson, then the frontman and bass guitarist in Ray Price's band (and washing dishes in a restaurant to help to eke out a living), was once told by the show's producers that he was 'not yet ready for national television'. The Ozark Jubilee, sometimes referred to as Jubilee USA, did not survive for as long as some of its contemporaries, nor did it ever attain the popularity of the Opry or the Louisiana Hayride, but it did establish its place in the history of country music by the fact that it was the first to be aired on network television. Siman died of cancer in Springfield on 16 December 1994.

Ozark Mountain Daredevils

One of country rock's more inventive exponents, the Ozark Mountain Daredevils featured the songwriting team of John Dillon (b. 6 February 1947, Stuttgart, Arkansas, USA; guitar, fiddle, vocals) and Steve Cash (b. 5 May 1946, Springfield, Missouri, USA; harmonica, vocals) with Randle Chowning (guitar, vocals), Buddy Brayfield (keyboards), Michael 'Supe' Granda (b. 24 December 1950, St. Louis, Missouri, USA; bass) and Larry Lee (b. 5 January 1947, Springfield, Missouri, USA; drums). The group were originally based in Springfield, Missouri. Their acclaimed debut album, recorded in London under the aegis of producer Glyn Johns, contained the US Top 30 single 'If You Want To Get To Heaven', while a second success, 'Jackie Blue', which reached number 3, came from the group's follow-up collection, It'll Shine When It Shines. Recorded at Chowning's ranch, this excellent set showcased the Ozarks' strong harmonies and intuitive musicianship, factors maintained on subsequent releases, The Car Over The Lake Album and Men From Earth. A 1978 release, It's Alive, fulfilled the group's obligation to A&M Records and two years later they made their debut on CBS. Paradoxically the Ozarks' subsequent work lacked the purpose of those early releases although the unit continues to enjoy a cult popularity. The group was reactivated in the late 80s by Dillon and Cash with Granda, Steve Canaday (b. 12 September 1944, Springfield, Missouri, USA; drums) and D. Clinton Thompson (guitar) and the resulting album, Modern History, released on the UK independent Conifer label, found the Ozarks with a new lease of life.

● ALBUMS: The Ozark Mountain Daredevils (A&M 1974)★★★, It'll Shine When It Shines (A&M 1974)★★★★, The Car Over The Lake Album (A&M 1975)★★★★, Men From Earth (A&M 1976)★★★, Don't Look Down (A&M 1977)★★, It's Alive (A&M 1978)★★, Ozark Mountain Daredevils (Columbia 1980)★★, Modern History (Request/Conifer 1990)★★★, 13 (New Era 1998)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The Ozark Mountain Daredevils (A&M 1983)★★★.

Ozone

Ozone were formed in Nashville, Tennessee, USA, in 1977 by three former members of the funk band the Endeavors, Benny Wallace, Jimmy Stewart and Charles Glenn. This trio recruited Thomas Bumpass, William White, Ray Woodard, Greg Hargrove and Paul Hines to lend them instrumental and vocal support. The group perfected a mix of up-tempo dance material and romantic ballads that was heavily influenced by the Commodores, and they were signed to the same record label as their mentors in 1979. Motown initially used Ozone as backing musicians for artists including Billy Preston and Syreeta, before allowing them to record the first in a series of low-key albums in 1980. The instrumental 'Walk On' brought them an initial taste of chart success, but like their subsequent black-music hits, it failed to cross over into the pop market.

● ALBUMS: Walk On (Motown 1980)★★★, Jump On It (Motown 1981)★★, Send It (Motown 1981)★★, Li'l Suzy (Motown 1982)★★, Glasses (Motown 1983)★★.

Ozone, Makoto

b. 1961, Kobe, Japan. Makoto is the son of one of Japan's best jazz pianists, Minoru Ozone. He started on the organ at the age of four and was later much impressed by the organ playing of Jimmy Smith. He took up the piano in his teens after hearing Oscar Peterson. Ozone has a prodigious technique and a wide knowledge of jazz piano styles. In 1980 he went to the USA to study composing and arranging at the Berklee College Of Music. He played a Carnegie Hall recital to open the Kool Jazz Festival of 1983. On Ozone's arrival at Berklee he immediately impressed Gary Burton and was playing regularly with his quartet in 1985 when he was also playing in a duo with Michel Petrucciani. Alongside his jazz activities he is studying classical piano playing. John Scofield joined Makoto's regular cohorts Kiyoshi Kitagawa and Clarence Penn on three tracks for 1997's Trio.

- ● ALBUMS: Makoto Ozone (1984)★★★, with Gary Burton Real Life Hits (ECM 1984)★★★, with Chuck Loeb My Shining Hour (1988)★★★, The Trio (Verve 1997)★★★.

Ozric Tentacles

Predominantly an 80s UK festival band, Ozric Tentacles was originally a name conjured up by the band for a psychedelic breakfast cereal. Their original line-up featured Ed Wynne (guitar), his brother Roly (bass), Nick 'Tig' Van Gelder (drums), Gavin Griffiths (guitar) and Joie 'Ozrooniculator' Hinton (keyboards). They met around an open campfire at Stonehenge in 1982. By the following year a second synthesizer player, Tom Brookes, had joined. They started gigging in clubs such as the 'Crypt' in Deptford, south-east London. There they met their second percussionist, Paul Hankin. They soon became regulars at another psychedelic 'head' venue, the Club Dog, at the George Robey pub in Finsbury Park, north London. The band's long existence has seen a number of shifts in personnel. In 1984 Griffiths left to form the Ullulators, and Brookes left a year later. Hinton remained but also played for the aforementioned Ullulators and the Oroonies. The next major change arrived in 1987 when Merv Pepler replaced Van Gelder. More recently Steve Everett has replaced Brookes on synthesizers, while Marcus Carcus and John Egan have added extra percussion and flute. Considering their lengthy career it might appear that the band have had a relatively sporadic, and recent, recording output. However, much of their work from the mid-80s onwards was made available on six cassette-only albums. Into the early 90s, with the British neo-hippy, new-age travellers receiving a higher media profile and their role in organizing music festivals becoming increasingly important, bands such as the Ozric Tentacles and the Levellers benefited greatly and began to widen their audience. Hinton and Pepler left the band in 1994 and devoted their energies to Eat Static full-time. New members Rad and Seaweed were featured on the meandering instrumental albums Become The Other and Curious Corn.

- ● ALBUMS: Erpsongs cassette only (Dovetail 1985)★★, Tantric Obstacles cassette only (Dovetail 1986)★★, Live Ethereal Cereal cassette only (Dovetail 1986)★★★, There Is Nothing cassette only (Dovetail 1986)★★★, Sliding Gliding Worlds cassette only (Dovetail 1988)★★★, The Bits Between The Bits cassette only (Dovetail 1989)★★, Pungent Effulgent (Dovetail 1989)★★★, Erpland (Dovetail 1990)★★★, Strangeitude (Dovetail 1991)★★★, Jurassic Shift (Dovetail 1993)★★★, Aborescence (Dovetail 1994)★★, Become The Other (Dovetail 1995)★★, Curious Corn (Snapper 1997)★★★.
- ● COMPILATIONS: Vitamin Enhanced 6-CD box set of the first six albums (Dovetail 1993)★★★.

Ozz

This American hard rock project was founded by vocalist Alexis T. Angel and guitarist Gregg Parker. Using session musicians to complete the band, they debuted with Prisoners in 1980. Produced by Andy Johns, Parker's guitarwork proved exemplary and provided the perfect foil for Angel's vocal acrobatics (comparisons to prime Led Zeppelin were frequently mooted). Parker then relocated to London in 1982 to form the short-lived Ninja, but interest in his former project remained strong enough to prompt the release of Exploited, a compilation of live material and studio outtakes.

- ● ALBUMS: Prisoners (Epic 1980)★★★, Exploited (Streamline 1983)★★.

P

P

This US celebrity rock band was formed by actor Johnny Depp and Gibby Haines of the Butthole Surfers in 1995. Depp, a film superstar of the 90s through films such as Edward Scissorhands and Benny And Joon, had previously played on Shane MacGowan And The Popes' debut album and had associated with several rock stars. He had actually harboured dreams of his own band ever since running away from home in Florida as a teenager, moving to Los Angeles in the hope of finding a deal for his then band. His ambitions were realised when Depp met Haines through a mutual friend, Sal Jenco, at the Viper Room actor's club (owned by Depp). Jenco became the band's drummer, with Depp on vocals and bass, Haines on lead vocals and Bill Carter on guitar and bass. Their debut album was produced by Andrew Weiss (ex-Henry Rollins Band, currently of Ween) at Oceanway Studios in Los Angeles. The first single was 'Michael Stipe', a tribute to the R.E.M. leader featuring the lyrics 'I finally got to meet Michael Stipe/He touched my arm'. Also included was a cover version of Abba's 'Dancing Queen', on which Depp played sitar. After recording, however, Haines returned to work with the Butthole Surfers, leaving P's long term future in doubt.

● ALBUMS: P (Capitol 1995)★★★.

P.O.W.E.R.

Their initials standing for People Oppressed by the World's Empire Ruling elite, it would not take genre commentators long to predict a similarity in style and presentation to Consolidated. POWER too deal in doses of polemic rap spliced with heavy rhythmic surges and undulations. The group comprises Krys Kills and Che 'Minister Of Defence' - a rapper and DJ respectively who met while studying law at college in Portland, Oregon. Their debut single 'Racemixer' emerged on Nettwerk/Play It Again Sam Records, as did a follow-up album crammed with message-lyrics like 'Geurilla Warfare' and 'Modern Day Slavery'.

● ALBUMS: Dedicated To World Revolution (Nettwerk 1994)★★★.

Pablo

b. Pablo Lubadika Porthos, 1952, Inongo, Zaire. Vocalist and guitarist Pablo first came to the attention of European African music enthusiasts in the early 80s, following the release of Island Records' soukous compilation album, Sound D'Afrique, and the tracks 'Mbanda' and 'Madeleina'. By this time he was already a major star in Zaire, having worked during the 70s with such bands as Orchestre Kara, Kim Bantous and Lovy Du Zaire. He was also featured on Sam Mangwana's first major hit, 'Georgette Eckins'. Having been invited to join Les Quatre Etoiles in 1984, he declined, preferring to pursue a solo career as a vocalist, and a session career as a guitarist. His first UK release was Pablo Pablo Pablo in 1985, but afterwards he would concentrate almost exclusively on session work in Paris.

● ALBUMS: Idie (AMR 1981)★★★, Concentration (Syllart 1982)★★★, Revient En Force (COSIC 1983)★★★, En Action (Darl 1984), Pablo Pablo Pablo (Globestyle 1985)★★★, with Tutu Safula (BIZ 1987)★★★.

Pablo Cruise

Formed in 1973, this San Francisco-based group was founded when two ex-members of Stoneground, Cory Lerois (b. California, USA; keyboards) and Steve Price (b. California, USA; drums), were joined by Dave Jenkins (b. Florida, USA; guitar) and Bud Cockrell (b. Missouri, USA; bass) from It's A Beautiful Day. Pablo Cruise enjoyed critical acclaim for its astute blend of rich, jazz-influenced textures and accomplished instrumental work and while Lifeline enhanced this reputation, the quartet reaped commercial rewards when 'Whatcha Gonna Do?' from A Place In The Sun reached number 6 in the US singles chart. 'Love Will Find A Way' achieved the same position the following year, while promoting Worlds Away into the US Top 10, while 'Don't Want To Live Without It' also entered the Top 30 as the group adroitly added elements of disco to an already cosmopolitan approach. Former Santana bassist Bruce Day joined the group for Part Of The Game, replacing Cockrell, but he in turn was supplanted by John Pierce and second guitarist Angelo Rossi. Although Reflector, a collaboration with veteran R&B producer Tom Dowd, generated another hit in 'Cool Love', Pablo Cruise was increasingly viewed as moribund in the wake of the 'new wave'. Internal problems led to further wholesale changes and a period of inactivity followed the release of Out Of Our Hands, after which the line-up reverted to that of the original quartet.

● ALBUMS: Pablo Cruise (A&M 1975)★★, Lifeline (A&M 1976)★★★, A Place In The Sun (A&M 1977)★★, Worlds Away (A&M 1978)★★★, Part Of The Game (A&M 1979)★★, Reflector (A&M 1981)★★, Out Of Our Hands (A&M 1983)★★.

Pablo Gad

In 1977 Pablo Gad was introduced to Joe Sinclair by his benefactor Winston Fergus. Sinclair had set up the Klik label following his departure from Trojan Records with a view to releasing authentic Jamaican sounds. Both Fergus and Gad were British-based but were able to maintain an appeal within the roots market. Fergus was the lead singer of the Equators who provided the backing to Gad's debut recordings. Surfacing on the Caribbean subsidiary, 'International Dread' and 'Kunte Kinte' enhanced his position as a top vocalist. In 1978 Gad emerged with the classic 'Blood Suckers', which surfaced through Clement Bushay's Burning Sounds empire. From the opening bars this rhythm was destined to last, and was enhanced by Gad's vocals, with his delivery reminiscent of Fred Locks. Further singles surfaced through Bushay, including 'Natty Loving', 'Trafalgar Square', 'Throw Your Dreams' and 'Riddle I Dis'. The success of 'Blood Suckers' overshadowed his later output which probably inspired the revival of the rhythm for 'Hard Time'. The outcome was another smash hit that has become an anthem for revival DJs. 1980 was a prolific year when a successful run of hits encompassed 'Guns Fever', 'Nursery Rhyme', 'Oh Jah' and 'Fly Away Home'. Pablo Gad continues to record in the 90s, including the self-penned 'Johnny Reggae' and the haunting 'Lash On My Back', the latter being featured on the Brixton-based Lion Roots compilation.

● ALBUMS: Trafalgar Square (Burning Rockers 1980)★★★, Hard Time (Form 1980)★★★★, Life Without Death (Reggae On Top 1993)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (Reggae On Top 1993)★★★★.

Pablo Honey - Radiohead

Before the breakthrough that was The Bends and the colossal OK Computer, there was the quietly magnificent Pablo Honey. 'Creep' was the surprise hit single in the UK, but even that gave scant indication of how 'fuckin' special' this band would become. Benefiting from a raw production, the debut was undoubtedly less slick and accomplished than subsequent work, although Thom Yorke's vulnerable but impressive vocal styling was already in place on songs such as 'Stop Whispering'. Many of the compositions were somewhat simplistic, but in terms of musical maturity Radiohead were years ahead of their time. An indispensable album, it should not be parted from its two big brothers.

● Tracks: You; Creep; How Do You?; Stop Whispering; Thinking About You; Anyone Can Play Guitar; Ripcord; Vegetable; Prove Yourself; I Can't; Lurgee; Blow Out.

● First released 1993

● UK peak chart position: 25

● USA peak chart position: 32

Pablo, Augustus

b. Horace Swaby, *c.*1954, St. Andrew, Jamaica, West Indies. Pablo was responsible for putting the humble melodica on the musical map when one day in 1969, he walked into Herman Chin-Loy's Aquarius Records shop clutching the instrument, and was taken to Randy's studio the following day to cut his first record, 'Iggy Iggy'. His next release for the same producer was the prototype 'Far East' sound of 'East Of The River Nile'. Moving from Chin-Loy to Clive Chin as his new producer at Randy's, the next single, 'Java', proved to be Pablo's biggest, and one of his most influential. Chin later worked on the classic instrumental set This Is Augustus Pablo, on which Pablo played a number of lead keyboard instruments. He worked with other producers at this time, cutting 'Lovers Mood' for Leonard Chin, 'Hot And Cold' with Lee Perry, and others for Gussie Clarke, Keith Hudson and Bunny Lee. Dissatisfied with the financial and artistic arrangements with the producers, Pablo set up his own label named Rockers, after the sound system he and his brother Garth operated. His first releases were a mixture of new versions of old Studio One rhythms - 'Skanking Easy' (from 'Swing Easy') and 'Frozen Dub' (from 'Frozen Soul'), plus original compositions 'Cassava Piece', '555 Crown Street' and 'Pablo's Theme Song'. King Tubby Meets Rockers Uptown is regarded by many as one of the finest dub albums of all time. It contains dubwise versions of most of Pablo's productions, mixed by the legendary independent studio engineer King Tubby. Other artists have benefitted from Pablo's skills as a producer, notably Jacob Miller, Hugh Mundell and Tetrack. Pablo was also in demand as a session musician and played on countless recordings throughout the 70s. East Of The River Nile in 1978 remains his most compelling instrumental set after This Is Augustus Pablo. On this release, Pablo and his Rockers All Stars band, featuring guitarist Earl 'Chinna' Smith, created vast landscapes of rhythmic sound awash with Pablo's string synthesizer and melodica. The sound bore the unmistakable production stamp of Lee Perry's Black Ark studios.

The early 80s saw Pablo floundering somewhat in the early throes of the dancehall revolution, though he later rallied with his production of Junior Delgado's 'Raggamuffin Year' single and album in 1986. Since then he has released a number of recordings with varying degrees of artistic success, both of his own music and that of artists such as Yammie Bolo, Icho Candy, Delroy Williams, Norris Reid and Blacka T. Ironically, he has managed to adapt to the new computerized technology, which many of his fans blame for what they see as the decline in musicianship in reggae music in the 80s and 90s. A withdrawn slip of a man, often in ill health, Pablo's music has, at its best, always reflected a humility and inner peace. Although most critics agree his influential and commercially successful period was over by the end of the 70s, his 1990 instrumental set Blowing With The Wind was his best since East Of The River Nile, and belied criticisms of artistic demise.

● ALBUMS: This Is Augustus Pablo (Tropical 1974)★★★★, Thriller (Tropical/Nationwide 1975)★★★, Ital Dub (Trojan 1975)★★★, King Tubby Meets Rockers Uptown (Clocktower 1976)★★★★, East Of The River Nile (Message 1978)★★★★, Africa Must Be Free By 1983 Dub (Greensleeves 1979)★★★, Dubbing In A Africa same tracks as Thriller (Abraham 1979)★★★, Earths Rightful Ruler (Message 1982)★★★, Rockers Meet King Tubby In A Fire House (Shanachie 1982)★★★, King David's Melody (Alligator 1983)★★★, Rising Sun (Greensleeves 1986)★★★, East Man Dub (Greensleeves 1988)★★★, Rockers Comes East (Greensleeves 1988)★★★, Blowing With The Wind (Greensleeves 1990)★★★, with Junior Delgado Raggamuffin Dub (Rockers International 1990)★★★, with Delgado One Step Dub (Greensleeves 1990)★★★, Heartical Chant (Rockers International 1992)★★★, Pablo And Friends (1992)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Original Rockers (Greensleeves 1979)★★★★, Original Rockers 2 (Greensleeves 1989)★★★, Authentic Golden Melodies (Rockers International 1992)★★★, Augustus Pablo Presents DJs From 70s To 80s (Big Cat 1997)★★★★.

Pacheco, Johnny

b. 25 March 1935, Santiago De Los Caballeros, Dominican Republic. The son of bandleader Rafael Azarias Pacheco, Johnny became a musician at an early age. He was 11 years old when his family emigrated to New York. While at school, he played tambora (a double-headed Dominican drum) at weekends with the meringue group of Dioris Valladares. He learnt to play the saxophone at school and formed a group called the Chuchulecos Boys with trombonist Barry Rogers, who later achieved fame with Eddie Palmieri's band La Perfecta. Johnny later worked with artists such as Pérez Prado, Xavier Cugat and Tito Puente. In 1959 Charlie Palmieri encountered Pacheco playing flute at the Monte Carlo Ballroom in New York and recruited him to his band. Johnny initially played timbales, but when trumpeter Mario Cora departed to live in Puerto Rico, Pacheco took over on flute. He appeared on the 1960 debut album, Let's Dance The Charanga!, by Palmieri's flute, strings, rhythm section and voices band, Charanga 'La Duboney', on the United Artists label, which was reissued under the title Echoes Of An Era. The two musicians parted company in 1960. Most accounts have highlighted 'musical differences', but Latin music historian Max Salazar gives another perspective: '. . . this red-hot charanga (flute and violin) band was in great demand as its name began to appear on posters for two and three dances on the same evening. (Palmieri and Pacheco booked the gigs in different parts of town.) The dancers let Charlie know that they felt robbed and the high price of tickets entitled them to his band for an entire evening. When Palmieri decided that he alone would book the band, Pacheco left to form his own charanga band . . .' (quote from article 'Remembering Charlie Palmieri', 1989).

Pacheco debuted with his own band in 1960 on Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. I, which was the first album released on the Alegre label, founded by Al Santiago. The record was a best seller and contained the smash hit 'El Güiro De Macorina', which shot to the top of the Farándula New York chart in February 1961. Johnny and his charanga band issued a further four volumes on Alegre. His lead singers included Elliot Romero, Rudy Calzado and Pete 'El Conde' Rodríguez, who joined on volume four. Pacheco's was the most successful band during the charanga and pachanga craze from 1960-64. In 1961, Johnny played flute with the Alegre All-Stars on their first descarga (latin jam session) album. ' . . . I cut my own throat', said Al Santiago in a 1989 interview, 'when the album came out and I named Charlie (Palmieri) as leader of the Alegre All-Stars - Pacheco from that point down didn't want to have anything to do with the Alegre All-Stars. That's why he was never on any other album except the first.'

Pacheco befriended Jerry Masucci (b. 1935, Brooklyn, New York, USA), an Italian-American lawyer who had dealt with his divorce. When Masucci became aware that Johnny was discontented with his record company, he proposed that they form their own label. With an initial investment of five thousand dollars, they founded Fania Records in 1964. For the first release on the label, Cañonazo, Pacheco dropped flute and violins and adopted the Cuban conjunto format of trumpets, rhythm section and voices, calling the band his Nuevo Tumbao (New Rhythm). He switched to timbales. Despite some fellow musicians' viewpoint that the new group's sound was a copy of Sonora Matancera, Pacheco's 'new' sound was a huge success. The lead singer on Cañonazo was Pete Rodríguez, who also sang lead vocals on eight out of the 13 other titles Pacheco released between 1964 and 1973. Nuevo Tumbao's other vocalists and accompanists included Monguito, Chivirico Dávila, and pianist/arranger Héctor Rivera. For the 1965 descarga album, Pacheco His Flute And Latin Jam, Johnny assembled a group of veteran and young musicians, including Lino Frías (piano), Carlos 'Caito' Diaz (vocals), Barry Rogers (trombone), Bobby Valentín (trumpet), Pupi Legarreta (violin), Orestes Vilato (timbales, see Típica 73), Carlos 'Patato' Valdés (conga) and Osvaldo 'Chi Hua Hua' Martínez (güiro). Cuban saxophonist José 'Chombo' Silva, a participant on the first two Panart Cuban Jam Session volumes in 1956, was also involved. Chombo later said that the cut 'Sugar Frost (Azucare)' was one of his favourite recordings. Max Salazar cited this track and 'Echate Pa' Ila' from Chi Hua Hua's Descarga Cubana Vol.1 (1966) on the Fonseca label, as two of the most notable descargas. Pacheco guested on the Tico All-Stars descarga albums recorded at New York's Village Gate in 1966. He became the musical director of the Fania All Stars in 1968 and made his only UK appearance (to date) with them in 1976.

In the early Fania days, Pacheco and Masucci made their own deliveries to the record stores. Johnny scouted for talent and acted as recording director. Jerry initially looked after administration in addition to running his law firm, but within three years, he had devoted himself full-time to the label. At the beginning of the 70s, the Fania subsidiary, Vaya Records, was launched, and by the middle of the decade, the rival labels of Inca, Cotique, Tico and Alegre had been swallowed up. Their roster included an impressive array of stars like Willie Colón, Ray Barretto, Celia Cruz, Tito Puente and Rubén Blades. In 1975, Fania accounted for more than 80 per cent of all salsa record sales in the USA and as well as owning a recording studio and a Seventh Avenue headquarters in Manhattan, having a pressing plant in Puerto Rico, sponsoring shows on seven radio stations nationally and making two movies on the Latin music scene (Our Latin Thing (Nuestra Cosa) in 1972, and Salsa in 1976), Fania's interests in magazines and nightclubs, along with production and distribution deals with Columbia and Atlantic Records, helped to make Fania the biggest salsa labels of all time.

Johnny began a successful collaboration with Celia Cruz in 1974 on Celia & Johnny. They released a further five albums together up to 1985. In 1975, smoky-voiced, Afro-Cuban singer Héctor Casanova replaced El Conde on Pacheco's El Maestro. He appeared on two other records with Johnny before issuing the solo albums Casanova (1980), Montuno Y Las Muchachas (1983) and Solido (1986). Previously, he recorded En Una Nota! in 1974 with Monguito Santamaría (son of Mongo Santamaría (b. 1946, Havana, Cuba; bandleader/pianist/composer/arranger). Pacheco released a series of albums on which he teamed up with veteran Latin stars like Pupi Legarreta (violin/flute), songwriters Angel Luis Silva 'Melón' (b. Mexico; vocals) and Daniel Santos (b. Puerto Rico; vocals), Celio González (b. Cuba; vocals), José Fajardo (flute) and Rolando La Serie (b. Cuba; vocals). La Serie had recorded previously with the bands of Ernesto Duarte, Bebo Valdés, Tito Puente, Porfi Jiménez and Rafael Cortijo. At the beginning of the 80s, Fania went into decline. Masucci sold the company to the Argentinian firm of Val Syn, but retained a consultancy role. During the remainder of the decade, a procession of artists departed to other labels and releases slowed to a trickle. Meanwhile, Pacheco engaged in 'extra-curricular' work for other labels, with artists such as Santiago Ceron, Israel 'Kantor' Sardiñas, Los Guaracheros de Oriente, Héctor Casanova, Lefty Pérez and Melcochita. Johnny and El Conde reunited to make four more albums between 1983 and 1989. Their 1987 release Salsobita was nominated for a Grammy Award. Pacheco appeared twice in the UK BBC 2 Arena television series in 1988: first in the film profile My Name Is Celia Cruz and then in a Rhythms Of The World programme devoted to concert footage of Celia teamed up with Tito Puente's big band (with Pacheco as a special guest) recorded at New York's Apollo Theater in 1987. Pacheco can be seen conducting and performing with the Fania All Stars in Zaire in 1974 on the UK video release Salsa Madness (1991).

● ALBUMS: Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. I (1960)★★★★, Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. II (1961)★★★, with the charangas of Charlie Palmieri and José Fajardo Las Charangas (1961)★★★★, Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. III: Que Suene La Flauta (1962)★★★, Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. IV 'Suav'ito' (1963)★★★, Pacheco y su Charanga Vol. V: Spotlight On Pacheco (1964)★★★, Cañonazo (1964)★★★, Pacheco At The N. Y. World's Fair (1964)★★, Pacheco te Invita a Bailar (1965)★★★, Pacheco His Flute And Latin Jam (1965)★★★★, Viva Africa (1966)★★★, Pacheco y su Charanga - By Popular Demand (1966)★★★, Sabor Tipico (1967)★★★, Latin Piper (1968)★★★, Volando Bajito (1968)★★★, La Perfecta Combinación (1970)★★★, Los Compadres (1971)★★★, with Justo Betancourt Los Dinamicos (1971)★★, Tres de Café y Dos de Azúcar (1973)★★★, with Celia Cruz Celia & Johnny (1974)★★★, with Cruz Tremendo Caché (1975)★★★, El Maestro (1975)★★★, with Cruz, Justo Betancourt and Papo Lucca Recordando El Ayer (1976)★★★, The Artist (1977)★★★, with Pupi Legarreta Los Dos Mosqueteros - The Two Musketeers (1977)★★★, with Angel Luis 'Melón' Silva Llegó Melón (1977)★★★, with Cruz Eternos (1978)★★★, Los Amigos (1979)★★★, with Daniel Santos Los Distinguidos (1979)★★, with Legarreta, José Fajardo and Javier Vázquez Las Tres Flautas (1980)★★★, with Cruz and Pete 'El Conde' Rodríguez Celia, Johnny and Pete (1980)★★★, with Celio González El Zorro De Plata Presenta Al Flaco De Oro (1981)★★★, with Fajardo Pacheco y Fajardo (1982)★★★, with Rolando La Serie De Pelicula (1982)★★★, with Rodríguez De Nuevo Los Compadres (1983)★★★, with Silva Flying High (1984)★★★, with Cruz De Nuevo (1985)★★★, with Rodríguez Jicamo (1985)★★★, with Rodríguez Salsobita (1987)★★★★, with Rodríguez Celebración (1989)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: (by Pacheco and his charanga) Habia Una Vez/Once Upon A Time (1973)★★★★, Lo Mejor de/The Best of Pacheco (1974)★★★★; (with his conjunto) 10 Great Years (1971)★★★★, The Champ (1980)★★★. Introducing...Johnny Pacheco (1989)★★★.

Pacheco, Tom

b. 4 November 1948, Massachusetts, USA. Pacheco's father, Tony, had played guitar, in Europe, with Django Reinhardt. He later moved to a farm in Massachusetts, where he also owned a music store and taught guitar. Tom started playing guitar at the age of 10, studying both Flamenco and classical styles whilst in high school. Leaving home at the age of 16, and already writing his own songs, he moved into the Greenwich Village scene in New York during the 60s. Gradually he emerged into the non-traditional country field of music, his early albums for RCA and CBS not being too well received. During the late 70s, Pacheco turned towards rock 'n' roll, his song 'All Fly Away' being recorded by Jefferson Starship as the title track of their Dragonfly album. Spending 1982/3 playing, and living, in Austin, Texas, Pacheco continued to build a following for himself. He then spent two years in Woodstock, before moving to Nashville in 1986. The following year he moved to Oldcastle, County Meath, Eire, and then to Dublin. It was while there Eagle In The Rain was recorded, which contained the excellent 'You Will Not Be Forgotten', and 'Jesus In A Leather Jacket'. Apart from being produced by Arty McGlynn, of Patrick Street fame, the album brought Pacheco some overdue critical acclaim. Appearances at the Cambridge Folk Festival in 1990, and sharing the bill with Townes Van Zandt at the Berlin Independence Day celebrations in September 1990, and numerous UK appearances, have all helped to circulate his music to a wider audience. Big Storm Coming recorded with the Norwegian Steinar Albrigtsen, had, by June 1993, sold some 35,000 copies in Norway, and topped the Norwegian album charts, outselling acts such as Guns N'Roses.

● ALBUMS: Pacheco And Alexander (CBS 1969)★★★, Swallowed Up In The Great American Heartland (RCA 1973)★★, The Outsider (RCA 1977)★★★, Eagle In The Rain (Round Tower Music 1989)★★★★, Sunflowers And Scarecrows (Round Tower Music 1991)★★★, Tales From The Red Lake (Round Tower Music 1992)★★★, with Steinar Albrigtsen Big Storm Coming (Round Tower Music 1993)★★★.

Pacific Drift

This UK group, formed in the late 60s, comprised Barry Reynolds (guitar/vocals), Brian Shapman (keyboards/vocals), Graham Harrop (bass) and Lawrence Arendes aka Larry King (drums). King, formerly of Liverpool's Wimple Winch, founded this new quartet from the ashes of Sponge, a jazz-rock unit which imploded when saxophonist Jack Lancaster left in 1968 to join Blodwyn Pig. The quartet's debut single, a version of Spirit's 'Water Woman', was followed by a self-titled album, on the Decca/Nova label, in 1970. However, although they appeared live at the requisite underground haunts and festivals, Pacific Drift were unable to sustain a career and split up by the end of the year.

● ALBUMS: Pacific Drift (Deram 1970)★★★.

Pacific Gas And Electric

Formed in Los Angeles, California, USA, in 1968, Pacific Gas And Electric was a quintet that merged blues, gospel, soul, jazz and rock. The members were Charlie Allen (vocals), Glenn Schwartz (lead guitar), Thomas Marshall (rhythm guitar), Brent Black (bass) and Frank Cook (drums), the latter an alumnus of Canned Heat. The group's first album, Get It On, was initially issued on the small Bright Orange label and then reissued on the band's own Power Records, scraping into the charts at number 159. An appearance at the Miami Pop Festival in December 1968 was considered a highlight of that event and the group came to the attention of Columbia Records, who subsequently signed them. A self-titled album was released on Columbia in August 1969 and fared somewhat better, reaching number 91. The group's third album, Are You Ready, did not fare as well, reaching only number 101, but it did yield their only hit single in the title track, a gospel-influenced rocker that climbed to number 14 in mid-1970. One other album and a couple of further singles were issued but by 1971 the group was in disarray. Various personnel changes, including the addition of a horn section, left Allen the only original member by 1973, when the group's final album was issued on Dunhill Records.

● ALBUMS: Get It On (Bright Orange/B&C 1968)★★★, Pacific Gas And Electric (CBS 1969)★★★, Are You Ready (CBS 1970)★★, Hard Burn (CBS 1971)★★, PG&E (1971)★★, Pacific Gas And Electric, Starring Charlie Allen (1973)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of (1985)★★★.

Pacific Overtures

Sometimes known as Stephen Sondheim's 'kabuki musical', this ambitious production opened at the Winter Garden, New York, on 11 January 1976. The book was by John Weidman, a student of law at Yale University. It traced the history of Japan from 1852, when naval officer Commander Matthew Perry, and four warships, attempted to establish 'friendly' relations with a 'isolated and peaceful country', through a period of some 120 years of continual change, culminating in the country's emergence as a dominant trading force in the western world. The story was told in an imaginative and original manner, with every aspect of the production heavily influenced by the traditional form of Japanese Kabuki theatre. Most of Sondheim's music was written in the Japanese pentatonic scale, and his lyrics used extremely simple language, with very few rhymes. The songs included 'Pretty Lady', 'Four Black Dragons', "There Is No Other Way', 'Chrysanthemum Tea', 'Please Hello', 'A Bowler Hat', 'Welcome To Kanagawa', 'Someone In A Tree', 'Next'. 'The Advantages Of Floating In The Middle Of The Sea', and 'Poems'. The actors, who included Mako, Soon-Teck Oh, Yukis Shimoda, and Sab Shimono, were all Asians, even those who played Americans. Director Hal Prince was prominent among the show's several Tony Award nominees for his staging of a project that was both daring and completely different from anything Broadway had seen in living memory, but the only winners were Florence Klotz (costumes) and Boris Aronson (scenic design). The show also won the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for best musical. It ran for 193 performances, and was presented in a revised, small-scale version Off Broadway in 1984, and in a far more lavish Paul Kerryson production at England's Leicester Haymarket Theatre in 1993.

Paddy, Klaus And Gibson

Formed in 1965, this Liverpool-based 'supergroup' featured Paddy Chambers (lead guitar; ex-Big Three and Escorts), Klaus Voorman (bass) and Gibson Kemp (drums; ex-Kingsize Taylor And The Dominoes). Their three singles included a version of Marvin Gaye's 'No Good Without You Baby' and the theme song to British television's Quick Before They Catch Us, but despite the patronage of Beatles' manager Brian Epstein, the trio failed to secure commercial success. Plans by Pete Townshend to amalgamate the group with part of the Who fell apart when tribulations within the latter act were settled. Paddy, Klaus And Gibson embarked on separate careers late in 1966 with Voorman securing subsequent fame as the illustrator of the Beatles' Revolver album cover and also as a member of Manfred Mann and the Plastic Ono Band.

Page, Cleo

Very much one of the mystery men of the blues, this singer/guitarist caused a minor stir in the 70s with his powerful, raw blues records which were issued on small Los Angeles labels including Goodie Train and Las Vegas. In 1979 JSP Records released enough material for an album which was described by Jim DeKoster in Living Blues as 'one of the most striking blues albums of the past year', but Page remains elusive. His music is tough, no-nonsense, mostly original blues, with sometimes startling lyrics; although JSP also issued a more contemporary-sounding risqué single entitled 'Hamburger-I Love To Eat It', which was not on the album.

● ALBUMS: Leaving Mississippi (JSP 1979)★★★.

Page, Jimmy

b. James Patrick Page, 9 January 1944, Heston, Middlesex, England. One of rock's most gifted and distinctive guitarists, Page began his professional career during the pre-beat era of the early 60s. He was a member of several groups, including Neil Christian's Crusaders and Carter Lewis And The Southerners, the latter of which was led by the popular songwriting team Carter And Lewis. Page played rousing solos on several releases by Carter/Lewis protégés, notably the McKinleys' 'Sweet And Tender Romance', and the guitarist quickly became a respected session musician. He appeared on releases by Lulu, Them, Tom Jones and Dave Berry, as well as scores of less renowned acts, but his best-known work was undertaken for producer Shel Talmy. Page appeared on sessions for the Kinks and the Who, joining an élite band of young studio musicians who included Nicky Hopkins, John Paul Jones and Bobby Graham. The guitarist completed a solo single, 'She Just Satisfies', in 1965, and although it suggested a frustration with his journeyman role, he later took up an A&R position with Immediate Records, where he produced singles for Nico and John Mayall. Having refused initial entreaties, Page finally agreed to join the Yardbirds in 1966 and he remained with this groundbreaking attraction until its demise two years later. The guitarist then formed Led Zeppelin, with whom he forged his reputation. His propulsive riffs established the framework for a myriad of tracks - 'Whole Lotta Love', 'Rock 'N' Roll', 'Black Dog', 'When The Levee Breaks' and 'Achilles Last Stand' - now established as rock classics, while his solos have set benchmarks for a new generation of guitarists. His acoustic technique, featured on 'Black Mountain Side' and 'Tangerine', is also notable, while his work with Roy Harper, in particular on Stormcock (1971), was also among the finest of his career. Page's recordings since Led Zeppelin's dissolution have largely been ill-focused. He contributed the soundtrack to Michael Winner's film Death Wish II, while the Firm, a collaboration with Paul Rodgers, formerly of Free and Bad Company, was equally disappointing. However, a 1988 release, Outrider, did much to re-establish his reputation, with contributions from Robert Plant, Chris Farlowe and Jason Bonham, the son of Zeppelin's late drummer, John. The guitarist then put considerable effort into remastering that group's revered back-catalogue. Coverdale/Page was a successful but fleeting partnership with the former Whitesnake singer in 1993, but it was his reunion with Robert Plant for the Unledded project, and an album of new material in 1998, that really captured the public's imagination.

● ALBUMS: Death Wish II film soundtrack (Swan Song 1982)★★, with Roy Harper Whatever Happened To Jugula (Beggars Banquet 1985)★★★, Outrider (Geffen 1988)★★, with David Coverdale Coverdale/Page (EMI 1993)★★★, with Robert Plant Unledded/No Quarter (Fontana 1994)★★★★, with Plant Walking Into Clarksdale (Atlantic 1998)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Jam Session (Charly 1982)★★, No Introduction Necessary (Thunderbolt 1984)★★, Smoke And Fire (Thunderbolt 1985)★★.

● FURTHER READING: Mangled Mind Archive: Jimmy Page, Adrian T'Vell.

Page, Larry

b. Leonard Davies, c.1938, Hayes, Middlesex, England. While working as a packer at the nearby EMI Records factory, Davies auditioned for his record company and was duly signed. After changing his name to Larry Page in honour of Larry Parks, the star of The Jolson Story, the teenager began a brief recording career. Dubbed 'the Teenage Rage' by showbusiness columnist Jack Bentley, Page lived up to his sobriquet with a series of exploits, including a whirlwind romance with a fan leading to a much publicized marriage. With his sharp suits, blue-tinted hair and monotone croon, Page was an unlikely pop star but became one of the first UK performers to cover a Buddy Holly song with 'That'll Be The Day'. After retiring from performance at the end of the 50s, Page joined Mecca Enterprises as a consultant manager and ran the Orchid ballroom in Coventry. This led to a meeting with music publisher Eddie Kassner and the formation of Denmark Productions. With a deal whereby he could select and manage acts, Page launched a selection of minor talent, including Johnny B. Great, the Orchids, Little Lenny Davis and Shel Naylor.

In 1964 Page was approached by two society gentlemen, Robert Wace and Grenville Collins, and offered the chance to co-manage a north London group known as the Ravens. Page rechristened them the Kinks, helped fashion their image and prevented their imminent dissolution following a notorious quarrel between Dave Davies and Mick Avory, in which the former was hospitalized. An unsatisfactory US tour culminated in a dispute between Page and Ray Davies that festered into a High Court action. Recovering his poise, he promoted a couple of other groups, the Pickwicks and the Riot Squad, before finding another hit artist in the Troggs. On this occasion, Page not only signed the group to a management deal but produced their records and made them the leading lights of Page One (the record company he had formed with publisher Dick James). Remarkably, his association with the Troggs ended in another High Court action yet, in spite of his litigious history, Page was never regarded as one of the unscrupulous managers of the 60s. His name was well-known during this period, not only because of frequent appearances in print but the instrumental albums his label released under the self-referential title the Larry Page Orchestra. When Page One ceased operating in the early 70s, Dick James went on to found DJM Records while Larry formed the inauspicious Penny Farthing label. Page rewrote history to some extent in the 70s/80s when he briefly regained managerial control of both the Troggs and the Kinks.

● ALBUMS: Kinky Music (Decca 1965)★★★, Executive Suite (Page One 1968)★★, From Larry With Love (Page One 1968)★★, Larry Page Orchestra (Page One 1969)★★, Rampage (1978)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: This Is Larry Page (1974)★★.

Page, Martin

b. Southampton, Hampshire, England. A proficient and prolific songwriter, Page moved to the USA with his band Q-Feel in the 90s. When that group failed to secure commercial recognition, Page concentrated on his rock/pop songwriting in Los Angeles. His songs were successfully recorded by Go West, Starship ('We Built This City') and Heart ('These Dreams'), among others. The success prompted Robbie Robertson, a frequent collaborator and co-writer, to suggest that Page record a solo album. In The House Of Stone And Light became a fixture of the burgeoning adult contemporary radio format when it was released by Mercury Records in 1995 and further established the artist's songwriting prowess.

● ALBUMS: In The House Of Stone And Light (Mercury 1995)★★★.

Page, Oran 'Hot Lips'

b. 27 January 1908, Dallas, Texas, USA, d. 5 November 1954. In the 20s Page played trumpet mostly in his home state but also toured in bands accompanying some of the best of the day's blues singers, among them Ma Rainey, Bessie Smith and Ida Cox. Towards the end of the 20s Page joined Walter Page's Blue Devils, a band formed in Oklahoma City out of the remnants of a touring band in which the trumpeter had worked. With the Blue Devils Page built a reputation as a powerful lead and solo trumpet, an emotional blues player and singer, and an inspirational sideman. In 1931 he was one of several Blue Devils enticed into Bennie Moten's band, where he remained until Moten's death in 1935. The following year he joined Count Basie in Kansas City where he was heard by Louis Armstrong's manager, Joe Glaser, who signed him up. Glaser's motives have been much-speculated upon. At the time Armstrong was suffering lip trouble and Glaser certainly needed a trumpeter/singer. However, the neglect displayed by the manager towards his new signing once Armstrong was back suggests that he might well have seen Page as a competitor to be neutralized. In the late 30s Page led bands large and small, mostly in and around New York and appeared at numerous after-hours sessions and on many record dates, including Ida Cox's comeback date after her retirement. At the start of the 40s he was briefly in Artie Shaw's band, with which he made a superb recording of 'St James Infirmary'. The rest of this decade was spent much as he had spent the late 30s, playing and recording in a succession of bands mostly in the New York area. He also featured on several record dates, including the excellent 1944 V-Disc sides. At the end of the 40s he made another hit record, this time 'Baby, It's Cold Outside' coupled with 'The Hucklebuck' with Pearl Bailey, a record which helped establish her stardom. In the early 50s Page often played in Europe until his death in 1954. Although he was strongly influenced by Armstrong during part of his career, Page was in fact an inventive and exceptionally interesting blues-orientated trumpet player in his own right as well as an excellent singer of the blues. Whatever the reason, Page's career was partially overshadowed by Armstrong and during his lifetime he was rarely granted the critical appraisal his talents deserved. Almost four decades after his death, his re-evaluation remains incomplete.

● ALBUMS: Hot Lips Page In Sweden (1951)★★★, Hot Lips Page (1952-53)★★★★, Hot Lips Page 1951 (Jazz Society 1989)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Hot Lips Page 1938-1940 (Official 1989)★★★★, Oran 'Hot Lips' Page Vols 1/2 (1942-53)★★★★, with others Midnight At V-Disc (Pumpkin 1944)★★★, Play The Blues In B (Jazz Archives 1993)★★★, 1940-1944 (Classics 1995)★★★★.

Page, Patti

b. Clara Ann Fowler, 8 November 1927, Tulsa, Oklahoma, USA. A popular singer who is said to have sold more records during the 50s than any other female artist, Page's total sales (singles and albums) are claimed to be in excess of 60 million. One of eight girls in a family of 11, Clara Fowler started her career singing country songs on radio station KTUL in Tulsa, and played weekend gigs with Art Klauser and his Oklahomans. She successfully auditioned for KTUL's Meet Patti Page show, sponsored by the Page Milk Company, and took the name with her when she left. Jack Rael, who was road manager and played baritone saxophone for the Jimmy Joy band, heard her on the radio and engaged her to sing with them; he later became her manager for over 40 years. In 1948 Page appeared on the top-rated Breakfast Club on Chicago radio, and sang with the Benny Goodman Septet. In the same year she had her first hit record, 'Confess', on which, in the cause of economy, she overdubbed her own voice to create the effect of a vocal group. In 1949, she used that revolutionary technique again on her first million-seller, 'With My Eyes Wide Open I'm Dreaming'. The song was re-released 10 years later with a more modern orchestral backing. Throughout the 50s, the hits continued to flow: 'I Don't Care If The Sun Don't Shine', 'All My Love' (US number 1), 'The Tennessee Waltz' (said to be the first real 'crossover' hit from country music to pop, and one of the biggest record hits of all time), 'Would I Love You (Love You, Love You)', 'Mockin' Bird Hill' (a cover version of the record made by Les Paul and Mary Ford, who took multi-tracking to the extreme in the 50s), 'Mister And Mississippi', 'Detour' (recorded for her first country music album), 'I Went To Your Wedding', 'Once In Awhile', 'You Belong To Me', 'Why Don't You Believe Me', '(How Much Is) That Doggie In The Window', written by novelty song specialist Bob Merrill, and recorded by Page for a children's album, 'Changing Partners', 'Cross Over The Bridge', 'Steam Heat', 'Let Me Go, Lover', 'Go On With The Wedding', 'Allegheny Moon', 'Old Cape Cod', 'Mama From The Train' (sung in a Pennsylvanian Dutch dialect), 'Left Right Out Of Your Heart', and many more. Her records continued to sell well into the 60s, and she had her last US Top 10 entry in 1965 with the title song from the Bette Davis-Olivia De Havilland movie Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte. Page also appeared extensively on US television during the 50s, on shows such as the Scott Music Hall, the Big Record variety show, and her own shows for NBC and CBS. She also made several films, including Elmer Gantry (1960), Dondi (1961, a comedy-drama, in which she co-starred with David Janssen) and Boys Night Out (1962). In the 70s, she recorded mainly country material, and in the 80s, after many successful years with Mercury and Columbia Records, signed for the Nashville-based company Plantation Records, a move that reunited her with top record producer Shelby Singleton. In 1988, Page gained excellent reviews when she played the Ballroom in New York, her first appearance in that city for nearly 20 years.

● ALBUMS: Songs (Mercury 1950)★★★, Folksong Favorites 10-inch album (Mercury 1951)★★★, Christmas (Mercury 1951)★★★, Tennessee Waltz 10-inch album (Mercury 1952)★★★, Patti Sings For Romance (Mercury 1954)★★★, Song Souvenirs (Mercury 1954)★★★, Just Patti (Mercury 1954)★★★, Patti's Songs (Mercury 1954)★★★, And I Thought About You (Mercury 1954)★★★, So Many Memories (Mercury 1954)★★★, Romance On The Range (Mercury 1955)★★★, Page I (Mercury 1956)★★★, Page II (Mercury 1956)★★★, Page III (Mercury 1956)★★★, You Go To My Head (Mercury 1956)★★★, In The Land Of Hi Fi (EmArcy 1956)★★★, Music For Two In Love (Mercury 1956)★★★, The Voices Of Patti Page (Mercury 1956)★★★, Page IV (Mercury 1956)★★★, Let's Get Away From It All (Mercury 1956)★★★, I've Heard That Song Before (Mercury 1956)★★★, My Song (1956)★★★, The East Side (EmArcy 1956)★★★, Manhattan Tower (Mercury 1956)★★★, The Waltz Queen (Mercury 1957)★★★, The West Side (EmArcy 1958)★★★, Patti Page On Camera (Mercury 1959)★★★, I'll Remember April (Mercury 1959)★★★, Indiscretion (Mercury 1959)★★★, Sings And Stars In 'Elmer Gantry' (Mercury 1960)★★★, Three Little Words (Mercury 1960)★★★, Just A Closer Walk With Thee (Mercury 1960)★★, Country And Western Golden Hits (Mercury 1961)★★, Go On Home (1962)★★★, Golden Hit Of The Boys (Mercury 1962)★★★, Patti Page On Stage (1963)★★★, Say Wonderful Things (Columbia 1963)★★, Blue Dream Street (1964)★★, The Nearness Of You (1964)★★★, Hush, Hush, Sweet Charlotte (Columbia 1965)★★★, Gentle On My Mind (Columbia 1968)★★, Patti Page With Lou Stein's Music, 1949 (Hindsight 1988)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Patti Page's Golden Hits (Mercury 1961)★★★, Patti Page's Golden Hits, Volume 2 (Mercury 1963)★★★, The Best Of Patti Page (Creole 1984)★★★, The Mercury Years, Vol. 1 (Mercury 1991)★★★★, The Mercury Years, Vol. 2 (Mercury 1991)★★★★.

Page, Stu

b. 12 May 1954, Leeds, Yorkshire, England. Page, who has been playing the guitar since he was 10 years old, began his career with session work around Leeds. In 1973, after helping out an American bluegrass band, the Warren Wikeson Band, he was invited to join them in Boston for a year. When he returned to the UK, he took various day jobs, but played in several semi-pro bands. In 1984 he formed Stu Page And Remuda, and says, 'It's a word for a spare horse and that's what we were. We only got the gigs when someone had let the organizer down.' Besides being a talented guitarist, Page has a powerful voice that belies his small stature, and his band includes Terry Clayton (bass), Andy Whelan (guitar), Pat McPartling (drums) and Tim Howard (pedal steel). They have recorded several cassettes for sale at shows, together with the excellent album The Stu Page Band, which was produced by Joe Butler of the Hillsiders for Barge Records. Page's major influence is Merle Haggard and the band's singles include 'He Made The Whole World Sing', 'Are You Still In Love With Me?' and the double a-side, 'Florida Feelin''/'Honeysuckle Dreamin''.

● ALBUMS: Radio Nights (1984)★★★, Front Page News (1985)★★★, The Stu Page Band (Barge 1989)★★★★, Fresh Pages (1990)★★★, Can't Sing The Blues (Milltown 1995)★★★.

Page, Walter

b. 9 February 1900, Gallatin, Missouri, USA, d. 20 December 1957. Page was one of many pupils of Major N. Clark Smith who gained fame in jazz circles. In the early 20s, Page played bass with Bennie Moten in Kansas City. In 1925 Page was stranded in Oklahoma City when a band he was playing in folded. He decided to form his own group out of the wreckage and this band became the legendary Blue Devils. One of the outstanding territory bands of the southwest and instrumental in helping form the musical concept which eventually became known as Kansas City style, Page gathered many fine musicians into his band. Among them were Oran 'Hot Lips' Page, Jimmy Rushing, Lester Young and Bill Basie (in the days before he was ennobled). After Moten headhunted some of his best sidemen Page kept going for a while but eventually gave up the struggle and he too joined Moten. He later played in Basie's band where he became one fourth of the fabled All American Rhythm Section (with Basie, Freddie Green and Jo Jones). Leaving Basie in 1942 he played with several leading territory bands, including those led by Nat Towles and Jesse Price, and in the middle of the decade was back with Basie. Later, he played in various pick-up groups, often in New York but with occasional tours, a pattern of work which continued into the mid-50s. He died in 1957. A solid player with an impeccable sense of time, Page is generally credited as one of the originators of the 'walking bass', a style of playing in which the bassist plays passing notes, up or down the scale, in addition to the three or four root notes of the chord, thus creating a flowing line.

● COMPILATIONS: Kansas City Hot Jazz (1926-30)★★★, incl. on Sweet And Low Blues, Big Bands And Territory Bands Of The 20s (1929)★★★, with Count Basie Swinging the Blues (1937-39)★★★★.

Pagliaro

Michel Pagliaro was a photogenic Montreal-based French-Canadian pop/rock singer/songwriter. He recorded for Much records, a label owned by top Canadian radio station CHUM. His success in his homeland bought him to the attention of Peter Summerfield, an A&R representative for the UK record label Pye. The record company brought him over to England and put a big campaign behind his UK launch, which helped to put his debut single 'Loving You Ain't Easy' into the UK Top 40 in 1972. Encouraged by the initial success the label released a self-titled album and two more singles, 'Rainshowers' and 'Some Sing Some Dance' but none of the records made any impression on the the charts.

● ALBUMS: Pagliaro (1972)★★★.

Pahinui Brothers

Continuing the tradition of 'slack key' Hawaiian guitar music spearheaded by their father, Gabby Pahinui, his offspring have also progressively melded their island sound with elements of soul, country and reggae. They are termed a 'string band' by dint of their use of guitar, ukulele, steel guitar and bass, and have in turn inspired a number of younger Hawaiian bands, including the Ho'opii Brothers and the Sam Bernard Trio. Cyril and Bla had originally contributed to their father's 1975 recording with Ry Cooder, Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band Volume One. However, after his death they refrained from performing music together. In 1989, and at the suggestion of their mother Emily, the brothers recorded a follow-up collection of slack key guitar songs, the first time they had worked together since their father's death. Cooder was once again involved in initiating proceedings, encouraging Bla to take time off from his job as policeman and recruiting the family's third son, Martin, as well as Cyril. The results included treatments of John Lennon's 'Jealous Guy' and 'My Old Friend The Blues' in addition to traditional Hawaiian song. After supporting Randy Travis on a television special (he had come to Honolulu in search of their father whom he thought to be still alive), the band was put on a permanent footing in the 90s.

● ALBUMS: The Pahinui Brothers (Panini/Private Stock 1989)★★★.

Pahinui, Gabby

b. 1921, Hawaii, d. 13 October 1980, Hawaii. Master 'slack key' Hawaiian guitarist Gabby Pahinui first released records in the 40s, though his numerous albums never became readily available outside of the island. His only international recording came in 1975 when Ry Cooder documented his technique in a session at his North Kona home which also featured Atta Isaacs, Sonny Chillingworth and Gabby's sons Cyril and Bla Pahinui. The result of two weeks domiciled together, Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band Volume One was sadly not continued as a series, despite its title. Pahinui also appeared as a steel guitarist on Cooder's subsequent Chicken Skin album. The title, according to Cooder, denoted the physical effect of hearing Pahinui's guitar playing had on him after purchasing one of his records in Honolulu. He died from a heart attack in 1980, but his offspring, the Pahinui Brothers, who survive him, have continued the slack key tradition.

● ALBUMS: Gabby Pahinui Hawaiian Band Volume One (Panini 1975)★★★.

Paich, Marty

b. 23 January 1925, Oakland, California, USA, d. 12 August 1995, Hidden Hills, California, USA. While still undergoing a long and thorough academic training, Paich began writing arrangements. After military service, during which he was able to continue his musical career, he returned to his studies and by the end of the 40s had gained numerous qualifications. In the early 50s he worked with a number of dance bands and also with Shelly Manne and Shorty Rogers, with whom he appeared on the successful and influential album Cool And Crazy. Also in the early 50s he was, for a while, pianist and arranger for Peggy Lee and wrote arrangements for Mel Tormé. He also wrote charts for another highly successful west coast album, Art Pepper Plus Eleven. An inventive and inquiring mind was clearly at work in all Paich's writing, whether as arranger or composer, and he proved particularly adept at creating material for small to medium-sized groups that allows the bands to sound as though they involve many more musicians. His work with such singers as Ella Fitzgerald, Ray Charles, Anita O'Day, Sammy Davis, Lena Horne and Sarah Vaughan, whether as arranger or musical director and conductor, demonstrated an acute appreciation of the particular needs of interpreters of the Great American Songbook. Paich also composed for films and television but the late 80s saw him back on the road with Tormé and some of his former Dek-tette sidemen, reunions that updated past glories with no hint of repetition and resulted in some remarkable record albums. He died of cancer of the colon in 1995.

● ALBUMS: Marty Paich Octet (GNP 1956)★★★, with Mel Tormé Mel Tormé With The Marty Paich Dek-tette (Bethlehem 1956)★★★★, What's New? (1957)★★★, Jazz For Relaxation (Tampa 1957)★★★, Marty Paich Quintet Featuring Art Pepper (Tampa 1958)★★★, The Picasso Of Big Band Jazz (Candid 1958)★★★, I Get A Boot Out Of You (Warners 1959)★★★, The Broadway Bit (Warners 1959)★★★, Piano Quartet (RCA Victor 1960)★★★, with Tormé Reunion (Concord Jazz 1988)★★★★, Hot Piano (VSOP 1988), with Tormé In Concert Tokyo (Concord Jazz 1989)★★★★, Moanin' (1993)★★★★.

Paid In Full - Eric B. And Rakim

The New York duo of DJ Eric Barrier and William Griffin Jr were early pioneers of rap. This was a highly influential album when first released, although nowadays it seems slighly tame. 'Eric B. Is President' created a stir when first issued and it was followed by the heavily remixed 'Paid in Full' (numerous versions were issued). Their sampling and scratching inspired a host of imitators. The use of funk backing caused James Brown to object, although in reality it rejuvinated Brown's career. They revelled in the plagiarism of other material, but in the light of what has happened since, they were angelicly innocent.

● Tracks: I Ain't No Joke; Eric B. Is On The Cut; My Melody; I Know You Got Soul; Move The Crowd; Paid In Full; As The Rhythm Goes On; Chinese Arithmetic; Eric B. Is President; Extended Beat.

● First released 1987

● UK peak chart position: 85

● USA peak chart position: 58

Paige, Elaine

b. Elaine Bickerstaff, 5 March 1951, Barnet, Hertfordshire, England. An actress and singer, often called the first lady of contemporary British musical theatre, Elaine Paige was trained at the Aida Foster Stage School in Golders Green, north London. She had already appeared in several stage musicals in the 60s and 70s, including The Roar Of The Greasepaint-The Smell Of The Crowd, Hair (her first West End show), Maybe That's Your Problem, Rock Carmen, Jesus Christ Superstar, Grease, Billy, and before she was chosen to portray Eva Peron in Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber's Evita in 1978. Although Julie Covington had sung the part on the original concept album and had a UK number 1 hit with 'Don't Cry For Me Argentina', Paige went on to make the role her own. In spite of the disappointment of being unable to play the part on Broadway (because of American union rules), Evita made Paige into a star almost overnight. She won a Society of West End Theatres Award for her outstanding performance, and was also voted Show Business Personality of the Year. In the 80s she starred in Cats (as Grizabella, singing 'Memory'), Abbacadabra, Chess, and a West End revival of Cole Porter's Anything Goes. She topped the UK chart with a number from Chess, 'I Know Him So Well', in a duet with Barbara Dickson. Her first solo album, which came in 1981, featured a variety of songs, mostly with lyrics by Tim Rice. It was recorded with the assistance of Stuart Elliot (ex-Cockney Rebel), Ian Bairnson and David Paton from Pilot, and Mike Moran. As well as a version of Paul Simon's 'How The Heart Approaches What It Yearns', there was a rare Paul McCartney instrumental ('Hot As Sun') with words by Rice. She was voted 'Recording Artist of the Year' by the Variety Club of Great Britain. Her most unusual album was released in 1988, and consisted of cover versions of Queen songs. In 1989 she turned her attention more to straight acting, and made two films for the BBC including the acclaimed Unexplained Laughter, with Diana Rigg. She had previously worked in television programmes such as Crossroads, Lady Killers, Ladybirds, A View Of Harry Clark, and Tales Of The Unexpected, as well as musical specials such as Elaine Paige In Concert. In 1990 her long-term relationship with Tim Rice dissolved and she threw herself into her work. During the 80s and 90s she embarked on concert tours of Europe, the Middle East, Scandanavia and the UK, most recently accompanied by a 26-piece symphony orchestra. In 1993 she was highly acclaimed for her powerful and dramatic performance as the legendary Edith Piaf in Pam Gems' play with music, Piaf, at the Piccadilly Theatre in London. In May 1995, she took over from Betty Buckley in the leading role of Norma Desmond in the West End hit musical Sunset Boulevard, and later in the year received an OBE in the Queen's Birthday Honours List. In 1996 she finally appeared on Broadway when she replaced Betty Buckley in the New York production of Sunset Boulevard. Returning to the West End two years later, she made a daring career move by successfully taking on the role of the duplicitous widow Celimene in Molière's scathing comedy, The Misanthrope.

● ALBUMS: with Peter Oliver Barrier (Euro Disk 1978)★★, Elaine Paige (Warners 1982)★★★, Stages (K-Tel 1983)★★, Cinema (K-Tel 1984)★★, Sitting Pretty (Warners 1985)★★, Love Hurts (Warners 1985)★★, Christmas (Warners 1986)★★, The Queen Album (Virgin 1988)★★, Love Can Do That (1991)★★, with Barbara Dickson Together (1992)★★, Romance And The Stage (RCA 1993)★★, Piaf (Warners 1995)★★★, Encore (Warners 1995)★★★, Performance (BMF 1996)★★★, and Original Cast recordings.

● COMPILATIONS: Memories - The Best Of Elaine Paige (Telstar 1987)★★★, The Collection (Pickwick 1990)★★★.

Pain Teens

The Pain Teens are an extraordinary US rock group, who were formed in the late 80s and consist of Scott Ayers (guitar, samples, drums), Bliss Blood (vocals, percussion), Kirk Carr (bass) and Frank Garymartin (drums). After two obscure albums for Anonmie Records at the turn of the decade the group moved to Trance Syndicate, the left-field label set up by King Coffey of the Butthole Surfers. The marriage was an obvious one, with the Pain Teens able to conduct their experimental approach to music without the hindrance of commercial expectation. Happily, this did not necessitate an unpleasant listening experience, though certainly the subject matter chosen by Pain Teens could be described as difficult. Samples drawn from television shows, especially the psycho-babble of confessional talk shows, littered their albums of this period, the best of which was Destroy Me, Lover. A confrontational, multi-dimensional record, it was released in a classic 'pulp fiction' cover, the image of which (man assailing woman) took on a ghastly double meaning when Blood's vocals began to address the disturbing subject matter of 'Lisa Knew'. This exorcism of child abuse was accompanied by a complementary track, 'Body Memory', which explored the mind of an incest survivor. Some light relief was on offer with their string arrangement of Leonard Cohen's 'Story Of Isaac', but the title of the sweet pop track 'RU 486', was actually the serial number of an abortion pill. The Pain Teens are not a band to spare anyone the truth of just how brutal life can be.

● ALBUMS: Pain Teens (Anomie 1988)★★★, Case Histories (Anomie 1989)★★★, Born In Blood (Trance Syndicate 1990)★★★ Stimulation Festival (Trance Syndicate 1992)★★★, Destroy Me, Lover (Trance Syndicate 1993)★★★★, Beast Of Dreams (Trance Syndicate 1995)★★★.

Paint Your Wagon (film musical)

Opinions vary widely as to the quality of this film, but, in general, the 'noes' seem to have it. Paint Your Wagon started its musical journey on Broadway in 1951, with music by Frederick Loewe and a book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner. Lerner's screenplay for this 1969 version was based on a fresh adaptation of the story by Paddy Chayevsky. The action still takes place during the California gold rush of the late 1800s, but the sometimes droll story now concerns the relationship between the lovely young Elizabeth (Jean Seberg) and the two men in her life, Ben Rumson (Lee Marvin) and 'Pardner' (Clint Eastwood). She wants to live in No Name City with both of them, which does not please Ben because he used part of his stake to buy her from a Mormon, and then made her his wife. Also up to their knees in the mud of the goldfields were Harve Presnell ('Rotten Luck Willie), Ray Walston ('Mad Jack' Duncan), Tom Ligon, Alan Dexter, William O'Connell, Ben Baker, Alan Baxter, Paul Truman, and a whole heap of others. Several of Lerner and Loewe's songs survived from the stage score, including the rousing 'Main Title (I'm On My Way)', and the contrasting 'They Call The Wind Maria' and 'There's A Coach Comin' In', both of which were sung admirably by Presnell. Eastwood surprised and delighted with his handling of 'I Still See Elisa' and 'I Talk To The Trees', and Marvin brought his very own individual treatment to 'Hand Me Down That Can O' Beans', and 'Wand'rin Star'. The latter number gave him a number 1 hit in the UK, but did not make the Top 40 in the USA. The rest of the numbers, with Lerner's lyrics and music by André Previn, consisted of 'The First Thing You Know', 'A Million Miles Away Behind The Door', 'The Gospel Of No Name City', 'Best Things', and 'Gold Fever'. Nelson Riddle and his impressive musical arrangements were nominated for an Oscar. Jack Baker staged the energetic dance sequences and the director was Joshua Logan. Alan Jay Lerner produced for Paramount, and the film was photographed in Technicolor and Panavision by William Fraker. In spite of the critics' reservations, Paint Your Wagon grossed well over $14 million in the USA, and was just outside the Top 10 musicals of the decade.

Paint Your Wagon (stage musical)

Despite having music by Frederick Loewe and a book and lyrics by Alan Jay Lerner, Paint Your Wagon enjoyed only modest success. It opened at the Shubert Theatre in New York on 12 November 1951, and ran for only 289 performances. Well staged by Daniel Mann, and with some exhilarating choreography by Agnes de Mille, the show was set in California during the 1850s gold rush. James Barton, Tony Bavaar, Olga San Juan, Rufus Smith and James Mitchell played in a cast of hard-bitten prospectors and their equally tough girlfriends. Lerner and Loewe's score, which perfectly complemented this rough-and-tumble situation, contained several appealing songs, including 'They Call The Wind Maria', 'I Still See Elisa', 'There's A Coach Comin' In', 'I Talk To The Trees', 'I'm On My Way', 'Another Autumn', 'Hand Me Down That Can O' Beans' and 'Wand'rin' Star'. In 1953, London audiences were delighted with the show and it ran at Her Majesty's Theatre for over a year with Bobby Howes and his real-life daughter Sally Ann Howes. In 1992, the Goodspeed Opera House in Connecticut gave theatre-goers another chance to hear what is now - over 40 years on - regarded as an outstanding score.

Paint Your Wagon - Various

Several of the songs that survived from Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe's 1951 stage show were supplemented by others with music by André Previn for this 1969 screen version. Clint Eastwood was in surprisingly good vocal form on two lovely ballads, 'I Still See Elisa' and 'I Talk To The Trees', while Lee Marvin's mumbling, grumbling version of 'Wand'rin' Star' was pulled from the album and shot straight to the top of the UK singles chart. Ace arranger Nelson Riddle was responsible for the orchestral music score, and the album won a Gold Disc within a few months of its release.

- Tracks: I'm On My Way; I Still See Elisa; The First Thing You Know; Hand Me Down That Can 'O Beans; They Called The Wind Maria; Million Miles Away Behind The Door; There's A Coach Comin' In; Whoop-ti-ay (Shivaree); I Talk To The Trees; The Gospel Of No Name City; Best Things; Wand'rin' Star; Gold Fever; Finale.
- First released 1969
- UK peak chart position: 2
- USA peak chart position: 28

Paisley, Bob

b. James Robert Paisley, 14 March 1931, Ashe County, North Carolina, USA. His parents soon relocated to Pennsylvania, where he grew up and where, as a youth, he learned to play guitar and harmonica and developed a keen interest in country music, particularly the old-time acts such as the Blue Sky Boys. He gained his first experience playing in a country band during his military service but on his discharge first worked, for some time, in a chemist's shop. In 1964, with banjoist Ted Lundy and others, he formed the Southern Mountain Boys and played with the band until 1979, during which time they recorded several albums. (The Southern Mountain Boys disbanded after Lundy committed suicide on 23 June 1980). Severe hip problems caused Paisley to retire from music for a time but sometimes reliant on a walking stick, he eventually returned and with his son Dan and Landy's cousin Jerry, he re-formed as Southern Grass. They soon became popular playing the US bluegrass circuit and in the early 80s, they recorded for Rounder Records and embarked on a major European tour. They played in several countries, recorded a live album in Holland with Dutch duo A.G. And Kate and proved a great hit at their UK appearances. During the 80s, like his namesake, the manager of Liverpool Football Club, Paisley made several more European tours. In the 90s, he continued to play the US bluegrass festival circuit with a line-up that included his sons Dan and Mike.

- ALBUMS: with Ted Lundy Ted Lundy & The Southern Mountain Ramblers (GHP 1972)★★★, with Lundy The Old Swinging Bridge (Rounder 1973)★★★, as Ted Lundy And Bob Paisley And The Southern Mountain Boys Slipping Away (Rounder 1976)★★★, Lovesick & Sorrow (Rounder 1978)★★★, Bob Paisley And Southern Grass (Rounder 1981)★★★, An Old Love Affair (Brandywine 1982)★★★, with A.G And Kate Pickin' In Holland (Strictly Country 1984)★★★, I Still Love You Yet (Mountain Laurel 1985)★★★, Home Of Light And Love (Mountain Laurel 1988)★★★, No Vacancy (Brandywine 1992)★★.

Pajama Game, The (film musical)

Hardly any screen version of a hit Broadway musical is considered to be better than the original, but this one in 1957 was an exception. This was possibly because several members of the original stage team made the trip to Hollywood to recreate their original roles. Two of them, George Abbott and Richard Bissell, adapted their libretto (which had been based on Bissell's novel Seven And A Half Cents) for the screenplay. Based in and around the Sleep Tite Pajama Factory in Iowa, it concerns the efforts of union leader Babe Williams (Doris Day) and her Grievance Committee to extract a rise in pay of seven and a half cents for their members, from the new (and extremely dishy) superintendent, Sid Sorokin (John Raitt). Naturally, Babe falls for Sid, in spite of her protests ('I'm Not At All In Love'), and the negotiations are satisfactorily concluded. This was one of only two scores that Richard Adler and Jerry Ross wrote together (the other was Damn Yankees) before the latter's tragic death, and it was a complete joy. Not only did the principals, Day and Raitt, share 'Hey, There', 'Small Talk' and 'There Once Was A Man', but the gifted singer and dancer Carol Haney dazzled with 'Steam Heat' and 'Hernando's Hideaway', while Eddie Foy Jnr. was delightfully unconvincing as he assured Reta Shaw 'I'll Never Be Jealous Again'. In addition, there were pleasing ensemble pieces such as 'Once-A-Year-Day' and 'Racing With The Clock'. Also in the cast were Buzz Miller, Peter Gennaro, Barbara Nicholls, Thelma Pelish and Kenneth LeRoy. Bob Fosse, a veteran of the stage show, was responsible for the lively and imaginative choreography (much of it alfresco), and the producer-directors were George Abbott and Stanley Donen. The film was shot in WarnerColor.

Pajama Game, The (stage musical)

This show opened at the St. James Theatre in New York on 13 May 1954 with only limited expectations. Richard Adler and Jerry Ross, who wrote the music and lyrics, were relatively unknown to Broadway audiences, as was choreographer Bob Fosse. However, the witty book was the work of veteran George Abbott and Richard Bissell, and the score was full of amusing and romantic numbers, such as 'I'll Never Be Jealous Again', 'There Once Was Man', 'Once A Year Day', 'Small Talk', 'I'm Not At All In Love' 'Hernando's Hideaway', 'Steam Heat' and 'Hey, There'. Set against the unlikely backdrop of a factory manufacturing pajamas, with an industrial dispute as its central dramatic device, there were strong performances from Janis Paige, John Raitt and Carol Haney. It won Tony Awards for best musical, featured actress (Haney), and Bob Fosse's choreography, which was an outstanding feature of the show. The 1955 London production, which ran for 501 performances and is remembered with great affection, starred Max Wall, Joy Nichols, Edmund Hockridge, and Elizabeth Seal. Hockridge was subsequently always associated with 'Hey, There', although in fact the song was a UK hit for Rosemary Clooney, Johnnie Ray, Lita Roza and Sammy Davis Jnr. The Pajama Game was revived briefly on Broadway in 1973 with Barbara McNair, Hal Linden and Cab Calloway. The 1957 film version achieved the impossible and actually improved upon the original with dazzling performances from Doris Day, Raitt, Haney, and Eddie Foy Jnr. In 1958, the musical Say Darling, which was based on Richard Bissell's experiences with The Pajama Game, opened on Broadway and ran for 332 performances. The cast was headed by Vivian Blaine, David Wayne and Johnny Desmond, and the score was by Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

Pal Joey

Pal Joey is merely the best known of New Yorker Joey Longo (b. c.1964)'s inumerable aliases. He earned his spurs with early house recordings on pivotal New York deep house imprint Apexton, also playing out regularly in Manhattan. Like so many others he began life working in a record shop, Vinyl Mania, before becoming an apprentice at a local studio. His more recent recordings, which have steadily built an audience in clubs, generally consist of loose, happy house textures, often released on his own label, Loop D' Loop. Examples include 'Flight 801' from 1991, or Espresso's 'Ping Pong' for Maxi Records from earlier the same year. Other names he hides behind include Earth People, Soho (not the UK outfit - scoring a big hit with 'Hot Music'), House Conductor, Espresso and Dream House. As Pal Joey his productions include 'Jump And Prance', arguably the first ska/house tune, for Republic. He has produced widely, notably for Boogie Down Productions (half of Sex And Violence, also appearing alongside KRS-1 on R.E.M.'s 'Radio Song'). Other clients include Deee-Lite (remixing their 'What Is Love' and 'ESP'). More recently he is often to be found working under the CFM Band moniker (Crazy French Man).

Pal Joey (dance)

Pal Joey is merely the best known of New Yorker Joey Longo (b. c.1964)'s inumerable aliases. He earned his spurs with early house recordings on pivotal New York deep house imprint Apexton, also playing out regularly in Manhattan. Like so many others he began life working in a record shop, Vinyl Mania, before becoming an apprentice at a local studio. His more recent recordings, which have steadily built an audience in clubs, generally consist of loose, happy house textures, often released on his own label, Loop D' Loop. Examples include 'Flight 801' from 1991, or Espresso's 'Ping Pong' for Maxi Records from earlier the same year. Other names he hides behind include Earth People, Soho (not the UK outfit - scoring a big hit with 'Hot Music'), House Conductor, Espresso and Dream House. As Pal Joey his productions include 'Jump And Prance', arguably the first ska/house tune, for Republic. He has produced widely, notably for Boogie Down Productions.(half of Sex And Violence, also appearing alongside KRS-1 on REM's 'Radio Song'). Other clients include Deee-Lite (remixing their 'What Is Love' and 'ESP'). More recently he is often to be found working under the CFM Band moniker (Crazy French Man).

Pal Joey (film musical)

This somewhat sanitized version of the 1940 Broadway show and John O'Hara's witty essays on which it was based, came to the screen in 1957. Frank Sinatra proved to be the ideal choice for the role of 'the heel of all-time', Joey Evans, the nightclub singer and compere, whose apparent mission in life is to seduce each 'mouse' in the chorus with the offer of 'shrimp cocktail, a steak, french fries, a little wine - the whole mish-mosh', so that he can 'help her with her arrangements'. The ingenuous Linda English (Kim Novak) accepts his offer, and, after the usual complications, and to the surprise of many who had read O'Hara's original short stories, goes off with him into the sunset. The musical high spot comes when Joey sings an electrifying version of 'The Lady Is A Tramp' to the wealthy widow Vera Simpson (Rita Hayworth), who had been known as 'Vanessa The Undresser' in her former life as a stripper. London film critics at the time thought it slightly ridiculous when some of their number actually applauded a piece of celluloid, but it was that kind of performance. Hank Henry, as the grumpy owner of the Barbary Coast nightspot where Joey 'operates', and Bobby Sherwood as the leader of its orchestra, headed a supporting cast that also included Barbara Nicholls and Elizabeth Patterson. The majority of Richard Rodgers and Lorenz Hart's fine stage score was retained, with four additional songs from their other shows. Sinatra was in great voice on 'I Could Write A Book', 'There's a Small Hotel' and 'What Do I Care For A Dame?', while Hayworth shimmied her way through 'Zip' and 'Bewitched' (vocals dubbed by Jo Ann Greer). Trudy Erwin's voice was behind Novak's sultry rendering of 'My Funny Valentine' and 'That Terrific Rainbow'. Hermes Pan was the choreographer, and Dorothy Kingsley's screenplay was adequate - O'Hara's version of events would never have been acceptable even in the late 50s - and this entertaining film grossed nearly $5 million in US rentals alone. It was produced in Technicolor for Columbia by Fred Kohlmar. The director was George Sidney.

Pal Joey (stage musical)

One of the first musical comedies to break with tradition, Pal Joey opened at the Ethel Barrymore Theatre in New York on Christmas Day 1940. With a libretto by John O'Hara, based on his own short stories, the plot had tough, realistic characters whose lives were concerned with sex and blackmail, and was far from the usual escapism. Also breaking new ground were the songs, which had music by Richard Rodgers and lyrics by Lorenz Hart. They were cleverly integrated into the plot, advancing both it and the development of characters. Joey was played by Gene Kelly and other cast members included Leila Ernst and Vivienne Segal (as just two of the women in his life), June Havoc and Van Johnson. The rich and amusing score included 'I Could Write A Book', 'Bewitched, Bothered, And Bewildered', 'That Terrific Rainbow', 'You Musn't Kick It Around', 'Do It The Hard Way', 'Take Him', 'The Flower Garden Of My Heart', 'What Is A Man?', 'Our Little Den Of Iniquity', and the intellectual striptease 'Zip'. Pal Joey ran for 374 performances but its 1952 revival did better, lasting for 542 performances, and winning Tony Awards for best featured actress (Helen Gallagher), choreographer (Robert Alton), and musical director (Max Meth). The remainder of the cast included Harold Lang, Vivienne Segal, and Elaine Stritch. The new production was widely applauded by critics and audiences who were by this time familiar with at least some of the shows songs and themes. The 1954 London production also starred Harold Lang with Carol Bruce. Over the years, revivals continue to be mounted, and in the early 90s the show was presented by the Goodspeed Opera House, Connecticut, the Long Beach Civic Light Opera, California, the Huntington Theatre Company in Boston, and the Old Vic in Bristol, UK.

Palace Brothers

The creation of Will Oldham (b. Louisville, Kentucky, USA), the Palace Brothers' reputation rests on his astute, eloquent lyrics and assured songs documenting anxiety and emotional repression. He has also worked as an actor, starring in the film Matewan. For the group's debut, wryly titled There Is No One What Will Take Care Of You, he employed guitarist Brian McMahan and drummer Britt Walford, veterans of Kentucky bands Squirrel Bait and Slint (Oldham had previously been pictured on the cover of Slint's Spiderland). Combining diverse influences including gospel, Appalachian mountain folk and country, Oldham's words continually disorientated the listener, taking an obvious pride in confounding expectations via his convoluted narratives. Palace was recorded solo with acoustic guitar, making his dense compositions more direct and immediate. He returned to the band format for the subsequent Palace Songs EP of the same year. Arise Therefore was credited simply to Palace and saw Oldham experiment with bleak drum machine rhythms, a typically disorientating challenge to his public perception given the strutting country rock of his previous collection, Viva Last Blues. It was also another lyrical journey further down the spiral of depression, highlighting his mordant, piercing lyricism. Gavin Martin writing in the New Musical Express noted that 'Oldham makes Leonard Cohen seem like a contestant on (television show) The Shane Ritchie Experience'. Joya was Oldham's first release under his own name, and was as wilfully perverse as the Palace albums.

● ALBUMS: There Is No One What Will Take Care Of You (Drag City 1993)★★, Palace (Drag City 1994)★★★, Viva Last Blues (Drag City 1995)★★★, as Palace Arise Therefore (Domino 1996)★★, as Will Oldham Joya (Domino 1997)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Lost Blues And Other Songs (Domino 1997)★★★.

Palace Guard

Formed in Los Angeles, California, USA, and initially known as the Emeralds, the Palace Guard comprised of Canadian brothers Don, Dick and John Beaudine, Mike Conley (vocals), Chuck McLung (guitar), Rick Moser (bass) and Emitt Rhodes (drums). Active between 1964 and 1966, the group become the resident house band at the famed Hullabaloo nightclub in 1965. Their repertoire largely comprised of cover material, notably Beatles' songs, and their collective anglophilia was emphasised by wearing British military uniforms onstage. The Palace Guard made their recording debut with the beat-styled 'All Night Long', issued on a local label, Orange Empire Records. When their third single, '(Like) Falling Sugar', became a regional hit, the rights were bought by Verve Records for national distribution. In 1966 the Palace Guard switched to Cameo/Parkway Records, where they completed 'Saturday's Child' and 'Greed'. The group split up when Rhodes left to form the Merry-Go-Round.

Paladins

This blues-based trio are based in San Diego, California, USA, emerging from the same roots-rock movement that produced the Blasters and Los Lobos. Otis Rush-influenced guitar player and vocalist Dave Gonzalez is backed by Tom Yearsley (bass) and Jeff Donavan (drums); together they produce music that mixes rock 'n' roll, rockabilly, jive and blues in a genre-defying mix, honed to perfection by their endless touring schedule. The band were signed to hardcore blues label Alligator in 1988, releasing two albums before parting company two years later. Paradoxically they are now signed to the 4AD label (home of determinedly 'indie' acts such as Cocteau Twins, Birthday Party and the Pixies), which was looking to expand its roster with acts from widely differing genres. A live CD, Million Mile Club, was released in 1997, and captured the manic energy of the band in concert (the title refers to the band having clocked up a million road miles while touring, at an average of two to three thousand miles a week). The one new song on the album, '15 Days (Under The Hood)', was a joint celebration of cars and the band's commitment to the road.

● ALBUMS: Years Since Yesterday (Alligator 1988)★★★, Let's Buzz (Alligator 1990)★★★, Million Mile Club (4AD 1997)★★★.

Palais Schaumburg

News of German band Palais Schaumburg gradually filtered through in 1981 via two singles on the Zick Zack label, 'Rote Lichter' and 'Telefon'. Frontman and bassist Holger Hiller (ex-Geister-Fahrer and Traneninvasion) was joined by drummer Ralf (ex-Abwarts, later replaced by Mufti), Thomas Fehlman (synthesizer) and Timo (bass/trumpet, ex-Immermanner), to create a dense, synthesized and at times experimental formula. A deal with the Kamera label in 1982 produced a one-off single, 'Wir Bauen Eine Neue Stadt', before Palais Schaumburg signed with Mercury Records. An album, Lupa, emerged later that year, but the band could only muster two further offerings. After 'Hockey' in 1983 and 'Beat Of Two' in the following year, Hiller left to pursue a solo career.

● ALBUMS: Lupa (1982)★★.

Pale

Three piece outfit from Dublin, Eire, featuring Matthew Deveraux (vocals), Shane Wearen (mandolin), and Sean Molloy (bass). A&M signed the band after their debut release, a limited edition cassette titled Why Go Bold (the band indeed, are well shorn), caused ripples throughout London's A&R departments. Their first single, 'Dogs With No Tails', was heavily promoted, but, despite its memorably bizarre display of Eastern European and pop traditions, it failed to achieve a strong chart placing. Their debut album was loaded with quirky but self-consciously 'weird' songs namechecking Airfix model kits and the like. There is enough evidence of the band's idiosyncratic talent but whether or not they will recieve the corporate backing they need to break them must now be a subject of conjecture.

● ALBUMS: Here's One We Made Earlier (1992)★★★.

Pale Fountains

Formed in Liverpool in the early 80s by songwriter Michael Head (guitar, vocals) and Chris McCaffrey (bass) with Thomas Whelan (drums) and Andy Diagram, formerly of Dislocation Dance and the Diagram Brothers. Having been assimilated into the early 80s' 'quiet pop'/'Bossa Nova' movement, Pale Fountains also drew upon such influences as the Beatles, the Mamas And The Papas and Love, but were probably better known for wearing short baggy trousers. Previously on the Operation Twilight label, the group attempted to break into the big time when they signed to Virgin Records. Despite this lucrative move, this highly touted group never broke out of their cult status. Their highest national chart position was the UK Top 50 'Thank You' in 1982. They split following the Ian Broudie-produced From Across The Kitchen Table, with Head going on to form Shack with his brother John.

● ALBUMS: Pacific Street (Operation Twilight 1984)★★★, From Across The Kitchen Table (Virgin 1985)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Longshot For Your Love (Marina 1998)★★★.

Pale Saints

Indie band formed in Leeds, Yorkshire, England, in 1989 by Ian Masters (b. 4 January 1964, Potters Bar, Hertfordshire, England; bass), Chris Cooper (b. 17 November 1966, Portsmouth, England; drums) and Graeme Naysmith (b. 9 February 1967, Edinburgh, Scotland; guitar), in response to an advertisement in a music paper. Aided by occasional guitarist Ashley Horner, who eventually concentrated on his other band, Edsel Auctioneer, on a full-time basis, the Pale Saints spent a year playing local venues and perfecting an idiosyncratic array of material that relied heavily on textures and effects rather than traditional arrangements or blatantly commercial choruses. That was not to say that they were unattractive: their first ever London gig in the spring of 1989 brought them a recording contract with 4AD Records, and their debut album of six months later, The Comforts Of Madness, earned the band much critical appreciation and the number 40 spot in the UK charts. Canadian emigrate Meriel Barham (b. 15 October 1964, Yorkshire, England) joined as a permanent guitarist and vocalist soon after, as Pale Saints continued their decidedly obtuse - if not downright perverse - path into the new decade with tours of Europe and Japan and an elegant cover version of Nancy Sinatra's 'Kinky Love', which reached number 72 in the UK charts. The subsequent In Ribbons housed a non-charting single in 'Throwing Back The Apple', before the band re-emerged in 1994 with Slow Buildings. By this time, Masters had departed (replaced by Colleen Browne), leaving Barham in charge of lyric writing, while Hugh Jones's crisp production gave new impetus to the band's familiar grandeur.

● ALBUMS: The Comforts Of Madness (4AD 1990)★★★, In Ribbons (4AD 1992)★★★, Slow Buildings (4AD 1994)★★★.

Paley, Ben

b. USA. Ben Paley is the son of Tom Paley, a member of the acclaimed New Lost City Ramblers, and Claudia Paley, the Appalachian ballad singer. Given that family background, it is no surprise that Ben gravitated to the music at an early age, embarking on studies of the fiddle at the age of six. When his father returned from a visit to Scandinavia with a pile of Swedish fiddle records, Ben's interest in the instrument peaked. As well as numerous trips to the source of this music, it eventually resulted in him compiling a book on the subject (The Swedish Fiddle Book, published by Dragonfly, with an accompanying instructional cassette). Currently based in Brighton, Sussex, England, he earlier rose to nation-wide fame as part of the Wild Turkey Brothers, who disbanded in 1993. His current group is Guitars And Cadillacs. He has worked extensively with Brighton songwriter and accordion player Bing Lyle, and also performed frequently with his father (allowing him to indulge his love of Swedish fiddle styles) and mother.

● FURTHER READING: The Swedish Fiddle Book, Ben Paley.

Palladinos

Alice and Angelo Palladino were primarily influenced by the songs of Bob Dylan and Van Morrison as well as the poetry of Dylan Thomas and Wilfred Owen when they set up this hard-working folk duo. Angelo was born in London, England, though his father was a prisoner of war whose origins can be traced to Caserta, near Naples in Italy. His rich musical heritage was provided as part of a large, extended family who all lodged with their grandmother in the East End of London. As a 'Teddy Boy' he was exposed to primal American rock 'n' roll at an early age, but his background ensured he listened to everything from Howlin' Wolf to Astor Piazzolla to Hank Williams. Alice met Angelo as a young singer on the London club circuit, and quickly entered both a professional and private relationship. By this time Angelo had been through a number of jobs, including asphalter, docker, factory worker and road digger. These experiences would inform the lyrics to the duo's debut album, Boom Town. This strong collection of songs documented the decline of community in East London and the mining settlements of Yorkshire in which both had spent time since starting their career. Titles such as 'I Won't Be Going South' documented self-explanatory emotions with a sympathetic production from John Ravenhall. The album was built on a cohesive musical framework established with a decade of touring throughout the UK and Europe.

● ALBUMS: Boom Town (Pangaea 1994)★★★★.

Pallas

This UK progressive rock outfit was formed in Aberdeen, Scotland, in 1975, by Euan Lowson (vocals), Niall Mathewson (guitar), Ronnie Brown (keyboards), Graeme Murray (bass) and Derek Forman (drums). They toured the British club circuit for many years, receiving constant rejections from A&R departments. Undeterred, they decided to self-finance the recording of a demo album. This materialized in 1983 as Arrive Alive, a high-quality collection of melodic songs. The set's modest success led to a contract with EMI, the services of Yes producer Eddie Offord, and a large budget to record The Sentinel in Atlanta, Georgia, USA. This was an ambitious and intricate concept album that betrayed the group's Marillion and Yes influences. Lowson left at this juncture, to be replaced by Alan Reed. The Wedge followed and represented the pinnacle of the group's creativity. However, its commercial failure led to EMI severing its links with the band. Despite this, Pallas remained together, but finally split when unable to find a new label sympathetic to their cause.

● ALBUMS: Arrive Alive (Kigg Cool 1983)★★★, The Sentinel (Harvest 1984)★★★★, The Wedge (EMI 1986)★★★.

Palma, Triston

b. 1962, Waltham Park, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Palma is widely acknowledged as being introduced to the recording scene by DJ and producer Jah Thomas. He was hailed as a master of the sing-jay style that enjoyed enormous popularity in the early 80s. In 1980, prior to his alliance with Jah Thomas, the She Get Up And Skank label released 'Bad Boys', which accelerated his career. He recorded 'A Class Girl', credited to Triston And Tony, which inspired Thomas to work with Palma. His initial hits, 'Entertainment' and 'Spliff Tail', made a significant impression with the reggae audience. He also recorded in combination with Ranking Toyan 'Run Around Woman', and with Badoo 'Yes I'm Ready'. Palma's initial success led to a large number of recordings, including 'Raving' and 'Joker Smoker', which were both in combination with Thomas. In 1982 Palma was still topping the reggae charts with 'Darling When', 'If You Knew Baby' and 'Rub A Dub Session'. By the end of the year Thomas began concentrating on Michael Palmer's career as he felt that his association with Palma had reached its pinnacle. In 1983 Palma had a succession of hits including 'Mr False Preacher' with Nicker Smart, 'Settle Down Girl', 'I'm Leaving' with Ranking Joe, 'Woman Woman', 'Undying Love', 'Buy Out The Bar', 'No Shot No Fire', 'Folly Ranking' and 'It's Not What You Say'. By 1985 Palma became involved in the Music Is Life project, alongside a host of top performers, including Freddie McGregor, Mutabaruka, Gregory Isaacs, Third World, Edi Fitzroy and Steel Pulse, for the famine relief single 'Land Of Africa'. His popularity continued throughout the 80s including a number of hits with Pants produced by Castro Brown and then into the 90s when he recorded with Dennis Brown and Beenie Man for the hit compilation Three Against War.

● ALBUMS: Showcase In A Roots Radics Drum And Bass (Midnite Rock 1982)★★★★, Entertainment (Sonic 1982)★★★, Joker Smoker (Greensleeves 1982)★★★, Touch Me Take Me (Echo 1982)★★, Settle Down Girl (Trojan 1983)★★, with Ranking Toyan Nice Time (Pre 1983)★★, with Philip Frazier I & I In Inity (Black Solidarity 1985)★★★, with Pants Triston Palma And Pants (New Name Music 1993)★★★, with Dennis Brown, Beenie Man Three Against War (VP 1995)★★★★.

Palmer, Carl

(see Atomic Rooster; Emerson, Lake And Palmer; Asia)

Palmer, Clive

The 'forgotten one' from the Incredible String Band, Palmer founded the the group as a duo with Robin Williamson, and featured on the debut album. Subsequently, he moved to India, and, on his return, formed the Famous Jug band with Jill Johnson (vocals), Pete Berryman (guitar) and Henry Bartlett (jug), and himself on banjo. After recording Sunshine Possibilities (1969), he worked with COB (Clive's Original Band), along with John Bidwell (banjo) and Mick Bennett (percussion), on Spirit Of Love (1971) and Moyshe Mcstiff And The Tartan Lancers Of The Sacred Heart (1972). Since then, he has continued to work with a variety of units, and as a solo performer. A highly accomplished musician, the Original String Band would probably have sounded rather differently had he remained with them.

● ALBUMS: Just Me (1978)★★★.

Palmer, Earl

b. 25 October 1924, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. Palmer's mother was a vaudeville performer, and from an early age he began entertaining as a singer and dancer. Playing drums in his school band, he started listening to jazz drummers such as Big Sid Catlett and Panama Francis, and joined Dave Bartholomew's band in 1947. He recorded with the Bartholomew band and went on to play on many of his productions for Imperial Records, notably Fats Domino's classic records. Palmer is probably featured on virtually every other Crescent City classic, including those Specialty rockers by Little Richard and Lloyd Price, but in 1956 Aladdin Records hired him as a session arranger to handle their New Orleans sessions. In February 1957, he moved out to Los Angeles to work for Aladdin until the company was liquidated. He remained one of the busiest session drummers on the west coast throughout the 60s and 70s, recording with everyone from Lightnin' Hopkins to Marvin Gaye and subsequently wrote movie scores and advertising jingles.

Palmer, Holly

b. USA. Holly Palmer grew up in Santa Monica, California, and Seattle, Washington, where she regularly sung Sarah Vaughan and Nancy Wilson standards in high school. By the time she attended the Berklee College Of Music in Boston on a scholarship, she had rediscovered her love of pop music and spent many evenings playing at impromptu rock gigs. After Berklee she continued to play irregularly in rock bands in New York, though she still returned to jazz standards when the occasion arose. She signed a development deal with Island Records in 1993 but this failed to produce a full contract. However, she eventually came to the attention of Sue Drew at Reprise Records, resulting in the release of her self-titled debut album in 1996. As she later told Billboard magazine, she never set out to prove herself the easiest of people to work with: 'Because of my experiences before with industry types, there were certain things that I wanted. I wanted to co-produce the album, and I didn't want anyone telling me what to sound like.' The record was indeed co-produced, with Kenny White (Shawn Colvin, Marc Cohn). Holly Palmer featured Me'Shell Ndegé Ocello (bass) on its strongest track, 'Lickerish Man', as well as guitarists Bill Frisell and John Leventhal.

● ALBUMS: Different Languages (Reprise 1996)★★★.

Palmer, Jimmy

b. USA. Widely billed as Jimmy 'Dancin' Shoes' Palmer', this bandleader was also an accomplished vocalist and trumpet player. As a singer he won a Paul Whiteman contest while still at high school. His reward was a radio contract with the KDKA station in Pittsburgh. This led to a temporary then permanent placement as featured vocalist with the Dick Stabile band. He subsequently worked with Blue Barron, Bobby Byrne, Les Brown and Lou Breese, though he later returned to Stabile. He would take over leadership of that orchestra when Stabile entered the services. He finally formed his own dance band after the end of the war in 1945, in New York City, New York, USA. As well as his own vocals, this aggregation featured singing from Thelma Gracen, Julio Maro and Larry Dean, with their longest engagement being one of over five years at the Hilton Hotel in Chicago. They also appeared at the Chase Hotel, the Muehlbach, the Claridge, the Peabody, and the Roosevelt in New Orleans - effectively the best of the Midwest dance band circuit venues. There were also forays west (the Hollywood Palladium) and east (the Roosevelt Grill and Roseland Ballroom in New York). He remained active throughout the 60s and 70s, especially in Chicago, where his theme tune, 'Dancin' Shoes', was still regularly aired at dance halls and private parties.

Palmer, Michael

b. 1964, Maxfield Park, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. Inspired by his neighbour, Leroy Smart, Palmer began his career singing on the Echo Tone Hi Fi Sound. The sound system featured Big John, Flux and owner General Echo, who were all killed in 1980 following a shooting incident in Kingston. Working with producer Oswald Thomas, Palmer's debut release, 'Mr Landlord', faltered and with the demise of the sound system he maintained a low profile. By 1983 he was back in the studio with Jah Thomas, who had enjoyed success with Triston Palma, resulting in the release of 'Ghetto Dance' with Jim Brown and 'Different Love'. A number of recordings followed with a variety of producers, including King Jammy, Sugar Minott and Joseph 'Joe Joe' Hookim. Palmer's career began to prosper and while Aswad were recording in Jamaica they utilized Palmer's voice for the release of 'Me Nah Run'. By the mid-80s his career was firmly established. He enjoyed a number 1 in Jamaica with 'Lickshot' and his appearance at the Reggae Sunsplash festival was one of the high points of the event. Numerous albums followed and those producers that did not have enough material to release a complete set compiled duo artist sets. As is often the case when a glut of material becomes available, interest began to dwindle and a lean period followed. He decided to test his production skills and enjoyed a smash hit with 'Haul And Pull Up' by Neville Brown. Palmer returned in fine style by the early 90s with a condemnation of licentiousness with the single 'Juggling', and alternatively, 'Everyone Makes Love'.

● ALBUMS: Star Performer (Tonus 1983)★★★, Lickshot (Powerhouse 1984)★★★, Pull It Up Now (Greensleeves 1984)★★★, Angelia (Vista 1984)★★, with Frankie Jones Showdown Volume 4 (Empire 1984)★★, with Frankie Paul Double Trouble (Greensleeves 1985)★★★, with Kelly Ranks Chucky No Lucky (Vista 1985)★★.

Palmer, Robert

b. Alan Palmer, 19 January 1949, Batley, Yorkshire, England. Britain's leading 'blue-eyed soul' singer has served a musical apprenticeship over four decades in which time he has participated in many different styles of music. In the UK progressive music boom of the late 60s, Palmer joined the interestingly named Mandrake Paddle Steamer part-time, so as not to interfere with his day job as a graphic designer. Shortly afterwards he left for the lure of London to join the highly respected but commercially unsuccessful Alan Bown Set, replacing the departed Jess Roden. The following year he joined the ambitious conglomeration Dada, an experimental jazz/rock unit featuring Elkie Brooks. Out of Dada came the much loved Vinegar Joe, with which he made three albums. Already having sights on a solo career, Robert had worked on what was to become his debut Sneakin' Sally Through The Alley in 1974. Backed by the Meters and Lowell George, the album was an artistic triumph. A long-term relationship with Chris Blackwell's Island Records began. Blackwell had faith in artists like Palmer and John Martyn and allowed their creativity to flow, over and above commercial considerations.

Little Feat appeared on his follow-up Pressure Drop after Palmer had relocated to New York. Still without significant sales, he moved to the luxury of the Bahamas, where he lived for many years. In 1976 he released Some People Can Do What They Like to mixed reaction. Palmer persevered, although he was better known in America for many years. His first major US hit single came in 1979 with the R&B Moon Martin rocker, 'Bad Case Of Loving You'. He collaborated with Gary Numan on Clues which became a bigger hit in the UK than in America. The infectious 'Johnny And Mary' sneaked into the UK charts and two years later 'Some Guys Have All The Luck' made the Top 20. Seeming to give up on his solo career, he joined the Duran Duran based, Power Station in 1985. Continuing his own career, Riptide, released at the end of that year, gave him his biggest success. The album was a super-slick production of instantly appealing songs and it made the UK Top 5. In 1986, in addition to singing on John Martyn's Sapphire, he found himself at the top of the US charts with the beautifully produced 'Addicted To Love'. The record became a world-wide hit, making the UK Top 5. It was accompanied by a sexy (or sexist) video featuring a number of identical-looking girls playing instruments behind Palmer. He followed this with another catchy hit 'I Didn't Mean To Turn You On'. Following a move to Switzerland with his family he left Island after 14 years, and joined EMI. Heavy Nova was accompanied by the major hit 'She Makes My Day' in 1988. The next year a formidable compilation of his Island work was released, and found more success than Heavy Nova. He returned to the UK Top 10 with UB40 in 1990 with the Bob Dylan song 'I'll Be Your Baby Tonight' and in 1991, with a medley of Marvin Gaye songs, 'Mercy Mercy Me'/'I Want You'. Honey was another credible release with notable tracks such as 'Know By Now' and the title song. Palmer remains a respected artist, songwriter and the possessor of an excellent voice. He is also to be admired for his wardrobe of suits, having worn them when they were anathema to most rock stars. Nowadays, Palmer finds himself praised for being a well-dressed man.

- ● ALBUMS: Sneakin' Sally Through The Alley (Island 1974)★★★, Pressure Drop (Island 1975)★★, Some People Can Do What They Like (Island 1976)★★, Double Fun (Island 1978)★★, Secrets (Island 1979)★★, Clues (Island 1980)★★, Maybe It's Live (Island 1982)★★, Pride (Island 1983)★★, Riptide (Island 1985)★★★, Heavy Nova (EMI 1988)★★★, Don't Explain (EMI 1990)★★, Ridin' High (EMI 1992)★★, Honey (EMI 1994)★★★.
- ● COMPILATIONS: The Early Years (C5 1987)★★, Addictions, Volume 1 (Island 1989)★★★★, Addictions, Volume 2 (Island 1992)★★★.
- ● VIDEOS: Some Guys Have All The Luck (Palace Video 1984), Super Nova (PMI 1989), Video Addictions (Polygram 1992), Robert Palmer: The Very Best Of (PMI 1995).

Palmer, Roy

b. c.1892, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 22 December 1963. Early in his career Palmer played guitar and trumpet but eventually settled on trombone. In the early years of the century he worked mostly in his home town. By 1920 he had moved to Chicago where he recorded with, amongst others, Jelly Roll Morton, Johnny Dodds and Jimmy Blythe. In the early 30s he quit full-time music but, according to jazz musician and writer John Chilton, he continued to teach into the 50s.

Palmer, Tony

b. 1941, this 'brilliant but difficult' ex-Lowestoft Grammar School pupil from Suffolk, England was an Observer reviewer for whom pop meant little, until a belated admiration for the latter-day Beatles' 'joyful music-making that only the ignorant will not hear'. He ventured into authorship with Born Under A Bad Sign (an encapsulation of his newspaper commentaries on pop) and television production with the popular culture magazine How It Is and the 17-part series, All You Need Is Love. Both as a BBC employee and freelance, Palmer was responsible for over 40 documentaries, including Cream's farewell concert and portraits of diverse subjects such as Jack Bruce, Liberace, Benjamin Britten and Igor Stravinsky. Palmer wrote a superb account of the infamous Old Bailey 'Oz Trial', The Trials Of Oz (1971). With Frank Zappa, he co-directed 1973's 200 Motels, a sluggish 'fantasy opera' of the Mothers Of Invention's antics on tour - and the first cinema film to employ video equipment. However, after ructions with Zappa, Palmer washed his hands of the movie and tore it to pieces in his Observer column. In artistic debt to Ken Russell, the expensive Wagner (starring the late Richard Burton) was his first attempt at directing actors. Since then, his career has not been marked by success but more commercial ventures by Palmer in the future cannot be discounted.

Palmieri, Charlie

b. Carlos Manuel Palmieri Jnr., 21 November 1927, Bellevue Hospital, Manhattan, New York, USA; d. 12

September 1988, Jacobi Hospital, Bronx, New York, USA. Known in salsa as 'El Gigante de Las Blancas y Las Negras' (The Giant of the Keyboard), Palmieri's parents, Carlos Palmieri Manuel Villaneuva and Isabel Maldonado-Palmieri, migrated from Ponce, Puerto Rico to New York's El Barrio (Spanish Harlem), shortly before he was born. He was a child musical prodigy who could faultlessly copy a piece on the piano by ear. He began piano lessons at the age of seven and later studied at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. In 1941 Charlie and his five-year-old brother, Eddie Palmieri, won prizes in amateur talent contests and during this time, a guardian would take him to Latin big band dances. Charlie made his professional debut on 2 October 1943 with the band of Osario Selasie at the Park Palace Ballroom. A seven-month stint with Selasie was followed by one-and-a-half years with Orquestra Ritmo Tropical. After graduating from high school in 1946, he freelanced with various bands, including La Playa Sextet and Rafael Muñoz, with whom he made his recording debut on 'Se Va La Rumba'. In October 1947, he was hired to replace Joe Loco (b. José Estevez Jnr., 26 March 1921, New York, USA; pianist/arranger/bandleader/composer) in Fernando Alvarez's band at the Copacabana club, by the band's then musical director Tito Puente. In 1948 he recorded on the Alba label with his first band, Conjunto Pin Pin. After leaving the Copacabana in 1951, Palmieri toured briefly with Xavier Cugat. The same year, he joined Puente's band and appeared on the 10-inch album Tito Puente At The Vibes And His Rhythm Quartet, Vol. 6 on the Tico label (most of which was later incorporated on the late 50s album Puente In Love). He joined Pupi Campo's band and worked on Jack Paar's CBS daytime television show. In the early 50s, Charlie formed another band, which debuted at New York's famous Palladium Ballroom with lead vocalist Vitín Avilés (b. September 1925, Mayagüez, Puerto Rico). However, lack of gigs caused him to resume work as an accompanist. He performed with Johnny Seguí, Tito Rodríguez, Vicentico Valdés and Pete Terrace. A couple of tracks he recorded with Rodríguez in 1953 were included on the 1990 compilation Ritmo y Melodia, 15 Joyas Tropicales. He appeared on Terrace's mid-50s A Night In Mambo-Jazzland, and recorded as leader of a small latin jazz group on El Fantastico Charlie Palmieri. At the end of 1956, he organized a quintet for an extended residency in Chicago.

Shortly after Palmieri's return to New York, he discovered Johnny Pacheco playing flute with the band of Dominican singer/composer Dioris Valladares, who was on the same bill as Palmieri's group at the Monte Carlo Ballroom. He employed Pacheco, initially as a timbales player, and later as the flautist with his flute, strings, rhythm section and voices band, Charanga 'La Duboney'. The band signed with the major label United Artists, and their 1960 debut Let's Dance The Charanga!, featuring Vitín Avilés, generated several hits in New York's Latino market. Not only did La Duboney enjoy considerable success in their own right - playing two to three dances a night - but they also kicked off the early 60s charanga (flute and violin band) boom. After a short while, Pacheco split to found his own charanga. Palmieri was obliged to break his contract with United Artists when the company insisted that he record Hawaiian music! This was because the record contract of Tito Rodríguez, who signed with the label in 1960, stipulated that he would be the only artist to record latin music for them.

Charlie and Charanga 'La Duboney' switched to Al Santiago's Alegre label. They released three albums on the label between 1961 and 1963, and contributed two tracks to 1961's Las Charangas, which also featured the charangas of Pacheco and José Fajardo. The tracks 'Como Bailan La Pachanga' and 'La Pachanga Se Baila Asi' (co-written by Joe Quijano and Palmieri), from La Duboney's magnificent best-selling Alegre debut Pachanga At The Caravana Club, were both hits in Farándula magazine's New York Latin Top 15 during May 1961.

Palmieri directed (and performed on) and Santiago produced four superlative Alegre All-Stars latin jam session (descarga) volumes issued between 1961 and the mid-60s. These albums, which gave Charlie an opportunity to indulge his dual passion for jazz and Cuban music, involved artists such as Kako, Pacheco, Willie Rosario, Cheo Feliciano, Orlando Marín, Dioris Valladares, Barry Rogers, Joe Quijano, Bobby Rodríguez (the bassist), Osvaldo 'Chi Hua Hua' Martínez and Willie Torres. The Alegre All-Stars' recordings were a descendant of the Cuban Jam Session volumes recorded in Cuba on the Panart label in the second half of the 50s (see Israel 'Cachao' López). Cuban saxophonist José 'Chombo' Silva participated on both. In their turn, the Alegre All-Stars inspired a string of New York descarga recordings, which included releases by Kako, Johnny Pacheco, Osvaldo 'Chi Hua Hua' Martínez (Descarga Cubana Vol. 1, 1966, and Latin Cuban Session Vol. 2, c.1967), Tico All-Stars, Cesta All-Stars (see Joe Quijano), Salsa All-Stars, Fania All Stars and SAR All Stars (see Roberto Torres). Palmieri and Santiago made a significant input: Charlie guested on the Tico All-Stars' 1966 descarga volumes recorded at New York's Village Gate, and directed and played on the Cesta All-Stars' two albums, which Santiago co-produced; Santiago produced Salsa All Stars in 1968, which featured Palmieri on piano.

When the charanga sound declined in popularity, Palmieri replaced the flute and violins with three trumpets and two trombones to form the Duboney Orchestra for 1965's Tengo Maquina Y Voy A 60 (Going Like Sixty). Puerto Rico-born Victor Velázquez, a Palmieri accompanist since 1961, sang lead vocals with the new Duboney, which also included young trumpeter Bobby Valentín. Palmieri left Alegre to record for the BG label, but returned in 1967 for Hay Que Estar En Algo/Either You Have It Or You Don't!, which contained some boogaloos, an R&B/latin fusion form that was the rage at the time. Charlie later admitted to Max Salazar: ' . . . I didn't care for the boogaloo, but I've learned that if you do not follow a popular trend, you're dead.' The following year he recorded Latin Bugalu for Atlantic, which was also released in the UK. The album was produced by Herbie Mann and contained his self-penned classic 'Mambo Show'. 1969 was an extremely lean year for Palmieri's band. He nearly suffered a nervous breakdown and contemplated relocating to Puerto Rico. However, he was dissuaded from doing so by Tito Puente, who hired him as musical conductor for his television show El Mundo De Tito Puente. When the series finished, Charlie started a parallel career as a lecturer in Latin music and culture, and taught in various educational institutions in New York.

Velázquez left for an eight month stint with Joe Quijano in Puerto Rico; he returned to Palmieri's band in 1972 to share lead vocals with Vitín Avilés, then departed to join Louie Ramírez's band. Charlie began using organ, which imparted an element of kitsch to some of his recorded work. He rejigged his horn section to two trumpets and saxophone (played by Bobby Nelson, who doubled on flute). He issued three notable albums on Alegre between 1972 and 1975 with Avilés on lead vocals, and two on Harvey Averne's Coco label (in 1974 and 1975) with lead vocals by Velázquez. A number of Charlie's hit tunes from this period were written by veteran Puerto Rican composer/singer and former heart-throb, Raúl Marrero, including, 'La Hija De Lola' from El Gigante Del Teclado (1972) and 'La Vecina' from Vuelve El Gigante (1973). Palmieri only played organ with his band on the first Coco outing, Electro Duro, which was probably his most disappointing album. His second Coco release, Impulsos, was a more refined remake of the rawer (and better) Charlie Palmieri issued on Mary Lou Records in c.1969. Both versions featured Velázquez on lead vocals; he again departed and went on to co-lead Típica Ideal. In 1977, Charlie teamed up with veteran Panamanian singer/composer Meñique Barcasnegras for Con Salsa Y Sabor on the Cotique label. That year, he returned to Alegre to lead and perform on the Al Santiago produced 17th anniversary Alegre All-Stars reunion Perdido (Vol. 5), which re-convened ten musicians from the 60s sessions, together with Louie Ramírez, Bobby Rodríguez and members of his band La Compañia. Palmieri remained with Alegre in 1978 for The Heavyweight, with singers Meñique and Julito Villot, and played and arranged on Vitín Avilés' solo Con Mucha Salsa. His brief return to Alegre was punctuated by the highly recommended compilation Gigante Hits in 1978, which selected tracks from his 1965-75 period with the label. In 1979, Charlie appeared in Jeremy Marre's UK television film Salsa.

In one or more of his capacities as A&R head, producer, keyboardist and arranger, Palmieri worked with a long list of artists, which included: Kako, brother Eddie, Celia Cruz, Tito Puente, Ismael Rivera, Rafael Cortijo, Herbie Mann, Ismael Quintana, Yayo El Indio, Cal Tjader, Raúl Marrero, Joe Quijano, Frankie Dante, Bobby Capó, Israel 'Cachao' López, Machito, Mongo Santamaría and Ray Barretto. In January 1980, Palmieri moved to Puerto Rico to escape New York's severe winters and frustrating, exploitative Latin club scene. He organized a successful band there, but sadly never recorded with them. Charlie returned to New York in February 1983 to discuss a proposed concert in Puerto Rico with his brother Eddie. However he suffered a massive heart attack and stroke and was hospitalized for six weeks. Upon his recovery, he continued to reside in New York and resolved to live at a slower pace. On 6 January 1984, New York's Latin music industry paid tribute to Palmieri at Club Broadway. The same year, he returned to a small group format (piano, bass, timbales, conga and bongo) for the latin jazz A Giant Step on the Tropical Budda label. He played on El Sabor Del Conjunto Candela/86, led by bongo/güiro player Ralphy Marzan, and on Joe Quijano's The World's Most Exciting Latin Orchestra & Review in 1988. Up to 1988, he gigged with Combo Gigante, which he co-led with Jimmy Sabater (see Joe Cuba). No recordings by the band have been released. He made his belated UK debut in June 1988 with a five-night residency at London's Bass Clef club accompanied by London-based Robin Jones' King Salsa. On 12 September 1988, Charlie arrived back in New York after a trip to Puerto Rico, where he had performed at the Governor's residence with veteran singer/composer Bobby Capó. Later in the day he suffered a further heart attack and died at the Jacobi Hospital in the Bronx. In 1990, the latin jazz CD Mambo Show was released on the resurrected Tropical Budda label, which congregated an all-star ensemble, including Palmieri (piano and co-producer), Mongo Santamaría (conga), Chombo (saxophone); Barry Rogers (trombone), Nicky Marrero (timbales), Johnny 'Dandy' Rodríguez (bongo), Ray Martínez (bass), David 'Piro' Rodríguez (trumpet).

● ALBUMS: El Fantastico Charlie Palmieri (1950s)★★★, Easy Does It (1958)★★★, Let's Dance The Charanga! (1960)★★★★, reissued under the title of Echoes Of An Era, Pachanga At The Caravana Club (1961)★★★★, with the charangas of Johnny Pacheco and José Fajardo Las Charangas (1961)★★★, The Alegre All-Stars (1961)★★★★, Viva Palmieri (1962)★★★, Salsa Na' Ma', Vol. 3 (1963)★★★, The Alegre All-Stars Vol. 2 'El Manicero' (1965)★★★, Tengo Maquina Y Voy A 60 (1965)★★★, The Alegre All-Stars Vol. 3 'Lost & Found' (1965)★★★, The Alegre All-Stars Vol. 4 'Way Out' (1966)★★★, Mas De Charlie Palmieri (1966)★★★, Hay Que Estar En Algo/Either You Have It Or You Don't (1967)★★★, Latin Bugalu (1968)★★★, with the Cesta All-Stars Live Jam Session (1968)★★★★, Salsa All Stars (1968)★★★, with Cesta All-Stars Salsa Festival, El Gigante Del Teclado (1972)★★★, Vuelve El Gigante (1973)★★, with various artists Tico-Alegre All Stars Recorded Live At Carnegie Hall, Volume 1 (1974)★★, Electro Duro (1974)★★★, Adelante, Gigante (1975)★★★, Impulsos (1975)★★★★, with Meñique Con Salsa Y Sabor (1977)★★★, with Alegre All-Stars Perdido

(Vol. 5) (1977)★★★, The Heavyweight (1978)★★★, A Giant Step (1984)★★★, with an all-star ensemble Mambo Show (1990)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with the Alegre All-Stars They Just Don't Mak'em Like Us Any More (1976)★★★★, Gigante Hits (1978)★★★★.

Palmieri, Eddie

b. Eduardo Palmieri, 15 December 1936, South Bronx, New York, USA, of Puerto Rican parentage. The self-avowed pioneering 'oxygen cocktail' of contemporary salsa, pianist, bandleader, composer, arranger, producer Palmieri began playing the piano at the age of eight. Eddie also played timbales, and wanted to specialize in the instrument, but changed his mind after several gigs with his uncle's group. He developed into '. . . a pianist with impeccable time, drive and endurance; a soloist of originality and daring and . . . has an unorthodox piano technique which has startled many conventionally trained pianists' (Louise Rogers, c.1964). Within the framework of typical Latin music, Palmieri progressed a unique approach to the genre characterized by free improvisation and experimentation. While attending Public School Number 52 in the Bronx, 14-year-old Palmieri formed a group with timbales player Orlando Marín, which included vocalist/percussionist Joe Quijano. Eddie left in 1955 to turn professional as a member of Johnny Seguí's orchestra, and the group became the Orlando Marín Conjunto. However, his over-zealousness resulted in his dismissal. 'The club said I broke the piano, hitting the keys too hard. Seguí told me, either you go or the band goes, so see you later'. He then replaced brother Charlie as pianist with the band of ex-Tito Puente lead singer, Vicentico Valdés, before joining Tito Rodríguez's big band from 1958-60. Eddie had great respect for Rodríguez: 'He was just an incredible artist, a great vocalist . . . He was the most wonderful person you could imagine, except when he got on the bandstand. Then he became like a Jekyll and Hyde. That's the way he had to be - because of the excellence he demanded. He was sadistic - no emotion, no nothing' (quoted by John Ortiz).

In the liner notes to Eddie's first album, Charlie described his brother as a 'nut' for leaving the financial security of Rodríguez's successful band. Palmieri subsequently played weddings, funerals and local dances before forming La Perfecta in 1961. The line-up included John Pacheco and Barry Rogers (b. 1936, New York, USA; d. 19 April 1991, New York, USA; trombonist/arranger). Palmieri and Rogers developed a two trombone and flute frontline for Conjunto La Perfecta, which Charlie dubbed a 'trombanga'. They became one of Latin New York's busiest bands and signed with Al Santiago's Alegre label, who produced their debut Eddie Palmieri And His Conjunto La Perfecta in 1962. In addition to Rogers, other key founder members of La Perfecta on the album were: Ismael 'Pat' Quintana (lead vocals), Manny Oquendo (timbales, see Conjunto Libre) and George Castro (flute). In 1963, Brazilian trombonist Jose Rodrigues joined La Perfecta; he became a regular Palmieri accompanist into the 80s and a busy session musician. Eddie and the band released a further two volumes on Alegre before switching to Tico Records in 1964 for Echando Pa'lante (Straight Ahead). La Perfecta's seminal mid-60s trombanga line-up comprised of Rogers and Rodrigues (trombones), Castro (flute), Oquendo (timbales/bongo), Tommy López (conga), Dave Pérez (bass), Palmieri (piano), Quintana (vocals). Pérez was an ex-member of Johnny Pacheco's charanga and later worked with Ray Barretto and Típica 73. Eddie released a further five albums with La Perfecta, including two with latin jazz vibraphonist Cal Tjader, before the band fell apart in 1968. 'I just wasn't taking care of business - problems with money, cancelling gigs. Just getting there was all I could manage - just get there and bring some money home to eat. That's about what it came down to.' However, the band's legacy of recorded work provides ample testimony of what a brilliant, ferociously swinging outfit they were. In 1966, Eddie participated in the Tico All-Stars' descargas (latin jam sessions) recorded at New York's Village Gate and guested on the Fania All-Stars' debut album in 1968. After the break-up of La Perfecta, Palmieri used a variety of front-line instrumentation on his albums. The first, Champagne in 1968, featured the trumpet of Alfredo 'Chocolate' Armenteros and Rogers on trombone, together with bassist Israel 'Cachao' López and three lead vocalists: Quintana, Cheo Feliciano and Cynthia Ellis. It contained boogaloo material, the R&B/latin fusion style that was in vogue at the time. Palmieri later described boogaloo as embarrassing, and blamed its emergence on what he perceived as a decline in Latin music's creativity, caused by the isolation of Cuba from the USA.

Palmieri took up the issue of economic and social injustice in the USA on 1969's Justicia. He was joined on this album by young timbales player Nicky Marrero, who became a regular accompanist until the mid-70s. Marrero later joined the Fania All-Stars and Típica 73, and worked extensively as a session musician. Cuban Justo Betancourt sang in the chorus on Justicia and Eddie's next release Superimposition (1969), which contained a whole side of experimental instrumentals. Bassist Andy González, a member of Ray Barretto's band at the time, performed on this album; he eventually joined Palmieri's band in 1971, then split in 1974 to co-found Conjunto Libre with Manny Oquendo. Eddie added the saxophone of Ronnie Cuber to his horn section on Vamonos Pa'l Monte in c.1971. Cuber remained with Palmieri until the late 70s. Brother Charlie guested on organ on this album and Eddie's other 1971 recordings, which were issued between 1971 and 1974. These included Eddie's latin and R&B fusion experiments with the black group Harlem River Drive, and concerts at Sing Sing prison and the University of Puerto Rico. Palmieri signed with ex-bandleader Harvey Averne's Coco Records, and debuted on the label with 1973's Sentido. Quintana left to pursue a solo career and was replaced by 16-year-old Lalo Rodriguez on Sun Of Latin Music in 1974. In 1976, the album won the first ever Grammy Award in the newly created Latin record category. His next Coco release, 1976's Unfinished Masterpiece, which he did not want issued, took him back to Grammy land. Young Cuban violinist Alfredo de la Fé appeared on both albums. Eddie's subsequent five new releases between 1978-87 all received Grammy nominations.

After a break from recording due to contractual wrangles, Eddie made Lucumi Macumba Voodoo for the major record company Epic in 1978, which took the African-derived religions of Cuba, Brazil and Haiti as its theme. The record flopped both in and outside the Latin market, and Palmieri later expressed disappointment about his experience with the label. He also regretted unwittingly joining the Fania Records empire. La Verdad/The Truth won him a fifth Grammy Award, and featured late 80s/early 90s hit-maker Tony Vega on lead vocals. 1981's Eddie Palmieri was Barry Rogers' last appearance on record with Eddie - he played all trombone parts and solos - and marked the one-off return of Ismael Quintana, who sang lead on two tracks. Eddie relocated to Puerto Rico in 1983, but lack of regular work due to rejection by many promoters and musicians, caused him to return to New York in frustration. He made his only UK appearance to date in 1986. Palmieri signed with another major company, Capitol Records, for the disappointing Sueño in 1989. It contained four remakes of previous hits and featured jazz-fusion alto-saxophonist David Sanborn.

● ALBUMS: Eddie Palmieri And His Conjunto La Perfecta (1962)★★★★, El Molestoso Vol. II (1963)★★★, Lo Que Traigo Es Sabroso (1964)★★★, Echando Pa'lante (Straight Ahead) (1964)★★★, Azucar Pa' Ti (Sugar For You) (1965)★★★, Mozambique (1965)★★★, Molasses (1966)★★★, with Cal Tjader El Sonido Nuevo/The New Soul Sound (1966)★★★★, with Cal Tjader Bamboleate (1967)★★★★, Champagne (1968)★★★, Justicia (1969)★★★, Superimposition (1969)★★★, with various artists Lluvia De Estrellas (1970)★★★, Vamonos Pa'l Monte (1971)★★★, Harlem River Drive (1971)★★★, with Harlem River Drive Live At Sing Sing (1972)★★, Sentido (1973)★★★, Eddie Palmieri & Friends In Concert At The University Of Puerto Rico (1973)★★★, The Sun Of Latin Music (1974)★★★★, with Harlem River Drive Live At Sing Sing, Vol.2 (1974)★★, Unfinished Masterpiece (1976)★★, Lucumi Macumba Voodoo (1978)★★★, Eddie Palmieri (1981)★★★, Timeless (1981)★★★, Palo Pa' Rumba (1984)★★★, Solito (1985)★★★, La Verdad/The Truth (1987)★★★★, Sueño (1989)★★, Arete (Bellaphon 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Lo Mejor De Eddie Palmieri (1974)★★★★, The History Of Eddie Palmieri (1975)★★★★, Eddie's Concerto (1976)★★★★, The Music Man (1977)★★★★; Gold 1973-1976 (1978)★★★★, Exploration (Coco 1978)★★★, EP (Fania 1990)★★★.

Palomino Road

The 90s US country group Palomino Road consists of four musicians who have lived in Nashville for some years. The main songwriter, Ronnie Guilbeau (vocals), is the brother of Gib Guilbeau of the Burrito Brothers, and he worked with his father's band until moving to Nashville in the mid-80s. His best-known song is 'Call It Love' recorded by Poco. J.T. Corenflos (guitar) came to Nashville in 1982, and worked on the Grand Ole Opry and as a member of Joe Stampley's band. Randy Frazier (bass) played for Sammy Kershaw, while James Lewis (drums), originally from Kansas City, has been playing in Nashville since 1970. Palomino Road was formed in 1992 and unlike many bands, they are a self-contained unit with no outside musicians or session singers involved. They made the US country charts with a spirited revival of George Jones' 'Why Baby Why'.

● ALBUMS: Palomino Road (Liberty 1993)★★★.

Pama Records

Once the chief rival to Trojan Records, Pama has since evolved into Jet Star, the main reggae distributors in the UK. Originally the brainchild of occasional Jamaican record producers the Palmer Brothers, Pama was founded in London in 1967, releasing an almost endless supply of Jamaican productions on a series of labels that were less high-profile than Trojan's in the white market, but were just as musically strong as its rival's. Among Pama's subsidiary labels were Pama Supreme, Supreme, Crab, Bullet, Gas, New/Nu Beat, Success, Camel, Escort, Unity and Punch, the latter perhaps epitomizing reggae's attitude, depicting a fist punching through a Top 10 pop chart. Through these labels, the brothers worked with nearly all of the top reggae producers, including Laurel Aitken (chiefly Nu Beat), Lee Perry (chiefly Punch), Rupie Edwards (Success), Bunny Lee (Unity, which enjoyed a massive hit with Max Romeo's 'Wet Dream' in 1969) and virtually everyone who was anyone in reggae at the time. They also issued a series of Straighten Up albums in competition with Trojan's Tighten Up series, which remain highly collectable today, plus a smattering of non-reggae LPs, including Butlins Red Coat Revue and an album commemorating the investiture of the Prince Of Wales! By the mid-70s the business was chiefly in the hands of the youngest Palmer brother, Carl, who began to concentrate on establishing a distribution network in the UK, which has gradually expanded to the point of ubiquity: if Jet Star do not distribute it, then it probably is not reggae.

● COMPILATIONS: various artists Crab's Biggest Hits (Crab 1969)★★★, various artists Straighten Up Volume 1 (Pama 1970)★★★★.

Pampini, Gabino

b. Gabino Espinosa, Panama. This renowned soneros (improvising salsa singer) artist originally worked with El Combo Impacto and Roberto y su Zafra. The tracks he recorded with these two bands were later compiled on Otra Vez...Gabino Pampini. Gabino relocated to Miami, USA, where he linked up with Colombian bandleader/pianist/arranger/composer/flautist Hernán Gutiérrez, who worked with Fruko in the 70s. Pampini shared lead vocals with Cuban Javier Oliva on Gutiérrez's Y Ahora...La Tremenda Salsa De Hernán Gutiérrez y su Orquesta in 1980, which was later issued in Colombia under Pampini's name with the title La Hermandad Latina. Three years later, Gabino, Colombian Oscar Alberto Abueta (see Grupo Niche and Alberto Barros) and ex-Los Van Van vocalist, Cuban Israel 'Kantor' Sardiñas, were lead singers on Gutiérrez's modern classic Con Sacrificio, which must rank as one of the top 10 best salsa albums of the 80s. Lamentably, Gutiérrez died shortly afterwards.

Pampini continued in a similar stylistic vein as a solo artist. He teamed up with bassist/arranger/composer Ricardo Lance (b. Barranquilla, Colombia) to co-lead the band Fuerza Noble, and released three albums with them between 1987 and 1988, all recorded in Miami. Fuerza Noble's line-up sported a frontline of two trumpets and two or three trombones plus rhythm section (bass, conga, bongo, timbales and piano) and voices. Ex-Sonora Ponceña (see Papo Lucca) lead singer, Yolanda Rivera, sang in the chorus on all three albums. Pampini later parted company with Lance. In 1989 he guested on Frivolo, recorded in Colombia by Grupo Galé led by young Colombian percussionist, singer, producer Diego Galé. Gabino provided lead vocals to the album's smash hit track 'Mi Vecina'. Pampini signed with the major Latin record company, TH-Rodven, and debuted on the label in 1990 with the Miami-recorded Las Aventuras Musicales de...Gabino Pampini, which included four tracks arranged by Alberto Barros. Meanwhile, Lance made his solo debut as bandleader with Ricardo Lance y su Grupo Sublime in 1989. His Grupo Sublime, a three-trombone band, featured four ex-Fuerza Noble members. The following year, Lance was the musical director and wrote two arrangements on Mas Alla Del Sabor! by female singer/composer Arabella (b. María Margarita Pinillos, 15 June 1950s, Bogotá, Colombia).

● ALBUMS: with Hernán Gutiérrez Y Ahora...La Tremenda Salsa De Hernán Gutiérrez y su Orquesta (1980)★★★, with Gutiérrez Con Sacrificio (1984)★★★★★, Fuerza Noble (1987)★★★, Fuerza Noble (1987)★★★, Fuerza Noble (1988)★★★, with Grupo Galé Frivolo (1989)★★★★, Las Aventuras Musicales de...Gabino Pampini (1990)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with El Combo Impacto and Roberto y su Zafra Otra Vez...Gabino Pampini (1988)★★★★.

Pan African Orchestra

This band is the brainchild of Ghanaian musician and musicologist Nana Danso Abiam and was borne of his desire to unite the diverse sounds of his continent. Accordingly, he compiled a group of 30 musicians from throughout Africa, using purely African instruments and musical signatures. The orchestra included antenteben flutes (Abian's own instrument), wia flutes, gylie (wooden xylophones), gonje (violins with only one string), koras, elephant tusk horns and various forms of drums and percussion instruments. Its birth lay in an academic paper submitted by Abiam to the Ghanaian Ministry of Culture in 1983. His proposal was coloured not only by his heritage and knowledge of his own culture but also his extensive travels, including several years in London. That proposal was rejected, but he had spent enough time working on the brief to enable him to raise the funding necessary himself. By 1988 he began auditioning musicians and bringing them back to his home base in Accra. Abiam developed a special programme, and an adapted form of musical notation (which was previously very much a Western approach to music) to integrate his discoveries, whose backgrounds and cultures were diverse. Even tuning the varied instruments to a governable collective pitch proved difficult. However, with such intricate problems overcome, the Pan African Orchestra made its debut in 1995 with Opus 1, a rich, multi-textural collection.

● ALBUMS: Opus 1 (Real World 1995)★★★★.

Pan Head

b. Anthony Johnson, 1966, St. Mary, d. October 1993, Spanish Town. Pan Head was a dancehall DJ who made his initial impact in 1990. Complying with the dancehall fascination for guns, rude-boy lyrics and homophobia, he associated himself with all the current trends. His initial releases, 'Respect Gunman', 'Punny Printer' and 'Gunman Tune', proved especially popular. His notoriety grew, leading to performances alongside Buju Banton, Capleton, Beenie Man and the Mad Cobra. By 1993 his recorded output revealed a more conscientious stance with the release of 'African Princess', which utilized the 'full up' rhythm, 'Under Bondage', a lucid condemnation of servitude, and, in combination with Yoruba, 'Teaser'. It was evident that he was fighting hard to establish his own style, and there were media predictions that his career would flourish. However, his potential success was ended by a gunman in October 1993, when he was leaving a dance; Pan Head left a widow, two children and a stunned community. The dancehall DJs were united in their condemnation of the event, as demonstrated on their vinyl outpourings: Capleton released 'Cold Blooded Murderer', Beenie Man's denunciation of the homicide resulted in 'No Mama No Cry' with Luciano, while Buju Banton responded with 'Murderer'. Pan Head's untimely demise signalled a depressing era in the history of dancehall, as numerous DJs met with a similar fate, including Early B and Dirtsman.

● ALBUMS: Punny Printer (Imp 1994)★★★, Tribute To Pan Head (Imp 1995)★★★.

Pan, Hermes

b. Hermes Panagiotopulos, between 1905 and 1910, Memphis, Tennessee, USA, d. 19 September 1990, Beverly Hills, California, USA. A dancer and legendary choreographer who worked closely with Fred Astaire on most of his film musicals and television specials. Pan danced in clubs and in the singing chorus of the Broadway musical Top Speed, which featured Ginger Rogers, before moving to Hollywood in the early 30s. After serving as assistant to dance director Dave Gould on Flying Down To Rio, Astaire and Rogers' first picture together, and the follow-up, The Gay Divorcee, Pan choreographed all of Astaire's films at RKO, including Roberta, Top Hat, Follow The Fleet, Swing Time, Shall We Dance, Carefree, and The Story Of Vernon And Irene Castle. He won an Oscar for his imaginative staging of the 'Fun House' sequence in another RKO feature, A Damsel In Distress (1937), in which Astaire appeared with George Burns and Gracie Allen. Pan also worked with Astaire on Second Chorus, Blue Skies, The Barkleys Of Broadway (with Ginger Rogers again), Three Little Words, Let's Dance, Silk Stockings, and Finian's Rainbow (1968) which was their last movie together. Pan also made one of his rare on-screen appearances in that one. Over the years, he had occasionally danced in films such as My Gal Sal, Sweet Rosie O'Grady, Moon Over Miami, Kiss Me Kate, and Pin-Up Girl. However, for most of his career, he was content to make major stars - Betty Grable, Rita Hayworth, Don Ameche, Howard Keel, Juliet Prowse, Alice Faye, Carmen Miranda, Ann Miller, Kathryn Grayson and many others - look good in a variety of mostly entertaining musical pictures such as Billy Rose's Diamond Horseshoe, Song Of The Islands, That Night In Rio, Footlight Serenade, Springtime In The Rockies, Coney Island, Lovely To Look At, That Lady In Ermine, Hit The Deck, The Student Prince, Meet Me In Las Vegas, Pal Joey, Can-Can, Flower Drum Song, My Fair Lady, Darling Lili, and Lost Horizon. He also staged Cleopatra's spectacular entry into Rome for the Elizabeth Taylor-Richard Burton epic Cleopatra in 1963. Pan won Emmy Awards for his work on the highly acclaimed television specials An Evening With Fred Astaire (1959) and Astaire Time (1961). In 1981 he received the National Film Award for achievement in cinema, and six years later was presented with the prestigious Joffrey Ballet Award. A true innovator, many of the films in which he mixed ballet, jazz and tap, are now rightly regarded as classics.

Panama Hattie

Considered to be similar in some ways to Dubarry Was A Lady (1939), this show was nevertheless felt to be inferior to that one, although it employed the same creative team, and ran for some four months longer. Panama Hattie opened at the 46th Street Theatre on 30 October 1940, with a Cole Porter score, a book by Herbert Fields and B.G. 'Buddy' DeSylva, and with the dynamic Ethel Merman on hand to belt out the songs. She plays Hattie Maloney, the owner of a nightclub in Panama City. Outwardly cynical, but a real pussy-cat deep down inside (a perfect Merman character) her prospective marriage to well-heeled divorcé, Nick Bullitt (James Dunn), hangs on the approval of Geraldine - sometimes known as Jerry - (Joan Carroll), the precocious eight-year-old daughter from his first marriage. Hattie wins her over during the conciliatory 'Let's Be Buddies' (Hattie: 'Would you like a big box of chocolate creams?'/Jerry: 'No, for candy I never did care'/Hattie: 'Then will you let me get you a cute little dog?'/Jerry: 'Would you mind making it a bear?'). Merman had several other clever Porter numbers, including 'Make It Another Old Fashioned, Please', 'I'm Throwing A Ball Tonight', and 'I've Still Got My Health' ('I can't count my ribs, like His Nibs, Fred Astaire/But I've still got my health, so what do I care!'). The rest of the songs included 'All I've Got To Get Now Is My Man', 'Fresh As A Daisy', 'My Mother Would Love You', 'Who Would Have Dreamed?', and 'Visit Panama'. The cast included some familiar names of the future such as Betty Hutton, along with June Allyson and Vera-Ellen who were both in the chorus. Panama Hattie, which was the fourth in a series of five musicals that Porter and Merman did together, enjoyed a run of 501 performances. It marked the beginning of a decade during which they both produced some of their finest work: Porter with Kiss Me, Kate (1948), and Merman with Annie Get Your Gun (1946). Panama Hattie also had a decent run of 308 performances in London's West End, where it starred Bebe Daniels, Max Wall, Ivan Brandt, Claude Hulbert, and Richard Hearne.

Panasonic

A minimalist techno duo of Mika Vaino and Ilpo Valsanen, Panasonic were formed in Finland in the mid-90s along with a third member, Sami Salo. Having forged their own studio environment in Turku, the group set about filling it with both antique and modern recording equipment, plus industrial appliances, to fulfil their plans to record some of north Europe's most savage music. Dubbed 'the Pet Shop Boys of post-industrial noise', the group made its debut in 1995 with Vakio. Afterwards Salo left to join the army, and the group's sound expanded slightly from Vakio's intimidating, claustrophobic minimalism. Kulma was just as discomforting as its predecessor, but relied more on grating, unexpected disruption to produce its cocktail of aural terrors. Despite this progression into new realms of unlistenability, Panasonic were attracting a varied and vociferous fan base. Performances in Japan, New York and London (at the Finnish embassy) emphasized the duo's ability to be both musically resourceful and challenging. That impression was confirmed when the band was selected as support on the Swans farewell 1997 tour.

● ALBUMS: Vakio (Blast First 1995)★★, Kulma (Blast First 1997)★★.

Pandemonium

This Alaskan heavy metal band was formed by the Resch brothers - Chris (vocals), Eric (bass) and David (guitar) - in 1981. They relocated to Los Angeles, California, and teamed up with Chris Latham (guitar) and Dave Graybill (drums) the following year. Making their debut on the first Metal Massacre compilation with 'Fighting Backwards', it opened the door to a full contract with Metal Blade Records. Three albums followed over the next five years, with each successive release becoming less formularized (despite displaying the continually strong influence of Van Halen), but to little commercial advantage.

● ALBUMS: Heavy Metal Soldiers (Metal Blade 1984)★★★, Hole In The Sky (Metal Blade 1985)★★, The Kill (Metal Blade 1988)★★.

Pandora

b. Amelia Pandora, Sweden. One of her country's many emergent techno/dance stars of the early 90s, Pandora made her debut in 1993 with 'Trust Me'. The single, which featured a rap section provided by friend and colleague K-Slim, immediately catapulted her to the top of domestic dance charts and also created a strong impression throughout mainland Europe. While many similar female dance singers have simply served as a focal point for backroom mixers, Pandora - whose resemblance to Marilyn Monroe has been continually remarked upon - proved herself very much a creative presence with the release of her accompanying debut album. One Of A Kind featured several noted Swedish producers, including Dr Maxx Family, Sir Martin and T:O:E:C.

● ALBUMS: One Of A Kind (Virgin 1993)★★★.

Pandora's Box

This one-off project was put together by US producer Jim Steinman to record his rock opera, Original Sin. The band featured Roy Bittan (piano), Jeff Bova (synthesizers), Jim Bralower (drums), Eddie Martinez (guitar) and Steve Buslowe (bass). Utilizing a series of guest vocalists, who included Elaine Caswell, Ellen Foley, Gina Taylor, Deliria Wild, Holly Sherwood and Laura Theodore, Original Sin was a grandiose concept album themed on sex. Featuring classical interludes, spoken introductions, atmospheric ballads and breath-taking rock 'n' roll, it was almost too ambitious. Despite state-of-the-art production (courtesy of Steinman), it never received the sort of recognition afforded his Meat Loaf projects.

● ALBUMS: Original Sin (Virgin 1989)★★★.

Pandoras

Led by vocalist/guitarist Paula Pierce, the Pandoras began their career reviving garage-band and girl-group genres. Based in Los Angeles, California, USA, the band made its debut in 1984 with an EP, The Pandoras. Greg Shaw of Bomp Records produced their debut album, which mixed a naïve charm with simple, fuzz-drenched pop songs. Pierce then fired the remaining band members for Stop Pretending, which maintained a love for 60s music while playing up their sexual image. However, a subsequent major contract with Elektra Records fell through, and a completed album, Come Inside, was shelved. Pierce then continued the sexual imagery on the Rock Hard EP and Live Nymphomania, where cluttered playing and off-key vocals accentuated how dull the material on offer had become.

● ALBUMS: It's About Time (Voxx 1984)★★★, Stop Pretending (Rhino 1986)★★★, Live Nymphomania (Restless 1989)★.

Pannell, Bill

b. USA. Having served his musical apprenticeship in the Army Air Force Band, Bill Pannell formed his first dance band orchestra in 1945 in Fresno, California, USA. This group stayed predominantly on the west coast, and featured singers Allan King and Kenny Kenniston. Their longest engagement was a 10-year stand at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel, with record contracts for Val, Fanfare, Anco and London Records. Later they transferred to the Las Vegas lounge circuit, but by now the band had reduced from its original strength of 12 to accommodate the more austere financial climate facing dance bands. The group continued, often returning to the Roosevelt Hotel, until the early 70s, at which time Pannell was forced to give up his career as a bandleader due to the onset of an arthritic condition.

Pantera

This Texan heavy metal quartet was formed in 1981. They initially comprised Terry Glaze (guitar, vocals), Darrell Abbott (guitar), Vince Abbott (drums) and Rex Rocker (bass). Drawing musical inspiration from Kiss, Aerosmith and Deep Purple, they debuted with Metal Magic in 1983. This well-received set led to prestigious support slots to Dokken, Stryper and Quiet Riot. Projects In The Jungle indicated that the band were evolving quickly and starting to build a sound of their own. The Kiss nuances had disappeared and the band sounded, at times, similar to early Def Leppard, with anthemic cuts such as 'Heavy Metal Rules' and 'Out For Blood' leading the charge. The membership altered their names at this juncture, with Glaze becoming Terence Lee, Darrell Abbott switching to Diamond Darrell and brother Vince emerging as Vinnie Paul. Power Metal was the first album on which Phil Anselmo took over lead vocals, but it lacked the depth and polish of previous efforts, and had yet to make the full conversion to heavy thrash that later became the band's trademark. Diamond Darrell turned down the offer to join Megadeth at this point, in order to concentrate on new Pantera material. The decision proved crucial, as a return to form was made with 1990's Cowboys From Hell. This was an inspired collection of infectious hard rock, played with unabashed fervour, with Anselmo growing as a creative and visual force. Vulgar Display Of Power, meanwhile, belied half of its title by invoking a sense of genuine songwriting prowess to augment the bone-crushing arrangements. Establishing a fierce reputation, it surprised few of the group's supporters when Far Beyond Driven entered both the UK and US album charts at number 1. Rock music had found powerful new ambassadors in the brutally honest and savagely executed thrash metal of Pantera. The key word here is 'loud', as Official Live: 101 Proof demonstrates without a doubt.

● ALBUMS: Metal Magic (Metal Magic 1983)★★★, Projects In The Jungle (Metal Magic 1984)★★★, I Am The Night (Metal Magic 1985)★★★, Power Metal (Metal Magic 1988)★★, Cowboys From Hell (Atco 1990)★★★★, Vulgar Display Of Power (Atco 1992)★★★★, Far Beyond Driven (East West 1994)★★★★, Driven Downunder Tour Tour '94 Souvenir Collection (East West 1995)★★, The Great Southern Trendkill (East West 1996)★★★, Official Live: 101 Proof (East West 1997)★★.

● VIDEOS: Vulgar Video (Warner Vision 1994), Watch It Go (Warner Vision 1998).

Papa Bue

(see Jensen, Papa Bue)

Papa Chuk

b. Charles Roberts, *c.*1969. Hardcore hip-hop artist from Houston, Texas, where he moved in 1991 from his native Austin. As a child Papa Chuk, 'The Desolate One', practised rapping along to b-side instrumentals, and was obviously strongly influenced by Naughty By Nature's Treach in his delivery. His debut album saw him also introduce a Jamaican patois/dancehall style, notably on cuts like 'Make Way For The Rudeboy', though other tracks like 'Desert Dog' and 'Down And Dirty' needed more to distinguish them.

● ALBUMS: Badlands (Pendulum 1994)★★★.

Papa Levi, Phillip

b. Phillip Williams. Papa Levi originally rose to fame on south London's Saxon sound system in the early 80s. His committed and uncompromising stance has, perhaps, denied him the kind of mainstream success that his talent deserves. As the premier UK MC of the period he was notable for a number of firsts: he was the first from the Saxon posse to make a record - 'Mi God Mi King' (for Barry Boom), the first UK MC to have a number 1 record in Jamaica when the same record was released on the Taxi label - and the first to sign a major recording contract - with Island Records. However, while others reaped the subsidiary benefits of these achievements, Papa Levi never moved from the Saxon sound system. In his live performances, he dominated the proceedings and little was lost in the transfer to vinyl, as demonstrated on 'Mi God Mi King', when he dropped into the 'fast style' at the end of the record, to shattering effect. The rest of the decade saw him notching up some notable performances in both Kingston and New York with Saxon on tour. The 90s have neither seen nor heard much from Papa Levi, but judging by his past performances the fireworks will start again when he returns to the studio.

● ALBUMS: Trouble In Africa (1987)★★★★, Code Of Practice (Ariwa 1990)★★★, various artists Coughing Up Fire - Saxon Studio Live (Greensleeves 1985)★★, Great British MCs (Fashion 1985)★★★.

Papa San

b. Tyrone Thompson, 1966, Spanish Town, Jamaica, West Indies. Probably the fastest DJ in the world and certainly one of the most inventive, Papa San began his career on the People's Choice, Small Axe and Creation sound systems, based around Spanish Town, where he spent most of his early years. In 1983 he joined Lee's Unlimited and by the following year could be heard on Metromedia. He first recorded in 1985, 'Animal Party' on Black Solidarity being one of his earliest releases, so too 'Talking Parrot' for Rosie's Uprising, and both were distinguished by an ingenious lyrical slant and a quick-fire delivery, inspired in part by the fast-talking style instigated by UK MCs on the Saxon sound system. Over the next two years he recorded for Isiah Laing's Supreme label, Bunny Lee, Prince Jazzbo, Harmodio, King Jammy and the late King Tubby, among others, voicing mainly cultural material and intricate tales of ghetto living complete with vivid descriptions of local characters. In 1988, after a successful spell in New York with the African Love and Papa Mike sets, he recorded 'DJ Business' for Fashion Records in London, an eight-minute tour de force that listed in detail the entire history of reggae DJs. By all accounts it was voiced in one take and remains an essential illustration of his unique abilities. Fashion later teamed him with Tippa Irie for their JA To UK MC Clash (Volume 2) album. The next two years were spent recording in Jamaica with varying degrees of success. Gussie Clarke reunited him with his former Creation partner Lady G for 'Round Table Talk', but it was not until 1990 that he found another winning streak, sharpening his skills with Black Scorpio on both sound and record, voicing for Mikey Bennett, Captain Sinbad, Penthouse, Digital B and King Jammy's son, John John, before really hitting his stride around 1991-92. He produced his own 'Strange' and the bizarre 'Maddy Maddy Cry'. 'Hippity Hippity Hop' arrived on Robbie Shakespeare's Powermatic label, and fine tunes for Exterminator, Tan Yah, Shocking Vibes, Wild Apache and Lloyd Honeyghan followed. He then began a rewarding stint with Sly And Robbie's Taxi label in 1993, though in December of that year his elder brother Dirtsman, also a DJ, was shot and killed in Jamaica.

● ALBUMS: Animal Party (Sonic Sounds 1986)★★★, Lyric Shop (Black Solidarity 1988)★★★★, with Tippa Irie JA To UK MC Clash (Fashion 1988)★★★★, Style And Fashion (Black Scorpio 1989)★★★★, Fire Inna Dancehall (Pipper 1991)★★★.

Papadimitriou, Sakis

b. 1 May 1940, Kavala, Greece. Pianist, broadcaster, promoter, novelist and journalist Papadimitriou has been one of the moving forces behind the still-small Greek jazz scene. His radio programmes and articles in the magazine TZAZ helped build an informed audience for jazz at its most experimental. Papadimitriou's duo with Floros Floridis (saxophone/clarinet) was Greece's first free music group. Unfortunately, 'musical and personal differences' made it a short-lived one. Although Papadimitriou periodically works with other Greek musicians, his discography is composed almost entirely of solo piano recordings. Particularly striking is his use - alternately subtle and dramatic - of the piano's interior: plucking, strumming and striking the strings of the instrument.

● ALBUMS: with Floros Floridis Improvisation At Barakos (1979)★★★, Piano Contacts (1980)★★★, Piano Plays (1983)★★★★, First Move (1985)★★★, Piano Oracles (1989)★★, Piano Cellules 1986 recording (1991)★★★.

Papaíto

b. Mario Muñoz Salazar, 1920s, Buena Vista, Cuba. Papaíto is an elderly Afro-Cuban who possesses a captivating bitter-sweet voice which he effortlessly employs in his inspiraciones: the improvisational ingredient fundamental to traditional salsa singing. First and foremost he is a percussionist, and he worked with cha cha chá originator, Enrique Jorrín, in Orquesta América. He moved to Mexico, where he performed in various movies. While there, Papaíto joined the 'staff' of the legendary Cuban musical institution, Sonora Matancera, and remains a member up to the present day. He fled Fidel Castro's Cuba in 1960 and took up residence in the USA. His session work outside Matancera included appearances on two highly-regarded albums by compatriot Carlos 'Patato' Valdez: the 60s classic Patato & Totico, with Cuban vocalist/percussionist Eugenio 'Totico' Arango and tres guitar master Arsenio Rodríguez; and 1976's Ready For Freddy. On the latter, Papaíto sang the lead vocals of his self-penned 'La Ambulancia'. He performed on trombonist Mark Weinstein's late 60s avant garde 'underground culture hit' Cuban Roots, which was produced by Al Santiago. He participated on Mongo Santamaría's Up From The Roots in 1972. The following year, Papaíto sessioned on the solo debut, El Castigador, by former Orquesta Broadway and Sonora Matancera singer Roberto Torres. In 1977 he contributed percussion to Israel 'Cachao' López's famed descarga (latin jam) outings on Salsoul Records.

He signed with SAR Records, which was founded by Sergio Bofill, Andriano García and Roberto Torres, and released five highly successful solo albums as a lead singer on the label between 1979-84. Torres produced and performed on all five. On four of the albums, Papaíto was accompanied by a trumpet-led conjunto (group), augmented on some tracks by flute and violin. Three of these conjunto sets featured songs associated with Cheo Marquetti, a popular Cuban singer and composer of the 40s and 50s. Papaíto fronted a small charanga (flute, violins rhythm section and voices band), augmented by a tres, for his 1980 tribute to the great Cuban singer/composer Abelardo Barroso (1905-1972): Papaíto Rinde Homenaje A Abelardo Barroso - which was probably the best album to come out of the SAR stable. Papaíto became a member of the SAR house band, which recorded and performed under the name of the SAR All Stars. On 1981's SAR All Stars Recorded Live In Club Ochentas, Album 2, he sang lead vocals on a notable descarga interpretation of the classic 1931 hit 'El Manisero' (The Peanut Vendor). He appeared on SAR recordings by singer/composer Linda Leida (b. Villas, Cuba), Henry Fiol and Torres. Other artists Papaíto has sessioned with, include ex-Septeto Nacional vocalist Alfredo Valdés, his son, pianist/arranger Alfredo Valdés Jnr. and Peruvian singer/composer Melcochita. He made his UK debut in 1987 with a backing band that included Paris-based Cuban pianist Alfredo Rodríguez, who featured on Ready For Freddy and Papaíto (1982). In 1990, Papaíto was hired by composer/executive producer Victor Raúl Sánchez 'Patillas' to perform the lead vocals of two of his songs on Valdesa Records Presenta Vol. 1: Salsa Sudada.. Solo releases and albums on which Papaíto sang lead vocals: with Carlos 'Patato' Valdez Ready For Freddy (1976), Roberto Torres Presenta A Su Amigo: Papaíto (1979), Papaíto (1980), Papaíto Rinde Homenaje A Abelardo Barroso (1980), SAR All Stars Recorded Live In Club Ochentas, Album 2 (1981), SAR All Stars Interpretan A Rafael Hernández (1981), Papaíto (1982), Para Mis Amigos (1984), with various SAR artists Cañonazo De La SAR! (1984), with Adalberto Santiago, Melcochita, Herman Olivera, Yayo El Indio Valdesa Records Presenta Vol. 1: Salsa Sudada (1990).

Papas Fritas

Formed in Massachusetts, USA, Papas Fritas are the latest exponents of 'lo-fi' to emerge from that region, following in the footsteps of Lou Barlow's Sebadoh. Comprising Tony Goddess (songs, guitar), Keith Gendel (bass, vocals) and Shivika Asthana (drums, vocals), the group was formed at Tufts University. After signing with the acclaimed independent record label Minty Fresh Records, the group spent six months working on their self-titled debut album in a studio on Electric Avenue in Somerville, Massachusetts. The resultant collection, featuring beautiful, crafted pop in songs such as 'Lame To Be' and 'Explain', saw them win approving critical nods not only in the independent, alternative press but throughout the mainstream media. By this stage in their development, they had foregone the production values of lo-fi for a more clean-cut, classic pop sound, with Goddess declaring to the press his conversion to the works of the Beatles and the Beach Boys. The group's second album, Helioself, was recorded in a disused schoolhouse in Gloucester, Massachusetts. A combination of upbeat pop numbers ('Sing About Me') and delicate ballads ('Just To See You') reaffirmed their popularity among critics, while tours with Blur, the Cardigans and the Eels brought them to the attention of a wider audience.

● ALBUMS: Papas Fritas (Minty Fresh 1995)★★★, Helioself (Minty Fresh 1997)★★★.

Papasov, Ivo

b. 1952, Kurdzhali, Thrace, Bulgaria. The most famous practitioner of Bulgaria's most favoured musical format; master clarinettist Ivo Papasov is the King Of Wedding Music. Though Western European eyebrows might be raised at such a title, it equates Papasov with the status of superstar in his native country. Papasov and his Orchestra tour the Balkans, playing several weddings a week (many couples will re-arrange the dates of their ceremonies to coincide with a blank entry in his diary). He descends from a long line of zurna (double-reed instrument) and clarinetists. After forming his first ensemble in 1974, he gradually evolved from a traditional Thracian repertoire into a jazz-inspired improvisational set. This new work nevertheless maintained the complex time-signatures required of traditional Bulgarian dance music. Papasov had stumbled over the incredibly popular formula which would see him become a national toast. Though he boasts many domestic releases, the two albums listed below were the first to be circulated internationally.

● ALBUMS: Orpheus Ascending (1989)★★★, Balkanology (1991)★★★★.

Paper Lace

This UK pop group was formed in 1969, and comprised Michael Vaughan (b. 27 July 1950, Sheffield, England; guitar), Chris Morris (b. 1 November 1954, Nottingham, England), Carlo Santanna (b. 29 July 1947, nr. Rome, Italy; guitar), Philip Wright (b. 9 April 1950, Nottingham, England; drums/lead vocals) and Cliff Fish (b. 13 August 1949, Ripley, England; bass). All were residents of Nottingham, England, the lace manufacturing city that lent their mainstream pop group its name. A season at Tiffany's, a Rochdale club, led to television appearances, but a passport to the charts did not arrive until a 1974 victory in Opportunity Knocks, the ITV talent contest series, put their winning song, Mitch Murray and Peter Callender's 'Billy Don't Be A Hero', on the road to a UK number 1. Hopes of emulating this success in the USA were dashed by Bo Donaldson And The Heywoods' cover. The follow-up, 'The Night Chicago Died', set in the Prohibition era, was untroubled by any such competition and topped the US charts, narrowly missing out in the UK by peaking at number 3. 'The Black-Eyed Boys', a UK number 11 hit from Murray and Callender was the group's last taste of chart success - apart from a joint effort with local football heroes, Nottingham Forest FC, for 1978's, 'We've Got The Whole World In Our Hands'.

● ALBUMS: Paper Lace And Other Bits Of Material (1974)★★, First Edition (1975)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Paper Lace Collection (Pickwick 1976)★★.

Pappalardi, Felix

b. 1939, New York City, New York, USA, d. April 17 1983. A highly respected bass player and arranger, Pappalardi was present at countless sessions, when folk musicians started to employ electric instruments on a regular basis. Ian And Sylvia, Fred Neil, Tom Rush, and Richard and Mimi Farina were among those benefiting from his measured contributions. He later worked with the Mugwumps, a seminal New York folk-rock quartet which included Cass Elliot and Denny Doherty, later of the Mamas And The Papas, and future Lovin' Spoonful guitarist, Zalman Yanovsky. Pappalardi also oversaw sessions by the Vagrants and the Youngbloods, contributing several original songs, composed with his wife Gail Collins, to both groups' releases. An association with Cream established his international reputation. Felix produced the group's studio work from Disraeli Gears onwards, a position he maintained when bassist Jack Bruce embarked on a solo career in 1969. Cream's break-up left a vacuum which Pappalardi attempted to fill with Mountain, the brash rock group he formed with former Vagrant guitarist Leslie West. Partial deafness, attributed to exposure to the excessive volumes that Mountain performed at, ultimately forced the bassist to retire and subsequent work was confined to the recording studio. He recorded two albums in the late 70s, one of which, Felix Pappalardi & Creation, included the services of Paul Butterfield and Japanese musicians, Masayuki Higuchi (drums), Shigru Matsumoto (bass), Yoshiaki Iijima (guitar) and Kazuo Takeda (guitar). Pappalardi's life ended tragically in April 1983 when he was shot dead by his wife.

● ALBUMS: Felix Pappalardi & Creation (A&M 1976)★, Don't Worry, Ma (1979)★.

Parachute Men

Formed in Leeds, Yorkshire, England, in 1985 by Fiona Gregg (b. 26 July 1963, Norwich, Norfolk, England; vocals), Stephen H. Gregg (b. 29 November 1960, Bishop Auckland, Co. Durham, England; guitar), Andrew Howes (bass) and Mark Boyce (drums), the Parachute Men proved to have a bat's ear for a tune, yet were persistently undersold by circumstance. Signing to Fire Records in 1987 was a promising move, particularly when 'The Innocents' was released to warm approval, but shortly afterwards, Howes and Boyce departed acrimoniously, leaving Fiona and Stephen H. Gregg to tour as an acoustic set-up until Matthew Parkin (bass) and Paul Walker (b. 7 July 1966, West Yorkshire, England; drums) filled the vacancies. The second album was released well over a year after it was recorded, costing the band valuable momentum and causing Parkin to be replaced by Colleen Browne (b. 25 August 1966, Kelowna, Canada), but the Parachute Men continued to create lovingly textured guitar sounds. However, the lack of media focus, undoubtedly exacerbated by their northern location, ensured that their talents remained the knowledge of a privileged few, and they disbanded soon after the release of Earth, Dogs And Eggshells.

● ALBUMS: The Innocents (Fire 1988)★★★, Earth, Dogs And Eggshells (Fire 1990)★★★.

Parade

This excellent US pop/harmony act was ostensibly a studio group based around songwriter/producer Jerry Riopelle. Having established his reputation with Ramona King's original version of 'The Shoop Shoop Song (It's In His Kiss)', Riopelle enjoyed a brief association with Phil Spector, before pursuing his backroom career with Nino Tempo And April Stevens and Clydie King. The Parade, comprising Riopelle, Murray MacLeod and Smokey Roberds, made its debut in February 1967 with 'Sunshine Girl', a beautiful, summery group composition which reached number 20 in the US chart. Despite a craftedness redolent of the Turtles or Association, none of the Parade's subsequent five singles were hits and the group dissolved in 1968.

Parade - Prince And The Revolution

Another soundtrack that fared more favourably than the movie, 'Under The Cherry Moon', from which it came, this was also the record that marked Prince's return to the live arena. The record itself came with a high camp video and guaranteed hit in the shape of 'Kiss' (which a collaboration of Tom Jones and the Art Of Noise would later cover), a delightfully funky little number around which the world threatened to dance. Elsewhere, both 'Girls And Boys' and 'Anotherloverholenyohead' charted. While the lifting strains of 'Sometimes It Snows In April' rounded off a wonderfully whole album, nothing could quite save the film.

- Tracks: Christopher Tracey's Parade; New Position; I Wonder U; Under The Cherry Moon; Girls And Boys; Life Can Be So Nice; Venus De Milo; Mountains; Do U Lie; Kiss; Anotherloverholenyohead; Sometimes It Snows In April.
- First released 1986
- UK peak chart position: 4
- USA peak chart position: 3

Paradis, Vanessa

b. c.1972, Paris, France. Model and singer Vanessa Paradis has widely been dubbed her home nation's 'Lolita' of the 90s. Her debut single, the insistent 'Joe Le Taxi', was released in 1987 while Paradis was still just 14 years old. It stayed at number 1 in the French charts for 11 weeks, and also found success in the UK and the rest of Europe. She had first entered the studio at the age of 12 under the wing of her uncle, actor Didier Pain. There she met Pain's friend Franck Langolff, who provided the music for her first two albums, which were only released domestically. Noted French writer Serge Gainsbourg wrote all the words for the second of these collections. Further notoriety arrived with an appearance in black feathers on a trapeze for the 1992 Coco Chanel perfume advert, directed by Jean Paul Goude, former husband of Grace Jones. She spent the first part of 1992 in New York, USA, recording her debut English-language album with the help of rumoured romantic paramour Lenny Kravitz. He wrote and produced the whole of the rather insubstantial Vanessa Paradis. Selections included a bizarre cover version of the Velvet Underground's 'Waiting For The Man'. Another song, a hopelessly narcissistic effort entitled 'Lenny Kravitz', was written by Kravitz for Paradis to sing. The lines 'He is so funky and he's looking good, And he does it like a good man should' led to further debate in the press about the nature of their relationship. Her popularity in France remained huge despite the eventually lack of success which greeted the album internationally. 'Be My Baby' became another major seller, while on her promotional tour Paradis was able to sell out six nights at the Paris Olympia without any difficulty. Critics at home and abroad remained reviled not only by her songs, but also her 'little girl lost' sexuality and the largely middle-aged male company she kept. Paradis had a simple, appropriately Americanised answer, 'I don't give a shit'.

- ALBUMS: Vanessa Paradis (1992)★★★, Live (Polydor 1994)★★.
- VIDEOS: Vanessa Paradis: Tous Les Clips (1994).

Paradise - Hawaiian Style

Elvis Presley's 60s film career was hampered by poor plots between which it is hard to distinguish. This 1966 feature compounds the problem by simply revisiting the location of one of the singer's most popular movies, Blue Hawaii. It is there the comparisons end; Paradise - Hawaiian Style had little of the former's attractive points. Here Presley plays a helicopter pilot flitting from one mini-crisis to another on the way to true love. A soundtrack album, comprising a meagre 10 songs, was hastily recorded. Seen by Presley aficionados as one of his worst albums, it featured material of remarkably poor quality, notably 'Queen Wahine's Papaya', and also, interestingly, two 'out-takes' (of 'Datin'' and 'A Dog's Life') that featured studio chat that betrayed Presley's dissatisfaction with the material he was required to sing.

Paradise Lost

This Halifax, Yorkshire, England-based death metal quintet was formed in 1988, deriving their name from John Milton's epic poem. The band consisted of Nick Holmes (b. 7 January 1970, Halifax, Yorkshire, England), Gregor Mackintosh (b. 20 June 1970, Halifax, Yorkshire, England; guitar), Aaron Aedy (b. 19 December 1969, Bridlington, Yorkshire, England; guitar), Stephen Edmondson (b. 30 December 1969, Bridlington, Yorkshire, England; bass) and Matthew Archer (b. 14 July 1970, Leicester, Yorkshire, England; drums), and they were signed to the independent Peaceville label on the strength of two impressive demos. They debuted in 1990 with Lost Paradise, which was heavily influenced by Napalm Death, Obituary and Death. It featured indecipherable grunting from Holmes, over a barrage of metallic white noise. Gothic saw a major innovation in the 'grindcore' genre, with female vocals, keyboards and guitar lines that, for once, were not lost in the mix. Importantly, the tempo had also eased: 'We started to play more slowly because all the others were playing as fast as possible.' Many, notably Asphyx and Autopsy, followed suit. With indications in the early 90s of the metal subgenres becoming accepted within the mainstream, it came as no surprise when Paradise Lost found a wider audience with Shades Of God, their first effort for Music For Nations. Recorded with producer Simon Efemey (Diamond Head, Wonder Stuff), and with artwork from cult cartoonist Dave McKean, this release was heralded in the press as a 'coming of age'. Sell-out shows in Europe followed, before the group returned to Longhome studios in the UK, with Efemey once again in attendance. The As I Die EP gained a strong foothold on MTV, and gained approval from peers including Metallica, before Icon was released in September 1993. If previous offerings had seen the band's fanbase expand, Icon brought about an explosion of interest, and acclaim usually reserved for the US gods of death metal. Reactions to the band's live shows in the USA with Sepultura were equally strong. However, before sessions for a fifth album could begin, Archer amicably departed, to be replaced by Lee Morris, who joined in time for the release of 1995's excellent Draconian Times, by which time Paradise Lost's popularity was such that several promotional concerts had to be performed under the alias the Painless.

● ALBUMS: Lost Paradise (Peaceville 1990)★★★, Gothic (Peaceville 1991)★★★, Shades Of God (Music For Nations 1992)★★★, Icon (Music For Nations 1993)★★★★, Draconian Times (Music For Nations 1995)★★★★, One Second (Music For Nations 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Singles Collection 5-CD box set (Music For Nations 1997)★★★★, Reflection (Music For Nations 1998)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Live Death (1990), Harmony Breaks (1994).

Paradons

Formed c.1959 in Bakersfield, California, USA. The Paradons were a vocal group which scored one US Top 20 hit in 1960 and was never heard from again. The group was comprised of lead singer West Tyler plus Billy Myers, William Powers and Chuck Weldon, all students at the same high school. They were discovered by Werly Fairburn and Madelon Baker, who were setting up a record label called Milestone, and were taken to Hollywood to record Tyler's 'Diamonds And Pearls'. It was the label's first release and reached number 18 nationally, but subsequent singles, 'Bells Ring' and 'I Had A Dream', failed to repeat its success. A switch to Warner Brothers Records yielded one more single which failed to chart and the group disbanded.

Paradox

This German thrash-metal outfit was formed in 1986 by ex-Warhead duo Charly Steinhauer (vocals, guitar) and Axel Blaha (drums). After a series of false starts and a track included on the Teutonic Invasion Part 1 compilation, the line-up stabilized with the addition of Markus Spyth (guitar) and Roland Stahl (bass). Signing to UK label Roadrunner, they delivered Product Of Imagination in 1987, a collection of formulaic speed-metal material. Heresy saw a major personnel reshuffle and a marked improvement in their conversion of Metallica and Anthrax riffing. Stahl and Spyth had been replaced by Dieter Roth (guitar), Manfred Springer (guitar) and Armin Donderer (bass), with the expanded line-up allowing a greater degree of flexibility live and adding more depth to their studio sound.

● ALBUMS: Product Of Imagination (Roadrunner 1987)★★, Heresy (Roadrunner 1989)★★★★.

Paragons (R&B)

An R&B vocal group from Brooklyn, New York, New York, USA. With their high false falsetto and exotic warbling, the Paragons represented a rock 'n' roll doo-wop sound - sometimes called 'greasy' - that was extremely popular on the east coast in the late 50s. The members were lead Julius McMichael, Ben Frazier, Al Brown, Donald Travis and Ricky Jackson. The group was signed by Paul Winley in 1957 and their first record on the Winley label, 'Florence'/'Hey Little School Girl' was a local New York hit in early 1957. Later that year they followed that hit with another remarkable ballad, 'Let's Start Over Again'. The group had no more hits, but continued to record fine music into the 60s.

● COMPILATIONS: The Paragons Meet The Jesters (Jubilee 1959)★★★, The Paragons Vs. The Harptones (Musicnote 1963)★★★, Simply The Paragons (Rare Bird 1974)★★★, The Paragons Meet The Jesters (Collectables 1990)★★★, The Best Of The Paragons (Collectables 1990)★★★, 'War': The Paragons Vs The Jesters (Sting Music Ltd 1993)★★★.

Paragons (reggae)

One of the classic reggae vocal groups, the Paragons recorded extensively throughout the 60s, and, by the time of their disbandment in 1970, had left behind a string of classic sides with which few of their rivals could compete. Originally a quartet comprising Garth 'Tyrone' Evans, Bob Andy (b. Keith Anderson, 1944, Jamaica, West Indies), Leroy Stamp and Junior Menz, the Paragons evolved from a group called the Binders. In 1964 Stamp left, and was replaced by John Holt, whose controlled lead vocals, supported by sumptuous, never-wavering harmonies, became the group's trademark. Junior Menz also left that year, to join the Techniques, his place taken by Howard Barrett. During 1964-65 the group cut a few singles for Coxsone Dodd at Studio One, including 'Good Luck And Goodbye'. In 1965 Bob Andy left to go solo, and in 1966 the trio began recording for Duke Reid, achieving a series of Jamaican number 1 hits in the new rocksteady style. Reid's productions were almost serene compared to those of his rivals, somehow utterly harmonious, and the Paragons came to epitomize the classy, warm sound of Reid's Treasure Isle Studio with a heap of wonderful releases: 'Happy Go Lucky Girl', 'On The Beach', 'Riding High On A Windy Day', 'Wear You To The Ball', 'The Tide Is High' and 'Only A Smile', among them. The trio also recorded a couple of marvellous singles that showed them to be just as adept at the more furious early reggae beat as they were at rocksteady - 'Left With A Broken Heart' and 'A Quiet Place'. In 1970 the trio split, with Holt rising to even dizzier heights as a solo act and Evans and Barrett relocating to New York, where Evans occasionally recorded for Lloyd Barnes' Bullwackies label. The pop world belatedly discovered the Paragons' genius in the following decade, when the Slits murdered 'A Quiet Place' as 'The Man Next Door', and Blondie enjoyed a worldwide number 1 with an inferior remake of 'The Tide Is High'. Perhaps encouraged by this, the original trio reformed in 1983 to record a few sides for Island Records under Sly And Robbie's production aegis, but to little reward.

● ALBUMS: On The Beach (Treasure Isle 1968)★★★, The Paragons With Roslyn Sweat (1971)★★★, The Paragons Return (Island 1981)★★★, Sly & Robbie Meet The Paragons (Island 1981)★★★★, Now (Starlite 1982)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Original Paragons (Treasure Isle 1990)★★★, My Best Girl Wears My Crown (Trojan 1992)★★★, Golden Hits (1993)★★★.

Parallel Lines - Blondie

Madonna and Michael Jackson aside, this is supreme pop music and as good as the genre can ever get. Everybody loved Blondie; fans, children, critics, other musicians and senior citizens - and not just because the pouting little Debbie Harry was its frontperson. This is an unintentional greatest hits record that never lets up until the last note of 'Just Go Away' has died. If one wanted to carp, you could have asked for 'Denis' and 'Call Me' to have been included, but that would be just plain greedy. One of the greatest 'up' records of all time.

● Tracks: Fade Away; Hanging On The Telephone; One Way Or Another; Picture This; Pretty Baby; I Know But I Don't Know; 11.59; Will Anything Happen; Sunday Girl; Heart Of Glass; I'm Gonna Love You Too; Just Go Away.

● First released 1978

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 6

Paramor, Norrie

b. 1913, London, England, d. 9 September 1979. The most prolific producer of UK pop chart-toppers was a mild, bespectacled gentleman who had studied piano and worked as an accompanist, prior to playing and arranging with a number of London dance bands, among them Maurice Winnick's Orchestra. During his time in the RAF during World War II, Paramor entertained servicemen in the company of artists such as Sidney Torch and Max Wall, served as a musical director for Ralph Reader's Gang Shows, and scored music for Noël Coward, Mantovani and Jack Buchanan. After the war he was the featured pianist with Harry Gold And His Pieces Of Eight, and toured with the lively Dixieland unit for five years. In 1950 he recorded some sides for the Oriole label with Australian singer Marie Benson, and two years later, joined Columbia Records, an EMI subsidiary, as arranger and A&R manager. In 1954, he produced the first of two UK number 1 hits for Eddie Calvert, and another for Ruby Murray the following year. Although quoted as believing that rock 'n' roll was 'an American phenomenon - and they do it best', he still provided Columbia with such an act in Tony Crombie's Rockets, but had better luck with the mainstream efforts of Michael Holliday and the Mudlarks - both backed by the Ken Jones Orchestra. Then, in 1958, a demo tape by Cliff Richard And The Drifters arrived on his desk. With no rock 'n' roller currently on his books, he contracted Richard, intending to play it safe with a US cover version with the Jones band, until he was persuaded to stick with the Drifters (soon renamed the Shadows) and push a group original ('Move It') as the a-side. Partly through newspaper publicity engineered by Paramor, 'Move It' was a huge hit, and a subsequent policy was instigated of Richard recording singles of untried numbers - among them, at Paramor's insistence, Lionel Bart's 'Living Doll'. Columbia was also successful with the Shadows - even though Paramor initially wished to issue 'Apache' - their first smash - as a b-side. Later, he offended Shadows purists by augmenting the quartet on disc with horn sections and his trademark lush string arrangements.

Other Paramor signings were not allowed to develop to the same idiosyncratic extent as Richard and his associates. Ricky Valance achieved his sole chart-topper with a cover version of Ray Peterson's US hit 'Tell Laura I Love Her', while Helen Shapiro was visualized as a vague 'answer' to Brenda Lee; Paramor even booked and supervised some Shapiro sessions in Nashville in 1963. His greatest success during this period, however, was with Frank Ifield, who dominated the early 60s' UK pop scene with three formidable number 1 hits. Even as late as 1968, Paramor notched up another number 1 with Scaffold's 'Lily The Pink'. Throughout his career, Paramor wrote, and co-wrote, many hit songs, several of them for films, such as Expresso Bongo ('A Voice In The Wilderness', Cliff Richard), The Young Ones ('The Savage') and The Frightened City (title song), both performed by the Shadows, Play It Cool ('Once Upon A Dream', Billy Fury), It's Trad, Dad! ('Let's Talk About Love', Helen Shapiro) and Band Of Thieves ('Lonely', Acker Bilk). He also composed several complete movie scores, and some light orchestral works such as 'The Zodiac' and 'Emotions', which he recorded with his Concert Orchestra, and released several 'mood' albums in the USA, including London After Dark, Amore, Amore!, Autumn and In London, In Love, which made the US Top 20. In complete contrast, the Big Ben Banjo, and Big Ben Hawaiian Bands, along with similar 'happy-go-lucky' 'trad jazz' line-ups, were originally formed in 1955 purely as recording units, utilizing the cream of UK session musicians. Paramor was in charge of them all, and their popularity was such that 'live' performances had to be organized. The Big Ben Banjo Band appeared at the Royal Variety Performance in 1958, and were resident on BBC Radio's Everybody Step programme, as well as having their own Radio Luxembourg series. Two of the band's 'Let's Get Together' singles, and More Minstrel Melodies, reached the UK Top 20. One of the highlights of Paramor's career came in 1960 when he arranged and conducted for Judy Garland's British recording sessions, and was her musical director at the London Palladium and subsequent dates in Europe. In the same year, with his Orchestra, he made the UK singles chart with 'Theme From A Summer Place' and in 1962, registered again with 'Theme From Z Cars'. From 1972-78 Paramor was the Director of the BBC Midland Radio Orchestra, but he continued to dabble in independent production for acts such as the Excaliburs, and his publishing company was still finding material for Cliff in the 70s. Paramor remains one of the most underrated figures in the history of UK pop and a posthumous reappraisal of his work is overdue.

● ALBUMS: Just We Two (Columbia 1955)★★★, In London, In Love ... (Columbia 1956)★★★, The Zodiac (Columbia 1957)★★★, New York Impressions (Columbia 1957)★★★, Emotions (1958)★★★, Dreams And Desires (1958)★★★, The Wonderful Waltz (1958)★★★, My Fair Lady (1959)★★★, Paramor In Paris (1959)★★★, Jet Flight (1959)★★★, Lovers In Latin (1959)★★★, Staged For Stereo (1961)★★★, Autumn (1961)★★★, The Golden Waltz (1961)★★★, Lovers In London (1964)★★★, with Patricia Clark Lovers In Tokyo (1964)★★, Warm And Willing (1965)★★★, Shadows In Latin (1966)★★★, Norrie Paramor Plays The Hits Of Cliff Richard (Studio Two 1967)★★★, Soul Coaxing (1968)★★★, BBC Top Tunes (BBC 1974)★★★, Radio 2 Top Tunes, Volume 1 (BBC 1974)★★★, Radio 2 Top Tunes, Volume 2 (BBC 1975)★★★, Radio 2 Top Tunes, Volume 3 (BBC 1975)★★★, Love (Pye 1975)★★★, My Personal Choice (BBC 1976)★★★, Norrie Paramor Remembers ... 40 Years Of TV Themes (BBC 1976)★★★, Silver Serenade (BBC 1977)★★★, By Request (BBC 1978)★★★, Temptation (Pye 1978)★★★, Rags And Tatters aka Ragtime (Pye 1978)★★, Classical Rhythm (Pye 1979)★★, Thank You For The Music (BBC 1979)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Paramagic Pianos (Golden Hour 1977)★★★, The Best Of Norrie Paramor (BBC 1984)★★★.

Paramounts

Formed in Southend, Essex, England, in 1961, the Paramounts evolved out of local beat attraction the Raiders. Comprising Gary Brooker (b. 29 May 1945, Southend, Essex, England; keyboards/vocals), Robin Trower (b. 9 March 1945, Southend, Essex, England; guitar), Chris Copping (b. 29 August 1945, Southend, Essex, England; bass) and Mick Brownlee (drums), the latter replaced by Barrie (B.J.) Wilson (b. 18 March 1947, Southend, Essex, England) in 1963. The group became one of the region's most popular R&B acts and by 1963 had secured a prestigious deal with EMI Records. Diz Derrick replaced the college-bound Copping prior to recording 'Poison Ivy', the quartet's debut single and sole UK Top 40 entry. Subsequent releases included material drawn from the Coasters, Jackie DeShannon and P.F. Sloan, but despite considerable acclaim, the Paramounts failed to achieve due commercial success. Later reduced to backing Sandie Shaw and Chris Andrews, they split up in October 1966. Brooker then formed a songwriting team with lyricist Keith Reid which in turn inspired the formation of Procol Harum. By 1969, and in the wake of numerous defections, this attraction contained the same line-up as that of the original Paramounts. Trower and Brooker pursued subsequent solo careers, while the latter also worked with Joe Cocker and Eric Clapton.

● COMPILATIONS: Whiter Shades Of R&B (Demon 1983)★★★.

Paranoid - Black Sabbath

The murderous riff on which the title track hinges set the tone for this bruising album. Doom, death and destruction are Black Sabbath's staple diet, which they devour with numbing intensity. Repetition is at the heart of the album, sustained chords and ponderous bass often slowing tempos to crawling pace until, on 'War Pigs', they groan with suffocation. Guitarist Tony Iommi punctuates the sound with simple but lengthy solos, leaving vocalist Ozzy Osbourne to inject a sly cockiness. Pretenders have often grasped at their crown, but Paranoid shows that Black Sabbath remain the quintessential heavy metal band.

● Tracks: Paranoid; War Pigs; Planet Caravan; Iron Man; Electric Funeral; Hand Of Doom; Rat Salad; Fairies Wear Boots; Wicked World.

● First released 1970

● UK peak chart position: 1

● USA peak chart position: 12

Paras, Fabio

London-based DJ renowned for his sets in the 90s at Boy's Own parties, and equally admired for his 'bongo mixes' and eclectic record collection (ie playing the Clash to bemused but still receptive punters). His remixes inlcude React 2 Rhythm's 'I Know You Like It', Aloof's 'On A Mission', Deja Vu's 'Never Knew The Devil' and Outrage's 'Drives Me Crazy' (which sampled the Fine Young Cannibals song of the same name) and 'Tall 'n' Handsome'. The last named cut was issued on his own label, Junk, which he set up to house percussion-based material. He has also released material for Cowboy as Charas. However, he is not one of the DJ fraternity to push his own name with any vigour: 'I'm happy doing my own stuff. I'm just a mellow geezer minding my own business'.

Pardon, Walter

b. 4 March 1914, Knapton, Norfolk, England, d. 9 June 1996, Knapton, Norfolk, England. Pardon was a typical member of the British rural folk community - an unassuming man of simple tastes but great dedication to the folklore of his native Norfolk Broads region. Born and raised in the cottage in Knapton, near North Walsham, where he would spend all his days, he only came to light to the music community at large in the early 70s. A relative, Roger Dixon, heard Pardon's version of the classic folk song 'The Dark-Eyed Sailor' and persuaded him to commit this, as well as 19 other traditional compositions, to tape. His talent was finally recognised when Norfolk revival singer Peter Bellamy heard the tape. This led to a recording contract with Bill Leader's record label. A Proper Sort (1975) and Our Side Of The Baulk (1977) confirmed the promise of the original cassette. Folk scholar A.L. Lloyd invited him to join a group of English folk singers performing at the American Bicentennial Celebrations in Washington, DC, and he appeared regularly at folk festivals thereafter. Most of Pardon's repertoire had been handed down through his family and were of a nineteenth-century vintage. By the end of his life he had recorded some 150 songs, and was extremely knowledgeable about their origins despite the fact that he had left school at 14 to work as an apprentice carpenter. That his talents remained undiscovered for so long is partly attributable to the fact that his singing and melodeon playing were reserved for family parties rather than public showings. Even so, his recordings in the 70s and 80s did much to preserve the folklore of rural Norfolk.

● ALBUMS: A Proper Sort (Leader 1975)★★★★, Our Side Of The Baulk (Leader 1977)★★★★, A Country Life (Topic 1982)★★★, Bright Golden Store (1983)★★★, Up To The Rigs (People's Stages 1987)★★★.

Parenti, Tony

b. 6 August 1900, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA, d. 17 April 1972. By his early teenage years, Parenti was playing clarinet in various local bands which performed an incipient style of jazz. While still in his teens he formed his own band and made some records. In the late 20s he tried his luck in New York, playing with several popular dance bands including those of Meyer Davis, Ben Pollack and Freddy Rich. He worked in the studios for many years in the 30s, but at the end of the decade joined Ted Lewis for a five-year stint. In the late 40s he played at several clubs in New York and Chicago. He spent the early 50s in Florida playing with local bands before returning to New York to lead bands for residencies that extended throughout the 60s at clubs such as Eddie Condon's and Jimmy Ryan's. A fluent player in the dixieland tradition, Parenti deserves rather more attention than he has gained. His neglect results largely from his long periods in New York's clubland and a relatively small recorded output.

● ALBUMS: Jazz, That's All (1955)★★, Tony Parenti's Talking Records (1958)★★★.

Parham, Tiny

b. Hartzell S. Parham, 25 February 1900, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, d. 4 April 1943. Raised in Kansas City, pianist and organ player Parham played in a number of lesser-known territory bands in the early 20s. During the later years of the decade he recorded with blues singers and such jazzmen as Johnny Dodds. In the late 20s and early 30s he led his own small and big bands in and around Kansas City but by 1936 abandoned bandleading in favour of a career as a solo organist mostly in Chicago.

● COMPILATIONS: Tiny Parham And His Musicians (1928-29)★★★, Tiny Parham 1928-1929 (Swaggie 1988)★★★★, Tiny Parham 1929-1930, (Neovox 1993)★★★, Tiny Parham And His Musician's 1929-1940 (Classic Jazz Masters 1993)★★★★.

Pariah (UK)

Formerly known as Satan, this Newcastle-upon-Tyne, England group became Pariah in 1988, feeling that their original name may have led to misconceptions concerning their style. They were never a true black-metal outfit, as their original moniker suggested, but were instead part of the New Wave Of British Heavy Metal scene. Pariah comprised Michael Jackson (vocals), Steve Ramsey (guitar), Russ Tippins (guitar), Graeme English (bass) and Sean Taylor (drums). They first album was The Kindred in 1988, an album of hard, fast metal, characterized by the dual guitar onslaught of Ramsey and Tippins. Following Blaze Of Obscurity, Jackson quit and was replaced by Mark Allen, but there was no further significant progress in their career. Along with Demon, Pariah passed into history as one of the most talented metal acts of their generation to be lost to obscurity, save for mentions in reference books.

● ALBUMS: The Kindred (Steamhammer 1988)★★★, Blaze Of Obscurity (Steamhammer 1989)★★★.

Pariah (USA)

This Florida, USA-based speed-metal quartet was formed in 1987 by the Egger brothers, with the full line-up comprising Garth Egger (vocals), Shaun Egger (guitar), Chris Egger (drums) and Wayne Derrick (guitar). Unable to secure a record contract in the USA, they were finally signed to the Dutch Moshroom label in 1988, for whom they debuted with Take A Walk, a mixture of styles that alternated between derivative Anthrax/Metallica thrash and the characterless pop-metal of Europe and Bon Jovi. The album failed commercially and nothing has been heard from the group since.

● ALBUMS: Take A Walk (Moshroom 1988)★★.

Paris

This UK power-trio was put together in 1975 by former Fleetwood Mac guitarist Bob Welch and ex-Jethro Tull bassist Glenn Cornick. Adding Thom Mooney on drums, they signed to Capitol Records in 1976 and released their self-titled debut album. Weaving mystical lyrical tapestries, within psychedelic, blues-based progressive rock, their strange and tormented style was ignored at the time of release, and remains an odd curio even today. Hunt Sales replaced Mooney on Big Towne 2061 and the band adopted a more mainstream approach, with the lyrics taking on a religious emphasis. This also failed to find an audience and the band went their separate ways soon after its release. Welch embarked on what was to become a highly successful solo career. Sales joined David Bowie in Tin Machine.

● ALBUMS: Paris (Capitol 1975)★★★, Big Towne 2061 (Capitol 1976)★★.

Paris (rap)

b. c.1968, San Francisco, California, USA. Paris is a hardcore black Muslim rapper, widely shunned by the mainstream for his militant views. Based in San Francisco, Paris recorded his first single, 'Scarface Groove', in 1989. However, his breakthrough came with 'Break The Grip Of Shame', a typically informed and effective rant against the degradation of black communities and the need for change. It was a sublime piece of West Coast hardcore, the first fruits of his deal with Tommy Boy, which saw him hailed on MTV. The video was a provocative cocktail of footage containing uniformed revolutionaries in Africa, and images of Malcolm X and the Black Panthers. This was a fitting introduction to Paris' craft, a self-made man who remains responsible for his own production and management, backed only by DJ Mad Mike. He graduated from the University of California in 1990 with an economics degree. Public Enemy took him on tour and they could have found fewer more suitable warm-up acts. Despite being accused in some quarters of being dour and worthy, Paris nevertheless injected a focused, reasoning intelligence where discussions of evil reached beyond the lure of the bedroom or the villainy of the local law enforcement agency. However, tracks like 'Bush Killer' were openly inflammatory, even if they were also fun - a good example of his willingness to bookend cerebral discussion with revenge fantasies. He runs his own record label, Scarface, set up in 1987, which at one point looked likely to sign up Ice-T following his split with Warners. He did, however, produce several acts from the Bay Area, and also cut an album with Conscious Daughters, though his excellent Sleeping With The Enemy set did not have a UK release. He was accused of assaulting Chris Joyce, an executive for the company which originally distributed Scarface Records, in 1994.

● ALBUMS: The Devil Made Me Do It (Scarface/Tommy Boy 1990)★★★, Sleeping With The Enemy (Scarface/Tommy Boy 1992)★★★★, Guerilla Funk (Priority 1994)★★★.

Paris Angels

This UK pop band was formed in November 1989 and was subsequently signed to Virgin Records. The embryonic line-up of Scott Carey (bass, harmonica), Rikki Turner (vocals, wind instruments), Simon Worrall (drums) and Paul Wagstaff (guitar), was augmented by Jayne Gill (vocals, percussion) and Mark Adge (rhythm guitar, percussion), formerly the group's sound engineer. They blossomed with the addition of the computer-literate Steven Tajti to help with programming and effects. After releasing a version of David Bowie's 'Stay' they signed to Sheer Joy for 'Perfume' in June 1990. The group's blend of rock/dance pigeonholed them as late arrivals on the Manchester scene and the award of a Single Of The Week in the New Musical Express and 10 weeks in the UK independent chart justified Virgin's decision to move in after two more singles on the independent label. The last of these, 'Oh Yes', in early 1991, became Sounds magazine's last ever single of the week, before the paper folded. However, their debut album and a re-recorded 'Perfume' failed to embrace the spirit of adventure that the single promised, and the group floundered.

● ALBUMS: Sundew (Virgin 1991)★★.

Paris Blues

For a few moments at the beginning hopes are raised that this is a film to take seriously the problems of racial intolerance. Soon, however, jazz musicians Paul Newman and Sidney Poitier drift into stereotypes and there is little left for the audience to do except enjoy the scenes of Paris and the music. Fortunately, much of the latter, including the film's score, is in the hands of Duke Ellington which almost makes up for the disappointment in the dramatics. Apart from Ellington And His Orchestra, which includes Cat Anderson, Willie Cook, Johnny Hodges, Ray Nance, Clark Terry and Sam Woodyard, other musicians include Max Roach, Philly Joe Jones and local boys Joseph Reinhardt and Guy Lafitte. Louis Armstrong puts in an appearance and locks horns with Ellington ensemble in a rowdy nightclub sequence. The playing of Newman and Poitier was dubbed respectively by Murray McEachern and Paul Gonsalves. Directed by Martin Ritt, this 1961 film was based upon the novel by Harold Flender which did not dodge the issues and in which the black musician was the sole protagonist, his white sidekick being very much a minor character.

Paris Sisters

Priscilla, Albeth and Sherrill Paris began their long recording career in 1954, but did not achieve chart success until the following decade when they joined Gregmark, a short-lived label co-owned by Lee Hazelwood. The trio completed five singles for the outlet, each of which was produced by Phil Spector. Although 'I Love How You Love Me' reached number 5 in the US chart in 1961, other releases in the same feather-light style failed to emulate its success. The sisters nonetheless enjoyed a prolific career, latterly abandoning their conservative image with several excellent recordings under the aegis of Spector's arranger Jack Nitzsche, and a superb rendition of 'Greener Days', composed by David Gates. Priscilla, the undoubted focal point of the trio, embarked on a solo career in 1967, but although her excellent debut, 'He Noticed Me' augered well for the future, ensuing releases were less assured. She nonetheless completed three contrasting albums and in 1974 re-recorded 'I Love How You Love Me' with the British Chinn And Chapman production team.

● ALBUMS: Golden Hits Of The Paris Sisters re-recordings (1966)★★, Sing From The Glass House (1966)★★★, The Paris Sisters Sing Everything Under The Sun (1967)★★★. Solo: Priscilla Paris Priscilla Sings Herself (1974)★★, Priscilla Sings Billy (1976)★★★, Love Is... (1978)★★.

● FILMS: It's Trad, Dad a.k.a. Ring-A-Ding Rhythm (1962).

Paris, Barbara

b. Barbara Perea, 2 October 1954, Denver, Colorado, USA. Although growing up in a jazz atmosphere, Paris's father introduced her to jazz on record and she worked in a non-musical capacity in a jazz club while still a teenager, it was some years before she settled into a career as a singer. In her mid-twenties she met and was encouraged by saxophonist Eddie Shu. Building upon her experience singing in choirs and childhood piano lessons, she turned to singing with flair and a natural accomplishment. While remaining based in Colorado, with numerous engagements in Boulder and her home town, she has also sung in Los Angeles and New York and in Paris, France. Her warm voice and clear diction lend themselves admirably to ballads while on mid- and up-tempo songs she swings with subtlety. Her repertoire is very wide, ranging through popular songs of the past and present, Latin, and jazz standards. She has broadcast extensively and has sung with many visiting jazz musicians including Ellyn Rucker, Joe Pass, Barry Harris, Freddie Hubbard and, while in Paris, Claude Bolling. The simplicity and discreet soulfulness of her style is sometimes at odds with the clamorous demands of a pop music industry based upon flash and drama.

● ALBUMS: Where Butterflies Play (Perea 1993)★★★, Happy Talk (Perea 1994)★★★, Day By Day (Perea 1997)★★★.

Paris, Jackie

b 20 September 1926, Nutley, New Jersey, USA. From the early 40s Paris was active in New York as singer and guitarist. He worked mostly with bop groups and his singing soon became his primary activity. He achieved a considerable measure of critical acclaim but failed to attract a popular following amongst the jazz audience. During the 50s and 60s he worked steadily but mostly in clubs and resort hotels although he did record with jazzmen such as Donald Byrd, Gigi Gryce and Charles Mingus. Paris sings with an urgent attack, his voice throaty and rhythmically infectious. At his best on up-tempo boppish numbers, he can also bring qualities of understanding and depth to ballads. His wife is singer Anne Marie Moss.

● ALBUMS: with Donald Byrd, Gigi Gryce Modern Jazz Persepctives (1957)★★★★, Jackie Paris (Audiophile 1988)★★★, Nobody Else But Me (Audiophile 1988)★★★, with Marc Johnson, Carlos Franzetti Jackie Paris/Marc Johnson/Carlos Franzetti (Audiophile 1994)★★★.

Paris, Jeff

This American vocalist/guitarist started his career in the jazz-rock group Pieces. He subsequently played with a number of similar bands on a short-term basis, and built up a reputation as a fine backing vocalist and talented songwriter. He worked with Cinderella, Y&T, Vixen and Lita Ford in this capacity and was offered a solo recording contract by Polygram in 1986. He debuted with Race To Paradise the same year, a highly polished and melodic collection of AOR anthems, similar in style to Michael Bolton and Eric Martin. Wired Up saw Paris toughen up his approach. The album was typical North American rock and drew comparisons with Bruce Springsteen and Bryan Adams. However, both sets failed commercially and Polygram terminated his contract in 1988.

● ALBUMS: Race To Paradise (Polygram 1986)★★★★, Wired Up (Polygram 1987)★★★.

Paris, Mica

b. Michelle Wallen, 27 April 1969, London, England. Having written, recorded and produced with the aid of heavyweights including Nile Rodgers (Chic), Prince and Rakim (Eric B And Rakim), Paris has remained one of the UK's biggest talents never to have made the great leap forward. It has not been for want of effort or ability, but producers have struggled to maximize the potential of one of the world's most delightful soul-dance performers. Stronger material would certainly help. On her debut album there were times when she hit a perfect beat, such as when she matches for dexterity the tenor sax of Courtney Pine on 'Like Dreamers Do'. Her second album used new, hot producers as a remedy (Charles Mantronik of Mantronix, and Dancin' Danny D of D-Mob); however, a sense of frustration still pervaded her career. It wasn't until her fourth album, 1998's Black Angel, that Paris came close to fulfilling her talent. Recorded in Los Angeles, the album featured a sassy, swinging R&B sound reminiscent of Toni Braxton.

● ALBUMS: So Good (4th & Broadway 1989)★★★, Contribution (4th & Broadway 1990)★★, Black Angel (Cooltempo 1998)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Mica Paris (Island Visual Arts 1991).

Parish, Mitchell

b. 10 July 1900, Shreveport, Louisiana, USA, d. 31 March 1993, New York, USA. Growing up in New York City, Parish showed an early interest in literature, especially poetry. Despite working for a musical publishing firm, it was some years before his attempts at lyric-writing achieved success. He was in his late 20s when his first song was published and it was not until 1928 that he had his first huge hit with 'Sweet Lorraine'. He followed this auspicious, if late start, with another major contribution to the Great American Songbook when, in 1929, he wrote the lyric for Hoagy Carmichael's song, 'Star Dust'. Throughout the 30s and with varying degrees of success, Parish wrote lyrics for songs written by numerous composers, among them 'Sophisticated Lady' (music by Duke Ellington), 'Stars Fell On Alabama' (Frank Perkins), 'Deep Purple' (Peter De Rose), 'Stairway To The Stars' (Matty Malneck and Frank Signorelli) and 'Moonlight Serenade' (Glenn Miller). In the 40s and 50s Parish's work continued with popular songs such as 'Orange Blossom Lane' (De Rose), 'Blue Tango' (Leroy Anderson), 'Tzena, Tzena' (Julius Grossman and Issacher Miron) and 'Volare' (Domenico Modugno). Changing patterns in popular music meant that from the 60s onwards, Parish's style declined in its appeal to the new audiences. Nevertheless, the quality of his earlier work, especially his lyrics for such classics as 'Deep Purple', 'Stars Fell On Alabama' and the ageless 'Star Dust', has made an indelible impression upon American popular music.

Park, Graeme

b. c.1963. Classically trained saxophonist and clarinetist turned DJ, famed for his sets at such venues as Manchester's Hacienda and London's Ministry Of Sound. He began his career in the music industry by working behind the counter (buying in second hand stock) at Nottingham's Select-A-Disc Records. His boss, Brian Selby, purchased a reggae club entitled Ad-Lib, but on opening night didn't have a DJ and hence asked his first lieutenant Park to take the job. Park carried on DJing there for several years, but as his listening tastes broadened (especially with the advent of hip hop and electro) he eventually began to incorporate more adenturous music into his sets. He went on to play at Sheffield's Leadmill, Nottingham's Kool Kat and the Hacidenda, alongside Mike Pickering (M People). His style could be categorised as deep house and garage, though as he prefers to state: 'If you look at my playlists over the past eight years, you'll find a common thread - songs'. His most famous remix was probably for New Order and the England World Cup Squad's 'World In Motion'. Other remix credits include D-Influence's 'Good Lover' and work with Temper Temper and Eddie 'Flashin'' Fowlkes. He was voted Mixmag DJ of the year in 1992, but he remains a good-humoured and approachable representative of his craft: 'It's nice to be important, but it's more important to be nice'.

Park, Simon

b. March 1946, Market Harborough, Leicestershire, England. A graduate of music at Winchester College, Oxford, Park began playing piano at the age of five. In 1972 he was commissioned to write the theme music to the new television detective thriller series Van Der Valk. The theme, called 'Eye Level', and credited to the Simon Park Orchestra, was initially released during the first series, but it only reached number 41 in the UK charts. Viewing figures for the second series increased and the theme was re-released by public demand. This time it climbed all the way to the top and became the final number 1 for EMI/Columbia label. Simon Park went on to produce a number of albums containing a mixture of originals and orchestrated classics. He continues to compose with great success.

● ALBUMS: Eye Level (1973)★★★★, with the Ingman Orchestra Something In Air (1974)★★★, Venus Fly Trap (1975)★★★, Danger UXB (1979)★★★.

Parker, 'Colonel' Tom

b. Andreas Cornelius van Kuijk, 26 June 1909, Breda, The Netherlands, d. 21 January 1997. Since his death, there still remains bitter division about Parker. Was he Sam Katzman's 'biggest con artist in the world' or merely an unsophisticated fairground barker sucked into a vortex of circumstances he was unwilling to resist? Arguments supporting either view might be construed from the icy ruthlessness formidable to those accustomed to Tin Pan Alley's glib bonhomie, and his blunt stance in negotiation on behalf of Elvis Presley, his most famous managerial client. 'Don't criticize what you can't understand, son', Presley said in the Colonel's defence. 'You never walked in that man's shoes.' Parker was an illegal immigrant, without passport or papers, who settled into carnival life in the 20s. Over the next decade, he evolved into a cigar-chewing huckster of spectacular amorality - exemplified by his practice of snaring sparrows, painting them yellow and selling them as canaries. With duties that included palm reading, he served the Royal American, the Union's top travelling show, for a while before a seemingly steady job as promoter for a charity organization in Tampa, Florida. Extremely potent fund raisers, he discovered, were shows headlined by a popular C&W artist - and so it was that Parker came to commit himself full-time to the genre by moving to Nashville, where he became Eddy Arnold's personal manager. Once, when this vocalist was indisposed, an unruffled Parker allegedly offered a substitute attraction of two unhappy 'dancing chickens' who high-stepped around a cage to ease feet scorched by an electric hot plate hidden under their straw.

After Arnold left him, the Colonel (an honorary title conferred by the Tennessee Militia in 1953) took on Hank Snow - and it was in a support spot on a Snow tour of the deep south that 19-year-old Presley was noticed by his future svengali. Via connections nurtured during proceedings concerning Arnold and Snow, Parker persuaded RCA to contract his new find. A few months later in March 1956, the boy committed himself formally to Parker for life - and beyond. From that month, 'Elvis has required every minute of my time, and I think he would have suffered had I signed anyone else'. While facilitating Presley's captivation of a global 'youth market', the Colonel's instinct for the commercial and economic machinations of the record industry obliged RCA to accede to his every desire, such as the pressing of one million copies of every Elvis release, regardless of positioning research. Moreover, to the team fell an average of eight per cent of approved merchandise associated with Presley - and, when the time came for the King to act in films, producer Hal Wallis grew to 'rather try and close a deal with the Devil' than Parker. To publicize one Presley movie, Parker was not above hiring dwarfs to parade through Hollywood as 'The Elvis Presley Midget Fan Club'. He was also behind the taming of Presley via the stressing of a cheerful diligence while on national service; the post-army chart potboilers; the overall projection of Presley as an 'all-round entertainer', and, arguably, the moulding of his reactionary leanings. Nor did Parker object to Katzman dashing off a Presley vehicle in less than a month, each one a quasi-musical of cheery unreality usually more vacuous and streamlined than the one before. This was almost all fans saw of the myth-shrouded Elvis until his impatient return to the stage in 1968, whether the Colonel liked it or not.

After Presley's death in 1977, there were rumours that Parker would be devoting himself professionally to Rick Nelson, but only Presley's posthumous career interrupted a virtual retirement in Palm Springs. Parker was a consummate showman and media manipulator, who clearly enjoyed turning down million of dollars whenever his charge was asked to headline some grand concert package. His handling of merchandising rights during the early part of Presley's career has been compared favourably to the business dealings of later starmakers such as Brian Epstein. The obsession with commerce and disavowal of artistry dominated the Colonel's thinking, however, which mainly explains the singer's appalling film-related output during the early/mid-60s. After Presley's death, Parker's business empire was threatened by the star's estate - in the form of Elvis's ex-wife Priscilla and daughter Lisa Marie. Parker fought tenaciously to protect his empire before settling in June 1983. Thereafter, he surrendered claims to all future Elvis income, but received two million dollars from RCA, and 50 per cent of all Presley's record royalties prior to September 1982. In January 1993, Parker made one of his rare public appearances, signing autographs to promote the newly issued Elvis Presley postage stamp. He spent the last years of his life in his beloved Las Vegas, where he could feed his gambling addiction.

● FURTHER READING: Elvis, Albert Grossman. Elvis And The Colonel, Dirk Vallenga and Mick Farren.

Parker, 'Little' Junior

b. Herman Parker Jnr., 3 March 1927, West Memphis, Arkansas, USA, d. 18 November 1971, Blue Island, Illinois, USA. Despite his later fame, some confusion still exists regarding the parentage and birth details of Little Junior Parker (Clarksdale, Mississippi, and 1932 are sometimes quoted, and his parents' names have variously been cited as Herman Snr., Willie, Jeanetta or Jeremeter). It is certain that they were a farming family situated near enough to West Memphis for Little Junior (who had started singing in church) to involve himself in the local music scene at an early age. His biggest influence in the early days was Sonny Boy 'Rice Miller' Williamson, in whose band Parker worked for some time before moving on to work for Howlin' Wolf, later assuming the leadership of the latter's backing band. He was a member of the ad hoc group the Beale Streeters, with Bobby Bland and B.B. King, prior to forming his own band, the Blue Flames, in 1951, which included the well-regarded guitarist Auburn 'Pat' Hare. His first, fairly primitive, recordings were made for Joe Bihari and Ike Turner in 1952 for the Modern label. This brought him to the attention of Sam Phillips and Sun Records, where Parker enjoyed some success with his recordings of 'Feeling Good', although the period is better recalled for the downbeat 'Mystery Train', which was later covered by the young Elvis Presley. His greatest fame on record stemmed from his work on Don Robey's Duke label operating out of Houston, Texas, and it was along with fellow Duke artist Bobby 'Blue' Bland that Little Junior headed the highly successful Blues Consolidated Revue, which quickly became a staple part of the southern blues circuit. His tenure with Robey lasted until the mid-60s, with his work moving progressively away from his hard blues base. In his later days, Parker appeared on such labels as Mercury, United Artists and Capitol, enjoying intermittent chart success with 'Driving Wheel' (1961), 'Annie Get Your Yo-Yo' (1962) and 'Man Or Mouse' (1966). His premature death in 1971 occurred while he was undergoing surgery for a brain tumour and robbed R&B of one of its most influential figures.

● ALBUMS: with Bobby Bland Blues Consolidated (Duke 1958)★★★, with Bland Barefoot Rock And You Got Me (Duke 1960)★★★, Driving Wheel (Duke 1962)★★★★, Like It Is (Mercury 1967)★★★, Honey-Drippin' Blues (1969)★★★, Blues Man (1969)★★★, The Outside Man (1970)★★★, Dudes Doing Business (1971)★★, Blue Shadows Falling (Groove Merchant 1972)★★, Good Things Don't Happen Every Day (Groove Merchant 1973)★★, I Tell Stories, Sad And True ... (1973)★★, You Don't Have To Be Black To Love The Blues (People 1974)★★, Love Ain't Nothin' But A Business Goin' On (1974)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Junior Parker (Duke 1966)★★★★, Sometime Tomorrow My Broken Heart Will Die (1973)★★★, Memorial (Vogue 1973)★★★, The ABC Collection (1976)★★★★, The Legendary Sun Performers - Junior Parker And Billy 'Red' Love (Charly 1977)★★★, I Wanna Ramble (Ace 1982)★★★, Junior's Blues: The Duke Recordings Vol. 1 (1993)★★★★.

Parker, Alan

b. 1944, Matlock, Derbyshire, England. At one time a member of Blue Mink, Alan Parker decided early in his career that more fruitful rewards lay outside of the celebrity pop star circuit. As a session guitarist in the 60s, Parker played on material by Cat Stevens, Joe Cocker, Frank Sinatra, Ella Fitzgerald, Sonny And Cher, the Dave Clark Five and the Walker Brothers (including 'The Sun Ain't Gonna Shine Anymore') among many others. In 1969 he formed Blue Mink with fellow 'session elite' singers Roger Cook and Madeline Bell. They had their most notable success with 'Melting Pot', but the group soon broke up as the individual members returned to lucrative playing and writing projects. In the 70s Parker was one of the studio musicians supplying the Bay City Rollers with their chart fodder, and he was also a member of CCS, whose version of Led Zeppelin's 'Whole Lotta Love' became the theme tune to Top Of The Pops. He also scored a Top 5 hit in 1972 as a member of the Congregation, with 'Softly Whispering I Love You'. Together with former Blue Mink colleague Herbie Flowers he worked on the sessions for David Bowie's Diamond Dogs in 1974. However, by now Parker was also spending much of his time working on television theme music, including that for Take My Wife and Angels, as well as commercials, notably the famed 'Beanz Meanz Heinz' jingle. He also wrote over 40 albums worth of 'library music' for television. In the early 80s he began writing music for films, including Jaws 3-D. In the mid-90s he returned to television work, composing the theme music to BBC television show, Rhodes.

Parker, Andy, And The Plainsmen

b. 1913, Mangum, Oklahoma, USA. Little is known of Parker's childhood but he began a 12-year spell on local radio in the Midwest in 1926. Then, in 1938, after relocating to San Francisco, he began to appear as the Singing Cowboy in Death Valley Days on NBC radio. He also sang on KGO on Dude Martin's Roundup, before moving to Los Angeles. Here in 1944, Parker, Charlie Morgan and Hank Caldwell became the Plainsmen, a vocal and swing instrumentalist trio. They made their film debut in Cowboy Blues with Ken Curtis and by 1946, they had record releases on the Coast label. They appeared regularly on the Hollywood Barn Dance on CBS radio and Sunrise Salute on KNX Los Angeles. When Caldwell departed, he was replaced by Paul 'Clem' Smith and the act then became Andy Parker And The Plainsmen. They recorded for Capitol, including more than 200 radio transcription discs and appeared in eight Eddie Dean B-westerns and many television shows. Other artists who became band members over the years include Deuce Spriggens (who later became a member of the Sons Of The Pioneers) and Noel Boggs. When Morgan decided to leave in 1956, Parker broke up the group. Parker wrote many songs, including the popular 'Trail Dust' and he and Morgan sang the theme song with Marilyn Monroe for the 1954 film River Of No Return.

Parker, Billy

b. Billy Joe Parker, 19 July 1937, Tuskegee, Oklahoma, USA. Parker is recognized by some mainly as a country disc jockey. However, his 22 Billboard chart entries represent a considerable achievement, more so than many artists who have attracted far more publicity as singers. Influenced by Hank Williams and George Jones, he learned guitar as a boy and was singing on a local Tulsa station at the age of 14, later spending some time on the Ozark Jubilee. He made his first recordings for Sims in 1963, when he was a regular radio disc jockey in Wichita, Kansas. His listeners voted him Mr DJ USA, which award also saw him guest on Nashville's WSM. He recorded for Decca Records in 1966 and between 1968 and 1971, he played as a member of Ernest Tubb's Texas Troubadours. In 1971, he began working on KVOO Tulsa and two years later, he was the station's Programme Controller. He gained his first chart hit in 1976 and, in the next three years, added 10 more, including, in 1979, his tribute to Tubb, 'Thanks E.T. Thanks A Lot'. None were major hits and many were gentle ballads, such as the overly sentimental 'Lord If I Make It To Heaven (Can I Bring My Own Angel Along)'. In the 80s, recording for Soundwaves, he recorded duet hits with some friends, including 'Who's Gonna Sing The Last Country Song' (with Darrell McCall) and 'Too Many Irons In The Fire' (with Cal Smith). He moved to Canyon Creek Records in 1988 and scored three more minor hits, including 'It's Time For Your Dreams To Come True' (number 87, 1989). Parker was voted Disc Jockey Of The Year in 1975, 1977, 1978 and 1984 and was inducted to the Country Music Disc Jockey Hall Of Fame in 1992. He managed to combine his singing, disc jockey work and Programme Controller's duties so efficiently that he was eventually appointed Executive Director at KVOO. In 1990, Bear Family Records issued a CD containing all his Soundwaves recordings, together with a booklet giving biographical information about the artist.

● ALBUMS: Average Man (Sunshine County 1976)★★★★, Billy Parker (Sunshine County 1977)★★★, Always Country (Canyon Creek 1988)★★★, I'll Speak Out For You Jesus (Canyon Creek 1990)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with various other artists Who's Gonna Sing The Last Country Song (Soundwaves 1982)★★★, with various other artists Something Old, Something New (Soundwaves 1983)★★★, Billy Parker And Friends (Bear Family 1990)★★★.

Parker, Bobby

b. 31 August 1937, Lafayette, Louisiana, USA. With a reputation based upon one record from 1961, guitarist Parker spent 30 years in obscurity before recording his first album. His family moved to east Los Angeles in 1943 and Parker acquired his first guitar three years later. While still in high school, he formed a band with future rockers Don Harris and Dewey Terry. After winning a talent contest at Johnny Otis's Barrelhouse club, he was offered the guitar spot with Otis Williams & The Charms. From there, he worked in Bo Diddley's touring band for three years and then joined Paul 'Hucklebuck' Williams' orchestra. While with them he made his first single, 'Blues Get Off My Shoulder', for Vee Jay in Chicago. The b-side, 'You Got What It Takes', became a hit for Marv Johnson but featured composer credits for Berry Gordy and Billy Davis. In 1961 Parker settled in Washington, DC, and released his first and only hit, 'Watch Your Step' on V-Tone, basing the tune on Dizzy Gillespie's 'Manteca'. The Spencer Davis Group covered it in England and John Lennon revealed that the Beatles' 'Day Tripper' was based on a variation of its main riff. In 1969 he toured England and recorded 'It's Hard But It's Fair' for Blue Horizon. Sessions for Lillian Clayborn's DC label and for producer Mitch Corday in the 60s are also rumoured to exist. Parker gave up music for five years during the 80s, but returned in 1989. Bent Out Of Shape showed that his talent was undiminished; Livin' Blues accurately described Parker's style of stringing notes together as 'tight as a suspension bridge'.

● ALBUMS: Bent Out Of Shape (Black Top 1993)★★★, Shine Me Up (Black Top 1995)★★★.

Parker, Byron

b. Byron Harry Parker, 6 September 1911, Hastings, Iowa, USA, d. 6 October 1948. Parker's career started as one half of the Gospel Twins, a duo who appeared regularly in the early 30s on a local station in Shenandoah, Iowa. Between 1934 and 1937, he worked with the Monroe Brothers, originally just as their programme announcer but he also sang bass in their gospel quartet. In 1937, he left the Monroes, and nicknaming himself the Old Hired Hand, he formed his Hillbillies, which included J.E. Mainer and banjoist Snuffy Jenkins, at WIS Columbia. Soon afterwards fiddler Homer Sherrill joined but the group saw several changes of personnel. In 1940, he recorded 16 sides for Bluebird Records as Byron Parker's Mountaineers and four further sides for DeLuxe in 1946. Parker mainly acted as announcer or MC and rarely performed but he was so good at selling things on the programmes that he was never without a sponsor. Someone allegedly once commented that if he had wanted, Parker could have sold used matches. His shows proved immensely popular and his regular closing 'Goodbye, good luck, and may God Bless you everyone' was known by thousands. Parker continued to lead a group until 1947 when, because of increasing heart problems, his doctor told him to drastically cut down on his workload and travelling. He finally settled for working as a station announcer at WFIX Columbia, which he did until his premature death at the age of 37. After his death, Jenkins and Sherrill, as a mark of respect to their dead friend, renamed the group the Hired Hands. Bill Anderson has always maintained that, as a boy, he was greatly influenced by Parker.

● COMPILATIONS: Bluegrass Roots (Old Homestead 1985)★★★.

Parker, Charlie 'Bird'

b. 29 August 1920, Kansas City, Kansas, USA, d. 12 March 1955. Although he was born on the Kansas side of the state line, Parker was actually raised across the Kaw River in Kansas City, Missouri. His nickname was originally 'Yardbird' due to his propensity for eating fried chicken - later this was shortened to the more poetic 'Bird'. Musicians talk of first hearing his alto saxophone as if it were a religious conversion. Charles Christopher Parker changed the face of jazz and shaped the course of 20th-century music. Kansas City saxophonists were a competitive bunch. Ben Webster and Herschel Evans both came from Kansas. Before they became national celebrities they would challenge visiting sax stars to 'blowing matches'. It is this artistically fruitful sense of competition that provided Charlie Parker with his aesthetic. Live music could be heard at all hours of the night, a situation resulting from lax application of prohibition laws by the Democrat Tom Pendergast (city boss from 1928-39). While in the Crispus Attucks high school Parker took up the baritone. His mother gave him an alto in 1931. He dropped out of school at the age of 14 and devoted himself to the instrument. A premature appearance at the High Hat Club - when he dried up mid-solo on 'Body & Soul' - led to him abandoning the instrument for three months; the humiliation was repeated in 1937 when veteran drummer Jo Jones threw a cymbal at his feet to indicate he was to leave the stage (this time Parker just went on practising harder). Playing in bands led by Tommy Douglas (1936-37) and Buster Smith (1937-38) gave him necessary experience. A tour with George E. Lee and instructions in harmony from the pianist Carrie Powell were helpful. His first real professional break was with the Jay McShann band in 1938, a sizzling swing unit (with whom Parker made his first recordings in 1941). Parker's solos on 'Sepian Bounce', 'Jumpin' Blues' and 'Lonely Boy Blues' made people sit up and take notice: he was taking hip liberties with the chords. Brief spells in the Earl 'Fatha' Hines (1942-43) and Billy Eckstine (1944) big bands introduced him to Dizzy Gillespie, another young black player with innovative musical ideas and a rebellious stance. Wartime austerities, though, meant that the days of the big bands were numbered. Parker took his experience of big band saxophone sections with him to Harlem, New York. There he found the equivalent of the Kansas City 'cutting contests' in the clubs of 52nd Street, especially in the 'afterhours' sessions at Minton's Playhouse. Together with Dizzy and drummers Kenny Clarke and Max Roach, and with the essential harmonic contributions of Charlie Christian and Thelonious Monk, he pioneered a new music. Furious tempos and intricate heads played in unison inhibited lesser talents from joining in. Instead of keeping time with bass and snare drums, Clarke and Roach kept up a beat on the cymbal, using bass and snare for accents, whipping up soloists to greater heights. And Parker played high: that is, he created his solo lines from the top notes of the underlying chord sequences - ninths, 11ths, 13ths - so extending the previous harmonic language of jazz. Parker made his recording debut as a small combo player in Tiny Grimes's band in September 1944.

In 1945 Savoy Records - and some more obscure labels like Guild, Manor and Comet - began releasing 78s of this music, which the press called 'bebop'. It became a national fad, Dizzy's trademark goatee and beret supplying the visual element. It was a proud declaration of bohemian recklessness from a black community that, due to wartime full employment, was feeling especially confident. Charlie Parker's astonishing alto - so fluent and abrupt, bluesy and joyous - was the definition of everything that was modern and hip. 'Koko', 'Shaw Nuff', 'Now's The Time': the very titles announced the dawning of a new era. A trip to the west coast and a residency at Billy Berg's helped spread the message.

There were problems. Parker's addiction to heroin was causing erratic behaviour and the proprietor was not impressed at the small audiences of hipsters the music attracted (apart from an historic opening night). In January 1946 Norman Granz promoted Charlie Parker at the LA Philharmonic and the same year saw him begin a series of famous recordings for Ross Russell's Dial label, with a variety of players that included Howard McGhee, Lucky Thompson, Wardell Gray and Dodo Marmarosa. However, Parker's heroin-related health problems came to a head following the notorious 'Loverman' session of July 1946 when, after setting his hotel-room on fire, the saxophonist was incarcerated in the psychiatric wing of the LA County Jail and then spent six months in a rehabilitation centre (commemorated in 'Relaxin' At Camarillo', 1947). When he emerged he recorded two superb sessions for Dial, one of them featuring Erroll Garner. On returning to New York he formed a band with Miles Davis and Max Roach and cut some classic sides in November 1947, including 'Scrapple From The Apple' and 'Klact-oveeseds-tene'. Parker toured abroad for the first time in 1949, when he played at a jazz festival in Paris. In November 1950 he visited Scandinavia. He felt that his music would be taken more seriously if he was associated with classical instrumentation. The 'With Strings' albums now sound hopelessly dated, but they were commercially successful at the time. Fans reported that Parker's playing, though consummate, needed the spark of improvisers of his stature to really lift off on the bandstand. A more fruitful direction was suggested by his interest in the music of Edgard Varese, whom he saw on the streets of Manhattan, but Parker's untimely death ruled out any collaborations with the avant garde composer. His health had continued to give him problems: ulcers and cirrhosis of the liver. According to Leonard Feather, his playing at the Town Hall months before his death in March 1955 was 'as great as any period in his career'. His last public appearance was on 4 March 1955, at Birdland, the club named after him: it was a fiasco - Parker and pianist Bud Powell rowed onstage, the latter storming off followed shortly by bassist Charles Mingus. Disillusioned, obese and racked by illness, Parker died eight days later in the hotel suite of Baroness Pannonica de Koenigswarter, a wealthy aristocrat and stalwart bebop fan. His influence was immense. Lennie Tristano said, 'If Charlie wanted to invoke plagiarism laws, he could sue almost everybody who's made a record in the last ten years.' In pursuing his art with such disregard for reward and security, Charlie Parker was black music's first existential hero. After him, jazz could not avoid the trials and tribulations that beset the avant garde.

● ALBUMS: The Bird Blows The Blues (Dial 1949)★★★★, The Charlie Parker Story 1945 recording (Savoy 40s)★★★★, Charlie Parker Quintet (Dial 1949)★★★★, with Lester Young Bird & Pres Carnegie Hall 1949 (1949)★★★★, Dance Of The Infidels (1949)★★★★, Sextet (Dial 1950)★★★★, With Strings (Mercury 1950)★★★★, With Strings Volume 2 (Mercury 1950)★★★★, Broadcasts (1950)★★★★, Bird At St Nick's (1950)★★★★, Just Friends (1950)★★★★, Apartment Sessions (1950)★★★★, One Night In Chicago (1950)★★★★, At The Pershing Ballroom (1950)★★★, Bird In Sweden (1950)★★★, Charlie Parker Volume 1 (Savoy 1950)★★★★, Charlie Parker Volume 2 (Savoy 1951)★★★★, Alternate Masters (Dial 1951)★★★, The Mingus Connection (1951)★★★, Norman Granz Jam Session (1952)★★★★, Inglewood Jam (1952)★★★, Charlie Parker Volume 3 (Savoy 1952)★★★★, with Dizzy Gillespie Bird And Diz (Mercury 1952)★★★★, Charlie Parker Volume 4 (Savoy 1952)★★★★, South Of The Border (Mercury 1952)★★★, Live At Rockland Palace (1952)★★★, New Bird Vols 1 & 2 (1952-53)★★★★, Yardbird (1953)★★★★, Jazz At Massey Hall reissued as part of The Greatest Jazz Concert Ever (1953)★★★★, Birdland All Stars At Carnegie Hall (1954)★★★★, Charlie Parker (Clef 1954)★★★★, Charlie Parker Big Band (Clef 1954)★★★★, Charlie Parker Memorial Volume Vol 1 (Savoy 1955)★★★★, The Immortal Charlie Parker (Savoy 1955)★★★★, The Magnificent Charlie Parker (Clef 1955)★★★★, An Evening At Home With The Bird (Savoy 1959)★★★, The Bird Returns (Savoy 1962)★★★★, Newly Discovered Sides By The Immortal Charlie Parker (Savoy 1964)★★★, One Night At Birdland rec. 1950 (1977)★★★, One Night In Washington rec. 1953 (1982)★★★, Charlie Parker At Storyville rec. 1953 (1985)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Charlie Parker Story Volumes 1-3 (Verve 1957)★★★★, The Genius Of Charlie Parker Volumes 1-8 (Verve 1957)★★★★, Les Jazz Cool Vols 1-3 (Les Jazz Cool 1960)★★★, Charlie Parker On Dial, Vols. 1-6 rec. 1945-1947 (1974)★★★★, Bird With Strings rec. 1950-52 (1977)★★★★, Summit Meeting At Birdland rec. 1951-1953 (1977)★★★★, The Complete Savoy Studio Sessions rec. 1944-1948, 5-LP box set (1978)★★★★, The Complete Charlie Parker On Verve rec. 1950-54, 10-CD box set (1989)★★★★★, The Savoy Master Takes rec. 1944-48 (1989)★★★★★, The Legendary Dial Masters, Vols. 1 & 2 rec. 1946-47 (1989)★★★★★, Bird At The Roost, Vols. 1-4 rec. 1948-1949 (1990)★★★★★, The Complete Dean Benedetti Recordings Of Charlie Parker rec. late 40s, 7-CD box set (Mosaic 1991)★★★★, Gold Collection (1993)★★★, The Complete Dial Sessions (Spotlight 1993)★★★★, Yardbird Suite: The Ultimate Charlie Parker Collection (Rhino 1997)★★★★.

● VIDEOS: The Bird (1994).

● FURTHER READING: Bird Lives!, Ross Russell. Bird: The

Legend Of Charlie Parker, Robert Reisner. Cool Blues, Mark Miller. Discography Of Charlie Parker, Jorgen Grunnet Jepsen. Charlie Parker, M. Harrison. Bird Lives: The High Life And Hard Times Of Charlie (Yardbird) Parker, Ross Russell. To Bird With Love, C. Parker and F. Paudras. Charlie Parker, Brian Priestley. Charlie Parker, Stuart Isacoff. Celebrating Bird: The Triumph Of Charlie Parker, Gary Giddins. From One Charlie To Another, Charlie Watts.

Parker, Evan

b. Evan Shaw Parker, 5 April 1944, Bristol, Avon, England. Soprano and tenor saxophonist Parker has one of the most awesome techniques in any field of music. When playing solo he combines circular breathing, multiphonics and tonguing tricks to build up complex, contrapuntal masses of sound which are credible only to those who have heard him live and can testify that there is no overdubbing involved. (However, with his 1991 album, Process And Reality, he has begun to experiment with multi-tracking techniques, but not simply to mimic his solo feats: the overdubbed tracks find him producing more lyrical, though equally complex interweaving lines.) He is also to be heard from time to time in conventional big band contexts (such as Orchestra UK led by Kenny Wheeler at the start of the 90s) and at all points between there and total abstract improvisation. (Not forgetting occasional work in the pop field, with Scott Walker and Annette Peacock, and with contemporary classical composers Michael Nyman and Gavin Bryars.) While he has created a unique style and sound-world, which would seem to exclude other players, he can glory in any type of jam, digging in for the gritty blues with the best of them, sparking off players like Annie Whitehead, Dudu Pukwana, Mark Sanders, Paul Rogers and John Stevens so that he and they play their best. His mother, an amateur pianist, introduced him to jazz in the shape of Fats Waller. He studied saxophone with James Knott from 1958 until 1962 when he went to Birmingham University to study botany. He left to concentrate on music, playing with Howard Riley from time to time and developing his taste for free improvisation. In 1966 he moved to London to play with Stevens's Spontaneous Music Ensemble and with Derek Bailey, with whom he co-founded the Music Improvisation Company in 1968 and the Incus Records label in 1970. As well as some remarkable solo concerts and albums, Parker has gigged or recorded with Chris McGregor, Tony Oxley, Barry Guy, Paul Lytton, George Lewis, the Globe Unity Orchestra, Steve Lacy, Peter Brötzmann, several Company line-ups, electronics expert Walter Prati and, with Paul Lovens, has long been a member of the regular trio led by Alex Von Schlippenbach. He currently leads his own trio too, with Paul Rogers on bass and Mark Sanders on drums, participates in Jon Lloyd's Anacrusis and continues to develop his singular solo saxophone improvisations.

● ALBUMS: with Derek Bailey, Han Bennink The Topography Of The Lungs (1970)★★★, Music Improvisation Company (1971)★★★, The Music Improvisation Company 1968-71 (1971)★★★★, with Paul Lytton Collective Calls (Urban) (Two Microphones) (1972)★★★, with Lytton At The Unity Theatre (1975)★★, with Bailey The London Concert (1975)★★★, Saxophone Solos (1975)★★★★, with others Company 1 (1976)★★★, with Bailey, Anthony Braxton Company 2 (1976)★★★, with Lytton RA 1+2 (1976)★★★, with John Stevens The Longest Night Vols 1 & 2 (1977)★★★, with Alvin Curran, Andrea Centazzo Real Time (1977)★★★, Monoceros (1978)★★, with Greg Goodman Abracadabra (1978)★★★, At The Finger Palace (1978)★★★, with others Four Four Four (1980)★★★, with Company Fables (1980)★★★, with George Lewis From Saxophone & Trombone (1980)★★★, Six Of One (1980)★★★, with Barry Guy Incision (1981)★★★, Zanzou (1982)★★★★, with Guy, Lytton Tracks (1983)★★★, with Lewis, Guy, Lytton Hook Drift & Shuffle (1983)★★★, with Company Trios (1983)★★★, with Bailey Compatibles (Incus 1985)★★★, with Guy Tai Kyoku (1985)★★★, with Steve Lacy Chirps (1985)★★★, The Snake Decides (1986)★★★, with others Supersession 1985 recording (1988)★★★, with others The Ericle Of Dolphi (1989)★★★★, with Cecil Taylor, Tristan Honsinger The Hearth (1989)★★★★, with Guy Duo Improvisations (1990)★★★, with others Dithyrambisch (1990)★★★, Atlanta (Impulse 1990)★★★★, with Walter Prati Hall Of Mirrors (1990)★★★, Hall Of Mirrors (MMT 1991)★★★, Process And Reality (FMP 1991)★★★, Conic Sections 1989 recordings (Ah-Um 1993)★★★★, Corner To Corner (Ogun 1994)★★★★, 50th Birthday Concert (Leo 1994)★★★, Imaginary Values (Maya 1994)★★★★, with Barry Guy and Paul Lytton Breaths And Heartbeats (Ratascan 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Collected Solos (1989)★★★★.

Parker, Fess

b. 16 August 1925, Fort Worth, Texas, USA. An actor and singer, Parker did some stage work before making his film debut in 1952 in Untamed Frontier, a western starring Joseph Cotton and Shelley Winters. Two years later he appeared as the famous Indian scout-legislator-Alamo defender Davy Crockett, in three episodes of the television series Disneyland. The shows were extremely popular, and the theme, 'The Ballad Of Davy Crockett', written by scriptwriter Tom Blackburn and George Bruns, became a US number 1 hit for Bill Hayes, well known on television himself for Show Of Shows. Subsequently, Parker's own version of the song made the US Top 10. When the big screen version, Davy Crockett, King Of The Wild Frontier!, was made in 1955, coonskin caps abounded, nationwide and beyond; the inevitable sequel, Davy Crockett And The River Pirates, was released in 1956. In the same year, Parker starred in Walt Disney's Westward Ho, The Wagons!, which featured five new songs, including 'Wringle Wrangle', Parker's second, and last, chart success. His other movies, through to the 60s, included The Great Locomotive Chase (1956), Old Yeller (1957 - the first of the many Disney films about a boy and his dog), The Hangman (1959) and Hell Is For Heroes (1962), an exciting World War II drama, with Steve McQueen and Bobby Darin. Parker was also prominent on US television; in 1962 he co-starred with country singer Red Foley in a series based on Lewis R. Foster's classic, Mr. Smith Goes To Washington. Two years later he returned to the backwoods and portrayed yet another legendary American pioneer in Daniel Boone, which ran until 1968. In 1972 he played a tough sheriff in the US television movie Climb An Angry Mountain. After he retired from showbusiness, Parker moved to Santa Barbara, California, and initially concentrated on a career in real estate. Since then, as the owner of Santa Barbara's Red Lion Resort and Parker Winery, he has become something of a tycoon, and by the early 90s his products were selling in over 30 states.

● ALBUMS: with Marion Marlowe TV Sweethearts (Columbia 1955)★★, The Adventures Of Davy Crockett (Columbia 1955)★★★, Yarns And Songs (Disneyland 1959)★★, Cowboy And Indian Songs (Disneyland 1960)★★, Fess Parker Sings About Daniel Boone, Davy Crockett And Abe Lincoln (RCA Victor 1964)★.

Parker, Graham

b. 18 November 1950, London, England. Having begun his career in aspiring soul groups the Black Rockers and Deep Cut Three, R&B vocalist Parker undertook menial employment while completing several demo tapes of his original songs. One such collection came to the attention of David Robinson, owner of a small recording studio within a building housing the north London, Hope & Anchor pub. Impressed, he pieced together a backing group - Brinsley Schwarz (guitar/vocals), Bob Andrews (keyboards/vocals), both ex-Brinsley Schwarz, Martin Belmont (guitar/vocals, ex-Ducks Deluxe), Andrew Bodnar (bass) and Steve Goulding (drums) - known collectively as the Rumour, and the new aggregation joined the dying embers of the 'pub rock' scene. The patronage of Radio London disc jockey Charlie Gillett helped engender a recording deal and both Howlin' Wind and Heat Treatment received almost universal acclaim. Parker's gritty delivery was both tough and passionate, placing the singer on a level with US contemporaries Bruce Springsteen and Southside Johnny And The Asbury Jukes. Although the artist also enjoyed two chart entries with The Pink Parker EP (1977) and 'Hold Back The Night' (1978), his momentum was effectively stalled by the divided critical opinion to the commercial Stick To Me, and a live-double set, The Parkerilla. While the public gave them a UK Top 40 hit with 'Hey Lord, Don't Ask Me Questions', and despite both albums attaining UK Top 20 status, many felt Parker and the Rumour were losing their original fire, and bitter wrangles with his record company further undermined progress. Squeezing Out Sparks, his debut for Arista Records (in the USA), reclaimed former glories and was lauded in both Rolling Stone and Village Voice. Persistent contradictions between the critics and chart positions added fuel to the confusion in the group line-up. Their most successful UK chart album, 1980's The Up Escalator (released on Stiff Records in the UK), would mark the end of Parker's partnership with the Rumour. With the break-up, any magic that had remained from the early days had truly gone. The remainder of the 80s was spent rebuilding his career and personal life in the USA. In 1988 Mona Lisa's Sister proved a dramatic return-to-form rightly praised for its drive and sense of purpose. Ex-Rumour bassist Andrew Bodnar joined former Attractions Steve Nieve (keyboards) and Pete Thomas (drums) for Human Soul, an ambitious concept albums split between sides labelled 'real' and 'surreal'. This surprising departure indicated Parker's increasing desire to expand the perimeters of his exhilarating style. Into the 90s, Parker proved fully capable, and confident, of performing to large audiences solo, with acoustic guitar or with full backing. In early 1992 he changed record labels once more by signing to Capitol Records in the USA. The well-received 12 Haunted Episodes was released in 1995, but the follow-up, Acid Bubblegum, showed little signs of any artistic progress. Parker, however, retains his cult following.

● ALBUMS: Howlin' Wind (Vertigo 1976)★★★★, Heat Treatment (Vertigo 1976)★★★, Stick To Me (Vertigo 1977)★★★, The Parkerilla (Vertigo 1978)★, Squeezing Out Sparks (Vertigo 1979)★★★★, The Up Escalator (Stiff 1980)★★★, Another Grey Area (RCA 1982)★★★, The Real Macaw (RCA 1983)★★★, Steady Nerves (Elektra 1985)★★, Mona Lisa's Sister (Demon 1988)★★★★, Human Soul (Demon 1989)★★★, Live! Alone In America (Demon 1989)★★★, Struck By Lightning (Demon 1991)★★★, Burning Questions (1992)★★★, Live Alone! Discovering Japan (1993)★★★, 12 Haunted Episodes (Razor & Tie 1995)★★★, Live From New York, NY (Rock The House 1996)★★★, Acid Bubblegum (Razor & Tie 1996)★★★, BBC Live In Concert (Strange Fruit 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of Graham Parker And The Rumour (Vertigo 1980)★★★★, Not If It Pleases Me (Hux 1998)★★★.

Parker, John 'Knocky'

b. 8 August 1918, Palmer, Texas, USA, d. 3 September 1986. During the 30s Parker played piano in several Texas bands, some of which were only on the edges of jazz. In the mid-40s he was working on the west coast with leading traditional jazz musicians such as Albert Nicholas. Parker later went into education, teaching at colleges and universities, but still found time to play with Omer Simeon, Tony Parenti and others during the 50s and 60s. In the early 60s he undertook an extensive recording programme of ragtime music, notably including the works of Scott Joplin and James Scott. A few years later he turned his attention to early jazz piano with a set of music by Jelly Roll Morton. In the early 80s he recorded a fine album with Big Joe Turner.

● ALBUMS: The Complete Piano Works Of Scott Joplin (1960)★★★, The Complete Piano Works Of James Scott (1962)★★, Golden Treasury Of Ragtime (1968)★★★★, The Complete Piano Works Of Jelly Roll Morton (1970)★★★★, Big

Joe Turner With Knocky Parker And His Houserockers (1983)★★★★, From Cakewalk To Ragtime (Jazzology 1986)★★★, Texas Swing - And The Blues (1987)★★★, Texas Swing - Boogie Woogie (1987)★★★★, Texas Swing - The Barrel-House (1987)★★★, Knocky Parker And Galvanised Washboard Band (GHB 1994)★★★.

Parker, Johnny

b. 6 November 1929, Beckenham, Kent, England. Parker is a self-taught pianist with a great talent for solo ragtime and boogie woogie but who can fit easily into a band's rhythm section. In the early 50s he worked with Mick Mulligan and Humphrey Lyttelton playing the catchy boogie woogie on the latter's 'Bad Penny Blues' hit in 1956. He later played with Monty Sunshine and Kenny Ball but also with Alexis Korner's Blues Incorporated to which he made an important contribution as the 60s blues boom got under way. His own bands at this time reflected his love of the music of Sidney Bechet and Eddie Condon. Latterly he has presented his own one-man show, worked regularly with vocalist Beryl Bryden and provided the backing for the vocal group, Sweet Substitute.

● ALBUMS: with Alexis Korner R&B From The Marquee (Ace Of Clubs 1962)★★★★, with Korner Alexis Korner's Blues Inc. (1963)★★★, Johnny Parker's Boogie Woogie (1979)★★★.

Parker, Ken

b. *c.*1948, Jamaica, West Indies. Parker began singing in church where his father was a preacher. Inspired by the gospel tunes, he formed a group called the Blues Blenders and in 1967 they recorded 'Honeymoon By The Sea'. The group decided to audition with Coxsone Dodd at Studio One, but owing to a misunderstanding only Parker arrived. He decided to audition as a soloist and thus began his recording career. His output included 'Choking Kind', 'Run Come' and My Whole World Is Falling Down'. Following his departure from Studio One he recorded with Duke Reid at Treasure Isle, where he cut some of his classic hits, including 'Jimmy Brown', 'Help Me Make It Through The Night' and 'Kiss An Angel Good Morning'. Lesser-known Duke Reid productions include 'Sugar Pantie', 'I Can't Hide' and 'True True True', the latter being covered by U-Roy. Parker's popularity escalated, resulting in further hits produced with Bunny Lee ('Guilty'), Rupie Edwards ('Talk About Love' and 'Wanna Be Loved'), Byron Lee ('Will The Circle Be Unbroken'), Lloyd Charmers ('Queen Majesty'), and Joe Gibbs ('Only Yesterday' and 'It's Alright'). By 1972 Parker became disillusioned with the industry and took a break from the recording scene. In the early 80s he returned to music, recording in the UK, where he set up his own record label and production company. In 1982 the release of 'God Bless Our Love' on the reactivated Pama label maintained his profile prior to the inauguration of his own production company, which released his gospel-inspired recordings.

● ALBUMS: Peace In The Valley (Studio One 1968)★★, A Touch Of Inspiration (Pisces 1984)★★★, I Shall Not Be Moved (Pisces 1984)★★★, Jesus On The Main Line (Pisces 1985)★★★.

Parker, Leo

b. 18 April 1925, Washington, DC, USA, d. 11 February 1962. Starting out on alto saxophone, an instrument on which he recorded with Coleman Hawkins, Parker switched to baritone in 1944 when he joined the bebop-orientated big band led by Billy Eckstine. For the next year or so was a member of the band's so-called 'unholy four'. Fellow saxophonists in the band included Dexter Gordon, Sonny Stitt and Gene Ammons but it was another Eckstine alumni, his namesake Charlie Parker, who appears to have exercised most musical influence upon him. After leaving Eckstine, Parker played in New York with Dizzy Gillespie and Fats Navarro before joining Illinois Jacquet's popular band. A record date with Sir Charles Thompson featured Parker on a tune entitled 'Mad Lad' and this became his nickname. Despite several other fine record dates with Gordon, and club sessions with Stitt, Ammons, Teddy Edwards, Wardell Gray and others, at all of which he more than held his own, Parker's career proved short-lived. By 1947 drug addiction was severely affecting his health. He played on into the 50s, but only intermittently, making occasional record dates, on some of which he rallied sufficiently to play superbly. One of the major baritone saxophonists in jazz, Parker died in 1962.

● ALBUMS: Leo Parker's All Stars (1947)★★★, Leo Parker's Sextette/Quintette (1948)★★★★, Leo Parker And His Mad Lads i (1950)★★★, Leo Parker And His Mad Lads ii (1950)★★★, The Leo Parker Quintet (1951)★★★★, The Leo Parker Quartet (1953),★★★ Let Me Tell You 'Bout It (Blue Note 1961)★★★★, Rollin' With Leo (Blue Note 1961)★★★.

Parker, Maceo

(see Maceo And The King's Men)

Parker, Ray, Jnr.

b. 1 May 1954, Detroit, Michigan, USA. This accomplished musician gained his reputation during the late 60s as a member of the house band at the 20 Grand Club. This Detroit nightspot often featured Tamla/Motown acts, one of which, the (Detroit) Spinners, was so impressed with the young guitarist's skills that they added him to their touring group. Parker was also employed as a studio musician for the emergent Invictus/Hot Wax stable and his choppy style was particularly evident on 'Want Ads', a number 1 single for Honey Cone. Parker also participated on two Stevie Wonder albums, Talking Book and Innervisions, an association that prompted a permanent move to Los Angeles. Here Parker continued his session work (Marvin Gaye, Boz Scaggs, Labelle, Barry White and Love Unlimited) until 1977, when he formed Raydio with other Detroit musicians Arnell Carmichael (synthesizer), Jerry Knight (bass), Vincent Bonham (piano), Larry Tolbert, Darren Carmichael and Charles Fearing. 'Jack And Jill', a pop/soul reading of the nursery rhyme, gave the group an international hit, while further releases consistently reached the R&B charts. 'A Woman Needs Love (Just Like You Do)', credited to Ray Parker Jnr. And Raydio, was a US Top 5 hit in 1981, while the following year the leader embarked on a solo path with 'The Other Woman'. In 1984 Parker secured a multi-million-selling single with the theme song to the film Ghostbusters, although its lustre was somewhat tarnished by allegations that he had plagiarized a Huey Lewis composition, 'I Want A New Drug'. Nonetheless, Parker's success continued as the song secured him a 1984 Grammy award for Best Pop Instrumental Performance. In 1986 he moved to the Geffen label, releasing After Dark the following year. A single from the album, 'I Don't Think That Man Should Sleep Alone', was a Top 20 hit in the UK. After producing New Edition's debut album, Parker moved to the MCA label and released the disappointing I Love You Like You Are.

● ALBUMS: as Raydio Raydio (Arista 1977)★★★, Rock On (Arista 1979)★★★. As Ray Parker Jnr. And Raydio Two Places At The Same Time (Arista 1980)★★★, A Woman Needs Love (Arista 1981)★★★. As Ray Parker The Other Woman (Arista 1982)★★, Woman Out Of Control (Arista 1983)★★, Sex And The Single Man (Arista 1985)★★, After Dark (Geffen 1987)★★★, I Love You Like You Are (MCA 1991)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Greatest Hits (Arista 1982)★★★★, Chartbusters (Arista 1984)★★★, The Collection (Arista 1986)★★★.

Parker, Robert

b. 14 October 1930, New Orleans, Louisiana, USA. An accomplished saxophonist, this versatile musician was first heard on numerous recordings by pianist Professor Longhair. Parker also appeared on sessions for Irma Thomas, Ernie K-Doe and Joe Tex while at the same time embarking on a singing career. His early releases were largely unsuccessful until 'Barefootin'', an irresistible dance record, became a hit in the USA and the UK during 1966. The singer continued this instinctive blend of soul and New Orleans R&B on several further releases, but 'Tip Toe' (1967) was his only further chart entry.

● ALBUMS: Barefootin' (Island 1966)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Get Ta Steppin' (Charly 1987)★★.

Parker, Sonny

b. 5 May 1925, Youngstown, Ohio, USA, d. 1957. Raised in Chicago by the vaudeville act Butterbeans And Susie, Parker developed into an all-round entertainer specializing in singing and dancing, and his powerful voice lent itself well to blues shouting. Recording with trumpeter King Kolax for Columbia in 1948, he came to the attention of bandleader Lionel Hampton, and recorded as the latter's blues vocalist for Decca and MGM over the next three years, covering many of the top US R&B hits of the day ('Drinking Wine', 'Spo-Dee-O-Dee', 'For You My Love', 'Merry Christmas Baby', and 'I Almost Lost My Mind'). During the Hampton years, Parker recorded sessions in his own name for Aladdin, Spire and Peacock, usually featuring a contingent from the then-current Hampton orchestra. Later sessions were recorded in the mid-50s for Brunswick, Ultima and Hitts, and Parker continued to tour sporadically with Hampton. In 1957, Hampton brought Parker to Europe, and it was while touring France that he became seriously ill and died.

● COMPILATIONS: including with Wynonie Harris, Jimmy Rushing, Big Joe Turner The Best Of The Blues Shouters (1970)★★★★.

Parker, Terrence

USA born Parker burst into the UK public's imagination when 'The Question', by his nom de plume Seven Grand Housing Authority, was played by Tony Humphries at Cream in Liverpool. The track was taken from the Soul Beats EP, built over a sample of Kenny Gonzales' 'Axis Project'. Among those who were astonished by the track were James Barton of Olympic Records (who subsequently joined deConstruction), and he and others walked over to inspect the record's label. The track was soon licensed from Detroit's Simply Soul label to Olympic, arriving with a K-Klass remix. Parker had been making house music since 1988, at which point he joined Mark Kinchen to become Separate Minds for the techno soul track, 'We Need Somebody'. He also remixed and produced in Detroit under the aliases Express, Trancefusion, Transsonic and Simply Soul. His earlier releases included the 'Call My Name' recorded for Detroit label 430 West. He was additionally responsible for running Intangible Records - at all stages defying the musical bent of his geographical home by remaining faithful to his love of Chicago house rather than techno. In confirmation of this, 1994 saw the release of the Disco Disciple EP.

Parker, William

b. 10 January 1952, New York City, New York, USA. Parker played cello in junior school and acquired a bass in the last year of high school. He remembers being sent with 99 cents to the store to buy Duke Ellington records for his father. He found a cut-price record by Ornette Coleman and rapidly became interested in the New Thing: John Coltrane, Albert Ayler and Archie Shepp. He attended sessions at Studio We in the early 70s, playing with Sam Rivers and Frank Lowe amongst others, and was involved with a Cecil Taylor big band at Carnegie Hall in 1973. Parker married in 1974 and worked at his day-job for the housing authority for a short time, then quit to play the Five Spot with Don Cherry. He next played with drummer Rashid Baker in Jemeel Moondoc's band and in 1980 also joined Taylor, with whom he has continued to work regularly throughout the 80s and early 90s in a variety of settings, including the pianist's recent Feel Trio. Other long-term associates - in addition to Taylor and Moondoc - have included Peter Kuhn, Billy Bang and Bill Dixon, and Parker is also much in demand in New York's avant garde scene, appearing with experimenters such as Wayne Horvitz, Butch Morris and Ellen Christi. In 1989 Parker started a trio with Peter Brötzmann (saxophone) and Milford Graves (drums) and in 1990 recorded with drummer Dennis Charles in a trio led by upcoming saxophonist Rob Brown (Breath Rhyme). Parker has a warm sound, and whether he is setting up simple vamps or responding to the torrential Taylor, his playing is always strong and creative.

● ALBUMS: Through Acceptance Of The Mystery Peace (1979)★★★, with Jason Hwang Commitment (1980)★★, with Wayne Horvitz and Butch Morris Some Order Long Understood (1982)★★★, with the Feel Trio Looking (Berlin Version) (1990)★★★.

Parkes, Lloyd

b. 26 May 1948, Walton Gardens, Jamaica, West Indies. After completing his studies in music Parkes toured the North Coast performing on stage with his uncle. He teamed up with Wentworth Vernon as the vocal duo the Termites. Recording at Studio One the duo enjoyed a number of hits produced by Coxsone Dodd including, 'Do It Right Now', 'Have Mercy Mr Percy', 'My Last Love' and the legendary, 'Rub Up Push Up'. After three years the duo split up and Parkes was drafted into the Techniques replacing Pat Kelly. His output with the group was limited as he was only part of the line-up for a brief period. He was reputed to have sung on the classic 'You Don't Care', which he later recorded as a soloist in a medley of his hits. His first solo recording, 'Stars' was a minor hit but it was his version of 'Slaving' that won him international acclaim. The song was used by I. Roy for his classic 'Black Man Time' and Big Youth for 'Honesty'. The hit was included on the compilation Officially and featured a remake of his Termite hit 'Corporal Jones' along with 'Don't Put All Your Eggs In One Basket' and 'I Specialise In Good Girls'. Although Parkes has recorded a number of songs he is regarded as one of Jamaica's top bassists and his work in the line-up of Skin Flesh And Bones alongside, Sly Dunbar, Errol Nelson, and Bertram 'Ranchie' Maclean is legendary. In 1974 Al Brown recorded a cover version of Al Green's, 'Here I Am (Come And Take Me)' which was a smash hit resulting in a plethora of versions of the rhythm. The notable versions were 'Butter Fe Fish', 'Bammie Fe Fish' and 'Tit For Tat' the latter being a reference to the club where the group backed a number of the islands top performers. The group also released a cover of Neil Diamond's, 'Solitary Man' which was a hit in the reggae chart. Whilst providing his skills as a sessionist Parkes also found time to continue releasing singles on his own Parkes label, entering the UK reggae charts with, 'Ghetto Guns', 'Mafia' and 'Time A Go Dread'. When Skin Flesh And Bones evolved into Joe Gibbs' house band, the Professionals, the group performed on classic mid-70s hits backing Culture, Dennis Brown, Prince Far I, Trinity and the UK number one hit for Althea And Donna, 'Up Town Top Ranking'. The sessions also resulted in a series of dub albums which still enjoy healthy sales nearly 20 years on. During his time with Gibbs Parkes also secured further chart placing for his own 'Baby Hang Up The Phone' and with Big Youth, 'No War Into This Dance'. Gibbs' golden touch began to wane and Parkes formed his own group the We The People Band touring primarily with Dennis Brown. In the 90s Parkes toured with fellow Studio One veterans Freddie MacGregor and Marcia Griffiths

● ALBUMS: with the Termites Presenting The Termites (Studio One 1968)★★★, Officially (Trojan 1974)★★★★, Girl In The Morning (Trojan 1975)★★★, Loving You (Trojan 1976)★★★, with the Professionals African Dub Chapters 1, 2, 3 & 4 (Joe Gibbs mid-70s)★★★★, with the Professionals Earthquake Dub (Joe Gibbs 1978)★★★.

Parkinson, Doug

b. Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia. As the lead singer with the Questions, the band came second in the 1967 Australian Battle of the Bands contest. Parkinson gained more prominence with his next band, Doug Parkinson In Focus, formed in 1968. This group charted in Australia with 'Hair', 'Without You' and the Beatles' 'Dear Prudence'. Parkinson's deep, expressive voice was easily recognizable on these hits and he remains one of the best male voices in Australia alongside Leo De Castro and Jeff Duff. When In Focus broke up in 1970, he went to the UK and formed the ill-fated Fanny Adams, whose albums were not successful. He returned to Australia in 1971 and re-formed In Focus briefly, released the No Regrets solo album and fronted several big show-type bands. More ballad material was released until 1979's excellent interpretation of the (Detroit) Spinners' 'I'll Be Around' with his much rockier Southern Star Band. Much of Parkinson's career has been centred on stage and in rock musicals such as Tommy, Ned Kelly and Jesus Christ Superstar. Parkinson possesses a great voice, although many of his releases lean to much towards MOR to be of any great interest to the rock and pop audience.

● ALBUMS: No Regrets (1973)★★★★, Doug Parkinson And The Southern Star Band (1979)★★★, Rock Legend (1980)★★★, Heartbeat To Heartbeat (1983)★★, Reflections (1986)★★.

Parklife - Blur

Just as the Kinks' Ray Davies distilled 'Englishness' on Something Else in 1967, so two of Davies's greatest admirers took it a step further in 1994. Damon Albarn and Graham Coxon wrote a 'chirpy cheeky chappie' concept album without any deliberate concept. True, the pseudo-Cockney narratives frequently seemed contrived, but overall the set gelled perfectly. From the cynical 'Girls & Boys', through the punk sensibilities of 'Bank Holiday', to the sadness of 'This Is A Low', Parklife was a stunning album of high-quality, undeniably English pop. The title track quickly became a ubiquitous (and many would argue, highly irritating) anthem, but with this album Blur firmly established themselves as a major talent.

- Tracks: Girls & Boys; Tracy Jacks; End Of A Century; Parklife; Bank Holiday; Badhead; The Debt Collector; Far Out; To The End; London Loves; Trouble In The Message Centre; Clover Over Dover; Magic America; Jubilee; This Is A Low; Lot 105.
- First released 1994
- UK peak chart position: 1
- USA peak chart position: did not chart

Parks, Lloyd

b. 26 May 1948, Walton Gardens, Jamaica, West Indies. A renowned singer and bass player, after completing his studies in music, Parks toured the north coast of Jamaica, performing on stage with his uncle. In the late 60s, Parks performed with the Invincibles band, whose personnel at that time also included Ansell Collins on organ, Sly Dunbar on drums and Ranchie Mclean on guitar. He then teamed up with Wentworth Vernon as half of the vocal duo the Termites, who recorded one album for Studio One and enjoyed a number of hits produced by Coxsone Dodd, including 'Do It Right Now', 'Have Mercy Mr Percy', 'My Last Love' and the legendary 'Rub Up Push Up'. After three years, the duo split and Parks was drafted into the Techniques to replace Pat Kelly, joining Dave Barker and producer Winston Riley. Although he was only in the line-up for a brief period, he was reputed to have sung on the classic 'You Don't Care', which he later recorded as a soloist in a medley of his hits. His solo recording 'Stars' was a minor hit but it was his version of 'Slaving' that won him international acclaim. The song was used by I. Roy for his classic 'Black Man Time' and by Big Youth for 'Honesty'. He recorded 'Say You Love Me' for Riley in 1969, and played bass on Dave Barker and Ansell Collins' international hits 'Double Barrel' (1970) and 'Monkey Spanner' (1970). By 1970 he was recording for producers Sonia Pottinger ('We Will Make Love') and Harry J. ('A Little Better'). In addition to his singing, Parks is also regarded as one of Jamaica's top bassists and his work in the line-up of Skin Flesh And Bones, alongside Sly Dunbar, Errol Nelson and Bertram 'Ranchie' Mclean, is legendary. The group's cover version of Neil Diamond's 'Solitary Man' was a hit in the reggae chart. He also joined the Thoroughbreds house band, playing Kingston's 'Tit-for-Tat' club. Parks continued making records in an expressive falsetto/tenor voice for a variety of producers including Glen Brown ('Slaving') and Prince Tony Robinson, and when Parks launched his own label in 1973 it was initially distributed from Robinson's shop. Among his Jamaican hits were the huge smashes 'Officially' (1974), 'Mafia' (1974), 'Girl In The Morning' and 'Baby Hang Up The Phone' (1975). Parks continued session work on bass with Skin Flesh and Bones, and by 1976 was playing bass in both the Revolutionaries and Professionals studio bands. When Skin Flesh And Bones evolved into Joe Gibbs' house band, the Professionals, the group performed on classic mid-70s hits backing Culture, Dennis Brown, Prince Far I, Trinity and the UK number one hit for Althea And Donna, 'Up Town Top Ranking'. The sessions also resulted in a series of dub albums that still enjoy healthy sales over 20 years later. In 1978 he formed We The People Band, recording and touring, principally with Dennis Brown. He continued to combine session work and touring with the same band into the early 90s, touring with fellow Studio One veterans Freddie McGregor and Marcia Griffiths.

- ALBUMS: with the Termites Presenting The Termites (Studio One 1968)★★★, Officially (Trojan 1974)★★★★, Girl In The Morning (Trojan 1975)★★★, Loving You (Trojan 1976)★★★, with the Professionals African Dub Chapters 1, 2, 3 & 4 (Joe Gibbs mid-70s)★★★★, with the Professionals Earthquake Dub (Joe Gibbs 1978)★★★.

Parks, Van Dyke

b. 3 January 1941, Mississippi, USA. A former child actor, Parks had appeared in several Hollywood films prior to embarking on a musical career. Having studied classical piano, he joined MGM, but rather than follow this direction, began writing and recording pop songs. One of his early compositions, 'High Coin', was later covered by several disparate acts, including Jackie DeShannon, Bobby Vee, the West Coast Pop Art Experimental Band and the Charlatans, while 'Come To The Sunshine', an early Parks single, was later recorded by Harpers Bizarre, a group he also produced. Although Van Dyke fulfilled a similar role with the Mojo Men, whose cover version of the Buffalo Springfield's 'Sit Down I Think I Love You' was a US hit in 1966, this period is better recalled for his work with Brian Wilson who was infatuated with Parks' intellectual air. The pair collaborated on Wilson's most ambitious compositions - 'Heroes And Villains' and 'Surf's Up' - but the full fruit of their labours, the doomed Smile project, was eventually scrapped when the remainder of Wilson's group, the Beach Boys, objected to the dense, obscure (although quite brilliant) lyricism Parks had brought to their leader's new compositions.

Van Dyke's first solo, Song Cycle, continued the direction this relationship had suggested with a complex array of sounds and ideas abounding with musical puns, Tin Pan Alley themes and exhaustive, elaborate arrangements. Commercial indifference to this ambitious project was such that Warner Brothers Records took out a series of adverts under the banner, 'The once-in-a-lifetime Van Dyke Parks 1 cent sale' offering purchasers the chance to trade a second-hand copy for two new albums, one of which was to be passed on to a 'poor, but open friend'. Undeterred Parks still forged his idiosyncratic path, producing albums for Ry Cooder, Randy Newman, and Arlo Guthrie, as well as pursuing work as a session musician, first unveiled on the Byrds 'Fifth Dimension', with appearances on albums by Tim Buckley, Judy Collins and Little Feat.

Discover America, Van Dyke's second album, showcased his love of Trinidadian music, and blended contemporary compositions with show tunes from an earlier era. Clang Of The Yankee Reaper continued this new-found, relaxed emphasis but Parks then withdrew from active recording and only re-emerged in 1984 with Jump!, a musical interpretation of the Brer Rabbit stories. This challenging performer still refused to be easily categorized and a fifth collection, Tokyo Rose, showed Parks continuing to sail his own course. His most significant move in recent years was to collaborate again with Brian Wilson. Their project Orange Crate Art was a celebration of old American values and although reviews were mostly favourable it failed to sell.

● ALBUMS: Song Cycle (Warners 1968)★★★, Discover America (Warners 1972)★★★, Clang Of The Yankee Reaper (Warners 1975)★★★, Jump! (Warners 1984)★★, Tokyo Rose (Warners 1989)★★★, with Brian Wilson Orange Crate Art (Warners 1995)★★★, Moonlighting: Live At The Ash Grove (Warner Bros 1998)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Idiosyncratic Path: The Best Of ... (Diablo 1994)★★★.

Parkway Records

(see Cameo-Parkway Records)

Parlan, Horace

b. 19 January 1931, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA. Parlan played piano from an early age, his first professional work being in R&B bands during the early and mid-50s. In 1957 he joined Charles Mingus in New York, later playing with Lou Donaldson, Booker Ervin, Eddie 'Lockjaw' Davis, Johnny Griffin, Roland Kirk and others. In the early 70s he settled in Denmark, playing with local and visiting musicians including Dexter Gordon, Archie Shepp and Michal Urbaniak. As a result of contracting polio as a child, Parlan suffered limitations in the use of his right hand; to compensate, he developed a powerful left hand and evolved a distinctive style in which echoes of bop and the blues blend comfortably and to great effect. Although he is always an interesting soloist, it is in the interplay with other musicians that he displays his talents to the full - a fine example is the set of two duo albums - one of blues, one of spirituals - which he recorded with Shepp.

● ALBUMS: Movin' And Groovin' (1960)★★★, Headin' South (1960)★★★, Up And Down (1961)★★★, Happy Frame Of Mind (Blue Note 1963)★★★, Back From The Gig (1963)★★★★, Arrival (Steeplechase 1973)★★, No Blues (Steeplechase 1975)★★★, Blue Parlan (Steeplechase 1975)★★★★, Frank-ly Speaking (1977)★★★, with Archie Shepp Goin' Home (1977)★★★, Hi-Fly (1978)★★★, Musically Yours (Steeplechase 1979)★★★, The Maestro (1979)★★★, with Shepp Trouble In Mind (1980)★★★, Pannonica (Enja 1981)★★★, Glad I Found You (Steeplechase 1984)★★★, with Shepp Reunion (1987)★★, Splashes (1987)★★★, Little Esther (Soul Note 1987)★★★, On The Spur Of The Moment (Blue Note 1998)★★★.

Parliament

This exceptional US vocal quintet was formed in 1955 by George Clinton (b. 22 July 1940, Kannapolis, North Carolina, USA), Raymond Davis (b. 29 March 1940, Sumter, South Carolina, USA), Calvin Simon (b. 22 May 1942, Beckley, West Virginia, USA), Clarence 'Fuzzy' Haskins (b. 8 June 1941, Elkhorn, West Virginia, USA) and Grady Thomas (b. 5 January 1941, Newark, New Jersey, USA). George Clinton's interest in music did not fully emerge until his family moved to the urban setting of Plainfield, New Jersey. Here, he fashioned the Parliaments after the influential doo-wop group Frankie Lymon And The Teenagers. Two singles, 'Poor Willie' and 'Lonely Island', mark this formative era, but it was not until 1967 that Clinton was able to secure a more defined direction with the release of '(I Wanna) Testify'. Recorded in Detroit, the single reached the US Top 20, but this promise was all but lost when Revilot, the label to which the band was signed, went out of business. All existing contracts were then sold to Atlantic, but Clinton preferred to abandon the Parliaments' name altogether in order to be free to sign elsewhere. Clinton took the existing line-up and its backing group to Westbound Records, where the entire collective recorded as Funkadelic. However, the outstanding problem over their erstwhile title was resolved in 1970, and the same musicians were signed to the Invictus label as Parliament. This group unleashed the experimental and eclectic Osmium before securing an R&B hit with the irrepressible 'Breakdown'. For the next three years the 'Parliafunkadelicament Thang' would concentrate on Funkadelic releases, but disagreements with the Westbound hierarchy inspired Parliament's second revival. Signed to the Casablanca label in 1974, the group's first singles, 'Up For The Down Stroke', 'Chocolate City' and 'P. Funk (Wants To Get Funked Up)' were marginally more mainstream than the more radical material Clinton had already issued, but the distinctions became increasingly blurred. Some 40 musicians were now gathered together under the P. Funk banner, including several refugees from the James Brown camp including Bootsy Collins, Fred Wesley and Maceo Parker, while live shows featured elements from both camps. Parliament's success within the R&B chart continued with 'Give Up The Funk (Tear The Roof Off The Sucker)' (1976), and two 1978 bestsellers, 'Flashlight' and 'Aqua Boogie (A Psychoalphadiscobetabioaquadoloop)', where the group's hard-kicking funk was matched by the superlative horn charts and their leader's unorthodox vision. Their last chart entry was in 1980 with 'Agony Of Defeet', after which Clinton decided to shelve the Parliament name again when problems arose following PolyGram's acquisition of the Casablanca catalogue.

● ALBUMS: Osmium (Invictus 1970)★★★, Up For The Down Stroke (Casablanca 1974)★★★★, Chocolate City (Casablanca 1975)★★★, Mothership Connection (Casablanca 1976)★★★★, The Clones Of Doctor Funkenstein (Casablanca

1976)★★★★, Parliament Live - P. Funk Earth Tour (Casablanca 1977)★★★, Funkentelechy Vs The Placebo Syndrome (Casablanca 1977)★★★★, Motor-Booty Affair (Casablanca 1978)★★★★, Gloryhallastoopid (Or Pin The Tale On The Funky) (Casablanca 1979)★★★, Trombipulation (Casablanca 1980)★★★, Dope Dogs (Hot Hands 1995)★★★.
● COMPILATIONS: Parliament's Greatest Hits (Casablanca 1984)★★★★, The Best Of Parliament (Club 1986)★★★, Rhenium (Demon 1990)★★★, Tear The Roof Off 1974-80 (Casablanca 1993)★★★★, Parliament-Funkadelic Live 1976-93 4-CD box set (Sequel 1994)★★★★.

Parlophone Records

The label's roots go back to March 1911 when Carl Gesellschaft Lindstrom (b. 1867, d. 1932) launched the Parlophon (sic) label in Europe. In March 1920 it was taken over by the Transoceanic Trading Co of Holland who formed the Parlophone Co. Ltd in London on 8 August 1923. Taken under UK Columbia's wing in 1925, it subsequently became part of EMI when that organization was formed by the merger of Columbia and several other labels in April 1931. The label started to come into its own during the 50s when it was run by Oscar Preuss and his assistant George Martin, whom he had rescued from the BBC Gramophone Library. Between 1957 and 1960, it had been responsible for material licenced from the US outlet, King. They released largely lightweight dance music and Scottish reels until 1955 when Preuss retired and Martin took over. Looking for a new angle he saw that comedy records were few and far between and began to make recordings of such people as Flanders And Swan, Charlie Drake, the Goons, Peter Sellers and Mike and Bernie Winters. He moved into more contemporary music by releasing American rock 'n' roll records by Mac Curtis, Boyd Bennett, Charlie Gracie and others, as well as putting out home-grown talent like the Vipers, Jim Dale, Rory Blackwell and Vince Eager. As the 60s arrived, so did the bigger selling artists such as Adam Faith, Mike Sarne, Shane Fenton and the Temperance 7, but it was in 1962 that George Martin ensured his place in pop history. Although not over impressed with the Beatles at first, he did think them a worthwhile signing! The Beatles, Cilla Black, Billy J. Kramer, Cliff Bennett, the Roulettes, the Hollies and Adam Faith were all Parlophone recording acts that dominated the charts in the 60s. There were also less well-known names such as Byron Lee And The Dragonaires (Lee was a top Jamaican producer), Kippington Lodge (including Nick Lowe), Davy Jones (later known as David Bowie), the Herd (featuring Peter Frampton) and a very young Marc Bolan. Aside from the pop music Parlophone continued to release comedy material - most notably spin-offs from television satire programmes like That Was The Week That Was. They even continued with the odd Scottish reel: Jimmy Shand would come down to London once a year, record several dozen tunes, return home and watch while they were slowly released as singles over a 12-month period. George Martin left in 1965 to form his own independent production company, AIR, and the Beatles set up their own Apple label - though their records were still released in Parlophone's sequence but with the Apple logo. Minor success's included Simon Dupree And The Big Sound, Locomotive and Pete Brown And His Battered Ornaments. By the early 70s only the solo Beatles releases were coming out in the Parlophone series. In 1979, however, the label underwent a significant revival and in 1982 on the anniversary of the release of 'Love Me Do' they issued '101 Damnations' by Beatles soundalikes Scarlet Party. Since then the label has been the home for releases by Dexy's Midnight Runners, the Pet Shop Boys, Crowded House, Tina Turner, EMF and, boosting the label's credibility, signing UK 'indie' stars the Sundays in the early part of 1992 and reaping extraordinary success with Blur, and Supergrass. Much of the company's success in recent years has been due to their former marketing director Tony Wadsworth, who was promoted to managing director in 1993. Parlophone are currently one of the UK's most aware and credible record labels, on a par with Creation Records for imaginative and hip signings. In addition to looking after the Food label, they are presently the home for Octopus, Electronic, Jesus Lizard, Strangelove and Mansun. In 1998 they branched out into contemporary R&B with the Rhythm Series label. Wadsworth moved out and upwards in 1998, it will be interesting to watch the label's progress without him at the helm.

Parnell, Jack

b. 6 August 1923, London, England. One of the best-known and most popular of post-World War II British jazzmen, Parnell was at his most prominent during a long stint with Ted Heath's big band. Before then, however, he had already made a mark on the UK jazz scene. While still on military service he became a member of Buddy Featherstonehaugh's Radio Rhythm Club Sextet, playing alongside Vic Lewis and other jazz-minded servicemen. Between 1944 and 1946 Parnell also recorded with Lewis, and the Lewis-Parnell Jazzmen's version of 'Ugly Child' sold extremely well (50,000 78 rpm discs would probably have made it a hit had there been such a thing as a hit parade in those days). The Lewis-Parnell band played in clubs and also made a number of theatrical appearances. Following a minor disagreement over billing, Lewis took over sole leadership of the band while Parnell joined Heath, where he became one of the band's most popular figures. With the band he also sang, displaying an engaging voice and an attractive stage personality. Leaving Heath after seven years, Parnell became musical director of ATV, directing the pit band for the popular Sunday Night At The London Palladium, throughout the 60s. Among his later television credits, he was musical director for The Muppet Show. In the late 70s, after two decades in television, Parnell returned to the UK jazz scene. He has continued to play in clubs and at festivals, sometimes backing visiting American jazzmen, at other times working with leading British stars. During his early days with the Heath band Parnell had an image of gum-chewing showman drummer, an image which in fact concealed a skilful, swinging and often underrated artist. His later work, with the need for an image no longer necessary, reveals his subtle and propulsive playing. In 1994, Parnell took over as leader of the newly-formed London Big Band, 'the largest band in Britain', consisting of the 'cream' of the UK music business.

● ALBUMS: Jack Parnell Quartet (Decca 1952)★★★★, Trip To Mars (Parlophone 1958)★★★★, Big Band Show (1976)★★★★, Big Band Stereo Spectacular (1981)★★★, Plays Music Of The Giants (1975)★★★, The Portrait Of Charlie Gilbraith (1977)★★★, Braziliana (1977)★★★, 50 Big Band Favourites (1984)★★★.

Parnell, Lee Roy

b. 21 December 1956, Abilene, Texas, USA. Bob Wills was a close family friend and Parnell sang on stage with him when he was only six years old, an incident he mentions in his 1993 song 'Country Down To My Soul'. Growing up in a household that loved western swing, Parnell found that his own tastes included blues and rock 'n' roll. He formed his own band when he was aged 19 and spent 10 years playing Texas honky tonks. In 1987 he moved with his family to Nashville and built up a reputation at the Bluebird Cafe. His first album was produced by R&B producer Barry Beckett and mixed soul with country. It did reasonably well but his career took off when he recorded Love Without Mercy with a small rhythm group. It included his US country hits 'What Kind Of Fool Do You Think I Am' and 'The Rock' ('I am your rock, but I'm rolling away') as well as a duet with Delbert McClinton, 'Road Scholar', a pun in reference to Kris Kristofferson being a Rhodes scholar. Parnell's superb guitar-playing is highlighted on 'Workin' Man Blues' which he cut with Steve Wariner and Diamond Rio; he wanted to call their group, Merle Jam, but was persuaded to settle for the less witty Jed Zepplin. Parnell plays electric slide guitar on Mary Chapin Carpenters's 'Shut Up And Kiss Me' and she joined him for the title track of We All Get Lucky Sometimes. Parnell is the only new country artist to be praised by Kinky Friedman; possibly he cut his teeth in the Kinkster's band. Every Night's A Saturday Night was a consistent album that looked set to maintain Parnell's recent popularity.

● ALBUMS: Lee Roy Parnell (Arista 1990)★★, Love Without Mercy (Arista 1992)★★★, On The Road (Arista 1993)★★★, We All Get Lucky Sometimes (Career 1995)★★★★, Every Night's A Saturday Night (Career 1997)★★★.

Parnes, Larry

b. Laurence Maurice Parnes, 1930, Willesden, London, England, d. 4 August 1989, London, England. Parnes was the most famous British pop manager and impresario of the 50s, and one of the greatest of all time. After briefly working in the family clothing business, he took over a bar in London's West End called La Caverne. The establishment was frequented by many theatrical agents and producers and, before long, Parnes was inveigled into investing in a play entitled Women Of The Streets. One night at a coffee bar he met publicist John Kennedy, who was then overseeing the affairs of singer Tommy Hicks. After seeing the boy perform at Lionel Bart's suggestion Parnes was impressed and went into partnership with Kennedy. Hicks was rechristened Tommy Steele and became Britain's first rock 'n' roll celebrity. He later emerged as an all-round entertainer and star of several musicals. Parnes specialized in discovering young boys, who would be systematically groomed, launched on the rock 'n' roll circuit, and finally assimilated into traditional showbusiness areas. The technique was habitual. Parnes played the part of the svengali, carefully renaming his acts with some exotically powerful surname that suggested power, virility or glamour. His second discovery proved another winner. Reg Smith was quickly snapped up by the starmaker, rechristened Marty Wilde and soon enjoyed a string of UK hits, before 'retiring' from rock 'n' roll at the close of the 50s.

By this time, Parnes had a network of contacts, including A&R managers like Hugh Mendl, Dick Rowe and Jack Baverstock, who would always take notice of a Parnes act. The bombastic television producer Jack Good also realized that supporting Parnes ensured a steady flow of teenage talent. Finally, there were the songwriters like Lionel Bart, who could provide original material, although cover versions of US hits were always popular. Parnes' third great discovery of the 50s was Billy Fury, one of the most important figures to emerge from British rock 'n' roll. Significantly, Parnes remained with the star for a considerable time and was still handling his business affairs during the late 60s. The irrepressible Joe Brown was another major find for Parnes, although their association was often stormy. Brown was an exceptional guitarist and was frequently used to back other Parnes acts. For every star he unearthed, however, there were a series of lesser talents or unlucky singers who failed to find chart success. Among the famous Parnes 'stable of stars' were Dickie Pride, Duffy Power, Johnny Gentle, Sally Kelly, Terry Dene, Nelson Keene and Peter Wynne. Larry was also briefly associated with Georgie Fame and the Tornados. Beyond his management interests, Parnes was a great provider of package shows with grandiloquent titles such as 'The Big New Rock 'n' Roll Trad Show' and the 'Star Spangled Nights'. Parnes' influence effectively ended during the early to mid-60s when new managers and entrepreneurs such as Brian Epstein and Andrew Oldham took centre stage. Ironically, Parnes had two chances to sign the Beatles but passed up the opportunity. Like his stars, he seemed intent on abdicating his position in rock 'n' roll and increasingly moved into more conservative areas of British showbusiness and theatre. During the 60s, he was involved in such musicals as Charlie Girl and Chicago. During the 70s, he returned to management in a different sphere, administering the business affairs of ice-skater John Currie. He subsequently fell ill with meningitis and effectively retired. His public image remained contradictory and subject to caricature. As the prototype British pop svengali, he was used as the inspiration for the vapid, camp starmaker in the movie Absolute Beginners. Ever self-protective and litigious, his wrath descended upon the BBC, among others, when he won a substantial out-of-court settlement for an alleged libel by Paul McCartney on a most unlikely programme, Desert Island Discs.

● FURTHER READING: Starmakers & Svengalis: The History Of British Pop Management, Johnny Rogan.

Parr, John

b. 18 November 1954. This vocalist, guitarist, composer and producer specializes in highly melodic AOR. Though British, his success had been drawn largely from the USA, where his recordings for Atlantic Records have been compared to Rick Springfield and Eddie Money. Parr composed the themes for the movies American Anthem and St. Elmo's Fire, the second of which made the UK Top 10 singles chart in 1985. The follow-up, 'Naughty Naughty', achieved a paltry number 58. He also duetted with Meat Loaf on 'Rock 'N' Roll Mercenaries', but this failed to embellish either artist's profile, stopping just short of the Top 30. Producing two solo albums, his self-titled debut in 1985 and Running The Endless Mile in 1986, both fared poorly with the critics. His finest moment remains the energetic 'St. Elmo's Fire (Man In Motion)'.

● ALBUMS: John Parr (Atlantic 1985)★★, Running The Endless Mile (Atlantic 1987)★.

Parrish, Avery

b. 24 January 1917, Birmingham, Alabama, USA, d. 10 December 1959. Parrish began playing piano as a child and while attending college became a member of the 'Bama State Collegians band. In 1934 the band, under the leadership of Erskine Hawkins, visited New York and became professional; Parrish stayed on, recording with them his own composition, 'After Hours'. He remained with the band until 1941, continuing to play piano in Los Angeles. In 1942 he was severely injured in a fight and never played again. John Chilton records that his death, in New York, was in 'mysterious circumstances'. Although remembered largely for his famous composition, long a jazz standard, Parrish's own playing was of a very high order and the manner in which his career ended was clearly a tragedy for jazz.

● COMPILATIONS: The Chronological Erskine Hawkins (Classics 1940)★★★.

Parrot Records

The legendary Chicago disc jockey Al Benson founded this label in 1953, and its subsidiary imprint Blue Lake in 1954. The company became famous for its blues and doo-wop recordings. Among the company's most notable blues artists were John Brim ('Tough Times'), J.B. Lenoir ('Eisenhower Blues'), Sunnyland Slim ('Goin' Back To Memphis') and Little Willie Foster ('Falling Rain Blues'), and famed bluesman Albert King made his first recordings for Parrot. The blues recorded by Parrot rank as some of the best Chicago-style bar-band blues. The company's most notable vocal group recordings included those by the Flamingos ('Dream Of A Lifetime' and 'Ko Ko Mo'), Five Chances ('All I Want') and Orchids ('You Said You Loved Me' and 'Newly Wed'). Most of Benson's early group recordings featured a deep R&B sound, but by 1955 he was beginning to create genuine rock 'n' roll with the likes of the Flamingos. In 1956 Benson sold the label to a lawyer who worked for Chess Records, John Burton, who basically dissolved the company.

● COMPILATIONS: Golden Era Of Doo-Wops: Parrot Records (Relic 1993)★★★, Golden Era Of Doo-Wops: Parrot Records, Pt. 2 (Relic 1994)★★★, Cool Playing Blues: Chicago Style (Relic 1989)★★, Hand Me Down Blues: Chicago Style (Relic 1989)★★★.

Parsons, Alan

b. 20 December 1949. A staff engineer at EMI's recording studios, Parsons first attracted attention for his work on the final Beatles' album, Abbey Road. Such skills were then employed on several of Wings' early releases, but the artist's reputation was established in the wake of his contributions to Pink Floyd's multi-million seller, Dark Side Of The Moon, and his productions for Pilot, Cockney Rebel and Al Stewart. Inspired by the 'concept' approach beloved by the latter act, Parsons forged a partnership with songwriter Eric Woolfson and created the Alan Parsons Project. The duo's debut Tales Of Mystery And Imagination, in which they adapted the work of Edgar Allen Poe, set the pattern for future releases whereby successive creations examined specific themes, including science fiction (I Robot) and mysticism (Pyramid). By calling on a circle of talented sessionmen and guest performers, including Arthur Brown, Gary Brooker, Graham Dye (ex-Scarlet Party) and Colin Blunstone, Parsons and Woolfson created a crafted, if rather sterile, body of work. However, despite enjoying a US Top 3 single in 1982 with 'Eye In The Sky', the Project's subsequent recordings have failed to repeat the commercial success of those early releases. He became the head of EMI studio interests in June 1997.

● ALBUMS: Tales Of Mystery And Imagination (Charisma 1975)★★★, I Robot (Arista 1977)★★★, Pyramid (Arista 1978)★★, Eve (Arista 1979)★★★, The Turn Of A Friendly Card (Arista 1980)★★★, Eye In The Sky (Arista 1982)★★★, Ammonia Avenue (Arista 1984)★★★, Vulture Culture (Arista 1985)★★, Stereotomy (Arista 1985)★★, Gaudi (Arista 1987)★★, Try Anything Once (Arista 1993)★★, On Air (Tot 1997)★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Best Of The Alan Parsons Project (Arista 1983)★★★, Limelight - The Best Of The Alan Parsons

Project Volume 2 (Arista 1988)★★, Instrumental Works (Arista 1988)★★★, The Definitive Collection (Arista 1997)★★★.

Parsons, Bill

b. 8 September 1934, Crossville, Tennessee, USA. Parsons was a friend of country singer Bobby Bare. Prior to entering the US Army, Bare agreed to help Parsons, who was just leaving the service, make a record. Due to a mix-up at Fraternity Records, for which Bare recorded, the 1959 single titled 'The All American Boy', co-written by Parsons and Bare (using the name Orville Lunsford), was credited to Parsons, although it was Bare singing on the record. It rose to number 2 in the US pop charts as the real Bill Parsons stood on the sidelines watching. As Bare had not yet gained any attention within country music, the deception was continued for one other single, which did not chart. Bare then reverted to his true name and, beginning in 1962, launched a very successful country career. As for the real Bill Parsons, he retired from the music business after recording two unsuccessful singles for Starday Records in 1960.

Parsons, Gene

b. Eugene Victor Parsons, 4 September 1944, Los Angeles, California, USA. Parsons began his musical career playing in the Castaways and subsequently formed a duo with Gib Guilbeau. This was followed by the formation of country group Nashville West, in which Parsons played alongside the celebrated guitarist Clarence White. When the latter was inducted into the Byrds in 1968, Parsons was soon enrolled as their drummer. He remained with them until 1972, appearing on the albums Dr Byrds & Mr Hyde, The Ballad Of Easy Rider, (Untitled), Byrdmaniax and Farther Along. Parson's drumming skills were notable on the extended arrangement of 'Eight Miles High' that the Byrds included in their live sets and on the entire side of (Untitled). Parsons was also a guitarist, banjoist and talented songwriter. Arguably his finest moment as a composer occurred on the excellent 'Gunga Din' from The Ballad Of Easy Rider. His other compositions included 'Yesterday's Train' and, in conjunction with Clarence White, the instrumentals 'Green Apple Quick Step' and 'Bristol Steam Convention Blues'. Parsons and White were also responsible for inventing the 'String Bender', an instrument that duplicated the sound of a steel guitar. Following his dismissal from the Byrds, Parsons signed to Warner Brothers and released the impressive Kindling. Parsons subsequently joined a latter-day version of the Flying Burrito Brothers for two minor albums, Flying Again and Airborne. His second solo album, Melodies, included a moving tribute to his former partner, the late Clarence White. He also appeared in various offshoot-Byrds reunion concerts, notably with Michael Clarke, before continuing his recording career with Birds Of A Feather, recorded with his wife Meridian Green.

● ALBUMS: Kindling (Warners 1973)★★★★, Melodies (Sierra 1979)★★, as Parsons Green Birds Of A Feather (Sierra 1987)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Kindling Collection (Sierra 1995)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Timeless Flight: The Definitive Biography Of The Byrds, Johnny Rogan.

Parsons, Gordon

b. 24 December 1926, Paddington suburb, Sydney, New South Wales, Australia, d. 17 August 1990. At the age of three the family relocated into the bush to Cooks Creek, where he grew up listening to the radio to break the monotony of the lonely area. He owned his first guitar at the age of 11 and, initially influenced by recordings he heard of Jimmie Rodgers, he was soon known around the area, especially at local dances, for his singing, yodelling and guitar playing. School held little attraction and he left home at 14, when he was offered a job cutting sleepers for the railroad. His father's words to the employer's invitation are reputed to have been: 'You might as well take the mongrel - he's no use here' (he in fact became a skilled axeman, later winning several awards for his abilities). Gaining further influence from recordings of Wilf Carter and fellow Australians Tex Morton and Buddy Williams, he established a reputation as an entertainer. An appearance on a talent show led to him recording six sides for Regal-Zonophone in May 1946. These included 'Where The Bellinger River Flows' and 'The Passing of Cobber Jack'. He toured with Goldwyn Bros Circus, where he met and married Zelda Ashton of the Ashton Circus family (they eventually parted but their daughter, Gail, was born in 1949). He began to tour with various artists, including Slim Dusty and Tex Morton, but he was unable to maintain regular work for long periods. He loved the quiet life, and later saying, 'I never could handle anything long and drawn out', he disappeared from the music scene into the bush to write more songs - sometimes he worked on farms and on others he just 'went fishing'. During the 50s, he made further recordings but he was never a prolific recording artist, in fact, his total recorded output seemingly only amounted to 21 singles and seven albums. Undoubtedly, the best-known song associated with him is 'The Pub With No Beer', which in 1957, became an international hit for his great friend Slim Dusty. There has been some contention over the years regarding the actual authorship of the song. Parsons had once been given some lines of verse and from them, he had written the song. It was later found that a poem by Dan Sheahan called 'A Pub Without Beer', which contained many similarities in the wording, had been printed in a 1944 newspaper. Dusty, who later became Sheahan's friend and recorded several of his songs, has always maintained that Parsons had believed the lines that he had been given were from some anonymous work. Noted Australian writer Eric Watson summed up the controversy by saying that, in his opinion, Sheahan's was the better poem, while Parsons' was the better song. In any event, those who knew of Parsons' fondness for beer later jokingly said that he not only wrote the song, he actually caused it. The song is in fact credited with being Australia's only gold 78 although, surprisingly, it is not actually listed as a million-seller in Murrells' The Book Of Golden Discs. During the 60s, he made further recordings, including his own version of 'The Pub' but his reluctance to maintain routine appearances disappointed his fans. He gradually withdrew from performing except for the occasional show and at one time worked as a warden of a wildlife sanctuary. He married for the third time in 1978 and relocated to Sydney, although he kept a caravan at a fishing place near Gosford, which offered him immediate escape from the humdrum of city life. In the 80s, he released three albums on the Selection label. Over the years, he has won several major awards for his contributions to Australian country music, including having his effigy in the wax museum at Tamworth. In 1982, he received the ultimate honour when he became only the seventh artist to be elected to the Country Music Roll Of Renown (Australia's equivalent to Nashville's Country Music Hall Of Fame). His songs have ranged from the comedy of 'The Pub', to the descriptive ballad 'Ellenborough Falls' and the sadness of 'The Passing Of Cobber Jack'. Known affectionately as the Old GP or just plain Ned, he earned a reputation as a pioneer of Australian country music. Many would say that as a fine singer-songwriter and yodeller, he could have become as well known as any of his contemporaries, had he so wished. When asked why he did not make records he usually replied, 'I dunno, Mate. I'd just as soon poke around the bush and split a few posts' or 'I'd rather be fishing than anything else'.

● ALBUMS: Rhythm Of The Range (EMI 70s)★★★, Gordon Parsons (Hadley 1976)★★★, The Old G.P. (Selection 1980)★★★, Just Passin' Through (Selection 80s)★★★, Throw In A Line (Selection 80s)★★★.

Parsons, Gram

b. Cecil Ingram Connor, 5 November 1946, Winter Haven, Florida, USA, d. 19 September 1973, Joshua Tree, California, USA. Parsons' brief but influential career began in high school as a member of the Pacers. This rock 'n' roll act later gave way to the Legends which, at various points, featured country singer Jim Stafford as well as Kent Lavoie, later known as Lobo. By 1963 Parsons had joined the Shilos, a popular campus attraction modelled on clean-cut folk attraction the Journeymen. The quartet - Parsons, George Wrigley, Paul Surratt and Joe Kelly - later moved to New York's Greenwich Village, but Parsons left the line-up in 1965 upon enrolling at Harvard College. His studies ended almost immediately and, inspired by the concurrent folk rock boom, founded the International Submarine Band with John Nuese (guitar), Ian Dunlop (bass) and Mickey Gauvin (drums). Two excellent singles followed, but having relocated to Los Angeles, Parsons' vision of a contemporary country music found little favour amid the prevalent psychedelic trend. The group was nonetheless signed by producer Lee Hazelwood, but with Dunlop and Gauvin now absent from the line-up, Bob Buchanan (guitar) and Jon Corneal (drums) joined Parsons and Nuese for Safe At Home. This excellent set is now rightly viewed as a landmark in the development of country rock, blending standards with several excellent Parsons originals, notably 'Luxury Liner'. However, by the time of its release (April 1968), the quartet had not only folded, but Gram had accepted an offer to join the Byrds.

His induction resulted in Sweetheart Of The Rodeo, on which the newcomer determined the group's musical direction. This synthesis of country and traditional styles followed the mould of Safe At Home, but was buoyed by the act's excellent harmony work. Although Parsons' role as vocalist was later diminished by Hazelwood's court injunction - the producer claimed it breached their early contract - his influence was undeniable, as exemplified on the stellar 'Hickory Wind'. However, within months Parsons had left the Byrds in protest over a South African tour and instead spent several months within the Rolling Stones' circle. The following year he formed the Flying Burrito Brothers with another ex-Byrd, Chris Hillman, 'Sneaky' Pete Kleinow (pedal steel guitar) and bassist Chris Ethridge (bass). The Gilded Palace Of Sin drew inspiration from southern soul and urban country music and included one of Parsons' most poignant compositions, 'Hot Burrito #1'. Burrito Deluxe failed to scale the same heights as internal problems undermined the unit's potential. Parsons' growing drug dependency exacerbated this estrangement and he was fired from the group in April 1970. Initial solo recordings with producer Terry Melcher were inconclusive, but in 1972 Parsons was introduced to singer Emmylou Harris and together they completed G.P. with the assistance of Elvis Presley's regular back-up band. An attendant tour leading the Fallen Angels - Jock Bartley (guitar), Neil Flanz (pedal steel), Kyle Tullis (bass) and N.D. Smart II (drums) - followed, but Parsons' appetite for self-destruction remained intact. Parsons lived the life of a true 'honky tonk hero' with all the excesses of Hank Williams, even down to his immaculate, embroidered, Nudie tailored suits. Sessions for a second album blended established favourites with original songs, many of which had been written years beforehand. Despite its piecemeal content, the resultant set, Grievous Angel, was a triumph, in which plaintive duets ('Love Hurts', 'Hearts On Fire') underscored the quality of the Parsons/Harris partnership, while 'Brass Buttons' and 'In My Hour Of Darkness' revealed a gift for touching lyricism. Parsons' death in 1973 as a result of 'drug toxicity' emphasized its air of poignancy, and the mysterious theft of his body after the funeral, whereupon his road manager, Philip Kaufman, cremated the body in the desert, carrying out Gram's wishes, added to the singer's legend. Although his records were not a commercial success during his lifetime, Parsons' influence on a generation of performers, from the Eagles to Elvis Costello, is a fitting testament to his talent. Emmylou Harris adopted his mantle with a series of superior country rock releases, while an excellent concept album, Ballad Of Sally Rose (1985), undoubtedly drew on her brief relationship with this star-struck singer. Parsons' catalogue is painfully small compared with his enormous importance in contemporary country rock, and his work is destined to stand alongside that of his hero Hank Williams.

● ALBUMS: G.P. (Reprise 1972)★★★★, Grievous Angel (Reprise 1973)★★★★, Sleepless Nights (A&M 1976)★★★, Gram Parsons And The Fallen Angels - Live 1973 (Sierra 1981)★★, Cosmic American Music 1972 demos (Sundown 1995)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Gram Parsons (Warners 1982)★★★, The Early Years 1963-1965 (Sierra 1984)★★★, Warm Evenings, Pale Mornings, Bottled Blues (Raven 1992)★★★.

● FURTHER READING: Gram Parsons: A Music Biography, Sid Griffin (ed.). Hickory Wind: The Life And Times Of Gram Parsons, Ben Fong-Torres.

Pärt, Arvo

b. Tallinn, Estonia. A renowned but reclusive avant garde composer, Arvo Pärt initially followed his native '12-tone' tradition before expanding his musical vocabulary to encompass jazz and ambient as well as classical music. A good example is his early composition 'Für Alina', which utilised a single piano chord as an experiment in stark minimalism. A former radio engineer and film composer, his work found a champion in Manfred Eicher, founder and director of ECM Records, who has subsequently released a number of Pärt's albums. The first of these, Tabula Rosa, drew comparisons to John Cage, not least in its use of the 'prepared' piano. Other records have pursued specific themes. Passio (1988) is noteworthy in this respect, being a setting for episodes drawn from the New Testament. As a committed member of the Russian Orthodox Church, Pärt set out his intention with such music - to imitate the church's Easter services where a long, melancholic atmosphere is produced before the eventual salvation/epiphany. Cryptic and enchanting, despite the monotony of many of his passages, Pärt's music provided a vital bridge between classical music and what has been termed 'mystic minimalism', typified by the growth of Gregorian chants and medieval structures in the 90s.

● ALBUMS: Tabula Rasa (ECM 1984)★★★★, Arbos (ECM 1987)★★★, Passio (ECM 1988)★★★★, Symphonies 1-3, Pro Et Contra (BIS 1989)★★★, Miserere (ECM 1991)★★★, Trivium (ECM 1992),★★★ Collage (Chandos 1993)★★★, Te Deum (ECM 1993)★★, Arvo Pärt (EMI 1994)★★★, Fratres (EMI 1995)★★★, Litany (ECM 1996)★★★, Kanon Pokajanen (ECM 1998)★★★.

Partch, Harry

b. 24 June 1901, Oakland, California, USA, d. 3 September 1974, San Diego, California, USA. This composer's work was called 'the most original and powerful contribution to dramatic music on this continent'. He began composing when he was 14, and 15 years later burnt all that he had written, rejecting the conventional, 'restricting', 12-note scale, for his 43 tones to the octave scale. He was a hobo for several years during the Depression, and from 1930-47 played on just one instrument, his 'adapted viola', which he used to accompany himself singing Biblical passages, and the hitch-hikers inscriptions he included in his hobo epic The Wayward (1943). These consisted of Barstow, The Letter, San Francisco and US Highball, made up from names of railroad towns, newsboy cries and other effects, which he recited and sung, accompanied by guitar riffs. Later, he designed and built around 30 of his own instruments, such as the Zymo-Xyl, the Gourd Tree, the Spoils of War, the Mazda Marimba, Cloud-Chamber Bowls and the Cone Gong. These were made of materials such as hubcaps, kettle tops, liquor bottles, artillery shell casings, and two nose cone casings salvaged from a Douglas bomber aircraft. Although his admirers included jazz musicians Gerry Mulligan, Chet Baker, Bob Brookmeyer and Gil Evans, performances of Partch's works such as The Bewitched (1957), 'an enormous ritualistic music drama', were limited by the need to have specially trained musicians rehearsing for at least six months. Some of his compositions were distributed privately on his Gate 5 Records series, and Madeline Tourtelot made five films which featured his music. However, it was not until the last 10 years of his life that his work was made commercially available. In 1973 a filmed portrait entitled The Dreamer That Remains was released. A year later he died at his home in California. His recorded albums include; The Music Of Harry Partch, And On The Seventh Day Petals Fell In Petaluma, The World Of Harry Partch and Delusion Of The Fury.

● FURTHER READING: The Genesis Of A Music, Harry Partch.

Partners In Crime

This short-lived UK 'supergroup' was put together by ex-Status Quo drummer John Coghlan. Enlisting the services of Noel McCalla (vocals, ex-Moon), Mark de Vanchque (keyboards, ex-Wildfire), Ray Major (guitar, ex-Mott) and Mac Mcaffrey (bass), they specialized in Americanized melodic rock. Debuting with Organised Crime in 1985, it was obvious that this set of seasoned musicians gelled together well. Produced by John Eden (Status Quo) and James Guthrie (Pink Floyd, Queensrÿche) it was a strong album in many respects, yet failed to stand out from the numerous other acts offering similar material. The band sundered soon after the album was released.

● ALBUMS: Organised Crime (Epic 1985)★★.

Parton, David

This singer/songwriter and producer was based in Stoke, England. Parton was the mainstay of the group Strange Fox, who were taken under the wing of Tony

Hatch in the early 70s. Parton discovered the group Sweet Sensation and together with Hatch wrote and produced their hits, including the 1974 UK number 1 'Sad Sweet Dreamer'. Since he had a voice similar to Stevie Wonder, he was the ideal choice to cover Wonder's 'Isn't She Lovely', when Stevie decided he did not want to release his version on a single. Parton's version on Pye Records shot into the UK Top 10 in 1977 but it was to be his sole hit as an singer. He continues to work in production and songwriting in Stoke.

Parton, Dolly

b. 19 January 1946, Locust Ridge, Tennessee, USA. Dolly Rebecca Parton's poor farming parents paid the doctor in cornmeal for attending the birth of the fourth of their 12 offspring. After her appearances as a singing guitarist on local radio as a child, including the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Parton left school in 1964. Her recorded output had included a raucous rockabilly song called 'Puppy Love' for a small label as early as 1958, but a signing to Monument in 1966 - the time of her marriage to the reclusive Carl Dean - yielded a C&W hit with 'Dumb Blonde', as well as enlistment in the prestigious Porter Wagoner Show as its stetsoned leader's voluptuous female foil in duets and comedy sketches. While this post adulterated her more serious artistic worth, she notched up further country smashes, among them 'Joshua', the autobiographical 'Coat Of Many Colours' and, with Wagoner, 'Last Thing On My Mind' (the Tom Paxton folk standard), 'Better Move It On Home' and 1974's 'Please Don't Stop Loving Me'. On the crest of another solo hit with 'Jolene' on RCA that same year, she resigned from the show to strike out on her own - though she continued to record periodically with Wagoner. Encompassing a generous portion of her own compositions, her post-1974 repertoire was less overtly country, even later embracing a lucrative stab at disco in 1979's 'Baby I'm Burning' and non-originals ranging from 'House Of The Rising Sun' to Jackie Wilson's 'Higher And Higher'. 'Jolene' became a 'sleeper' UK Top 10 entry in 1976 and she continued her run in the US country chart with singles such as 'Bargain Store' (banned from some radio stations for 'suggestive' lyrics), 'All I Can Do' and 'Light Of A Clear Blue Morning' (1977). That same year, 'Here You Come Again' crossed into the US pop Hot 100, and her siblings basked in reflected glory - particularly Randy, who played bass in her backing band before landing an RCA contract himself, and Stella Parton, who had already harried the country list with 1975's 'Ode To Olivia' and 'I Want To Hold You With My Dreams Tonight'. Their famous sister next ventured into film acting, starring with Lily Tomlin and Jane Fonda in 1981's 9 To 5 (for which she provided the title theme), and with Burt Reynolds in the musical Best Little Whorehouse In Texas. Less impressive were Rhinestone and 1990's Steel Magnolias. She also hosted a 1987 television variety series which lost a ratings war. Nevertheless, her success as a recording artist, songwriter and big-breasted 'personality' remained unstoppable. As well as ploughing back royalties for 70s cover versions of Parton numbers by Emmylou Harris, Linda Ronstadt and Maria Muldaur into her Dollywood entertainment complex, she teamed up with Kenny Rogers in 1983 to reach the number 1 position in the USA and Top 10 in the UK with a Bee Gees composition, 'Islands In The Stream'. With Rogers too, she managed another US country number 1 two years later with 'Real Love'. Although other 80s singles such as 'I Will Always Love You' and 'Tennessee Homesick Blues' were not major chart hits, they became as well-known as many that did. Trio with Ronstadt and Harris won a Grammy for best country album in 1987. Her CBS debut, Rainbow, represented her deepest plunge into mainstream pop - though 1989's White Limozeen (produced by Ricky Skaggs) retained the loyalty of her multinational grassroots following. Her celebration of international womanhood, 'Eagle When She Flies', confirmed her return to the country market in 1991. In 1992, Whitney Houston had the biggest-selling single of the year in the UK with Parton's composition 'I Will Always Love You', which she sang in the film The Bodyguard. Her excellent 1995 album reprised the latter song as a duet with Vince Gill. Treasures paid tribute to singer-songwriters of the 60s and 70s, including songs by Cat Stevens and Neil Young alongside the expected country material.

● ALBUMS: Hello, I'm Dolly (Monument 1967)★★, with Porter Wagoner Just Between You And Me (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, with George Jones Dolly Parton And George Jones (Starday 1968)★★, Just Because I'm A Woman (RCA 1968)★★★, with Wagoner Just The Two Of Us (RCA Victor 1968)★★★, with Wagoner Always, Always (RCA Victor 1969)★★★, My Blue Ridge Mountain Boy (RCA 1969)★★★, with Wagoner Porter Wayne And Dolly Rebecca (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, A Real Live Dolly (RCA 1970)★★★, with Wagoner Once More (RCA Victor 1970)★★★, with Wagoner Two Of A Kind (RCA Victor 1971)★★★, Coat Of Many Colours (RCA 1971)★★★★, with Wagoner The Right Combination (RCA Victor 1972)★★★, with Wagoner Together Always (RCA Victor 1972)★★★, with Wagoner Love And Music (RCA Victor 1973)★★★, with Wagoner We Found It (RCA Victor 1973)★★★, My Tennessee Mountain Home (RCA 1973)★★★★, with Wagoner Porter 'N' Dolly (RCA 1974)★★★, Love Is Like A Butterfly (RCA 1974)★★★★, Jolene (RCA 1974)★★★★, with Wagoner Say Forever You'll Be Mine (RCA 1975)★★★, The Bargain Store (RCA 1975)★★★★, Dolly (RCA 1976)★★★, All I Can Do (RCA 1976)★★★, New Harvest ... First Gathering (RCA 1977)★★★★, Here You Come Again (RCA 1977)★★, Heartbreaker (RCA 1978)★★, Dolly Parton And Friends At Goldband (1979)★★, Great Balls Of Fire (RCA 1979)★★, with Wagoner Porter Wagoner & Dolly Parton (RCA 1980)★★★★, Dolly Dolly Dolly (RCA 1980)★★, 9 To 5 And Odd Jobs (RCA 1980)★★★, Heartbreak Express (RCA 1982)★★, The Best Little Whorehouse In Texas film soundtrack (MCA 1982)★★, with Kris Kristofferson, Brenda Lee, Willie Nelson The Winning Hand (Monument 1983)★★★, Burlap And Satin (RCA 1983)★★, The Great Pretender (RCA 1984)★★, Rhinestone film soundtrack (RCA 1984)★★, with Kenny Rogers Once Upon A Christmas (RCA 1984)★★★, Real Love (RCA 1985)★★★, with Linda Ronstadt, Emmylou Harris Trio (Warners 1987)★★★, Rainbow (Columbia 1987)★★, White Limozeen (Columbia 1989)★★★, Eagle When She Flies (Columbia 1991)★★★, Straight Talk film soundtrack (Hollywood 1992,)★★, Slow Dancing With The Moon (Columbia 1993)★★★, with Wagoner Sweet Harmony (1993)★★, with Tammy Wynette, Loretta Lynn Honky Tonk Angels (Columbia 1993)★★★★, Heartsongs - Live From Home (Columbia 1994)★★★, Something Special (Columbia 1995)★★★, Treasures (Rising Tide 1996)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Wagoner The Best Of Porter Wagoner And Dolly Parton (RCA Victor 1971)★★★★, The Best Of Dolly Parton (RCA 1973)★★★★, The Best Of Dolly Parton Volume 2 (RCA 1975)★★★★, with Wagoner Hits Of Dolly Parton And Porter Wagoner (RCA 1977)★★★★, The Dolly Parton Collection (Pickwick 1979)★★★, The Very Best Of Dolly Parton (RCA 1981)★★★★, The Dolly Parton Collection (Monument 1982)★★★, Greatest Hits (RCA 1982)★★, Collector's Series (RCA 1985)★★★, The World Of Dolly Parton, Volume 1 (Monument 1988)★★★, The World Of Dolly Parton, Volume 2 (Monument 1988)★★★, Greatest Hits Volume 2 (RCA 1989)★★, Anthology (Connoisseur 1991)★★★, The RCA Years 1967-1986 2-CD set (RCA 1993)★★★★, The Essential Dolly Parton - Volume One (RCA 1995)★★★, The Greatest Hits (Telstar 1995)★★★, with Wagoner The Essential Porter And Dolly (RCA 1996)★★★★, I Will Always Love You And Other Greatest Hits (Columbia 1996)★★★, The Essential Dolly Parton - Volume Two (RCA 1997)★★★, The Ultimate Dolly Parton (BMG 1997)★★★.

● VIDEOS: Dolly Parton In London (RCA/Columbia 1988), with Kenny Rogers Real Love (RCA/Columbia 1988).

● FURTHER READING: Dolly Parton: Country Goin' To Town, Susan Saunders. Dolly Parton, Otis James. The Official Dolly Parton Scrapbook, Connie Berman. Dolly, Alanna Nash. Dolly Parton (By Scott Keely), Scott Keely. Dolly Parton, Robert K. Krishef. Dolly, Here I Come Again, Leonore Fleischer. My Story, Dolly Parton.

Parton, Stella

b. 4 May 1949, Locust Ridge, near Sevier County, Tennessee, USA. Parton, the sixth of 12 children, made her radio debut with her sister, Dolly Parton, in 1955. She sang in local clubs and arrived in Nashville in 1972. She recorded, without success, for the small Royal American and Music City labels and toured with a gospel group. She returned to country music in 1975 with a defence of Olivia Newton-John's awards from the Country Music Association called 'Ode To Olivia'. She spent 18 weeks in the US country charts with 'I Want To Hold You In My Dreams Tonight' for the Country Soul label before switching to Elektra. She then made the US country Top 20 with 'Danger Of A Stranger', 'Standard Lie Number 1' and 'Four Little Letters'. Parton is a slim blonde but the cover of her 1978 album, Stella Parton, was airbrushed to give her similar assets to her famous sister! On that album, 10 members of the Parton family join her on 'Down To Earth', while she is also featured on the soundtrack of her sister's film Rhinestone. She has also played in a stage version of the film The Best Little Whorehouse In Texas, taking the role Dolly originally played in the film. She returned to music after a long absence with 1996's A Woman's Touch.

● ALBUMS: I Want To Hold You In My Arms Tonight (Country Soul 1975)★★★, Country Sweet (Elektra 1977)★★★, Stella Parton (Elektra 1978)★★★, Love Ya (Elektra 1979)★★, So Far...So Good (Elektra 1982)★★★, A Woman's Touch (SPPI 1996)★★.

Partridge Family

David Cassidy (b. 12 April 1950, New York City, New York, USA), and his real life step-mother actress Shirley Jones (b. 31 March 1934, Smithton, Pennsylvania, USA), were the only members of the fictitious television family group to be heard on their records. Jones, who had starred in hit film musicals like Oklahoma!, Carousel and The Music Man married David's father actor Jack Cassidy in 1956. The Partridge Family, a humorous series about a family pop group (based loosely on the Cowsills) started on US television on 25 September 1970. It was an instant hit and sent their debut single 'I Think I Love You' to the top of the chart. In less than two years the fake family, whose records were produced by Wes Farrell, had put another six singles and albums into the US Top 40, including the Top 10 successes, 'Doesn't Somebody Want To Be Wanted' and 'I'll Meet You Halfway'. When their US popularity began to wane the series took off in the UK, giving them five UK Top 20 hits, most of which were less successful Stateside. The show made Cassidy a transatlantic teen idol and he also had a run of solo hits. By the time the television series ended in 1974 the hits for both acts had dried up.

● ALBUMS: The Partridge Family Album (Bell 1970)★★, Up To Date (Bell 1971)★★, A Partridge Family Christmas Card (Bell 1971)★★, The Partridge Family Sound Magazine (Bell 1971)★★, The Partridge Family Shopping Bag (Bell 1972)★★, The Partridge Family Notebook (Bell 1972)★★, Crossword Puzzle (Bell 1973)★.

● COMPILATIONS: The Partridge Family At Home With Their Hits (Bell 1972)★★, Greatest Hits (Arista 1990)★★.

Partridge, Andy

(see XTC; Dukes Of Stratosphear)

● ALBUMS: with Martin Newell The Greatest Living Englishman (Humbug 1993)★★★.

Partridge, Don

b. 1945, Bournemouth, Dorset, England. Self-styled 'King of the Street Singers', Partridge was discovered busking in London's Berwick Street market by former Viscount Don Paul, who in turn became his manager. 'Rosie', the singer's self-penned debut single, was reputedly recorded for the sum of £8, but became a surprise

UK Top 5 hit in 1968. The artist's unconventional lifestyle and penchant for straight-talking resulted in good copy, and engendered greater publicity than his novelty status might otherwise suggest. 'Blue Eyes', Partridge's follow-up single, reached number 3, yet the song is less well recalled than its ebullient predecessor. The singer later supervised The Buskers, a various-artists compilation, and enjoyed one further chart entry with 'Breakfast On Pluto' in 1969. After this brief flirtation with fame, Partridge returned to busking roots and continued to perform into the 90s.

● ALBUMS: Don Partridge (Columbia 1968)★★.

Party Party

An unconvincing farce, the chief attraction of the 1983 film Party Party is the soundtrack. Punk, new wave and alternative acts such as the Rezillos, Clash, Go-Gos, Selecter, Bad Manners, Undertones, Stranglers, Sex Pistols, X-Ray Spex and Elvis Costello all make appearances, as do Chas And Dave, Jeff Beck and David Bowie. Daniel Peacock and Tony Winsor's plot concerns Larry's (Perry Fenwick) New Year's Eve Party. Around this singular event director Winsor constructs a series of light anecdotes about teenage romance and sexual conquest, led by writer Daniel Peacock's portrayal of the hapless Toby. As their ambitions are confounded - everyone desires someone who desires someone else - Sharon (Sally Anne Law) attempts to drown herself in the bath, before a food fight breaks out in the kitchen. With the party in full swing, Larry's parents return home 'unexpectedly'. Failing to notice the party detritus in the dark as the miscreants hide in the dark, they proceed to make love on the sofa. Toby, however, wanders into the room and turns the light on following his conquest of Brenda (Kim Thomson). The 'game is up', but Larry's parents elect to join in the party spirit rather than chastise their offspring's friends. Trite even by the standards of the party movie genre, among the later notables in the cast were Caroline Quentin and soap opera singing star Nick Berry.

Party Posse

Afflicted with poverty at their inception, this band of Harlem, New York-rappers originally practiced in the most un-party-like space of their local graveyard. The trio of DJ Alphonse Constant and rappers Randall Barber and Tedd Lewis were undettered. In actual fact that piece of hallowed ground has achieved something approaching notoriety since, being used for a Doug E. Fresh video. They formed in Harlem in the late 80s, passing by unobserved until Kool Moe Dee visited their school. Inspired by him, they eventually won themselves a contract through his manager, who organised an audition for Moe Dee's home label, Jive. Moe Dee would also make an appearance on their debut album ('Just Look At Us'), which was characterised by old school positivity ('Strivin'') and locker room humour ('Steppin' In Doo Doo') ● ALBUMS: It's Party Time (Jive 1989)★★★.

Pasadena Roof Orchestra

Britain's most commercially successful traditional jazz-based act of the 70s was formed in the mid-60s by baker John Arthey (bass) as a larger, slicker recreation of a 20s ragtime band than that of the Temperance Seven. Among its mainstays were John Parry (vocals), arranger Keith Nichols (piano), Mac White (clarinet) and trumpeters Clive Baker, Enrico Tomasino and Mike Henry. Transient members included Viv Stanshall (euphonium). Despite much interest from London's music press - especially the Melody Maker - the Orchestra had no major record hits, but their albums did brisk business in foyers on the European college circuit and at the more prestigious jazz festivals.

● ALBUMS: The Show Must Go On (1977)★★★, A Talking Picture (Columbia 1978)★★★, Night Out (Columbia 1979)★★★, Puttin' On The Ritz (Spot 1983)★★★★, Fifteen Years On (Pasadena Roof Orchestra 1985)★★★, Good News (Transatlantic 1987)★★★, On Tour (Transatlantic 1987)★★★, Happy Feet (Pasadena Roof Orchestra 1988)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Anthology (Transatlantic 1978)★★★, Everythin' Stops For Tea (Cambra 1984)★★★, C'mon Along And Listen To (Conifer 1986)★★★, Isn't It Romantic (Transatlantic 1987)★★★, Collection (Castle 1987)★★★, Top Hat, White Tie And Tails (Ditto 1988)★★★, 16 Greatest Hits (Fun 1988)★★★, Sentimental Journey (1993)★★★.

Pasadenas

UK soul band formed in 1987 by three brothers - Jeff Aaron Brown(b. 12 December 1964), Michael Milliner (b. 15 February 1962), and David Milliner (b. 16 February 1962), plus Hamish Seelochan (b. 11 August 1964) and Andrew Banfield (b. 4 December 1964). They had previously been performing since 1982 in an outfit titled Finesse. Finesse danced on videos by Animal Nightlife, Freez and others, appearing in the film Absolute Beginners. The band's debut 45, 'Right On', was a paean to artists such as Marvin Gaye. Follow-ups, including 'Riding On A Train', 'Enchanted Lady' and 'I'm Doing Fine Now' (UK number 4 in February 1992), established them as a chart act proper. As well as the traditions of doo-wop, the band were heavily influenced by the spirit and style of the decade, despite their own acknowledgement that 'being black in the 50s was not a nice thing'.

● ALBUMS: To Whom It May Concern (Columbia 1988)★★★, Elevate (Columbia 1991)★★★, Yours Sincerely (Columbia 1992)★★★.

Pasquall, Don

b. Jerome Don Pasquall, 20 September 1902, Fulton, Kentucky, USA, d. 18 October 1971. Pasquall was raised in St. Louis, Missouri, where he learned to play mellophone and worked in brass bands. During military service in World War I, he switched to playing clarinet and after his return to St. Louis he played in several bands including those led by Charlie Creath and Fate Marable. In 1921 he moved to Chicago where he studied music and also played regularly with noted local bandleaders including Doc Cook. With Cook's band he played tenor saxophone; late in the decade he moved to New York where he played alto saxophone with Fletcher Henderson's band for a short spell before returning to Chicago. In the early 30s he played in many bands, among them those led by Freddie Keppard and Jabbo Smith. He also visited Europe in 1934, then returned briefly to Henderson before settling in to the Noble Sissle orchestra for several years. From the mid-40s he freelanced in New York. Pasquall's extensive studies in Chicago made him a reliable and sought-after musician. In addition to his playing of several reed instruments, he also arranged for many of the bands with which he played.

● COMPILATIONS: The Chronological Fletcher Henderson 1927 (Classics 1927)★★★.

Pass, Joe

b. Joseph Anthony Passalaqua, 13 January 1929, New Brunswick, New Jersey, USA, d. 23 May 1994, Los Angeles, California, USA. In his mid and late teens guitarist Pass worked with a number of name bands, including those led by Tony Pastor and Charlie Barnet. From the early 50s until the beginning of the following decade, Pass dwelt in self-imposed obscurity playing when and where he could in order to sustain a drug habit for which he also served time. The 60s saw his rehabilitation and revealed an astonishing talent. Following his internment at the Synanon Foundation in Santa Monica, a self-help regime which allowed him to break his habit, Pass was returned to the outside world as a reformed character, and a media-worthy example of the powers of Synanon healing (since largely discredited). The new profile brought engagements with artists as diverse as Julie London and Richard 'Groove' Holmes. Through the patronage of Norman Granz of Pablo he moved on to work with jazz's biggest names, including duos with leading artists such as Oscar Peterson (winning a Grammy for his album with the latter and bassist Niels-Henning Ørsted Pedersen), Jimmy Rowles and Zoot Sims, or in small groups including Count Basie's reformed Kansas City Six. He proved especially gifted as accompanist to singers, particularly Ella Fitzgerald. It was as a solo performer, however, that he most ably displayed his mastery of guitar, but despite the virtuoso standard of his playing his work never degenerated into a mere display of technical accomplishment. His phenomenal technique, coupled as it was with an intense jazz feel, made him welcome in almost any setting.

● ALBUMS: The Complete 'Catch Me' Sessions (1963)★★★, Joe Pass-John Pisano Quartet (1963)★★★, Joy Spring (1964)★★★, For Django (1964)★★★★, The Living Legends one side only (1969)★★, Intercontinental (1970)★★★, Virtuoso (Pablo 1973)★★★★, with Ella Fitzgerald Take Love Easy (Pablo 1974)★★★, Portraits Of Duke Ellington (1974)★★★, Joe Pass At The Montreux Jazz Festival (1975)★★★, with Fitzgerald Fitzgerald And Pass . . . Again (Pablo 1976)★★★, with Oscar Peterson Porgy And Bess (1976)★★★★, Virtuoso No 2 (Pablo 1976)★★★, Guitar Player (1976)★★★, Quadrant (1977)★★★, Virtuoso No 3 (Original Jazz Classics 1977)★★★, Live At Montreux '77 (Original Jazz Classics 1977)★★★, Guitar Interludes (1977), Tudo Bem! (Original Jazz Classics 1978)★★★, Chops (Original Jazz Classics 1978)★★★★, I Remember Charlie Parker (Original Jazz Classics 1979)★★, Northsea Nights (1979)★★★, with Fitzgerald Digital III At Montreux (Pablo 1980)★★★, Quadrant Toasts Duke Ellington - All Too Soon (1980)★★★, with Jimmy Rowles Checkmate (1981)★★★, Ira, George And Joe/Joe Pass Loves Gershwin (1981)★★★, with Zoot Sims Blues For Two (1982)★★★, Eximious (1982)★★★, with Fitzgerald Speak Love (Pablo 1983)★★★, Live At Long Beach City College (1984)★★, We'll Be Together Again (1985)★★★, Whitestone (Pablo 1985)★★★, University Of Akron Concert (Pablo 1985)★★, Blues For Fred (Pablo 1988)★★★, One For My Baby (Pablo 1988)★★★★, Summer Nights (Pablo 1990)★★★, Appassionato (Pablo 1990)★★★, Vituoso Live! (Pablo 1991)★★★, My Song (Telarc 1993)★★★, with Roy Clark Play Hank Williams 1994 recording (Ranwood 1996)★★★, In Hamburg 1992 recording (ACT 1997)★★★.

Passion

Stephen Sondheim's third collaboration (following Sunday In The Park With George and Into The Woods) with librettist and director James Lapine opened at the Plymouth Theatre in New York on 9 May 1994. Set in the late 19th century, and based on Ettore Scola's 1981 film Passione d'Amore, which was adapted from the 1869 novel Fosca by Igino Tarchetti, Passion opens with a 10-minute sequence in which Giorgio (Jere Shea), a handsome young army officer, and Clara (Marin Mazzie) are making rapturous love, naked on a bed. What follows is a complex and absorbing piece in which Giorgio, after being posted to a far outpost, finds himself the object of the obsessive desire of the unattractive Fosca (Donna Murphy), who is dying. Before the curtain falls, Fosca has changed Giorgio's whole conception as to what real love should be, even inveigling him into writing the kind of love letter she believes he should send to her. Sondheim's score, which critics noted contained some of his most 'direct' love songs, consisted of 'Happiness', 'First Letter', 'Second Letter', 'Third Letter', 'Fourth Letter', 'I Read', 'Transition', 'Garden Sequence', 'Trio', 'I Wish I Could Forget You', 'Soldiers' Gossip', 'Flashback', 'Sunrise Letter', 'Is This What You Call Love?', 'Forty Days', 'Loving You', 'Farewell Letter', 'No One Has Ever Loved You' and Finalé. As usual, Jonathan Tunick's arrangements were singled out for special praise, as were Jane Greenwood's sumptuous costume designs. Passion won Tony Awards for best musical, book, score, leading actress (Donna Murphy), and a Grammy for Best Musical Show album in 1995, but despite being hailed by Variety as 'the most emotionally engaging new musical Broadway has had in years', the show closed on January 1995 after 280 performances.

Passions (UK)

This English post-punk group, with definite pop leanings, was formed in June 1978 and comprised Barbara Gogan (b. Dublin, Eire; vocals, guitar), Mitch Barker (vocals), Clive Timperley (guitar, vocals), Claire Bidwell (bass, vocals) and Richard Williams (drums). All save Timperley had featured in Rivers Of Passion, while all except Bidwell had spent time in the various incarnations of the Derelicts between 1974 and 1976. During this time Timperley also played with Joe Strummer's 101ers. Gogan left her Dublin home at the age of 18 and settled in France within a Marxist commune. She came to London in 1972 and moved into a 'squat' near Ladbroke Grove, where she became involved with the Derelicts, a loose collection of like-minded left wingers. Evolving into the Passions they released their first single, 'Needles And Pins', on the tiny Soho label, also home of the Nips and the Inmates. They lost Barker in 1979 when a broken leg halted his musical activities. Continuing as a four-piece they signed to Fiction Records for their debut album and one single, 'Hunted'. Bidwell left in July 1980 to form Schwarze Kapelle and then joined the Wall. David Agar, once a member of the fledgling Spandau Ballet, replaced her. Three days later they were dropped by Fiction but fell immediately on their feet with a contract for Polydor Records. They finally found success in 1981 with their second single for the label, 'I'm In Love With A German Film Star'. It would be their only hit, despite the eloquence and strength of later material. Timperley left to run a health shop in December 1981, while the recruitment of Kevin Armstrong (ex-Local Heroes SW9) on guitar and Jeff Smith (ex-Lene Lovich band) on keyboards failed to put the brakes on their commercial slide. Armstrong himself left in August 1982 to be replaced by Steve Wright.

● ALBUMS: Michael And Miranda (Fiction 1980)★★, Thirty Thousand Feet Over China (Polydor 1981)★★★, Sanctuary (Polydor 1982)★★.

Passions (USA)

This rock 'n' roll vocal group from Brooklyn, New York, USA, comprised lead Jimmy Gallagher, second tenor Albie Galione, first tenor Tony Armato and baritone Vinny Acierno. The Passions were one of the first Italian-American vocal ensembles to make their presence felt on the rock 'n' roll scene, and typically of such groups, their sound was smooth and sincere. The Passions were formed in 1958, and after signing with the local Audicon label in 1959 immediately found success with 'Just To Be With You' (USA number 69 pop) in 1959. It would be the group's only national hit, but in the New York metropolitan area the Passions were seen as local stars, and, therefore, their impact was far greater. Their double-sided follow-up in 1960, 'I Only Want You'/'This Is My Love', is still cherished by doo-wop fans. At this time Vinny Acierno was replaced by Lou Rotondo. The Passions' next single was a smooth version of the Cadillacs' classic ballad 'Gloria' (1960), which, although only achieving local success, became an enduring legacy for the group and something of a doo-wop standard. The group was unable to sustain success with the singles it recorded in the next two years, and in 1964 the Passions disbanded.

● COMPILATIONS: with the Mystics The Mystics And The Passions (1979)★★★, Just To Be With You (Clifton 1990)★★★, Legendary Hits (Crystal Ball 1991)★★★, Just To Be With You (Relic 1992)★★★.

Pastels (UK)

Formed in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1982, the Pastels were one of the prime movers in the 80s 'shambling'/'anorak' independent scene that influenced later luminaries such as the Flatmates and Talulah Gosh. Group leader Stephen Pastel (b. Stephen McRobbie, Scotland; guitar, vocals) has since gone to great lengths to distance the Pastels from their past idolaters. Today they serve as a major influence on emerging Scottish bands such as Teenage Fanclub (whose Norman Blake is a fan club member and later played in the Pastels) and Captain America/Eugenius. However, their history has been characterized by the kind of lethargy that has doomed them to mere cultism: 'I just find careerism and naked ambition really ugly'. The Pastels themselves were motivated by a conglomeration of the Monkees and the Ramones. The early line-up also comprised Brian Superstar (b. Brian Taylor; guitar) and Chris Gordon (drums), but the latter's early departure signalled a recurring instability in the group's rhythm section. Their first release on the Television Personalities' Whaam! label, the Songs For Children EP, was the beginning of an unsettled relationship with a variety of labels including Glass, Rough Trade, and Creation Records. Appearances on various compilations, not least a prestigious slot on the seminal C86 collection ('Breaking Lines') from the New Musical Express increased their standing in the independent market, while their music combined ambitious vision with naïve ability. A settled line-up; McRobbie, Superstar, Aggi Wright (vocals), Martin Hayward (bass) and Bernice Swanson (drums) - completed two albums, Up For A Bit With The Pastels and Sittin' Pretty, wherein the group matured from the charming innocence of early releases to embrace a myriad of contrasting styles held together by McRobbie's committed vision. Material ranged from the buoyant 'Nothing To Be Done' to the lengthy 'Baby Honey' and 'Ditch The Fool', as the Pastels expanded their musical horizons with the temporary aid of Eugene Kelly (ex-Vaselines), Norman Blake and David Keegan, formerly of the Shop Assistants and McRobbie's partner in the pivotal 53rd & 3rd Records label. By the early 90s Keegan had become a full-time member of the Pastels which, following a series of alterations, re-emerged centred around McRobbie, Wright (now on bass) and Katrina Mitchell (drums), the latter pursuing a concurrent path as a member of Melody Dog. Against the odds this trio was still in place for 1995's Mobile Safari, an enjoyable collection of raggamuffin odes to life in and outside of an underachieving indie band, punctuated by songs such as 'Yoga' and 'Classic Lineup'. Their 1997 release, Illumination, received lacklustre reviews from an increasingly disinterested music press.

- ALBUMS: Up For A Bit With The Pastels (Glass 1987)★★★, Sittin' Pretty (Chapter 22 1989)★★★, Mobile Safari (Domino 1995)★★★, Illumination (Domino 1997)★★.
- COMPILATIONS: Suck On The Pastels (Creation 1988)★★★, 1986-1993 Truckload Of Trouble (Seed 1993)★★★★.

Pastels (USA)

This R&B vocal group formed at a US Air Force base in Narsarssuak, Greenland, in 1954, and comprised Big Dee Irwin, Richard Travis, Tony Thomas and Jimmy Willingham. Members were later transferred to Washington, DC, and the Pastels were discovered by the New York-based Hull Records in 1957. They were signed to the company's subsidiary label, Mascot, but after their first hit, 'Been So Long', all their records were leased to the Chess (Records) brothers' Argo label in Chicago. 'Been So Long', an R&B number 5 and pop Top 30 hit, was an utterly sublime doo-wop with haunting chorusing, and for decades later was a staple on oldies radio shows. By 1958 all the Pastels had left the service, and the group was ready to exploit the success of their hit with follow-ups; however, they instead suffered a severe failure, with a lack of national chart success in 1958 for the sublime 'So Far Away', their third and final release. The following year the Pastels disbanded but Dee Irwin continued in the music business. In 1964 he enjoyed a Top 40 national pop hit with 'Swingin' On A Star', accompanied by the uncredited Little Eva. He continued behind the scenes as a songwriter, composing for artists such as Ray Charles, Arthur Prysock, Esther Phillips and Isaac Hayes.

Pastor, Tony

b. 26 October 1907, Middletown, Connecticut, USA, d. 31 October 1969. As a teenager Pastor played tenor saxophone in a number of east coast-based bands, sometimes with Artie Shaw who was a neighbour. Pastor tried a hand at bandleading in the early 30s but with limited success. In the middle of the decade he joined Shaw's band, became one of its featured soloists and occasional singer. He appeared on a number of the band's most popular records, including 'Indian Love Call' and 'Rosalie'. After leaving Shaw he tried bandleading again, this time with considerably more success. Thanks to a series of radio broadcasts the band became well known and sufficiently popular to survive the winter of 1947 that saw so many big bands fold. Among the singers he hired were the sisters Betty and Rosemary Clooney. Pastor continued leading a big band until the end of the 50s. In the 60s he led a small group at casinos in Nevada, singing in a group which also featured his three sons. A tough-toned soloist, Pastor always tried to give his band a strong jazz flavour while still keeping a careful eye on commercial needs. He died in 1969.

- ALBUMS: One Night Stand With Tony Pastor (1949)★★★, Tony Pastor And His Orchestra i (1958)★★, Tony Pastor And His Orchestra ii (1959)★★★, Tony Pastor And His Orchestra iii (1960)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Indispensable Artie Shaw Vols 1/2 (1938-39 recordings)★★★, Just For Kicks (1940-45 recordings)★★★, Confessin' (1940-49 recordings)★★★, Tony Pastor And His Orchestra (1940-57 recordings)★★★★, Tony Pastor With Rosemary And Betty Clooney (1942-47 recordings)★★★, The Film Tracks Of Tony Pastor (1949 recordings)★★.

Pastorius, Jaco

b. John Francis Pastorius, 1 December 1951, Norristown, Pennsylvania, USA, d. 12 September 1987, Fort Lauderdale, Florida, USA. Encouraged by his father, a drummer and vocalist, to pursue a career in music, Pastorius learned to play bass, drums, guitar, piano, and saxophone while in his teens. As a result of a football injury to his arm, his ambitions were mainly orientated towards the drums, but he soon found work playing bass for visiting pop and soul acts. After backing the Temptations and the Supremes, he developed a cult following, and his reputation spread. In 1975, Bobby Colomby, drummer with Blood, Sweat And Tears, was impressed enough to arrange the recording of Pastorius' first album, and a year later Pat Metheny asked him to play bass on his own first album for ECM Records, additionally he worked with Joni Mitchell. But the most important stage in Pastorius' career came in 1976: joining Weather Report to record the highly influential Heavy Weather, his astonishing technique on the fretless bass and his flamboyant behaviour on stage consolidated the band's popularity and boosted his own image to star status. He established his own band, Word Of Mouth, in 1980, and they enjoyed three years of successful tours, while Pastorius himself recorded intermittently with some of the top musicians in jazz. However, Pastorius suffered from alcoholism and manic depression. In 1987, after increasing bouts of inactivity, he suffered fatal injuries in a brawl outside the Midnight Club in his home town of Fort Lauderdale. Pastorius was one of the most influential bass players since Charles Mingus, and extended the possibilities of the electric bass as a melodic instrument in a way which has affected many bassists since.

- ALBUMS: Jaco (DIW 1974)★★★, Jaco Pastorius (Epic 1975)★★★★, with Weather Report Heavy Weather (Columbia 1976)★★★★, Word Of Mouth (Warners 1980)★★, Invitation (1982)★★, PDB (DIW 1987)★★, Honestly (Jazzpoint 1986)★★, Heavy N' Jazz (Jazzpoint 1987)★★, Jazz Street (Timeless 1987)★★★, Live In Italy rec. 1986 (Jazzpoint 1991)★★★, Holiday For Pans rec. 1980-82 (Sound Hills 1993)★★★, The Birthday Concert (Warners 1995)★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Jaco: The Extraordinary And Tragic Life Of Jaco Pastorius, Bill Milkowski.

Pat Garrett And Billy The Kid

This 1973 feature starred James Cockburn and Kris Kristofferson in the respective title roles. Sam Peckinpah directed the film in customary fashion; violent, blood-splattered images pepper many of the scenes. Critical reaction was divided; Stanley Kauffman declared it showed 'what Peckinpah can do when he doesn't put his mind to it.' The presence of Kristofferson and Rita Coolidge helped bring the rock and movie worlds together. However, interest in the film from music fans was owing to the presence of Bob Dylan. His role as the monosyllabic 'Alias' was initially much larger, but his scenes were among many cut from the final print. Dylan also contributed the low-key, but atmospheric soundtrack music. His album of the same name reached the UK Top 30 and although the main theme from the film, 'Knocking On Heaven's Door' was only a minor Top 20 hit when issued as a single, the song has since become one of the artist's most popular compositions, inspiring several cover versions. Its appeal has outlasted the film it is drawn from. If Pat Garrett And Billy The Kid retains any fascination, it is because of Dylan's role, rather than being the product of a director responsible for the superior The Wild Bunch and Straw Dogs.

Pate, Johnny

b. 1923, Chicago Heights, Illinois, USA. Pate was one of the most important producers and arrangers in the creation of the Chicago sound in soul music during the 60s. With his highly lyrical horn arrangements Pate was able to suggest a gospel-tinged feeling with the utmost in subtlety and nuance. This deft approach probably derived from his 50s career as a bassist in his own cocktail lounge jazz combo, which worked Chicago clubs for many years. He first began performing in these clubs with Coleridge Davis and Stuff Smith in the late 40s. By the early 50s Pate had formed his own unit. In 1958, performing as the Johnny Pate Quintet, he achieved a national hit with 'Swingin' Sheppard Blues' (number 17 R&B, number 43 pop), a cover version of the hit by the Moe Koffman Quartet. By the end of the 50s the nightclubs in the black community were closing down and the call for cocktail lounge jazz was greatly diminished, so Pate began working freelance for various Chicago R&B labels as an arranger and producer. Beginning in 1962 he began writing most of the arrangements for the horn-driven OKeh Records' hits of Major Lance and Billy Butler produced by Carl Davis. A year later Pate started production and arrangement work with the Impressions on ABC Records. At ABC he served as A&R man and produced and arranged hits for another Chicago-based group, the Marvelows. When the Impressions moved to the Curtom label in 1970 so did Pate, but he only stayed until 1972.

● ALBUMS: Johnny Pate At The Blue Note (Stepheny 1957)★★★, Jazz Goes Ivy League (King 1958)★★★, Swingin' Flute (King 1958)★★★, A Date With Johnny Pate (King 1959)★★★.

Patinkin, Mandy

b. Mandel Patinkin, 30 November 1952, Chicago, Illinois, USA. An actor and singer with a 'wonderfully expressive voice', as a boy Patinkin sang in the choir at his Jewish temple, and performed in musicals such as Anything Goes, Stop The World - I Want To Get Off and Carousel at the local youth centre. After attending the University of Kansas and studying drama at the Juilliard School of Music, he worked in regional theatre before spending most of the late 70s with the New York Festival Theatre. In 1980 he won a Tony Award for his portrayal of Che in the Broadway production of Evita, and was nominated again, four years later, for his performance in the leading role of Sunday In The Park With George. In 1985 Patinkin was one of the many stars of Follies In Concert which played for two nights only at the Avery Fisher Hall in New York. His version of 'Buddy's Blues', in particular, is one of the cast CD's many highlights. A year later, Patinkin featured on another fine album, a new CBS studio recording of Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II's classic South Pacific, on which he was joined by opera singers Kiri Te Kanawa and Jose Carreras. The album went to number 5 in the UK chart, and Patinkin's sensitive version of 'Younger than Springtime' was released as a single. In 1989, his one-man show, Mandy Patinkin In Concert: Dress Casual played for a four week season at the Helen Hayes Theatre, in New York, and in 1990 Patinkin co-starred with Claire Moore in the world premiere of the Jason Carr/Julian Barry/Peter Hall musical Born Again, based on Eugene Ionesco's play Rhinoceros, at the Chichester Festival Theatre in England. Since making his film debut in The Big Fix in 1978, Patinkin has made highly effective appearances in several other movies, including Ragtime, Yentl, Dick Tracy (in the role of 88 Keys, Madonna's pianist), True Colours, The Doctor, and The Music Of Chance (1993). In 1991 he was back on Broadway, playing the hunchbacked uncle, Archibald Craven, in The Secret Garden, and in January 1993 he succeeded Michael Rupert as Marvin in Falsettos. In 1994 Patinkin played Sky Masterson in a BBC Radio 2 recording of Guys And Dolls, and in 1995 was on international television screens, starring in the medical drama series Chicago Hope.

● ALBUMS: Mandy Patinkin (CBS 1989)★★★, Dress Casual (CBS 1991)★★★★, Experiment (Elektra Nonesuch 1994)★★★, Oscar And Steve (Nonesuch 1995)★★★, Mamoloshen (Nonesuch 1998)★★★★, and many Original Cast recordings.

Patitucci, John

b. 22 December 1959, Brooklyn, New York, USA. Patitucci is a technically gifted bassist best known for his work on both the electric and acoustic instruments for fusion keyboard legend Chick Corea. After playing some pop and rock in his brother's band in New York, he moved with his family to America's west coast, the home of a fearsome tradition for jazz/rock fusion virtuosi, in 1972, and was introduced to the jazz tradition by bass teacher Chris Poehler. Studying the acoustic work of Ron Carter, Dave Holland, Charlie Haden and Eddie Gomez, and the electric bass techniques of Larry Graham, Marcus Miller, Stanley Clarke and, particularly, bass hero Jaco Pastorius, he developed quickly, working with pianist Gap Mangione (brother of Chuck Mangione), and veteran British-borne vibesman Victor Feldman. It was with Feldman that Chick Corea came across him, and asked him to join the newly formed Elektric Band. Patitucci stayed with the Elektric Band throughout its life, recording five albums, and played an important part in the Akoustic Band trio. Since the late 80s he has also been working as a leader on GRP and Stretch – Corea's own subsidiary of the GRP label. An incredible technician on both acoustic and six-string electric basses, Patitucci has unfortunately allowed his output to be dominated by material that works primarily as a means to demonstrate his technique. His best record so far is probably Sketchbook, featuring drummer Peter Erskine, tenor saxophonist Michael Brecker and guitarist John Scofield.

● ALBUMS: with Chick Corea The Chick Corea Elektric Band (GRP 1986)★★★★, with Corea Light Years (1987)★★★, with Corea Eye Of The Beholder (1988)★★★, John Patitucci (1988)★★★, Chick Corea Akoustic Band (1989)★★★★, On The Corner (1989)★★★, Sketchbook (1990)★★★, with Corea Inside Out (1990)★★★, Beneath The Mask (1992)★★★, Alive (1992)★★, Heart Of The Bass (1992)★★★.

Paton, Tam

b. Prestonpans, Scotland. Paton's involvement in the music business began during the early 60s when he played piano in Scottish showband, the Crusaders. After they split he was persuaded to form a new 10-piece showband known as the Tam Paton Orchestra, which had a residency at Edinburgh's Palais de Dance. In 1967, he was approached by two young kids, Alan and Derek Longmuir, who had recently formed a group called the Saxons. By the time he auditioned them, however, they had changed their name to the Bay City Rollers. Paton managed the group who had an ever-shifting line-up over the next few years. It was not until 1971 that they received their big break when Paton persuaded a posse of record company talent spotters to witness their act in Edinburgh. Initially signed to Tony Calder's production company, they released their work through Dick Leahy's Bell Records. In the meantime, Paton retained another group, Kip, who served as a pool of replacements. Briefly, he had a managerial tie-up with Peter Walsh after which the Rollers swiftly became the biggest pop sensation of their day. The press predictably caricatured Paton as an aggressive hirer/firer and puppetmaster. Several people attempted to buy out Paton's interests in the Rollers but he always refused to surrender power. For Paton, the Rollers were not merely a business asset but the embodiment of all his frustrated dreams and ambitions. Sadly, the dream ended in the late 70s when the Rollers good boy image was exposed as a myth. Worse was to follow for Paton who was sentenced to three years' imprisonment at Edinburgh High Court for committing indecent acts with a number of youngsters aged between 15 and 20 years, supplying them with stupefying liquor and allowing blue movies to be shown at his home. His fall was undoubtedly the most spectacular of any manager in pop music history.

Patra

b. Dorothy Smith, 22 November 1972, Kingston, Jamaica, West Indies. A DJ, singer and hopeful actor widely touted/hyped as the female equivalent of Shabba Ranks, Patra (formerly Lady Patra) signed to the same management, under the aegis of Clifton 'Specialist' Dillon, in 1989. She also shares the same record company, Epic. Accordingly, with the new, commercial expectations placed on her shoulders, her material has moved from strict dancehall to include smooth love songs. Patra was brought up singing in churches in Westmoreland, where she moved from Kingston at an early age. Her ambition as a child was always evident, and she soon entered neighbourhood singing/DJing competitions in high school. Early supporters, who included Major Mackerel, encouraged her to return to Kingston and try her luck in the studios. Gussie Clarke was the first to 'voice' her after she had been declined by several others. Such rejections were only a short-term problem, however. Following the sessions with Clarke, she found herself in demand by Shocking Vibes, Exterminator and several others. Sides such as 'Holler Fe The Wok', 'Visa Hole', 'Man Me Love' and 'Worky Worky' showcased her considerable talents. On the back of this moderate success she played her first major show at the Sting '88 celebrations. By the time the contract with Epic was secured, Patra's singing voice had taken precedence over her DJ skills, as highlighted by the single 'Sweet Memories', the first product of new sessions (though it was actually released by Tachyon's Sonny Ochai). Curiously, it rose to number 1 in the Japanese reggae charts, but Epic will surely demand more concrete domestic success in return for their investment.

● ALBUMS: Queen Of The Pack (Epic 1993)★★★★, Scent Of Attraction (Epic 1995)★★.

Patrick Street

After touring the USA in 1986, the musicians, Kevin Burke, Andy Irvine and Jackie Daly, returned to Ireland and formed a permanent group, adding guitarist Arty McGlynn. From 1987-1991, they issued three albums under the name of Patrick Street, and reunited for a further release and tour in 1993. Kevin Burke (fiddle) is of English/Irish parents, although his playing is influenced by the Sligo style. Before joining Patrick Street he played an important role in the Bothy Band's success, and has recorded with Arlo Guthrie and Christy Moore. He released the solo albums, If The Cap Fits and Up Close. Andy Irvine (guitar, harmonica, mandolin, bouzuki), a founder member of both Sweeny's Men and Planxty, has worked with many other leading figures in Irish, Scottish and English folk. Jackie Daly (accordion) first came to international attention when he joined De Dannan. Like Daly, Arty McGlynn started out on the accordion, but switched to the guitar, inspired by the late 50s rock 'n' roll greats. At the age of 15, McGlynn joined an Irish showband and spent 18 years touring Irish dance halls. Feeling stifled, he switched to traditional music, and sang solo in folk clubs. His European tours with Andy Irvine led to his participation in Patrick Street. More recently, he was an important element in the high flying Four Men And A Dog. A true Irish supergroup, Patrick Street's main success has been in the USA, but their four albums have also registered strongly in their home country, and in the UK folk charts. The group has proved to be equal to the sum of its parts, and has effectively mixed dance tunes with stirring songs and ballads sung by Irvine.

● ALBUMS: Patrick Street (1987)★★★★, No. 2 Patrick Street (1989)★★★, Irish Times (1991)★★★, All In Good Time (Special Delivery 1993)★★★, Cornerboys (Green Linnet 1995)★★★★.

Patrick's, Bobby, Big Six

Formed in Glasgow, Scotland, Bobby Patrick's Big Six were one of the few R&B-based acts active in Scotland during the pre-Beatles era, alongside the Alex Harvey Soul Band and Ricky Barnes All-Stars. In 1961 saxophonist Patrick took his group to London, England, in search of a wider audience, but within months the Big Six had moved to Hamburg, Germany, where they remained until 1965. Here they worked in their own right, and as a backing group to solo singers, notably Tony Sheridan. Patrick made numerous recordings during this period, some of which were compiled on Twistime Im Der Star Club, Hamburg. Two singles, 'Shake It Easy Baby' and 'Monkey Time', plus an EP Teenbeat Volume 3 were issued in the UK by Decca Records in 1964. Each displayed a an unerring grasp of R&B and soul styles. In 1965 the group, dubbed simply the Big Six, made their final recording with a version of Mel Torme's 'Comin' Home Baby'. Patrick then returned to Scotland where he joined his brother Bill in the Blues Council. Both subsequently worked with Alex Harvey, before becoming part of the houseband at the Locarno Ballroom with Maggie Bell and Leslie Harvey. When the ballroom closed in 1967, the four musicians toured Germany for a year. Bobby Patrick then became a session musician. Of the ex-members of the Big Six, bassist Archie Leggatt joined French singer Johnny Hallyday's backing band, before finding fame in partnership with Kevin Ayers.

● ALBUMS: with Kingsize Taylor Twistime Im Der Star Club, Hamburg (Ariola 1964)★★.

Patrick, Pat

b. November 1929, the mid-west, USA. Like most of Sun Ra's long-term associates, Pat Patrick's origins are shrouded in mystery. He studied piano and drums as a child and received trumpet lessons from his father and from Clark Terry. At DuSable High School in Chicago he met tenor saxophonists John Gilmore and Clifford Jordan and bassist Richard Davis. Patrick began playing alto and baritone saxophones and clarinet. Having worked with some of the pre-eminent shakers of American music - Muddy Waters, Lillian Armstrong, Nat 'King' Cole and Cab Calloway - he joined Sun Ra in 1953. His strong technique and expansive imagination were perfect for Sun Ra's mind-bending compositions and he stayed with him until the mid-80s. In 1961 he contributed baritone to John Coltrane's Africa/Brass album. In the early 70s he played in Thelonious Monk's group, joined the Jazz Composers Orchestra, recording with them on projects led by Grachan Moncur III (Echoes Of A Prayer) and Clifford Thornton (The Gardens Of Harlem), and also worked for Quincy Jones and Duke Ellington. In 1978 he recorded on Jordon's Inward Fire, which also featured Davis and fellow Chicagoan Muhal Richard Abrams. In 1990 Patrick was reported to be living in Chicago and concentrating on playing tenor saxophone.

Patsy Cline Showcase - Patsy Cline

Astonishingly, only three original albums were released during Patsy Cline's lifetime, and the best by far is Patsy Cline Showcase. Although she was a competent uptempo performer, she excelled with tear-jerking ballads such as 'I Fall To Pieces' and Willie Nelson's 'Crazy'. Producer Owen Bradley bathed her throbbing vocals with echo, added a vocal group (the Jordanaires) and a gentle beat, sweetened by strings, and thereby created the template for country music of the 60s. Patsy's male counterpart was Jim Reeves and in 1981, their versions of 'Have You Ever Been Lonely?' and 'I Fall To Pieces' were merged for duet recordings. Luckily, they had sung the songs in similar keys and tempos, but nothing would have deterred the Nashville entrepreneurs. It will not be long before we have the albums of Elvis duets.

● Tracks: I Fall To Pieces; Foolin' Round; The Wavering Wind; South Of The Border; I Love You So Much It Hurts; Seven Lonely Days; Crazy; San Antonio Rose; True Love; Walking After Midnight; A Poor Man's Roses.

● First released 1962

● UK peak chart position: did not chart

● USA peak chart position: 73

Patt, Frank 'Honeyboy'

b. 1 September 1928, Fostoria, Alabama, USA. After singing in church as a child, Patt taught himself guitar soon after emigrating to Los Angeles, California, in 1952. There he formed a musical partnership with pianist Gus Jenkins, also from Alabama. Two years later Patt made his first record, with Jenkins, issued on the Specialty label, a powerful blues evoking the scene of a murder, 'Blood Stains On The Wall'. Although years later this came to be regarded as something of a classic, it made little impact at the time, and he had only one more record issued, in 1957, again with Jenkins. Over the next decade, he worked mostly outside the music business, but his career enjoyed a revival in the 70s, with further recording work and live appearances.

● ALBUMS: City Blues (1973)★★★, Give Me A Chance (JSP 1996)★★★.

Patterson, Ann

b. c.1950, Texas, USA. As a child Patterson learned to play piano, then switched to oboe, before moving to the saxophone family. Directed in part by parental pressure and partly because of the prejudice against women in music, she studied to be a teacher of music. After attending North Texas University and the University of Illinois, she began teaching. She married around this time and moved with her husband to California. She continued to teach but was unhappy both with this role and in her marriage. After her divorce she began to look more towards playing, not teaching, and while on the west coast worked in various bands including one led by Don Ellis. She established a high reputation as a player who could be called upon for commercial work and to play jazz, preferably with a bebop slant. In time, Patterson started to play with an all-female band despite her awareness that the nature of such bands is sometimes limiting. Impressed by the quality and seriousness of the musicians with whom she was now working, she continued for a while, appearing at the Kansas City Women's Jazz Festival, and on television on the Johnny Carson Show. Subsequently, she left the band and formed her own female big band, Maiden Voyage, aiming to develop a commercial 'dance date' band but which could also play original and demanding music to fully employ and extend the skills and abilities of its members. Influenced on alto saxophone by Charlie Parker and Phil Woods, Patterson is a forward-thinking musician with a keen sense of the nature and roots of jazz but with a realistic attitude towards the prejudices against women. Her personal attributes and the great respect afforded to Maiden Voyage have done much to break down these prejudices, especially amongst male jazz musicians in California.

Patterson, Bobby

b. 13 March 1944, Dallas, Texas, USA. Patterson is one of the many southern-style soul singers who have established long and artistically impressive careers, yet have remained almost invisible to the public at large. He was first recorded in 1962 by a Houston-based label, Abnak, which shortly afterwards formed an R&B subsidiary, Jetstar, to record Patterson and his band the Mustangs. On Jetstar, Patterson composed and produced his own records, and secured a national hit with 'T.C.B. Or T.Y.A.' (1969), as well as a few regional sellers, notably 'Broadway Ain't Funky No More' and 'My Thing Is Your Thing'. In 1971 Patterson joined the Shreveport, Louisiana-based Paula label, and the following year he had a hit with 'How Do You Spell Love (M.O.N.E.Y)', a James Brown-inspired piece of funk. Other notable Paula releases were 'Right On Jody' and 'She Don't Have To See You'. The company also released an album, It's Just A Matter Of Time (1972). Patterson reached the R&B charts on two further occasions, with 'If He Hadn't Slipped And Got Caught' (1976) on the Granite label, and 'Right Place, Wrong Time' (1977) on the All Platinum label.

● ALBUMS: It's Just A Matter Of Time (Paula 1972)★★, Taking Care Of Business Jetstar recordings (Kent 1991)★★★.

Patterson, Ottilie

b. Anna-Ottilie Patterson, 31 January 1932, Comber, County Down, Northern Ireland. Patterson is perhaps best known for her long-time association with Chris Barber, her husband, in the 50s and 60s. With Barber she sang jazz and blues but she was also an accomplished folk singer. Ranging outside popular fields, she has also composed music to accompany poetry. For some years she was obliged through ill health to abandon her singing career, but later returned to the stage to the delight of her many fans. An engaging singer, with a strong, earthy delivery that lends itself well to the blues and some aspects of the jazz songbook, for her folk singing she was always able to adjust to a more pensive approach. A bright and bubbling personality, she is at her best in live performances and has been captured in splendid form on a number of live albums by the Barber band.

● ALBUMS: with Chris Barber Chris Barber At The London Palladium (Columbia 1961)★★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: with Barber 40 Years Jubilee Volumes 1 and 2 (Timeless 1990)★★★★.

Patterson, Rahsaan

b. c.1974, New York City, New York, USA. Progressive urban R&B vocalist Rahsaan Patterson attracted strong reviews upon the release of his self-titled 1997 debut album. A collection of ballads combining strong melodic and rhythmic elements, critics were impressed both by his sonorous voice and the maturity of the songwriting. Born in New York but resident in Los Angeles, the ambitious, engaging young artist was keen to state that his lyrics reflected the life he saw around him in urban California: 'The theme of my album circles around life's everyday experiences, so there's no contrived notions or gimmicks on it', he told Billboard magazine. Although Rahsaan Patterson was his first recording, the artist could already boast of considerable experience in the entertainment industry. As a child, he was a featured performer on Kids Incorporated, a televised variety series. He had also sung backing vocals extensively, and co-wrote two hit singles - 'Back To The World', written with Keith Crouch for Tevin Campbell, and 'Baby', written with Les Pierce for Brandy. Pierce and Crouch both reappeared on his solo debut, alongside Jammy Jaz, Ira Schick and Dinky Bingham.

● ALBUMS: Rahsaan Patterson (MCA 1997)★★★★.

Patterson, Ray And Ina

A highly popular husband-and-wife harmony duo originally formed in 1947. It comprised Ray Patterson (b. 17 April 1926, near Clayton, New Mexico, USA; mandolin, guitar, most other stringed instruments, vocals) and Ina (b. Ina Lee Phelps, 13 March 1929, Dexter, Texas, USA; guitar, vocals). Patterson's family had hopes of him becoming a classical violinist but he had differing ideas, and by the time he was 17, he played guitar and mandolin. He was badly wounded in Europe during World War II and while convalescing in a hospital in Colorado, he met Ina. They were married in 1945 and made their home in Roswell, Texas, where the Patterson family had relocated in 1934. They began to sing together, and in 1947, they became regulars on Roswell's Saturday Night Jamboree. Until 1960, they continued to be popular performers on numerous stations that ranged from Ohio to Texas and Alabama and Carolina to Colorado, where they finished at KPIK Colorado Springs, appearing there on radio and television. They recorded for several minor labels, cut transcription programmes for Border Radio and published a very popular songbook. Between 1962 and 1985, they lived in Woodland Park, Colorado, where Ray worked as a photographer but they still sang their old-time songs at special events. They made further recordings in 1966 and 1973, which led to their appearance at some major festivals. Ina developed hearing difficulties in 1881 and they more or less retired from music to live at Colorado Springs. Noted authority Ivan M. Tribe commented: 'The duo possessed some of the finest harmony in the history of the genre although they arrived on the scene a little too late to have the impact of the Blue Sky Boys'. In reality, they succeeded, singing in a style that had seen its best days a quarter of a century earlier and yet they were good enough to prove popular for many years. Sadly for them, they never had the opportunity to record for a major label during their best days.

● ALBUMS: Old Time Ballads & Hymns (County 1967)★★★, Old Time Songs (County 1969)★★★, Songs Of Home And Childhood (County 1973)★★★.

Patto

Patto was formed in 1969 when four members of Timebox - Michael Patrick 'Patto' McGrath (vocals), Peter 'Ollie' Halsall (guitar/vibes), Clive Griffiths (bass) and John Halsey (drums) - abandoned commercial constraints and embarked on a more progressive direction. Their debut, Patto, featured several of the group's most lasting performances. Although producer Muff Winwood opted for a rather rudimentary sound, the set contained a series of impressive songs, featuring complex signatures, excellent vocals and Halsall's superb guitar work. Sometimes frenzied, at other times restrained, his contributions enhanced an already outstanding collection. A second release, Hold Your Fire, exaggerated their jazz-rock persuasions, but retained the urgency and fire of their debut. Judicious overdubs ensured a fuller sound, yet Patto's interplay and empathy remained intact. Faced by commercial indifference, the group embarked on a third collection vowing to capture the irreverent side of their music. Roll 'Em, Smoke 'Em, Put Another Line Out was only partially successful with 'Singing The Blues On Reds' and the compulsive 'Loud Green Song' being the standout tracks. The project fared no better than its predecessors and Patto broke up in 1973 when their label rejected a completed fourth album, Monkey's Bum. Mike Patto joined Spooky Tooth, appearing on their final album, The Mirror, in 1974. Halsall resurfaced in Tempest before forging a partnership with Kevin Ayers. He was reunited with Patto in 1975 as a member of Boxer, and subsequently worked alongside John Halsey in the Beatles spoof, the Rutles. The latter joined Patto in the ad hoc 'supergroup' Hinkley's Heroes, but the career of this expressive vocalist was cut short in March 1979 when he succumbed to throat cancer. Halsall remained an in-demand session guitarist until his death in 1993. Halsey bcame Barry Wom in the Rutles, for whom Halsall also played guitar, before taking over the managership of a Suffolk pub. After playing in sundry outfits Griffiths was permanently hospitalized following a road accident. Halsall became the third former member to meet misfortune when he died in 1992. Three years later the group's original producer, Muff Winwood, compiled a re-mastered, double CD anthology of their best work.

● ALBUMS: Patto (Vertigo 1970)★★★, Hold Your Fire (Vertigo 1971)★★★, Roll 'Em, Smoke 'Em, Put Another Line Out (Vertigo 1972)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: A Sense Of The Absurd 2-CD set of first two albums (Mercury 1995)★★★.

Patton, 'Big' John

b. 12 July 1935, Kansas City, Missouri, USA. Unusually for a Hammond organ supremo, Patton does not come from Philadelphia. His mother played piano in church, and Patton took it up in 1948. He played in the Lloyd Price band from 1954-59, quitting just as Price topped his 1952 hit 'Lawdy Miss Clawdy' with a string of three million-sellers. Patton moved to New York and switched to organ. He was signed to Blue Note Records on the recommendation of Lou Donaldson, debuting with Along Came John in 1963, which featured Grant Green on guitar. In the late 60s he worked with tenor saxophonist Clifford Jordon and guitarist James 'Blood' Ulmer, as well as sitting in with Sun Ra's musicians. In the 70s he moved to East Orange, New Jersey. John Zorn's use of him on a track of The Big Gundown in 1985 rekindled interest in his career, and in the 90s when the Hammond B3 was experiencing another comeback, Patton's work was rightly compared to the leaders of the genre, Jimmy Smith and Jimmy McGriff.

- ALBUMS: Along Came John (Blue Note 1963)★★★★, The Way I Feel (1964)★★★, Blue John (Blue Note 1964)★★★★, Oh Baby! (Blue Note 1964)★★★★, Got A Good Thing Goin' (1965)★★★, Let 'Em Roll (Blue Note 1966)★★★★, That Certain Feeling (Blue Note 1968)★★★, Understanding (Blue Note 1968)★★★, Accent On The Blues (Blue Note 1969), Soul Connection (Nilva 1984)★★★, Blue Planet Man (Paddlewheel 1993)★★★, Memphis To New York Spirit (Blue Note 1996)★★★.
- COMPILATIONS: The Organization!: The Best Of Big John Patton (Blue Note 1994)★★★★.

Patton, Charley

b. 1 May 1891, Bolton, Mississippi, USA, d. 28 April 1934, Indianola, Mississippi, USA. Charley Patton was small, but in all other ways larger than life; his death from a chronic heart condition at the age of 43 brought to an end his relentless pursuit of the good things then available to a black man in Mississippi - liquor, women, food (courtesy of women), music, and the avoidance of farmwork, which carried with it another desideratum, freedom of movement. By 1910, Patton had a repertoire of his own compositions, including 'Pony Blues', 'Banty Rooster Blues', 'Down The Dirt Road', and his version of 'Mississippi Boweavil Blues', all of which he recorded at his first session in 1929. He also acquired a number of spirituals, although the degree of his religious conviction is uncertain. By the time he recorded, Charley Patton was the foremost blues singer in Mississippi, popular with whites and blacks, and able to make a living from his music. He was enormously influential on local musicians, including his regular partner Willie Brown, in addition to Tommy Johnson and Son House. Bukka White, Big Joe Williams and Howlin' Wolf were among others whose music was profoundly affected by Patton. His own sound is characteristic from the first: a hoarse, hollering vocal delivery, at times incomprehensible even to those who heard him in person, interrupted by spoken asides, and accompanied by driving guitar played with an unrivalled mastery of rhythm. Patton had a number of tunes and themes that he liked to rework, and he recorded some songs more than once, but never descended to stale repetition. His phrasing and accenting were uniquely inventive, voice and guitar complementing one another, rather than the guitar simply imitating the rhythm of the vocal line. He was able to hold a sung note to an impressive length, and part of the excitement of his music derives from the way a sung line can thus overlap the guitar phrase introducing the next verse. Patton was equally adept at regular and bottleneck fretting, and when playing with a slide could make the guitar into a supplementary voice with a proficiency that few could equal.

He was extensively recorded by Paramount in 1929-30, and by Vocalion in 1934, so that the breadth of his repertoire is evident. (It was probably Patton's good sales that persuaded the companies to record the singing of his accompanists, guitarist Willie Brown and fiddler Henry Sims, and Bertha Lee, his last wife.) Naturally, Patton sang personal blues, many of them about his relationships with women. He also sang about being arrested for drunkenness, cocaine ('A Spoonful Blues'), good sex ('Shake It And Break It'), and, in 'Down The Dirt Road Blues', he highlighted the plight of the black in Mississippi ('Every day, seems like murder here'). He composed an important body of topical songs, including 'Dry Well Blues' about a drought, and the two-part 'High Water Everywhere', an account of the 1927 flooding of the Mississippi that is almost cinematic in its vividness. Besides blues and spirituals, Patton recorded a number of 'songster' pieces, including 'Mississippi Boweavil Blues', 'Frankie And Albert' and the anti-clerical 'Elder Greene Blues'. He also covered hits like 'Kansas City Blues', 'Running Wild', and even Sophie Tucker's 'Some Of These Days'. It is a measure of Patton's accomplishment as a musician and of his personal magnetism that blues scholars debate furiously whether he was a clowning moral degenerate or 'the conscience of the Delta', an unthinking entertainer or a serious artist. It is perhaps fair to say that he was a man of his times who nevertheless transcended them, managing to a considerable degree to live the life he chose in a system that strove to deny that option to blacks. A similar verdict applies to his achievements as a musician and lyricist; Patton did not work independently of or uninfluenced by his musical environment, but considering how young he was when the blues were becoming the dominant black folk music, his achievements are remarkable. He was able to take the given forms and transmute them through the application of his genius.
- COMPILATIONS: Founder Of The Delta Blues 1929-1934 (Yazoo 1988)★★★★, Volume 1 (Document 1990)★★★, Volume 2 (Document 1990)★★★, Volume 3 (Document 1990)★★★, King Of The Delta Blues (Yazoo 1991)★★★★, King Of The Delta: The Essential Recordings Of Charley Patton (Indigo 1996)★★★★, with various artists American Primitive Volume 1 (Revenant 1998)★★★★.
- FURTHER READING: Charley Patton, John Fahey. Voice Of The Delta, International Symposium. King Of The Delta Blues, Steven Calt & Gayle Wardlow.

Paul And Paula

Paul (b. Ray Hildebrand, 21 December 1940, Joshua, Texas, USA) and Paula (b. Jill Jackson, 20 May 1942, McCaney, Texas, USA) were college students prior to singing together on a local radio's cancer fund appeal. In November 1962 they auditioned a Hildebrand composition, 'Hey Paula', for Fort Worth producer Major Bill Smith, and within weeks the song topped the US chart. 'Hey Paula' captured a 'puppy-love' naïvety beloved by middle-America in the immediate pre-Beatles era. 'Hey, hey, hey Paula, I wanna marry you', and the continuing simplistic call and answer lyric found a receptive audience. 'Young Lovers', which recounted the eve of the duo's wedding, provided another hit, but although subsequent releases, including 'Our First Quarrel', continued the storyline, Paul And Paula were unable to repeat the success of their million-selling debut and ended up sounding overly cloying.

● ALBUMS: Paul And Paula Sing For Young Lovers (Philips 1963)★★, We Go Together (Philips 1963)★, Holiday For Teens (Philips 1963)★.

Paul's Boutique - Beastie Boys

Dismissed by some as zeitgeist-mugging white rap fakers after the huge commercial success of their debut album, the Beastie Boys' later work could hardly be said to reveal musical depth or sophistication either. However, thanks to an overdose of cultural reference points (via samples and lyrical cut-ups) and the Dust Brothers' pungent production, they were still big fun compared to hip-hop's new orthodoxy. At times ('Shake Your Rump', '3-Minute Rule') the sound is pure bedlam, but rap's most hilarious trio of b-boys just about keep the thread going through the montage of in-jokes and namechecks. Like all the best records, Paul's Boutique was a de facto commercial non-event.

● Tracks: To All The Girls; Shake Your Rump; Johnny Ryall; Egg Man; High Plains Drifter; The Sounds Of Science; 3-Minute Rule; Hey Ladies; 5-Piece Chicken Dinner; Looking Down The Barrel Of A Gun; Car Thief; What Comes Round; Shadrach; Ask For Janice; B-Boy Bouillabaisse a) 59 Christie Street b) Get On The Mic c) Stop That Train d) A Year And A Day e) Hello Brooklyn f) Dropping Names g) Lay It On Me h) Mike On The Mic i) A.W.O.L.

● First released 1989

● UK peak chart position: 44

● USA peak chart position: 14

Paul, Billy

b. Paul Williams, 1 December 1934, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, USA. Although Paul had been an active singer in the Philadelphia area since the 50s, singing in jazz clubs and briefly with Harold Melvin And The Blue Notes, it was not until he met producer Kenny Gamble that his career prospered. After signing to the Neptune label, he enjoyed a successful spell on the Philadelphia International label. His instinctive, jazz-based delivery provided an unlikely foil for the label's highly structured, sweet-soul sound but Paul's impressive debut hit, 'Me And Mrs Jones', nonetheless encapsulated the genre. A classic confessional tale of infidelity, Paul's unorthodox style enhanced the ballad's sense of guilt. His later releases included 'Thanks For Saving My Life' (1974), 'Let's Make A Baby' (1976) and 'Let 'Em In' (1977), the last of which adapted the Paul McCartney hit to emphasize lyrical references to Dr. Martin Luther King. Paul continued to make excellent records, but his last chart entry to date came in 1980 with 'You're My Sweetness'.

● ALBUMS: Ebony Woman (Neptune 1970)★★, Going East (Philadelphia International 1971)★★★, 360 Degrees Of Billy Paul (Philadelphia International 1972)★★★, Feelin' Good At The Cadillac Club (Philadelphia International 1973)★★★, War Of The Gods (Philadelphia International 1973)★★★, Live In Europe (Philadelphia International 1974)★★, Got My Head On Straight (Philadelphia International 1975)★★★, When Love Is New (Philadelphia International 1975)★★★, Let 'Em In (Philadelphia International 1977)★★, Only The Strong Survive (Philadelphia International 1978)★★, First Class (Philadelphia International 1979)★★, Lately (Total Experience 1985)★★★, Wide Open (Ichiban 1988)★★★.

● COMPILATIONS: Best Of Billy Paul (Philadelphia International 1980)★★★★, Billy Paul's Greatest Hits (Philadelphia International 1983)★★★, Let 'Em In: The Collection 1976-80 (Music Club 1998)★★★.

Paul, Clarence

b. Clarence Pauling, 19 March 1928, Winston-Salem, North Carolina, USA, d. 6 May 1995, Los Angeles, California, USA. One of Motown Records' best-known producers, Pauling's work was synonymous with the early career of Stevie Wonder. He also produced several other stars, including Marvin Gaye and the Temptations. Together with brother Lowman Pauling, Clarence's musical apprenticeship came in the gospel choirs of North Carolina, before forming the Royal Sons with Lowman (they would later become the 5 Royales after Clarence left). In the 50s he joined two further gospel aggregations, Wings Over Jordan and the Coleman Brothers, between his service for the US Army in North Korea. Afterwards, he launched a career in secular music, with R&B 45s for Federal, Roulette and Hannover Records, but with little success. By the late 50s, he had established himself as a songwriter, notably for Roy Hamilton. As Lowman Pauling was also pursuing this route, it was at that time that he changed his name to Clarence Paul to avoid confusion. He moved to Detroit in the early 60s, befriending Stevie Wonder while he was still known as Steveland Morris. It was largely through Paul that Wonder secured a contract with Tamla Motown in 1961. Wonder's success reflected on Paul, and he was commissioned by Motown as a full-time producer and songwriter. He also duetted on some of Wonder's early recordings, including 'La La La La La' and 'Blowing In The Wind'. They also wrote songs together, including 'Fingertips'. He then became assistant to Motown A&R director Mickey Stevenson, but when Stevenson relocated to Los Angeles in the early 70s to inaugurate Venture Records, Paul followed him, taking up a new post in Venture's A&R department. Wonder was by his bedside before his death after a short illness in 1995, after which his body was returned to Winston-Salem for burial next to his brother Lowman.